2. But unhappy wretch that I am, God caſt a better Lot for me, I am the Off-ſpring of Religious and tender Parents, who have always deeply concerned themſelvs in the everlaſting ſtate of my Soul; many Prayers and Tears have they poured out to God for me, both in my hearing as well as in ſecret; many holy and wholſom Counſels have they from time to time dropt upon me; many precious Examples have they ſet in their own practice before me; many a time when I have ſinned againſt the Lord, have they ſtood over me with a Rod in their Hands, and Tears in their Eyes, uſing all means to reclaim me, but like an ungracious wretch I have ſlighted all their Counſel, grieved their Hearts, and imbittered their Lives to them, by my ſinſul courſes. Ah, my Soul! thou art a degenerate Plant; better will it be with the Off-ſpring of Infidels than with thee, if Repentance prevent not; now I live in one Family with them, but ſhortly I ſhall be ſeparated from them, as far as Hell is from Heaven; they now tenderly pity my Miſery, but then they ſhall approve and applaud the Righteous Sentence of Chriſt upon me: So little Priviledge ſhall I then have from my Relation to them, that they ſhall be produced as Witneſſes, neſſes againſt me, and all their rejected Counſels, Reproofs, and Examples, charged home upon me, as the aggravations of my wickedneſs; and better it will be, when it ſhall come to that, that I had been brought forth by a Beaſt, than ſprang from the Loins of ſuch Parents.

CHAP. II.

Upon the hard Labour and cruel Uſage of Beaſts.

When under loads your Beaſts do groan, think then
How great a mercy 'tis that you are Men.

OBSERVATION.

THough ſome Men be exceſſively careful and tender over their Beaſts (as was noted in the former Chapter) yet others are cruel and mercileſs towards them, not regarding how they ride or burden them. How often have I ſeen them fainting under their loads, wrought off their Legs, and turned out, with galled Backs, into the Fields or High-ways to ſhift for a little Graſs? Many times have I heard and pitied them, groaning under unreaſonable Burdens, and beaten on by mercileſs drivers, till, at laſt, by ſuch cruel uſage, they have been deſtroyed, and then caſt into a Ditch for Dogs Meat!

APPLICATION.

SUch ſights as theſe ſhould make Men thankful for the Mercy of their Creation, and bleſs their bountiful Creator, that they were not made ſuch Creatures themſelves. Some Beaſts are made ad eſum, only for Food, being no otherwiſe uſeful to Man, as Swine, &c. theſe are only fed for ſlaughter, we kill and eat them, and regard not their cries and ſtruglings when the Knife is thruſt to their very Hearts; others are only ad uſum, for ſervice, whilſt living, but unprofitable when dead; as Horſes, theſe we make to drudge and toyl for us from day to day, but kill them not; others are both ad eſum, & uſum, for food when dead, and ſervice whilſt alive, as the Ox. Theſe we make to Plow our Fields, draw our Carriages, and afterwards prepare them for ſlaughter.

But Man was made for nobler ends, created Lord of the lower World; not to ſerve, but to be ſerved by other Creatures; a Mercy able to melt the hardeſt Heart into thankfulneſs. I remember, Luther preſſing men to be thankful, that they are not brought into the loweſt condition of Creatures, and to bleſs God that they can ſee any Creature below themſelves, gives us a famous inſtance in the following Story: Two Cardinals (ſaith he) riding in a great deal of Pomp to the Council of Conſtance, by the way they heard a man in the Fields, weeping and wailing bitterly, they rode to him, and asked what he ailed? Perceiving his Eye intently fixed upon an ugly Toad, he told them that his Heart was melted with the conſideration of this Mercy, that God had not made him ſuch a deformed and loathſom Creature, though he were formed out of the ſame Clay with it: Hoc eſt quod amare fleo, ſaid he, This is that, that makes me weep bitterly. Whereupon one of the Cardinals cries out, Well, ſaid the Father, the unlearned will riſe and take Heaven, when we with all our Learning ſhall be thruſt into Hell. That which melted the Heart of this poor man, ſhould melt every Heart when we behold the Miſery to which theſe poor creatures are ſubjected. And this will appear a Mercy of no ſlight conſideration, if we but draw a compariſon betwixt our ſelves, and theſe irrational Creatures, in theſe three Particulars.

1. Though they and we were made of the ſame mould and clay, yet how much better hath God dealt with us, even as to the outward man? The ſtructure of our Bodies is much more excellent, God made other creatures by a word of Command, but man by Counſel; it was not be Thou, but let us make Man. We might have been made Stones without ſenſe, or Beaſts without reaſon, but we were made men. The noble ſtructure and ſymetry of our Bodies invites our Souls not only to thankfulneſs but admiration. David ſpeaking of the curious frame of the Body, ſaith, I am wonderfully made, Pſal. 139. 14. or as the vulgar reads it, painted as with a Needle; like ſome rich piece of Needle-work curiouſly Embroidered with Nerves and Veins. Was any part of the common lump of Clay thus faſhioned? Galen gave Epicurus an hundred years time to imagine a more commodious Situation, Configuration, or Compoſition of any one part of a humane Body; and (as one ſaith) if all the Angels in Heaven had ſtudied to this day, they could not have caſt the Body of man into a more curious Mould.

2. How little eaſe or reſt have they? They live not many years, and thoſe they do is in Bondage and Miſery, groaning under the effects of ſin; but God hath provided better for us, even as to our outward condition in the World; we have the more reſt, becauſe they have ſo little. How many refreſhments and comforts hath God provided for us, of which they are uncapable? If we be weary with labour, we can take our reſt; but freſh or weary, they muſt ſtand to it, or ſink under it from day to day.

3. What a narrow capacity hath God given to Beaſts! What a large capacity to Man! Alas, they are only capable of a little ſenſitive pleaſure; as you ſhall ſee ſometimes, how they will friſk in a green Paſture, this is all they be capable of, and this death puts an end to; but how comprehenſive are our Souls in their capacities? We are made in the Image of God; we can look beyond preſent things, and are capable of the higheſt happineſs, and that to all Eternity; the Soul of a Beaſt is but a material form, which wholly depending upon, muſt needs die with the Body; but our Souls are a Divine ſpark or blaſt; and when the Body dies, it dies not with it, but ſubſiſts even in its ſeparated ſtate.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for an Unthankful Sinner.

1. How great a ſin is ingratitude to God, for ſuch a common, but choice Mercy of Creation, and Proviſion for me in this World? There is no Creature made worſe by kindneſs, but Man. There is a kind of gratitude which I may obſerve even in theſe brute Beaſts; they do in their way acknowledge their Benefactors; the Ox knows his Owner, and the Aſs his Maſters Crib. How ready are they to ſerve ſuch as feed and cheriſh them? But I have been both unthankful and unſerviceable to my Creator and Benefactor, that hath done me good all my days; thoſe poor Creatures that ſweat and groan under the loads that I lay upon them, never ſinned againſt God, nor tranſgreſſed the Laws of their Creation as I have done; and yet God hath dealt better with me than with them. Oh that the Bounty of God, and his diſtinguiſhing Mercy between me and the Beaſts that periſh, might move and melt my Heart into thankfulneſs! O that I might conſider ſeriouſly what the higher and more excellent end of my Creation is, and might more endeavour to anſwer and live up to it! Or elſe (O my Soul) it will be worſe with thee than with the Beaſts. 'Tis true, they are under Bondage and Miſery; but it is but for a little time, death will end all their pains, and eaſe them of all their heavy loads; but I ſhall groan to all Eternity, under a heavier burden than ever they felt; they have no account to give, but ſo have I. What comfort is it that I have a larger capacity than a Beaſt hath? That God hath endowed me with Reaſon, which is denied to them? Alas! this will but augment my Miſery, and enlarge me to take in a greater meaſure of anguiſh.

A Reflection for an Elect Soul.

2. But how many ſteps (O my Soul) maiſt thou aſcend in the praiſes of thy God, when thou conſidereſt the Mercies that God hath owed upon thee! Not only in that he made thee, not a Stone or Tree without ſenſe, or an Horſe, or Dog without reaſon; but that thou art not an Infidel without light, or an unregenerate Perſon without grace. What! to have ſenſe, and all the delights of it, which Stones have not; reaſon, with the more high and noble pleaſures of it, which Beaſts have not; the light and and knowledge of the great things of the Goſpel, which the Heathens have not; and ſuch an expectation and hope of unconceivable Glory and Felicity, which the unſanctified have not. O my Soul! how rich! how bountiful hath thy God been to thee! Theſe are the overflowings of his love to thee, who waſt moulded out of the ſame lump with the Beaſts that groan on Earth, yea with the Damned that howl in Hell; well may I ſay, that God hath been a good God to me.

The POEM.

WHen I behold a tyred Jade put on
With Whip and Spur till all his ſtrength be (gone,
See ſtreams of ſweat run down his bleeding ſides,
How little mercy's ſhewn by him that rides.
If I more thankleſs to my God don't prove,
Than ſuch a Rider's mercileſs, 'twill move
My Soul to praiſe; for who ſees this, and can
But bleſs the Lord, that he was made a Man.
And ſuch a ſight the Rider ought to move,
This Meditation duly to improve.
What hath this Creature done, that he ſhould be
Thus beaten, wounded, and tyr'd out by me?
He is my Fellow-creature, 'tis meer Grace,
I had not been in his, he in my caſe.
Ungrateful, ſtupid Man, God might have made
Me bear the Saddle, as I ſee this Jade.
He never ſin'd, but for my ſin doth lye
Subjected unto all this miſery.
Lord, make my heart relent, that I ſhould be
To thee more uſeleſs, than my Horſe to me.
He did his utmoſt, went as long as ever
His Legs could bear him; but for me I never Thus ſpent my ſtrength for God, but oft have been Too prodigal thereof in ways of ſin;
Though he's the Horſe, and I the Man, 'twill be Far better with my Horſe one day than me,
Unleſs thy Grace prevent, and ſuperadd
A new Creation unto that I had.
Could every Rider fix a ſerious thought
On ſuch a ſubject, and hereby be taught
To ſpiritualize it, and improve it thus;
How ſweet would tedious Journeys be to us!
But ſuch a task, a graceleſs heart digs out
More than the tyred Horſe I write about.

CHAP. III.

Upon the ſeeking of loſt Cattel.

When ſeeking your loſt Cattel, keep in mind
That thus Chriſt Jeſus ſeeks your Souls to find.

OBSERVATION.

WHen Cattel are ſtrayed away from your Fields, you uſe all care and diligence to recover them again, tracing their footſteps, crying them in Market-Towns, ſending your Servants abroad, and inquiring your ſelves of all that you think can give news of them. What care and pains Men will take in ſuch caſes, was exemplified in Saul, 1 Sam. 9. 4, 5. who with his Servant paſſed through Mount Ephraim, to ſeek the Aſſes that were ſtrayed from his Father, and through the Land of Shaliſha, and through the Land of Shalim, and they were not there, and through the Land of the Benjamites, but found them not.

APPLICATION.

THE care and pains you take to recover your loſt Cattel, carries a ſweet and lively repreſentation of the love of Jeſus Chriſt, in the recovery of loſt Sinners. Jeſus Chriſt came on purpoſe from Heaven upon a like Errand, to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt, Mat. 18. 11. There are ſeveral Particulars in which this glorious deſign of Chriſt, in ſeeking and ſaving loſt Man,and the care and pains of Husbandmen in recovering their loſt Cattel, do meet and touch, though there be as many particulars alſo in which they differ; all which I ſhall open under the following Heads.

1. We ſometimes find that Cattel will break out of thoſe very Fields where they have been bred, and where they want nothing that is needful for them. Juſt thus, loſt man departed from his God, brake out of that pleaſant encloſure where he was abundantly provided for, both as to Soul and Body; yet then he brake over the Hedge of the Command, and went aſtray, Eccleſ. 7. 29. Lo this only have I found, that God made man upright, but he ſought out to himſelf many inventions. He was not content and ſatisfied with that bleſſed ſtate God had put him into, but would be trying new concluſions to the loſs and ruin both of himſelf and his Poſterity.

2. Strayers are evermore ſufferers for it; all they get by it, is to be pinned and pounded; and what did Man get by departing from his God, but Ruin and Miſery to Soul and Body? Will you have an Abreviate of his Sufferings and Loſſes? (the full account none can give you) why? By ſtraying from his God, he loſt the rectitude and holineſs of his Nature; (like a true ſtrayer) he is all dirty and miry, overſpread and beſmeared both in Soul and Body,with the odious filthineſs of ſin; he loſt the liberty and freedom of his will to good; a precious Jewel of eſtimable value: This is a real Miſery incurr'd by the Fall, though ſome have ſo far loſt their underſtandings and humility, as not to own it; he hath loſt his God, his Soul, his Happineſs, and his very Bowels of Compaſſion towards himſelf in this miſerable ſtate.

3. When your Cattel are ſtrayed, yea, though it be but one of the Flock or Herd, you leave all the reſt, and go after that which is loſt: So did Jeſus Chriſt, who in the fore-cited place, Mat. 18. 12. compares himſelf to ſuch a Shepherd; he left Heaven it ſelf,and all the bleſſed Angels there,to come into this World to ſeek loſt Man. O the precious eſteem,and dear love that Chriſt had to poor Man! How did his Bowels yearn towards us in our loſt ſtate! How did he pity us in our miſery! As if he had ſaid, Poor Creatures they have loſt themſelves, and are become a prey to the Devil, in a periſhing ſtate; I will ſeek after them, and ſave them. The Son of Man is come to ſeek and to ſave.

4. You are glad when you have found your ſtrayers;much more is Chriſt, when he hath found a loſt Soul. O 'tis a great ſatisfaction to him to ſee the fruit of the travel of his Soul. Iſa. 53. Yea, there is more joy in Heaven over one ſinner that repenteth, than ninety nine juſt perſons that need no repentance. What demonſtrations of joy and gladneſs did the Father of the Prodigal give, when he had found his Son that was loſt? Luke 15. 20.

5. When you have brought home your ſtrayers, you ſometimes clog them, to prevent their wandring again, and ſtop up the gaps with Thorns; and ſo doth God oftentimes by ſuch Souls as are reeovered and brought home to Chriſt; he hangs a clog of affliction to prevent their departure from God again, 2 Cor. 12. 7.

But then there are five Particulars in which Chriſt ſeeking loſt Souls, and your ſeeking loſt Cattel differ.

1. Your Cattel ſometimes find the way home themſelves, and return to you of their own accord; but loſt Man never did, nor can do ſo; he was his own Deſtroyer, but can never be his own Saviour; it was poſſible for him not to have loſt his God, but having once loſt him, can never find him again of himſelf. Alas! his Heart is bent to backſliding, he hath no will to return. Hear how Chriſt complains, John 5. 40. Ye will not come unto me. Mans recovery begins in God, not in himſelf.

2. Your Servants can find, and bring back your loſt Cattel as well as you; but ſo cannot Chriſt's Servants. Miniſters may diſcover, but cannot recover them; they daily ſee, but cannot ſave them; lament them they can,but help them they cannot; intreat and beg them to return they can, and do, but prevail with them they cannot. Melancthon thought when he began to preach,to perſwade all; but old Adam was too hard for young Melancthon.

3. You ſeek all the Cattel that are ſtrayed from you, eſpecially the beſt; but Jeſus Chriſt only ſeeks poor loſt Man. There were other Creatures, and ſuch as by Nature were more excellent, that loſt their God and themſelves; I mean, the Apoſtate Angels; but he came not to ſeek them: Herein his ſingular love to Man appears.

4. When you have recovered and brought home your loſt Cattel, you may loſe them the ſecond time, and never recover them again, but ſo cannot Chriſt. Man once recovered is for ever ſecured by him. All that thou haſt given me I have kept, and not one of them is loſt, but the Son of Perdition; and he was never ſavingly found, John 17. 12.

5. Though you prize your Cattel, yet you will not venture your Life for the recovery of them; rather let them go than regain them with ſuch an hazard; but Jeſus Chriſt not only ventured, but actually laid down his Life to recover, and ſave loſt man: He redeemed them at the price of his own Blood; he is that good Shepherd that laid down his Life for the Sheep. O the ſurpaſſing love of Chriſt to loſt Souls!

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for a loſt Soul.

1. Lord, I am a loſt Creature, an undone Soul; and herein lyes my miſery, that I have not only loſt my God, but have no Heart to return to him! Nay, I fly from Chriſt, who is come on purpoſe from Heaven to ſeek and to ſave me; hi Meſſengers are abroad ſeeking for ſuch as I am, but I avoid them, or at leaſt refuſe to obey the call and perſwaſions to return. Ah, what a miſerable ſtate am I in! Every ſtep I go is a a ſte towards Hell; my Soul, with the Prodigal i ready to periſh in a ſtrange Countrey! But I hav no mind with him to return home; wretche Soul, what will the end of this be? If God hav loſt thee, the Devil hath found thee; he takes u all ſtrayers from God: Yea, Death, and Hell wi ſhortly find thee, if Chriſt do not; and then th recovery (O my Soul!) will be impoſſible Why ſit I here periſhing and dying! I am n yet as irrecoverably loſt as the Damned are. let me delay no longer, leſt I be loſt for ever.

A Reflection for one that was loſt, but is found.

2. O my Soul! for ever bleſs and admire the love of Jeſus Chriſt, who came from Heaven to ſeek and ſave, ſuch a loſt Soul as I was. Lord, how matchleſs is thy Love! I was loſt, and am found. I am found, and did not ſeek; nay, I am found by him from whom I fled. Thy love, O my Saviour, was a preventing love, a wonderful love; thou lovedſt me much more than I loved my ſelf; I was cruel to my own Soul, but thou waſt kind; thou ſoughteſt for me, a loſt Sinner, and not for loſt Angels; thy hand of Grace caught hold of me, and hath let go Thouſands, and the Thouſands, as good as my ſelf by nature. Like another David, thou didſt reſcue my poor loſt Soul out of the mouth of the Deſtroyer; yea, more then ſo, thou didſt loſe thine own Life to find mine: And now, dear Jeſus, ſince I am thus marvellouſly recovered, ſhall I ever ſtraggle again from thee? O let it for ever be a warning to me, how I turn aſide into by-paths of ſin any more.

The POEM.

When Cattel from your Fields are gone aſtray,
And you to ſeek them through the Country ride,
Enquiring for them all along the way,
Tracking their Foot-ſteps where they turn'd aſide.

One Servant this way ſent, another that,
Searching the Fields and Country round about:
This Meditation now falls in ſo pat,
As if God ſent it to enquire you out.

My Beaſts are loſt, and ſo am I by Sin;
My wretched Soul from God thus wandering went,
As I ſeek them, ſo was I ſought by him,
Who from the Father's Boſome forth was ſent.

Purſu'd by Sermons, follow'd cloſe by Grace,
And ſtrong Convictions Chriſt hath ſought for me,
Yea, though I ſhun him ſtill he gives me Chaſe,
As if reſolv'd I ſhould not Damned be.

When Angels loſt themſelves it was not ſo,
God did not ſeek, or once for them enquire,
But ſaid, let theſe Apoſtate Creatures go,
I'll plague them for it with Eternal Fire.

Lord, what am I, that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine Eye,
And ſtill ſeek after ſuch a Wretch as I?
Whoſe matchleſs Mercy, and rich Grace deſpiſe,
As if in ſpight thereof reſolv'd to die.

Why ſhould I ſhun thee? Bleſſed Saviour, why
ſhould I avoid thee thus? Thou doſt not chaſe
My Soul to ſlay it; O that ever I Should fly a Saviour that's ſo full Grace.

ng haſt thou ſought me, Lord, I now return;
O let thy Bowels of Compaſſion ſound,
r my departure I ſincerely mourn;
And let this day thy wandring Sheep be found.

CHAP. IV.

Upon the Feeding of Fat Cattel.

Fat Beaſts you kill, the Lean you uſe to ſave;
God's Diſpenſations ſome ſuch meaning have.

OBSERVATION.

It is a good Obſervation of a Father, and well applyed; Vituli triturantes quotidie ligantur, vituli ctandi quotidie in paſcuis libere relinquuntur. Oxen for uſe are daily yoaked and kept ſhort, whilſt thoſe that are deſigned for the Shambles, are let looſe in green Paſtures to feed at Pleaſure. Store Beaſts fare hard, and are kept lean and low; feeding Beaſts are excuſed from the Yoke, whilſt others are laboured and wrought hard every day; the one hath more than he can eat, the other would eat more if he had it.

APPLICATION.

Thus deals the Lord of-times with his own Elect, whom he deſigns for Glory; and with the wicked, who are preparing for the day of wrath. Thus are they filled with earthly Proſperity, and Creature-enjoyments, like ruſty and wanton Beaſts turned out at liberty in a fat Paſture, whilſt poor Saints are kept hard and ſhort, Amos 1. 4. Here this word ye kine of Baſhan, that are in the Mountains of Samaria, which oppreſs the Poor, and cruſh the needy. Theſe Metaphorical Kine of the proſperous Oppreſſors of the World, full fed, and wanton wicked Men. 'Tis true, Heaven hath not all the Poor, nor Hell all the Rich; but it's a very common Diſpenſation of Providence, to beſtow moſt of the things of this World upon them that have no Portion in Heaven; and to keep them ſhort on Earth, for whom that Kingdom is provided. Let me draw forth the Similitude in a few Particulars.

1. The Beaſts of ſlaughter have the fatteſt Paſtures; ſo have the ungodly in the World; Their Eyes ſtand out with Fatneſs, they have more than Heart could wiſh, Pſa. 73. 7. Their hearts are as fat as greaſe, Pſal. 119. 70. Theſe be they that fleet off the Cream of earthly Enjoyments, whoſe Bellies are filled with hidden Treaſures, Pſal. 17. 14. The Earth is given into the hand of the Wicked, Job 9. 24. O, what full Eſtates? What an affluence of Earthly delights hath God caſt in upon ſome wicked Men? There is much wantonneſs, but no want in their dwellings; ſome that know not which way to turn themſelves in Hell, once knew not where to beſtow their Goods on Earth.

2. Feeding, grow wanton in their full Paſtures; there you ſhall ſeem them tumble and friſk, and kick up their Heels. The ſame effect hath the proſperity of the wicked, it makes them wanton; their Life is but a diverſion from one pleaſure to another, Job 21. 11, 12, 13. They ſend forth their little ones like a flock, and their Children dance; they take the timbrel and harp, and rejoyce at the ſound of the Organ; they ſpend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the Grave. The ſame Character doth the Prophet Amos give of them, Amos 6. 4, 5, 6. They ſtretch themſelves upon Beds of Ivory, drink Wine in bowls, &c. and no ſorrow goes to their Hearts. Theſe are they that live in Pleaſures upon Earth, as a Fiſh in the Water, Jam. 5. 5.

3. Theſe fat paſtures do but the ſooner haſten the death of theſe Cattel; the ſooner they are fatted, the ſooner they are ſlaughtered; and the proſperity of the wicked ſerves to the ſame end. The proſperity of Fools ſhall deſtroy them, (i. e.) it ſhall be the means and inſtrument of heating and heightning their Luſts, and thereby fitting them for Deſtruction; their Proſperity is Food and Feuel to their Corruptions. Many wicked Men had not been ſo ripe for Hell, had they not grown in the Sun-ſhine of Proſperity.

4. Fatted Beaſts do not in the leaſt underſtand the intent and meaning of the Husbandman, in allowing them ſuch large and fat Paſtures, which he denies to his other Cattel; and as little as Beaſts, do wicked Men underſtand the ſcope and end of God's Providences, in caſting Proſperity and Wealth upon them; little do they think their Tables are a Snare, a Gin, and a Trap for their Souls, they only (like Beaſts) mind what is before them, but do not at all underſtand the tendency and end of theſe their ſenſual Delights.

5. Though the Husbandman keep his ſtore-Cattel in ſhort Commons, yet he intends to preſerve them: Theſe ſhall remain with him, when the others are driven to the ſlaughter.

Such a deſign of preſervation is carryed on in all thoſe outward ſtraits, wants and hardſhips which the Lord expoſes his people to. I confeſs, ſuch diſpenſations for preſent, are very ſtumbling and puzzling things, even to gracious and wiſe Perſons. To ſee wicked men, not only exempted from their Troubles, but even oppreſſed with Proſperity; to ſee a godly Man in wants and ſtraits, and a wicked Man have more than his Heart can wiſh, is a caſe that poſes the wiſeſt Chriſtian, till he conſider the deſigns and iſſues of both thoſe Providences, and then he acquieſces in the Wiſdom of God ſo ordering it, Pſal. 73. 5, 14, 18, 23.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for a Voluptuous worldling.

1. Doth my Proſperity fat me up for Hell, and prepare me for the day of ſlaughter? Little cauſe have I then to glory in it, and lift up my Heart upon theſe things. Indeed, God hath given, (I cannot ſay bleſſed be with) a fulneſs of Creature-enjoyments; upon theſe my carnal Heart ſeizeth greedily and ſecurely, not at all ſuſpecting a Snare lying in theſe things, for the ruin of my Soul. What are all theſe charming Pleaſures, but ſo many Rattles to quiet my Soul, whilſt its Damnation ſteals inſenſibly upon it? What are all my Buſineſſes and Imployments in the World, but ſo many diverſions from the Buſineſs of Life? There are but two differences betwixt me, and the pooreſt Slave the Devil hath on Earth, ſuch are whipt on to Hell by outward Miſeries, and I am coached to Hell in a little more Pomp and Honour; theſe will have a leſs, and I a greater account in the day of Reckoning. O that I had never known Proſperity! I am now tumbling in a green Paſture, and ſhortly ſhall be hanging up in the Shambles in Hell; if this be the beſt fruit of my Proſperity, if I were taken Captive by cruel Canibals, and fed with the richeſt fare, but withal underſtood, that the deſign of it were to fat me up like a Beaſt for them to feed upon; how little Stomach ſhould I have to their Dainties? O my Soul! it were much better for thee to have a ſanctified Poverty, which is the portion for many Saints, than an enſnaring Proſperity, ſet as a trap to ruin thee for ever.

A Reflection for a poor Chriſtian.

2. The Wiſdom of my God hath allotted me but ſhort commons here, his Providence feeds me but from hand to mouth; but I am (and well may be) contented with my preſent ſtate; that which ſweetens it, is, that I am one of the Lord's preſerved. How much better is a Morſel of Bread, and a Draught of Water here, with an expectancy of Glory hereafter, than a fat Paſture given in, and fitting for the Wrath to come? Well, ſince the caſe ſtands thus, bleſſed be God for my preſent Lot; though I have but little in hand, I have much in hope; my preſent Troubles will ſerve to ſweeten my future Joys; and the ſorrows of this Life will give a luſtre to the Glory of the next; that which is now hard to ſuffer, will then be ſweet to remember; my Songs will then be louder than my Groans now.

The POEM.

THoſe Beaſts which for the Shambles are deſign'd,
In fragrant flowery Meadows you ſhall find,
Where they abound with rich and plenteous fare,
Whilſt others graze in Commons thin and bare.
Thoſe live a ſhort and pleaſant Life, but theſe
Protract their lives in dry and ſhorter leas.
Thus lives the Wicked, thus they do abound
With earthly glory, and with honour crown'd.
Their lofty heads unto the Stars aſpire,
And radiant beams their ſhining brows attire.
The fatteſt portion's ſerv'd up in their Diſh;
Yea, they have more than their own hearts can wiſh.
Diſſolv'd in pleaſures, crown'd with buds of May;
They, for a time, in theſe fat Paſtures play,
Frisk, dance and leap, like full-fed Beaſts; and even
Turn up their wanton Heels againſt the Heaven.
Not underſtanding that this pleaſant Life,
Serves but to fit them for the Butcher's Knife.
In fragrant Meads they tumbling are to day,
To morrow to the Slaughter led away.
Their pleaſure's gone, and vaniſh'd like a Bubble,
Which makes their future Torments on them double.
Mean while God's little Flock is poor and lean,
Becauſe the Lord did ne're intend or mean
This for their portion; and beſides doth know
Their Souls prove beſt where ſhorteſt Graſs doth grow.
Chear up poor flock, although your Fare be thin,
Yet here is ſomething to take Comfort in:
You here ſecurely feed, and need not fear
Th' infernal Butcher can't approach you here.
'Tis ſomewhat that, but O, which far tranſcends,
Your glorious Shepherd's coming, who intends
To lead you hence unto that Fragrant Hill,
Where with green paſtures he his Flocks will fill.
On which he from Celeſtial Caſements pours
The ſweeteſt Dews, and conſtant gracious ſhowers.
Along whoſe Banks Rivers of pleaſures ſlide,
There his bleſs'd Flocks for ever ſhall abide.
O envy not the worldlings preſent Joys,
Which to your future Mercies are but Toys.
Their Paſture now is green, your's dry and burn'd,
But then the Scene is chang'd, the Tables turn'd.

CHAP. V.

Upon the Husbandman's Care for Poſterity.

Good Husbands labour for Poſterity,
To after-Ages Saints muſt have an Eye.

OBSERVATION.

PRovident and careful Husbandmen do not only labour to ſupply their own Neceſſitie while living, but lay up ſomething for their Poſterity when they are gone; they do not only leav to their Children what their Progenitors left them but they deſire to leave it improved and better' None but bad Husbands and Spend-thrifts are the Mind with that Heathen Emperor Tiberiu who having put all into ſuch Confuſions in the Empire, that it might be thought the World wou end with him; yet pleaſed himſelf with this a prehenſion, That he ſhould be out of the reach it; and would often ſay, when I am dead, let He ven and Earth mingle; if the World will but ho my time, let it break when I am gone: But pr vident Men look beyond their own time, and d very much concern themſelves in the good or ev of their Poſterity.

APPLICATION.

WHat careful Husbands do, with reſpect to the proviſions they make for their Children, that all prudent Chriſtians are bound to do, with reſpect to the Truths committed to them, and by them, to be tranſmitted to ſucceeding Saints.

In the firſt Ages of the World, even till the Law was given, faithful men were in ſtead of Books and Records; they did by Oral Tradition convey the Truths of God to Poſterity; but ſince the Sacred Truth hath been conſigned to Writing, no ſuch Tradition (except full conſentient with that written word) is to be received as Authentick; but the Truths therein delivered to the Saints, are by verbal Declarations, open Confeſſions, and conſtant Sufferings, to be preſerved and delivered from Age to Age. This was the conſtant care of the whole Cloud of Witneſſes, both Ancient and Modern, who have kept the Word of God's Patience, and would not accept their own Lives, Liberties or Eſtates; no, nor the whole World in exchange, for that invaluable Treaſure of Truth; they have carefully practiſed Solomon's Counſel, Prov. 23. 23. Buy the Truth, but ſell it not; they would not alienate that fair Inheritance for all the Inheritances on Earth. Upon the ſame reaſons that you refuſe to part with, or imbezzel your Eſtates, Chriſtians alſo refuſe to part with the Truths of God.

1. You will not waſte or alienate your Inheritance, becauſe it's precious, and of great value in your Eyes; but much more precious are God's Truths to his People. Luther profeſſed, he would not take the whole World for one Leaf of the Bible. Though ſome profane Perſons may ſay with Pilate, What is Truth? yet know, that any one Truth of the Goſpel is more worth than all the Inheritances upon Earth; they are the great things of God's Law, and he that ſells them for the greateſt things in this World, makes a Soul-undoing Bargain.

2. You will not waſte or part with your Inheritance, becauſe you know your Poſterity will be much wronged by it. They that baffle or drink away an Eſtate, drink the Tears of their ſad Widows, and the very Blood of their impoveriſhed Children. The People of God do alſo conſider, how much the Generations to come are concerned in the conſervation of the Truths of God for them: It cuts them to the Heart, but to think that their Children ſhould be brought up to worſhip Dumb Idols, and fall down before a Wooden and Breaden God. The very Birds and Beaſts will expoſe their own Bodies to apparent danger of Death to preſerve their young. Religion doth much more intender the hearts and bowels than Nature doth.

3. You reckon it a foul diſgrace to ſell your Eſtates, and become Bankrupts; 'tis a word that bears ill among you: And a Chriſtian accounts it the higheſt reproach in the World, to be a Traitor to, or an Apoſtate from the Truths of God. When the Primitive Saints were ſtrictly required to deliver up their Bibles, thoſe that did ſo, were juſtly branded, and huſht out of their Company, under the odious Title of Traditores, or Deliverers.

4. You are ſo loth to part with your Eſtates, becauſe you know its hard recovering an Eſtate again, when once you have loſt it. Chriſtians do alſo know, how difficult it will be for the People of God, in times to come, to recover the Light of the Goſpel again, if once it be extinguiſh'd. There is no Truth of God recovered out of Antichriſt's hands, without great wreſtlings, and much Blood. The Church may call every Point of Reformed Doctrine and Diſcipline ſo recovered, her Naphthalies; for with great wreſtlings ſhe hath wreſtled for them. Earneſtly contending for the Faith once delivered to them, Jude 3.

5. To conclude, rather than you will part with your Eſtates, you will chuſe to ſuffer many wants and hardſhips all your Lives; you will fare hard, and go bare to preſerve what you have for your Poſterity: But the People of God have put themſelves upon far greater hardſhips than theſe to preſerve truth; they have choſen to ſuffer Reproaches, Poverty, Priſons, Death, and the moſt cruel Torments, rather than the loſs of God's Truth. All the Martyrologies will inform you what their Sufferings have been, to keep the word of God's Patience; they have boldly told their Enemies, that they might pluck their hearts out of their bodies, but ſhould never pluck the truth out of their hearts.

REFLECTIONS.

A Reflection for cowardly and faint-hearted Profeſſors.

1. Baſe unbelieving Heart! How have I flinched and ſhrunk from truth when it hath been in danger? I have rather choſen to leave it, than my Life, Liberty or Eſtate, as a prey to the Enemy. I have left truth, and juſt it is that the God of Truth ſhould leave me. Cowardly Soul, that durſt not make a ſtand for Truth! Yea, rather bold and daring Soul, that wouldſt rather venture to look a wrathful God, than an angry Man, in the Face. I would not own and preſerve the truth, and the God of truth will not own me, 2 Tim. 2. 12. If we deny him, he will deny us.

A Reflection for ſuch as ſuffer for Truth.

2. Lord! unto me haſt thou committed the precious Treaſure and Truſt of Truth; and as I received it, ſo do I deſire to deliver it to the Generations to come, that the people which are yet unborn may praiſe the Lord. God forbid I ſhould ever part with ſuch a fair Inheritance, and thereby beggar my own, and thouſands of Souls! Thou haſt given me thy Truth, and the World hates me; I well know that it is the ground of the quarrel; would I but throw Truth over the Walls, how ſoon would a Retreat be ſounded to all Perſecutors? But, Lord! thy Truth is invaluably precious; what a vile thing is my Blood, compared with the leaſt of all thy Truths? Thou haſt charged me not to ſell it, and in thy ſtrength I reſolve never to lift a Fine, and cut off that Golden Line, whereby thy Truths are entailed upon thy People, from Generation to Generation: My Friends may go, my Liberty go, my Blood may go, but as for thee, precious Truth, thou ſhalt never go.

A Reflection for ſuch as are in quiet poſſeſſion of Truth.

3 How dear hath this Inheritance of Truth coſt ſome Chriſtians? How little hath it coſt us? We are entred into their Labours; we reap in Peace, what they ſowed in Tears; yea, in Blood. O the grievous ſufferings that they choſe to endure! rather than to deprive us of ſuch an Inheritance, thoſe noble Souls, heated with the Love of Chriſt, and Care for our Souls, made many bold and brave Adventures for it; and yet at what a low rate do we value what coſt them ſo dear? Like young Heirs, that never knew the getting of an Eſtate, we ſpend it freely. Lord, help us thankfully and diligently to improve thy Truths, while we are in quiet poſſeſſion of them. Such Intervals of peace and reſt are uſually of no long continuance with thy People.

The POEM.

A Publick Spirit ſcorns to plant no Root,
But ſuch, from which himſelf may gather fruit.
For thus he reaſons, if I reap the gains
Of my laborious Predeceſſors pains,
How equal is it, that Poſterity
Should reap the fruits of preſent induſtry?
Should every Age but ſerve its turn, and take
No thought for future times? it ſoon would make
A Bankrupt World, and ſo entail a Curſe
From Age to Age, as it grows worſe and worſe.
Our Chriſtian Predeceſſors careful thus
Have been to leave an Heritage to us,
Chriſt's precious Truths conſerved in their Blood,
For no leſs price thoſe Truths our Fathers ſtood.
They have tranſmitted, would not alienate
From us their Children ſuch a fair Eſtate.
We eat what they did ſet, and ſhall truth fail
In our days? Shall we cut off th'entail?
Or end the Line of Honour? nay, What's worſe,
Give future Ages cauſe to hate, and curſe
Our memories? Like Naboth, may this Age
Part with their Blood ſooner than Heritage.
Let pity move us, let us think upon
Our Childrens Souls when we are dead and gone.
Shall they, poor Souls, in darkneſs grope, when we Put out the light, by which they elſe might ſee
The way to glory? yea, what's worſe? Shall it
Be ſaid in time to come, Chriſt did commit
A precious Treaſure purchas'd by his Blood,
To us, for ours, and for our Childrens good?
But we, like Cowards, falſe, perfidious Men,
For carnal eaſe, loſt it, our ſelves, and them.
O let us leave, to carnal Ages, more
Than we receiv'd from all that went before.
That thoſe, to come, may bleſs the Lord, and keep
Our Names alive, when we in duſt ſhall ſleep.

CHAP. VI.

Upon the Husbandman's Care to prove and preſerve his Deeds.

Deeds for your Lands you prove, and keep with care;
O that for Heaven you but as careful were.

OBSERVATION.

WE generally find Men are not more careful in trying Gold, or in keeping it, than they are in examining their Deeds, and preſerving them; theſe are virtually their whole Eſtate, and therefore it concerns them to be careful of them: If they ſuſpect a flaw in their Leaſe or Deed, they repair to the ableſt Counſel, ſubmit it to his Judgment, make the worſt of their cauſe, and query about all the ſuppoſeable dangers with him; if he tell them their caſe is ſuſpicious and hazardous, how much are they perplexed and troubled? they can neither eat, drink, or ſleep in peace, till they have a good Settlement; and willing they are to be at much coſt and pains to obtain it.

APPLICATION.

THeſe cares and fears, with which you are perplexed in ſuch caſes, may give you a little glimpſe of thoſe troubles of Soul, with which the people of God are perplexed about their Eternal condition, which perhaps you have been hitherto unacquainted with, and therefore ſlighted them, as Fanſies and Whimſies. I ſay, your own fears and troubles, if ever you were engaged by a cunning and powerful Adverſary in a Law-ſuit for your Eſtate, may give you a little glimpſe of Spiritual Troubles; and indeed it is no more but a glimpſe of it: For, as the loſs of an earthly (though fair) Inheritance, is but a trifle to the loſs of God, and the Soul to Eternity; ſo you cannot but imagine, that the cares, fears, and ſolicitudes of Souls about theſe things, are much, very much beyond yours. Let us compare the Caſes, and ſee how they anſwer to each other.

1. You have Evidences for your Eſtates, and by them you hold what you have in the World. They alſo have Evidences for their Eſtate, in Chriſt, and Glory to come; they hold all in capite, by vertue of their Intermarriage with Jeſus Chriſt; they come to be enſtated in that glorious Inheritance, contained in the Covenant of Grace. You have their Tenure in that Scripture, 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. All is yours, for ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. Faith unites them to him, and after they believe, they are ſealed by the Spirit of Promiſe, Eph. 1. 13. They can lay claim to no Promiſe upon any other ground; this is their Title to all that they own as theirs.

2. It often falls out, that after the ſealing and executing of your Deeds or Leaſes, an Adverſary finds ſome dubious Clauſe in them, and thereupon commences a Suit of Law with you. Thus it frequently falls out with the People of God, who after their believing and ſealing time, have doubts and ſcruples raiſed in them about their Title. Nothing is more common, than for the Devil and their own Unbelief to ſtart Controverſies, and raiſe ſtrong Objections againſt their Intereſt in Chriſt, and the Covenant of Promiſes. Theſe are cunning and potent Adverſaries, and do maintain long debates with the gracious Soul, and reaſon ſo cunningly and ſophiſtically with it, that it can by no means extricate and ſatiſfie it ſelf; always alledging, that their Title is worth nothing, which they, poor Souls, are but too apt to ſuſpect.

3. All the while that a Suit in Law is depending about your Title, you have but little Comfort or Benefit from your Eſtate; you cannot look upon it as your own, nor lay out Moneys in Building or Dreſſing, for fear you ſhould loſe all at laſt. Juſt thus ſtands the caſe with doubting Chriſtians, they have little comfort from the moſt comfortable Promiſes, little benefit from the ſweeteſt Duties and Ordinances; they put off their own comforts, and ſay, If we were ſure that all this were ours, we could then rejoice in them; but alas! our Title is dubious, Chriſt is a precious Chriſt, the Promiſes are comfortable things, but what if they be none of ours? Ah! how little doth the doubting Chriſtian make of his large and rich Inheritance?

4. You dare not truſt your own Judgments in ſuch caſes, but ſtate your caſe to ſuch as are Learned in the Laws; and are willing to get the ableſt Counſel you can to adviſe you: So are poor doubting Chriſtians, they carry their caſes from Chriſtian to Chriſtian, and from Miniſter to Miniſter, with ſuch requeſts as theſe. Pray tell me, what do you think of my condition? deal plainly and faithfully with me; theſe be my grounds of doubting, and theſe my grounds of hope. O hide nothing from me! And if they all agree that their caſe is good, yet they cannot be ſatisfied till God ſay ſo too, and confirm firm the word of his Servants; aud therefore they carry the caſe often before him in ſuch words as thoſe, Pſal. 139. 23, 24. Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, and ſee if there be any way of wickedneſs in me.

5. You have little quiet in your Spirits, till the Caſe be reſolved, your Meat and Drink doth you little good; you cannot ſleep in the Night, becauſe theſe troubled thoughts are ever returning upon you, What if I ſhould be turn'd out of all at laſt? So it is with gracious Souls, their Eyes are held waking in the Night, by reaſon of the troubles of their hearts, Pſal. 77. 4. Such fears as theſe are frequently returning upon their Hearts, What if I ſhould be found a ſelf-deceiver at laſt? What if I do but hug a phantaſm inſtead of Chriſt? How can this, or that, conſiſt with Grace? Their Meat and Drink doth them little good; their Bodies are often macerated by the troubles of their Souls.

6. You will not make the beſt of your condition, when you ſtate your Caſe to a faithful Counſellor; neither will they, but oft-times (poor penſive Souls) they make it much worſe than indeed it is; charge themſelves with that which God never charged them with, though this be neither their Wiſdom, nor their Duty, but the fears of miſcarrying make them ſuſpect fraud in all they do or have.

7. Laſtly, When your Title is cleared, your Hearts are eaſed; yea, not only eaſed, but overjoyed; though not in that degree, nor with the ſame kind of joy that the Hearts of Chriſtians are overflowed, when the Lord ſpeaks peace to their Souls. O welcome the ſweet Morning light, after a tedious Night of darkneſs; now they can eat their Bread with comfort, and drink their Wine (yea, if it be but Water) with a merry Heart, Eccleſ. 9. 7.

REFLECTIONS.

The Careleſs Soul's Reflection.

1. O how hath my Spirit been toſſed and hurried, when I have met with troubles and clamours about my Eſtate! But as for ſpiritual troubles, and thoſe Soul-perplexing caſes, that Chriſtians ſpeak of, I underſtand but little of them. I never called my Everlaſting ſtate in queſtion, nor brake an hour's ſleep upon any ſuch account. Ah, my ſupine and careleſs Soul! little haſt thou regarded how matters ſtand in reference to Eternity! I have ſtrongly conceited, but never throughly examined the validity of my Title to Chriſt and his Promiſes; nor am I able to tell, if my own Conſcience ſhould demand whereupon my claim is grounded!

O my Soul! why art thou ſo unwilling to examine how matters ſtand betwixt God and thee? Art thou afraid to look into thy condition, leſt by finding thine Hypocriſie, thou ſhouldſt loſe thy peace; or rather, thy ſecurity? To what purpoſe will it be to ſhut thine Eyes againſt the light of Conviction, unleſs thou couldſt alſo find out a way to prevent thy condemnation? Thou ſeeſt other Souls, how attentively they wait under the Word, for any thing that may ſpeak to their conditions. Doubtleſs thou haſt heard, how frequently and ſeriouſly they have ſtated their conditions, and opened their caſes to the Miniſters of Chriſt! But thou, O my Soul! haſt no ſuch caſes to put, no doubts to be reſolved; thou wilt leave all to the deciſion of the great day, and not trouble thy ſelf about it now. Well, God will decide it, but little to thy comfort.

The Doubting Soul's Reflection.

2. I have heard how ſome have been perplexed by litigious Adverſaries, but I believe none have been ſo toſſed with fears, and diſtracted with doubts, as I have been about the ſtate of my Soul. Lord, what ſhall I do? I have often carried my doubts and ſcruples to thine Ordinances, waiting for ſatisfaction to be ſpoken there. I have carried them to thoſe I have judged skilful and faithful, begging their reſolution and help, but nothing will ſtick. Still my fears are daily renewed. O my God, do thou decide my caſe! tell me how the ſtate ſtands betwixt thee and me; my days conſume in trouble, I can neither do or enjoy any good, whilſt things are thus with me; all my earthly Enjoyments are dry and uncomfortable things? yea, which is much worſe, all my Duties and thine Ordinances prove ſo too, by reaſon of the troubles of my Heart! I am no Ornament to my Profeſſion, nay, I am a diſcouragement and ſtumbling-block to others? I will hearken and hear what God the Lord will ſpeak; O that it might be peace! If thou do not ſpeak it, none can; and when thou doſt, keep thy Servant from returning again to folly, leſt I make freſh work for an accuſing Conſcience, and give new matter to the Adverſary of my Soul!

The Aſſured Chriſtian's Reflection.

3. But thou (my Soul) enjoyeſt a double Mercy from thy bountiful God, who hath not only given thee a ſound Title, but alſo the clear evidence and knowledge thereof. I am gathering, and daily feeding upon the full-ripe fruits of aſſurance, which grow upon the top Boughs of Faith, whilſt many of my poor Brethren drink their own Tears, and have their Teeth broken with Gravel-ſtones. Lord, thou haſt ſet my Soul upon her high places but let me not exalt my ſelf, becauſe thou haſt exalted me; nor grow wanton, becauſe I walk at liberty, leſt for the abuſe of ſuch precious liberty, thou clap my old chains upon me, and ſhut up my Soul again in Priſon.

MEDITATIONS on Birds.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the ſinging of a Nightingal.

WHO that hears ſuch various, raviſhing and exquiſite Melody, would imagine the Bird that makes it to be of ſo ſmall and contemptible a Body and Feather? Her charming voice ingaged not only mine attentive Ear, but my Feet alſo, to make a nearer approach to that ſhady Buſh, in which that excellent Muſician ſat vailed; and the nearer I came, the ſweeter the Melody ſtill ſeemed to be; but when I had deſcribed the Bird her ſelf, and found her to be little bigger, and no better Feather'd than a Sparrow, it gave my Thoughts the occaſion of this following Application.

This Bird ſeems to me the Lively Emblem of the formal Hypocrite, (1.) In that ſhe is more in ſound than ſubſtance, a loud and excellent voice, but a little deſpicable Body; and it recall'd to my Thoughts the Story of Plutarch, who hearing a Nightingal, deſired to have one killed to feed upon, not queſtioning but ſhe would pleaſe the Palate as well as the Ear; but when the Nightingal was brought him, and he ſaw what a poor little Creature it was, Truly, ſaid he, thou art vox & preterea nihil, a meer voice and nothing elſe: So is the Hypocrite; did a Man hear him ſometimes in more publick Duties and Diſcourſes, O, thinks he, what an excellent Man is this! What a choice and rare Spirit is he of? But follow him home, obſerve him in his private Converſation and Retirements, and then you will Judge Plutarch's Note as applicable to him as the Nightingal. (2.) This Bird is obſerved to Charm moſt ſweetly, and ſet her Spirits all on work, when ſhe perceives ſhe hath ingaged attention; ſo doth the Hypocrite, who lives and feeds upon the applauſe and commendation of his Admirers, and cares little for any of thoſe Duties which bring in no returns of praiſe from Men; he is little pleaſed with a ſilent Melody and private Pleaſure betwixt God and his own Soul.

Scire tuum nihil eſt niſi te ſcire hoc ſciat alter.

Alas! his knowledge is not worth a Pin,
If he proclaim not what he hath within.

He is more for the Theatre than the Cloſet; and of ſuch Chriſt ſaith, Verily they have their Reward. (3.) Naturaliſts obſerve the Nightingal to be an ambitious Bird, that cannot endure to be outvied by any; ſhe will rather chuſe to die than be excell'd; a notable inſtance whereof we have in the following pleaſant Poem, tranſlated out of Strada, concerning the Nightingal and a Lutaniſt.

Now the declining Sun did downward bend
From higher Heavens, and from his Looks did ſend
A milder flame, when near to Tyber's flow,
A Lutaniſt allayed his careful woe,
With ſounding Charms, and in a greeny ſeat
Of ſhady Oak, took ſhelter from the heat;
A Nightingal o'reheard him that did uſe
To ſojourn in the neighbour Groves, the Muſe
That fill'd the place, the Syrene of the Wood
(Poor harmleſs Syrene) ſtealing near, ſhe ſtood
Cloſe lurking in the leaves, attentively
Recording that unwonted melody.
She con'd it to her ſelf, and every ſtrain
His Fingers play'd, her Throat return'd again.
The Lutaniſt perceiv'd an anſwer ſent
From th' imitating Bird, and was content
To ſhew her play more fully, then in haſte
He tries his Lute, and giving her a taſte
Of the enſuing quarrel, nimbly beats
On all his ſtrings, as nimbly ſhe repeats,
And wildly ranging o're a Thouſand keys,
Sounds a ſhrill warning of her after-lays:
With rowling hand the Lutaniſt then plies
The trembling threads, ſometimes in ſcornful wiſe
He bruſhes down the ſtrings, and ſtrikes them all
With one even ſtroke, then takes them ſeveral
And culls them o're again, his ſparkling Joints
With buſie diſcant mincing on the points,
Reach back again with nimble touch, then ſtays,
The Bird replies, and Art with Art repays.
Sometimes as one unexpert, and in doubt
How ſhe might wield her voice, ſhe draweth out
Her tone at large, and doth at firſt prepare
A ſolemn ſtrain, nor wear'd with winding air,
But with an equal pitch, and conſtant Throat,
Makes clear the paſſage for her gliding note;
Then croſs-diviſion diverſly ſhe plays,
And loudly chanting out her quickeſt lays,
Poyſes the ſound, and with a quivering voice
Falls back again; he wondring how ſo choice,
So various harmony could iſſue out
From ſuch a little Throat, doth go about
Some harder Leſſons, and with wondrous Art
Changing the ſtrings, doth up the Treble dart,
And downward ſmite the Baſe, with painful ſtroke
He beats; and as the Trumpet doth provoke
Sluggards to fight, even ſo his wanton skill
With mingled diſcord joins the hoarſe and ſhrill,
The Bird this alſo tunes, and whilſt ſhe cuts
Sharp notes with melting voice, and mingled puts Meaſures of middle ſound, then ſuddenly
She thunders deep, and jugs it inwardly
With gentle murmur, clear and dull ſhe ſings
By courſe, as when the Martial warning rings;
Believe't the Minſtrel bluſht, with angry mood;
Inflam'd, (quoth he) thou Chantreſs of the VVood,
Either from thee I'll bear the prize away,
Or vanquiſht, break my Lute without delay.
Unimitable accents then he ſtrains,
His hand flies on the ſtrings, in one he chains
Far different numbers, chaſing here and there,
And all the ſtrings he labours every where;
Both flat and ſharp he ſtrikes, and ſtately grows
To prouder ſtrains, and backward as he goes
Doubly divides, and cloſing up his Lays
Like a full Quire, a ſhivering Conſort plays;
Then pauſing ſtood in expectation
Of his corrival, nor durſt anſwer on.
But ſhe, when practice long her Throat had whet,
Enduring not to yeild, at once doth ſet
Her Spirits all to work, and all in vain;
For whilſt ſhe labours to expreſs again,
With natures ſimple voice ſuch divers Keys,
VVith ſlender Pipes ſuch lofty Notes as theſe,
O're-matcht with high deſigns, o're-matcht with woe,
Juſt at the laſt encounter of her Foe
She faints, ſhe dies, falls on his Inſtrument
That conquer'd her, a fitting Monument.
So far even little Souls are driven on,
Struck with a vertuous emulation.

And even as far are Hypocrites driven on by their Ambition and Pride, which is the Spur that provokes them in their Religious Duties.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the ſight of many ſmall Birds chirping about a dead Hawk.

HEaring a whole Quire of Birds chirping and twinking together, it engaged my Curioſity a little to enquire into the occaſion of that Convocation, which mine Eye quickly inform'd me of; for I perceived a dead Hawk in the Buſh, about which they made ſuch a noiſe, ſeeming to triumph at the death of their Enemy; and I could not blame them to ſing his Knell, who like a Cannibal was wont to feed upon their living Bodies; tearing them limb from limb, and ſcaring them with his frightful appearance. This Bird which living was ſo formidable, being dead the pooreſt Wren or Titmouſe fears not to chirp or hop over. This brings to my thoughts the baſe and ignoble ends of the greateſt Tyrants and greedy Ingroſſers of the World, of whom (whilſt living) Men were more afraid than Birds of a Hawk, but dead became objects of contempt and ſcorn. The death of ſuch Tyrants is both inglorious and unlamented; When the wicked periſh, there is ſhouting, Prov. 11. 10. which was exemplified to the Life at the Death of Nero, of whom the Poet thus ſings,

Credibile eſt multos Romam agitaſſe jocos.

When cruel Nero died, th' Hiſtorian tells,
How Rome did mourn with Boneſires, Plays and Bells.

Remarkable for contempt and ſhame have the ends of many Bloody Tyrants been; ſo Pompey the Great, of whom Claudian the Poet ſings.

Nudus paſcit aves jacet en qui poſſidet orbem
Exiguæ telluris inops——————

Birds eat his Fleſh; lo, now he cannot have,
Who rul'd the world, a ſpace to make a Grave.

The like is ſtoried of Alexander the Great, who lay unburied thirty days, and William the Conqueror, with many other ſuch Birds of prey; whilſt a beneficial and holy life is uſually cloſed up in an honourable and much lamented death.

For mine own part, I wiſh I may ſo order my Converſation in the World, that I may live when I am dead in the Affections of the beſt, and leave an honourable Teſtimony in the Conſciences of the worſt; that I may oppreſs none, do good to all, and ſay when I die, as good Ambroſe did, I am neither aſhamed to live, nor afraid to die.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the ſight of a Black-bird taking Sanctuary in a Buſh from a purſuing Hawk.

WHen I ſaw how hardly the poor Bird was put to it to ſave her ſelf from her Enemy, who hover'd juſt over the Buſh in which ſhe was fluttering and ſqueeking, I could not but haſten to relieve her, (pity and ſuccour being a due debt to the diſtreſſed) which when I had done, the Bird would not depart from the Buſh, though her Enemy were gone; this act of kindneſs was abundantly repaid by this Meditation, with which I returned to my walk. My Soul, like this Bird, was once diſtreſſed, purſued, yea, ſeized by Satan, who had certainly made a prey of it, had not Jeſus Chriſt been a Sanctuary to it in that hour of danger. How ready did I find him to receive my poor Soul into his protection? Then did he make good that ſweet Promiſe to my experience, Thoſe that come unto me, I will in no wiſe caſt out. It call'd to mind that pretty and pertinent Story of the Philoſopher, who walking in the Fields, a Bird purſued by a Hawk flew into his Boſom; he took her out, and ſaid, Poor Bird, I will neither wrong thee, nor expoſe thee to thine Enemy, ſince thou cameſt to me for refuge. So tender, and more than ſo, is the Lord Jeſus to diſtreſſed Souls, that come unto him. Bleſſed Jeſus! How ſhould I love and praiſe thee, glorifie and admire thee, for that great Salvation thou haſt wrought for me? If this Bird had fallen into the Claws of her Enemy, ſhe had been torn to pieces indeed and devoured, but then a few minutes had diſpatcht her, and ended all her pain and miſery; but had my Soul fallen into the hand of Satan, there had been no end of its miſery.

Would not this ſcared Bird be fluſht out of the Buſh that ſecured her, though I had chaſed away her Enemy? And wilt thou (my Soul) ever be inticed or ſcared from Chriſt thy refuge? O let this for ever ingage thee to keep cloſe to Chriſt, and make me ſay with Ezra, and now, O Lord! Since thou haſt given me ſuch a deliverance as this, ſhould I again break thy Commandments?

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the ſight of divers Lennets intermingling with a Flock of Sparrows.

MEthinks theſe Birds do fitly reſemble the Gaudy Courtiers, and the Plain Peaſants; how ſpruce and richly adorned with ſhining and various coloured Feathers, (like Scarlet, richly laid with Gold and Silver Lace) are thoſe? How plainly clad, in a home-ſpun Countrey Ruſſet are theſe? Fine Feathers (ſaith our Proverb) make proud Birds; and yet the Feathers of the Sparrow are as uſeful and beneficial, both for warmth and flight, though not ſo gay and ornamental as the others; and if both were ſtript out of their Feathers, the Sparrow would prove the better Bird of the two; by which I ſee, that the greateſt worth doth not always lye under the fineſt Cloaths. And beſides, God can make mean and homely Garments as uſeful and beneficial to poor deſpiſed Chriſtians, as the ruffling and ſhining Garments of wanton Gallants are to them; and when God ſhall ſtrip Men out of all external Excellencies, theſe will be found to excel their glittering Neighbours in true worth and excellency.

Little would a Man think ſuch rich Treaſures of Grace, Wiſdom, Humility, &c. lay under ſome Ruſſet Coats.

Sæpe ſub attrita latitat ſapientia veſte.

Under poor Garments more true worth may be Than under Silks that whiſtle, Who but he?

Whilſt on the other ſide, the Heart of the wicked (as Solomon hath obſerved) is little worth, how much ſoever his Cloaths be worth. Alas! It falls out too frequently among us, as it doth with Men in the Indies, who walk over the rich Veins of Gold and Silver Oar, which lyes hid under a ragged and barren ſurface, and know it not. For my own part, I deſire not to value any Man by what is extrinſical and worldly, but by that true internal excellency of Grace, which makes the Face to ſhine in the Eyes of God and good Men: I would contemn a vile Perſon, tho' never ſo glorious in the Eye of the World; but honour ſuch as fear the Lord, how ſordid and deſpicable ſoever to appearance.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the ſight of a Robin-red-breaſt picking up a Worm from a Mole-hill, then Raiſing.

OBſerving the Mole working induſtriouſly beneath, and the Bird watching ſo intently above, I made a ſtand to obſerve the iſſue. When in a little time the Bird deſcends and ſeizes upon a Worm, which I perceived was crawling apace from the Enemy below that hunted her, but fell to the ſhare of another which from above waited for her. My thoughts preſently ſuggeſted theſe Meditations from that occaſion; methought this poor Worm ſeem'd to be the Emblem of my poor Soul which is more endangered by its own Luſts of Pride and Covetouſneſs, than this Worm was by the Mole and Bird; my Pride, like the aſpiring Bird, watches for it above; my Covetouſneſs, like this ſubterranean Mole, digging for it beneath. Poor Soul! What a ſad Dilemma art thou brought to? If thou go down into the Caverns of this Earth, there thou art a prey to thy Covetouſneſs that hunts thee; and if thou aſpire, or but creep upward, there thy Pride waits to enſnare thee. Diſtreſſed Soul! Whither wilt thou go? Aſcend thou mayeſt, not by a vain elation, but by a heavenly converſation, beſide which there is no way for thy preſervation the way of Life is above to the Wiſe, &c.

Again, I could not but obſerve the accidental benefit this poor harmleſs Bird obtain'd by the labour of the Mole, who hunting intentionally for her ſelf, unburroughed and ferrited out this Worm for the Bird, who poſſibly was hungry enough, and could not have been relieved for this time, but by the Mole, the fruit of whoſe labours ſhe now feeds upon. Even thus the Lord oft-times makes good his word to his People: The wealth of the wicked is laid up for the juſt. And again, The earth ſhall help the Woman. This was fully exemplified in David, to whom Nabal, that churliſh Muckworm, ſpeaks all in Poſſeſſives. Shall I take my bread, &c. and give it to one I know not whom? And yet David reaps the fruit of all the pains and toil of Nabal at laſt. Let it never incourage me to idleneſs, that God ſometimes gives his People the fruit of others ſweat; but if Providence reduce me to neceſſity, and diſable me from helping my ſelf, I doubt not then but it will provide Inſtruments to do it. The Bird was an hungry, and could not dig.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon the ſhooting of two Finches fighting in the Air.

HOW ſoon hath death ended the quarrel betwixt theſe two little Combitants! Had they agreed better, they might have lived longer; 'twas their own contention that gave both the opportunity and provocation of their Death; and though living they could not, yet being dead they can lye quietly together in my hand.

Fooliſh Birds, was it not enough that Birds of Prey watched to devour them, but they muſt peck and ſcratch one another? Thus have I ſeen the Birds of Paradice (Saints I mean) tearing and wounding each other, like ſo many Birds of Prey, and by their unchriſtian Conteſts giving the occaſion of their common Ruin; yea, and that not only when at liberty, as theſe were, but when engaged alſo; and yet, as one well obſerves, if ever Chriſtians will agree, 'twill either be in a Priſon, or in Heaven; for in a Priſon their quarrelſome Luſts lye low, and in Heaven they ſhall be utterly done away.

But O! What pity is it, that thoſe who ſhall agree ſo perfectly in Heaven, ſhould bite and devour each other upon Earth? That it ſhould be ſaid of them, as one ingeniouſly obſerved, who ſaw their Carcaſes lye together, as if they had lovingly embraced each other, who fell together by a Duel, Quanta amicitia ſe invicem amplectuntur; qui mutua & implacabili inimicitia per eerunt?

Imbracing one another, now they lye,
Who, by each others bloody Hands did die.

Or as he said, who obſerved how quietly and peaceably the Duſt and Bones, even of Enemies, did lye together in the Grave; Non tanta vivi pace conjuncti eſſetis; you did not live together ſo peaceably. If Conſcience of Chriſt's Command will not, yet the Conſideration of common Safety ſhould powerfully perſwade to Unity and Amity.

MEDIT. VII.

Upon the ſinging of a blind Finch by Night.

A Dear Friend, who was a great Obſerver of the Works of God in Nature, told me, That being entertain'd with a ſight of many Rarities at a Friend's Houſe in London; among other things, his Friends ſhewed him a Finch, whoſe Eyes being put out, would frequently ſing, even at midnight. This Bird, in my Opinion, is the lively Emblem of ſuch careleſs and unconcerned Perſons, as the Prophet deſcribes, Amos 6. 4, 5, 6. who chant to the Viol, when a diſmal night of trouble and affliction hath over-ſhadowed the Church. You would have thought it ſtrange to have heard this Bird ſing in the Night, when all others are in a deep ſilence; except the Owl, an unclean Bird, and the Nightingal, which before we made the Emblem of the Hypocrite. And as ſtrange it is, that any, except the Prophane and Hypocritical, ſhould ſo unſeaſonably expreſs their Mirth and Jollity; that any of Sion's Children ſhould live in Pleaſure, whilſt ſhe her ſelf lyes in Tears. The People of God, in Pſal. 137. tells us, in what poſtures of Sorrow they ſat; even like Birds, with their Heads under their Wings, during the night of their captivity. How ſhall we ſing the Lord's Songs in a ſtrange Land? 'Tis like enough, ſuch as can ſing and chant in the Night of the Church's Trouble, have well feathered their Neſts in the Days of her Proſperity; However, let them know, that God will turn their unſeaſonable mirth into a ſadder Note; and thoſe that now ſit ſad and ſilent, ſhall ſhortly ſing for Joy of Heart, when the Winter is paſt, the Rain over and gone, the Flowers appear again upon the Earth, and the time of the ſinging of Birds is come.

MEDIT. VIII.

Upon the comparing of two Birds Neſts.

'TIS pretty to obſerve the Structure and Commodiouſneſs of the Habitations of theſe little Architects, who, though they act not by reaſon and Counſel, but only by natural Inſtinct, yet Reaſon it ſelf could hardly have contrived a neater Building of ſuch ſimple Materials. How neatly hath the Thruſh ceiled or plaiſtered his Neſt, with admirable Art and Induſtry? How warmly hath the Finch matted his? And both well fenced againſt the Injury of the Weather.

How comfortably hath Nature provided convenient Habitations for theſe weak and tender young Ones, who have warm Lodging, and variety of Proviſions hourly brought them, without their Care or Pains? This trifling Object ſuggeſts to my Thoughts a more excellent and ſerious Contemplation, even the wonderful and unparallell'd Abaſement of Jeſus Chriſt, who for my ſake voluntarily ſubmitted himſelf to a more deſtitute and neglected State, than theſe Birds of the Air; for Mat. 8. 20. he ſaith, The Foxes have holes, and the Birds of the Air have neſts; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his Head.

Vulpibus in ſaltu rupes exciſa latebras
Præbet, & aereis avibus dat ſilva quietem:
Aſt hominis Nato nullis ſuccedere tectis
Eſt licitum———————

Heinſ. in loc.

The craggy Rock to Foxes holes affords,
The pleaſant Woods a reſting place to Birds;
For Chriſt no fixed Habitation's found,
But what was borrowed, or the naked ground.

O melting Conſideration! that the glorious Son of God, Joh. 1. 14. The Lord of Glory, Jam. 2. 1. The brightneſs of his Father's Glory, Heb. 1. 3. Who was rich, 2 Cor. 8. 9. And thought it no robbery to be equal with God, Phil. 2. 8. who from all eternity was infinitely and ineffably delighting and rejoicing in the boſom of his Father, Prov. 8. 30. That he, I ſay, ſhould manifeſt himſelf in fleſh, 2 Tim. 3. 16. Yea, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, Rom. 8. 3. That is, in fleſh that had the marks and effects of ſin upon it, as hunger, thirſt, pain, wearineſs and mortality, and not only ſo, but to chuſe ſuch a State of outward meanneſs and poverty, never being poſſeſſed of a Houſe in this World; but living as a Stranger in other Mens Houſes, and ſtooping in this reſpect to a lower Condition than the very Birds of the Air, and all this for Enemies. O let it work both admiration and thankfulneſs in my Soul! my Body is better accommodated than the Body of my Lord. Dear Jeſus! by how much the viler thou madeſt thy ſelf for me, by ſo much the dearer ſhalt thou be to me.

Quanto pro me vilior, tanto mihi charior. Bern.

MEDIT. IX.

Upon the early ſinging of Birds.

HOW am I reproved of Sluggiſhneſs by theſe watchful Birds! which cheerfully entertain the very dawning of the Morning, with their cheerful and delightful warblings! they ſet their little Spirits all a-work betimes, whilſt my nobler Spirits are bound with the Bonds of ſoft and downy Slumbers. For ſhame, my Soul! ſuffer not that Publican ſleep to ſeize ſo much of thy time, yea, thy beſt and freſheſt time; reprove and chide thy ſluggiſh Body, as a good Biſhop once did when upon the ſame occaſion he ſaid, Surrexerunt paſſeres, & ſtertunt Pontifices.

Such lazy Biſhops as their Beds do love.

Of many Sluggards it may be ſaid, as Tully ſaid of Verres, the Deputy of Sicily, Quod nunquam ſolem nec orientem, nec occidentem viderat; that he never ſaw the Sun riſing, being in Bed after, nor ſetting, being in Bed before.

'Tis pity that Chriſtians, of all Men, ſhould ſuffer ſleep to cut ſuch large Thongs out of ſo narrow a Hide, as their time on Earth is. But, alas! It is not ſo much early riſing, as a wiſe improving thoſe freſh and free Hours with God, that will enrich the Soul; elſe, as our Proverb ſaith, A Man may be early up, and never the near; yea, far better it is to be found in Bed ſleeping, than to be up doing nothing, or that which is worſe than nothing. O my Soul! Learn to prepoſſeſs thy ſelf every morning with the Thoughts of God, and ſuffer not thoſe freſh and ſweet Operations of the Mind to be proſtituted to Earthly things; for that is experimentally true, which one in this Caſe hath pertinently obſerved; that if the World get the ſtart of Religion in the Morning, it will be hard for Religion to overtake it all the Day after.

Mr. Caſe in Epiſt. to the Morn. Lect.

MEDIT. X.

Upon the haltering of Birds with a Grain of Hair.

OBſerving in a ſnowy Seaſon, how the poor hungry Birds were haltered and drawn in by a Grain of Hair cunningly caſt over their Heads, whilſt poor Creatures they were buſily feeding, and ſuſpected no danger; and even whilſt their Companions were drawn away from them, one after another; all the interruption it gave the reſt, was only for a minute or two, whilſt they ſtood peeping into that hole through which their Companions were drawn, and then fell to their Meat again as buſily as before; I could not chuſe but ſay, Even thus ſurprizingly doth Death ſteal upon the Children of Men, whilſt they are wholly intent upon the Cares and Pleaſures of this Life, not at all ſuſpecting its ſo near approach. Theſe Birds ſaw not the Hand that enſnared them, nor do they ſee the Hand of Death plucking them one after another into the Grave.

Omnibus obſcuras injecit illa manus. Ovid.

Death's ſteps as ſwift, and yet no noiſe it makes;
Its hand unſeen, but yet moſt ſurely takes.

And even as the ſurviving Birds for a little time ſeemed to ſtand affrighted, peeping after their Companions, and then as buſie as ever to their Meat again: Juſt ſo it fares with the careleſs inconſiderate World, who ſee others daily dropping into Eternity round about them, and for the preſent are a little ſtartled, and will look into the Grave after their Neighbours, and then fall as buſily to their Earthly Imployments and Pleaſures again as ever, till their own turn comes.

I know my God! That I muſt die as well as others; but, O let me not die as do others, let me ſee death before I feel it, and conquer it before it kill me; let it not come as an Enemy upon my back, but rather let me meet it as a Friend half way! Die I muſt, but let me lay up that good Treaſure before I go, Mat. 6. 19. Carry with me a good Conſcience when I go, 2 Tim. 4. 6, 7. And leave behind me a good Example when I am gone, and then let Death come and welcome!

Meditations upon BEASTS.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the clogging a ſtraying Beaſt.

HAD this Bullock contented himſelf, and remained quietly within his own bounds, his Owner had never put ſuch an heavy Clog upon his Neck; but I ſee the prudent Husbandman chuſes rather to keep him with this Clog, than loſe him for want of one. What this Clog is to him, that is Affliction and Trouble to me; had my Soul kept cloſe with God in Liberty and Proſperity, he would never thus have clogged me with Adverſity; yea, and happy were it for me, if I might ſtray from God no more, who hath thus clogged me with preventive Afflictions. If, with David, I might ſay, Before I was afflicted I went aſtray, but now I have kept thy word, Pſal. 119. 67. O my Soul! 'tis better for thee to have thy Pride clogged with Poverty, thy Ambition with Reproach, thy carnal Expectancies with conſtant Diſappointments, than to be at Liberty, to run from God and Duty.

'Tis true, I am ſometimes as weary of theſe Troubles, as this poor Beaſt is of the Clog he draws after him, and often wiſh my ſelf rid of them; but yet, if God ſhould take them off, for ought I know I might have cauſe to wiſh them on again, to prevent a greater Miſchief. 'Tis ſtoried of Baſil, that for many Years he was ſorely afflicted with an inveterate Head-ach, (that was his Clog) he often prayed for the removal of it, at laſt God removed it; but inſtead thereof he was ſorely exerciſed with the motions and temptations of Luſt, which when he perceived, he as earneſtly deſired his Head-ach again, to prevent a greater Evil. Lord! If my Corruptions may be prevented by my affliction, I refuſe not to be clogged with them; but my Soul rather deſires thou wouldſt haſten the time when I ſhall be for ever freed from them both.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the Love of a Dog to his Maſter.

HOW many weary ſteps, through mire and dirt, hath this poor Dog followed my Horſe's heels to day, and all this for a very poor reward? For all he gets by it at night, is but Bones and Blows, yet will he not leave my Company, but is content upon ſuch hard Terms, to travel with me from day to day.

O my Soul! What conviction and ſhame may this leave upon thee, who art often-times even weary of following thy Maſter Chriſt, whoſe Rewards and Incouragements of Obedience are ſo incomparably ſweet and ſure? I cannot beat back this Dog from following me, but every inconſiderable trouble is enough to diſcourage me in the way of my Duty. Ready I am to reſolve as that Scribe did, Mat. 8. 19. Maſter, I will follow thee whitherſoever thou goeſt; but how doth my Heart faulter when I muſt encounter with the difficulties of the way? O! Let me make a whole Heart-choice of Chriſt for my Portion and Happineſs! And then I ſhall never leave him, nor turn back from following him, though the preſent Difficulties were much more, and the preſent Incouragements much leſs.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the fighting of two Rams.

TAking notice how furiouſly theſe Sheep, which by nature are mild and gentle, did yet, like Bulls, puſh each other, taking their advantage by going back to meet with a greater Rage and Fury. Methought I ſaw in this a plain Emblem of the unchriſtian Conteſts and Animoſities which fall out amongſt them that call themſelves the People of God, who are in Scripture alſo ſtiled Sheep, for their meekneſs and innocency; and yet, through the remaining corruptions that are in them, thus do they puſh each other; (as one long ſince complained) non ſecus ac.

Cum duo converſis inimica in prælia tauri,
Frontibus incurrunt———

Shall Chriſtians one another wound and puſh,
Like furious Bulls, when they together ruſh?

The fighting of theſe Sheep doth in two reſpects notably comport with the ſinful Practices of contending Chriſtians, 1. That in this fight they engage with their Heads one againſt another: And what are they but thoſe Head-notions, or Oppoſition of Sciences, falſly ſo called, that have made ſo many Broils and Uproars in the Chriſtian World? O! What claſhings have theſe heady Opinions cauſed in the Churches? Firſt Heads, and then Hearts have claſhed. Chriſtians have not diſtinguiſhed betwixt Adverſarius litis, & perſonæ; an Adverſary to the Opinion, and to the Perſon; but dipt their Tongues and Pens in Vinegar and Gall, ſhamefully aſperſing and reproaching one another, becauſe their Underſtandings were not caſt into one Mould, and their Heads all of a bigneſs. But, 2. That which Country-men obſerve from the fighting of Sheep, That it preſages foul and ſtormy Weather, is much more certainly conſequent upon the fighting of Chriſt's Sheep. Do theſe claſh and puſh? Surely it is an infallible Prognoſtick of an enſuing Storm, Mal. 4. 6.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the Catching of a Horſe in a fat Paſture.

WHen this Horſe was kept in poor ſhor Leas, where he had much Scope, bu little Graſs, how gentle and tractable was he then He would not only ſtand quiet to be taken, but com to hand of his own accord, and follow me up an down the Field for a Cruſt of Bread, or Handf of Oats; but ſince I turned him into this fat Paſture he comes no more to me, nor will ſuffer me to come near him, but throws up his Heels wantonly againſt me, and flies from me, as if I were rather his Enemy than Benefactor. In this I behold the Carriage of my own Heart towards God, who the more he hath done for me, the ſeldomer doth he hear from me; in a low and afflicted State, how tractable is my Heart to Duty? Then it comes to the Foot of God voluntarily? But in an exalted Condition, how wildly doth my Heart run from God and Duty? With this ungrateful requital God faulted his own People, Jer. 3. 31. teachable and tractable in the Wilderneſs, but when fatted in that rich Paſture Canaan, Then, we are Lords, we will come no more to thee. How ſoon are all God's former Benefits forgotten? And how often is that ancient Obſervation verified, even in his own People?

Μετὰ τ̃ δόσιν τάχιστα γηράσκει χάρις.

Poſt munera cito conſeneſcit gratia.

No ſooner do we Gifts on ſome beſtow,
But preſently our Gifts Gray-headed grow.

But that's a bad Tenant, that will maintain a Suit at Law againſt his Landlord with his own Rent; and a bad Heart, that will fight againſt God with his own Mercies. I wiſh it may be with my Heart, as it is reported to be with the Waters in the Kingdom of Congo, that are never ſo ſweet to the Taſte, as when the Tide is at the higheſt.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the Hunting of a Deer.

THE full-mouthed cry of theſe Dogs, which from the morning have hunted this poor tired Deer, which is now no longer able to ſtand before them, but is compaſſed round with them, who thirſt for, and will preſently ſuck her Blood; brings to my Thoughts the Condition and State of Jeſus Chriſt, in the days of his Fleſh, who was thus hunted from place to place by blood-thirſty Enemies. Upon this very account, the 22d Pſalm which treats of his Death, is inſcribed with the Title of Aljeleth Shahar, which ſignifies the Hind of the Morning, and fully imports the ſame Notion which this occaſion preſented me with; for look, as the Hind or Deer, which is intended to be run down that day, is rouzed by the Dogs early in the morning; ſo was Chriſt, in the very morning of his Infancy, by bloody Herod, and that cruel Pack confederated with him. Thus was he chaſed from place to place, till that was fulfilled which was prophetically written of him in Verſ. 16. of the forecited Pſalm; For Dogs have compaſſed me about, the aſſembly of the wicked have incloſed me; they pierced my hands and my feet.

And canſt thou expect, O my Soul! to fare better than he did, or eſcape the Rage of bloody men? Surely, if the Spirit of Chriſt dwell in thee, if his Holineſs have ſavoured thee, thoſe Dogs will wind it, and give thee chaſe too; they go upon the Scent of Holineſs ſtill, and would hunt to deſtruction every one, in whom there is aliquid Chriſti, any thing of Chriſt, if the gracious Providence of the Lord did not ſometimes rate them off: For it is no leſs a pleaſure which ſome wicked ones take in hunting the People of God, than what Claudian the Poet obſerves men uſe to take in hunting wild Beaſts.

Venator defeſſa thoro quum membra reponit
Mens tamen ad Sylvas, & ſua luſtra redit.

Whilſt weary Huntſmen in the Night do ſleep,
Their Fancies in the Woods ſtill hunting keep.

Lord! ſhould I with the Hypocrite decline the Profeſſion and Practice of Holineſs, to eſcape the Rage of perſecuting Enemies, at what time they ceaſe, my own Conſcience would begin to hunt me like a Blood-hound; let me rather chuſe to be chaſed by men than God, to flee before purſuing Enemies, than be dogged from day to day with a guilty Conſcience.

Meditations upon TREES.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the fall of Bloſſoms, nipt by a froſty Morning.

BEholding in an early Spring, Fruit-trees emboſſed with beautiful Bloſſoms of various Colours, which breathed forth their delicious Odours into the circumambient Air, and adorned the Branches on which they grew, like ſo many rich Jewels, or glittering Pendents; and further obſerving, how theſe perfumed Bloſſoms dropt off, being bitten with the Froſt, and diſcoloured all the Ground, as if a ſhower of Snow had fallen; I ſaid within my ſelf, theſe ſweet and early Bloſſoms are not unlike my ſweet and early Affections to the Lord, in the days of my firſt acquaintance with him. O What fervent Love, panting Deſires, and heavenly Delights beautified my Soul in thoſe days! the odoriferous Scent of the ſweeteſt Bloſſoms, the morning Breath of the moſt fragrant Flowers, hath not half that ſweetneſs with which thoſe my firſt Affections were enriched. O! happy time, thrice pleaſant Spring! My Soul hath it ſtill in remembrance, and is humbled within me; for theſe alſo were but Bloſſoms which now are nipt and faded, that firſt flouriſh is gone; my Heart is like the Winter's Earth, becauſe thy Face, Lord! is to me like a Winter Sun. Awake, O North Wind! and come South Wind, blow upon my Garden, that the Spices thereof may flow out, then let my Beloved come into his Garden, and eat his pleaſant Fruit!

MEDIT. II.

Upon the Knitting or Setting of Fruit.

I Have often obſerved, that when the Bloſſoms of a Tree ſet and knit, though the flouriſh thereof be gone, and nothing but the bare Rudiment of the expected Fruit be left; yet then the Fruit is much better ſecured from the danger of Froſts and Winds, than whilſt it remained in the Flower or Bloſſom; for now it hath paſt one of thoſe Critical Periods, in which ſo many Trees miſcarry and loſe their Fruit. And methought this Natural Obſervation fairly led me to this Theological Propoſition; That good good Motions and holy Purpoſes in the Soul, are never ſecured, and paſt their moſt dangerous Criſis, till they be turned into fixed Reſolutions, and anſwerable Executions, which is as the knitting and ſetting of them.

Upon this Propoſition my melting thoughts thus dilated, happy had it been for thee, my Soul! had all the bleſſed Motions of the Spirit been thus knit and fixed in thee. Oh, how have mine Affections blown and budded under the warm Beams of the Goſpel! But a chill blaſt from the Cares, Troubles and Delights of the World without, and the Vanity and Deadneſs of the Heart within, have blaſted all; my Goodneſs hath been but as a Morning Dew, or early Cloud that vaniſheth away. And even of Divine Ordinances, I may ſay what is ſaid of Humane Ordinances, They have periſhed in the uſing. A Bloſſom is but fructus imperfectus, & ordinabilis, an imperfect thing in it ſelf, and ſomething in order to Fruit; a good Motion and holy Purpoſe is but opus Imperfectum, & ordinabile, an imperfect Work, in order to a compleat Work of the Spirit; when that primus impetus, thoſe firſt Motions were ſtrong upon my Heart, had I then purſued them in the force and vigour of them, how many Difficulties might I have overcome? Revive thy Work, O Lord! And give not to my Soul a miſcarrying Womb, or dry Breaſts.

MEDIT. III.

Upon the ſight of a fair ſpreading Oak.

WHat a lofty flouriſhing Tree is here? It ſeems rather to be a little Wood, than a ſingle Tree; every Limb thereof having the Dimenſions and Branches of a Tree in it; and yet as great as it is, it was once but a little ſlip, which one might pull up with two Fingers; this vaſt Body was contained vertually and potentially in a ſmall Acorn. Well then, I will never deſpiſe the day of ſmall Things, nor deſpair of arriving to an Eminency of Grace, though at preſent it be but as a bruiſed Reed, and the things that are in me be ready to die. As things in Nature, ſo the things of the Spirit grow up to their fulneſs and perfection by ſlow and inſenſible degrees. The famous and heroical Acts of of the moſt renowned Believers were ſuch as themſelves could not once perform, or it may be think they ever ſhould. Great things, both in Nature and Grace, come from ſmall and contemptible Beginnings.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon the ſight of many Sticks lodged in the Branches of a choice Fruit-Tree.

HOW is this Tree batter'd with Stones and loaded with Sticks that have been thrown at it, whilſt thoſe that grow about it, being barren, or bearing harſher Fruit, eſcape untouched! Surely, if its Fruit had not been ſo good, its uſage had not been ſo bad. And yet it is affirmed, That ſome Trees, as the Walnut, &c. bear the better for being thus bruiſed and batter'd.

Even thus it fares in both reſpects with the beſt of Men; the more holy, the more envied and perſecuted; every one that paſſes by will have a fling at them. Methinks I ſee how Devils and wicked Men walk round about the People of God, whom he hath encloſed in his Arms of Power, like ſo many Boys about an Orchard, whoſe Lips water to have a fling at them. But God turns all the Stones of Reproach into precious Stones to his People; they bear the better for being thus batter'd. And, in them, is that ancient Obſervation verified.

Creſcunt virtutum palmæ, creſcuntque Coronæ
Mutantur mundi prælia, pace Dei.

The Palms and Crowns of Virtue thus encreaſe;
Thus Perſecution's turned into Peace.

Let me be but fruitful to God in Holineſs, and ever abounding in the Work of the Lord, and then whilſt Devils and Men are flinging at me, either by Hand or Tongue Perſecutions, I will ſing amidſt them all with the Divine Poet.

What open Force, or hidden Charm,
Can blaſt my Fruit, or bring me harm,
While the Incloſure is this Arm?

MEDIT. V.

Upon the gathering of choice Fruit from a ſcrubbed unpromiſing Tree.

WOuld any Man think to find ſuch rare delicious Fruit upon ſuch an unworthy Tree to appearance as this is? I ſhould rather have expected the moſt delicious Fruit from the moſt handſome and flouriſhing Trees; but I ſee I muſt neither judge the worth of Trees or Men by their external form and appearance. This is not the firſt time I have been deceived in judging by that Rule; under fair and promiſing out-ſides I have found nothing of worth; and in many deformed deſpicable Bodies, I have found precious and richly furniſhed Souls. The Sap and Juice of this ſcrubbed Tree is concocted into rare and excellent Fruits, whilſt the Juice and Sap of ſome other fair, but barren Trees, ſerves only to keep them from rotting, which is all the uſe that many Souls which dwell in beautiful Bodies ſerve for; they have (as one ſaith) animam pro ſale; their Souls are but Salt to their Bodies. Or thus,

Is but like Salt, their Bodies to preſerve.

If God have given me a ſound Soul in a ſound Body, I have a double Mercy to bleſs him for; but whether my Body be vigorous and beautiful, or not, yet let my Soul be ſo: For as the eſteem of this Tree, ſo the eſteem and true honour of every Man riſes rather from his fruitfulneſs and uſefulneſs, than from his ſhape and form.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon an excellent, but irregular Tree.

SEeing a Tree grow ſomewhat irregular, in a very neat Orchard, I told the Owner it was pity that Tree ſhould ſtand there; and that if it were mine I would root it up, and thereby reduce the Orchard to an exact uniformity. It was replied to this purpoſe, That he rather regarded the Fruit than the Form; and that this ſlight inconveniency was abundantly preponderated by a more conſiderable advantage. This Tree, ſaid he, which you would root up, hath yielded me more Fruit than many of thoſe Trees which have nothing elſe to commend them, but their regular Scituation. I could not but yield to the Reaſon of this Anſwer; and could wiſh it had been ſpoken ſo loud, that all our Uniformity-Men had heard it, who will not ſtick to root up many hundred of the beſt Bearers in the Lord's Orchard, becauſe they ſtand not in an exact order with other more conformable, but leſs beneficial Trees, who do perdere ſubſtantiam propter accidentia, deſtroy the Fruit, to preſerve the Form.

That ſtrive for Shadows, and the Subſtance loſe.

Meditations upon a Garden.

MEDIT. I.

Upon the new Modelling of a Garden.

A Gentlewoman who had lately ſeen a neat and curious Garden, returns to her own with a greater diſlike of it than ever; reſolves to new model the whole Plat, and reduce it to a better Form; is now become ſo curious and neat, that not a Weed or Stone is ſuffered in it, but all muſt lye in exquiſite order; and whatever Ornament ſhe had obſerved in her Neighbours, ſhe is now reſtleſs till ſhe ſee it in her own.

Happy were it, thought I, if in an holy Emulation every one would thus endeavour to rectifie the Diſorders of their own Converſation, by the excellent Graces they behold in the more heavenly and regular Lives of others. Some Chriſtians there are (I wiſh their number were greater) whoſe Actions lye in ſuch a comely and beautiful order, that few of their Neighbours can look upon their Examples without ſelf-conviction and ſhame; but few are ſo happy to be provoked unto ſelf-reformation by ſuch rare Patterns. I ſee it is much eaſier to pull up many Weeds out of a Garden, than one Corruption out of the Heart; and to procure an hundred Flowers to adorn a Knot, than one Grace to beautifie the Soul. 'Tis more natural to corrupt Man to Envy, than to imitate the Spiritual Excellencies of others.

MEDIT. II.

Upon the pulling up of a Leek.

A White head and a green tail! How well doth this reſemble an old wanton Lover, whoſe green youthful Luſts are not extinguiſhed, though his white head declares that Nature is almoſt ſo! Gray Hairs ſhould be always match'd with grave Deportments; and the Sins of Youth ſhould rather be the Griefs than Pleaſures of old Age. 'Tis ſad when the Sins of the Soul, like the Diſeaſes of the Body, grow ſtronger, as Nature grows weaker: And it recals to my mind that ancient Obſervation of Menanber.

Γέρων ἐραστὴς ἐσχάτη κακὴ τύχη.

Sene amore captus, ultimum malum.

It is the worſt of Evils, to behold
Strong youthful Luſts to rage in one that's old.

'Tis a thouſand pities, that thoſe who have one Foot in the Grave, would live as if the other were in Hell! that their Luſts ſhould be ſo lively, when their Bodies are three parts dead! Such Sinful Practices bring upon them more contempt and ſhame than their hoary Heads and reverend Faces can procure them Honour.

Magna fuit capitis quondam reverentia cani,
Inque ſuo pretio ruga ſenilis erat.
Ovid. 5. Faſt.

Gray Hairs, and aged Wrinkles, did of old
Procure more reverence than Bags of Gold.

But alas! How little reſpect or reverence can the hoary Head obtain amongſt wiſe Men, except it be found in the way of Righteouſneſs? I think the loweſt eſteem is too much for an old Servant of the Devil; and the higheſt honour little enough for an ancient and faithful Servant of Chriſt.

MEDIT. III.

Upon a heedleſs Tread in a curious Garden.

PAſſing through the ſmall Diviſions of a curious Knot, which was richly adorned with rare Tulips, and other beautiful Flowers, I was very careful to ſhun thoſe Flowers, which indeed had no other worth to commend them, but their exquiſite Colours, and unadviſedly trod upon and ſpoiled an excellent choice Herb, which though it grew obſcurely, yet had rare Phyſical Virtues in it.

When I was made ſenſible of the involuntary Treſpaſs I had committed, I thought I could ſcarcely make the Owner a better Compenſation, than by telling him, that herein (though againſt my will) I did but tread in the Footſteps of the greateſt part of the World, who are very careful (as I was) to keep their due diſtance from ſplendid, though worthleſs Gallants; mean while trampling upon, and cruſhing under foot, the obſcure, but moſt precious Servants of God in the World. As little do they heed theſe moſt excellent Perſons as I did this precious Herb.

ſaith Plautus.

Rare Wits and Herbs ſometimes do ſculk and ſhrink
In ſuch blind holes, as one would little think.

For my own part, I deſire to tread upon no man with the Foot of Contempt and Pride, much leſs upon any good man; and that I may not, it concerns me to look before I ſtep; I mean, to conſider before I cenſure: had I done ſo by this rare Herb, I had never hurt it.

MEDIT. IV.

Upon a withered Poſie taken up in the way.

FInding, in my walk, a Poſie of once ſweet and fragrant, but now dry and withered Flowers, which I ſuppoſe to be thrown away by one that had formerly worn it: Thus, ſaid I, doth the unfaithful World uſe its Friends, when Providence hath blaſted and withered them; whilſt they are rich and honourable, they will put them into their Boſoms, as the Owner of this Poſie did, whilſt it was freſh and fragrant, and as eaſily throw them away, as uſeleſs and worthleſs things, when thus they come to be withered. Such uſage as this Petronius long ſince complained of.

Cum cecedit turpi vertitis ora fuga. (i. e.)

Are they in Honour? Then we ſmile like Friends;
And with their Fortunes all our Friendſhip ends.

But this looſe and deceitful Friendſhip ſtinks ſo odiouſly in the very Noſtrils of Nature, that a Heathen Poet ſeverely taxes and condemns it as moſt unworthy of a Man.

Turpe ſequi caſum, & fortunæ cedere, amicum
Et niſi ſit fælix eſſe negare ſuum. (i. e.)

'Tis baſe to change with Fortune, and deny
A faithful Friend, becauſe in poverty.

And is this indeed the Friendſhip of the World? Doth it thus uſe them whom once it honoured? Then, Lord! let me never ſeek its Friendſhip. O, let me eſteem the Smiles and Honours of Men leſs, and thy Love and Favour more! Thy Love is indeed unchangeable, being pure, free, and built upon nothing that is mutable; thou never ſerveſt thy Friends as the World doth its Darlings.

MEDIT. V.

Upon the ſudden withering of a Roſe.

BEing with my Friend in a Garden, we gathered each of us a Roſe; he handled his tenderly, ſmell'd to it but ſeldom and ſparingly; I always kept it to my Noſe, or ſqueezed it in my Hand, whereby in a very ſhort time it loſt both colour and ſweetneſs, but his ſtill remained as ſweet and fragrant as if it had been growing upon its own root. Theſe Roſes, ſaid I, are the true Emblems of the beſt and ſweeteſt Creature-enjoyments in the World; which being moderately and cautiouſly uſed and enjoyed, may for a long time yield ſweetneſs to the poſſeſſor of them; but if once the Affections ſeize too greedily upon them, and ſqueeze them too hard, they quickly wither in our Hands and we loſe the comfort of them; and that either through the Soul's ſurfeiting upon them, or the Lord's righteous and juſt removal of them, becauſe of the exceſs of our Affections to them; Earthly comforts like Pictures, ſhew beſt at a due diſtance. It was therefore a good Saying of Homer, 'Ανδρὶ ξεινοδόκῳ, &c.

Qui valde preterque modum odit vel amat.

I like him not, who at the rate
Of all his might doth love or hate.

'Tis a point of excellent Wiſdom to keep the golden Bridle of Moderation upon all the Affections we exerciſe upon Earthly things, and never to ſlip thoſe Reins, unleſs when they move towards God, in whoſe Love there is no danger of exceſs.

MEDIT. VI.

Upon the ſudden withering of beautiful Flowers.

HOW freſh and orient did theſe Flowers lately appear, when being daſh'd over with the Morning Dew, they ſtood in all their Pride and Glory, breathing out their delicious Odours, which perfumed the Air round about them, but now are daver'd and ſhrivelled up, and have neither any deſirable Beauty or Savour in them.

So vain a thing is the admired Beauty of Creatures, which ſo captivates the Hearts, and exerciſes a pleaſing Tyranny over the Affections of vain man, yet is as ſuddenly blaſted as the Beauty of a Flower.

Forma bonum fragile eſt quantumque accedit ad annos,
Fit minor & ſpacio carpitur ipſa ſuo.
Nec ſemper violæ, nec ſemper lilia florent
Et riget amiſſa ſpina relicta roſa.
Tempus erit quo vos ſpeculum vidiſſe pigebit,
Jam veniunt rugæ quæ tibi torpus arent, &c.

Ovid. de art.

How frail is Beauty! In how ſhort a time
It fades! like Roſes, which have paſt their prime.
So wrinkled Age the faireſt Face will plow,
And caſt deep furrows on the ſmootheſt Brow.
Then where's that lovely tempting Face? Alas!
Your ſelves would bluſh to view in a Glaſs.

If then thou delighteſt in Beauty (O my Soul) chuſe that which is laſting. There is a Beauty that never fades, even the Beauty of Holineſs upon the inner Man; this abides freſh and orient for ever, and ſparkles glorioſly when thy face (the Seat of natural Beauty) is become an abhorrent and loathſome Spectacle. Holineſs enamels and ſprinkles over the face of the Soul with a Beauty, upon which Chriſt himſelf is enamour'd; even Imperfect Holineſs on Earth is a Roſe that breathes ſweetly in the bud; in Heaven it will be full-blown, and abide in its prime to all Eternity.

MEDIT. VII.

Upon the tenderneſs of ſome choice Flowers.

HOw much care is neceſſary to preſerve the Life of ſome Flowers? They muſt be boxed up in the Winter, others muſt be covered with Glaſſes in their ſpringing up, the fineſt and richeſt mould much be ſifted about the Roots, and aſſiduouſly watered, and all this little enough, and ſometimes too little to preſerve them, whilſt other common and worthleſs Flowers grow without any help of ours; yea, we have no leſs to do to rid our Gardens of them, than we have to make the former grow there.

Thus ſtands the Caſe with our Hearts, in reference to the motions of Grace and Sin. Holy thoughts of God muſt be aſſiduouſly watered by Prayer, earthed up by Meditation, and defended by Watchfulneſs; and yet all this is ſometimes too little to preſerve them alive in our Souls. Alas! the Heart is a Soil that agrees not with them, they are tender things, and a ſmall mat will nip and kill them. To this purpoſe is the Complaint of the Divine Poet.

Who would have thought a Joy
ſo coy?
To be offended ſo,
and go
So ſuddenly away.
Hereafter I had need
take heed.
Joys among other things
have wings,
And watch their opportunities of flight,
Converting, in a moment, day to night.

Herbert.

But vain Thoughts, and unholy Suggeſtions, theſe ſpread themſelves, and root deep in the Heart; they naturally agree with the Soil; ſo that it is almoſt impoſſible at any time to be rid of them. 'Tis hard to forget what is our Sin to remember.

MEDIT. VIII.

Upon the ſtrange means of preſerving the Life of Vegetables.

I Obſerve that Plants and Herbs are ſometimes killed by Froſts, and yet without Froſts they would neither live nor thrive; they are ſometimes drowned by Water, and yet without Water they cannot ſubſiſt; they are refreſhed and cheered by the heat of the Sun, and yet that heat ſometimes kills and ſcorches them up. Thus lives my Soul, Troubles and Afflictions ſeem to kill all its Comforts; and yet without theſe its Comforts could not live. The Sun-blaſts of Proſperity ſometimes refreſh me, and yet thoſe Sun-blaſts are the likelieſt way to wither me: By what ſeeming Contradictions is the Life of my Spirit preſerved? What a Myſtery, what a Paradox is the Life of a Chriſtian?

Welcome my Health, this Sickneſs makes me well.
Med'cines adieu.
When with Diſeaſes I have liſt to dwell,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Strength, this Weakneſs makes me able.
Powers adieu.
When I am weary grown of ſtanding ſtable,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Wealth, this loſs hath gain'd me more.
Riches adieu.
When I again grow greedy to be poor,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome my Credit, this Diſgrace is Glory.
Honours adieu.
When for Renown and Fame I ſhall be ſorry,
I'll wiſh for you.
Welcome Content, this Sorrow is my Joy.
Pleaſures adieu.
When I deſire ſuch Griefs as may annoy,
I'll wiſh for you.
Health, Strength, and Riches, Credit and Content,
Are ſpared beſt ſometimes, when they are ſpent.
Sickneſs, and Weakneſs, Loſs, Diſgrace, and Sorrow,
Lend moſt ſometimes, when moſt they ſeem to borrow.

And if by theſe contrary and improbable ways, the Lord preſerves our Souls in Life, no marvel then we find ſuch ſtrange and ſeemingly contradictory motions of our Hearts, under the various dealings of God with us, and are ſtill reſtleſs in wha Condition ſoever he puts us; which reſtleſs Frame was excellently expreſſed in that Pious Epigram of Reverend Gataker, made a little before his Death.

I Thirſt for Thirſtineſs, I weep for Tears,
Well pleas'd I am to be diſpleaſed thus:
The only thing I fear, is want of fears,
Suſpecting I am not ſuſpicious.
I cannot chuſe but live, becauſe I die;
And when I am not dead, How glad am I
Yet when I am thus glad for ſence of Pain,
And careful am leſt I ſhould careleſs be,
Then do I grieve for being glad again,

ment. It was an ancient ſaying, Qui neſcit orare, diſcat navigare, He that knows not how to Pray, let him go to Sea. But we may ſay now, (alas, that we may ſay ſo in times of greater light) He that would learn to be prophane, to drink and ſwear, and diſhonour God, let him go to Sea. As for Prayer, it is a rare thing among Seamen, they count that a needleſs buſineſs: they ſee the prophane and vile deliver'd as well as others; and therefore, What profit is there if they Pray unto him? Mal. 3. 4. As I remember, I have read of a prophane Souldier, who was heard Swearing, though he ſtood in a place of great danger; and when one that ſtood by him warned him, ſaying, Fellow-ſouldier, do not Swear, the Bullets fly; he anſwer'd, They that ſwear come off as well as they that pray. Soon after a Shot hit him, and down he fell. Plato diligently admoniſh'd all Men to avoid the Sea; For (ſaith he) it is the School-maſter of all Vice and Diſhoneſty. Sirs! it is a very ſad conſideration to me, that you who float upon the great Deeps, in whoſe bottom ſo many Thouſand poor miſerable Creatures lie, whoſe ſins have ſunk them down, not only into the bottom of the Sea, but of Hell alſo, whither divine Vengeance hath purſu'd them: That you (I ſay) who daily float, and hover over them, and have the roaring Waves and Billows that ſwallow'd them up, gaping for you as the next prey, ſhould be no more affected with theſe things. Oh what a Terrible Voice doth God utter in the Storms! It breaks the Cedars, ſhakes the Wilderneſs, makes the Hinds to Calve, Pſal. 29. 5. And can it not ſhake your Hearts? This Voice of the Lord is full of Majeſty, but his Voice in the Word is more efficacious and powerful, Heb. 4. 12. to convince and rip up the heart. This Word is exalted above all his Name, Pſal. 138. 3. and if it cannot awaken you, it is no wonder you remain ſecure and dead, when the Lord utters his Voice in the moſt dreadful ſtorms and tempeſts. But if neither the Voice of God uttered in his dreadful Works, or in his glorious Goſpel, can effectually awaken and rouze, there is an Euroclidon, a fearful ſtorm coming, which will ſo awaken your ſouls, as that they ſhall never ſleep any more, Pſal. 11. 6. Upon the wicked he ſhall rain Snares, Fire and Brimſtone, and an horrible Tempeſt: This is the portion of their Cup. You that have been at Sea in the moſt Violent ſtorms, never felt ſuch a ſtorm as this, and the Lord grant you never may; no Calm ſhall follow this Storm. There are ſome among you, that, I am perſuaded, do truly fear that God in whoſe hand their Life and Breath is; Men that fear an Oath, and are an honour to their Profeſſion; who drive a Tade for Heaven, and are diligent to ſecure the happineſs of their Immortal ſouls, in the Inſurance-Office above: but for the generality, alas! they mind none of theſe things. How many of you are coaſting to and fro, from one Country to another? but never think of that Heavenly Country above, nor how you may get the Merchandize thereof, which is better than the Gold of Ophir. How oft do you tremble to ſee the foaming Waves dance about you, and waſh over you? yet conſider not how terrible it will be to have all the waves and billows of God's wrath to go over your ſouls, and that for ever. How glad are you after you have been long toſs'd upon the Ocean, to deſcry Land? And how yare and eagerly do you look out for it? who yet never had your hearts warmed with the conſideration of that Joy which ſhall be among the Saints, when they arrive at the Heavenly Strand, and ſet foot upon the ſhore of Glory.

O Sirs! I beg of you, if you have any regard to thoſe precious immortal Souls of yours, which are alſo imbarqued for Eternity, whither all winds blow them, and will quickly be at their Port of Heaven or Hell, that you will ſeriouſly mind theſe things, and learn to ſteer your courſe to Heaven, and improve all Winds (I mean opportunities and means) to waft you thither.

Here you venture life and liberty, run through many Difficulties and Dangers, and all to compaſs a periſhing Treaſure; yet how often do you return diſappointed in your Deſigns? or if not, yet it is but a fading ſhort-liv'd Inheritance, which like the flowing Tide, for a little while, covers the ſhore, and then returns, and leaves it naked and dry again: And are not Everlaſting Treaſures worth venturing for? Good Souls, be wiſe for Eternity: I here preſent you with the Fruit of a few ſpare Hours, redeemed for your ſakes, from my other Studies and Imployments, which I have put into a new Dreſs and Mode. I have endeavoured to cloathe Spiritual Matters in your own Dialect and Phraſes, that they might be the more intelligible to you; and added ſome pious Poems, with which the ſeveral Chapters are concluded, trying by all means to aſſault your ſeveral Affections, and as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, to catch you with guile. I can ſay nothing of it; I know it cannot be without its manifold imperfections, ſince I am conſcious of ſo many in my ſelf: Only this I will adventure to ſay of it, That how defective or empty ſoever it be in other reſpects, yet it is ſtuffed and filled with much true love to, and earneſt deſires after the ſalvation and proſperity of your Souls. And for the other defects that attend it, I have only two things to offer, in way of excuſe: It is the firſt Eſſay that I ever made in this kind, wherein I had no Preſident: And it was haſtned, for your ſakes, too ſoon out of my hands, that it might be ready to wait upon you, when you undertake your next Voyage; ſo that I could not reviſe and poliſh it. Nor indeed was I ſollicitous about the ſtile; I conſider, I writ not for Critical and Learned Perſons: my deſign is not to pleaſe your Fancies any further, than I might thereby get advantage to profit your Souls. I will not once queſtion your welcome Reception of it: If God ſhall bleſs theſe Meditations to the Converſion of any among you, you will be the Gainers, and my heart ſhall rejoyce, even mine. How comfortably ſhould we ſhake hands with you, when you go abroad, were we perſwaded your Souls were intereſted in Chriſt, and ſecured from periſhing, in the New Covenant? What life would it put into our Prayers for you, when you are abroad, to conſider that Jeſus Chriſt is intercedeing for you in Heaven, whilſt we are your Remembrancers here on Earth? How quiet would our hearts be, when you are abroad in Storms, did we know you had a ſpecial Intereſt in him whom Winds and Seas obey? To conclude, what Joy would it be to your Godly Relations, to ſee you return new Creatures? Doubtleſs more than if you came home laden with the Riches of both Indies.

Come, Sirs! ſet the heavenly Jeruſalem upon the Point of your New Compaſs; make all the Sail you can for it; and the Lord give you a proſperous Gale, and a ſafe Arrival in that Land of Reſt.

So prays

Your moſt Affectionate Friend to ſerve you in Soul-Concernments.

To

To every Seaman Sailing Heavenward.

Ingenious Seaman,

THE Art of Navigation, by which Iſlands eſpecially are enriched, and preſerved in ſafety from Forenſical Invaſions; and the wonderful Works of God in the great Deep, and Foreign Nations are moſt delightfully and fully beheld, &c. is an Art of exquiſite excellency, ingenuity, rarity, and mirability: But the Art of Spiritual Navigation is the Art of Arts. It is a gallant thing to be able to carry a Ship richly laden round the World: but it is much more gallant to carry a Soul (that rich loading, a Pearl of more worth than all the Merchandiſe of the world) in a body (that is liable to leaks and bruiſes as any Ship is) through the Sea of this World (which is as unſtable as water, and hath the ſame briniſh taſte and ſalt guſt which the waters of the Sea have) ſafe to Heaven (the beſt Haven) ſo as to avoid ſplitting upon any Soul-ſinking Rocks, or ſtriking upon any Soul-drowning Sands. The Art of Natural Navigation is a very great myſtery; but the Art of Spiritual Navigation is by much a greater myſtery. Humane wiſdom may teach us to carry a Ship to the Indies; but the Wiſdom only that is from above can teach us to ſteer our courſe aright to the Haven of Happineſs. This Art is purely of Divine Revelation. The truth is, Divinity (the Doctrine of living to God) is nothing elſe, but the Art of Soul-Navigation, revealed from Heaven. A meer man can carry a Ship to any deſired Port in all the World, but no meer man can carry a Soul to Heaven. He muſt be a Saint, he muſt be a Divine (ſo all Saints are) that can be a Pilot to carry a Soul to the fair Haven in Emanuel's land. The Art of Natural Navigation is wonderfully improved ſince the coming of Chriſt, before which time (if there be truth in Hiſtory) the uſe of the Loadſtone was never known in the world; and before the vertue of that was revealed unto the Mariner, it is unſpeakable with what uncertain wandrings Sea-men floated here and there, rather than ſailed the right and direct way. Sure I am, the Art of Spiritual Navigation is wonderfully improved ſince the coming of Chriſt: it oweth its cleareſt and fulleſt diſcovery to the coming of Chriſt. This Art of Arts is now perfectly revealed in the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament; but the Rules thereof are diſpers'd up and down therein. The collecting and methodizing of the ſame, cannot but be a work very uſeful unto Souls: Though when all is done, there is an abſolute neceſſity of the teachings of the Spirit, and of the anointing that is from above, to make Souls Artiſts in ſailing Heavenward. The Ingenious Author of the Chriſtian's Compaſs, or the Mariner's Companion, makes three Parts of this Art (as the School-men of Divinity,) viz. Speculative, Practical, and Affectionate. The principal things neceſſary to be known by a Spiritual Sea-man, in order to the ſteering rightly and ſafely to the Port of Happineſs, he reduceth to four Heads, anſwerable to the four general Points of the Compaſs; making God our North; Chriſt our Eaſt; Holineſs our South; and Death our Weſt Points. Concerning God, we muſt know, 1. That he is, Heb. 11. 6. and that there is but one God, 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. 2. That this God is that Supreme Good, in the enjoyment of whom all true happineſs lies, Pſal. 4. 6, 7. Mat. 5. 8.—18. 20. 3. That (Life eternal lying in God, and he being incomprehenſible and unconceivable in Eſſence, as being a Spirit) our beſt way to eye him is in his Attributes, Exod. 34. 5, 6, 7. and works, Rom. 1. 20. and eſpecially in his Son, 2 Cor. 4. 6. 4. That as God is a Spirit, ſo our chiefeſt, yea only way of knowing, enjoying, ſerving, and walking with him, is in the Spirit likewiſe, Job 4. 24. Concerning Chriſt, we muſt know, 1. That he is the true Sun which ariſeth upon the World, by which all are enlightned, John 1. 9. Mal. 3. 2. Luke 1. 78, 79. 2. That God alone is in him, reconciling himſelf to the World, 2 Cor. 5. 19. 1 Cor. 1. 30. John 14. 6. 3. That Jeſus Chriſt is only made ours by the union and in-dwelling of himſelf in us through the ſpirit, 1 Cor. 2. 9, 10. and 6. 17. John 16. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 12. 3, 13. 4. That the way of the Spirit's uniting us to Chriſt, is by an act of Power on his part, and by an act of Faith on our parts, Joh. 3. 16. laſt; 5. 29. Eph. 3. 17. Concerning Holineſs, we muſt know, 1. That whoever is in Chriſt is a new creature, 2 Cor. 5. 17. 1 Cor. 6. 11. 2. Holineſs is the Souls higheſt luſtre, Exod. 15. 11. when we come to perfection in Holineſs, then is our Sun at the height in us. 3. Holineſs, is Chriſt filling the Soul; Chriſt our Sun is at higheſt in our hearts, when they are moſt holy. 4. This Holineſs is that which is directly oppoſite to ſin: ſin eclipſes holineſs, and holineſs ſcatters ſin, Heb. 7. 26. Phil. 2. 15. 2 Pet. 3. 11. Concerning Death, we muſt know, 1. Death is certain: the Sun of our Life will ſet in Death: when our days come about to this Weſtern-point, it will be night, Heb. 9. 27. Pſal. 49. 7, 9. 2. If we die in our ſins out of Chriſt, we are undone for ever, Job 8. 24. Phil. 1. 21. 3. It is our benighting to die, but it's not our annihilating, 1 Cor. 15. Rev. 20. 12. 4. After Death comes Judgment; all that die ſhall ariſe to be judged, either for life or death the ſecond time, Heb. 9. 27. Mat. 25. Heb. 6. 2. Theſe four heads, and the particulars under them are as neceſſary to be known in Spiritual Navigation, as the four Points of the Compaſs are in Natural Navigation. The things which we ought to do, in order to our arrival to our Happineſs, our Author makes as many as there be Points in the Compaſs. And for an help to memory, we may begin every particular with initial known Letters on the Points of the Compaſs. 1. N. Never ſtir or ſteer any courſe, but by Light from God, Pſal. 119. 105. Iſa. 8. 10. 2. N. and by E. Never Enter upon any Deſign, but ſuch as tends towards Chriſt, Acts 10. 43. 3. N. N. E. Note Nothing Enviouſly, which thrives without God, Pſal. 73. 12, 13. 4. N. E. and by N. Never Enterprize Not-warrantable courſes, to procure any the moſt prized or conceited advantages, 1 Tim. 6. 9, 10. 5. N. N. E. Now Entertain the ſacred Commands of God, if hereafter thou expect the ſoveraign conſolations of God, Pſ. 119. 48. 6. N. E. and by E. Never Eſteem Egypt's Treaſures ſo much, as for them to forſake the People of God, Heb. 11. 26. 7. E. N. E. Err Not, Eſpecially in ſoul affairs, Jam. 1. 16. 1 Tim. 1. 19, 20. 2 Tim. 2. 18. 8. E. and by N. Eſchew Nothing but ſin, 1 Pet. 3. 11. Job 1. 7, 8.—31. 34. 9. E. Eſtabliſh thy heart with grace, Heb. 13. 9. 10. E. and by

N. and by W. Now Welcome Chriſt, if at death thou wilt be welcomed by Chriſt. A tender, quick, enlivened, and enlightned Conſcience, is the only Point upon which we muſt erect theſe Practical Rules of our Chriſtian Compaſs, Heb. 13. 1. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Our Memory, that is the Box in which this Compaſs muſt be kept, in which theſe Rules muſt be treaſured, that we may be as ready and expert in them, as the Mariner is in his Sea-compaſs. So much for the ſpeculative and practical parts of the Art of Soul-Spiritual-Navigation. The Affectionate part doth principally lie in the ſecret motions or movings of the Soul towards God, in the Affections which are raiſed and warmed, and eſpecially appear active in Meditation: Meditation being as it were the Limbeck or Still in which the Affections heat and melt, and as it were drop ſweet ſpiritual Waters. The affectionate Author of the Chriſtian's Compaſs doth indeed, in the third and laſt part of his Undertaking, hint at ſeveral Meditations which the ſpiritual Seaman is to be acquainted with, unto which thou haſt an excellent Supplement in this New Compaſs for Seamen. This Collection is prefixt, that at once thou mayeſt view all the Compaſſes (both the Speculative, Practical, and Affectionate) by which thou muſt ſteer Heaven-ward. What further ſhall be added by way of Preface, is not to commend this New Compaſs, which indeed (2 Cor. 3. 1.) needs no συστατικῶν ἐπιστολῶν, Letters of Commendation, or any Panegyrick to uſher it into any honeſt heart: but to ſtir up all, eſpecially Seamen, to make conſcience of uſing ſuch choice helps for the promoting the ſanctification and ſalvation of their Souls, for the making of them as dexterous in the Art of Spiritual Navigation, as any of them are in the Art of Natural Navigation. Conſider therefore,

1. What rich Merchandize thy Soul is. Chriſt aſſures us, one Soul is more worth than all the world. The Lord Jeſus doth as it were put the whole world in one ſcale, and one ſoul in the other, and the world is found too light, Mat. 16.26. Shouldſt thou by skill in Natural Navigation carry ſafe all the treaſures of the Indies into thne own Port, yea, gain the whole world, and for want of skill in ſpiritual Navigation loſe thy ſoul, thou wouldſt be the greateſt loſer in the world. So far wilt thou be from profiting by any of thy Sea-voyages. There is a plain μείωσις in thoſe words of Chriſt, What is a man profited if he ſhall gain the whole world, and loſe his own ſoul? or what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul? More is meant, than is ſpoken.

2. What a leaking Veſſel thy body is in which this unſpeakable inconceivable rich Treaſure, thy ſoul, is imbarked! O the many diſeaſes and diſtempers in the humors and paſſions, that thy body is ſubject to! It is above 2000 years ago, that there have been reckoned up 300 Names of Diſeaſes; and there be many under one name, and many nameleſs, which poſe the Phyſicians not only how to cure them, but how to call them. And for the affections and paſſions of the Mind, the diſtempers of them are no leſs deadly to ſome, than the diſeaſes of the body. But beſides theſe internal cauſes, there are many external cauſes of Leaks in this Veſſel, as * poiſonous malignities, wrathful hoſtilities, and caſual miſhaps; very ſmall matters may be of great moment to the ſinking of this Veſſel. The leaſt Gnat in the Air may choak one, as it did Adrian, a Pope of Rome; a little hair in Milk may ſtrangle one, as it did a Counſellor in Rome; a little ſtone of a Raiſin may ſtop ones breath, as it did the Poetical Poet Anacreon. Thus you ſee what a leaking Veſſel you ſail in. Now the more leaky any ſhip is, the more need there is of skill to ſteer wiſely.

Eraſmi Chiliad. p. 299.

The ſmalleſt Pore is a Leak wide enough to let in Death, and ſink thy Veſſel.

3. Conſider what a dangerous Sea the World is, in which thy Soul is to ſail in the leaking ſhip of thy body. As there are not more changes in the Sea, than are in the World, the World being only conſtant in inconſtancy, The faſhion of this world paſſeth away, 1 Cor. 7. 31. ſo there are not more dangers in the Sea for ſhips, than there are in the world for ſouls. In this world Souls meet with Rocks and Sands, Syrens and Pyrates. Worldly Temptations, worldly Luſts, and worldly Company cauſe many to drown themſelves in perdition, 1 Tim. 6. 9. The very things of this world endanger our Souls. By Worldly Objects we ſoon grow worldly. It is hard to touch Pitch, and not be defiled. The luſts of this world ſtain our glory, and the men of this world pollute all they converſe with. A man that keeps company with the men of this world, is like him that walketh in the Sun, tanned inſenſibly. Thus you have hinted the dangerouſneſs of the Sea wherein you are to ſail. Now, the more dangerous the Sea is, the more requiſite it is the Sailer be an Artiſt.

4. Conſider, what if through want of skill in the heavenly Art of ſpiritual Navigation, thou ſhouldſt not ſteer thy Courſe aright! I will inſtance only in two conſequents thereof. 1. Thou wilt never arrive at the Haven of Happineſs. 2. Thou ſhalt be drowned in the Ocean of God's wrath. As true as the Word of God is true; as ſure as the Heavens are over thy head, and the Earth under thy feet; as ſure as thou yet liveſt and breatheſt in this Air: ſo true and certain it is, thou ſhalt never enter into Heaven, but ſink into the depth of the bottomleſs pit. Am I not herein a Meſſenger of the ſaddeſt Tidings that ever yet thy Ears did hear? Poſſibly now thou makeſt a light matter of theſe things, becauſe thou doſt not know what it is to miſs of Heaven, what it is for ever to lie under the wrath of God: but hereafter thou wilt know fully, what it is to have thy Soul loſt eternally, ſo loſt, as that God's mercies, and all the good there is in Chriſt, ſhall never ſave it; and as God hath ſet and ordered things, can never ſave it. Hereafter thou wilt be perfectly ſenſible of the good that thou mighteſt have had, and of the evil that ſhall be upon thee (this is God's peculiar Prerogative, to make a Creature as ſenſible of Miſery as he pleaſeth) then thou wilt have other thoughts of theſe things than now thou haſt. Then the thoughts of thy mind ſhall be buſied about thy loſt Condition, both as to the pain of loſs, and the pain of ſenſe; ſo that thou ſhalt not be able to take any eaſe any moment: then, that thy torments may be increaſed, they acknowledge, the truth of thy apprehenſions, yea the ſtrength of them, ſhall be encreaſed; thou ſhalt have true and deep apprehenſions of the greatneſs of that good that thou ſhalt miſs of, and of that evil which thou ſhalt procure unto thy ſelf; and then thou ſhalt not be able to chooſe, but to apply all thy loſs, all thy miſery to thy ſelf, which will force thee to roar out, O my loſs! O my miſery! O my unconceivable unrecoverable loſs and miſery! Yea, for the increaſing of thy torments, thy Affections and Memory ſhall be enlarg'd. O that, to prevent that loſs and miſery, theſe things may now be known and laid to heart! O that a blind Underſtanding, a ſtupid Judgment, a bribed Conſcience, a hard Heart, a bad Memory, may no longer make Heaven and Hell to ſeem but trifles to thee! Thou wilt then eaſily be perſwaded to make it thy main buſineſs here, to become an Artiſt in Spiritual Navigation. But to ſhut up this Preface, I ſhall briefly acquaint Seamen, why they ſhould, of all others, be Men of ſingular Piety and Heavenlineſs, and therefore more than ordinarily ſtudy the heavenly Art of Spiritual Navigation. O that Seamen would therefore conſider,

1. How nigh they border upon the Confines of Death and Eternity every moment. There is but a ſtep, but an inch or two between them and their Graves continually. The next Guſt may over-ſet them; the next Wave may ſwallow them up. In one place lies lurking dangerous Rocks, in another perilous Sands, and every-where ſtormy Winds, ready to deſtroy them. Well may the Seamen cry out, Ego craſtinum non habui: I have not had a Morrow in my hands theſe many Years. Should not they then be extraordinary ſerious and heavenly continually? Certainly (as the Reverend Author of this New Compaſs well obſerves) nothing more compoſeth the heart to ſuch a frame, than the lively apprehenſions of Eternity do; and none have greater external advantages for that, than Seamen have.

2. Conſider (Seamen) what extraordinary help you have by the Book of the Creatures; the whole Creation is God's Voice, it is God's excellent Hand-writing, or the Sacred Scriptures of the Moſt High, to teach as much of God, and what reaſons we have to bewail our Rebellion againſt God, and to make conſcience of obeying God only, naturally and continually. The Heavens, the Earth, the Waters, are the three great Leaves of this Book of God, and all the Creatures are ſo many Lines in thoſe Leaves. All that learn not to fear and ſerve God by the help of this Book, will be left inexcuſable, Rom. 1. 20. How inexcuſable then will ignorant and ungodly Seamen be? Seamen ſhould, in this reſpect, be the beſt Scholars in the Lord's School, ſeeing they do more, than others, ſee the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the great Deep, Pſal. 107. 24.

3. Conſider how often you are nearer Heaven than any People in the World. They mount up to heaven, Pſal. 107. 26. It has been ſaid of an ungodly Miniſter, that contradicted his Preaching in his Life and Converſation, That it was pity he ſhould e're come out of the Pulpit, becauſe he was there as near Heaven as ever he would be. Shall it be ſaid of you, upon the ſame account, That 'tis pity you ſhould come down from the high-tow'ring Waves of the Sea? Should not Seamen, that in ſtormy Weather have their feet (as it were) upon the Battlements of Heaven, look down upon all earthly Happineſs in this World but as baſe, wateriſh, and worthleſs? The great Cities of Campania ſeem but ſmall Cottages to them that ſtand on the Alpes. Should not Seamen, that ſo oft mount up to Heaven, make it their main buſineſs here, once at laſt to get into Heaven? What (Seamen) ſhall you only go to Heaven againſt your Wills? When Seamen mount up to Heaven in a ſtorm, the Pſalmiſt tells us, That their ſouls are melted becauſe of trouble. O that you were continually as unwilling to go to Hell, as you are in a ſtorm to go to Heaven!

4. And laſtly, Conſider what engagements lie upon you to be ſingularly holy, from your ſingular deliverances and ſalvations. They that go down to the Sea in Ships, are ſometimes in the Valley of the ſhadow of Death, by reaſon of the ſpringing of perilous Leaks; and yet miraculouſly delivered, either by ſome wonderful ſtopping of the Leak, or by God's ſending ſome Ship within their ſight, when they have been far out of ſight of any Land; or by his bringing their near-periſhing Ship ſafe to ſhore. Sometimes they have been in very great danger of being taken by Pirates, yet wonderfully preſerved, either by God's calming of the Winds in that part of the Sea where the Pirates have ſail'd, or by giving the poor purſued Ship a ſtrong gale of Wind to run away from their Purſuers; or by ſinking the Pirates, &c. Sometimes their Ships have been caſt away, and yet they themſelves wonderfully got ſafe to ſhore upon Planks, Yards, Maſts, &c. I might be endleſs in enumerating their Deliverances from Drowning, from Burning, from Slavery, &c. (Sure Seamen) your extraordinary Salvations lay more than ordinary engagement upon you, to praiſe, love, fear, obey, and truſt in your Saviour and Deliverer. I have read, that the enthralled Greeks were ſo affected with their Liberty, procured by Flaminius the Roman General, that that their ſhrill Acclamations of Σωτὴρ, Σωτὴρ, A Saviour, a Saviour, made the very Birds fall down from the Heavens aſtoniſhed. O how ſhould Seamen be affected with their Sea-Deliverances! Many that have been deliver'd from Turkiſh Slavery, have vowed to be Servants to their Redeemers all the days of their Lives. Ah, Sirs, will not you be more than ordinarily God's Servants all the days of your Lives, ſeeing you have been ſo oft, ſo wonderfully redeemed from Death it ſelf by him? Verily, do what you can, you will die in God's Debt. As for me, God forbid, that I ſhould ſin againſt the Lord, in ceaſing to pray for you, 1 Sam. 12. 23, 24. That by the peruſal of this ſhort and ſweet Treatiſe, wherein the judicious and ingenious Author hath well mixed utile dulci, profit and pleaſure, you may learn the good and right way, even to fear the Lord, and ſerve him in truth with all your hearts, conſidering how great things he hath done for you: This is the hearty Prayer of

Your Cordial Friend, earneſtly deſirous of a proſperous Voyage for your precious and immortal Souls, T.M.

CHAP. I.

The Launching of a Ship plainly ſets forth
Our double State, by Firſt and Second Birth.

OBSERVATION.

NO ſooner is a Ship built, launched, rigged, victualled, and manned, but ſhe is preſently ſent out into the boiſterous Ocean, were ſhe is never at reſt, but continually fluctuating, toſſing and labouring, until ſhe be either overwhelmed and wrecked in the Sea, or through Age, knocks and bruiſes, grows leaky and unſerviceable; and ſo is haled up, and ript abroad.

APPLICATION.

No ſooner come we into the World as Men, or as Chriſtians, by a natural, or ſupernatural Birth; but thus we are toſs'd upon a Sea of Troubles, Job 5. 7. Yet Man is born to trouble, as the ſparks fly upwards. The ſpark no ſooner comes out of the fire, but it flies up naturally; it needs not any external force, help, or guidance, but aſcends from a principle in it ſelf: So naturally, ſo eaſily, doth Trouble riſe out of Sin. There is radically all the miſery, anguiſh, and trouble in the World, in our corrupt Natures. As the ſpark lies cloſe hid in the coals, ſo doth miſery in ſin: Every ſin draws a rod after it. And theſe ſorrows and troubles fall not only on the Body, in thoſe breaches, flaws, deformities, pains, aches, diſeaſes to which it is ſubject, which are but the groans of dying Nature, and its crumbling, by degrees, into duſt again; but on all our Imployments and Callings alſo, Gen. 3. 17, 18, 19. Theſe are full of pain, trouble, and diſappointment. Hag. 1. 6. We earn Wages, and put it into a Bag with holes, and diſquiet our ſelves in vain; all our Relations full of trouble. The Apoſtle ſpeaking to thoſe that Marry, ſaith, 1 Cor. 7. 28. Such shall have trouble in the fleſh. Upon which words one gloſſeth thus: Fleſh and Trouble are Marry'd together, whether we Marry or no: But they that are Marry'd, Marry with, and Match into new Troubles: All Relations have their burdens, as well as their comforts. It were endleſs to enumerate the ſorrows of this kind; and yet the troubles of the Body, are but the body of our troubles: The Spirit of the Curſe falls upon the ſpiritual and nobleſt part of Man The Soul and Body, like to Ezekiel's Roll, are written full with ſorrows, both within and without. So that we make the ſame report of our lives, when we come to die, that old Jacob made before Pharaoh, Gen. 47. 9. Few and evil have the days of the years of our lives been. For what hath Man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the Sun? For all his days are ſorrows, and his travel grief, yea, his heart taketh no reſt in the night: This is alſo vanity, Eccleſ. 2. 22, 23.

ee Mr. Whate-
's Care-Cloth.

Neither doth our New Birth free us from troubles, though then they be ſanctifi'd, ſweetned, and turned into Bleſſings to us. We put not off the Humane, when we put on the Divine Nature; nor are we then freed from the ſenſe, though we be deliver'd from the ſting and curſe of them. Grace doth not preſently pluck out all thoſe Arrows that ſin hath ſhot into the ſides of Nature, 2 Cor. 7. 5. When we were come into Macedonia, our Fleſh had no reſt, but we were troubled on every ſide: without were fightings, and within were fears. Rev. 7. 14. Theſe are they that come out of great tribulations. The firſt Cry of the New-born Chriſtian (ſays one) gives Hell an alarm, and awakens the rage both of Devils and Men againſt him. Hence Paul and Barnabas acquainted thoſe new Converts, Act. 14. 22. That through much tribulation they muſt enter into the Kingdom of God: And we find the ſtate of the Church, in this World, ſet out (Iſa. 54. 11.) by the ſimilitude of a diſtreſſed Ship at Sea: O thou afflicted [and toſſed] with Tempeſts, and not comforted. [Toſſed] as Jonas's Ship was; for the ſame word is there uſed, Jonas 1. 11, 13. as a Veſſel at Sea, ſtormed, and violently driven without Rudder, Maſt, Sail, or Tacklings. Nor are we to expect freedom from thoſe Troubles, until harboured in Heaven; ſee 2 Theſſ. 1. 7. O what large Catalogues of Experiences do the Saints carry to Heaven with them, of their various Exerciſes, Dangers, Trials, and marvellous Preſervations and Deliverances out of all! And yet all theſe Troubles without, are nothing to thoſe within them; from Temptations, Corruptions, Deſertions, by Paſſion and Compaſſion: Beſides their own, there comes daily upon them the Troubles of others; many Rivulets fall into this Channel and Brim, yea often overflow the Banks, Pſal. 34. 19. Many are the afflictions of the righteous.

REFLECTION.

Hence ſhould the graceleſs heart thus reflect upon it ſelf. O my Soul! into what a Sea of Troubles art thou launched forth! And what a ſad caſe thou art in! Full of Trouble, and full of Sin; and theſe do mutually produce each other. And that which is the moſt dreadful Conſideration of all, is, That I cannot ſee the end of them. As for the Saints, they ſuffer in the World as well as I; but it is but for a while, 1 Pet. 5. 10. and then they ſhall ſuffer no more, 2 Theſ. 1. 7. But all tears ſhall be wiped away from their eyes, Rev. 7. 17. But my Troubles look with a long Viſage: Ah! they are but the beginning of ſorrows, but a parboiling before I be roaſted in the flames of God's eternal wrath. If I continue as I am, I ſhall but deceive my ſelf, if I conclude I ſhall be happy in the other World, becauſe I have met with ſo much ſorrow in this: For I read, Jude 7. that the Inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah, though conſumed to Aſhes, with all their Eſtates and Relations, (a ſorer Temporal Judgment than ever yet beſel me) do, notwithſtanding that, continue ſtill in everlaſting Chains, under Darkneſs, in which they are reſerved unto the Judgment of the Great Day. The Troubles of the Saints are ſanctified to them, but mine are fruits of the Curſe. They have ſpiritual Conſolations to ballance them, which flow into their Souls in the ſame height and degree, as Troubles do upon their Bodies, 2 Cor. 1. 5. But I am a ſtranger to their Comforts, and intermeddle not with their Joys, Prov. 14. 10. If their hearts be ſurcharged with Trouble, they have a God to go to; and when they have open'd their Cauſe before him, they are eaſed, return with comfort, and their Countenance is no more ſad, 1 Sam. 1. 18. When their Belly is as Bottles full of new Wine, they can give it vent by pouring out of their Souls into their Father's Boſom: But I have no intereſt in, nor acquaintance with this God; nor can I pray unto him in the Spirit. My griefs are ſhut up like fire in my boſom, which preys upon my ſpirit. This is my ſorrow, and I alone muſt bear it. O my Soul, look round about thee! What a miſerable caſe art thou in? Reſt no longer ſatisfied in it, but look out for a Chriſt alſo. What though I be a vile, unworthy wretch? yet he promiſeth to love freely, Hoſ. 14. 4. and invites ſuch as are heavy-laden to him, Mat. 11. 28.

Hence alſo ſhould the gracious Soul reflect ſweetly upon it ſelf after this manner: And is the World ſo full of trouble? O my Soul, what cauſe haſt thou to ſtand admiring at the indulgence and goodneſs of God to thee! Thou haſt hitherto had a ſmooth paſſage comparatively to what others have had. How hath Divine Wiſdom ordered my Condition, and caſt my Lot? Have I been chaſtiſed with Whips? others with Scorpions: Have I had no peace without? Some have neither had peace without nor within, but Terrors round about: Or have I felt trouble in my fleſh and ſpirit at once? Yet have they not been extream, either for time or meaſure. And hath the World been a Sodom, an Ægypt to thee? Why then doſt thou thus linger in it, and hanker after it? Why do I not long to be gone, and ſigh more heartily for Deliverance? Why are the thoughts of my Lord's coming no ſweeter to me, and the day of my full deliverance no more panted for? And why am I no more careful to maintain peace within, ſince there is ſo much trouble without? Is not this it that puts weight into all outward troubles, and makes them ſinking, that they fall upon me when my ſpirit is dark or wounded?

CHAP. II.

In the vaſt Ocean Spiritual Eyes deſcry
God's boundleſs Mercy, and Eternity.

OBSERVATION.

THE Ocean is of a vaſt extent and depth, though ſuppoſedly meaſurable, yet not to be ſounded by Man. It compaſſeth about the whole Earth, which in the account of Geographers, is Twenty one thouſand and ſix hundred Miles in compaſs; yet the Ocean invirons it on every ſide, Pſal. 104. 25. and Job 11. 9. Suitable to which is that of the Poet.

Tum freta diffudit, rapidiſque tumeſcere ventis
Juſſit & ambitæ circumdare littora terræ. Ovid.

He ſpread the Seas, which then he did command,
To ſwell with Winds, and compaſs round the Land.

And for its Depth, who can diſcover it? The Sea in Scripture is called, The Deep, Job 38. 30. The Great Deep, Gen. 7. 11. The gathering together of the Waters into one place, Gen. 1. 9. If the vaſteſt Mountain were caſt into it, it would appear no more than the head of a Pin in a Tun of Water.

APPLICATION.

This in a lively manner ſhadows forth the infinite and incomprehenſible Mercy of our God; whoſe Mercy is ſaid to be over all his Works, Pſal. 145. 9. In how many ſweet Notions is the Mercy of God repreſented to us in the Scripture? He is ſaid to be Plenteous, Pſal. 4. 5. Abundant, 1 Pet. 1. 3. Rich, Eph. 2. 4. in Mercy; then, that his Mercies are unſearchable, Epheſ. 3. 8. High as the Heaven above the Earth, Pſal. 10. 4. Which are ſo high and vaſt, that the whole Earth is but a ſmall point to them: yea, they are not only compared to the Heavens, but to come home to the Metaphor, to the Depths of the Sea, Mic. 7. 19. which can ſwallow up Mountains as well as Mole-hills; and in this Sea God hath drowned ſins of a dreadful height and aggravation, even Scarlet, Crimſon, (i. e.) deep-dyed with many intenſive aggravations, Iſa. 1. 18. In this Sea was the ſin of Manaſſeh drowned; and of what magnitude that was, may be ſeen, 2 Chron. 33. 3. Yea, in this Ocean of Mercy, did the Lord drown and cover the ſins of Paul, though a Blaſphemer, a Perſecutor, Injurious, 1 Tim. 1. 13. None, ſaith Auguſtine; more fierce than Paul among the Perſecutors; and therefore none greater among ſinners: To which himſelf willingly ſubſcribes, 1 Tim. 1. 15. yet pardoned. How hath Mercy rode in triumph, and been glorified upon the vileſt of Men! How hath it ſtopt the ſlanderous mouth of Men and Devils! It hath yearned upon Fornicators, Idolaters, Adulterers, Thieves, Covetous, Drunkards, Revilers, Extortioners; to ſuch hath the Scepter of Mercy been ſtretched forth, upon their unfeigned repentance and ſubmiſſion, 1 Cor. 6. 9. What doth the Spirit of God aim at, in ſuch a large accumulation of Names of Mercy? But to convince poor ſinners of the abundant fulneſs and riches of it, if they will but ſubmit to the terms on which it is tender'd to them.

In the vaſtneſs of the Ocean, we have alſo a lively Emblem of Eternity. Who can comprehend or meaſure the Ocean, but God? And who can comprehend Eternity, but he that is ſaid to inhabit it? Iſa. 57. 15. Though ſhallow Rivers may be drained and dried up, yet the Ocean cannot. And though theſe tranſitory Days, Months and Years will at laſt expire and determine; yet Eternity ſhall not. O! it is a long World! and amazing Matter! what is Eternity, but a conſtant permanency of Perſons and Things, in one and the ſame State and Condition for ever; putting them beyond all poſſibility of change? The Heathens were wont to ſhadow it by a Circle, or a Snake twiſted round. It will be to all of us, either a perpetual Day or Night, which will not be meaſured by Watches, Hours, Minutes. And as it cannot be meaſured, ſo neither can it ever be diminiſhed. When thouſands of years are gone, there is not a minute leſs to come. Gerhard and Drexelius do both illuſtrate it by this known ſimilitude: Suppoſe a Bird were to come once in a thouſand years; to ſome vaſt Mountain of Sand, and carry away in her Bill one Sand in a thouſand years; O what a vaſt time would it be, e're that immortal Bird, after that rate, had recovered the Mountain! nd yet in time this might be done. For there ould be ſtill ſome diminution; but in Eternity here can be none. There be three things in Time, hich are not competent to Eternity: In Time there s a Succeſſion, one Generation, Year, and Day paſſeth, and another comes; but Eternity is a fixed [now.] In Time there is a Diminution and waſting; he more is paſt, the leſs to come: But it is not ſo n Eternity. In Time there is an Alteration of condition and ſtates: A Man may be poor to day, and ich to morrow; ſickly and diſeaſed this week, nd well the next; now in contempt, and anon in onour: But no change paſſes upon us in Eternity. s the Tree falls at Death and Judgment, ſo it lies r ever. If in Heaven, there thou art a Pillar, and halt go forth no more, Rev. 3. 12. If in Hell, no edemption thence, but the ſmoak of their Torments ſcendeth for ever and ever, Rev. 19. 3.

REFLECTION.

And is the Mercy of God like the great Deeps, n Ocean, that none can fathom? What unſpeakable omfort is this to me? may the pardoned Soul ſay. id Iſrael ſing a Song, when the Lord had overhelm'd their corporal Enemies in the Seas? And all not I break forth into his Praiſes, who hath rowned all my ſins in the depth of Mercy? O my oul, bleſs thou the Lord, and let his high Praiſes er be in thy mouth. Mayſt not thou ſay, that he ath gone to as high an extent and degree of Mercy, pardoning thee, as ever he did in any? Oh my od, who is like unto thee! that pardoneſt Iniquity, ranſgreſſion and Sin. What Mercy, but the Mery of a God, could cover ſuch Abominations as ine!

But O! what terrible Reflections will Conſcience ake from hence, upon all the Deſpiſers of Mercy, hen the ſinner's eyes come to be opened too late r Mercy, to do them good! We have heard ineed, that the King of Heaven was a merciful King, ut we would make no addreſs to Him, whilſt that Scepter was ſtretched out. We heard of Balm in Gilead, and a Phyſician there, that was able and willing to cure all our wounds, but would not commit our ſelves to him. We read that the Arms of Chriſt were open to embrace and receive us, but we would not. O unparallell'd folly! O Soul-deſtroying madneſs! Now the Womb of Mercy is ſhut up, and ſhall bring forth no more Mercies to me for ever. Now the Gates of Grace are ſhut, and no Cries can open them.

Mercy acted its part, and is gone off the Stage; and now Juſtice enters the Scene, and will be glorified for ever upon me. How often did I hear the Bowels of Compaſſion ſounding in the Goſpel for me? But my hard and impenitent heart could not relent; and now, if it could, it is too late. I am now paſt out of the Ocean of Mercy, into the Ocean of Eternity, where I am fixed in the midſt of endleſs Miſery, and ſhall never hear the Voice of Mercy more.

O dreadful Eternity! Oh Soul confounding Word! An Ocean indeed, to which this Ocean is but as a drop; for in thee no Soul ſhall ſee either Bank or Bottom. If I lie but one Night under ſtrong pains of body, how tedious doth that Night ſeem! And how do I tell the Clock, and wiſh for day! In the World I might have had Life, and would not; And now, how fain would I have Death, but cannot? How quick were my ſins in execution? And how long is their puniſhment in duration? O, how ſhall I dwell with everlaſting Burnings? Oh that God would but vouchſafe one treaty more with me! But alas, all tenders and treaties are now at an end with me. On Earth peace, Luke 2. 13. but none in Hell. O my Soul! conſider theſe things: come, let us debate this matter ſeriouſly, before we launch out into this Ocean.

THE POEM.

Who from ſome high-rais'd Tower views the ground,
His heart doth tremble, and his head doth round:
Even ſo my Soul, whilſt it doth view and think
On this Eternity, upon whoſe brink
It borders, ſtands amazed, and doth cry,
O boundleſs! bottomleſs Eternity!
The Scourge of Hell, whoſe very Laſh doth rend
The damned Souls in twain: What! never end?
The more thereon they ponder, think and pore,
The more poor wretches, ſtill they howl and roar.
Ah! though more years in torments we ſhould lie,
Than Sands are on the Shore, or in the Sky
Are twinkling Stars: yet this gives ſome relief,
The hope of ending. Ah! but here's the grief!
A thouſand Years in Torments paſt and gone,
Ten Thouſand more afreſh are coming on;
And when theſe Thouſands all their courſe have run,
The end's no more than when it firſt begun.
Come then, my Soul, let us diſcourſe together
This weighty Point, and tell me plainly whether
You for theſe ſhort-liv'd Joys, that come and go,
Will plunge your ſelf and me in endleſs woe.
Reſolve the Queſtion quickly, do not dream
More Time away. Lo, in an haſty ſtream
We ſwiftly paſs, and ſhortly we ſhall be
Ingulphed both in this Eternity.

CHAP. III.

Within theſe ſmooth-fac'd Seas ſtrange Creatures crawl;
But in Man's Heart, far ſtranger than them all.

OBSERVATION.

IT was an unadviſed ſaying of Plato, Mare nil memorabile producit: The Sea produceth nothing memorable. But ſurely there is much of the Wiſdom, Power, and Goodneſs of God manifeſted in thoſe Inhabitants of the Watery Region: Notwithſtanding the Seas azure and ſmiling face, ſtrange Creatures are bred in its Womb. O Lord (ſaith David) how manifold are thy works? In wiſdom haſt thou made them all; the Earth is full of thy riches. So is this great and wide Sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both ſmall and great Beaſts, Pſalm 104. 24, 25. And we read, Lam. 4. 3. of Sea-Monſters, which draw out their Breaſts to their young. Pliny and Purchas tell incredible Stories about them. About the Tropick of Capricorn, our Seamen meet with flying Fiſhes, that have Wings like a Rere-mouſe, but of a Silver-colour; they fly in flocks like Stares. There are Creatures of very ſtrange Forms and Properties; ſome reſembling a Cow, called by the Spaniards, Manates, by ſome ſuppoſed to be the Sea-monſter ſpoken of by Jeremy. In the Rivers of Guina, Purchas ſaith, there are Fiſhes that have four Eyes, bearing two above and two beneath the Water when they ſwim: Some reſembling a Toad, and very poiſonous. How ſtrange both in ſhape and property is the Sword-fiſh and Thraſher, that fight with the Whale? Even our own Seas produce Creatures of ſtrange ſhapes, but the commonneſs takes off the wonder.

APPLICATION.

Thus doth the heart of Man naturally ſwarm and abound with ſtrange and monſtrous luſts and abominations, Rom. 1. 29, 30, 31. Being filled with all unrighteouſneſs, fornication, wickedneſs, covetouſneſs, maliciouſneſs, full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity, whiſperers, backbiters, haters of God, deſpiteful, proud, boaſters, inventors of evil things, diſobedient to Parents, without underſtanding, covenant-breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful. O what a ſwarm is here! and yet there are multitudes more, in the depths of the heart! And it is no wonder, conſidering that with this Nature, we received the ſpawn of the blackeſt and vileſt abominations. This original luſt is productive to them all, Jam. 1. 14, 15. Which luſt, though it be in every man numerically, different from that of others, yet it is one and the ſame ſpecifically, for ſort and kind, in all the Children of Adam: even as the reaſonable Soul, though every Man hath his own Soul, viz. a Soul individually diſtinct from another Man's, yet is it the ſame for kind in all men. So that whatever abominations are in the hearts and lives of the vileſt Sodomites, and moſt profligate Wretches under Heaven; there is the ſame matter in thy heart out of which they were ſhaped and formed. In the depths of the heart they are conceived, and thence they crawl out of the eyes, hands, lips, and all the members, Mat. 15. 18, 19. Thoſe things (ſaith Chriſt) which proceed out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and defile a man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe-witneſs, blaſphemies: Even ſuch Monſters, as would make a gracious heart tremble to behold. What are my Luſts, (ſaith one) but ſo many Toads ſpitting of Venom, and ſpawning of Poiſon; croaking in my Judgment, creeping in my Will, and crawling into my Affections? The Apoſtle in 1 Cor. 5. 1. tells us of a ſin, Not to be named; ſo monſtrous, that Nature it ſelf ſtartles at it: Even ſuch Monſters are generated in the depths of the heart. Whence come evils? was a Queſtion that much puzled the Philoſophers of old. Now here you may ſee whence they come, and where they are begotten.

REFLECTION.

And are there ſuch ſtrange abominations in the heart of Man? Then how is he degenerated from his primitive Perfection and Glory! His ſtreams were once as clear as Cryſtal, and the Fountain of them pure, there was no unclean Creature moving in them. What a ſtately Fabrick was the Soul at firſt! And what holy Inhabitants poſſeſſed the ſeveral rooms thereof! But now (as God ſpeaks of Idumæa) Iſa. 34. 11. The line of confuſion is ſtretched out upon it, and the ſtones of emptineſs. The Cormorant and Bittern poſſeſs it; the Owl and the Raven dwell in it. Yea, as Iſa. 13. 21, 22. The wild beaſts of the deſart lie there; it is full of doleful creatures, the Satyrs dance in it, and Dragons cry in thoſe ſometimes pleaſant places. O ſad change! how ſadly may we look back towards our firſt ſtate! and take up the words of Job, O that I were as in months paſt, as in the days of my youth; when the Almighty was yet with me, when I put on righteouſneſs, and it cloathed me, when my glory was freſh in me, Job 29. 2, 4, 5.

Again, think, O my Soul, what a miſerable condition the Unregenerate abide in! Thus ſwarmed and over-run with helliſh Luſts, under the dominion and vaſſalage of divers Luſts, Tit. 3. 3. What a tumultuous Sea is ſuch a Soul: How do theſe Luſts rage within them! how do they conteſt and ſcuffle for the Throne! and uſually take it by turns: For as all Diſeaſes are contrary to health, yet ſome contrary to each other, ſo are Luſts. Hence poor Creatures are hurried on to different kinds of ſervitude, according to the Nature of that imperious Luſt that is in the Throne; and like the Lunatick, Mat. 17. are ſometimes caſt into the Water, and ſometimes into the Fire. Well might the Prophet ſay, The wicked is like a troubled Sea that cannot reſt, Iſa. 57. 20. They have no peace now in the ſervice of ſin, and leſs they ſhall have hereafter, when they receive the wages of ſin. There is no peace to the wicked, ſaith my God. They indeed cry Peace, peace; but my God doth not ſay ſo. The laſt iſſue and reſult of this is Eternal Death; no ſooner it is delivered of its deceitful pleaſures, but preſently it falls in travel again, and brings forth death, Jam. 1. 15.

Once more: And is the Heart ſuch a Sea, abounding with monſtrous abominations? then ſtand aſtoniſhed, O my Soul, at that Free-grace which hath delivered thee from ſo ſad a Condition: O fall down, and kiſs the feet of Mercy that moved ſo freely and ſeaſonably to thy reſcue! Let my heart be enlarged abundantly here. Lord, what am I, that I ſhould be taken, and others left? Reflect, O my Soul, upon th Conceptions and Births of Luſts, in the days of Vanity, which thou now bluſheſt to own. O what blac imaginations, helliſh deſires, vile affections, are lodged there! Who made me to differ? Or, how came I to be thus wonderfully ſeparated? Surely, it is by thy Free-grace, and nothing elſe, that I am what I am: And by that Grace I have eſcaped (to mine own aſtoniſhment) the corruption that is in the Worl through Luſt. O that ever the holy God ſhould ſe his eyes on ſuch an one; or caſt a look of love towards me, in whom were Legions of unclean Luſt and Abominations!

THE POEM.

My Soul's the Sea, wherein from day to day,
Sins like Leviathans do ſport and play.
Great Maſter-Luſts, with all the leſſer fry,
Therein increaſe, and ſtrangely multiply.
Yet ſtrange it is not, ſin ſo faſt ſhould breed,
Since with this Nature I receiv'd the Seed
And Spawn of every Species, which was ſhed
Into its Caverns firſt, then nouriſhed
By its own native warmth; which like the Sun,
Hath quickned them, and now abroad they come,
And like the Frogs of Egypt creep and crawl
Into the cloſeſt Rooms within my Soul.
My Fancy ſwarms, for there they friſk and play,
In Dreams by Night, and fooliſh Toys by day.
My Judgment's clouded by them, and my Will
Perverted, every corner they do fill.
As Locuſts ſeize on all that's freſh and green,
Uncloath the beauteous Spring, and make it ſeem
Like drooping Autumn; ſo my Soul, that firſt
As Eden ſeem'd, now's like a Ground that's curſt.
Lord purge my Streams, and kill thoſe Luſts that lie
Within them; if they do not, I muſt die.

CHAP. IV.

Seas purge themſelves, and caſt their filth aſhore
But Graceleſs Souls retain, and ſuck in more.

OBSERVATION.

Seas are in a continual motion and agitation; they have their Flux and Reflux, by which they are kept from putrefaction: like a Fountain it cleanſes it ſelf, Iſa. 57. 20. It cannot reſt, but caſt up mire and dirt; whereas Lakes and Ponds, whoſe Waters are ſtanding, and dead, corrupt and ſtink. And it is obſerv'd by Seamen that in the Southern parts of the World, where the Sea is more calm and ſetled, it is more corrupt and unfit for uſe; ſo is the Sea of Sodom called, The Dead Sea.

APPLICATION.

Thus do regenerate Souls purify themſelves, and work out corruption that defiles them, they cannot ſuffer it to ſettle there, 1 Joh. 3. 3. He purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure. Keepeth himſelf, that the wicked one toucheth him not, 1 Joh. 5. 18. ſcil. Tacta qualitativo, with a Qualitative Touch, as the Loadſtone toucheth Iron, leaving an Impreſſion of its Nature behind it. They are Doves delighting in cleanneſs, Iſa. 33. 15. He deſpiſeth the gain of oppreſſion, he ſhaketh his hands from holding of bribes, ſtoppeth his ears from hearing blood, and ſhutteth his eyes from ſeeing evil. See how all Senſes and Members are guarded againſt ſin: But it is quite contrary with the wicked; there is no principle of Holineſs in them, to oppoſe or expel corruption. It lies in their hearts as Mud in a Lake or Well, which ſettles and corrupts more and more. Hence Ezek 47. 11. their Hearts are compared to myry or mariſh places, which cannot be healed, but are given to Salt: The meaning is, that the pureſt ſtreams of the Goſpel, which cleanſe others, make them worſe than before, as abundance of Rain will a myry place. The reaſon is, becauſe it meets with an obſtacle in their Souls; ſo that it cannot run through them and be glorified, as it doth in gracious Souls. All the means and endeavours uſed to cleanſe them, are in vain; all the grace of God they receive in vain: They hold faſt deceit, they refuſe to let it go, Jer. 8. 5. Sin is not in them as floating Weeds upon the Sea, which it ſtrives to expel and purge out, but as Spots in the Leopard's Skin, Jer. 13. 21. or Letters faſhioned and engraven in the very ſubſtance of Marble or Braſs, with a pen of Iron, and point of a Diamond, Jer. 17. 1. Or as Ivy in an old Wall, that hath gotten rooting into its very intrails. Wickedneſs is ſweet in their mouths, they roul it under their tongues, Job 20. 12. No threats nor promiſes can divorce them from it.

REFLECTION.

Lord! this is the very frame of my heart, may the graceleſs Soul ſay: My corruptions quietly ſettle in me, my heart labours not againſt it: I am a ſtranger to that conflict which is daily maintained in all the Faculties of the regenerate Soul. Glorified Souls have no ſuch conflict, becauſe Grace in them ſtands alone, and is perfectly triumphant over all its oppoſites; and graceleſs Souls can have no ſuch conflict, becauſe in them corruption ſtands alone, and hath no other principle to make oppoſition to it. And this is my caſe, O Lord: I am full of vain hopes indeed, but had I a living and well-grounded hope to dwell for ever with ſo holy a God, I could not but be daily purifying my ſelf. But O! what will the end of this be? I have cauſe to tremble at that laſt and dreadfulleſt Curſe in the Book of God, Rev. 22. 11. Let him that is filthy be filthy ſtill. Is it not as much as if God ſhould ſay, Let them alone, I will ſpend no more rods upon them, no more means ſhall be uſed about them; but I will reckon with them for all together in another World; O my Soul! what a diſmal reckoning will that be! Ponder with thy ſelf in the mean while, thoſe terrible and awaking Texts, that if poſſible, this fatal iſſue may be prevented. See Iſa. 1. 5. Hoſ. 4. 14. Jer. 6. 29, 30. Heb. 6. 8.

THE POEM.

My Heart's no Fountain, but a ſtanding Lake
Of putrid Waters; if therein I rake,
By ſerious ſearch, O! what a noyſome ſmell,
Like Exhalations riſing out of Hell;
The ſtinking Waters pump'd up from the Hole,
Are as perfumes to Seamen: but my Soul
Upon the ſame account that they are glad,
(Its long continuance there) is therefore ſad.
The Scripture ſaith, No Soul God's face ſhall ſee, Till from ſuch filthy Luſts it cleanſed be.
Yet though unclean, it may that way be rid,
As Hercules the Augean Stable did.
Lord turn into my Soul that cleanſing Bloud,
Which from my Saviour's ſide flow'd us a Flood.
Flow, ſacred, brim my Banks; and flow
Till you have made my Soul as white as Snow.

CHAP. V.

Seamen foreſee a Danger, and prepare:
Yet few of greater Dangers are aware.

OBSERVATION.

HOW watchful and quick-ſighted are Seamen, to prevent Dangers; If the Wind die away, and then freſh up Southerly; or if they ſee the Sky hezy, they provide for a Storm: If by the Proſpective-Glaſs they ken a Pirate at the greateſt diſtance, they clear the Gun-room, prepare for fight, and bear up, if able to deal with him; if not, they keep cloſe by the Wind, make all the Sail they can, and bear away. If they ſuppoſe themſelves by their reckoning near Land, how often do they ſound? And if upon a Coaſt with which they are unacquainted, how careful are they to get a Pilot that knows and is acquainted with it?

APPLICATION.

Thus watchful and ſuſpicious ought we to be in Spiritual Concernments. We ſhould ſtudy, and be acquainted with Satan's Wiles and Policy: The Apoſtle takes it for granted, that Chriſtians are not ignorant of his devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. The Serpent's eye (as one ſaith) would do well in the Dove's head: The Devil is a cunning Pirate, he puts out falſe Colours, and ordinarily comes up to the Chriſtian in the diſguiſe of a friend.

O the manifold depths and ſtratagems of Satan, to deſtroy Souls! Though he have no Wiſdom to do himſelf good, yet policy enough to do us miſchief. He lies in ambuſh behind our lawful comforts and imployments: Yet for the moſt of men, how ſupine and careleſs are they, ſuſpecting no danger; Their Souls, like Laiſh, dwell careleſly; their Senſes unguarded. O what an eaſie prize and conqueſt doth the Devil make of them!

Indeed, if it were with us, as with Adam in innocency, or as it was with Chriſt in the days of his fleſh (who by reaſon of that overflowing fulneſs of Grace that dwelt in him, the purity of his Perſon, and the Hypoſtatical Union, was ſecured from the danger of all temptations) the caſe then were otherwiſe; but we have a Traytor within, Jam. 1. 14, 15. as well as a Temter without, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Our adverſary the Devil goes about as a roaring Lion, ſeeking whom he may devour. And like the Beaſts of the Foreſt, poor Souls lie down before him, and become his prey. All the ſagacity, wit, policy and foreſight of ſome Men, is ſummoned in to ſerve their Bodies, and ſecure their fleſhly enjoyments.

REFLECTION.

Lord! how doth the care, wiſdom, and vigilancy of Men in temporal and external things, condemn my careleſneſs in the deep and dear concernments of my precious Soul! What care and labour is there to ſecure a periſhing life, liberty, or treaſure! When was I thus ſollicitous for my Soul, though its value be ineſtimable, and its dangers far greater? Self-preſervation is one of the deepeſt Principles in Nature. There is not the pooreſt Worm or Flie, but will ſhun danger if it can: Yet I am ſo far from ſhunning thoſe dangers to which my Soul lies continually expoſed, that I often run it upon temptations, and voluntarily expoſe it to its enemies. I ſee, Lord, how watchful, jealous and laborious thy People are, what Prayers, Tears, and Groans, ſearching of Heart, Mortification of Luſts, guarding of Senſes: and all accounted too little by them. Have not I a Soul to ſave or loſe eternally, as well as they? Yet I cannot deny one fleſhly luſt, nor withſtand one temptation. O, how am I convinced, and condemned; not only by others care and vigilancy, but my own too, in leſſer and lower matters?

THE POEM.

I am the Ship, whoſe Bills of Lading come
To more than Man's or Angels art can ſum.
Rich fraught with Mercies, on the Ocean, now
I float, the dangerous Ocean I do plow.
Storms riſe, Rocks threaten, and in every Creek
Pirates and Pickeroons their Prizes ſeek.
My Soul ſhould watch, look out, and uſe its Glaſs,
Prevent Surprizals timely; but alas!
Temptations give it chaſe, it's grappled ſure,
And boarded whilſt it thinks it ſelf ſecure,
It ſleeps like Jonah, in the dreadful'ſt ſtorm,
Although its caſe be dangerous and forlorn.
Lord, rouze my drowſie Soul, leſt it ſhould knock
And ſplit it ſelf upon ſome dangerous Rock.
If it of Faith and Conſcience ſhipwrack make,
I am undone for ever: Soul, awake!
Till thou arrive in Heaven, watch and fear;
Thou mayſt not ſay till then, the Coaſt is clear.

CHAP. VI.

How ſmall a matter turns a Ship about?
Yet we againſt our Conſcience ſtand it out.

OBSERVATION.

It is juſt matter of admiration, to ſee ſo great a body as a Ship is, and when under Sail too, before a freſh and ſtrong Wind, by which it is carried, as the Clouds, with marvellous force and ſpeed, yet to be commanded with eaſe, by ſo ſmall a thing as the Helm is. The Scripture takes notice of it as a matter worthy our conſideration, Jam. 3. 4. Behold alſo the ſhips, which though they be great, and driven of fierce winds; yet they are turned about with a ſmall Helm, whitherſoever the Governor liſteth. Yea, Ariſtotle himſelf, that Eagle-ey'd Philoſopher, could not give a reaſon of it, but looked upon it as a very marvellous and wonderful thing.

Ariſtot. Secunda. Μηχανικῶν, c. 5.

APPLICATION.

To the ſame uſe and office has God deſign'd Conſcience in man, which being rectified and regulated by the Word and Spirit of God, is to ſteer and order his whole Converſation. Conſcience is as the Oracle of God, the Judge and Determiner of our Actions, whether they be good or evil? and it lays the ſtrongeſt obligations upon the creature to obey its dictates, that is imaginable: For it binds under the reaſon and conſideration of the moſt Abſolute and Soveraign Will of the great God. So that as often as Conſcience from the Word convinceth us of any ſin or duty, it lays ſuch a bond upon us to obey it, as no power under Heaven can relax, or diſpenſe with. Angels cannot do it, ~~much leſs~~ Man; for that would be to exalt them~~ſelves above~~ God. Now therefore it is an high and dreadful way of ſinning, to oppoſe and rebel againſt Conſcience, when it convinces of ſin or duty. Conſcience ſometimes reaſons it out with Men, and ſhews them the neceſſity of changing their way and courſe; arguing it from the cleareſt and moſt allowed Maxims of right Reaſon, as well as from the indiſputable Soveraignty of God.

As for inſtance: It convinceth their very Reaſon, that things of Eternal Duration, are infinitely to be preferred to all momentary and periſhing things, Rom. 8. 18. Heb. 11. 26. And it is our duty to chuſe them, and make all ſecular and temporary concernments to ſtand aſide, and give place to them. Yet though Men be convinced of this, their ſtubborn Will ſtands out, and will not yield up it ſelf to the conviction.

Further, It argues from this acknowledged truth, That all the delights and pleaſures in this World, are but a miſerable portion, and that it is the higheſt folly to adventure an immortal ſoul for them, Luke 9. 25. Alas, what remembrance is there of them in Hell? They are as the waters that paſs away. What have they left of all their mirth and jollity, but a tormenting ſting? It convinceth them clearly alſo that in matters of deep concernment, it is an high point of wiſdom, to apprehend and improve the right ſeaſons and opportunities of them, Prov. 10. 5. He that gathers in ſummer is a wiſe Son. Eccleſ. 8. 5. A wiſe man's heart diſcerns both time and judgment. There is a ſeaſon to every purpoſe, Eccleſ. 3. 1. viz. A nick of time, an happy juncture; when if a Man ſtrikes in, he doth his work effectually, and with much facility. Such Seaſons Conſcience convinceth the Soul of, and often whiſpers thus in its ear: Now, Soul, ſtrike in cloſe with this motion of the Spirit, and be happy for ever; thou maiſt never have ſuch a gale for Heaven any more. Now, though theſe be allowed Maxims of Reaſon, and Conſcience inforce them ſtrongly on the ſoul, yet cannot it prevail; the proud ſtubborn Will rebels, and will not be guided by it. See Epheſ. 2. 3. Job 34. 37. Iſa. 46. 12. Ezek. 2. 4. Jer. 44. 16.

REFLECTION.

Ah Lord, ſuch an heart have I had before thee; thus obſtinate, thus rebellious, ſo uncontrolable by Conſcience. Many a time hath Conſcience thus whiſpered in mine ear; many a time hath it ſtood in my way, as the Angel did in Balaam's, or the Cherubims that kept the way of the Tree of Life, with flaming ſwords turning every way. Thus hath it ſtood to oppoſe me in the way of my Luſts. How often hath it calmly debated the Caſe with me alone? And how ſweetly hath it expoſtulated with me? How clearly hath it convinced of ſin, danger, duty, with ſtrong demonſtration? How terrible hath it menaced my ſoul, and ſet the point of the threatning at my very breaſt? And yet my headſtrong affections will not be remanded by it. I have obeyed the voice of every luſt and temptation. Tit. 3. 3. But Conſcience hath loſt its Authority with me. Ah Lord! what a ſad condition am I in, both in reſpect of ſin and miſery? My ſin receives dreadful aggravations; for rebellion and preſumption are hereby added to it. I have violated the ſtrongeſt bonds that ever were laid upon a Creature. If my Conſcience had not thus convinced and warned, the ſin had not been ſo great and crimſon-coloured, Jam. 4. 17. Ah! this is to ſin with an high hand, Numb. 15. 30. to come near to the great and unpardonable tranſgreſſion, Pſal. 19. 13. O how dreadful a way of ſinning is this, with opened eyes! And as my ſin is thus out of meaſure ſinful, ſo my puniſhment will be out of meaſure dreadful, if I perſiſt in this rebellion. Lord, thou haſt ſaid, Such ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes, Luke 12. 48. Yea, Lord, and if ever my Conſcience, which by rebellion is now grown ſilent, ſhould be in judgment awakened in this life, Oh what an Hell ſhould I have within me! how would it thunder and roar upon me and ſurround me with terrors!

Thy word aſſures me, that no length of time can wear out of its memory what I have done, Gen. 42. 21. No violence or force can ſuppreſs it, Mat. 27. 4. No greatneſs of power can ſtifle it; it will take the mightieſt Monarch by the throat, Exod. 10. 16. Dan. 5. 6. No muſick, pleaſures, or delights, can charm it, Job 20. 22. O Conſcience! thou art the ſweeteſt friend, or the dreadfulleſt enemy in the World; Thy Conſolations are incomparably ſweet, and thy terrors inſupportable. Ah let me ſtand it out no longer againſt Conſcience; the very Ship in which I ſail, is a confutation of my madneſs, that ruſh greedily into ſin againſt both Reaſon and Conſcience, and will not be commanded by it; Surely, O my Soul, this will be bitterneſs in the end.

THE POEM.

A Ship of greateſt burden will obey
The Rudder; he that ſits at Helm may ſway
And guide its motion: If the Pilot pleaſe,
The Ship bears up againſt both Wind and Seas.
My Soul's the Ship, Affections are its Sails,
Conſcience the Rudder. Ah! but Lord what ails
My naughty heart, to ſhuffle in and out,
When its convictions bid it tack about?
Temptations blow a counter-blaſt, and drive
The Veſſel where they pleaſe, though Conſcience ſtrive.
And by its ſtrong perſwaſions, it would force
My ſtubborn Will to ſteer another courſe.
Lord, if I run this courſe, thy Word doth tell
How quickly I muſt needs arrive at Hell.
Then rectifie my Conſcience, change my Will;
Fan in thy pleaſant Gales, my God, and fill
All my affections, and let nothing carry
My Soul from its due courſe or make it vary;
Then if the Pilot's work thou wouldſt perform,
I ſhould bear bravely up againſt a ſtorm.

CHAP. VII.

Through many fears and dangers Seamen run,
But all's forgotten when they do return.

OBSERVATION.

WE have an elegant and lively deſcription of their fears and dangers, Pſal. 107. 25, 26, 27. He commandeth and raiſeth the ſtormy Winds, which lifteth up the Waves thereof: They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the depths; their ſoul is melted becauſe of trouble: they reel to and fro, they ſtagger like a drunken man; they are at their wits end. Or, as it is in the Hebrew, All Wiſdom is ſwallowed up. Suitable to which is that of the Poet.

Rector in incerto eſt, nec quid fugiative petotive
Invenit, ambiguis ars ſtupet ipſa malis. Ovid.

The Pilot knows not what to chuſe or flee;
Art ſtands amaz'd in ambiguity.

O what ſtrange and miraculous Deliverances have many Seamen had? How often have they yielded themſelves for dead Men, and verily thought the next Sea would have ſwallowed them up? How earneſtly then do they cry for Mercy? And like the Cymbrians, can pray in a ſtorm, though they regarded it not at other times, Pſal. 107. 28. Jonah 1. 5, 6.

APPLICATION.

Theſe dreadful ſtorms do at once diſcover to us the mighty Power of God in raiſing them, and the abundant Goodneſs of God in preſerving poor Creatures in them.

1. The Power of God is graciouſly manifeſted in raiſing them: The Wind is one of the Lord's Wonders, Pſal. 107. 24, 25. They that go down to the Sea, ſee the works of the Lord, and his [wonders] in the deep;

for he commandeth and raiſeth the ſtormy winds. Yea, Verſe 18. God appropriates it as a peculiar work of his; He cauſeth [His wind to blow.] Hence, He is ſaid in Scripture, to bring them forth of his treaſury, Pſal. 137. 7. There they are locked up and reſerved, not a guſt can break forth, till he command and call for it to go and execute his pleaſure: Yea, He is ſaid to hold them in his fiſt, Prov. 30. 4. What is more uncapable of holding than the Wind? yet God holds it. Although it be a ſtrong and terrible creature, He controuls and rules it. Yea, the Scripture ſets forth God, As riding upon the wings of the wind, Pſal. 18. 10. It is a borrowed ſpeech from the manner of Men, who when they would ſhew their pomp and greatneſs, ride upon ſome ſtately Horſe or Chariot: ſo the Lord to manifeſt the greatneſs of his Power, rides upon the Wings of the Wind, and will be admired in ſo terrible a creature.

And no leſs of his glorious Power appears in remanding them, than in raiſing them. The Heathens aſcribe this power to their god Æolus; but we know this is the Royalty and ſole Prerogative of the true God, who made Heaven and Earth; it is He that makes the ſtorm a calm, Pſal. 107. 29. And it is He that ſhifts and changes them from Point to Point as He pleaſeth; for he hath appointed them their Circuits, Eccleſ. 1. 6. The wind goeth towards the South, and turneth about unto the North; it whirleth about continually, and returneth again according to its Circuits.

2. And as we ſhould adore his Power in the winds, ſo ought we to admire his Goodneſs in preſerving Men in the height of all their fury and violence. O what a marvellous work of God is here! That Men ſhould be kept in a poor weak Veſſel, upon the wild and ſtormy Ocean, where the Wind hath its full ſtroke upon them, and they are driven before it as a wreck upon the Seas, yet, I ſay, that God ſhould preſerve you there, is a work of infinite goodneſs and power. That thoſe Winds which do rend the very Earth, Mountains and Rocks, 1 Kings 29. 11. Breaks the Cedars, yea, the Cedars of Lebanon, ſhakes the Wilderneſs and makes the Hinds to calve: which Naturaliſts ſay, bring forth with greateſt difficulty, Pſal. 29. 5, 8, 9. Surely your preſervation in ſuch Tempeſts, is an aſtoniſhing work of Mercy. O how dreadful is this Creature, the Winds, ſometimes to you? And how doth it make your hearts ſhake within you? If but a Plank ſpring, or a Bolt give way, you are all loſt. Sometimes the Lord for the magnifying of the riches of his goodneſs upon you, drives you to ſuch exigencies, that, as Paul ſpeaks in a like caſe, Acts 17. 20. All hopes of being ſaved is taken away: Nothing but Death before your eyes. The Lord commands a Wind out of his Treaſury, bids it go and lift up the terrible Waves; lock you in upon the ſhore, and drive you upon the Rocks, ſo that no Art can ſave you; and then ſends you a piece of Wreck, or ſome other means to land you ſafe: And all this to give you an experiment of his goodneſs and pity, that you may learn to fear that God, in whoſe hand your Soul and Breath is.

And it may be for the preſent, your hearts are much affected: Conſcience works ſtrongly, it ſmites you for ſins formerly committed, ſuch and ſuch counſels of Miniſters or Relations ſlighted. Now, ſaith Conſcience, God is come in this ſtorm to reckon with thee for theſe things, But alas, all this is but a morning-dew; no ſooner is that ſtorm without allayed, but all is quiet within too. How little of the goodneſs of God abides kindly and effectually upon the heart?

REFLECTION.

How often hath this glorious power and goodneſs of God paſſed before me in dreadful ſtorms and tempeſts at Sea? He hath uttered his Voice in thoſe ſtormy Winds, and ſpoken in a terrible manner by them; yet how little have I been affected with it? The Lord hath his way in the whirlwind, and in the ſtorm, Nah. 1. 3. To ſome he hath walked in ways of Judgment and Wrath, ſending them down in a moment to Hell; but to me in a way of forbearance and mercy. Ah, how often have I been upon the very brink of Eternity? Had not God ſhifted or allayed the Wind, in a moment, I had gone down into Hell. What workings of Conſcience were at preſent upon me? And what terrible apprehenſions had I then of my eternal condition? What Vows did I make in that diſtreſs? and how earneſtly did I then beg for Mercy? But Lord, though thy Vows are upon me, yet have I been the ſame; yea, added to, and filled up the meaſure of my ſins. Neither the bonds of Mercy thou haſt laid upon me, nor the ſacred and ſolemn Vows I have laid upon my ſelf, could reſtrain me from thoſe ways of iniquity, which then appeared ſo dreadful to me.

Ah Lord, what an heart have I? What love, pity, and goodneſs have I ſinned againſt? If God had but reſpited Judgment ſo long, what a mercy were it! Sure I am, the damned would account it ſo; but to give me ſuch a ſpace to repent, Ah what an invaluable Mercy is this! And do I thus requite the Lord, Deut. 32. 6. and pervert and abuſe his goodneſs thus? Surely, O my Soul, if this be the fruit of all thy preſervations, they are rather reſervations to ſome further and ſorer judgment. How dreadfully will Juſtice at laſt avenge the Quarrel of abuſed Mercy? Joſh. 24. 20. How grievouſly did God take it from the Iſraelites, that they provoked him at the Sea, even at the Red Sea? Pſal. 106. 7. where God had wrought their deliverance in ſuch a miraculous way. Even thus have I ſinned after the ſimilitude of their tranſgreſſions: not only againſt the Laws of God, but againſt the Love of God. In the laſt ſtorm he ſhot off his Warning-piece; in the next, he may diſcharge his Murdering-piece againſt my Soul and Body. O my Soul! hath he given thee ſuch deliverances as theſe, and dareſt thou again break his Commandments; Ezra 9. 13, 14. O let me pay the Vows that my lips have uttered in my diſtreſs, leſt the Lord recover his glory from me in a way of Judgment.

All Winds, but that which for his Soul doth make.

OBSERVATION.

THE Mariner wants no Skill and Wiſdom to improve ſeveral Winds, and make them ſerviceable to his end; A bare ſide-wind, by his skill in ſhifting and managing the Sails, will ſerve his turn: He will not loſe the advantage of one breath or gale that may be uſeful to him, I have many times wonder'd to ſee two Ships ſailing in a direct countermotion, by one and the ſame wind. Their skill and wiſdom herein is admirable.

APPLICATION.

Thus prudent and skilful are Men in ſecular and lower matters, and yet how ignorant and unskilful in the great and everlaſting affairs of their Souls! All their Invention, Judgment, Wit, and Memory ſeem to be preſt for the ſervice of the fleſh. They can learn an Art quickly, and arrive to a great deal of exactneſs in it; but in ſoul-matters, no knowledge at all. They can underſtand the Equator, Meridian, and Horizon: By the firſt they can tell the Latitude of any place, South or North, meaſuring it by the degrees in the Meridian; by the ſecond, they can tell you the Longitude of a place, Eaſt and Weſt, from the Meridian, meaſuring it by the degrees of the Æquator: And by the third, they can diſcern the divers riſings and ſettings of the Stars. And ſo in other Arts and Sciences, we find men endowed with rare abilities, and ſingular ſagacity. Some have piercing Apprehenſions, ſolid Judgments, ſtupendious Memories, rare Invention, and excellent Elocution: But put them upon any ſpiritual ſupernatual matter, and the weakeſt Chriſtian, even a babe in Chriſt, ſhall excel them therein, and give a far better account of Regeneration, the Work of Grace, the Life of Faith than theſe can. 1 Cor. 1. 26. Not many wiſe men after the fleſh, &c. But God hath choſen the fooliſh things of this world, &c.

REFLECTION.

How inexcuſable then art thou, O my Soul! and how mute and confounded muſt thou needs ſtand before the bar of God, in that great day? Thou hadſt a Talent of natural parts committed to thee, but which way have they been improved? I had an Underſtanding indeed, but it was not ſanctified; a Memory, but it was like a Sieve, that let go the Corn, and retain'd nothing but Husks and Chaff; Wit and Invention, but alas none to do my ſelf good. Ah! how will theſe riſe in judgment againſt me, and ſtop my mouth? What account ſhall I give for them in that day?

Again: Are men (otherwiſe prudent and skilful) ſuch ſots and fools in ſpiritual things? Then let the poor weak Chriſtian, whoſe natural parts are blunt and dull, admire the riches of God's Free Grace to him. O what an aſtoniſhing conſideration is this! That God ſhould paſs by Men of the profoundeſt Natural parts, and chuſe me, even poor me, whoſe Natural Faculties and Endowments, compared with theirs, are but as Lead to Gold! Thus under the Law he paſt by the Lion and Eagle, and choſe the Lamb and Dove. O, how ſhould it make me to advance Grace, as Chriſt doth upon the ſame account, Mat. 11. 25. I thank thee, Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, that thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and revealed them to babes. And let it ever be an humbling conſideration to me; For who made me to differ? Is not this one principal thing God aims at, in calling ſuch as I am; that boaſting may be excluded, and himſelf alone exalted?

THE POEM.

One thing doth very much affect my mind,
To ſee the Seaman husband every Wind;
With exc'llent Art he ſhifts the Sails and knows
How to improve the bareſt Wind that blows.
If a direct or foreright gale he want,
A ſide-wind ſerves his turn, tho' ne'r ſo ſcant.
And will not this one day in judgment riſe
Againſt your Soul? Ah! can you be ſo wiſe
In ſmaller matters; what, and yet not know
How to improve freſh gales of Grace that blow?
Faſt mor'd in ſin your wind-bound Souls can lie,
And let theſe precious gales riſe, blow, and die.
Sometimes on your Affections you may feel
Such gracious breathings: Ah, but hearts of ſteel,
They move you not, nor cauſe you to relent;
Though able, like Elijah's Wind, to rent
The Rocks aſunder: If you do not prize
Thoſe breathings, other Winds will ſhortly riſe,
And from another quarter; thoſe once gone,
Then next look out for an Euroclydon.
A dreadful ſtorm: how ſoon no Man can tell;
But when it comes, 'twill blow ſuch Souls to Hell,

CHAP. IX.

If Seamen loſe a gale, there they may lie:
The Soul, when once becalm'd in ſin may die.

OBSERVATION.

SEamen are very watchful to take their opportunity of Wind and Tide; and it much concerns them ſo to be: The neglect of a few hours, ſometimes loſes them their paſſage, and proves a great detriment to them. They know the Wind is an uncertain variable thing; they muſt take it when they may; they are unwilling to loſe one flow, or breath, that may be ſerviceable to them. If a proſperous Gale offer, and they not ready, it repents them to loſe it, as much as it would repent us to ſee a Veſſel of good Wine or Beer tapt and run waſte.

APPLICATION.

There are alſo ſeaſons and gales of Grace for our Souls; golden opportunities of Salvation afforded to men, the neglect of which proves the loſs and ruin of Souls. God hath given unto men a day of Viſitation, which he hath limited, Heb. 4. 7. and keeps an exact account of every Year, Month, and Day, that we have enjoyed it, Luk. 13. 7. Jer. 25. 3. Luk. 19. 42. The longeſt date of it can be but the time of this Life:

This is our day to work in, Job 9. 4. and upon this ſmall wyre, the weight of Eternity hangs. But ſometimes the ſeaſon of Grace is ended, before the night of Death comes; the accepted time is gone, men frequently out-live it, Luk. 19. 44. 2 Cor. 6. 2. Or, if the outward means of Salvation be continued, yet the Spirit many times withdraws from thoſe means, and ceaſes any more to ſtrive with Men; and then the Bleſſing, Power and Efficacy is gone from them, and inſtead thereof a Curſe ſeizeth the Soul, Heb. 6. 7, 8. and Jer. 6. 29.

Therefore it is a matter of high importance to our Souls, to apprehend theſe ſeaſons. How pathetically doth Chriſt bewail Jeruſalem, upon this account! Luk. 19. 42. O that thou hadſt known, at leaſt in this thy day, the things of thy peace! bnt now they are hid from thine eves. If a company of Seamen be ſet aſhore upon ſome remote, uninhabited Iſland, with this advice, to be aboard again exactly at ſuch an hour, elſe they muſt be left behind: How doth it concern them to be punctual in their time? The lives of thoſe men depend upon a quarter of an hour. Many a Soul hath periſhed eternally (the Goſpel leaving them behind in their ſins) becauſe they knew not the time of their Viſitation.

REFLECTION.

What golden Seaſons for Salvation haſt thou enjoyed, O my Soul? What Halcyon-days of Goſpel-light and Grace haſt thou had? How have the precious Gales of Grace blown to no purpoſe upon thee! and the Spirit waited and ſtriven with thee in vain? The Kingdom of Heaven (being opened in the Goſpel-diſpenſations) hath ſuffered violence. Multitudes have been preſſing into it in my days, and I my ſelf have ſometimes been almoſt perſuaded, and not far from the Kingdom of God: I have gone as far as conviction of ſin and miſery; yea, I have been carried by the power of the Goſpel, to reſolve and purpoſe to turn to God, and become a new Creature; but ſin hath been too ſubtil and deceitful for me: I ſee, my reſolutions were but as an early Cloud, or Morning-Dew: and now my heart is cold and dead again, ſetled upon its Lees. Ah! I have cauſe to fear and tremble, leſt God hath left me under that Curſe, Rev. 20. 11. Let him that is filthy, be filthy ſtill. I fear I am become as that myrie place, Ezek. 47. 11. that ſhall not be healed by the ſtreams of the Goſpel, but given to ſalt, and curſed into perpetual barrenneſs. Ah Lord, wilt thou leave me ſo! and ſhall thy Spirit ſtrive no more with me? Then it had been good for me that I had never been born. Ah, if I have trifled out this Seaſon, and irrecoverably loſt it, then I may take up that lamentation, Jer. 8. 20. and ſay, My Harveſt is paſt, my Summer is ended, and I am not ſaved.

Every Creature knows its time, even the Turtle, Crane, and Swallow, know the time of their coming, Jer. 8. 7. How bruitiſh am I, that have not known the time of my Viſitation! O thou that art the Lord of Life and Time, command one gracious Seaſon more for me, and make it effectual to me, before I go hence, and be ſeen no more!

THE POEM.

A freſh and whisking Gale preſents to day,
But now the Ship's not ready; Winds muſt ſtay,
And wait the Seamens leiſure. Well, to morrow
They will put out; but then, unto their ſorrow,
That Wind is ſpent, and by that means they gain
Perchance a Month's Repentance, if not twain.
At laſt another offers, now they're gone;
But e're they gain their Port, the Market's done.
For every work and purpoſe under Heaven,
A proper time and ſeaſon God hath given.
The Fowls of Heaven, Swallow, Turtle, Crane,
Do apprehend it, and put us to ſhame.
Man hath his ſeaſon too: but that miſ-ſpent,
There's time enough his folly to repent.
Eternity's before him, but therein
No more ſuch golden hours as theſe have been.
When theſe are paſt away, then you ſhall find
That Proverb true, Occaſion's bald behind.
Delays are dangerous; ſee that you diſcern
Your proper ſeaſons. O that you would learn
This Wiſdom from thoſe Fools that come too late
With fruitneſs cries, when Chriſt has ſhut the gate.

CHAP. X.

By Navigation one place ſtores another;
And by Communion we muſt help each other.

OBSERVATION.

THE moſt wiſe God hath ſo diſpenced his Bounty to the ſeveral Nations of the World, that one ſtanding in need of another's Commodities, there might be a ſociable Commerce and Traffick maintain'd amongſt them all, and all combining in a common League may, by the help of Navigation, exhibit mutual ſuccours to each other. The Staple-Commodities proper to each Country, I find thus expreſſed by the Poet, Bart. Coll.

Hence come our Sugars from Canary Iſles;
From Candy Currans, Muskadels, and Oyls;
From the Moluccoes, Spices; Balſamum
From Egypt; Odours from Arabia come;
From India Gums, rich Drugs and Ivory;
From Syria Mummy; Black, Red Ebony
From burning Chus; from Peru, Pearl and Gold;
From Ruſſia Furs, to keep the Rich from Cold.
From Florence Silks; from Spain Fruit, Saffron, Sacks;
From Denmark Amber, Cordage, Firs, and Flax;
From Holland Hops; Horſe from the Banks of Rhine:
From England Wool; all Lands, as God diſtributes,
To the World's Treaſure pay their ſundry Tributes.

APPLICATION.

Thus hath God diſtributed the more rich and precious Gifts and Graces of his Spirit among his People: Some excelling in one Grace, ſome in another, though every Grace, in ſome degree, be in them all; even as in Nature, though there be all the Faculties in all, yet ſome Faculties are in ſome more lively and vigorous than in others; ſome have a more vigorous eye, others a more ready ear, others a more voluble tongue; ſo its in Spirituals. Abraham excell'd in Faith, Job in Patience, John in Love. Theſe were their peculiar excellencies. All the elect Veſſels are not of one quantity; yet even thoſe that excel others in ſome particular Grace, come ſhort in other reſpects of thoſe they ſo excelled in the former, and may be much improv'd by converſe with ſuch as in ſome reſpects are much below them. The ſolid, wiſe, and judicious Chriſtian may want that livelineſs of affections, and tenderneſs of heart, that appears in the weak; and one that excels in gifts and utterance, may learn Humility from the very Babes in Chriſt, And one principal Reaſon of this different diſtribution, is to maintain fellowſhip among them all, 1 Cor. 12. 21. The Head cannot ſay to the Feet I have no need of you. As in a Family, where there is much buſineſs to be done, even the little Children bear a part, according to their ſtrength, Jer. 7. 18. The children gather wood, the fathers kindle the fire, the women knead the dough. So in the Family of Chriſt, the weakeſt Chriſtian is ſerviceable to the ſtrong.

There be precious Treaſures in theſe Earthen Veſſels, for which we ſhould trade by mutual communion. The preciouſneſs of the Treaſure, ſhould draw out our deſires and endeavours after it; and the conſideration of the brittleneſs of thoſe Veſſels in which they are kept, ſhould cauſe us to be the more expeditious in our trading with them, and make the quicker Returns: For when thoſe Veſſels (I mean the Bodies of the Saints) are broken by Death, there is no more to be gotten out of them. That Treaſure of Grace which made them ſuch profitable, pleaſant and deſirable companions on Earth, then Aſcends with them into Heaven, where every Grace receives its adoleſcence and perfection: And then, though they be Ten thouſand times more excellent and delightful than ever they were on Earth, yet we can have no more communion with them, till we come to Glory our ſelves. Now therefore it behoves us to be enriching our ſelves by communication of what God hath dropt into us, and improvement of them, as one well Notes. We ſhould do by Saints, as we uſe to do by ſome choice Book lent us for a few days, we ſhould fix in our Memories, or tranſcribe all the choice Notions we meet within it, that they may be our own when the Book is called for, and we can have it no longer by us.

Mr. Gurnal.

REFLECTION.

Lord, How ſhort do I come of my Duty in communicating to, or receiving good by others! My Soul is either empty and barren, or if there be any Treaſure in it, yet it is but as a Treaſure locked p in ſome Cheſt, whoſe Key is loſt, when it ſhould e open'd for the uſe of others. Ah Lord! I have ſinned greatly, not only by vain words, but ſinful ilence. I have been of little uſe in the World.

How little alſo have I gotten by communion with thers? Some, it may be, that are of my own ſize, or dgment, or that I am otherwiſe obliged to, I can elight to converſe with: But O, where is that rgeneſs of heart, and general delight I ſhould have o, and in all thy People? How many of my old ear Acquaintance are now in Heaven, whoſe Tongues ere as Choice ſilver, while they were here, Prov. 10. o. And, bleſſed Souls! how communicative were ey of what thou gaveſt them? O what an improve-ent had I made of my Talent this way, had I been ligent! Lord pardon my neglect of thoſe ſweet and leſſed advantages. O let all my delight be in thy ints, who are the excellent of the earth. Let me ne-r go out of their company, without an heart more armed, quickned, and enlarged, than when I came mongſt them.

THE POEM.

To ſeveral Nations God doth ſo diſtribute
is bounty, that each one muſt pay a tribute to each other. Europe cannot vaunt,
d ſay, Of Africa I have no want.
merica and Aſia need not ſtrive,
hich of it ſelf can beſt ſubſiſt and live.
Each Countrey's want, in ſomething, doth maintain
Commerce betwixt them all. Such is the aim
And end of God, who doth diſpenſe and give
More Grace to ſome, their Brethren to relieve.
This makes the Sun Ten thouſand times more bright,
Becauſe it is diffuſive of its Light,
Its Beams are gilded glorioully; but then
This property doth gild them o're agen.
Should Sun, Moon, Stars, impropriate all their light,
What diſmal darkneſs would the World benight?
On this account Men hate the Vermin brood,
Becauſe they take in much, but do no good.
What harm, if I at yours my Candle light?
Except thereby I make your Room more bright.
He that, by Pumping, ſucks and draws the Spring,
New ſtreams, and ſweeter, to that Well doth bring.
Grace is a Treaſure in an Earthen Pot;
When Death hath daſht it, no more can be got
Out of that Veſſel: Then while it is whole,
Get out the Treaſure to enrich your Soul.

CHAP. XI.

The Rocks abide, though Seas againſt them rage;
So ſhall the Church, which is God's Heritage.

OBSERVATION.

THE Rocks, tho ſcituate in the boiſterous and tempeſtuous Ocean, yet abide firm and immovable from Age to Age: The impetuous Waves daſh againſt them with great violence, but cannot remove them out of their place. And although ſometimes they waſh over them, and make them to diſappear, yet there they remain fixt and impregnable.

APPLICATION.

This is a lively Emblem of the condition of the Church, amidſt all dangers and oppoſitions wherewith it is encountred and aſſaulted in this World. Theſe Metaphorical Waves roar and beat with violence againſt it, but with as little ſucceſs as the Sea againſt the Rocks, Matth. 16. 18. Upon this Rock will I build my Church, and the [gates] of Hell ſhall not prevail againſt it. The Gates of Hell, are the power and policy of Hell; for it is conceived to be an alluſive ſpeech to the Gates of the Jews wherein their Ammunition for War was lodged, which alſo were the Seats of Judicature, there ſate the Judges: but yet, theſe Gates of Hell ſhall not prevail. Nay, this Rock is not only invincible in the midſt of their violence, but alſo breaks all that daſh againſt it, Zech. 12. 3. In that day I will make Jeruſalem a burthenſome ſtone for all people: all that burden themſelves with it, ſhall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the Earth be gathered together againſt it. An Alluſion to one that aſſays to roul ſome great ſtone againſt the Hill, which at laſt returns upon him, and cruſhes him to pieces.

And the reaſon why it is thus firm and impregnable, is not from it ſelf; for alas, ſo conſidered, it is weak, and obnoxious to ruin; but from the Almighty Power of God, which guards and preſerves it day and night, Pſal. 46. 5, 6. God is in the midſt of her, ſhe ſhall not be moved: God ſhall help her, and that right early. Vatab. Dum eſpicit mane. When the morning appears. Which notes (ſaith Calvin) God's aſſiduous and conſtant help and ſuccour, which is extended in all dangers, as conſtantly as the Sun ariſes. And this aſſiduous ſuccour to his people, and their great ſecurity thereby, is ſet forth in the Scriptures by a Pleaſant variety of Metaphors and Emblems, Zech. 2. 5. I (ſaith the Lord) will be a Wall of Fire round about it. Some think this phraſe alludes to the Cherubims, that kept the way of the Tree of Life with flaming ſwords: Others, to the fiery Chariots round about Dathan, where Eliſha was: but moſt think it to be an alluſion to an ancient cuſtom of Travellers in the Deſarts; who to prevent the aſſaults of wild Beaſts in the night, made a Circular fire round about them, which was as a Wall to them. Thus will God be to his people a wall of fire, which none can ſcale. So Exod. 3. 3, 4, 5. We have an excellent Emblem of the Churches low and dangerous condition, and admirable preſervation. You have here, both a Marvel and a Myſtery: The Marvel was to ſee a buſh all on fire, and yet not conſumed. The Myſtery is this; the Buſh repreſented the ſad condition of the Church in Egypt; the Fire flaming upon it, the grievous afflictions, troubles, and bondage it was in there; the remaining of the Buſh unconſumed, the ſtrange and admirable preſervation of the Church in thoſe troubles. It lived there as the three noble Jews, untouched in the midſt of a burning fiery Furnace: And the Angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in the midſt of the Buſh, was nothing elſe but the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, powerfully and graciouſly preſent with his people, amidſt all their dangers and ſufferings. The Lord is exceeding tender over them, and jealous for them, as that Expreſſion imports, Zech. 2. 8. He that touches you, toucheth the apple of mine eye. He that ſtrikes at them, ſtrikes at the Face of God; and at the moſt excellent part of the Face, the Eye, and at the moſt tender and precious part of the Eye, the Apple of the Eye. And yet (as a Learned Modern obſerves) this people of whom he uſes this tender and dear expreſſion, were none of the beſt of Iſrael neither; but the reſidue that ſtaid behind in Babylon, when their Brethren were gone to rebuild the Temple; and yet over theſe, is he as tender, as a man is over his eye.

REFLECTION.

And is the ſecurity of the Church ſo great! and its preſervation ſo admirable, amidſt all Storms and Tempeſts! Then why art thou ſo prone and ſubject to deſpond, O my Soul, in the day of Sion's trouble? Senſible thou waſt, and oughteſt to be; but no reaſon to hang down the head through diſcouragement, much leſs to forſake Sion in her diſtreſs, for fear of being ruined with her.

What David ſpake to Abiathar, 1 Sam. 22. 23. that may Sion ſpeak to all her Sons and Daughters in all their diſtreſſes: Though he that ſeeketh thy life, ſeeketh mine alſo; yet with me ſhalt thou be in ſafeguard. God hath intail'd great Salvation and Deliverances upon Sion; and bleſſed are all her Friends and Favourers; the Rock of ages is its defence. Fear not therefore, O my Soul, though the Hills be removed out of their place, and caſt into the midſt of the Sea. O let my Faith triumph, and my Heart rejoyce upon this ground of comfort. I ſee the ſame Rocks now, and in the ſame place and condition they were many years ago. Though they have endured many ſtorms, yet there they abide; and ſo ſhall Sion, when the proud waves have ſpent their fury and rage againſt it.

THE POEM.

Meſopotamia, ſcituate in the Seas,
May repreſent the Church, or, if you pleaſe,
A Rock, o're which the Waves do waſh and ſwill,
May figure it; chuſe either, which you will.
Winds ſtrive upon thoſe Seas, and make a noiſe,
The lofty Waves ſometimes lift up their voice,
And ſwelling high, ſucceſſively do beat
With violence againſt it, then retreat.
They break themſelves, but it abides their ſhock;
And when their Rage is ſpent, there ſtands the Rock.
Then they are out, that do affirm and vote,
Peace, Pomp, and Splendor is the Churches Note.
And they deſerve no leſs reproof, that are
In Zion's Troubles ready to deſpair.
This Rock amidſt far ſtronger Rocks doth lie,
Which are its fence, ſo deep, ſo thick, ſo high,
They cann't be batter'd, ſcal'd or undermin'd:
And theſe, environ'd by them, daily find
Their Bread aſcertain'd; Waters too ſecur'd:
Then ſhout and ſing, ye that are thus Immur'd.

CHAP. XII.

What Dangers run they for a little gains,
Who, for their Souls, would ne'r take half the pains!

OBSERVATION.

HOw exceeding ſolicitous and adventurous are Sea-men for a ſmall portion of the World? How prodigal of ſtrength and life for it? They will run to the ends of the Earth, engage in a Thouſand dangers, upon the hopes and probability of getting a ſmall Eſtate. Per mare per terras, per mille pericula currunt. Hopes of gain makes them willing to adventure their liberty, yea, their life; and encourages them to endure Heat, Cold, and Hunger, and a Thouſand ſtreights and difficulties, to which they are frequently expoſed.

APPLICATION.

How hot and eager are Mens affections after the World? And how remiſs and cold towards things eternal? They are careful, and troubled about many things, but ſeldom mind the great and neceſſary matters, Luk. 10. 40. They can riſe early, go to bed late, eat the bread of carefulneſs: But when did they ſo deny themſelves for their poor Souls? Their heads are full of deſigns and projects to get or advance an Eſtate: We will go into ſuch a City, continue there a year, and Buy and Sell, and get gain, Jam. 4. 13. This is the τὸ ἔργον, the Maſter-deſign, which engroſſeth all their time, ſtudies and contrivances. The Will hath paſt a Decree for it, the Heart and Affections are fully let out to it, They will be rich, 1 Tim. 6. 9. This Decree of the Will, the Spirit of God takes deep notice of it; and indeed it is the cleareſt and fulleſt diſcovery of a Man's portion and condition: For, look what is higheſt in the eſtimation, firſt and laſt in the thoughts, and upon which we ſpend our time and ſtrength with delight; certainly, that is our Treaſure, Mat. 6. 20, 21. The Heads and Hearts of Saints are full of ſolicitous cares and fears about their Spiritual Condition: The great deſign they drive on, to which all other things are but [πάρεργα,] things on the by, is to make ſure their Calling and Election. This is the [Pondus] the weight and byaſs of their Spirit: if their hearts ſtray and wander after any other thing, this reduces them again.

REFLECTION.

Lord, this hath been my manner from my Youth may the Carnal-minded Man ſay; I have been labouring for the Meat that periſheth; diſquieting ſelf in vain, full of deſigns and projects for the World, and unwearied in my endeavours to compaſs an earthly treaſure; yet therein I have either been checkt and diſappointed by Providence; or if I have obtained, yet I am no ſooner come to enjoy that Content and Comfort I promiſed my ſelf in it, but I am ready to leave it all, to be ſtript out of it by Death, and in that day all my thoughts periſh: But in the mean time, What have I done for my Soul? When did I ever break a Night's ſleep, or deny and pinch my ſelf for it? Ah fool that I am! to nouriſh and pamper a vile Body, which muſt ſhortly lie under the Clods, and become a loathſome Carkaſs; and, in the mean time, neglect and undo my poor Soul, which partakes of the Nature of Angels, and muſt live for ever. I have kept others Vineyards, but mine own Vineyard I have not kept: I have been a perpetual drudge and ſlave to the World; in a worſe condition hath my Soul been, than others that are Condemned to the Mines. Lord change my Treaſure, and change my Heart: O let it ſuffice that I have been thus long labouring on the fire, for very vanity. Now gather up my heart and affections in thy ſelf, and let my great deſign now be, to ſecure a ſpecial intereſt in thy Bleſſed Self, that I may once ſay, To me to live is Chriſt.

THE POEM.

The Face of Man impreſt and ſtampt on Gold,
With Crown and Royal Scepters we behold.
No wonder that an humane Face it gains,
Since Head, Heart, Soul, and Body it obtains.
Nor is it ſtrange a Scepter it ſhould have,
That to its Yoke the World doth ſo enſlave.
Charm'd with its chinking Note, away they go
Like Eagles to the Carcaſs, ride and row.
Through worlds of hazards fooliſh creatures run,
That into its embraces they may come.
Poor Indians in the Mines my heart condoles,
But ſeldom turns aſide to pity Souls,
Which are the ſlaves indeed, that toyl and ſpend
Themſelves upon its ſervice. Surely, Friend,
They are but Sextons to prepare and make
Thy Grave within thoſe Mines, whence they do take
And dig their Ore. Ah! many Souls, I fear,
Whoſe Bodies live, yet lie entombed there.
Is Gold ſo tempting to you? Lo, Chriſt ſtands,
With length of days, and riches in his hands.
Gold in the fire tri'd he freely proffers;
But few regard or take thoſe Golden Offers.

CHAP. XIII.

Millions of Creatures in the Seas are fed:
Why then are Saints in doubt of daily bread?

OBSERVATION.

THere are multitudes of Living Creatures in the Sea. The Pſalmiſt ſaith, There are in it things creeping innumerable, both ſmall and great beaſts, Pſal. 104.25. And we read, Gen. 1. 20. that when God bleſſed the Waters, he ſaid, Let the Waters bring forth abundantly, both Fiſh and Fowl, that move in it, and fly about it. Yet all thoſe multitudes of Fiſh and Fowl, both in Sea and Land, are cared and provided for, Pſal. 145. 15, 16. Thou giveſt them their meat in due ſeaſon; thou openeſt thy hand, and ſatisfieſt the deſire of every living thing.

APPLICATION.

If God take care for the Fiſhes of the Sea, and the Fowls of the Air, much more will he care and provide for thoſe that fear him. When the poor and needy ſeeketh water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt; I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them, Iſa. 41. 17. Take no thought for your life (ſaith the Lord) what ye ſhall eat, or what ye ſhall drink; or for the body, what ye ſhall put on: Which he backs with an Argument from God's Providence over the Creatures, and enforceth it with a [much rather] upon them, Matth. 6.25, 31. God would have his people be without carefulneſs (i.e.) anxious care, 1 Cor. 7. 32. And to caſt their care upon him, for he careth for them, 1 Pet. 5. 7. There be two main Arguments ſuggeſted in the Goſpel, to quiet and ſatisfie the hearts of Saints in this particular: The one is, that the Gift of Jeſus Chriſt amouns to more than all theſe things come to; yea, in beſtowing him, he has given that which virtually and eminently comprehends all theſe inferior mercies in it, Rom. 8.32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all; how ſhall he not with him freely give us all things? And 1 Cor. 3. 22. All things are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. Another Argument is, That God gives theſe Temporal Things to thoſe he never gave his Chriſt unto, and therefore there is no great matter in them: Yea, to thoſe, which in a little while, are to be thruſt into Hell, *Pſal.*17. 14. Now, if God cloathe and feed his enemies, if (to allude to that, *Luk.*12.28.) he cloathe this Graſs, which to day is in its pride and glory in the Field, and to morrow is caſt into the Oven, into Hell; How much more will he cloathe and provide for you that are Saints?

This God that feeds all the Creatures, is your Father, and a Father that never dies; and therefore you ſhall not be as expoſed Orphans, that are the Children of ſuch a Father. For he hath ſaid, I will never leave you, nor forſake you, Heb.13.3. I have read of a good woman, that in all wants and diſtreſſes, was wont to encourage herſelf with that word, 2 Sam. 22. 47. The Lord liveth. But one time being in a deep diſtreſs, and forgetting that conſolation, one of her little Children came to her, and ſaid, Mother, Why weep ye ſo? What, is God dead now? Which words from a Child, ſhamed her out of her unbelieving fears, and quickly brought her Spirit to reſt. O Saint, whilſt God lives, thou canſt not want what is good for thee.

How ſweet a Life might Chriſtians live, could they but bring their hearts to a full ſubjection to the diſpoſing-Will of God! to be content not only with what he commands and approves, but alſo with what he allots and appoints. It was a ſweet Reply, that a gracious Woman once made upon her Death-bed, to a Friend that asked her, Whether ſhe were more willing to live or die? She anſwer'd, I am pleas'd with what God pleaſeth. Yea, ſaid her Friend, but if God ſhould refer it to you, which would you chuſe? Truly, (ſaith ſhe) if God ſhould refer it to me, I would refer it to him again. Ah bleſt Life, when the Will is ſwallow'd up in the Will of God, and the heart at reſt in his care and love, and pleaſed with all his appointments!

REFLECTION.

I remember my fault this day, may many a gracious Soul ſay. Ah how faithleſs and diſtruſtful have I been notwithſtanding the great ſecurity God hath given to my Faith, both in his Word and Works!

O my Soul, thou haſt greatly ſinned therein, and diſhonoured thy Father! I have been worſe to my Father, than my Children are to me. They trouble not their thoughts with what they ſhall eat or drink, or put on, but truſt to my care and proviſion for that: Yet I cannot truſt my Father, though I have ten thouſand times more reaſon ſo to do, than they have to truſt me, Mat. 7. 21. Surely, unleſs I were jealous of my Father's affection, I could not be ſo dubious of his proviſion for me. Ah, I ſhould rather wonder that I have ſo much, than repine that I have no more. I ſhould rather have been troubled that I have done no more for God, than that I have receiv'd no more from God. I have not proclaimed it to the World by my Converſation, that I have found a ſufficiency in him alone, as the Saints have done, Hab. 3. 17, 18. How have I debaſed the Faithfulneſs and All-ſufficiency of God, and magnified theſe earthly trifles, by my anxiety about them? Had I had more Faith, a light Purſe would not have made ſuch an heavy Heart. Lord, how often haſt thou convinced me of this folly, and put me to the bluſh, when thou haſt confuted my unbelief; ſo that I have reſolved never to diſtruſt thee more, and yet new exigencies renew this corruption? How contradictory alſo hath my Heart and my Prayers been? I pray for them conditionally, and with ſubmiſſion to thy Will; I dare not ſay to thee, I muſt have them; yet this hath been the language of my heart and life. O convince me of this folly!

THE POEM.

Variety of curious Fiſh are caught
Out of the Sea, and to our Tables brought;
We pick the choiceſt bits, and then we ſay,
We are ſufficed; come, now take away.
The Table's voided, you have done; but fain
I would perſwade to have it brought again.
The ſweeteſt bit of all remains behind
Which through your want of skill, you could not find.
A bit for Faith, have you not found it? Then
I have made but half a meal; come taſte agen,
Haſt thou conſidered (O my Soul) that Hand
Which feeds thoſe multitudes in Sea and Land?
A double Mercy in it thou ſhould'ſt ſee;
It fed them firſt, and then with them fed thee.
Food in the Waters we ſhould think were ſcant
For ſuch a multitude, yet none do want.
What numerous flocks of Birds above me fly?
When ſaw I one, through want fall down and die?
They gather what his hand to them doth bring,
Though but a Worm, and at that Feaſt can ſing.
How full a Table doth my Father keep?
Bluſh then, my naughty heart, repent and weep;
How faithleſs and diſtruſtful haſt thou been,
Although his care and love thou oft haſt ſeen?
Thus in a ſingle diſh you have a feaſt,
Your firſt and ſecond Courſe, the laſt the beſt.

CHAP. XIV.

Sea-waters drained through the Earth, are ſweet;
So are th' Afflictions which God's People meet.

OBSERVATION.

THE Waters of the Sea in themſelves, are brackiſh and unpleaſant, yet being exhaled by the Sun, and condenſed into Clouds, they fall down into pleaſant Showers; or if drained through the Earth, their property is thereby altered; and that which was ſo ſalt in the Sea, becomes exceeding ſweet and pleaſant in the Springs. This we find by conſtant experience, the ſweeteſt cryſtal Spring came from the Sea, Eccleſ. 1. 7.

APPLICATION.

Afflictions in themſelves are evil, Amos 2. 6. Very bitter and unpleaſant. See Heb. 12. 11. Yet not morally and intrinſically evil, as ſin is; for if ſo, the holy God would never own it for his own act, as he doth, Mic. 3. 2. but always diſclaimeth ſin, Jam. 1. 3. Beſides, if it were ſo evil, it could in no caſe, or reſpect, be the object of our election and deſire; as in ſome caſes it ought to be, Heb. 11. 25. But it is evil, as it is the fruit of ſin, and grievous unto ſenſe, Heb. 14. 11. But though it be thus brackiſh and unpleaſant in it ſelf, yet paſſing through Chriſt, and the Covenant, it loſes that ungrateful property, and becomes pleaſant in the fruits and effects thereof unto believers, Heb. 12. 11.

Yea, ſuch are the bleſſed fruits thereof, that they are to account it all joy, when they fall into divers afflictions, Jam. 1. 2. David could bleſs God, that he was afflicted; and many a Saint hath done the like. A good Woman once compared her Afflictions to her Children: For (ſaith ſhe) they put me in pain in bearing them; yet as I know not which child, ſo neither which affliction I could be without.

Sometimes the Lord ſanctifies affliction to diſcover the corruption that is in the heart, Deut. 8. 2. It is a furnace to ſhew the droſs. Ah! when a ſharp Affliction comes, then the pride, impatiency, and unbelief of the heart appears. Matura vexata prodit ſeipſam. When the Water is ſtirred, then the Mud and filthy Sediment that lay at the bottom riſes. Little (ſaith the afflicted Soul) did I think, there had been in me that pride, ſelf-love, diſtruſt of God, carnal fear, and unbelief, as I now find. O where is my Patience, my Faith, my Glory in tribulation? I could not have imagined the ſight of Death would have ſo appalled me, the loſs of outward things ſo have pierced me. Now what a bleſſed thing is this, to have the heart thus diſcovered?

Again: Sanctified Afflictions diſcover the emptineſs and vanity of the Creature. Now the Lord hath ſtained its pride, and vailed its tempting ſplendor, by this or that affliction; and the Soul ſees what an empty, ſhallow, deceitful thing it is. The World (as one hath truly obſerved) is then only great in our eyes, when we are full of ſenſe and ſelf: But now Affliction makes us more ſpiritual, and then it is nothing. It drives them nearer to God, makes them ſee the neceſſity of the Life of Faith, with multitudes of other benefits.

But yet theſe ſweet fruits of Affliction do not naturally, and of their own accord, ſpring from it: No, we may as well look for Grapes from Thorns, or Figs from Thiſtles, as for ſuch Fruits from Affliction, till Chriſt's ſanctifying Hand and Art have paſs'd upon them.

The reaſon why they become thus ſweet and pleaſant (as I noted before) is, becauſe they run now into another channel; Jeſus Chriſt hath removed them from Mount Ebal to Gerezim; they are no more the effects of vindictive Wrath, but paternal Chaſtiſement. And (as Mr. Caſe well notes) A teaching affliction is to the Saints, the reſult of all the Offices of Jeſus Chriſt. As a King, he chaſtens; as a Prophet, he teacheth, viz. by chaſtening; and as a Prieſt, he hath purchaſed this grace of the Father, that the dry Rod might bloſſom, and bear fruit. Behold then, a ſanctified fied affliction is a Cup, whereinto Jeſus Chriſt hath wrung and preſs'd the juice and virtue of all his Mediatory-Offices. Surely, that muſt be a Cup of generous, Royal Wine, like that in the Supper, a Cup of Bleſſing to the People of God.

REFLECTION.

Hence may the unſanctified Soul draw matter of fear and trouble, even from its unſanctified troubles. And thus it may reflect upon it ſelf; O my Soul, what good haſt thou gotten by all, or any of thy afflictions? God's Rod hath been dumb to thee, or thou deaf to it. I have not learned one holy Inſtruction from it: My troubles have left me the ſame, or worſe than they found me; my Heart was proud, earthly, and vain before, and ſo it remains ſtill: They have not purged out, but only given vent to the pride, murmur, and atheiſm of my heart. I have been in my afflictions, as that wicked Ahaz was in his, 2 Chron. 28.22. Who in the midſt of his diſtreſs, yet treſpaſſed more and more againſt the Lord. When I have been in ſtorms at Sea, or troubles at home, my Soul within me hath been as a raging Sea, caſting up mire and dirt. Surely this Rod is not the Rod of God's Children. I have proved but droſs in the Furnace, and I fear the Lord will put me away as droſs, as he threatens to do by the wicked, Pſal. 119. 119.

Hence alſo ſhould gracious Souls draw much encouragement and comfort amidſt all their troubles. O theſe are the fruits of God's fatherly love to me! Why ſhould I fear in the day of evil? or tremble any more at affliction? though they ſeem as a Serpent at a diſtance, yet are they a Rod in hand. O bleſſed be that skilful and gracious hand, that makes the Rod, the dry Rod to bloſſom, and bear ſuch precious fruit.

Lord! what a myſtery of love lies in this diſpenſation! That ſin which firſt brought afflictions into the world, is now it ſelf carried out of the world by affliction, Rom. 5. 12. Iſa. 7. 9. O what can fruſtrate my Salvation, when thoſe very things that ſeem moſt to oppoſe it, are made ſubſervient to it; and contrary to their own nature do promote and further it?

THE POEM.

'Tis ſtrange to hear what different cenſures fall
Upon the ſame affliction; ſome do call
Their troubles ſweet, ſome bitter; others meet
Them both mid-way, and call them bitter ſweet.
But here's the queſtion ſtill, I fain would ſee,
Why ſweet to him, and bitter unto me?
Thou drink'ſt them Dregs and all, but others find
Their troubles ſweet, becauſe to them refin'd,
And ſanctifi'd; which difference is beſt
By ſuch apt Similies as theſe expreſt:
From Salt and Brackiſh Seas Fumes riſe and fly,
Which into Clouds condens'd, obſcure the Sky;
Their property there alter'd in few hours
Thoſe brackiſh Fumes fall down in pleaſant ſhowers:
Or as the dregs of Wine and Beer diſtill'd
By Limbeck, with ingredients, doth yield
A Cordial water, though the Lees were bitter,
From whence the Chymiſt did extract ſuch Liquor.
Then marvel not that one can kiſs that Rod,
Which makes another to blaſpheme his God.
get your troubles ſweet'ned and refin'd,
Or elſe they'll leave bitter effects behind.
Saints troubles are a Cord, let down by love,

CHAP. XV.

The Seas within their bounds the Lord contains;
He alſo Men and Devils holds in Chains.

OBSERVATION.

IT is a wonderful work of God, to limit and bound ſuch a vaſt and furious Creature, as the Sea; which according to the judgment of many Learned Men, is higher than the Earth; and that it hath a propenſion to overflow it, is evident, both from its nature and motion; were it not, that the great God had laid his Law upon it. And this is a work wherein the Lord glories, and will be admired, Pſal. 104. 9. Thou haſt ſet a bound that they may not paſs over, that they turn not again to cover the Earth. Which it's clear they would do, were they not thus limited. So Job 38. 8, 10, 11. Who ſhut up the Seas with doors, when it break forth, as if it had iſſued out of the Womb? I brake up for it my decreed place, and ſet bars and doors, and ſaid, Hitherto ſhalt thou come, but no further; and here ſhall thy proud Waves be ſtaid.

APPLICATION.

And no leſs is the glorious Power and Mercy of God diſcovered in bridling the rage and fury of Satan and his Inſtruments, that they break not in upon the Inheritance of the Lord, and deſtroy it. Surely, the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, and the remainder of wrath thou ſhalt reſtrain, Pſal. 76. 10. By which it is more than hinted, that there is a World of Rage and Malice in the hearts of wicked men, which fain would, but cannot vent it ſelf, becauſe the Lord reſtrains, or as the Hebrew, Girds it up. Satan is the envious one, and his rage is great againſt the People of God, Rev. 12. 12. But God holds him and all his Inſtruments in a Chain of Providence; and it is well for God's People that it is ſo.

They are limited as the Sea, and ſo the Lord in a providential way ſpeaks to them, Hitherto ſhall you go, and no further. Sometimes he ties them up ſo ſhort, that they cannot touch his people, though they have the greateſt opportunities and advantages, Pſal. 105. 12, 13, 14, 15. When they were but a few men in number, yea, very few, and ſtrangers in it; when they went from one Nation to another, from one Kingdom to another people: He ſuffered no man to do them wrong; yea, he reproved Kings for their ſakes, ſaying, Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no harm. And ſometimes he permits them to touch and trouble his People, but then ſets bounds and limits to them, beyond which they muſt not paſs. That is a pregnant Text to this purpoſe, Revel. 2. 10. Behold, the Devil ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon, that you may be tried, and ye ſhall have tribulation ten days.

Here are four remarkable Limitations upon Satan and his Agents, in reference to the People of God: A limitation as to the Perſons, not all, but ſome: A limitation of the Puniſhment, a Priſon, not a Grave, not Hell: A limitation upon them as to the end; for trial, not ruin: And laſtly, as to the Duration; not as long as they pleaſe, but ten days.

REFLECTION.

O my Soul, what Marrow and Fatneſs, Comfort and Conſolation, may'ſt thou ſuck from the Breaſt of this Truth, in the darkeſt day of trouble? Thou ſeeſt how the flowing Sea drives to over-whelm the Earth. Who has arreſted it in its courſe, and ſtopt its violence! Who has confin'd it to its place? Certainly none other but the Lord. When I ſee it threaten the ſhore with its proud, furious, and inſulting Waves, I wonder it doth not ſwallow up all: but I ſee it no ſooner touch the Sands, which God hath made its bounds, but it retires, and as it were with a kind of ſubmiſſion, reſpects thoſe limits which God hath ſet it.

Thus the fierceſt Element is repreſt by the feebleſt things: Thou ſeeſt alſo, how full of wrath and fury wicked men are, how they rage like the troubled Sea, and threaten to over-whelm *thee, and all the Lords's Inheritance: and then the floods of ungodly men make thee afraid, yet are they reſtrained by an inviſible gracious hand, that they cannot execute their purpoſe, nor perform their enterprize. How full of Devils and devillized Men is this lower World? Yet in the midſt of them all haſt thou hitherto been preſerved. O my Soul, admire and adore that glorious power of God, by which thou art kept unto Salvation. Is not the preſervation of a Saint in the midſt of ſuch hoſts of enemies, as great a Miracle, though not ſo ſenſible, as the preſervation of thoſe three noble Jews in the midſt of the fiery Furnace, or Daniel in the Den of Lions? For there is as ſtrong a propenſion in Satan, and wicked men, to deſtroy the Saints; as in the fire to burn, or a Lion to devour. O then let me chearfully addreſs my ſelf to the faithful diſcharge of my duty, and ſtand no longer in a ſlaviſh fear of creatures, who can have no power againſt me, but what is given them from above, John 19. 11. And no more ſhall be given than ſhall turn to the glory of God, Pſal. 76. 10. and the advantage of my Soul, Rom. 8. 28.

* See the Turks Letter to the Emperor of Germany, lately publiſhed by Authority.

THE POEM.

This World's a Foreſt, where from day to day,
Bears, Wolves, and Lions range and ſeek their prey;
Amidſt them all poor harmleſs Lambs are fed,
And by their very Dens in ſafety led.
They roar upon us, but are held in Chains:
Our Shepherd is their Keeper, he maintains
Our Lot. Why then ſhould we ſo trembling ſtand?
We meet them, true, but in their Keeper's hand.
He that to raging Seas ſuch Bounds hath put,
The mouths of ravenous Beaſts can alſo ſhut.
Sleep in the Woods, poor Lambs your ſelves repoſe
Upon his Care, whoſe Eyes do never cloſe.
If unbelief in you don't looſe their chain,
Fear not their ſtrugling, that's but all in vain.
If God can check the Waves by ſmalleſt Sand,
A Twined Thread may hold theſe in his hand.
Shun Sin, keep cloſe to Chriſt; for other evils
You need not fear, tho' compaſt round with Devils.

CHAP. XVI.

To Sea without a Compaſs none dare go;
Our Courſe without the Word is even ſo.

OBSERVATION.

OF how great uſe and neceſſity is the Compaſs to Seamen? Though they can coaſt a little way by the Shore, yet they dare not venture far into the Ocean without it. It's their Guide, and directs and ſhapes their Courſe for them: And if by the violence of Wind and Weather they be driven beſide their due Courſe, yet by the help of this, they are reduced and brought to Rights again. It is wonderful to conſider, how by the help of this Guide they can run in a direct Line many hundred Leagues, and at laſt fall right with the ſmalleſt Iſland; which is in the Ocean, comparatively, but as the head of a ſmall Pin upon a Table.

APPLICATION.

What the Compaſs, and all other Mathematical Inſtruments are to the Navigator, that and much more is the Word of God to us in our courſe to Heaven. This is our Compaſs to ſteer our courſe by, and it is truly touched; he that orders his converſation by it, ſhall ſafely arrive in Heaven at laſt. Gal. 6. 16. As many as walk according to this rule, Peace be on them, and mercy.

This Word is as neceſſary to us in our way to Glory, as a Lamp or Lanthorn is in a dark night, Pſal. 119. 105. This is a light ſhining in a dark place, till the day dawn, and the day-ſtar ariſe in our hearts, 2 Pet. 1. 19. If any that profeſs to know it, and own it as a Rule, miſs Heaven at laſt, let them not blame the Word for miſguiding them, but their own negligent and deceitful hearts, that ſhuffle in and out, and ſhape not their courſe and converſation according to its preſcriptions.

What blame can you lay upon the Compaſs, if you ſteer not exactly by it? How many are there, that neglecting this Rule, will coaſt it to Heaven by their own Reaſon? No wonder ſuch fall ſhort and periſh in the way. This is a faithful Guide, and brings all that follow it to a bleſſed end; Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel, and afterwards receive me to glory, Pſal. 73. 24. The whole hundredth and nineteenth Pſalm is ſpent in commendation of its tranſcendent excellency and uſefulneſs. Luther profeſt, that he prized it ſo highly, that he would not take the whole World in exchange for one Leaf of it. Lay but this Rule before you, and walk accurately by it, and you cannot be out of your way to Heaven, Pſal. 119. 30. I have choſen the way of truth, (or the true way;) thy Judgments have I laid before me. Some indeed have opened their detracting blaſphemous mouths againſt it; as Julian, that curſed Apoſtate, who feared not to ſay, There was as good matter in Phocillides as in Solomon, in Pindarus his Odes, as in David's Pſalms.

And the Papiſts generally ſlight it, making it a lame imperfect Rule; yea, making their own Traditions the Touchſtone of Doctrines, and Foundation of Faith. Montanus tells us, that although the Apoſtle would have Sermons and Service celebrated in a known Tongue, yet the Church, for very good cauſe, hath otherwiſe order'd it. Gilford called it, The Mother of Hereſies. Bonner's Chaplain judged it worthy to be burnt as a ſtrange Doctrine. They ſet up their Inventions above it, and frequently come in with a Non obſtante againſt Chriſt's Inſtitutions. And thus do they make it void, or, as the word ἀναλείλοντες ſignifies, Matth. 15. 6. unlord it, and take away its authority as a Rule. But thoſe that have thus ſlighted it, and followed the by-paths unto which their corrupt Hearts have led them, they take not hold of the paths of Life, and are now in the depths of Hell. All other Lights, to which men pretend, in the neglect of this, are but falſe fires, that will lead Men into the Pits and Bogs of Deſtruction at laſt.

REFLECTION.

And is thy Word a Compaſs, to direct my courſe to Glory? O where am I then like to arrive at laſt, that in all my courſe have neglected it, and ſteered according to the counſel of my own heart! Lord, I have not made thy Word the Man of my counſel, but conſulted with fleſh and blood; I have not enquired at this Oracle, nor ſtudied it, and made it the guide of my way, but walked after the ſight of my eyes, and the luſt of my heart. Whither Lord, can I come at laſt, but to Hell, after this rate and reckoning? Some have ſlighted thy Word profeſſedly, and I have ſlighted it practically. I have a poor Soul embarqued for Eternity, it is now floating on a dangerous Ocean, Rocks and Sands on every ſide, and I go adrift before every Wind of Temptation, and know not where I am. Ah Lord, convince me of the danger of this condition. O convince me of my Ignorance in thy Word, and the fatal conſequence and iſſue thereof. Lord, let me now reſolve to ſtudy, prize, and obey it; hide it in my heart, that I may not ſin againſt it. Open my underſtanding, that I may underſtand the Scriptures: Open my heart to entertain it in love. O thou that haſt been ſo gracious to give a perfect Rule, give me alſo a perfect heart to walk by that Rule to glory!

THE POEM.

This World's a Sea, wherein a numerous Fleet
Of Ships are under ſail. Here you ſhall meet
Of every Rate and Size; Frigats, Galleons,
The nimble Ketches, and ſmall Pickeroons:
Some bound to this Port, ſome where Winds and Weather
Will drive them, they are bound they know not whither.
Some ſteer away for Heaven, ſome for Hell;
To which ſome ſteer, themſelves can hardly tell.
The Winds do ſhape their courſe, which though it blow
From any Point, before it they muſt go.
They are directed by the Wind and Tide,
That have no Compaſs to direct and guide:
For want of this, muſt run themſelves a-ground,
Brave Ships are caſt away, poor Souls are drown'd.
Thy Word our Compaſs is, to guide our way
To Glory; it reduces ſuch as ſtray.
Lord, let thy Word dwell richly in my heart,

CHAP. XVII.

Look as the Sea by turns doth ebb and flow,
So their Eſtates, that uſe it, come and go.

OBSERVATION.

THE Sea hath its alternate Courſe and Motion, its Ebbings and Flowings: No ſooner is it igh-water, but it begins to Ebb again, and leave e Shore naked and dry, which but a little before it vered and over-flowed. And as its Tides, ſo alſo s Waves are the Emblem of Inconſtancy, ſtill roul- g and tumbling, this way and that, never fixt and iet. Inſtabilis unda: As fickle as a Wave, is common to a Proverb. See Jam. 1. 6. He that wavereth, is like a Wave of the Sea, driven with Winds, and toſſed. So Iſa. 57. 20. It cannot reſt.

APPLICATION.

Thus mutable and inconſtant are all outward things, there is no depending on them: Nothing of any ſubſtance, or any ſolid conſiſtence in them, 1 Cor. 7. 31. The faſhion of this world paſſeth away. It is an high point of folly to depend upon ſuch vanities, Prov. 23. 5. Why wilt thou ſet, (or, as it is in the Hebrew) cauſe thine eyes to fly upon that which is no? For riches certainly make themſelves wings, and fly away, as an Eagle towards Heaven. In flying to us (ſaith Auguſtine) they have alas, vix quidem paſſerinas, ſcarce a Sparrow's wings; but in flying from us, wings as an Eagle. And thoſe Wings they are ſaid to make to themſelves, (i. e.) the cauſe of its tranſitorineſs is in it ſelf; the Creature is ſubjected to Vanity by ſin: they are ſweet flowers, but withered preſently, Jam. 1. 10. As the flower of the graſs, ſo ſhall the rich man fade away. The man is like the ſtalk or graſs, his riches are the flower of the graſs; his glory and outward beauty, the ſtalk is ſoon withered, but the flower much ſooner. This is either withered upon, or blown off from it, while the ſtalk abides. Many a man out-lives his eſtate and honour, and ſtands in the world as a bare dry ſtalk in the field, whoſe flower, beauty, and bravery is gone: One puff of wind blows it away, one churliſh eaſterly blaſt ſhrivels it up, 1 Pet. 4. 24.

How mad a thing is it then, for any man to be lifted up in pride, upon ſuch a vanity as this is; to build ſo lofty and over-jetting Roof upon ſuch a feeble, tottering Foundation? We have ſeen Meadows full of ſuch curious flowers, mown down and withered, men of great Eſtates impoveriſhed ſuddenly: And when, like a Meadow that is mown, they have begun to recover themſelves again (as the phraſe is) the Lord hath ſent Graſhoppers in the beginning of the ſhooting up of the latter growth, Amos 7. 1. Juſt as the Graſhoppers and other Creatures devour the ſecond tender Herbage, as ſoon as the Field begins to recover its verdure: So men, after they have been denuded and blaſted by Providence, they begin after a while to flouriſh again, but then comes ſome new affliction, and blaſts all. None have more frequent experience of this, than you that are Merchants and Seamen, whoſe eſtates are floating: and yet ſuch as have had the higheſt ſecurity in the eye of Reaſon, have notwithſtanding experienc'd the vanity of theſe things. Henry the fourth, a potent Prince, was reduced to ſuch a low ebb, that he petitioned for a Prebends place in the Church of Spire. Gallimer, King of the Vandals, was brought ſo low, that he ſent to his Friend for a Spunge, a Loaf of Bread, and an Harp: a Spunge to dry up his tears, a Loaf of bread to maintain his life, and an Harp to ſolace himſelf in his miſery. The ſtory of Belliſarius is very affecting: He was a man famous in his time, General of an Army, yet having his eyes put out, and ſtripped of all earthly comforts, was led about, crying, Date abolum Belliſario, Give one penny to poor Belliſarius. Inſtances in Hiſtory of this kind are infinite. Men of the greateſt eſtates and honours, have nevertheleſs become the very Ludibria Fortunæ, as one ſpeaks, The very ſcorn of Fortune.

Yea, and not only wicked men, that have gotten their Eſtates by rapine and oppreſſion, have lived to ſee them thus ſcattered by Providence: But ſometimes godly Men have had their Eſtates, how juſtly ſoever acquired, thus ſcattered by Providence alſo.

Who ever had an eſtate better gotten, better bottomed, or better managed, than Job? yet all was overthrown and ſwept away in a moment: though in mercy to him, as the iſſue demonſtrated.

Oh then! what a vanity is it to ſet the heart and let out the affections on them! You can never depend too much upon God, nor too little upon the creature, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high minded and truſt in uncertain riches.

REFLECTION.

Are all earthly things thus tranſitory and vain? Then what a reproach and ſhame is it to me, that the men of this world ſhould be more induſtrious and eager in the proſecution of ſuch vanities, then I am to enrich my Soul with ſolid and everlaſting Treaſure? O that ever a ſenſual luſt ſhould be more operative in them than the love of God in me! O my Soul, thou doſt not lay out thy ſtrength and earneſtneſs for Heaven, with any proportion to what they do for the World. I have indeed higher Motives, and a ſurer Reward than they: But as I have an advantage above them herein, ſo have they an advantage above me in the ſtrength and entireneſs of the principle by which they are acted. What they do for the World, they do it with all their might; they have no contrary principle to oppoſe them; their thoughts, ſtrength, and affection, is entirely carried in one Channel: But I find a Law in my Members warring againſt the Law of my Mind; I muſt ſtrive through a thouſand Difficulties and Contradictions, to the diſcharge of a Duty. O my God! Shall not my heart be more enlarged in Zeal, Love, and Delight in thee, than theirs are after their Luſts? O let me once find it ſo.

Again, is the Creature ſo vain and unſtable? then why are my Affections ſo hot and eager after it? And why am I ſo apt to dote upon its beauty, eſpecially when God is ſtaining all its pride and glory! Jer. 45. 5, 6. Surely it is unbecoming the ſpirit of a Chriſtian at any time, but at ſuch a time we may ſay of it, as Huſhai of Ahitophel's Counſel, It is not good at this time.

O that my Spirit were raiſed above them, and my converſation more in Heaven! O that like that Angel, Rev. 10. 1, 2. which came down from Heaven and ſet one foot upon the Sea, and another upon the Earth, having a Crown upon his head, ſo I might ſet one foot upon all the cares, fears, and terrors of the World, and another upon all the tempting ſplendor and glory of the World; treading both under foot in the duſt, and crowning my ſelf with nothing but ſpiritual excellencies and glory!

THE POEM.

Judge in thy ſelf (O Chriſtian) is it meet
To ſet thy heart on what Beaſts ſet their feet?
'Tis no Hyperbole, if you be told,
You dig for Droſs with Mattocks made of Gold.
Affections are too coſtly to beſtow
Upon the fair-fac'd Nothings here below.
The Eagle ſcorns to fall down from on high
(The Proverb ſaith) to catch the ſilly Flie.
And can a Chriſtian leave the Face of God,
T' embrace the Earth, or dote upon a Clod?
Can earthly Things thy heart ſo ſtrangely move,
To tempt it down from the Delights above;
And now to court the World at ſuch a time
When God is laying Judgment to the Line?
It's juſt like him that doth his Cabbin ſweep
And trim, when all is ſinking in the Deep:
Or like the ſilly Bird, that to her Neſt
Doth carry ſtraws, and never is at reſt,
Till it be feather'd well, but doth not ſee
The Axe beneath that's hewing down the Tree.
If on a Thorn thy heart it ſelf repoſe
With ſuch delight, what if it were a Roſe?
Admire, O Saint, the Wiſdom of thy God,
Who of the ſelf-ſame Tree doth make a Rod,
Leſt thou ſhouldſt ſurfeit on forbidden Fruit,
And live not like a Saint, but like a Brute.

CHAP. XVIII.

Like hungry Lions, Waves for Sinners gape:
Leave then your Sins behind, if you'll eſcape.

OBSERVATION.

THE Waves of the Sea are ſometimes raiſed by God's Commiſſion, to be Executioners of his Threatnings upon ſinners. When Jonah fled from the preſence of the Lord to Tarſhiſh, the Text ſaith, The Lord ſent out a great Wind into the Sea, and there was a mighty Tempeſt, ſo that the Ship was like to be broken, Joh. 1. 4. Theſe were God's Bailiffs, to arreſt the Run-away Prophet. And Pſal. 148. 8. The ſtormy winds are ſaid to fulfil his word; not only his word of Command, in riſing when God bids them, but his word of threatning alſo. And hence it is called a deſtroying wind, Jer. 51. 1. and a ſtormy wind in God's fury, Ezek. 13. 13.

APPLICATION.

If theſe be the Executioners of the Lord's threatnings, how ſad then is their condition that put forth to Sea under the guilt of all their ſins? O, if God ſhould commiſſionate the Winds to go after and arreſt thee for all thou oweſt him, where art thou then? How dare you put forth under the power of a Divine threat, before all be cleared betwixt God and thee? Sins in Scripture are called debts, Mat. 6. 12. They are debts to God; not that we owe them to him, or ought to ſin, but Metonymically, becauſe they render the Sinner obnoxious to God's Judgments, even as pecuniary debts oblige him that hath not wherewith to pay, to ſuffer puniſhment. All ſinners muſt undergo the Curſe, either in their own perſon, according to the expreſs letter of the Law, Gen. 2. 17. Gal. 3. 10. or their ſurety, according to the tacite intent of the Law, manifeſted to be the mind of the Lawgiver, Gen. 3. 15. Gal. 3. 13, 14.

Now he that by Faith hath Intereſt in his Surety, hath his Diſcharge, his Quietus eſt, ſealed in the Blood of Chriſt; all Proceſs at Law, or from the Law, is ſtopt, Rom. 8. 1. But if thou be an impenitent, perſiſting ſinner, thy debt remains upon thine own ſcore. And be ſure thy ſin will find thee out, where-ever thou goeſt, Numb. 32. 23. (i. e.) God's revenging hand for ſin will be upon thee: Thou may'ſt loſe the ſight and memory of thy ſin, but they loſe not the ſight of thee; they follow after, as the Hound doth the fleeting game upon the ſcent, till they have fetcht thee up: And then conſider, How fearful a thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God, Heb. 10. 31. How ſoon may a ſtorm arreſt, and bring thee before the Bar of God?

REFLECTION.

O my Soul, what a caſe art thou in, if this be ſo? Are not all thy ſins yet upon thine own ſcore? Haſt not thou made light of Chriſt, and that precious Blood of his, and hitherto perſiſted in thy Rebellion againſt him? And what can the iſſue of this be at laſt, but ruine? There is abundant mercy indeed for returning ſinners; but the Goſpel ſpeaks of none for perſiſting and impenitent ſinners. And though many who are going on in their ſins are overtaken by Grace, yet there is no Grace promiſed to ſuch as go on in ſin. O, if God ſhould arreſt me by the next Storm, and call me to an account for all that I owe him, I muſt then lie in the Priſon of Hell to all Eternity; for I can never pay the debt; nay, all the Angels in Heaven cannot ſatisfy for it. Being Chriſtleſs, I am under all the Curſes in the Book of God; a Child of Hagar. Lord, pity and ſpare me a little longer! O diſcover thy Chriſt unto me, and give me Faith in his Blood, and then thou art fully ſatisfied at once, and I diſcharged for ever. O require not the debt at my hand, for then thou wilt never be ſatisfied, nor I acquitted. What profit, Lord, is there in my Blood! O my ſoul, make haſt to this Chriſt, thy Refuge-City; thou knoweſt not how ſoon the avenger of Blood may overtake thee.

THE POEM.

Thy ſins are debts: God puts them to account:
Canſt tell, poor wretch, to what thy debts amount?
Thou fill'ſt the treaſure of thy ſins each hour.
Into his Vials God doth alſo pour
Proportionable wrath: Thou ſeeſt it not;
But yet aſſure thy ſelf, there's drop for drop.
For every Sand of Patience running out,
A drop of Wrath runs in. Soul, look about.
God's Treaſures almoſt full, as well as thine:
When both are full, O then the dreadful time
Of Reckoning comes; thou ſhalt not gain a day
Of patience more, but then there haſtes away
Heaven's Purſevant, who comes upon the wing
With his Commiſſion ſeal'd, to take and bring.
Do'ſt ſtill reject Chriſts tenders? Well, next ſtorm
May be the Bailiff ordered to perform
This dreadful office. O then reſtleſs be,
Till God in Chriſt be reconcil'd to thee.
The Sum is great, but if a Chriſt thou get,
Fear not, a Prince can pay a Beggar's debt.
Now if the Storm ſhould riſe, thou need not fear;
Thou art, but the Delinquent is not there.
A pardoned Soul to Sea may boldly go:
He fears not Bailiffs, that doth nothing owe.

CHAP. XIX.

To ſave the Ship, rich Lading's caſt away.
Thy Soul is Shipwrackt if thy Luſts do ſtay.

OBSERVATION.

N Storms and Diſtreſſes at Sea, the Richeſt Commodities are caſt over-board; they ſtand not on it, when Life and all is in jeopardy and ha-rd. Jonah 1. 5. The Mariners caſt forth the ares that were in the Ship into the Sea, to light- it. And Act. 27. 18, 19. they caſt out the very cklings of the Ship. How highly ſoever Men prize ch Commodities, yet reaſon tells them, It were tter theſe ſhould periſh, than Life. Satan himſelf could ſay, Job 1. Skin for skin, and all that a Man hath, will he give for his Life.

APPLICATION.

And ſurely, it is every way as highly reaſonable, that Men ſhould mortifie, caſt out, and cut off their deareſt Luſts, rather than their Immortal Souls ſhould ſink and periſh in the Storm of God's wrath. Life, indeed, is a precious Treaſure, and highly valued by Men: You know what Solomon ſaith, Eccleſ. 9. 4. That a Living Dog is better than a Dead Lion. And we find Men willing to part with their Eſtates, Limbs, or any outward Comfort, for the preſervation of it. The Woman in the Goſpel ſpent all ſhe had on the Phyſicians for her Health, a degree below Life. Some Men indeed do much over value their Lives, and part with Chriſt and Peace of Conſcience for it; but he that thus ſaves it, ſhall loſe it. Now if Life be ſo much worth, What then is the Soul worth? Alas! Life is but a vapour, which apreareth for a little while, and then vaniſhetk away, Jam. 4. 14.

Life indeed is more worth than all the World, but my Soul is more worth than Ten thouſand Lives. Nature teacheth you to value the firſt ſo high, and Grace ſhould teach you to value the ſecond much higher, Mat. 19. 26. Now here is the caſe: Either you muſt part with your Sins, or with your Souls; if theſe be not caſt out, both muſt ſink together. If ye live after the fleſh, ye muſt die, Rom. 8. 13. God ſaith to you in this caſe, as to Ahab, when he ſpared Benhadad, 1 King. 20. 40. Becauſe thou haſt let go a Sin, which God hath appointed to deſtruction, therefore thy Life ſhall go for his Life. Guilt will raiſe a Storm of Wrath, as Jonah did, if not caſt out.

REFLECTION.

And muſt Sin or the Soul periſh? Muſt my Life, yea, my Eternal Life go for it, if I ſpare it? O then let me not be cruel to mine own Soul, in ſparing my Sin; O my Soul, this fooliſh pity, and cruel Indulgence will be thy ruine: If I ſpare it, God hath ſaid, He will not ſpare me, Deut. 26. 20. It is true, the pains of Mortification are ſharp, but yet it's eaſier than the pains of Hell. To cut off a right hand, or pluck out a right eye, is hard; but to have my Soul cut off eternally from God, is harder. Is it as eaſie (O my Soul!) to burn for them in Hell, as to Mortifie them on Earth? Surely, it is profitable for me, that one member periſh, rather than that all be caſt into Hell, Mat. 5. 24. I ſee the Merchant willing to part with rich Wares, if embarqued with them in a Storm: And thoſe that have Gangreen'd Legs or Arms, willingly ſtretch them out to be cut off, to preſerve Life: And ſhall I be willing to endure no difficulties for my Soul? Chriſt reckon'd Souls wrath his Blood; And is it not worth my Self-denial? Lord, let me not warm a Snake in my Boſom, that will at laſt ſting me to the heart.

THE POEM.

Thy Soul's the Ship, its Lading is its Luſts,
God's Judgments, ſtormy Winds and dang'rous guſts;
Conſcience the Maſter; but the ſtubborn Will Goes Supra Cargo, and doth keep the Bill.
Affections are the Men, the Winds do riſe,
The Storm increaſes: Conſcience gives Advice
To throw thoſe Luſts o're-board, and ſo to eaſe
The Veſſel, which elſe cannot keep the Seas.
The Will oppoſes, and th' Affections ſay,
The Maſter's Counſel they will not obey.

The caſe is dangerous, that no man can doubt,
Who ſees the ſtorm within, and that without.
Luſts and Affections cannot part, no, rather,
They are reſolv'd to ſwim or ſink together.
Conſcience ſtill ſtrives, but they cannot abide
That it, or Reaſon ſhould the Caſe decide.
Luſt knows what Reaſon in like caſes ſtill
Determines well: Then chuſe ye whom ye will.
Shall's make the Devil Judge? This caſe has been
Before him, and he judg'd, That ſkin for ſkin,
And all men have, they'll part with for their life.
Then how unreaſonable is this ſtrife?
They that their ſins do with their perſons ſhip,
Do for their Souls prepare a dreadful whip.

---

CHAP. XX.

Chriſt with a word can ſurging Waves appeaſe;
His Voice a troubled Soul can quickly eaſe.

OBSERVATION.

When the Sea works, and is tempeſtuous, it is not in the power of any Creature to appeaſe it. When the Egyptians would by their Hieroglyphicks expreſs an Impoſſibility, they did it by the Picture of a Man treading upon the Waves. It is ſtoried of Canute, an ancient Daniſh King, That when a mighty ſtorm of Flattery aroſe upon him, he appeaſed it by ſhewing that he could not appeaſe the Sea: But one of his Courtiers told him, as he rode near the Sea-ſide, That he was Lord of the Sea, as well as Land. Well, ſaid the King, we ſhall ſee that by and by: and ſo went to the Water-ſide, and with a loud Voice cried, O ye Seas and Waves, come no further, touch not my feet. But the Sea came up, notwithſtanding that charge, and confuted the flattery. But now Jeſus Chriſt hath the command of them indeed: It is ſaid of him, Mat. 8. 26. That he rebuked them. And Mark 4. 38. He quiets them with a word, Peace, be ſtill: as one would huſh a Child, and it obeyed him.

APPLICATION.

Conſcience, when awakened by the terrors of the Lord, is like a raging tempeſtuous Sea; ſo it works, ſo it roars; and it is not in the power of all the Creatures to huſh or quiet it. Spiritual Terrors, as well as ſpiritual Conſolations, are not known till felt. O when the Arrows of the Almighty are ſhot into the Spirit, and the Terrors of God ſet themſelves in array againſt the Soul; when the Venom of thoſe Arrows drink up the Spirits, and thoſe Armies of Terrors charge violently and ſucceſſively upon it, as Job 6. 4. What Creature then is able to ſtand before them! Even God's own dear Children have felt ſuch Terrors, as have diſtracted them, Pſal. 81. 15. Conſcience is the ſeat of Guilt. It is like a Burning-glaſs, ſo it contracts the Beams of the Threatnings, twiſts them together, and reflects them on the Soul, until it ſmoke, ſcorch and flame. If the wrath of a King be like the roaring of a Lion, then what is the Almighty's wrath! which is burning wrath, Job 19. 11. Tearing wrath, Pſal. 50. 22. Surprizing wrath, Job 20. 23. And abiding wrath, Job 3. 36.

In this caſe no Creature can relieve, all are Phyſicians of no value; ſome under theſe terrors, have thought Hell more tolerable, and by a violent hand have thruſt themſelves out of the World into it, to avoid theſe gnawings; Yet Jeſus Chriſt can quickly calm theſe myſtical Waves alſo, and huſh them with a word; yea, he is the Phyſician, and no other. It is the ſprinkling of his Blood, which, like a cooling Fomentation, allays thoſe heats within: That Blood of ſprinkling ſpeaks Peace, when all other have practiſed upon the Soul to no purpoſe; and the reaſon is, becauſe he is a Perſon in whom God and Man, Juſtice and Mercy meet, and kiſs each other, Eph. 2. 14. And hence Faith fetches in peace to the Soul, Rom. 5. 1.

REFLECTION.

Can none appeaſe a troubled Conſcience, but Chriſt? Then learn, O my Soul, to underſtand, and daily more and more to ſavour that glorious Name, even Jeſus, that delivers not only from the wrath to come, but that which is felt here alſo. O if the foretaſte of Hell be ſo intolerable, if a few drops let fall on the Conſcience in this life, be ſo ſcalding and inſufferable; what is it to have all the Vials poured out to Eternity, when there ſhall be nothing to divert, mitigate, or allay it?

Here men have ſomewhat to abate thoſe Terrors, ſome hopes of Mercy, at leaſt a poſſibility; but there is none. O my Soul! how art thou loaded with Guilt! And what a Magormiſſabib wouldſt thou be, ſhould God rouze that ſleepy Lion in thy boſom! My condition is not at all the better, becauſe my Conſcience is quiet. Ah, the day is coming, when it muſt awake, and will lighten and thunder terribly within me, if I get not into Chriſt the ſooner. O Lord, who knows the power of thy wrath? O let me not carry this guilt out of the World with me, to maintain thoſe everlaſting flames? let me give no ſleep to mine eyes, nor ſlumber to my eye-lids, till I feel the comfort of that Blood of Sprinkling, which alone ſpeaketh Peace.

THE POEM.

Among the dreadful works of God, I find
No Metaphors to paint a troubled Mind.
I think on this, now that, and yet will neither
Come fully up, though all be put together.
'Tis like the raging Sea, that caſts up mire.
Or like to Etna, breathing ſmoke and fire;
Or like a rouzed Lion fierce and fell,
Or like thoſe Furies that do howl in Hell.
O Conſcience! Who can ſtand before thy power,
Endure thy gripes and twinges but an hour?
Stone, Gout, Strapado, Racks, whatever is Dreadful to Senſe, is but a toy to this.
No Pleaſures, Riches, Honours, Friends can tell
How to give eaſe: in this 'tis like to Hell.
Call for the pleaſant Tymbrel, Lute, and Harp;
Alas! The Muſick howls, the Pain's too ſharp
For theſe to charm, divert or lull aſleep:
Theſe cannot reach it, no, the wound's too deep.
Let all the Promiſes before him ſtand,
And ſet a Barnabas at his right hand;
Theſe in themſelves no comfort can afford,
'Tis Chriſt, and none but Chriſt, can ſpeak the word.
And he no ſooner ſpeaks, but all is ſtill,
The ſtorm is over, and the mind tranquil.
There goes a power with his Majeſtick Voice,
To huſh the dreadful'ſt ſtorm, and ſtill its noiſe.
Who would but fear and love this glorious Lord,
That can rebuke ſuch Tempeſts with a Word?

CHAP. XXI.

Our Food out of the Sea God doth command;
Yet few therein take notice of his hand.

OBSERVATION.

THE Providence of God in furniſhing us with ſuch plenty and variety of Fiſh, is not ſlightly to be paſt over. We have not only ſeveral ſorts of Fiſh in our own Seas, which are caught in their Seaſons; but from ſeveral parts, eſpecially the Weſtern parts of England, many Sail of Ships are ſent yearly to the American parts of the World; as New-found-Land, New-England, &c. Whence every Year is brought home, not only enough to ſupply our own Nation, but many thouſand pounds worth alſo yearly returned from Spain, and other Countries; by which Trade many thouſand Families do ſubſiſt.

APPLICATION.

But, now, what returns do we make to Heaven for theſe Mercies? O what notice is taken of the good hand of Providence, which thus ſupplies and feeds us with the Bleſſings of the Sea? I fear there are but few that own, act in ſubmiſſion to it, and are careful to return, according to received benefit. Men do not conſider, That their works are in the hand of God, Eccleſ. 9. 1. And even thoſe that have the moſt immediate dependence upon Providence, as Merchants and Seamen, yet are very prone to undertake deſigns in the confidence of their own wiſdom and induſtry; not looking higher for the bleſſing, Jam. 4. 13. They often ſacrifice to their own net, and burn incenſe to their drag, becauſe by them their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous, Hab. 1. 16. viz. They attribute what is due to God, unto the creature. Now this is a ſin highly provoking to the Lord: for look in what degree the heart cleaves to the ſecond cauſe, in the ſame degree it departs from the living God, Jer. 10. 5.

And how do you think the bleſſed God will take it, to ſee himſelf thus debaſed, and the creature thus exalted into his place; to ſee you carry your ſelves to the creature as to a God, and to the Bleſſed God, as to a creature. Surely, it is a great and common evil, and ſuch as will blaſt all, if not timely diſcover'd and lamented. If we make fleſh our arm, it's juſt with God to wither and dry up the arm. Do we not, my Brethren, look upon ſecond cauſes, as if they had the main ſtroke in our buſineſs? And with a neglective eye paſs by God, as if he came in but collaterally, and on the by, into it? But certainly, all endeavours will be unſanctified, if not ſucceſleſs, in which God is not eyed and engaged.

It is in vain for you to riſe up early, and ſit up late, and eat the bread of ſorrows; for ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep, Pſal. 127. 2. (i. e.) It is to no purpoſe for men to beat their brains, tire their ſpirits, and rack their Conſciences for an eſtate. The true way of acqui- ng and enjoying the Creature, is by ſubmitting uietly to the Will of God, in a prudent and dili- ent, yet moderate uſe of lawful means: Nothing n thrive with us till then.

REFLECTION.

Why then ſhould I diſquiet my ſelf in vain; and b my ſelf of my peace, by theſe unbelieving cares d diſtractions? O this hath been my ſin! I have ted, as if my condition had been at my own diſ- ſe; I have eyed creatures and means too much, d God too little. How have my hands hanged down with diſcouragement, when ſecond Cauſes have diſappeared, or wrought croſs to my deſigns in the World, ready to transfer the fault on this thing, or that! And again, how apt am I to be vainly lifted up in carnal confidence, when I ſee my ſelf competently furniſh'd with Creature-munition and proviſion? Oh, what a God-provoking wickedneſs is this! How oft hath Providence checked my carnal preſumption, and daſht many hopeful projects? yet have I not owned it, as I ought, and ſubmitted to it. Oh, it is a wonder this hath not cloſed the hand of Providence againſt me, and pulled down a Curſe upon all! Ah Lord, let me now learn to acquaint my ſelf with thee, then ſhall I decree a thing, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed, Job 22. 28.

THE POEM.

In all the Gifts of God we ſhould advance
His glorious Name; not ſay, It came by chance.
Or to the Idol of our Prudence pay
The tribute of his praiſe, and go our way.
The Waves do clap their hands, and in their kind
Acknowledge God; And what, are they more blind
That float upon them? yea, for what they get,
They offer Sacrifices to their Net.
This is your manner, thus to work you go:
Confeſs the naked truth; ſay, Is't not ſo?
This Net was wiſely caſt, 'tis full, 'tis full:
O well done Mates, this is a gallant pull.
Thus what is due to God, you do apply
Unto your ſelves moſt Sacrilegiouſly.
I cannot wonder ſuch come empty home,
That are ſo full of ſelf and ſin: yet ſome
I hope look higher, and on God reflect
Due praiſe. A Bleſſing ſuch may well expect.

CHAP. XXII.

Whilſt thou by art the ſilly Fiſh doſt kill,
Perchance the Devil's Hook ſticks in thy Gill.

OBSERVATION.

THere is skill in Fiſhing; they that go to Sea in a Fiſhing-Voyage, uſe to go provided with their Craft (as they very fitly call it) without which they can do nothing. They have their Lines, Hooks of ſeveral ſizes, and their Bait. They carefully obſerve their Seaſons; when the Fiſh falls in, then they ply their buſineſs day and night.

APPLICATION.

But how much more skilful and induſtrious is Satan to enſnare and deſtroy Souls? The Devil makes a Voyage as well as you; he hath his Baits for you, as you for the Fiſh: he hath his Devices and Wiles to catch Souls, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Epheſ. 6. 11. He is a Serpent, an old Serpent, Rev. 12. 9. Too crafty for Man in his perfection, much more in his collapſed and degenerated State, his underſtanding being cracked by the Fall, and all his Faculties poiſoned and perverted.

Divines obſerve four ſteps or degrees of Satan's tempting-Power.

Firſt. He can find out the Conſtitution-evils of Men; he knows to what ſin their Natures are more eſpecially prone and inclinable.

Secondly. He can propound ſuitable objects to thoſe Luſts, he can exactly and fully hit every Man's humour. As Agrippina mixed her Poiſon in that Meat her Husband loved beſt.

Thirdly. He can inject and caſt motions into the Mind, to cloſe with thoſe tempting objects; as it is ſaid of Judas, Joh. 13. 2. The Devil put it into his heart.

Fourthly. He can ſollicite, irritate, and provoke the Heart, and by thoſe continual reſtleſs ſollicitations weary it; and hereby he often draws Men to commit ſuch things as ſtartled them in the firſt motion.

All this can he do, if he find the work ſtick, and meet with rubs and difficulties; yet doth he not act to the utmoſt of his skill and power, at all times and with all perſons; neither indeed need he ſo to do, the very propounding of an object, is enough to ſome, without any further ſollicitation: The Devil makes an eaſie conqueſt of them.

And beſide all this, his Policy much appears in the election of place, time and inſtruments to tempt by: And thus are poor Souls caught, as Fiſhes in an evil Net, Eccleſ. 9. 12. The carnal Man is led by Senſe, as the Beaſt; and Satan handles and fits him accordingly. He uſeth all ſorts of Motives, not only internal, and intellective, but external and ſenſitive alſo; as the ſparkling of the Wine, when it gives its colour in the Glaſs: the Harlot's beauty, whoſe eye-lids are ſnares; hiding always the Hook, and concealing the iſſue from them. He promiſes them gain and profit, pleaſure and delight, and all that is tempting, with aſſurance of Secreſie. By theſe he faſtens the fatal Hook in their Jaws, and thus they are led captive by him at his Will.

REFLECTION.

And is Satan ſo ſubtil and induſtrious to entice Souls to ſin? Doth he thus caſt out his golden baits, and allure Souls with pleaſure to their ruine? Then how doth it behove thee, O my Soul, to be jealous and wary! How ſtrict a guard ſhould I ſet upon every ſenſe! Ah, let me not ſo much regard how ſin comes towards me in the Temptation, as how it goes off at laſt. The day in which Sodom was deſtroyed, began with a pleaſant Sun-ſhine, but ended in Fire and Brimſtone. I may promiſe my ſelf much content in the ſatisfaction of my Luſts: But O, how certainly will it end in my ruine! Ahab doubtleſs promiſed himſelf much content in the Vineyard of Naboth, but his blood paid for it in the portion of Jezreel. The Harlots Bed was perfumed to entice the ſimple young man, Prov. 7. 17. But thoſe Chambers of Delight proved the Chambers of Death, and her Houſe the way to Hell. Ah, with what a ſmiling face doth ſin come on towards me in its temptations! How doth it tickle the carnal phantaſie, and pleaſe the deceived heart? But what a dreadful Cataſtrophe and Upſhot hath it? The delight is quickly gone, but the guilt thereof remains to amaze and terrifie the Soul with ghaſtly forms, and dreadful repreſentations of the wrath of God: As ſin hath its Delights attending it to enter and faſten it, ſo it hath its horrors and ſtings to torment and wound: And as certainly as I ſee thoſe go before it to make a way, ſo certainly ſhall I find theſe follow after, and tread upon its heels. No ſooner is the Conſcience awakened, but all thoſe Delights vaniſh as a Night-viſion, or as a Dream when one awakes; and then I ſhall cry, Here is the Hook, but where is the Bait? Here is the guilt and horror, but where the delight that I was promiſed! And I, whither ſhall I now go? Ah my deceitful Luſts! You have enticed and left me in the midſt of all miſeries.

THE POEM.

There's skill in Fiſhing, that the Devil knows;
For when for Souls Satan a fiſhing goes,
He Angles cunningly: He knows he muſt
Exactly fit the Bait unto the Luſt.
He ſtudies Conſtitution, Place, and Time,
He gueſſes what is his delight, what thine:
And ſo accordingly prepares the Bait;
Whilſt he himſelf lies cloſely hid to wait
When thou wilt nibble at it. Doſt incline
To drunken Meetings? then he baits with Wine:
Is this the way; if unto this he'll ſmell,
He'll ſhortly pledge a Cup of Wrath in Hell.
To Pride or Luſt is thy vile Nature bent?
An Object ſuitable he will preſent.
O think on this, when you caſt in the book,
Say, Thus for my poor Soul doth Satan look.
O play not with Temptations; do not ſwallow
The ſugar'd Bait, conſider what will follow.
If once he hitch thee, then away he draws
Thy captive Soul cloſe Priſoner in his paws.

CHAP. XXIII.

Doth Trading fail, and Voyages prove bad?
If you cannot diſcern the cauſe, 'tis ſad.

OBSERVATION.

THere are many ſad Complains abroad (and I think not without cauſe) that Trade fails, nothing turns to account. And though all Countries be open, and free for Traffick, a general Peace wi all Nations, yet there ſeems to be a Dearth, a ſecret Curſe upon Trading. You run from Country to Country, and come loſers home. Men can hardly render a reaſon of it; few hit the right cauſe of this Judgment.

APPLICATION.

That proſperity and ſucceſs in Trade is from the bleſſing of God, I ſuppoſe few are ſo Atheiſtical, a once to deny or queſtion. The Devil himſelf ac-knowledges it, Job 1. 10. Thou haſt bleſſed the wor of his hands, and his ſubſtance is increaſed in the Land. It is not in the power of any man to get Riches, Deut. 8. 18. Thou ſhalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth. It is his Bleſſing that makes good men rich, and his Per-miſſion that makes wicked men rich. That Maxim came from Hell, Quiſque fortunæ ſuæ faber: Every man is the Contriver of his own Condition: Certain-ly, The good of man is not in his own hand, Job 21. 16 Promotion cometh not from the Eaſt or Weſt, Pſal. 7 6, 7.

This being acknowledged, it is evident, that i all diſappointment, and want of ſucceſs in our Ca lings, we ought not to ſtick in ſecond cauſes, b to look higher, even to the hand and diſpoſe of Go For, whoſe it is to give the bleſſing, his alſo it is with-hold it. And this is as clear in Scripture the other. It is the Lord that takes away the Fiſhe of the Sea, Hoſ. 4. 3. Zeph. 1. 3. It is he that curſ our bleſſings, Mal. 2. 2.

This God doth as a puniſhment for ſin, and th abuſe of mercies: And therefore in ſuch caſes, w ought not to reſt in general complaints to, or of o another, but ſearch what thoſe ſins are that provo the Lord to inflict ſuch Judgments.

An

And here I muſt requeſt your patience, to bear a plain and cloſe word of Conviction. My Brethren, I am perſwaded theſe are the ſins, among many other, that provoke the Lord to blaſt all your Imployments.

1. Our undertaking deſigns without Prayer. Alas, how few of us begin with God? Intereſt him in our dealings, and ask counſel and direction at his mouth? Prayer is that which ſanctifies all employments and enjoyments, 1 Tim. 4. 5. The very Heathen could ſay, A Jove Principium, They muſt begin with God. O that we had more Prayers and fewer Oaths.

2. Injuſtice and Fraud in our dealings. A ſin to which Merchants are prone, as appears by that expreſſion, Hoſ. 12. 7. This is that which will blaſt all our enjoyments.

3. An over-earneſt endeavour after the World. Men make this their buſineſs, they will be rich: And hence it is, they are not only unmerciful to themſelves, in wearing and waſting their own ſpirits with carking cares, but to ſuch alſo as they employ; neither regarding the Souls or Bodies of Men: Scarce affording them the liberty of the Lord's Day (as hath been too common in our New-found-Land Employments;) or if they have it, yet they are ſo worn out with inceſſant Labours, that that precious time is ſpent either in ſleep or idleneſs. It is no wonder God gives you more reſt than you would have, ſince that day of Reſt hath been no better improved. This over-doing hath not been the leaſt cauſe of our undoing.

Laſtly, Our abuſe of Proſperity, when God gave it; making God's Mercies the Food and Fuel of our Luſts. When we had an affluence and confluence of outward Bleſſings, this made us kick againſt God, as Deut. 32. 15. Forget God, Deut. 4. 14. Yea, grow proud of our ſtrength and riches, Ezek. 16. 15. and Jer. 2. 31. Ah! How few of us in the days of our proſperity, behaved our ſelves as good Jehoſaphat did? 2 Chron. 17. 5, 6. He had ſilver and gold in abundance, and his heart was lifted in the way of God's Commandments; not in pride and inſolence.

REFLECTION.

Are theſe the ſins that blaſt our Bleſſings, and wither our Mercies? O then let me ceaſe to wonder t is no better, and rather admire that it is no worſe with me; that my neglect of Prayer, injuſtice in ealings, Earthly-mindedneſs, and abuſe of former Mercies, have not provoked God to ſtrip me naked out of all my enjoyments. Let me humbly accept rom the Lord the puniſhment of my Iniquities, and ay my hand upon my mouth. And O that theſe iſappointments might convince me of the Creatures anity, and cauſe me to drive on another trade for Heaven; then ſhall I adore thy wiſdom in rending rom me thoſe idolized enjoyments. Ah Lord! when had them, my heart was a perpetual drudge to hem. How did I then forget God, neglect duty, nd not mind my eternal concernments! Oh, if theſe ad not periſhed, in all probability I had periſhed. My God, let my Soul proſper, and then a ſmall ortion of theſe things ſhall afford me more comort than ever I had in their greateſt abundance. A tle that a righteous man hath, is better than the riches many wicked, Pſal. 37. 16.

THE POEM.

There's great Complaint abroad, that Trading's bad;
u ſhake your head, and cry, 'Tis ſad, 'tis ſad.
Merchants lay out their ſtock, Seamen their pains,
And in their eye they both may put their gains.
Your Fiſhing fails, you wonder why 'tis ſo,
'Tis this (ſaith one) or that: but I ſay No;
'Twill ne'r be well, till you confeſs and ſay,
It is our ſin that frights the Fiſh away.
No wonder all goes into Bags with Holes,
Since ſo the Goſpel hath been in your Souls.
We kick'd, like Jeſurun, when the flowing Tide
Of Wealth came tumbling in, this nouriſh'd Pride.
'Twixt Soul and Body, now I wiſh it may
Fare, as betwixt the Jews and us this day.
O that our outward want and loſs may be
To us a Soul-enriching Poverty!
If diſappointments here, advance the Trade
For Heaven, then complain not; you have made
The richeſt Voyage, and your empty Ships
Return deep laden with Soul-benefits.

CHAP. XXIV.

In Seas the greater Fiſh the leſs devour:
So ſome Men cruſh all thoſe within their power.

OBSERVATION.

There are Fiſhes of Prey in the Sea, as well as Birds and Beaſts of Prey on the Land. Our Seamen tell us, how the devouring Whales, Sharks, Dolphins, and other Fiſhes follow the Caplein, and other ſmaller Fiſh, and devour multitudes of them. It is frequent with us, in our own Seas, to find ſeveral ſmaller Fiſhes in the Bellies of the greater ones; yea, I have often heard Seamen ſay, That the poor little Fry, when purſued, are ſo ſenſible of the danger, that they have ſometimes ſeen multitudes of them caſt themſelves upon the Shore, and periſh there, to avoid the danger of being devoured by them.

APPLICATION.

Thus cruel, mercileſs, and oppreſſive are wicked Men, whoſe tender mercies are cruelty, Prov. 22. 10. We ſee the like cruelty in our Extortioners, and over-reaching Sharks aſhore, who grind the faces of the Poor, and regard not the Cries of the Fatherleſs and Widows, but fill their Houſes with the gain of Oppreſſion. Theſe are, by the Holy Ghoſt, compared to the fiſhes of the Sea, Hab. 1. 13, 14. This is a crying ſin, yea, it ſends up a loud cry to Heaven for Vengeance, Exod. 22. 23. If thou afflict the widow and the fatherleſs, and they cry unto me, I will ſurely hear their cry. And Verſe 27, I will hear his cry, for I am gracious. Nay, God will not only hear their Cry, but avenge their Quarrel. That is a remarkable Text, 1 Theſ. 4. 6. That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, becauſe that the Lord is the [Avenger] of all ſuch. This word Avenger, is but once more uſed in the New Teſtament, Rom. 13. 4. And there ἔκδικος. it is applied to the Civil Magiſtrate, who is to ſee Execution done upon Offenders. But now this is a Sin that ſometimes may be out of the reach of man's Juſtice, and therefore God himſelf will be their Avenger. You may overpower the Poor in this World, and it may be they cannot contend with you at man's Bar, therefore God will bring it before his Bar.

Believe it, Sirs, it is a ſin ſo provoking to God, that he will not let it 'ſcape without ſevere puniſhment, ſooner or later. The Prophet Habbakkuk, Chap. 1. verſe 13. wondred how the holy God could forbear ſuch till the general day of reckoning, and that he did not take exemplary Vengeance on them in this Life. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canſt not look upon Iniquity: Wherefore then lookeſt thou upon them that deal treacherouſly, and holdeſt thy tongue when the wicked devours the man that is more righteous than he? And Prov. 23. 10, 11. Enter not into the Fields of the Fatherleſs, i. e. Of the poor and helpleſs. But why is it more dangerous violently to invade their right, than another's? The reaſon is added, For their Redeemer is mighty, and he ſhall plead their cauſe with thee. It may be they are not able to retain a Councel to plead their cauſe here; therefore God will plead their cauſe for them.

REFLECTION.

Turn in upon thy ſelf (O my Soul) and conſider, Haſt thou not been guilty of this crying ſin? Have I not (when a Servant) over-reached and defrauded others, and filled my Maſter's Houſe with Violence and Deceit? and ſo brought my ſelf under that dreadful threatning, Zeph. 1. 9. Or ſince I came to trade and deal upon mine own account, have not the Ballances of Deceit been in my hand? I have (it may be) kept many in my ſervice and employment; have not I uſed their labours without reward, and ſo am under that woe? Jer. 22. 13. Or not given them Wages proportionable to their work? Iſai. 58. 3. Or by bad Payment and unjuſt Deductions and Allowances, defrauded them of a part of their due? Mal. 3. 5. Or at leaſt delayed payment, out of a covetous diſpoſition to gain by it; whilſt their neceſſities in the mean time cryed aloud for it; and ſo ſinned againſt God's expreſs commands, Deut. 24. 14, 15. Levit. 19. 30. Or have I not perſecuted ſuch as God hath ſmitten? Pſal. 69. 26. And rigorouſly exacted the uttermoſt of my due, though the hand of God hath gone out againſt them breaking their eſtates? O my Soul, examine thy ſelf upon theſe particulars; reſt not quiet, until this guilt be removed by the application of the Blood of Sprinkling. Hath not the Lord ſaid, Jam. 2. 13. That they ſhall have judgment without mercy, that hath ſhewed no mercy? And is it not a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, who hath ſaid, He will take vengeance for theſe things?

THE POEM.

Devouring Whales and ravenous Sharks do follow
The leſſer Fry, and at one gulp do ſwallow
Some hundreds of them, as our Seamen ſay:
But we can tell far ſtranger things than they.
For we have Sharks aſhore in every Creek,
That to devour poor Men, do hunt and ſeek.
No Pity, Senſe, or Bowels in them be,
Nay, have they not put off Humanity?
Extortioners and Cheaters, whom God hates,
Have dreadful open Mouths, and through thoſe Gates
Brave Perſons with their Heritages paſs
In Funeral-ſtate, Friends crying out Alas!
O give me Agur's wiſh that I may never
Be ſuch my ſelf, or feel the hands of either.
And as for thoſe that in their paws are grip'd,
Pity and reſcue, Lord, from that ſad plight.
When I behold the ſqueaking Lark, that's born
In Falcon's Talons, crying, bleeding, torn;
I pity its ſad caſe, and would relieve
The Priſoner, if I could, as well as grieve.
Fountain of Pity! hear the piteous Moans
Of all thy Captive and Oppreſſed Ones.

CHAP. XXV.

In Storms to ſpread much Sail endangres all:
So carnal Mirth, if God for Mourning call.

OBSERVATION.

IN Storms at Sea, the wiſe Navigator will not ſpread much Sail; that is the way to loſe Maſts and all. They uſe then to furl up the Sails, and lie a Hull, when not able to bear a Knot of Sail; or elſe to lie a Try, or Scud before the Wind and Seas. It is no time then to hoiſt up the Top and Top-gallant, and ſhew their bravery.

APPLICATION.

When the Judgments of God are abroad in the earth, it is no time then to make mirth, Ezek. 21. 10, 11. Should we [then] make mirth? It contemneth the rod of my ſon as every tree. (i.e.) As if it were a common Rod, and ordinary affliction; whereas the Rod of my Son is not ſuch as may be had of every Tree, but it is an Iron Rod to ſuch as deſpiſe it, Pſal. 2. 9. O it is a provoking evil, and commonly God ſeverely puniſhes it. Of all perſons, ſuch ſpeed worſt in the common calamity, Amos 6. 1. Wo to them that are at eaſe in Sion, that are not grieved for the afflictions of Joſeph, as ver. 4. It may be (as one obſerves upon the Text) they did not laugh at him, or break Jeſts upon him; but they did not condole with him. And what ſhall be their puniſhment! See verſ. 7. Therefore now ſhall they go captive with the firſt that go captive: God will begin with them firſt. Solomon tells us, Eccleſ. 3. 4. There is a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn and a time to dance: Only (as Maſter Trap notes upon the Text) we muſt not invert the order, but weep with Men, that we may laugh with Angels. To be merry and frolick in a day of tribulation, is to diſturb the order of ſeaſons. That is a terrible Text, Iſai. 22. 12. which ſhould make the hearts of ſuch as are guilty in this kind to tremble: In that day did the Lord of Hoſts call to mourning, and to girding with ſackcloath; and behold, joy and gladneſs, ſlaying Oxen, killing Sheep, drinking Wine, &c. Well, what is the iſſue of this? Surely, this iniquity ſhall not be purged from you, till ye die. O dreadful word! Surely (my Brethren) Sympathy is a debt we owe to Chriſt Myſtical. Whatever our Conſtitution, Condition, or Perſonal Immunities be, yet when God calls for Mourning, we muſt hear and obey that call. David was a King, an expert Muſician, a Man of ſanguine and cheerful conſtitution; yet who more ſenſible of the evil of thoſe times, than he? Rivers of water ran down his eyes at the conſideration of them. Melancthon was ſo affected with the Miſeries of the Church in his days, that he ſeemed to take little or no notice of the death of his Child, whom he entirely loved. At ſuch a time we may ſay of laughter, Thou art mad, and of mirth, What doth it?

REFLECTION.

Bluſh then, O my Soul! for thy levity and inſenſibility under God's angry Diſpenſations. How many of the precious Sons and Daughters of Sion, lie in Tears abroad, while I have been Nouriſhing my heart, as in a day of ſlaughter? The voice of God hath cried to the City, and Men of underſtanding have heard its voice, Mic. 6. 9. But I have been deaf to that cry. How loth (my God) have I been to urge my ſenſual Heart to acts of Sorrow and Mourning! Thou haſt bid me weep with them that weep, but my vain heart cannot comply with ſuch commands. Ah Lord! if I mourn not with Sion, neither ſhall I rejoyce with her.

O, were mine eyes opened, and my heart ſenſible and tender, I might ſee cauſe enough to melt into Tears! and like that Chriſtian Niobe, Luk. 7. 38. to lie weeping at the feet of Chriſt. Lord, What ſtupidity is this? Shall I Laugh when thou art Angry, and thy Children weeping and trembling? Then I may juſtly fear, leſt when they ſhall ſing for joy of heart, I ſhall howl for vexation of Spirit, Iſa. 65. 13, 14. Surely, O my Soul! ſuch laughter will be turned into mourning, either here or hereafter.

THE POEM.

In troublous Times, Mirth in the Sinners face
Is like a Mourning-Cloak with Silver Lace.
The Lion's roaring makes the Beaſts to quake;
God's roaring Judgments cannot make us ſhake.
What Belluine Contempt is this of God,
To laugh in's face, when he takes up the Rod?
Such laughter God in tears will ſurely drown,
(Unleſs he hate thee) e're he lay it down.
Theſe Rods have Voices; if thou hear them well:
If not, another Rod's prepar'd in Hell:
And when the Arm of God ſhall lay is on,
Laugh if thou canſt; no, then thy Mirth it gone.
All Sion's Children will lament and cry,
When all her beautious Stones in duſt do lie;
And he that for her then laments and mourns,
Shall want no joy, when God to her returns.

CHAP. XXVI.

A little Leak neglected, dangerous proves:
One Sin connived at, the Soul undoes.

OBSERVATION.

THE ſmalleſt Leak, if not timely diſcovered and ſtopt, is enough to ſink a Ship of the greateſt burden: Therefore Seamen are wont fre-uently to try what Water is in the Hold; and if hey find it freſh, and increaſing upon them, they ply he Pump, and preſently ſet the Carpenters to ſearch or it and ſtop it; and till it be found they cannot e quiet.

APPLICATION.

What ſuch a Leak is to a Ship, that is the ſmalleſt in neglected to the Soul; it is enough to ruin it ternally. For as the greateſt ſin, diſcover'd, la-ented, and mourned over by a Believer, cannot ain him; ſo the leaſt ſin indulged, covered, and onnived at, will certainly prove the deſtruction of e ſinner. No ſin, though never ſo ſmall, is tole-ated by the pure and perfect Law of God, Pſal. 19. 96. The command is exceeding broad; not as it gave Men a latitude to walk as they pleaſe, but oad, i. e. extending it ſelf to all our words, oughts, actions, and affections: Laying a Law pon them all; conniving at no evil in any Man, Pet. 2. 1.

And as the word gives no allowance for the leaſt n, ſo it is the very nature of ſincerity and upright-ſs, to ſet the heart againſt [every] way of wicked-ſs, Pſal. 139. 23, 24. Job 4. 23. And eſpecially ainſt that ſin which was its darling in the days of s vanity, Pſal. 18. 23. True hatred (as the Philoſopher obſerves, is of the whole * kind: He that hates ſin, as ſin, and ſo doth every upright Soul, hates all ſins as well as ſome.

Again, the Soul that hath had a ſaving ſight of Jeſus Chriſt, and a true diſcovery of the evil of ſin, in the Glaſs both of the Law and Goſpel, can account no ſin ſmall. He knows the demerit of the ſmalleſt ſin is God's eternal wrath, and that not the leaſt ſin can be remitted, without the ſhedding and application of the Blood of Chriſt, Heb. 9. 22. which Blood is of infinite value and price, 1 Pet. 1. 19.

To conclude, God's People know, that little as well as great ſins are dangerous, deadly and deſtructive in their own nature: A little poyſon will deſtroy a Man. Adrian was choakt with a Gnat; Cæſar ſtabbed with Bodkins. A man would think Adam's ſin had been no great matter, yet what dreadful work did it make! It was not as a ſingle Bullet to kill himſelf only; but as a Chain-ſhot, which cut off all his poor miſerable Poſterity. Indeed, no ſin can be little, becauſe its object againſt whom it is committed is ſo great, whence it receives a kind of infiniteneſs in it ſelf, and becauſe the price paid to redeem us from it is ſo invaluable.

* Ἐις τὰ γέν.

REFLECTION.

And is the ſmalleſt ſin not only damning in its own nature, but will certainly prove the ruin of that Soul that hides and covers it? O then let my ſpirit accompliſh a diligent ſearch. Look to it, O my Soul! that no ſin be indulged by thee. Set theſe conſiderations as ſo many flaming Swords in the way of thy carnal delights and luſt: Let me never ſay of any ſin, as Lot did of Zoar, It is a little one, ſpare it. Shall I ſpare that which coſt the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt? The Lord would not ſpare him, When he made his Soul an offering for ſin, Rom. 8. 32. Neither will he ſpare me, if I defend and hide it, Deut. 29. 20. Ah! If my Heart were right, and my Converſion ſound, that luſt whatever it be, that is ſo favoured by me, would eſpecially be abhorred and hated, Iſa. 2. 20. and 30. 22. Whatever my convictions and reformations have been, yet if there be but one ſin retained and delighted in, this keeps the Devils intereſt ſtill in my Soul: And though for a time he ſeem to depart, yet at laſt he will return with ſeven worſe ſpirits, and this is the ſin will open the door to him, and deliver up my Soul, Matth. 12. 43, 44. Lord, let me make thorough work of it: let me cut it off, and pluck it out, though it be as a right Hand, or Eye. Ah, ſhall I come ſo near the Kingdom of God, and make ſuch a fair offer for Chriſt, and yet ſtick at a ſmall matter, and loſe all for want of one thing? Lord, let me ſhed the blood of the deareſt luſt, for his ſake that ſhed his deareſt blood for me.

THE POEM.

There's many a Soul eternally undone
For ſparing ſin, becauſe a little one.
But we are much deceiv'd; no ſin is ſmall,
That wounds ſo great a God, ſo dear a Soul.
Yet ſay it were, the ſmalleſt Pen-knife may
As well as Sword or Lance diſpatch and ſlay.
And ſhall ſo ſmall a matter part and ſever
Chriſt and thy Soul? What, make you part for ever?
Or wilt thou ſtand on Toys with him, when he
Deny'd himſelf in greateſt things for thee?
Or will it be an eaſe in Hell, to think
How eaſily thy Soul therein did ſink!

Are Chriſt and Hell for trifles ſold and bought?
Strike Souls with trembling, Lord, at ſuch a thought.
By little ſins, belov'd, the Soul is loſt,
Unleſs ſuch ſins do great repentance coſt.

CHAP. XXVII.

Ships make much way when they a Trade-wind get;
With ſuch a Wind the Saints have ever met.

OBSERVATION.

Though in moſt parts of the World the Winds are variable, and ſometimes blow from every point of the Compaſs, by reaſon whereof, ſailing is ſlow and dangerous: yet about the Equinoctial, Seamen meet with a Trade-wind, blowing for the moſt part one way; and there they Sail jocund before it, and ſcarce need to Lore a Top-ſail for ſome hundreds of Leagues.

APPLICATION.

Although the People of God meet with many ſeeming Rubs and Set-backs in their way to Heaven, which are like contrary Winds to a Ship; yet are they from the Day of their Converſion, to the day of their compleat Salvation, never out of a Trade-winds way to Heaven, Rom. 8. 21. We know that all things work together for good, to them that love God, to them that are the called according to his purpoſe. This is a moſt precious Scripture, pregnant with its Conſolation to believers in all conditions, a Pillar of comfort to all diſtreſſed Saints: Let us look a little nearer to it.

(We know) Mark the certainty and evidence of the Propoſition, which is not built upon a gueſs or remote probability, but upon the knowledge of the Saints: we know it, and that partly by divine Revelation, God has told us ſo; and partly by our own experience, we find it ſo.

(That all things) Not only things that lie in a natural and direct tendency to our good; as Ordinances, Promiſes, Bleſſings, &c. but even ſuch things as have no natural fitneſs and tendency to ſuch an end; as afflictions, temptations, corruptions, deſertions, &c. All theſe help onward. They (Work together.) Not all of them directly, and of their own nature and inclination; but by being over-ruled, and determined to ſuch an iſſue by the gracious hand of God: Nor yet do they work out ſuch good to the Saints, ſingly and apart, but as adjuvant cauſes or helps, ſtanding under and working in ſubordination to the ſupreme and principal cauſe of their happineſs.

Now the moſt ſeeming oppoſite things, yea ſin in it ſelf, which in its own nature is really oppoſite to their good, yet eventually contributes to it. Afflictions and Deſertions ſeem to work againſt us; but being once put into the rank and order of Cauſes, they work together with ſuch bleſſed inſtruments, as Word and Prayer, to an happy iſſue. And though the faces of theſe things, that thus agree and work together, look contrary ways; yet there be, as it were, ſecret chains and connections of Providence betwixt them, to unite them in their iſſue. There may be many inſtruments employed about one work, and yet not communicate counſels, or hold intelligence with each other. Joſeph's Brethren, the Midianites, Potiphar, &c. knew not one another's mind, nor aimed at one end, (much leſs the end that God brought about by them:) one acts out of Revenge, another for gain, a third out of Policy; yet all meet together at laſt, in that iſſue God had deſign'd to bring about by them, even Joſeph's advancement. Even ſo it is here, Chriſtian, there be more inſtruments at work for thine eternal good, than thou art aware of.

REFLECTION.

Chear up then, O my Soul, and lean upon this Pillar of Comfort in all diſtreſſes. Here is a promiſe for me (if I be a called one) that, like the Philoſophers Stone, turns all into Gold it toucheth. This promiſe is my ſecurity, however things go in the world. My God will do me no hurt, Jer. 25. 6. Nay, he will do me good by every diſpenſation. O that I had but an heart to make all things work for his glory, that thus cauſeth every thing to work for my good. My God, doſt thou turn every thing to my advantage? O let me return all to thy praiſe; and if by every thing thou work my eternal good, then let me in every thing give thanks.

But ah! How fooliſh and ignorant have I been? even as a beaſt before thee. How hath my heart been diſquieted, and apt to repine at thy diſpenſations, when they have croſſed my Will! not conſidering that my God faithfully purſues my good, even in thoſe things that croſs, as well as in that which pleaſes me.

Bleſſed Lord! What a bleſſed condition are all thy people in, who are within the Line of this promiſe? All things friendly and beneficial to them, Friends helpful, Enemies helpful, every thing conſpiring and conducing to their happineſs. With others it is not ſo; nothing works for their good; nay, every thing works againſt it: Their very Mercies are ſnares, and their Proſperity deſtroys them, Prov. 1. 32. Even the bleſſed Goſpel it ſelf is a ſavour of death to them: When evil befals them, it is an only evil, Ezek. 7. 5. that is, not turned into good, to them; and as their evils are not turned into good, ſo all their good is turned into evil. As this Promiſe hath an influence into all that concerns the people, ſo the curſe hath an influence into all the enjoyments of the wicked. O my ſoul, bleſs the Lord, who hath caſt thy lot into ſuch a pleaſant place, and given thee ſuch a glorious heritage, as this promiſe is.

THE POEM.

When once the Dog-ſtar riſes, many ſay,
Corn ripens then apace, both night and day.
Souls once in Chriſt, that Morning-ſtar lets fall
Such influences on them then, that all
God's diſpenſations to them, ſweet or ſowr,
Ripens their Souls for Glory every hour.
All their afflictions, rightly underſtood,
Are bleſſings; every Wind will blow ſome good.
Sure at their troubles Saints would never grudge,
Were Senſe depoſed, and Faith made the Judge.
Falls make them waryer, amend their pace;
When gifts puff up their hearts, and weaken Grace.
Could Satan ſee the iſſue and the event
Of his temptations, he would ſcarcely tempt.
Could Saints but ſee what fruits their troubles bring,
Amidſt thoſe troubles they would ſhout and ſing.
O ſacred Wiſdom! who can but admire
To ſee how thou doſt ſave from fire, by fire!
No doubt but Saints in glory wondering ſtand
At thoſe ſtrange Methods few now underſtand.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Storms make diſcovery of the Pilots skill.
Gods Wiſdom in affliction triumphs ſtill.

OBSERVATION.

IN fair Weather, when there is Sea-room enough, then every common perſon can guide the Ship, the Pilot may then lie down and take his reſt; but in great ſtorms and ſtreſs of weather, or when near the dangerous ſhore, then the moſt skilful Pilot is put to it: Then he ſhews the utmoſt of his Art and Skill, and yet ſometimes all is too little. They are (as the Scripture ſpeaks) at their wits end, know not what to do more, but are forced to commit all to the mercy of God and the Seas.

APPLICATION.

In the Storms and Tempeſts of Affliction and Trouble, there are the moſt evident and full Diſcoveries of the Wiſdom and Power of our God: It is indeed continually active for his people in all conditions, Iſai. 27. 3. Leſt any hurt it, I will keep it night and day. Pſal. 121. 4. He that keepeth Iſrael, neither ſlumbereth nor ſleepeth. His peoples dangers are without intermiſſion, therefore his preſervations are ſo too. But now, when they come into the Streight of Affliction, and deadly dangers, which threaten like Rocks on every ſide; now the Wiſdom of their God rides triumphantly and viſibly upon the waves of that ſtormy Sea. And this infinite Wiſdom is then eſpecially diſcovered in theſe particulars.

1. In leaving them ſtill ſomewhat in the lieu and room of thoſe Comforts that they are deprived of; ſo that they ſee God doth exchange their comforts, and that for the better; and this ſupports them. So John 14. 1, 2, 3. Chriſt's bodily preſence is removed, but the Spirit was ſent in the room of it, which was better.

2. In doubling their ſtrength, as he doubles their burdens. It is obſerved, that the Saints have many times very ſtrong and ſweet Conſolation, a little before their greateſt Trials: And this is ſo ordinary, that commonly, when they have had extraordinary Conſolations from God, they have then looked for ſome eminent Trial. The Lord appeared to Abraham, and ſealed the Covenant to him, and then put him upon that great trial of his Faith. So the Diſciples, Luk. 24. 49. It was commanded them that they ſhould tarry in Jeruſalem, till they were endowed with power from on high. The Lord knew what an hard Providence they were like to have, and what great oppoſitions and difficulties they muſt encounter, in publiſhing the Everlaſting Goſpel to the World; and therefore firſt prepares, and endows them with power from on high, viz. with eminent meaſures of the Gifts and Graces of the Spirit; as Faith, Patience, Self-denial, &c. So Paul had firſt Revelations, then his Buffetings

3. In coming in ſo opportunely in the time of their great diſtreſs, with relief and comfort, 1 Pet. 14. Then the Spirit of Glory and of God reſteth on them. As that Martyr cried out to his friend Auſtin, the very ſtake, He is come, he is come.

4. In appointing and ordering the ſeveral kinds of Afflictions to ſeveral Saints; and allotting to every, that very Affliction, and no other, which is moſt ſuitable to his condition: Which Afflictions, like ſo many Potions of Phyſick, are prepared for that very malignant humour that predominates moſt in them. Peter's ſin was ſelf-confidence, God permits him to fall by denying Chriſt: which doubtleſs was ſanctified to his good, in that particular. Hezekiah's ſin was vain-glory; therefore Spoilers are ſent to take away his Treaſures.

5. In the duration of their Troubles; they ſhall not lie always upon them, Pſal. 125. 3. Our God is a God of Judgment, Iſa. 30. 18. Knows the due time of removing it, and is therein punctual to a day, Rev. 2. 10.

REFLECTION.

If the Wiſdom of God do thus triumph and glorifie it ſelf in the Diſtreſſes of the Saints, then why ſhould I fear in the day of evil? Pſal. 49. 4. Why doth my heart faint at the foreſight and apprehenſion of approaching trouble? Fear none of thoſe things that thou ſhalt ſuffer, O my Soul; if thy God will thus be with thee in the fire and water, thou canſt not periſh. Though I walk through the Valley of the ſhadow of Death, yet let me fear no evil, whilſt my God is thus with me. Creatures cannot do what they pleaſe; his wiſdom limits and over-rules them all, to gracious and ſweet ends. If my God caſt me into the Furnace, to melt and try me, yet I ſhall not be conſumed there; for he will ſit by the Furnace himſelf all the while I am in it, and curiouſly pry into it, obſerving when it hath done its work, and then will preſently withdraw the fire. O my Soul, bleſs and adore this God of Wiſdom! who himſelf will ſee the ordering of all thine Afflictions, and not truſt it in the hands of Men or Angels!

THE POEM.

Though toſt in greateſt Storms, I'll never fear,
If Chriſt will ſit at Helm to guide and ſteer.
Storms are the triumph of his Skill and Art;
He cannot cloſe his Eyes, nor change his Heart.
Wiſdom and Power ride upon the Waves,
And in the greateſt danger helps and ſaves.
From dangers it by dangers doth deliver,
And wounds the Devil out of his own Quiver;
It countermines his Plots, and ſo doth ſpoil,
And make his Engines on himſelf recoil.
It blunts the Politicians reſtleſs Tool,
And makes Ahitophel the veriest Fool:
It ſhews us how our Reaſon us miſled,
And if we had not, we had periſhed.
Lord, to thy Wiſdom I will give the Reins,
And not with Cares perplex and vex my brains.

CHAP. XXIX.

Things in the bottom are unſeen: No Eye
Can trace God's Paths, which in the Deeps do lie.

OBSERVATION.

THE Ocean is ſo deep, that no Eye can diſcover what lies in the bottom thereof. We uſe to ſay proverbially of a thing that is irrecoverably loſt, It is as good it were caſt into the Sea. What lies there, lies obſcure from all eyes, but the Eye of God.

APPLICATION.

Thus are the Judgments of God, and the Ways of his Providence, profound and unſearchable, Pſal. 36. 16. The Righteous is like the great Mountains, and thy Judgments are a great Deep: (i.e.) his Providences are ſecret, obſcure, and unfathomable; but even then and in thoſe Providences, his Righteouſneſs ſtands up like the great Mountains, viſible and apparent to every eye. Though the Saints cannot ſee the one, yet they can clearly diſcern the other, Jer. 12. 1. Jeremiah was at a ſtand; ſo was Job in the like caſe, Job 12. 7. So was Aſaph, Pſal. 73. and Habbakkuk, Chap. 1. 3. Theſe Wheels of Providence are dreadful for their height, Ezek. 1. 18. There be deep Myſteries of Providence, as well as of Faith. It may be ſaid of ſome of them, as of Paul's Epiſtles, That they are hard to be underſtood. Darkneſs and Clouds are round about the Throne of God: No man can ſay what will be the particular iſſue and event of ſome of his diſpenſations. Luther ſeemed to hear God ſay to him, when he was importunate to know his mind in ſome particular Providence, Deus ſum non ſequax: I am a God not to be traced. Some Providences, like Hebrew Letters, muſt be read backward, Pſal. 92. 7. Some Providences poſe Men of the greateſt parts and graces. His way is in the Sea, his paths in the great Waters, and his foot-ſteps are not known, Pſal. 77. 19. Who can trace Foot-ſteps in the bottom of the Sea? The Angels, Ezek. 1. Have their hands under their wings. The hand is either, Symbolum roboris, The Symbol of Strength; or Inſtrumentum Operationis, The Inſtrument of Action: Where theſe hands are put forth, they work effectually, yea, but very ſecretly, they are hid under their wings. There be ſome of God's Works that are ſuch Secrets, as that they may not be enquired into: they are to be believed and adored, but not pryed into, Rom. 11. 33. Others that may be enquired after, but yet are ſo profound, that few can underſtand them, Pſal. 111. 2. The works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all thoſe that have pleaſure therein. When we come to Heaven, then all thoſe myſteries, as well in the Works, as in the Word of God, will lie open to our view.

REFLECTION.

O then, why is my heart diſquieted, becauſe it cannot ſometimes diſcern the way of the Lord, and ſee the connection and dependance on his providential diſpenſations? Why art thou ſo perplexed, O my Soul, at the Confuſions and Diſorders that are in the world! I know that Goodneſs and Wiſdom ſits at the Stern: And though the Veſſel of the Church be toſſed and diſtreſſed in Storms of Trouble, yet it ſhall not periſh. Is it not enough for me, that God hath condeſcended ſo far for my ſatisfaction, as to ſhew me plainly the ultimate and general iſſue of all theſe myſterious Providences, Epheſ. 1. 22. Rom. 8. 28. unleſs I be able to take the height of every particular? Shall I preſume to call the God of Heaven to account? Muſt he render a reaſon of his ways, and give an account of his matters to ſuch a worm as I am? Be ſilent (O my Soul) before the Lord; ſubſcribe to his Wiſdom, and ſubmit to his Will, whatſoever he doth. However it be, yet God is good to Iſrael; the event will manifeſt it to be all over a deſign of love. I know not how to reconcile them to each other, or many of them to the Promiſe; yet are they all harmonious betwixt themſelves, and the certain means of accompliſhing the Promiſes. O what a favour is this, that in the midſt of the greateſt confuſions in the world, God hath given ſuch abundant ſecurity to his people, that it ſhall be well with them? Amos 9. 8. Eccleſ. 8. 12.

THE POEM.

Lord! how ſtupendious, deep, and wonderful,
Are all thy draughts of Providence; So full
Of puzling Intricacies, that they lie
Beyond the ken of any mortal eye,
A Wheel within a Wheel's the Scripture Notion,
And all thoſe Wheels tranſverſe, and croſs in motion.
All Creatures ſerve it in their place; yet ſo,
As thouſands of them know not what they do.
At this or that, their aim they do direct;
But neither this, nor that, is the effect:
But ſomething elſe they do not underſtand,
Which ſets all Politicians at a ſtand.
Deep Counſels, as the birth, this hand doth break,
And deeper things performeth by the weak.
Men are like Horſes, ſet at every ſtage,
For providence to ride from age to age;
Which like a Poſt ſpurs on, and makes them run
From ſtage to ſtage until their Journey's done;
Then take a freſh: But they the buſineſs know,
No more than Horſes the Poſt-Letters do.
Yet though its work be not conceal'd from ſight,
'Twill be a glorious piece, when brought to light.

CHAP. XXX.

Millions of Men are ſunk into the Main:
But it ſhall not thoſe Dead always retain.

OBSERVATION.

WHat multitudes of Men hath the Sea devoured! Thouſands have made their Graves in it. What numbers of Men have been ingulfed together in Sea-fights, or Storms, or Inundations; whereby whole Towns have been ſwallowed up; Certainly the dead which are there are innumerable.

APPLICATION.

But though the Sea have received ſo many thouſand Bodies of Men into its devouring Throat, yet is it not the abſolute Lord or Proprietor of them, but rather a Steward intruſted with them, till the Lord require an account of them; and then it muſt deliver up all it hath received, even to a perſon. Revel. 20. 11, 12. And I ſaw the Dead, ſmall and great, ſtand before God: and the books were opened: and another book was open, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of thoſe things which were written in the Books, according to their works. And the Sea gave up the dead which were in it.

The Doctrine of the Reſurrection of the Body, is a Doctrine full of ſingular Conſolations to Believers, 1 Cor. 15. and moſt clearly aſſerted in Scripture, Acts 26. 8. Job 19 25. 1 Cor. 15, &c. And it is well for us this point is ſo plainly revealed; becauſe, as it is a moſt comfortable Truth to the people of God, for there is ſcarce any truth that lies under more prejudice as to Senſe or Reaſon, and is more difficult to receive, than this is. The Epicures and Stoicks laughed Paul to ſcorn when he preached it to them, Acts 17. 32. The Familiſts and Quakers at this day reject it as a Fable. The Socinians ſay the ſame Body ſhall not riſe, but an aerial Body. And indeed if Men ſet up Reaſon as the onely Judge of ſupernatural things, it is incredible to think that a Body ſhould be reſtored that hath been burnt to aſhes, and thoſe aſhes ſcattered in the wind, as Hiſtory tells us was frequently done by the Bodies of the Saints in Dioc an's Reign! Or when drowned in the Sea, and there devoured by ſeveral Fiſhes, and thoſe again devoured by others. But yet this is not to be objected to the Almighty Power of God, that gave them their firſt being. Difficulties and Impoſſibilities are for Men, but not for him. Why ſhould it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God ſhould raiſe the dead? Acts 26. 8.

REFLECTION.

And muſt I riſe again, where-ever my body fall at death? Then, Lord, how am I concerned to get union with Chriſt while I live? by vertue thereof only, my Reſurrection can be made comfortable and bleſſed to me! Ah, let my body lie where it will, in Earth or Sea; let my bones be ſcattered, and fleſh devoured by Worms or Fiſh, I know thou canſt and wilt reunite my ſcattered parts; and in this body I muſt ſtand before thine awful Tribunal, to receive according to what I have done therein, 2 Cor. 5. 10. Thou that commandedſt me to ſtand forth amongſt the nobleſt rank of Creatures, when I had no being, and ſaweſt my Subſtance, being yet imperfect, canſt as eaſily reduce me to that Being again.

What though Reaſon vote impoſſible, and Senſe incredible? Though all theſe Difficulties and Encumbrances grow upon my Faith, yet I know my body is not loſt for ever; the ſound of thy laſt and dreadful Trumpet ſhall awaken me; and thy mighty Power, to which all things are poſſible, ſhall bring me before thy Bar.

O Lord, I know that I ſhall ſtand in that great Aſſembly at the laſt day, when multitudes, multitudes, even all the ſons and daughters of Adam ſhall appear together. O! If I die Chriſtleſs, it were good for me that there were no Reſurrection: for then thoſe eyes that have been windows of Luſt, muſt behold Chriſt the Judge, not as a Redeemer, but as a Revenger. That tongue that has vented ſo much of the filthineſs of my heart, will then be ſtruck ſpeechleſs before him; and this fleſh which I ſo pamper'd and provided for, condemned to everlaſting flames. O my God, let me make ſure work for ſuch a day. If I now get real union with thy Son, I ſhall awake with ſinging out of the duſt: And then, as thou ſaidſt to Jacob, ſo to me, when I go down into the Sea or Grave, Gen. 46. 3, 4. Fear not to go down into the deep; for I will ſurely bring thee thee up again.

THE POEM.

It ſhould not ſeem incredible to thee,
hat God ſhould raiſe the dead in Seas that be:
We ſee in Winter, Swallows, Worms, and Flies
Depriv'd of Life, yet in the Spring they riſe. hat though your Bodies ſeveral Fiſh devour,
bject not that to the Almighty pow'r. me Chymiſts in their Art are ſo exact, hat from one Herb they uſually extract
ur different Elements; what think ye then, an poſe that God, who gave this Skill to men?
be Gard'ner can diſtinguiſh thirty kinds
f ſeeds from one another, though he finds hem mixt together in the ſelf-ſame diſh;
uch more can God diſtinguiſh Fleſh from Fiſh.
hey ſeem as loſt, but they again muſt live;
be Sea's a Steward, and Stewards account muſt give.
ok what you are, when in the Ocean drown'd.
e very ſame at Judgment you'll be found.
would not care where my vile body lies,
ere I aſſur'd it ſhou'd with comfort riſe.

CHAP. XXXI.

The Seaman's greateſt danger's near the Coaſt;
When we are neareſt Heav'n, the danger's moſt.

OBSERVATION.

Though Seamen meet with violent Storms, yet if they have Sea-room enough, they are not much diſmaid; but if they find themſelves near the ſhore, they look upon their condition as very dangerous. The ſight of the Shore is to them (as Solomon ſpeaks of the Morning in another Caſe) like the ſhadow of death, if not able to Weather it. For one Ship ſwallowed up in the Ocean, many periſh upon the Coaſt.

APPLICATION.

The greateſt Streights and Difficulties that many Saints meet with in all their lives, is when they come neareſt to Heaven, and have almoſt finiſhed their Courſe. Heaven indeed is a glorious Place, the Spacious and Royal Manſion of the great King; but difficilia quæ pulchra. It hath a ſtreight and narrow entrance, Luk. 13. 24. O the difficulty of arriving there! How many hard tugs in Duty! What earneſt contention of ſtriving, even to an Agony, as that word imports! Luk. 13. 24. Multitudes put forth, and by profeſſion are bound for this fair Haven; but of the multitudes that put out, how few do arrive there? A man may ſet out by a glorious profeſſion, with much reſolution, and continue long therein; he may offer very fair for it, and not be far from the Kingdom of God, and yet not be able to enter at the laſt, Matth. 7. 22.

Yea, and many of thoſe who are ſincere in their profeſſion, and do arrive at laſt, yet come to Heaven (as I may ſay) by the gates of Hell; and put in, as a poor Weather-beaten Veſſel comes into the Harbour, more like a Wreck than a Ship, nor Maſt nor Sail left. The righteous themſelves are ſcarcely ſaved, (i. e.) they are ſaved with very much difficulty. They have not all an abundant entrance, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 2 Pet. 1. 11.

Some Perſons (as one well notes) are afar off, Eph. 2. 23. (i. e.) touch with no care of Religion: Some come near, but never enter, as Semiconverts, ſee Matth. 12. 34. Others enter, but with great difficulty; they are ſaved as by fire, 1 Cor. 3. 13. Make an hard ſhift. But then there be ſome that go in with full ſail before a Wind, and have an abundant entrauce: They go triumphing out of the world. Ah! when we come into the Narrow Channel, at the very point of entrance into life, the Soul is then in the moſt ſerious frame, all things look with a new face. Conſcience ſcans our evidence moſt critically; then alſo Satan falls upon us, and makes his soreſt aſſaults and batteries. It is the laſt encounter; if they eſcape him now, they are gone out of his reach for ever: And if he cannot hinder their Salvation, yet if he can but cloud their Evening, and make them go groaning and haling out of the world, he reaches another end by it, even to confirm and prejudice the wicked, and weaken the hands of others that are looking towards Religion.

Manton on Juda p. 119.

REFLECTION.

If this be ſo, how inevitable is my perdition, may the careleſs Soul ſay; if they that ſtrive ſo much, and go ſo far, yet periſh at laſt, and if the righteous themſelves are ſcarcely ſaved, then where ſhall ſuch an ungodly Creature as I appear? O Lord! if they that have made Religion their buſineſs, and have been many years purſuing a work of Mortification, have gone mourning after the Lord Jeſus, and walked humbly with God; yet if ſome of theſe have ſuch an hard tug at laſt, then what will become of ſuch a vain, ſenſual, careleſs, Fleſh-pleaſing Wretch as I have been?

Again, Do Saints find it ſo ſtreight an entrance? Then, though I have well-grounded Hopes of ſafe arrival at laſt; yet let me look to it, that I do not increaſe the difficulty. Ah! they are the things that are now done, or omitted, that put Conſcience into ſuch an agony then; for then it comes to review the life with the moſt ſerious eye. O, let me not ſtick my Death-bed full of Thorns, againſt I come to lie down upon it. O that I may turn to the Wall, in that hour, as Hezekiah did, 2 Kings 20. 2, 3. and ſay, Remember now, O Lord, I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart, &c.

THE POEM.

After a tedious Paſſage, Saints deſcry
The glorious Shore, Salvation being nigh:
Death's Long-boat's launch'd, ready to ſet aſhore
Their panting Souls. O, how they tug at Oar,
Longing to be at reſt! but then they find,
The hardeſt Tug of all is yet behind.
Juſt at the Harbours mouth, they ſee the Wrack
Of Souls there caſt away, and driven back.
A world of dangerous Rocks before it lie;
The Harbours barr'd, and now the Winds blow high:
Thoughts now ariſe, fears multiply apace;
All things about them have another face.
Life blazes juſt like an expiring light;
The Soul's upon the lip, prepar'd for flight.
Death, till the Reſurrection, tears and rends
Out of each other's arms two parting Friends,
The Soul and Body. Ah! but more than ſo,
The Devil falls upon them ere they go,
With new temptations, back'd with all his pow'r,
And ſcruples kept on purpoſe for that hour.
This is the laſt encounter, now or never,
If he ſucceeds not now, they're gone for ever.
Thus in they put, with hardſhip at the laſt,
As Ships out of a Storm, nor Sail, nor Maſt:
Yet ſome go in before a Wind, and have
Their Streamer of Aſſurance flying brave.
Lord, give me eaſier entrance, if thou pleaſe;
Or if I may not there arrive with eaſe,
Yet I beſeech thee ſet me ſafe aſhore,
Though ſtormy Winds at Harbours mouth ſhould roar.

CHAP. XXXII.

How glad are Seamen, when they make the Shore?
And Saints no leſs, when all their Danger's o're.

OBSERVATION.

WHat Joy is there among Seamen, when at laſt, after a tedious and dangerous Voyage, they deſcry Land, and ſee the deſired Haven before them? Then they turn out of their loath'd Cabbins, and come upon open Deck with much joy, Pſal. 107. 30. Then they are glad, becauſe they be quiet: So he bringeth them to their deſired Haven. Now they can reflect with comfort upon the many dangers they have paſt, Olim hæc meminiſſe juvabit; It is ſweet to recount them.

APPLICATION.

But O, what tranſcendent Joy, yea, raviſhing, will over-run the hearts of Saints, when after ſo many Conflicts, Temptations, and Afflictions, they arrive in glory, and are harbour'd in Heaven, where they ſhall reſt for ever! 2 Theſ. 1. 7. The Scripture ſaith, They ſhall ſing the Song of Moſes, and of the Lamb, Rev. 15. 3. The Song of Moſes was a triumphant Song, compoſed for the celebration of that glorious Deliverance at the Red Sea. The Saints are now fluctuating upon a troubleſome and tempeſtuous Sea; their hearts ſometime ready to ſink and die within them, at the apprehenſion of ſo many and great dangers and difficulties. Many an hard ſtorm they ride out, and many ſtreights and troubles they here encounter with: But at laſt they arrive at their deſired and long-expected Haven, and then Heaven rings and reſounds with their joyful acclamations. And how can it be otherwiſe, when as ſoon as ever they ſet foot upon that glorious Shore, Chriſt himſelf meets and receives them with a Come ye bleſſed of my Father? Matth. 25. 34. O joyful voice! O much deſired Word! (ſaith Paræus) What tribulation would not a man undergo for his Words ſake!

Beſides, then they are perfectly freed from all evils, whether of ſin or ſuffering, and perfectly filled with all deſired good. Now they ſhall joyn with that great Aſſembly, in the high praiſes of God. O what a day will this be! if (ſaith a worthy Divine) Diagoras died away with an exceſs of Joy, whilſt he embraced his three Sons that were crowned as Victors in the Olympic Games in one day: And good old Simeon, when he ſaw Chriſt but in a body ſubject to the infirmities of our natures, cryed out, Now let th Servant depart in Peace; what unſpeakable joy will i be to the Saints, to behold Chriſt in his glory, and ſee their godly relations alſo, (to whoſe converſion, perhaps, they have been inſtrumental) all crown'd in one day with everlaſting Diadems of bliſs! And if the ſtars did (as Ignatius ſaith) make a Quire, a it were, about that ſtar that appear'd at Chriſt's Incarnation, and there be ſuch joy in Heaven at the converſion of a ſinner: no wonder then, the Morning-ſtars ſing together, and the Sons of God ſhou for Joy, when the general Aſſembly meet in Heaven; O how will the Arches of Heaven ring and eccho, when the high praiſes of God ſhall be in the mouth of ſuch a Congregation! then ſhall the Saints be joyful in glory, and ſing aloud upon their Beds of everlaſting Reſt.

Morning Exerciſe, p. 65

REFLECTION.

And is there ſuch a day approaching for the Sons of God indeed! and have I [authority] to call my ſelf one of the number! John 1. 12. O then let me not droop at preſent difficulties, nor hang down my hands when I meet with hardſhips in the way. O my Soul, what a joyful day will this be! for a preſent we are toſt upon an Ocean of troubles, fears temptations; but theſe will make Heaven th ſweeter.

Chear up then, O my Soul, thy Salvation is no nearer than when thou firſt believedſt, Rom. 13. 1 And it will not now be long ere I receive the en of my Faith, 1 Pet. 1. 9. And then it will be ſweet reflect even upon theſe hardſhips in the way. Yet few days more, and then comes that bleſſed day tho haſt ſo long waited and panted for. Oppoſe th glory of that day (O my Soul) to thy preſent ab ſures and ſufferings, as bleſſed Paul did, Rom. 1.1

And thou ſhalt ſee how it will ſhrink them all up to nothing. Oppoſe the Inheritance thou ſhalt receive in that day, to thy loſſes for Chriſt now; and ſee how joyfully it will make thee bear them, Heb. 10. 34. Oppoſe the honour that will be put upon thee in that day, to thy preſent reproaches; and ſee how eaſie it will make them to thee, 1 Cor. 4. 5. What condition can I be in, wherein the believing thoughts of this bleſſed day cannot relieve me?

Am I poor, Here is that which anſwers Poverty, Jam. 3. 5. Hearken, my beloved Brethren, hath not God choſen the poor of this world, rich in Faith, and heirs of the Kingdom?

Am I tempted? Here is relief againſt that, Revel. 12. 16. Now is come Salvation and ſtrength; for the Accuſer of our Brethren is caſt down, &c.

Am I deſerted? Here is a remedy for that too, Revel. 22. 5. And there ſhall be no night there, &c. Come then, my Soul, let us enter upon our Inheritance by degrees, and begin the Life of Heaven upon Earth.

A Concluding Speech.

I Have now done, and am looking to Heaven for a bleſſing upon theſe weak Labours: what uſe you will make of them, I know not; but this I know, that the day is coming, when God will reckon with you for this, and all other helps and means afforded to you. And if it be not improved by you, be ſure it will be produced as a witneſs againſt you. Sirs, I beg you in the Name of Chriſt, before whom both you and I muſt ſhortly appear, that you receive not theſe things in vain. Did I know what other lawful means to uſe that might reach your hearts, they ſhould not be in vain to you; but I cannot do God's part of the work, nor yours. Only I requeſt you all, both Maſters, common Men, and all others, into whoſe hands this ſhall come, that you will lay to heart what you read; pray unto him that hath the Key of the Houſe of David, that openeth and no man ſhutteth, to open your hearts to give entertainment to theſe truths. Alas! If you apply it not to your ſelves, I have laboured to no purpoſe, the Pen of the Scribe is in vain: But God may make ſuch an application of them, in one Storm or another, as may make your hearts to tremble. O Sirs! when Death and Eternity look you in the face, Conſcience may reflect upon theſe things to your horror and amazement, and make you cry out, as Prov. 5. 12, 13. How have I hated knowledge, and my heart deſpiſed reproof? And have not obeyed the voice of my Teacher, nor inclined my ears to them that inſtructed me? And O what a dreadful ſhriek will ſuch Souls give, when the Lord opens their eyes, to ſee that miſery that they are here warned of! But if the Lord ſhall bleſs theſe things to your Converſion, then we may ſay to you, as Moſes did to Zebulun, the Mariner's Tribe Deut. 33. 12. Rejoyce Zebulun, in thy going out. The Lord will be with you which way ſoever you turn your ſelves; and being in the boſom of the Covenant, you are ſafe in the midſt of all dangers. O! thou that art the Father of Spirits, that formedſt, and canſt eaſily reform the heart, open thou the blind eye, unſtop the deaf ear, let the Word take hold upon the heart. If thou wilt but ſay the word, theſe weak Labours ſhall proſper, to bring home many loſt Souls unto thee. Amen.

Drunkenneſs, Swearing, Uncleanneſs, Forgetfulneſs of Mercies, Violation of Promiſes; and Atheiſtical Contempt of Death.

Applied by way of CAUTION to Seamen, and now added as an APPENDIX to their NEW COMPASS.

Being an Eſſay toward their much-deſired Reformation: Fit to be ſeriouſly recommended to their Prophane Relations, whether Seamen or others, by all ſuch as unfeignedly deſire their Eternal Welfare.

To the Right Worſhipful Sir JOHN FREDERICK, Kt. One of the Worſhipful Aldermen of the City of London, and their Honourable BURGESS in the preſent Parliament: And to the truly Religious and ever Honoured, Mr. JOHN LOVERING, of the City of London, Merchant.

Much honour'd and eſteem'd,

Although Dedications are too often abuſed to a vain flattery, yet is there an excellent uſe and advantage to be made of them: Partly to encourage Perſons of Worth and Eminency to eſpouſe the Intereſt of Religion themſelves; and partly to oblige thoſe Readers, for whom ſuch Books are principally intended, to a diligent peruſal of them, by intereſting ſuch Perſons in them, for whom they have great Reſpects, or on whom they have any dependance.

Upon the firſt account, a Dedication would bee needleſs to you: for I am perſwaded, you do not only in your Judgment approve the Deſign I here manage, viz. The Reformation of the prophane and looſer ſort of our Seamen; but are alſo heartily willing to improve your Intereſt to the uttermoſt for the promotion of it. I cannot look upon you as Perſons acted by that low and common ſpirit that the moſt of your Profeſſion are acted by, who little regard, if they be good Servants to them, whether God have any Service from them, or no; and if they pay them the Wages due for their work, never think of the Wages they are to receive for their ſin. You are judged to be Perſons of another ſpirit, who do not only mind, but advance Chriſt's Intereſt above your own, and negotiate for his Glory, as well as for your own gain: And yet, herein you conſult your own Intereſt as well as God's: Subordinata non pugnant. Your Intereſt is never more proſperouſly managed, or abundantly ſecured, than when it is carried on in a due ſubordination to God's. Their Reformation will apparently tend to your advantage. Thoſe ſins of theirs, againſt which I have here engaged, are the Jonahs in your Ships: 'tis ſin that ſinks them, and drives them againſt the Rocks. One ſinner deſtroys much good, Ecleſ. 8. 11. How much more a lend Crew of them conſpiring to provoke God! The death of their Luſts, is the moſt probable means to give life to your Trade. And as theſe Counſels proſper in their hearts, ſo will your Buſineſs thrive in your hands. Piety and Proſperity are married together in that Promiſe, Pſal. 1. 3. Oneſimus was never ſo profitable a Servant to Philemon, as when he became his Brother in a Spiritual, as well as his Servant in a Civil Capacity. Philem. verſ. 11. and 16. compared. And yet if your Intereſt were forced to ſtep back, to give way to Chriſt's, I hope you would (notwithſtanding) rejoyce therein. So that my preſent buſineſs is, not ſo much to perſwade you, whoſe hearts, I hope, God hath already perſwaded, to ſo good a work; as to make your Fames and Reſpects, which are great among them, an innocent Bait to tempt them to their Duty. And if either your Name or Intereſt may be uſeful to ſuch an end, I preſume I may uſe them freely, and welcome: for, ſure I am, they can never be put to a better uſe.

Well then, I will make bold to ſend this ſmall Adventure in your Ships; and if the Return of it be but the Converſion of one Soul to God, I ſhall reckon that I have made a better Voyage than you, let your Returns be never ſo rich.

How theſe things will affect them, I know not. I do ſuppoſe it will produce different effects upon them, according to the different tempers of their ſpirits, and according as God ſhall command, or ſuſpend the Bleſſing. Poſſibly ſome will ſtorm at the cloſe and cutting Rebukes of the Word, (for moſt mens Luſts are a great deal more ſenſible and tender than their Conſciences) and will fondly imagine that this neceſſary plainneſs tends to their reproach. But if none but the guilty can be ſuppoſed to be angry at them, they will thereby reproach themſelves a great deal more than ever I intend to do.

I confeſs it is a bitter Pill, and compounded of many operative, and ſtrong Ingredients, which do acute it; but not a jot more than is neceſſary. I ſhall beg the aſſiſtance of your Prayers to God for them, and of your grave Admonitions and Exhortations to them for God; which will much help its Operation, and facilitate my Deſign, to do their Souls a piece of everlaſting Service; with which Deſign I can truly ſay I even travel in pain for them. Your aſſiſtance therefore in this good Work, will put the higheſt Obligation upon

Your moſt affectionate
Friend and Servant
to be commanded,

JOHN FLAVEL

A Sober Conſideration Of the SIN of DRUNKENNESS.

IN the former Treatiſe I have endeavoured to Spiritualize earthly Objects, and elevate your thoughts to more ſublime and excellent Contemplations; that earthly things may rather be a ſtep, than a ſtop to Heavenly. You have therein my beſt advice to guide you in your Courſe to that Port of your Eternal Reſt and Happineſs.

In this, I have given warning of ſome dangerous Rocks and Quick-ſands that lie upon your left hand; upon which millions of Souls have periſhed, and others are wilfully running to their own perdition. Such are the horrid Sins of Drunkenneſs, Uncleanneſs, profane Swearing, Violation of Promiſes, and Ingagements made to God, and Atheiſtical ſlighting and contempt of Death and Eternity. All which I have here given warning of, and held forth a Light to diſcover where your danger is. If after this you obſtinately proſecute your Luſts, and will not be reclaimed; you periſh without Apology, I have freed mine own Soul.

Let none interpret this neceſſary plainneſs, as a reproach to Seamen, as if I repreſented them to the world worſe than they are. If upon that account any of them be offended, methinks theſe three or four Conſiderations ſhould remove that offence.

Firſt, that if this cloſe and plain dealing be neceſſary in order to your Cure, and you will be offended thereat, it's better you ſhould be offended than God. Miniſters are often put upon lamentable ſtreights, they ſail betwixt Sylla and Charibdis; the wrath of God upon one ſide, if we do not ſpeak plain, and home, as the neceſſity of the Caſe requires; and Man's wrath, if we do: What ſhall we do in this ſtreight? Either God or you, it ſeems, muſt be offended; and if it cannot be avoided, I ſhall rather hazard your anger than God's, and think it far more tolerable.

Secondly, If you did but ſee the neceſſity and end of this manner of dealing with your Souls, you would not be offended. But put it into a more ſenſible caſe, and you will ſee and acknowledge it preſently. If I ſhould ſee an high-built Wall giving way, and ready to fall upon you; would you be angry with me, if by plucking you out of the danger, I ſhould pluck your arm out of joint? Certainly you would not. Why this is the caſe here: See Iſa. 30. 13. Therefore this Iniquity ſhall be unto you as a breach ready to fall, ſwelling out in a high Wall, whoſe breaking cometh ſuddenly, at an inſtant.

Thirdly, What a madneſs is it to abide in a condition over which all Woes and Curſes hang, and yet not be able to endure to hear of it! Why what will it profit you to have your miſery hid from your eyes, and kept from your ears a little while? You muſt ſee this wrath, and hear louder vollies of Woes from your own Conſciences, if you remain in this condition. You cannot bear that from us, which your Conſcience will one of theſe days preach themſelves to you, and that in a more dreadful dialect: than I have uſed here.

Fourthly, I do not charge theſe ſins indifferently upon all Seamen. No, I know there are ſome choice and good men amongſt your men, that fear an Oath, and hate even the garments ſpotted with the fleſh, who are (I queſtion not) the credit and glory of our Engliſh Nation, in the eyes of Strangers that converſe with them. Nor yet do I think, that all that are wicked amongſt them, are equally guilty of all theſe evils; for though all that are graceleſs, be equally under the dominion of Original Corruption, yet it follows not from thence, that therefore actual ſins muſt reign alike in them: There is great difference, even among ungodly men themſelves, in this reſpect; which difference ariſeth from their various Cuſtoms, Conſtitutions, Abilities, Educations, and the different Adminiſtrations of the Spirit, in enlightning, convincing, and putting checks upon Conſcience: For though God be not the Author, yet he is the Orderer of ſin. And this makes a great diſparity, even among wicked men themſelves. Some are perſons of good Morals, though not Gracious Principles, which produce a civil and ſober, though not a holy and a religious Life. And others, though they live in ſome one of theſe Luſts, yet are not guilty of ſome others of them. For it is with Original Corruption, juſt as it is with the ſap of the Earth, which though it be the matter of all kind of Fruits, yet in ſome ground it ſorts better with one grain than with another: And ſo in Plants, in one tree it becomes an Apple, in another a Cherry; even ſo it is with this Original Corruption: In one man it runs moſt into Swearing, in another into Uncleanneſs, in a third into Drunkenneſs. Luſt is nothing elſe but the corrupt appetite of the Creature to ſome ſinful object: and therefore look as it is with the Appetite with reſpect to Food, ſo it is with the vitiated Appetites of Souls to ſin. One man loves this Food beſt, and another that; there is endleſs variety in that, and ſo in this.

Having ſpoken thus much to remove offence, I ſhall now beg you to peruſe the following Diſcourſe. Conſider what evidence theſe things carry with them. Search the alledged Scriptures, ſee if they be truly recited and applied to the caſe in hand: And if ſo, Oh tremble at the truth you read; bring forth your Luſts that they made die the death: Will you not part with theſe abominable practices till Death and Hell make the ſeparation? Ah how much better is it for you, that Grace ſhould do it! And becauſe many of you ſee not the danger, and therefore prize not the Remedy, I do here Requeſt all thoſe that have the Bowels of Pity in them for their poor Relations, who are ſinking, drowning, periſhing, to ſpread theſe following Cautions before the Lord for a Bleſſing, and then put them into their hands. And oh that all pious Maſters would perſwade thoſe that are under their charge to buy this enſuing Treatiſe, and diligently peruſe it. And the firſt Caution I ſhall give them, is this.

I. CAUTION.

TAke heed and beware of the deteſtable Sin of Drunkenneſs, which is a beaſtly ſin, a voluntary madneſs, a ſin that unmans thee, and makes thee like the beaſt that periſhes; yea, ſets thee below the brute beaſts, which will not drink to exceſs; or if they do, yet it's not their ſin, One of the Ancients calls it, "A "diſtemper of the Head, a ſub-"verſion of the ſenſes, a tempeſt "in the tongue, a ſtorm of the "body, the ſhipwreck of vertue, "the loſs of time, a wilful mad-"neſs, a pleaſant devil, a ſugar'd "poyſon, a ſweet ſin, which he "that has, has not himſelf, and "he that commits it, doth not "only commit Sin, but he himſelf "is altogether ſin. It is a Sin at which the moſt ſober Heathens bluſhed. The Spartans brought their Children to loath it, by ſhewing them a Drunkard, whom they gazed at as a Monſter: even Epicurus himſelf, who eſteemed happineſs to conſiſt in Pleaſure, yet was temperate, as Cicero obſerves: Among the Heathens, he was accounted the beſt man, that ſpent more Oyl in the Lamp, than Wine in the Bottle. Chriſtianity could once glory in its profeſſors: Tertullian ſaith of the Primitive Chriſtians, They ſat not down before they prayed, they eat no more than might ſuffice hunger, they drank no more than was ſufficient for temperate men; they did ſo eat and drink, as thoſe that remembred they muſt pray afterward. But now it may bluſh to behold ſuch beaſtly ſenſualiſts adorning themſelves with its name, and ſheltring themſelves under its wings.

Turbatum capitis, ſubverſio ſenſus tempeſtas linguæ, procella corporis, naufraginm virtutus, amiſſio temporis, inſania voluntaria, blande dæmon, dulce venenum, ſuave peccatum, quam qui habet, ſepiſum non habet, quam qui fecit, peccatum non fecit, ſed ipſe totus eſt peccatatum. Aug. ad. lacr. Viginis.

And amongſt thoſe that profeſs Chriſtianity, how ordinarily is this ſin committed by Seamen? This inſatiable Dropſie is a Diſeaſe that reigns eſpecially among the inferiour and ruder ſort of them. Some of them have gone aboard drunk, and laid the foundation of their Voyage in ſin. O what a preparation is this! They know not whether ever they ſhall ſee the Land of their Nativity any more; the next Storm may ſend them into Eternity: yet this is the Farewel they take; this is their preparation to meet the Lord. And ſo in their returns, notwithſtanding the terrible and aſtoniſhing Works of the Lord, which they have beheld with their eyes, and their marvellous preſervation in ſo great and terrible extremities; yet thus do they requite the Lord, aſſoon as their dangers are over, as if they had been deliver'd to commit all theſe abominations. But a few hours, or days ſince, they were reeling to and fro upon a ſtormy Ocean, and ſtaggering like drunken men, as it is Pſal. 107. 27. and now you may ſee them reeling and ſtaggering in the ſtreets, drowning the ſenſe of all thoſe precious Mercies and Deliverances in their drunken Cups.

Reader, If thou be one that is guilty of this ſin, for the Lord's ſake, bethink thy ſelf ſpeedily, and weigh, with the reaſon of a man, what I ſhall now ſay, in order to thy Conviction, Humiliation and Reformation. I need not ſpend many words, to open the nature of this ſin to you: we all grant, that there is a lawful uſe of Wine and ſtrong Drink, to ſupport Nature, not to clog it; to cure Infirmities, not to cauſe them. Drink no longer water, but uſe a little Wine, for thy ſtomach ſake, and thine often infirmities, ſaith Paul to Timothy, 1 Tim. 5. 23. mark; drink not water, but wine, ſed modice (i. e.) medice; pro remedio, non pro delicis, ſaith Ambroſe: that is, uſe it modeſtly, viz. Medicinally, not for pleaſure, but for Remedy. Yea, God allows it, not noly for bare neceſſity, but for chearfulneſs and alacrity, that the body may be more fit and expedite for duty, Prov. 31. 7. But further no man proceeds, without the violation of Sobriety. When men ſit till Wine have inflamed them, and reaſon be diſturbed (for Drunkenneſs is the privation of reaſon, cauſed by immoderate drinking) then do they come under the guilt of this horrid and abominable Sin. To the Satiſfaction and refreſhment of nature, you may drink; for it is a part of the Curſe, to drink, and not be ſatisfied: but take heed you go no further, For Wine is a [mocker] ſtrong Drink is raging, and whoſoever is deceived thereby is not wiſe, Prov. 20. 1. The Throat is a ſlippery place; how eaſily may a ſin ſlip through it into the Soul? theſe ſenſual Pleaſures have a kind of inchanting power upon the Soul; and by cuſtom gain upon it, till they have enſlaved it, and brought it under their power. Now this is the ſin againſt which God hath delivered ſo many Precepts, and denounced ſo many Woes, in his Word: Epheſ. 5. 18. Be not drunken with wine wherein is exceſs, Rom. 13. 18. Not in rioting and drunkenneſs, not in chambering and wantonneſs, Iſa. 5. 11. Wo to them that riſe early in the morning, that they may follow ſtrong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them; with many other of dreadful importance. Now to ſtartle thee for ever from this abominable and filthy luſt, I ſhall here propound to thy Conſideration theſe ten enſuing Arguments: and oh that they might ſtand in the way, as the Angel did in Balaam's, when thou art in the proſecution of thy ſenſual Pleaſures! And the firſt is this.

Arg. 1. It ſhould exceedingly diſſwade from this Sin, to conſider ~~that it~~ is an high abuſe of the Bounty and Goodneſs of God, in affording us thoſe ſweet Refreſhments, to make our Lives comfortable to us upon earth. In Adam we forfeited all right, to all earthly, as will as heavenly Mercies. God might have taken thee from the Womb, when thou waſt a Sinner but of a ſpan long, and immediately have ſent thee to thine own place: thou hadſt no right to a drop of water, more than what the bounty of God gave thee. And whereas he might have thruſt thee out of the world as ſoon as thou cameſt into it, and ſo all thoſe days of mercy thou haſt had on earth, might have been ſpent in howling and unſpeakable miſery in Hell: Behold the Bounty and Goodneſs of God in thee; I ſay, behold it, and wonder: He hath ſuffered thee for ſo many years to live upon the earth, which he hath prepared and furniſhed with all things fit for thy neceſſity and delight; out of the earth on which thou treadeſt, he bringeth forth thy food, and [Wine] to make glad thy heart, Pſal. 104. 14, 15. And doſt thou thus requite the Lord? Hath Mercy armed an enemy to fight againſt it with its own Weapons? Ah that ever the Riches of his Goodneſs, Bounty, and Long-ſuffering (all which are arguments to lead thee to repentance) ſhould be thus abuſed! If God had not been ſo bountiful, thou couldſt not have been ſo ſinful.

Arg. 2. It degrades a man from the honour of his Creation, and equalizeth him to the beaſt that periſheth. Wine is ſaid to take away the heart. Hoſ. 4. 11. (i.e.) the wiſdom and ingenuity of a man, and ſo brutifies him; as Nebuchadnezzar, who loſt the heart of a man, and had the heart of a beaſt given him, Dan. 4. 32. The heart of a man hath its generoſity and ſprightlineſs, brave vigorous ſpirit in it, capable of, and fitted for noble and worthy actions and imployments; but his luſt effeminates, quenches and drowns that maſculine vigour in the puddle of exceſs and ſenſuality. For no ſooner is a man brought under the dominion of this Luſt, but the government of Reaſon is renounced, which ſhould exerciſe a coercive power over the Affections; and all is delivered up into the hand of Luſt and Appetite; and ſo they act, not by diſcretion and reaſon, but by Luſt and Will, as the Beaſts do by Inſtinct. The ſpirit of Man entertains it ſelf with intellectual and chaſt Delights, the ſoul of a Beaſt is onely fitted for ſuch low, ſenſitive and dreggie Pleaſures. Thou haſt ſomething of the Angel, and ſomething of the Beaſt in thee; thy Soul partakes of the nature of Angels, thy Body of the nature of Beaſts: Oh how many pamper the Beaſt, while they ſtarve the Angel! God in the firſt Chapter, put all the Creatures in ſubjection to thee; by this Luſt thou putteſt thy ſelf in Subjection to the creature, and art brought under his power, 1 Cor. 6. 12. If God had given thee the feet or head of a beaſt, Oh what a miſery wouldſt thou have eſteemed it! And is it nothing to have the heart of a Beaſt? Oh conſider it ſadly.

Arg. 3. It is a Sin by which thou greatly wrongeſt and abuſeſt thine own Body. The Body is the Souls Inſtrument, it is as the Tools are to a skilful Artificer, this Luſt both dulls and ſpoils it, ſo that it's utterly unfit for any ſervice of him that made it. Thy body is a curious piece, not made by a word of command, as other Creatures, but by a word of counſel, I am fearfully and wonderfully made, and curiouſly wrought, (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) Pſal. 139. 14. or as the Vulgar, Ace pictus ſum, Painted as with a Needle, like a Garment of Needlework of divers colours, richly embroidered. Look how many members, ſo many wonders. There are Miracles enough (ſaith one) betwixt head and foot, to fill a volume. There is (ſaith another) ſuch curious workmanſhip in the eye, that upon the firſt ſight of it ſome Atheiſts have been forced to acknowledge a God; eſpecially that fifth Muſcle in the eye is wonderful, whereby (as a learned * Author obſerves) Man differeth from all other Creatures, who have but four; one to turn the eye downward, a ſecond to hold it forward, a third to move it to the right hand, a fourth to the left; but none to turn it upward as a man hath. Now judge in thy ſelf, did God frame ſuch a curious piece, and enliven it with a Soul, which is a ſpark, a ray of his own light, whoſe motions are ſo quick, various and indefatigable, whoſe flights of reaſon are ſo tranſcendent; did God, thinkeſt thou, ſend down this curious piece, the top and glory of the Creation, the Index and Epitome of the whole world, Eccl. 12. 2. did God (I ſay) ſend down this picture of his own perfection, to be but as a ſtrainer for meats and drinks, a ſpunge to ſuck in Wine and Beer? Or canſt thou anſwer for the abuſe and deſtruction of it? By this exceſs thou filleſt it with innumerable diſeaſes under which it languiſheth; and at laſt thy life, like a lamp extinguiſht, being drowned with too much Oyle. Infinite Diſeaſes are begotten by it (ſaith Zanch.) hence come Apoplexies, Gouts, Palſies, ſudden Death, trembling of the hands and legs; herein they bring Cain's curſe upon themſelves, ſaith Ambroſe. Drunkenneſs ſlays more than the Sword. Oh! what a terrible thing will it be to conſider upon a Death-bed, that theſe pangs and aches are the fruits of thy Intemperance and Exceſs! Who hath wo? Who hath ſorrows? Who hath contention? Who hath babling? Who hath wounds without cauſe? Who hath redneſs of eyes? They that tarry long at Wine, they that go to ſeek mixt Wine, Prov. 23. 29, 30. By this Enumeration, and manner of Interrogation, he ſeems to make it a difficult thing to recount the miſeries that Drunkenneſs loads the outward man with: for look as Vermine abound where there is ſtore of Corn, ſo do Diſeaſes in the bodies of Drunkards, where crudities do ſo abound: Now methinks if thou have no regard to thy poor Soul, or the glory of God; yet ſuch a ſenſible Argument as this, from thy body, ſhould move thee.

Infinitæ morborum genera indenaſcuntur Applexæ, Paralyſes, Arthrides, &c. Ille optimus medicus ſibi, qui modicus cibi. Aug.

Arg. 4. Drunkenneſs waſtes and ſcatters thine eſtate, Poverty attends exceſs: the Drunkard ſhall be cloathed with Rags, and brought to a morſel of bread. Solomon hath read thy fortune, Prov. 21. 17. He that loveth Wine and Oyl ſhall not be rich, Luxury and Beggary are ſeldom far aſunder. When Diogenes heard a Drunkard's houſe cryed to be ſold; I thought, quoth he, it would not be long ere he vomited up his houſe alſo. The Hebrew word תירוש and the Greek work ἀσωτία, which ſignifie Luxury; the former is compounded of two words, which ſignify, Thou ſhalt be poor; and the latter ſignifies the loſing of the poſſeſſion of that good which is in our hand. The Drunkard and the Glutton ſhall ſurely come to poverty, Prov. 23. 21. In the Hebrew it is, He ſhall be diſinherited, or diſpoſſeſſed. It doth not only diſpoſſeſs a man of his Reaſon, which is a rich and fair inheritance given to him by God, but it alſo diſpoſſeſſes him of his eſtate: it waſtes all that either the provident care of thy Progenitors, or the bleſſing of God upon thine own induſtry, hath obtained for thee. And how will this ſting like an Adder, when thou ſhalt conſider it? Apicius the Roman, hearing that there were ſeven hundred Crowns only remaining of a fair eſtate that his Father had left him, fell into a deep Melancholly, and fearing want, hanged himſelf, ſaith Seneca. And not to mention the miſeries and ſorrows they bring hereby upon their Families, drinking the tears, yea, blood of their Wives and Children: Oh what an account will they give to God, when their reckoning-day comes! Believe it, Sirs, there is not a ſhilling of your eſtates, but God will reckon with you for the expence thereof. If you have ſpent it upon your luſts, while the neceſſity of your families, or the poor, called upon you for it; I ſhould be loth to have your account to make, for a thouſand times more than ever you poſſeſſed. O woful expence, that is followed with ſuch dreadful reckonings!

Arg. 5. Conſider what vile and ignominious Characters the Spirit of God hath put upon the ſubjects of this ſin. The Scripture every where notes them for infamous, and moſt abominable perſons. When Eli ſuppoſed Hannah to be drunken, Count not thy handmaid a daughter of Belial, ſaid ſhe, 1 Sam. 1. 16. Now a Son or daughter of Belial is, in Scripture-language, the vileſt of men or women. So Pſal. 69. 12. They that ſit in the gate, ſpeak againſt me, and I am the Song of Drunkards, (i.e.) of the baſeſt and vileſt of men, as the oppoſition plainly ſhews; for they are oppoſed to them that ſit in the gate, that is, honourable perſons. The Lord would have his people ſhun the ſociety of ſuch, as a peſt. Not to eat with them, 1 Cor. 5. 11. Yea, the Scripture brands them with Atheiſm; they are ſuch as have loſt the ſenſe and expectation of the Day of Judgment; mind not another world, nor do they look for the coming of the Lord, Matth. 24. 27, 28. He ſaith the Lord delayeth his coming, and then falls a drinking with the drunken. The thoughts of that day will make them leave their Cups, or their Cups will drown the thoughts of ſuch a Day. And will not all the contempt, ſhame and infamy, which the Spirit of God hath poured on the head of this ſin, cauſe thee to abhor it? Do not all Godly, yea Moral Perſons, abhor the Drunkard? Oh methinks the ſhame that attends it, ſhould be as a fence to keep thee from it.

Arg. 6. Sadly conſider, there can be nothing of the ſanctifying Spirit in a ſoul that is under the dominion of this luſt; for upon the firſt diſcovery of the Grace of God, the Soul renounces the Government of Senſuality. The Grace of God that bringeth Salvation, teacheth men to live ſoberly, Tit. 2. 11, 12. That is one of its firſt effects. Drunkenneſs indeed may be found among Heathens, that are loſt in the darkneſs of Ignorance; but it may not be once named among the Children of the Day. They that be drunken, are drunken in the night; but let us that are of the day be ſober, 1 Theſ. 5. 7, 8. And the Apoſtles often oppoſe Wine and the Spirit as things incompatible, Eph. 5. 16. Be not drunk with Wine wherein is exceſs, but be filled with the Spirit. So Jude 19. Senſual, not having the Spirit. Now what a dreadful Conſideration is this: If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt the ſame is none of his, Rom. 8. 9. Senſual perſons have not the Spirit of Chriſt, and ſo can be none of his. It's true, Noah, a Godly man, once fell into this ſin, but as Theodoret ſaith, and that truly, it proceeded ab inexperientiæ non ab intemperantia, from want of experience of the force and power of the Grape, not from Intemperance; and beſides, we find not that ever he was again overtaken with that ſin; but thou knoweſt it, and yet perſiſteſt. O wretched Creature! the Spirit of Chriſt cannot dwell in thee. The Lord help thee to lay it to heart ſadly.

Arg. 7. It's a Sin over which many direful woes and threats hang in the Word, like ſo many lowring clouds, ready to pour down vengeance upon the heads of ſuch Sinners. Look as the condition of the Saints is compaſſed round with Promiſes, ſo is yours with Threatnings, Iſa. 5. 11. Wo to them that riſe up early in the morning, that they may follow ſtrong drink, and continue until night, until Wine inflame. So Iſa. 28. 1, 2. Wo to the Crown of Pride, to the Drunkards of Ephraim, &c. With many other, too long to enumerate here. Now conſider what a fearful thing it is to be under theſe woes of God: Sinner, I beſeech thee, do not make light of them, for they will fall heavy: aſſure thy ſelf, not one of them ſhall fall to the ground: they will all take place upon thee, except thou repent.

There are woes of Men, and woes of God: Gods woes are true woes, and make their condition woful to purpoſe on whom they fall. Other woes (as one ſaith) do but touch the skin, but theſe ſtrike the Soul; other woes are but temporal, theſe are eternal; others do only part betwixt us and our outward comforts, theſe betwixt God and us for ever.

Arg. 8. Drunkenneſs is a leading ſin, which has a great retinue and attendance of other ſins waiting on it, it's like a ſudden Land flood, which brings a great deal of dirt with it. So that look as Faith excels among the Graces, becauſe it enlivens, actuates, and gives ſtrength to them; ſo is this among ſins. It is not ſo much a ſpecial ſin againſt a ſingle Precept of God, as a general violation of the whole Law, (ſaith accurate Ameſius.) It doth not only call off the guard, but warms and quickens all other Luſts, and ſo expoſes the Soul to be proſtituted by them. (1.) It gives occaſion, yea, is the real cauſe of many contentions, and fatal quarrels, Prov. 23. 29. Who hath wo! Who hath ſorrow, Who hath [contention] babling, wounds without cauſe? They that tarry long at the wine, &c. Contentions and Wounds are the ordinary effects of drunken meetings: when Reaſon is depoſed, and Luſt heated, what will not men attempt? (2.) Scoffs and reproaches of the ways and people of God. Pſal. 69. 12. David was the Song of the Drunkards. (3.) It's the great incendiary of Luſt: You ſhall find rioting and drunkenneſs joyned with chambering and wantonneſs, Rom. 13. 13. Nunquam ego ebrium caſtum putabo, ſaith Hierom, I will never think a drunkard to be chaſte. Solomon plainly tells us, what the iſſue will be, Prov. 23. 33. Thine eyes ſhall behold a ſtrange woman, and thy heart ſhall utter perverſe things, ſpeaking of the Drunkard. It may be called Gad, for a troop followeth it. Hence one aptly calls it, The Devils bridle, by which he turneth the ſinner which way he pleaſes: he that is overcome by it, can overcome no other ſin.

Arg. 9. But if none of the former Conſiderations can prevail, I hope theſe two laſt may, unleſs all ſenſe and tenderneſs be loſt. Conſider therefore in the 9th place, That Drunkards are in Scripture marked out for Hell: the Characters of Death are upon them. You ſhall find them pinioned with other Sons of death, 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Know ye not, that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God? Be not deceived: Neither Fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abuſers of themſelves with Mankind, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor [Drunkards,] nor Revilers, nor Extortioners, ſhall inherit the Kingdom of God. Oh dreadful thunderbolt! He is not aſleep but dead, that is not ſtartled at it. Lord, how are guilty ſinners able to face ſuch a Text as this is! Oh Soul! Dareſt thou for a ſuperfluous Cup adventure to drink a Cup of pure unmixed wrath? O think when the Wine ſparkles in the glaſs, and gives its colour, think, I ſay, what a Cup of trembling is in the hand of the Lord for thee. Thou wilt not now believe this; O but the day is coming, when thou ſhalt know the price of their brutiſh pleaſures. Oh it will then ſting like an Adder. Ah! this ſhort-lived beaſtly pleaſure is the price for which thou ſelleſt Heaven, and rivers of pleaſure that are at Gods right hand.

Obj. But I hope I ſhall repent, and then this Text can be no bar to my Salvation.

Sol. True, if God ſhall give thee Repentance, it could not. But in the laſt place, to awaken thee throughly, and ſtartle thy ſecure Conſcience, which Senſuality hath brawned and cauterized, let me tell thee,

Arg. 10. That it is a ſin out of whoſe power few or none are ever reſcued or reclaimed. On this account it was that Saint Auguſtine called it the Pit of Hell: he that is addicted to this Sin, becomes incurable (ſaith a Reverend Divine) for ſeldom, or never, have I known a Drunkard recalled. And its power to hold the ſoul in ſubjection to it, lies in two things eſpecially: (1.) as it becomes habitual; and habits are not eaſily broken; be pleaſed to view an Example in the caſe, *Prov.*23. 35. They have ſtricken me, ſhalt thou ſay, and I was not ſick; they have beaten me and I felt it not. When I ſhall awake, I will ſeek it yet again. (2.) As it takes away the heart, Hoſ. 4. 11. that is, the underſtanding, reaſon and ingenuity of a man, and ſo makes him uncapable of being reclaimed by counſel. Upon this account it was, that Abigail would not ſpeak leſs or more to Nabal, till the Wine was gone out of him, 1 Sam. 25. 36, 37. plainly intimating, that no wholſome counſel can get in, till the Wine be gone out. When one asked Cleoſtratus, whether he were not aſhamed to be drunken, he tartly replied; And are not you aſhamed to admoniſh a Drunkard? intimating that no wiſe man would caſt away an admonition upon ſuch an one. And it not only renders them uncapable of counſel for the time, but by degrees it beſots and infatuates them; which is a very grievous ſtroke from God upon them, making way to their eternal ruin. So then you ſee upon the whole, what a dangerous gulph the ſin of Drunkenneſs is. I beg you for the Lord's ſake, and by all the regard you have to your ſouls, bodies, and eſtates, beware of it. Oh conſider theſe ten Arguments I have here produced againſt it. I ſhould have proceeded to anſwer the ſeveral Pleas and Excuſes you have for it. But I mind brevity, and ſhall ſhut up this firſt Caution, with a very pertinent and ingenious Poem of Mr. George Herbert, in his Temple.

Ames, de conſc. p. 139.

Drink not the third glaſs, which thou canſt not tame
When once it is within thee; but before
Mayſt rule it as thou liſt, and pour the ſhame which it will pour to thee, upon the floor.
It is moſt juſt to throw that on the ground,
Which would throw me there, if I kept the round.

He that is drunken may his Mother kill,
lie with his Siſter; he hath loſt the Reins;
outlaw'd by himſelf: all kind of ill
did with the liquor ſlide into the veins.
The Drunkard forfeits Man, and doth diveſt
All worldly right, ſave what he has by Beaſt.

hall I to pleaſe anothers wine-ſprung mind,
loſe all my own? God has given me a meaſure hort of his Can, and Body: muſt I find a pain in that wherein he finds a pleaſure?
Stay at the third glaſs; if thou loſe thy hold,
Then thou art modeſt, but the wine grows bold.

Reaſon move not Gallants, quit the room,
(all in a ſhipwrack ſhipt their ſeveral way.)
t not a common Ruin thee entomb;
be not a Beaſt in courteſies; but ſtay,
Stay at the third Glaſs, or forgo the place;

II. CAUTION.

THE Second Evil I ſhall deal with, is the evil of the Tongue, which, as St. James ſaith, is full of deadly Poyſon, Oaths, Curſes, Blaſphemies: and this poyſon it ſcatters up and down the World in all places; an untamed member that none can rule, Jam. 3. 7, 8. The fierceſt of beaſts have been tamed by Man, (as the Apoſtle there obſerves) which is a relick of his old ſuperiority and dominion over them; But this is an unruly Member that none can tame, but he that made it: no beaſt ſo fierce and crabbed as this is. It may be, I may be bitten by it for my labour and endeavours to put a reſtraint upon it: but I ſhall adventure it. My deſign is not to diſhonour or exaſperate you: But if my faithfulneſs to God and you ſhould accidentally do ſo, I cannot help that.

Friends, Providence oftentimes confines many of you together within the narrow limits of a Ship, where you have time enough, and if your hearts were ſanctified, many choice advantages of edifying one another. O what tranſcendent ſubjects doth Providence daily preſent you with, to take up your diſcourſes! How many experiences of extraordinary mercies and preſervations have you to relate to one another, and bleſs the Lord for! Alſo, how many works of wonder do you daily behold, who go down into the deeps? O what heavenly imployment is here for your Tongues! How ſhould they be talking of all his wonders! How ſhould you call upon each other, as David did, Pſal. 66. 16. Come hither, and I will tell you what God hath done for my ſoul, at ſuch a time, in ſuch an extremity. How ſhould you call upon one another, to pay the vows your lips have uttered in your diſtreſs? Thus ſhould one provoke another to this Angelical Work, as one lively Bird ſets the whole Flock a Chirping.

But tell me, Sirs, Should a Man come aboard you at Sea, and ask of you, as Chriſt did of thoſe two Diſciples going to Emmaus, Luk. 24. 17. What manner of communication is this that ye have by the way? O what a ſad account would he have from moſt of you! It may be he ſhould find one Jeſting, and another Swearing, a third Reviling Godlineſs and the Profeſſors of it, ſo that it would be a little Hell for a ſerious Chriſtian to be confined to your Society. This is not (I am confident) the manner of all. We have a company of more ſober Seamen, and bleſſed be God for them; but ſurely thus ſtands the caſe with moſt of you. Oh what ſtuff is here from perſons profeſſing Chriſtianity, and bordering cloſe upon the confines of Eternity, as you do!

It is not my purpoſe to write of all the diſeaſes of the Tongue; that would fill a Volume, and is inconſiſtent with my intended brevity. Who can recount the evils of the Tongue? The Apoſtle ſaith It is a world of Iniquity, Jam. 3. 6. And if there be a world of Sin in one member, Who can number the Sins of all the members? Laurentius reckons as many ſins of the Tongue, as there are Letters in the Alphabet. And it is an obſervable Note that one hath upon Rom. 3. 13, 14. That when Paul anatomizeth the unnatural Man there, he inſiſteth longer upon the Organs of Speech, than all the other members. Their throat is an open ſepulchre, with their Tongues they have uſed deceit, the poyſon of Aſps is under their Lips, their mouth is full of curſing and bitterneſs.

But to be ſhort, we find the Spirit of God in Scripture comparing the Tongue to a Tree, Prov. 15. 4. A wholeſome Tongue is a Tree of Life. And words is the fruit of the Tree, Iſa. 57. 12. I create the fruit of the Lips. Some of theſe Trees bear precious fruits, and it is a lovely ſight to behold them laden with them in their ſeaſons, Prov. 25. 11. A word fitly ſpoken, is like Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver. Such a Tongue is a Tree of Life. Others of theſe Trees bear evil Fruit, Grapes of Sodom, and Cluſters of Gomorrah. I ſhall only inſiſt upon two ſorts of theſe fruits, viz. (1.) Withered ſapleſs fruit; I mean, idle and unprofitable words. (2.) Rotten and corrupt fruit; I mean, prophane Oaths, and prophanations of the ſacred Name of God. No fruit in the world ſo apt to corrupt and taint, as the fruits of the Lips. When it is ſo, the Scripture calls it σαπρὸς λόγος, corrupt or rotten communication, Epheſ. 4. 29. To prevent this, the Spirit of God preſcribes an excellent way to ſeaſon our words, and keep them ſweet and ſound, that they may neither wither nor become idle and ſapleſs, or putrifie and become rotten, as prophane words are, Col. 4. 6. Let your ſpeech be always with grace, ſeaſoned with ſalt, that you may know how to anſwer every man. Oh, if the ſalt of Grace were once caſt into the fountain, the Heart, the ſtreams muſt needs become more ſavoury and pleaſant, as the waters of Marah when they were healed. My preſent work is to attempt the cure of this double evil, of idle words, and prophane Oaths, whereof thouſands among you are deeply guilty. I ſhall begin with the firſt, viz.

I. IDLE WORDS: that is, uſeleſs Chat, unprofitable Talk, that is not referred any way to the glory of God: This is a common evil, and little regarded by moſt men, but yet a ſin of ſeverer aggravations than the moſt imagine. Light words weigh heavy in God's ballance.

Arg. 1. For firſt, the evil of them is exceedingly aggravated by this: They abuſe and pervert the Tongue, that noble member, from that employment and uſe which God by the law of Creation deſigned it to. God gave not to man the Organs and power of Speech (which is his excellency above the Beaſts) to ſerve a paſſion, or vain humour, to vent the froth and vanity of his ſpirit: but to extol his Creator, and render him the praiſe of all his admirable and glorious works. For though the Creation be a curious well-tuned Inſtrument, yet man is the Muſician that muſt touch it and make the melody; this was the end of God in forming thoſe Inſtruments and Organs: but now hereby they are ſubject to Satan and Luſt, and employed to the diſhonour of God that made them. God is pleaſed to ſuſpend the power of Speech (as we ſee in Children) till Reaſon begin to bud in them; they have not the liberty of one, till they have the uſe of the other: which plainly ſhews, that God is not willing to have our words run waſte.

Arg. 2. It is a ſinful waſting of our precious time, and that puts a further aggravation upon it. Conſider, Sirs, the time of Life is but a little ſpot betwixt two eternities. The long ſuffering God wheels about thoſe glorious Celeſtial Bodies over your heads in a conſtant revolution, to beget time for you; and the preciouſneſs of every minute thereof reſults from its uſe and end: it is intended and afforded as a ſpace to you to repent in, Rev. 2. 21. And therefore great things depend upon it: no leſs than your eternal Happineſs or Miſery, hangs upon thoſe precious opportunities. Every minute of it hath an influence into Eternity. How would the damned value one hour of it, if they might enjoy it! The buſineſs you have to do in it, is of unſpeakable weight and concernment; this great work, this Soul-work, and Eternity-work lies upon your hands, you are caſt into ſtreights of time about it. And if ſo, Oh what an evil is it in you, to waſte it away thus to no purpoſe!

Arg. 3. It's a ſin that few are ſenſible of, as they are of other ſins, and therefore the more dangerous. It's commonly committed, and that without checks of Conſcience. Other ſins, as Murther and Adultery, though they be horrid ſins, yet are but ſeldom committed, and when they are, Conſcience is ſtartled at the horridneſs of them: Few, except they be prodigious wretches indeed, dare make light of them. But now for idle and vain words, there are innumerable ſwarms of theſe every day, and few regard them. The intercourſe betwixt the heart and tongue is quick; they are quickly committed, and as eaſily forgotten.

Arg. 4. And then 4thly, They have miſchievous effects upon others. How long doth an idle word or fooliſh jeſt ſtick in mens minds, and become an occaſion of much ſin to them? The froath and vanity of thy Spirit, which thy tongue ſo freely vents among thy vain Companions, may be working in their minds, when thou art in the duſt, and ſo be tranſmitted from one to another; for unto that no more is requiſite than an objective exiſtence of thoſe vain words in their memories. And thus mayſt thou be ſinning in the perſons of thy Companions, when thou art turned into duſt. And this is one reaſon that Suarez gives for a general Judgment, after men have paſt their particular judgment, immediately after their death, Becauſe (ſaith he) after this, multitudes of ſins by their means will be committed in the world, for which they muſt yet be judged to a fuller meaſure of wrath. So that look as many of the precious Servants of God now in glory, have left many weighty and holy Sayings behind them, by which many thouſands of ſouls have been benefited, and God glorified on Earth, after they had left it: So thou leaveſt that vanity upon the mind of others behind thee, by which he may be diſhonoured to many generations.

And then 2. For PROPHANE OATHS, the corrupt fruit of a graceleſs heart; Oh how common are theſe among you! yea, the habit of ſwearing is ſo ſtrengthened in ſome, that they have loſt all Senſe and Conſcience of the ſin. Now, Oh that I might prevail with you to repent of this wickedneſs, and break the force of this cuſtomary evil among you! Will you but give me the reading of a few pages more; and weigh with the reaſon of men, what you read? If you will not hearken to counſel, it is a fatal ſign, 2 Cor. 2. 15, 16. and you ſhall mourn for this obſtinacy hereafter, Prov. 5. 12, 13. Deſperate is that evil that ſcorns the remedy. And if you have patience to read it, the Lord give you an heart to conſider what you read, and obey the Counſels of God; or elſe it were better thine eyes had never ſeen theſe lines. Well then, I beſeech you conſider,

Arg. 1. That prophane Oaths are an high abuſe of the dreadful and ſacred Name of God, which ſhould neither be ſpoken or thought of without the deepeſt awe and reverence. It is the taking of that ſacred Name in vain, Exod. 20. 7. Now God is exceeding tender and jealous over his Name: it is dear to him: his Name is dreadful and glorious, Malac. 1. 14. I am a great King, and my Name i dreadful among the Heathens. The Heathen would not ordinarily mention the names of ſuch as they reverenced. Suetonious ſaith, that Auguſtus prohibited the common uſe of his name: he thought it an indignity to have his name toſt up and down in every one's mouth. Yea, ſays Dr. Willet on Exod. 20. it was a uſe among them to keep ſecret ſuch names as they would have in reverence. They durſt not mention the name of Demogorgon, whom they held to be the firſt God: They thought when he was named, the earth would tremble. Alſo the name of Mercurius Triſmegiſtus was very ſparingly uſed, becauſe of that reverence the people had for him. Now conſider, ſhall poor worms be ſo tender of preſerving the reverence of their names? Shall not Heathens dare to uſe the names of their Idols; and ſhall the ſacred and dreadful name of the true God be thus bandied up and down by tongues of his own Creatures? Will not God be avenged for theſe abuſes of his Name? Be confident, it ſhall one day be ſanctified upon you in judgment, becauſe ye did not ſanctifie it according to your duty.

Arg. 2. Swearing is a part of the Worſhip of God, and therefore prophane ſwearing can be no leſs than the profanation of his worſhip, and robbing him of all the glory he has thereby, Deut. 6. 13. Thou ſhalt fear the Lord thy God, and ſerve him, and ſhalt ſwear by his Name. So Jer. 4. 2. Thou ſhalt ſwear, the Lord liveth, in Truth, in Judgment, and in Righteouſneſs. If a man ſwear by God after this manner, God is exceedingly glorified thereby. Now that you may ſee what revenue of Glory God hath from this part of his worſhip, and how it becomes a part of Divine Worſhip; you muſt know, Than an Oath is nothing elſe, but The asking or deſiring a Divine Teſtimony, for the confirmation of the truth of our teſtimony. Heb. 6. 16. For men verily ſwear by the greater, and an Oath for [confirmation] is to them an end of all ſtrife. The corruption of humane nature by the fall, has made man ſuch a falſe and fickle creature, that his ſingle teſtimony cannot be Sufficient Security for another, (eſpecially in weighty Caſes) to reſt upon; and therefore in ſwearing, he calleth God for a witneſs of the truth of that he affirms, or promiſeth. I ſay, calleth God to be a witneſs of the truth of what he ſaith, becauſe he is Truth it ſelf, and cannot lie, Heb. 6. 18. Now this calling for, or asking of a Teſtimony from God, makes an Oath become a part of God's Worſhip, and gives him a great deal of Glory and Honour: For hereby he that ſweareth, acknowledgeth his Omniſciency, and Infallible Truth and Righteouſneſs. His Omniſciency is acknowledged; for by this appeal to Him, we imply and acknowledge him to be the Searcher of the hearts and reins; that he knows the ſecret intents and meaning of our ſpirits. His ſupreme and Infallible Truth is alſo acknowledged; for this is manifeſtly carried in an Oath, That though I am a falſe and deceitful Creature, and my affirmation cannot obtain univerſal and full credence, yet he that is greater than I, by whoſe Name I ſwear, cannot deceive. And laſtly, his Righteouſneſs is acknowledged in an Oath: for he that ſweareth doth either expreſly or implicitly put himſelf under the curſe and wrath of God, if he ſwear falſely, Every Oath hath an execration or imprecation in it, Neh. 10. 29. They entered into a curſe and an oath to walk in God's law. And ſo 2 Cor. 1. 23. I call God for a record upon my ſoul. And the uſual form in the Old Teſtament was, The Lord do ſo to me, and more alſo. Now hereby God hath the Glory of his Righteouſneſs and Juſtice given him by the Creature, and therefore it is a choice part of the Divine Worſhip, or of that homage which a creature oweth to his God. And if this be ſo, then how eaſily may the ſin of raſh and profane Oaths be hence argued and aggravated? The more excellent any thing is by an inſtitution of God, by ſo much more horrid and abominable is the abuſe thereof. O how often is the dreadful Majeſty of Heaven and Earth called to witneſs to frivolous things! and oft to be a witneſs of our rage and fury! as 1 Sam. 14. 39. Is it a light thing to rob him of his peculiar Glory, and ſubject poor ſouls to his curſe and wrath, who has ſaid, He will be a ſwift witneſs againſt you? Mal. 3. 5. Your tongues are nimble in committing this ſin, and God will be ſwift in puniſhing of it.

Arg. 3. It is a ſin which God hath ſeverely threatned to puniſh, and that with temporal and corporal plagues: For by reaſon of Oaths, the land mourns, Hoſ. 4. 2, 3. That is, it brings the heavy Judgment of God upon whole Nations, under which they ſhall mourn. And in Zech. 5. 2, 3, 4. you have there a Roll of curſes, (i. e.) a Catalogue of judgments and woes, the length thereof twenty Cubits (i. e. ten yards.) To ſet out the multitude of woes contained in it, it's a long Catalogue: and A flying Roll, to denote the ſwiftneſs of it; it flyes towards the houſe of the Swearer; it makes haſte. The Judgments that are written in it linger not, but are even in pain to be delivered. And this flying Roll full of dreadful Woes, flyes and enters into the houſe of the Swearer: and it ſhall therein remain, ſaith the Lord, it ſhall cleave to his family; none ſhall claw off theſe woes from him: And it ſhall conſume the Timber thereof, and the Stones thereof, (i. e.) bring utter ſubvertion, ruine, and deſolation to his Houſe. O dreadful ſin! What a deſolation doth it make! Your Mouths are full of Oaths, and your Houſes ſhall be full of Curſes. Wo to that wretched Family into which this flying Roll ſhall enter; Wo, I ſay, to the wretched Inhabitants thereof. The Curſe of the Lord (ſaith Solomon) is in the houſe of the wicked; but He bleſſeth the [habitation] of the juſt, Prov. 3. 33. Tuguriolum, (i. e.) ſaith Mercer, his poor little Tenement or Cottage. There is a Bleſſing, the promiſes like Clouds of Bleſſing, dwell over it, and drop mercies on it: but a Curſe is in the houſe of the wicked. Ah, how many ſtately Manſions are there, in which little other language but Oaths and Curſes are heard! and theſe are as ſo much Gunpowder laid under the foundation of them, which when Juſtice ſhall ſet fire to, O what work will it make! Wo to the Inhabitants thereof. Well then, break off this ſin by Repentance, unleſs you intend to ruine your Families, and bring all the Curſes of God into your Houſes. If you have no pity for your ſelves, yet pity your Poſterity; have mercy for your Wives and Children, don't ruine all for the indulgence of a luſt.

Arg. 4. But that is not all; It brings Soul judgments and ſpiritual plagues upon you: It brings Hell along with it. And if thou be not afraid to ſin, yet methinks thou ſhouldſt be afraid to burn; if the love of God can work nothing upon thy brawny heart, yet methinks the Terrors of the Lord ſhould ſtartle and affright it. To this purpoſe, I beſeech you, weigh theſe Scriptures; and methinks, unleſs God hath loſt all his Authority with you, and Hell all its Terrors, it ſhould ſtartle you. The firſt is that dreadful Scripture, James 5. 12. But above all things, my Brethren, ſwear not; neither by Heaven, neither by the Earth, neither by any other oath, but let your yea, be yea; and your nay, nay; leſt ye fall into [Condemnation.]

demnation.] O view this Text ſeriouſly. Methinks it ſhould be like the fingers that came forth and wrote upon the wall, that dreadful Sentence that changed the Countenance of a King, and that in the height of a frolick humour, and made his Knees ſmite together. Mark, [Above all things] a form of vehemency and earneſtneſs, like that, Epheſ. 6. 16. But above all, taking the ſhield of Faith. As Faith hath a prelation there before all the Graces, ſo Swearing here before all other Vices. [Swear not] (i. e.) vainly, raſhly, profanely: for otherwiſe 'tis a lawful thing, and a part of Gods worſhip, as I have ſhewed: but ſwear not vain Oaths, by the Creatures, Heaven, or Earth, &c. Which is to advance the creature into the room of God. A ſin to which the Jews were much addicted. But, Let your yea, be yea! and nay, nay? (i.e.) accuſtom your ſelves to ſhort and plain Affirmations and Negations, to a ſimple and candid expreſſion of your minds. And the thundering Argument that backs it, is this; [leſt ye fall into Condemnation] (i.e.) leſt for theſe things the Judge of Heaven and Earth paſs a Sentence of condemnation to Hell upon you. Oh Sirs, Dare you touch with this hot iron? Dare you from henceforward commit that Sin, that you know will bring you under the condemnation and judgment of God? Do you know what it is for a ſoul to be caſt at Gods bar? Did you never ſee a poor malefactor tried at the Aſſizes, and obſerve how his face gathers paleneſs, how his Legs tremble, and Death diſplays its colours in his cheeks, when ſentence is given upon him? But what's that to Gods condemnation? What is a Gallows to Hell? Another Text I would commend to your conſideration is that, Exod. 20. 7. The Lord will not hold him guiltleſs that taketh his Name in vain. Where vain Oaths are eſpecially included. Now what doth God mean, when He ſaith, He will not hold him guiltleſs? The meaning is plain, his ſins ſhall be reckoned and imputed to him, they ſhall lie upon his Soul; he ſhall be bound over to anſwer God for them. O terrible ſentence! What Soul can bear it, or ſtand before it! Bleſſed is the man (ſaith David) to whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity. Surely then, curſed is that man, to whom God will impute them. And to the Swearer they ſhall all be imputed, if he break not off his ſin by repentance,and get a Chriſt the ſooner. O Soul! How dar'ſt thou think of going before the Lord with the guilt of all thy ſins upon thee? When Chriſt would adminiſter the very ſpirit of Joy in one ſentence to a poor Sinner, Matth. 9. 4. He ſaid, Son, be of good cheer, thy ſins are forgiven. And when God would contract the ſum of all miſery into one word, He ſaith, His ſins ſhall lie down with him in the duſt, Job 20. 11. Ah ſoul! One of theſe days thou ſhalt be laid on thy Death-bed, or ſee the waves that ſhall entomb thee leaping and roaring upon every ſide; and then thou wilt ſurely have other thoughts of the happineſs that lies in remiſſion of ſin, than thou haſt now. Obſerve the moſt incorrigible Sinner then; hark how he ſighs, and groans, and cries; Ah Lord! and muſt I die? And then ſee how the tears trickle down his Cheeks, and his heart ready to burſt within him. Why, what's the matter? Oh, the Lord will not pardon him, he holds him guilty. If he were ſure his ſins were forgiven, then he could die; but oh! to appear before the Lord in them, appals him, daunts him, kills the very heart of him. He would fain cry for mercy, but Conſcience ſtops his mouth. Oh, ſaith Conſcience, how canſt thou move that tongue to God in prayer for mercy, that hath ſo often rent and torn his glorious Name, by Oaths and Curſes? Sirs! I pray you, do not make light of theſe things: they will look wiſhly upon you one of theſe days, except ye prevent it by ſound converſation.

Arg. 5. And then laſtly, to name no more, I pray you conſider, that a cuſtom of vain words and prophane Oaths, is as plain an indication and diſcovery of an unregenerate Soul, as any in the world. This is a ſure ſign thou art none of Chriſt's, nor haſt any thing to do with the promiſes and priviledges of his people: for by this the Scripture diſtinguiſhed the ſtate of Saints and Sinners, Eccl. 9. 2. There is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not: as is the good, ſo is the ſinner: and he that ſweareth, as he that feareth an Oath. Mark; he that ſweareth, and he that feareth an Oath, do as manifeſtly diſtinguiſh the Children of God from wicked men, as clean and unclean, righteous and wicked, ſacrificing and not ſacrificing. This fruit of the tongue plainly ſhews what the tree is that bears it, Iſa. 2.6. The vile perſon will ſpeak of villany; and out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth ſpeaks. Loquere, ut videam, ſaid one; Speak, that I may ſee what you are. Look what is in the heart, that is vented by the Tongue: where the treaſures of Grace are in the Heart, words miniſtring Grace will be in the Lips, Pſal. 37. 30. The mouth of the righteous ſpeaketh wiſdom, and his tongue talketh of Judgment; for the law of the Lord is in his heart. To this ſenſe we muſt underſtand that Scripture, Matt. 12. 27. By thy words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy words thou ſhalt be condemned. Certainly, Juſtification and Condemnation, in the day of Judgment, ſhall not paſs upon us meerly for the good or bad words we have ſpoken; but according to the ſtate of the Perſon, and frame of the heart. But the meaning is, that our words ſhall juſtifie or condemn us in that day, as evidence of the ſtate and frame of the Soul. We uſe to ſay, ſuch Witneſſes hang'd a man; the meaning is, the Evidence they gave caſt and condemned him. O think ſeriouſly of this; if words evidence the ſtate of the Soul, what a woful ſtate muſt thy Soul needs be in, whoſe mouth overflows with Oaths and Curſes! How many witneſſes will be brought in, to caſt thee in the great Day? Your own tongue ſhall then fall upon you, as the expreſſion is, Pſal. 64. 8. And out of your own mouth, God will fetch abundant evidence to condemn you. And thus I have opened unto you the evil of vain words, and prophane Oaths; and preſented to your view their ſeveral aggravations. If by theſe things there be a relenting pang upon thy heart, and a ſerious reſolution of reformation, then I ſhall commend theſe few helps or means to thy peruſal,and conclude this Head. And the firſt help is this,

Help. 1. Seriouſly fix in thy thoughts that Scripture, Matth. 12. 36. But I ſay unto you, that every idle word that Men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give an account thereof in the day of Judgment. Oh let it ſound in thine ears day and night! Oh ponder them in thy heart. [I ſay unto you] I that have always been in the Father's boſom, and do fully know his mind, I that am conſtituted the Judge of quick and dead, and do fully underſtand the rule of Judgment,and the whole proceſs thereof, I ſay, and do aſſure you, that [every idle word that men ſhall ſpeak,] (i. e.) every word that hath not a tendency and reference to the Glory of God though there be no other obliquity or evil in them than this, that they want a good end. How much more then ſcurrilous Words, bloody Oaths and Blaſphemies! [Men ſhall give an account thereof] that is, ſhall be caſt and condem d to ſuffer the wrath of God for them; as appears y that parallel Scripture, 1 Pet. 4. 4, 5. For as e Learned obſerve, there is plainly a Matalepſis in eſe words; The Antecedent, to give an account, is put r the Conſequent, puniſhment, and condemnation to ell fire; the certainty whereof admits but of this e exception, viz. intervenient repentance, or a rdon obtained through the blood of Chriſt here, efore you be preſented at that judgment-ſeat. Oh en, what a bridle ſhould this Text be to thy extragant tongue! I remember Hierom was wont to ſay hether I eat or drink, or whatever I do, methinks I ll hear the ſound of theſe words in mine ear, Ariſe ye ad, and come to judgment. O that the ſound of the ords may be always in your ears!

Help 2. Conſider before you ſpeak, and be not ſh to utter words without knowledge. He that peaks what he thinks not, ſpeaks Hypocritically; and e that thinks not what to ſpeak, ſpeaks incon- ſiderately. You have cauſe to weigh your words, efore you deliver them by your tongue; for whether you do, or do not, the Lord pondereth them.
ecords are kept of them; elſe you could not be lled to an account for them, as I ſhewed you you muſt.

Help 3. Reſign up your Tongues to God every y, and beg him to guide and keep it. So did Da-
, Pſal. 141. 3. Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth, keep thou the door of my lips. Beg him to keep from provocations and temptations; or if you l into them, intreat him for ſtrength to rule your its in them, that you may not be conquered by ptations.

Help 4. But above all, labour to get your Souls nſed and purified by Faith, poſſeſt with ſaving gracious Principles: All other means will be inctual without this. Oh ſee the vileneſs of thy ure, and the neceſſity of a change to paſs upon it.
t make the tree good, and then his fruit good: a Nature will produce new words and actions. To your ſouls with Vows and Reſolutions, while are ſtrangers to a regenerate work, is to bind pſon with green withs, whilſt his locks remain n his head. I will ſhut up this with the Advice hat divine Poet, Mr. George Herbert, it may be it affect thee, and run in thy thoughts when thou alone.

ake not his Name, who made thy mouth, in vain;
gets thee nothing, and hath no excuſe.
and wine, plead a pleaſure; avarice gain:
t the cheap Swearer, through his open ſluce,
Lets his Soul run for nought, as little fearing.
Were I an Epicure, I could bate ſwearing.

n thou doſt tell anothers jeſt, therein
mit the Oaths, which true Wit cannot need?
out of tales the mirth, but not the ſin.
e pares his apple, that will cleanly feed.
Play not away the virtue of that Name,
Which is thy beſt ſtake, when grief makes thee tame.

cheapeſt ſins moſt dearly puniſht are,
cauſe to ſhun them alſo is ſo cheap:
e have wit to mark them, and to ſpare. crumble not away thy Souls fair heap.
If thou wilt die, the gates of Hell are broad.
Pride, and full ſins, have made the way a road.

III. CAUTION.

THE next danger I ſhall give you warning of, is the ſin of Uncleanneſs; with which, I fear, too many of the rude and looſer ſort of Seamen defile themſelves; and poſſibly, the temptations to this ſin are advantaged, and ſtrengthened upon them more than others, by their condition and employments. Let no Man be offended that I here give warning of this evil; I intend to aſperſe no Man's perſon, or raiſe up jealouſie againſt any: but would faithfully diſcharge my duty to all, and that in all things. It was the complaint of Salvian many hundred years ago, that he could not ſpeak againſt the Vices of men, but one or other would thus object, There he meant me, he hit me; and ſo ſtorm and fret. Alas (as he replieth) it is not we that ſpeak to you, but your own Conſcience; we ſpeak to the Order, but Conſcience ſpeaks to the Perſon. I ſhall uſe no other Apology in this caſe. That this Sin is a dreadful Gulph, a Quick-ſand that hath ſuck'd and deſtroyed thouſands, is truly apparent, both from Scripture and Experience. Solomon tells us, Prov. 22. 14. That it is a deep ditch, into which ſuch as are abhorred of the Lord ſhall fall. Oh the multitudes of dead that are there! And if ſo, I cannot in duty to God, or love to you, be ſilent, where the danger is ſo great. It is both needleſs, and beſides my intention, here to inſiſt largely upon the explication of the particulars in which uncleanneſs is diſtributed: the more ordinary and common ſins of this kind are known by the names of Adultery and Fornication: the latter is, when ſingle perſons come together, out of the ſtate of marriage; the former is, when at leaſt one of the perſons committing uncleanneſs is contracted in marriage. This now is the evil I ſhall warn you of. And that thou mayſt never fall into this pit, I ſhall endeavour to fence and hedge up thy way to it, by theſe enſuing Arguments: And Oh that the light of every Argument may be powerfully reflected upon your Conſcience! Many men are very wiſe in generals, but very vain ἐν διαλογισμοῖς, in the reaſonings, or imaginations, as the Apoſtle calls them, Rom. 1. 22. (i. e.) in their practical inferences. They are good at ſpeculation, but bunglers at application. But it is truth in the particulars, that, like an hot Iron, pierces; and Oh that you might find theſe to be ſuch in your Soul! To that end, conſider,

Gubcr. Di lib. 4. Salv.

Arg. 1. The names and titles by which this ſin is known in Scripture, are very vile and baſe. The Spirit of God, doubtleſs, hath put ſuch odious names upon it, on purpoſe to deter and affright men from it. In general, it's called Luſt; and ſo (as one notes) it beareth the name of its mother. It is Uncleanneſs in the abſtract, Numb. 5. 19. Filthineſs it ſelf; An abomination; Ezek. 22. 11. And they that commit are called abominable, Revel. 21. 8. Varro ſaith, the word imports that which is not lawful to mention; or rather, abominable perſons are ſuch as are not fit for the ſociety of men, ſuch as ſhould be hiſs'd out of all mens company: They are rather to be reckoned to beaſts than man. Yea, the Scripture compares them to the filthieſt of beaſts, even to Dogs: When Iſhboſheth charged this ſin upon Abner, 2 Sam. 3. 8. Am I a Dogs head, (ſaith he) that thou chargeſt me with a fault concerning this woman? And in Deut. 23. 18. The hire of a whore, and the price of a dog, are put together. The expreſſion of this luſt in words or geſture, is called neighing, Jer. 5. 8. Even as fed Horſes do, that ſcatter their luſt promiſcuouſly. Or if the Scripture ſpeaks of them as men, yet it allows them but the external ſhape of men, not the underſtanding of men. Among the Jews they were called Fools in Iſrael, 2 Sam. 13. 13. and ſo Prov. 6. 32. Whoſo committeth adultery with a woman, lacketh underſtanding. And ſinners, Luke 7. 37. And behold a woman that was a [ſinner;] that is, an eminent notorious ſinner. by which term, the Scripture deciphers an unclean perſon; as if among ſinners there were none of ſuch a prodigious ſtature in ſin as they. And we find that when the ſpirit of God would ſet forth any ſin by an odious name, he calls it Adultery; ſo Idolatry is called Adultery, Ezek. 16. 32. And indeed this ſpiritual and corporal Adultery, oftentimes are found in the ſame perſons. They that give themſelves up to the one, are by a righteous hand of God given up to the other, as it is too manifeſtly and frequently exemplified in the World. So earthly-mindedneſs hath this name put upon it, on purpoſe to affright men from it, Jam. 4. 4. Now certainly, God would never borrow the name of this ſin to ſet out the evil of other ſins, if it were not moſt vile and abominable. It's call'd the ſin of the Gentiles, or heathen, 1 Theſ. 4. 5. And oh that we could ſay, it were only among them that know not God! Now then, are you able to look theſe Scriptures in the face, and not bluſh? Oh what a ſin is this! Art thou willing to be ranked with Fools, Dogs, Sinners, Heathens, and take thy lot with them? God hath planted that affection of ſhame in thy nature, to be as a guard againſt ſuch filthy luſts; it's a ſin that hath filthineſs enough in it, to defile the tongue that mentions it, Ephеſ. 5. 3.

Arg. 2. It is a ſin that the God of Heaven hath often prohibited, and ſeverely condemned in the Word, which abundantly declares his abhorrence of it. You have prohibition upon prohibition, and threatning upon threatning in the Word againſt it. Exod. 20. 14. Thou ſhalt not commit adultery. This was delivered upon Mount Sinai, with the greateſt ſolemnity and terrour, by the mouth of God himſelf. Turn to, and ponder the following Scriptures, among many others, Prov. 5. 2, 3, 4. Acts 5. 29. Rom. 1. 24, 29. Rom. 13. 13. 1 Cor. 6. 13, 14, 15, 16, 18. 2 Cor. 12. 21. Gal. 5. 29. Epheſ. 5. 3. Col. 3. 5. 1 Theſ. 4. 2, 3, 4, 5. Heb 12. 16. Heb. 13. 4. All theſe, with many others, are the true ſayings of God; By them thou ſhalt be tryed in the laſt day. Now conſider how terrible it will be to have ſo many words of God, and ſuch terrible ones too, as moſt of thoſe are, to be brought in and pleaded againſt thy Soul in that day: mountains and hills may depart, but theſe words ſhall not depart; Heaven and Earth ſhall paſs away, but not one tittle of the Word ſhall paſs away. Believe it, Sinner, as ſure as the Heavens are over thy head, and the Earth under thy feet, they ſhall one day take hold of thee, though we poor worms who plead them with thee, die and periſh, Zech. 1. 5, 6. The Lord tells us it ſhall not fall to the ground. Which is a borrowed ſpeech from a Dart that is flung with a weak hand; it goes not home to the mark, but falls to the ground by the way. None of theſe words ſhall ſo fall to the ground.

Arg. 3. It is a ſin that defiles and deſtroys the body, 1 Cor. 6. 18. He that committeth adultery, ſinneth againſt his own body. In moſt other ſins the body is but the Inſtrument, here it is the Object againſt which the ſin is committed; that body of thine, which ſhould be the Temple of the Holy Ghoſt, is turned into a ſtye of filthineſs; yea, it not only defiles, but deſtroys it. Job calls it a fire that burneth to deſtruction, Job 31. 12. or as the Septuagint reads it, a fire that burneth in all the Members. It is a ſin that God hath plagued with ſtrange and terrible diſeaſes; that Morbus Gallicus, and Sudor Anglicus, and that Plica Polonica whereof you may read in Bolton's four laſt things, page 30. and Sclater on Rom. 1. 30. Theſe were judgments ſent immediately by God's own hand, to correct the new ſins and enormities of the world; for they ſeem to put the beſt Phyſicians beſides their Books. O how terrible is it to lie groaning under the ſad effects of this ſin! As Solomon tells us, Prov. 5. 11. And thou mourn at the laſt, when thy fleſh and thy body are conſumed. To this ſenſe ſome expound that terrible Text, Heb. 13. 4. Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled; but Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge: (i. e.) with ſome remarkable judgment inflicted on them in this world: if it eſcape the puniſhment of men, it ſhall not eſcape the vengeance of God. Ah! with what comfort may a man lie down upon a ſick bed, when the ſickneſ can be looked upon as a Fatherly Viſitation comin in Mercy? But thou that ſhorteneſt thy life, an bringeſt ſickneſs on thy ſelf by ſuch a ſin, art th Devil's Martyr; and to whom canſt thou turn i ſuch a day for comfort?

Arg. 4. Conſider what an indelible blot it is t thy nature, which can never be wiped away: thoug thou eſcape with thy life, yet as one ſays, thou ſhal be burnt in the hand, yea, branded in the forehead What a foul ſcar is that upon the face of David himſelf, which abides to this day? He was upright in a things, ſave in the matter of Uriah. And how w he ſlighted by his own Children and Servants afte he had committed this ſin? Compare 1 Sam. 2. 30 with 2 Sam. 12. 10, 11. A wound and diſhonour ſh be get; and his reproach ſhall not be wiped away. Th is to give thine honour to another, Prov. 5. 9. Th ſhame and reproach attending it, ſhould be a preſervative from it. Indeed the Devil tempts to it b hopes of ſecrecy and concealment; but though man other ſins lie hid, and poſſibly ſhall never come t light, until that day of manifeſtation of all hidd things, yet this is a ſin that is moſt uſually diſcovered. Under the Law, God appointed an extraordina way for the diſcovery of it, Numb. 5. 13. And t this day the Providence of God doth often ve ſtrangely bring it to light, though it be a deed o darkneſs. The Lord hath many times brought ſu perſons either by terrors of Conſcience, Phrenſie, some other means, to be the publiſhers and pr claimers of their own ſhame. Yea, obſerve th ſaid Reverend Mr. Hilderſham on the Fourth of J even thoſe that are moſt cunning to conceal and hi it from the eyes of the world, yet through the j judgment of God, every one ſuſpects and conden them for it; this daſhes in pieces, at one ſtroke, th Veſſel in which the precious Oyntment of a go name is carried. A fool in Iſrael ſhall be thy ti and even Children ſhall point at thee.

Arg. 5. It ſcatters thy ſubſtance, and roots up t foundation of thy eſtate. Job 31. 12. It roots u the increaſe. Strangers ſhall be filled with thy we and thy labours ſhall be in the houſe of a ſtranger. Pr 5. 10. For by means of a whoriſh woman, a ma brought to a morſel of bread, Prov. 6. 26. It gi rags for its Livery (ſaith one:) and though it b furthered by the fulneſs, yet it's followed with a mo of bread. This is one of thoſe temporal Judgm with which God puniſhes the unclean perſon in this life. The word Delilah, which is the name of an Harlot, is conceived to come from a root that ſignifies to exhauſt, drain, or draw dry. This ſin will quickly exhauſt the fulleſt eſtate; and oh what a dreadful thing will this be, when God ſhall require an account of thy Stewardſhip in the great day! How righteous is it, that that man ſhould be fuel to the wrath of God, whoſe health and wealth have been ſo much fuel to maintain the flame of Luſt! Oh how laviſh of their eſtates are ſinners to ſatisfie their Luſts! If the Members of Chriſt be ſick, or in priſon, they may there periſh and ſtarve, before they will relieve them; but to obtain their Luſts, Oh how expenſive! Ask me never ſo much, and I will give it, ſaid Shechem, Gen. 34. 12. Ask what thou wilt, and it ſhall be given thee, ſaid Herod to the daughter of his Herodias. Well, you are liberal in ſpending treaſures upon your Luſts; and believe it, God will ſpend treaſures of wrath to puniſh you for your Luſts. It had been a thouſand times better for thee, thou hadſt never had an eſtate, that thou hadſt begged thy bread from door to door, than to have ſuch a ſad reckoning as thou ſhalt ſhortly have for it.

Arg. 6. Oh ſtand off from this ſin, becauſe it is a pit out of which very Few have been recovered that have fallen therein. Few are the footſteps of returners from this den. The longer a man lives in it, the leſs power he hath to leave it. It is not only a damning, but an infatuating ſin. The danger of falling this way muſt needs be great, and the fall very deſperate, becauſe few that fall into it do ever riſe again. I ſhall lay two very terrible Scriptures before you to this purpoſe, either of them enough to drive thee ſpeedily to Chriſt, or to drive thee out of thy wits; the one is that, Eccleſ. 7. 26. And I find more bitter than death, the woman whoſe heart is ſnares and nets, and whoſe hands are bands: Whoſo pleaſeth God ſhall eſcape from her, but the ſinner ſhall be taken by her. The Argument which the ſpirit of God uſes here to diſſwade from this Sin, is taken from the ſubject; they that fall into it, for the moſt part, are perſons in whom God has no delight, and ſo in judgment are delivered up to it, and never recovered by Grace from it. The other is that in Prov. 22. 14. The mouth of a ſtrange woman is a deep pit; he that is abhorred of the Lord ſhall fall therein. Oh terrible word! able to daunt the heart of the ſecureſt ſinner; your Whores embrace you, yea, but God abhors you; you have their love, oh but you are under Gods hatred! What ſay you to theſe two Scriptures? If you are not Atheiſts, methinks ſuch a word from the mouth of God, ſhould ſtrike like a Dart through thy Soul. And upon this account it is that they never are recover'd, becauſe God has no delight in them. If this be not enough, view one Scripture more, Prov. 2. 18, 19. For her houſe inclineth unto Death, and her paths unto the Dead: None that go to er, return again, neither take they hold of the paths of life. Reader, if thou be a perſon addicted to this ſin, go hy ways, and think ſeriouſly what a caſe thou art n. None return again (i. e.) a very few of many: e examples of ſuch as have been recovered, are very re. Pliny tells us, the Mermaids are commonly ſeen green Meadows, and have inchanting Voices; ut there are always found heaps of dead mens bones ing by them. This may be but a fabulous ory: But I am ſure it is true of the Harlt, whoſe Syren-Songs have allured thouſands to eir inevitable deſtruction. It's a captivating ſin, at leads away the ſinner in triumph; they cannot deliver their ſouls: Prov. 7. 22. He goeth after her ſtraightway, as an Ox goeth to the ſlaughter, or as a [Fool] to the correction of the ſtocks. Mark; a Fool: it dementates and befools men, takes away their underſtanding; the Septuagint renders it, ὥσπερ κύων ἐπὶ δεσμοὺς, As a dog to the Collar, or, like as we uſe to ſay, a dog in a ſtring. I have read of one, that having by this ſin waſted his body, was told by Phyſitians, that except he left it, he would quickly loſe his Eyes; he anſwered, If it be ſo, then Vale lumen amicum, Farewel ſweet light. And I remember Luther writes of a certtain Nobleman in his Country who was ſo beſotted with the ſin of Whoredom, that he was not aſhamed to ſay, That if he might live here for ever, and be carried from one ſtews to another, would never deſire any other Heaven. The greateſt Conquerors that have ſubdued Kingdoms, and ſcorned to be commanded by any, have been miſerably enſlaved and captivated by this Luſt. O think ſadly upon this argument; God often gives them up to Impenitency, and will not ſpend a rod upon them to reclaim them. See Hoſ. 4. 14. Revel. 22. 11.

Arg. 7. And then in the 7*th* place, Thoſe few that have been recovered by Repentance out of it, oh how bitter hath God made it to their ſouls! I find it (ſaith Solomon) more bitter than death, Eccleſ. 7. 26 Death is a very bitter thing; Oh what a ſtrugling and reluctance is there in Nature againſt it! But this is more bitter. Poor David found it ſo, when he roared under thoſe bloody laſhes of Conſcience for it, in Pſalm 51. Ah! when the Lord ſhall open the poor Sinner's eyes, to ſee the horrid guilt he hath hereby contracted upon his own poor ſoul, it will haunt him as a Ghoſt, day and night, and terrifie his ſoul with dreadful forms and repreſentations O dear-bought pleaſure, if this were all it ſhould coſt. What is now become of the pleaſure of ſin? Oh! what gall and wormwood wilt thou taſte, when once the Lord ſhall bring thee to a ſight of it; the Hebrew word for Repentance (Nacham) and the Greek word (Metamelia) the one ſignifies an irking of the Soul, and the other ſignifies After grief. Yea, it is called A renting of the heart, as if it were torn in pieces in a man's breaſt. Ask ſuch a poor ſoul, what it thinks of ſuch Courſes now? Oh now it loaths, abhors it ſelf for them. Ask him, if he dare ſin in that kind again? You may as well ask me (will he anſwer) whether I will thruſt my hand into the fire. Oh it breeds an indignation in him againſt himſelf. That word [ἀγανάκτησιν] 2 Cor. 7 11. ſignifies the riſing of the ſtomach with very rage, and being ſick with anger. Religious wrath is the fierceſt wrath. Oh what a furnace is the breaſt of the poor penitent! what fumes, what heats do abound in it, whilſt the ſin is even before him, and the ſenſe of guilt upon him? One night of carnal pleaſure will keep thee many days and nights upon the rack of horrour, if ever God give thee repentance unto life.

Arg. 8. And if thou never repent, as indeed but few do that fall into this ſin, then conſider how God will follow thee with eternal vengeance. Thou ſhalt have flaming Fire for burning Luſt. This is a ſin that hath a ſcent of fire and brimſtone with it, whereever you meet with it in Scripture. The Harlots gueſts are lodged in the depths of Hell, Prov. 9. 18 No more perfumed beds; they muſt now lie down in flames. Whoremongers ſhall have their part in the Lake that burneth with fire and brimſtone; which is the ſecond death, Revel. 21. 1. Such ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God and Chriſt, 1 Cor. 6. 9.

No Dog ſhall come into the new Jeruſalem; there ſhall in no wiſe enter in any thing that defileth, or that worketh abomination. You have ſpent your ſtrength upon ſin, and now God ſets himſelf a work to ſhew the glory of his Power in puniſhing, Rom. 9. 22. The wrath of God is tranſacted upon them in Hell by his own immediate hand, Heb. 10. 30. Becauſe no Creature is ſtrong enough to convey all his wrath, and it muſt all be poured out upon them, therefore he himſelf will torment them for ever with his own immediate Power; now he will ſtir up all his wrath, and ſinners ſhall know the price of their pleaſures. The puniſhment of Sodom is a little Map of Hell, as I may ſay. Oh how terrible a day was that upon thoſe unclean wretches! but that fire was not of many days continuance; when it had conſumed them, and their houſes, it went out for want of matter: but here, the breath of the Lord like a ſtream of brimſtone, kindles it. The pleaſure was quickly gone, but the ſting and torment abide for ever. Who knoweth the power of his anger? Even according to his fear ſo is his wrath, Pſal. 90. 11. Oh conſider, how will his Almighty Power rack and torment thee! Think on this, when ſin comes with a ſmiling face towards thee in the temptation. Oh think! If the humane nature of Chriſt recoiled, when his cup of Wrath was given him to drink; if he were ſore amazed at it, how ſhalt thou, a poor worm, bear and grapple with it for ever?

Arg. 9. Conſider further, how cloſely ſoever thou carrieſt thy wickedneſs in this world, tho it ſhould never be diſcovered here, yet there is a day coming when all will out, and that before Angels and men. God will rip up thy ſecret ſins in the face of that great Congregation at the day of judgment: then that which was done in ſecret ſhall be proclaimed as upon the houſe-top, Luke 12. 3. Then God will judge the (ſecrets) of men, Rom. 2. 16. the hidden things of darkneſs will be brought into the open light. Sinner, there will be no ſculking for thee in the Grave, no declining this Bar; thou refuſedſt indeed to come to the Throne of Grace, when God invited thee, but there will be no refuſing to appear before the Bar of Juſtice, when Chriſt ſhall ſummon thee. And as thou canſt not decline appearance, ſo neither canſt thou then palliate and hide thy wickedneſs any longer; for then ſhall the Books be opened; the book of God's Omniſcience, and the Book of thine own Conſcience, wherein all thy ſecret Villany is recorded; for though it ceaſed to ſpeak to thee, yet it ceaſed not to write and record thy actions. If thy ſhameful ſins ſhould be divulged now, it would make thee tear off thy hair in indignation; but then all will be diſcovered. Angels and men ſhall point at thee, and ſay, Lo, this is the Man, this is he that carried it ſo ſmoothly in the world; Mr. Thomas Fuller relates a ſtory of Ottocar King of Bohemia, who refuſing to do his homage to Rodolphus the firſt, Emperor, being at laſt ſorely chaſtiſed with war, condeſcended to do him homage privately in a Tent: but the Tent was ſo contrived by the Emperor's Servants, (ſaith the Hiſtorian) that by drawing one cord it was all taken away, and ſo Ottocar preſented on his knees, doing Homage to the Emperor, in the view of three Armies. O Sirs, you think to carry it cloſely, you wait for the Twilight, that none may ſee you; but alas! it will be to no end, this day will diſcover it; and then what confuſion and everlaſting ſhame will cover thee! Will not this work then?

Arg. 10. Laſtly, conſider but one thing more, and I have done. By this ſin thou doſt not only damn thine own ſoul, but draweſt another to hell with thee. This ſin is not as a ſingle bullet that kills but one, but as a chain-ſhot, it kills many, two at leaſt, unleſs God give repentance. And if he ſhould give thee repentance, yet the other party may never repent, and ſo periſh for ever through thy wickedneſs; and Oh, what a ſad conſideration will that be to thee, that ſuch a poor ſoul is in Hell, or likely to go thither by thy means! Thou haſt made faſt a ſnare upon a Soul which now thou canſt not untie; thou haſt done that which may be matter of ſorrow to thee as long as thou liveſt; but though thou canſt grieve for it, thou canſt not remedy it. In other ſins it is not ſo; If thou hadſt ſtoll'n another's Goods, reſtitution might be made to the injured party, but here can be none. If thou hadſt murthered another, thy ſin was thine own, not his that was murthered by thee; but this is a complicated ſin, defiling both at once; and if neither repent, then oh what a ſad greeting will theſe poor wretches have in hell! how will they curſe the day that ever they ſaw each others face! Oh what an aggravation of their miſery will this be! For look, as it will be matter of joy in Heaven, to behold ſuch there as we have been inſtrumental to ſave; ſo muſt it needs be a ſtinging aggravation of the miſery of the Damned, to look upon thoſe that have been the inſtruments and means of their damnation. Oh, methinks, if there be any tenderneſs at all in thy Conſcience, if this ſin have not totally brawned and ſtupified thee, theſe Arguments ſhould pierce like a ſword through thy Guilty Soul. Reader, I beſeech thee, by the mercies of God, if thou haſt defiled thy Soul by this abominable ſin, ſpeedily to repent. Oh get the blood of ſprinkling upon thee; there is yet mercy for ſuch a wretch as thou art, if thou wilt accept the terms of it, Such were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, 1 Cor. 6. 11. Publicans and Harlots may enter into the Kingdom of God, Matth. 21. 31. Though but few ſuch are recovered, yet how knoweſt thou but the hand of mercy may pull thee, as a brand out of the fire, if now thou wilt return and ſeek it with tears? Though it be a fire that conſumeth unto deſtruction, as Job calls it, Job 1. 12. yet it is not an unquenchable fire, the blood of Chriſt can quench it.

And for you whom God hath kept hitherto from the contagion of it, O bleſs the Lord, and uſe all God's means for the prevention of it. The ſeeds of this ſin are in thy nature; no thank to thee, but reſtraining grace, that thou art not delivered up to it alſo. And that thou mayeſt be kept out of this Pit, conſcionably practiſe theſe few Directions.

Direct. 1. Beg of God a clean heart, renewed and ſanctified by ſaving grace; all other endeavours do but palliate a cure: the root of this is deep in thy nature; Oh get that mortified, Matth. 15. 9 Out of the heart proceed fornication, adulteries, 1 Pe 2. 11, 12. Abſtain from fleſhly luſt —— having Converſation honeſt. The luſt muſt firſt be ſubdued, before the converſation can be honeſt.

Direct. 2. Walk in the fear of God all the da long, and in the ſenſe of his Omniſcient eye th is ever upon thee. This kept Joſeph from this ſin, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this wickedneſs and againſt God? Conſider, the darkneſs hideth n from him, but ſhineth as the light. If thou could find a place where the eye of God could not diſco ver thee, it were ſomewhat: Thou dareſt not act this wickedneſs in the preſence of a Child, and wi thou adventure to commit it before the face of Go See that Argument, Prov. 5. 20. And why wilt th my Son, be raviſht with a ſtrange woman, and embrace the boſom of a ſtranger? For the ways of man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings.

Direct. 3. Avoid lewd Company, and the Society of unclean perſons; they are but panders for Luſt. Evil communication corrupts good manners. The tongues of ſinners do caſt fire-balls into the hearts of each other, which the corruption within is eaſily kindled and enflamed by.

Direct. 4. Exerciſe thy ſelf in thy Calling diligently. It will be an excellent means of preventing this ſin. It is a good obſervation that one hath; That Iſrael was ſafer in the Brick-kilns in Egypt, than in the Plains of Moab, 2 Sam. 11. 2. And it came to paſs in the even-tide, that David aroſe from off his bed, and walked on the roof of the Kings houſe; and this was the occaſion of his fall. See 1 Tim. 5. 11, 13.

Direct. 5. Put a reſtraint upon thine appetite: feed not to exceſs. Fulneſs of bread and idleneſs were the ſins of Sodom, that occaſioned ſuch an exuberancy of Luſt. They are like fed horſes every one neighing after his neighbour's Wife. When I had fed them to the full, then they committed Adultery, and Aſſembled themſelves by Troops in the Harlots houſes, Jer. 5. 7, 8. This is a ſad requital of the bounty of God, in giving us the enjoyment of the Creatures, to make them fuel to luſt, and inſtruments of ſin.

Sine Cerere & Baccho friget Venus.

Direct. 6. Make choice of a meet Yoke-fellow, and delight in her you have choſen; This is a lawful Remedy; See 1 Cor. 7. 9. God ordained it, Gen. 2. 21. But herein appears the corruption of nature, that men delight to tread by-paths, and forſake the way in which God hath appointed; as that Divine Poet Mr. Herbert ſaith:

If God had laid all common, certainly,
Man would have been the cloſer: but ſince now
God hath impal'd us, on the contrary,
Man breaks the fence, and every ground will plow.
O what were Man, might he himſelf miſplace! ure, to be croſs he would ſhift feet and face.

Stollen waters are ſweeter to them, than thoſe waters they might lawfully drink at their own fountain: ut withal know, it is not the having, but the de-ghting in a lawful Wife, as God requires you to o, that muſt be a fence againſt this ſin. So Solomon, rov. 5. 19. Let her be as the loving Hind, and pleaſant oe; Let her breaſts ſatisfie thee at all times, and be ou raviſht always with her love.

Direct. 7. Take heed of running on in a courſe of , (eſpecially Superſtition and Idolatry) in which ſes, and as a puniſhment of which evils, God often es up men to theſe vile affections, Rom. 1. 25, 26. o changed the truth of God into a lye [worſhipped] ſerved the Creature more than the Creator, who is ſſed for ever, Amen. [For this cauſe] God gave them o vile affections, &c. They that defile their Souls Idolatrous practices, God ſuffers as a juſt recomce, their bodies alſo to be defiled with unclean-ſ, that ſo their ruin may be haſtened Let the nirers of Tradition beware of ſuch a judicial dition as this is. Wo to him that is thus delid by the hand of an angry God: No puniſhment he world like this, when God puniſhes ſin with When he ſhall ſuffer thoſe κοινὰς ἐννοίας, thoſe mon notices of Conſcience to be quench'd, all reſtraints to be moved out of the way of ſin, ill not be long ere that ſinner come to his own e.

IV. CAUTION.

IN the next place, I ſhall make bold to expoſtulate a little with your Conſcience concerning the precious mercies you have received, and the ſolemn promiſes you have bound your ſelves withal for the obtaining of thoſe mercies. I fear God hath many bankrupt debtors among you, that have dealt ſlipperily and unfaithfully with him, that have not rendered to the Lord according to the great things he hath done for them, nor according to thoſe good things they have vowed to the Mighty God of Jacob: But truly, if thou be a deſpiſer of mercy, thou ſhalt be a pattern of wrath; God will remember them in fury, who forget him in his favours. I will tell you what a grave and eminent Miniſter once told his people (dealing with them about this ſin of unthankfulneſs for mercy) and I pray God it may affect you duly: Let us all mourn (ſaith he) and take on; we are all behind-hand with God: The Chriſtian world is become bankrupt, quite broke, makes no return to God for his Love. He is iſſuing out proceſs to ſeize upon body, goods, and life, and will be put off no longer: Bloody Baylifſs are abroad for bad debtors all the world over. Chriſtians are broke, and make no return, and God is breaking all. He cannot have what he would have, what he ſhould have; he will take what he can get: for money, he will take goods, limbs, arms, legs; he, will have his own out of your skin, out of your blood, out of your bodies and ſouls. He is ſetting the Chriſtian world as light and as low as they have ſet his love. Ah Lord! what a time do we live in? Longſuffering is at an end, Mercy will be righted in Juſtice, Juſtice will have all behind, it will be paid to the utmoſt farthing; 'twill ſet abroach your blood, but 'twill have all behind, &c.

Mr. Lockyer on Col. 1. p. 113.

Do you hear, Souls? Is not this ſad news to ſome of you, who have received vaſt ſums of mercy, and given God your bond for the repayment of him in praiſe and anſwerable fruit, and yet forfeited all, and loſt your credit with God? Oh how can you look God in the face, with whom you have dealt ſo perfidiouſly? I am now come in the Name of God to demand his due of you; to call to remembrance the former receipts of mercy which you mind not, but God doth, and there is a witneſs in your boſom that doth, and will one day witneſs to your faces, that you have dealt perfidiouſly with your God? your ſouls have been the graves of mercy, which ſhould have been as ſo many gardens where they ſhould have lived and flouriſhed. I am come now to open thoſe graves, and view thoſe mercies that your unthankfulneſs hath killed and buried, to lay them before your eyes, and ſee whether your ungrateful hearts will bleed upon them. Buried mercies are not loſt for ever; they ſhall as certainly have a day of * Reſurrection as thy ſelf: It were better for thee they ſhould have a Reſurrection now in thy heart, than to riſe as witneſſes againſt thee, when thou ſhalt riſe out of the duſt; that will be a terrible Reſurrection indeed, when they ſhall come to plead againſt thy Soul: nothing pleads more dreadfully againſt a ſoul than abuſed mercy doth. But I ſhall come to the particulars upon which I interrogate your Conſciences, and I pray deal truly and ingenuouſly in anſwering theſe Queries.

* There is a double reſurrection of Mercy: A reſurrection of Mercy in Mercy, and a reſurrection of Mercy in Wrath. It is the firſt I now labour for, and that to prevent the ſecond.

Quer. 1. And firſt I ſhall demand of you, Whether you never had experience of the power and goodneſs of God, in reſtoring you to Health from dangerous Sickneſs and Diſeaſes? Have you not ſometimes had the ſentence of Death in your ſelves? and that poſſibly when you have been in remote parts far from your Friends and Relations, and deſtitute of all means and accommodations. Did you not ſay in that condition, as Hezekiah did in a like caſe? Iſa. 38. 10, 11, 12. I ſaid in the cutting off of my days, I ſhall go to the gates of the grave, I am deprived of the reſidue of my years. I ſaid, I ſhall not ſee the Lord, even the Lord in the land of the living; I ſhall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world. Remember thy ſelf, man, canſt not thou call to mind the day when the Arrows of death came whisking by thee, and it may be hit thoſe next thee; took away thoſe that were as lively and as luſty as thy ſelf, when you began your Voyage, and yet they were caſt for death, thou for life, and that when there was but an hairs breadth betwixt thee and the grave? Tell me, Soul, What friend was that ſtood by thee then, when thou waſt forſaken of all friends? When it may be thy Companions ſtood ready to throw thee overboard, Who was it that pitied and remembred thee in thy low eſtate? Who was it that rebuked thy diſeaſe? or (as one very aptly expreſſes it) reſtrained the humours of thy body, from overflowing and drowning thy life? for when they are let out in a ſickneſs, they would overflow and drown it, as the Waters would the earth, if God ſhould not ſay to them, Stay you proud waves. Who was it, man, that when thy body was brought low and weak, and like a crazy rotten Ship in a ſtorm, took in water on all ſides, ſo that all the Phyſicians in the World could not have ſtopt thoſe Leaks; conſider, what hand was that which quieted and calmed the tempeſtuous Sea, careened and mended thy crazy Body, and launched thee into the World again, as whole, as ſound, as ſtrong as ever? Was it not the Lord, that hath done all this for thee? Did not he keep back thy ſoul from the Pit, and thy Life from periſhing? Yea, when thou waſt chaſtened with pain upon thy Bed (as Elihu ſpeaks) Job 33. 19, 20, 21. and the multitude of thy bones with ſtrong pains, ſo that thy life abhorred bread, and thy Soul dainty meat; thy fleſh conſumed away that it could not be ſeen, and thy bones that were not ſeen ſtuck out: yet then as it is, verſe 28. he delivered thy Soul from going down into the Pit, and cauſed thy Life to ſee the Light. Had the Lamp of life been then extinguiſht, thou hadſt gone into endleſs Darkneſs; Hell had ſhut her mouth upon thee. Now tell me, Soul, What haſt thou gone with this precious mercy? Haſt thou walked before the Lord in a deep ſenſe thereof, and anſwered his end therein, which was, to lead thee to Repentance? Or hath thy ſtupid or diſingenuous heart forgotten it, and loſt all ſenſe of it, ſo that God's end is fruſtrated, and thy Salvation not a jot furthered thereby? O! if it be ſo, wo to thee; for the blood of this Mercy, which thy Ingratitude hath murther'd, like the blood of Abel, cries to God againſt thee. What a Wretch art thou thus to requite the Lord for ſuch a Mercy! He ſaw thy Tears, and heard thy Groans, and ſaid within himſelf, He ſhall not die, but live; Alas, poor Creature, If I cut him off now, he is eternally loſt: I will ſend him back a few years more into the World; I will try him once more, it may be he will bear ſome fruits to me from this deliverance; and if ſo, well; if not, I will cut him down hereafter: He ſhall be ſet at liberty upon his Good-Behaviour a little longer. And is all this nothing in thine eyes? Wretch that thou art, Doſt thou forget and ſlight ſuch a favour as this! Is it worth no more in thine eyes? Well, it would be worth ſomething in the eyes of the poor Damned Souls, if they might have ſo many years cut out of their Eternity, for a meer intermiſſion of their Torments, much more as a time of patience and mercy. O conſider, what pity and goodneſs thou haſt abuſed.

Mr. Tho. Goodwin.

Quer. 2. Waſt thou never caſt upon miſerable ſtreights and extremities, wherein the good Providence of God relieved and ſupplied thee? How many of you have been beaten ſo long at Sea, by reaſon of contrary winds, and other accidents, till your Proviſions have been even exhauſted and ſpent? To how ſhort allowance have you been kept? And what a mercy would you have eſteemed it, if you could but have ſatisfied Nature with a full draught of Water? Certainly, this hath been the caſe of many of you. Oh what a price and value did you then ſet upon thoſe common Mercies, which at other times have been ſlightly over-look'd! and when you have ſeen no hopes of relief, Have you not looked ſadly one upon another? and it may be ſaid as that Widow of Zarephtah did to the Prophet, 1 King. 17. 12. And ſhe ſaid, As the Lord thy God liveth, I have not a cake, but a handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oyl in a cruſe: and behold, I am gathering two ſticks that I may go in and dreſs it for me and my ſon, that we may eat it, and die. Even ſuch hath been your caſe; yet hath that God, whoſe Mercies are over all his Works, heard your ſorrows, and provided Relief yor you, either by ſome Ship, which Providence ſent to relieve you in that diſtreſs; or by altering the Winds, and ſending you ſafe to the Land, before all your Proviſions have been ſpent. And haſt thou kept no Records of theſe gracious Providences? yea, Doſt thou abuſe the Creature, when thou art brought again to the full enjoyment of it? and poſſibly receiveſt the Creatures (whoſe worth thou ſo lately haſt ſeen in the want of them) without thankſgiving, or a ſenſible acknowledgment of the goodneſs of God in them? I ſay, doſt thou thus anſwer the expectations of God? Well, beware leſt God teach ſuch an unworthy Creature, by woful experience, that the opening of his hand to give thee a Mercy, is worth the opening thy Lips to bleſs him for it. Beware leſt that unthankful Mouth that will not bleſs the Lord for Bread and Water, have neither the one nor the other to Bleſs him for. I can give you a ſad inſtance in the caſe, and I have found it in the Writing of an eminen Divine, who ſaith he had it from an eye and ear-wi neſs of the truth of it. A young Man lying upon hi Sick bed, was always calling for meat, but when th meat he called for was brought unto him, he ſhook and trembled dreadfully at the ſight of it, and tha in every part of his body; and ſo continued, unt his food was carried away. And thus he did, often as any food was brought into his preſence; and not being able to eat one bit, pined away: b before his death, he freely acknowledged the Juſti of God in this puniſhment; For, ſaid he, in the ti of my Health, I ordinarily received my meat wi out thankſgiving. O! Let the abuſers and deſpi of ſuch Mercies, fear and tremble.

Quer. 3. Have you not been eminently protec and ſaved by the Lord, in the greateſt dangers a hazards of life; in fights at Sea, when men h dropt down at your right hand and at your left, yet the Lord hath cover'd your heads in the day of battle? and though you have been equally obnoxious to Death and Danger with others, yet your name was not found among theirs in the liſt of the dead; Or in Shipwrecks, ah, how narrowly have ſome of you eſcaped! A plank hath been caſt in, you know not how, to ſave you, when your Companions, for want of it, have gone down to the bottom; or you have been enabled to ſwim to the Shore, when others have fainted in the way, and periſhed. In what a variety of ſtrange and aſtoniſhing Providences hath God walked towards ſome of you, and what returns have you made to God for it? Oh Sirs, I beſcech you, conſider but theſe two or three things that I ſhall now lay before you to conſider of.

Conſid. 1. An Heathen will do more for a dunghill-Deity, than thou, that calleſt thy ſelf a Chriſtian, wilt do for the true God, that made Heaven and Earth, Dan. 5. 4. They praiſed the Gods of Silver, and of Gold, and of Braſs, of Iron, Wood, and Stone. When the Philiſtines were delivered from the hand of Sampſon, the Text ſaith, Judg. 16. 24. They praiſed their God, &c. Then Dagon muſt be extolled. O let ſhame cover thy face!

Conſid. 2. That the abuſe of Mercy and Love, is a ſin that goes near to the heart of God. O! he cannot bear it. It is not the giving out of mercy that troubles him, for that he doth with delight; but the recoyling of his mercies upon him by the creatures ingratitude, this wounds. Be aſtoniſhed, O ye heavens, at this, and be ye horribly afraid. And again, Hear O heavens, and give ear O earth, Iſa. 1. 2. q. d. O you innocent Creatures which inviolably obſerve the law of your Creation, be you all aſtoniſhed and cloathed in black, to ſee Nature caſt by ſin ſo far below it ſelf; and that in a Creature ſo much ſuperior to you as Man, who in the very womb, was crown'd a King, and admitted into the higheſt Order of Creatures, and ſet as Lord and Maſter over you; yet doth he act not only below himſelf, but below the very beaſts. The Ox knoweth his owner, i. e. There is a kind of gratitude in the beaſts, by which hey acknowledge their benefactors that feed and preſerve them. Oh! What a pathetical exclamaion is that, Deut. 32. 6. Do ye thus requite the Lord, fooliſh people, and unwiſe?

Conſid. 3. It is a ſin that kindles the wrath of God, nd will make it burn dreadfully againſt thee, unhankful ſinner; it ſtirs up the anger of God, in whomſoever it be found, though in the perſon of a aint, 2 Chron. 32. 25. But Hezekiah rendred not gain according to the benefit done unto him: for his eart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, nd upon Jeruſalem. And ſo you read, Rom. 1. That e Heathen, becauſe they were not thankful, were iven up to vile affections; the foreſt Plague in the orld. It is a ſin that the God of Mercy ſcarce nows how to pardon, Jer. 5. 7. How ſhall I pardon ee for this? This forgetting of the God that ſaves in our extremities, is a ſin that brings deſolation nd ruin, the effects of God's high diſpleaſure, upn all our temporal enjoyments. See that remarkae Scripture, Iſa. 17. 10, 11. Becauſe thou haſt [fortten] the God of [thy Salvation] and haſt not been mindful] of the rock of [thy ſtrength:] Therefore ſhalt ou plant pleaſant plants, and ſhalt ſet it with ſtrange ps; in the day ſhalt thou make thy plant to grow, and the morning ſhalt thou make thy ſeed to flouriſh, but Harveſt ſhall be an heap in the day of grief and deſpete ſorrow. The meaning is, that God will blaſt d curſe all thine employments, and thou ſhalt be under deſperate ſorrow, by reaſon of the diſappointments of thy hopes.

Conſid. 4. It's a ſin that cuts off Mercy from you in future ſtraits: if you thus requite the Lord for former mercies, never expect the like in future diſtreſſes. God is not weary of his bleſſings, to caſt them away upon ſuch Souls that are but graves to them. Mark what a reply God made to the Iſraelites, when they cryed unto him for help, being invaded by the Amorites, Judg. 10. 11, 12, 13. Did not I deliver you from the Egyptians, and from the Amorites, from the Children of Ammon, and from the Philiſtins? The Zidonians alſo, and the Amalekites, and ye cryed unto me, and I delivered you out of their hands; yet ye have forſaken me, and ſerved other Gods; wherefore I will deliver you no more. O ſad word! It is (as if the Lord had ſaid) I have tryed what mercy and deliverance will do with you, and I ſee you are never the better for it; deliverance is but ſeed ſown upon the Rocks: I will caſt away no more favours upon you; now look to your ſelves, ſhift for your ſelves for time to come, wade through your troubles as well as you can. O brethren, there is nothing more quickly works the ruin of a People, than the abuſe of mercy. O methinks this Text ſhould ſtrike terrour into your hearts. How often hath God delivered you? Remember thy eminent deliverance at ſuch a time, in ſuch a Countrey, out of ſuch a deep diſtreſs: God was gracious to thy cry then; thou haſt forgotten and abuſed this mercy; what now, if God ſhould ſay, as in the Text, Therefore I will deliver thee no more. Ah poor Soul! What would'ſt thou do then, or to whom wilt thou turn? It may be thou wilt cry to the Creatures for help and pity; but alas, to what purpoſe? they will give as cold and as comfortleſs an anſwer, as Samuel gave unto Saul, 1 Sam. 28. 15, 16. And Samuel ſaid to Saul, Wherefore haſt thou diſquieted me, to bring me up? And Saul anſwered, I am ſore diſtreſſed; for the Philiſtines make war againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more, neither by Prophets, nor by Dreams; therefore have I called thee, &c. Then ſaid Samuel, Wherefore then doeſt thou ask of me, ſeeing the Lord is departed from thee, and become thine enemy? O! thou wilt be a poor ſhiftleſs creature, if once by abuſing mercy thou make it thy Enemy.

Secondly, For the breach of Vows made in diſtreſs to obtain theſe mercies, and eaſily forgotten and violated by thee when thou haſt obtained thy deſire: A word or two to convince you what a further evil lies in this, and how by this conſideration thy ſins come to be buoyed up to a greater height, and aggravation of ſinfulneſs; and then I have done with this Head.

A Vow, is a promiſe made to God, in the things of God. The Obligation of it is by Caſuiſts judged to be as great as that of an Oath. It is a ſacred and ſolemn bond, wherein a Soul binds it ſelf to God in lawful things: and being once bound by it, it is a moſt heinous evil to violate it. It is an high piece of diſhoneſty to fail in what we have promiſed to men, ſaith Dr. Hall; but to diſappoint God in our Vows, is no leſs than Sacriledge. The act is free and voluntary; but if once a juſt and lawful vow or promiſe hath paſt your lips (ſaith he) you may not be falſe to God in keeping it. It is with us for our vows, as it was with Ananias and Saphira, for their ſubſtance: Whilſt it remained (ſaith Peter) was it not thine own? He needed not to ſell and give it; but if he will give, he may not reſerve; it is death to ſave ſome: he lies to the Holy Ghoſt, that defalks from that which he engaged himſelf to beſtow. If thou have vowed to the mighty God of Jacob, look to it that thou be faithful in thy performance, for he is a great and jealous God, and will not be mocked.

Now I am confident, there be many among you, that in your former diſtreſſes have ſolemnly engaged your ſouls thus to God; that if he would deliver you out of thoſe dangers, and ſpare your lives, you would walk more ſtrictly, and live more holy lives than ever you did. You have, it may be, engaged your Souls to the Lord againſt thoſe ſins, as Drunkenneſs, Lying, Swearing, Uncleanneſs, or whatſoever evil it was that your Conſcience then ſmote you for: the vows of God ( I ſay ) are upon many of you. But have you performed thoſe vows that your lips have uttered? Have you dealt truly with God? or have you mocked him, and lyed unto him with your lips, and omitted thoſe very duties you promiſed to perform, and returned to the ſelf-ſame evils you promiſed to forſake. I only put the queſtion, let your Conſcience anſwer it. But if it be ſo indeed, that thou are a perſon that makeſt light of thy engagements to God, as indeed Seamens Vows, and Sick-mens Promiſes are, for the moſt part, deceitful and ſlippery things, being extorted from them by fear of Death, and not from any deep reſentment of the neceſſity and weight of thoſe Duties to which they bind their Souls: I ſay if this ſin lie upon any of your Souls, I adviſe you to go to God ſpeedily, and bewail it; humble your ſelf greatly before him, admire his patience in forbearing you, and pay unto him what your lips have promiſed. And to move you thereunto, let theſe Conſiderations, among many other, be laid to heart.

Conſid. 1. Think ſeriouſly upon the greatneſs of that Majeſty whom thou haſt wronged, by lying to him, and falſifying thy engagements. Oh think ſadly on this: It is not man whom thou haſt abuſed, but God; even that God in whoſe hand thy life and breath is. For although ( as one truly obſerves ) there be not in every vow a formal invocation of God, ( God being the proper Correlate, and as it were a party to every vow, and therefore not formally to be invoked for the conteſtation of it ) yet there is in every vow an implicite calling God to witneſs; ſo that certainly the Obligation of a Vow is not one jot beneath that of an Oath. Now if God be as a party to whom thou haſt paſt thy promiſe, and its obligation on that ground be ſo great, oh what haſt thou done? for a poor worm to mock with the moſt glorious Majeſty of Heaven, and break Faith with God, what a dreadful thing is that? If it were but to thy fellow-creature, though the ſin would be great, yet not like unto this. Let me ſay to thee, as the Prophet Iſaiah 7. 13. Is it a ſmall thing for you to weary men, but you will weary my God alſo? If you dare to deceive and abuſe men, dare you do ſo by God alſo? Oh if the exceeding vileneſs of the ſin do not affect thee, yet methinks the danger of provoking ſo dreadful a Majeſty againſt thee ſhould. And therefore conſider,

Conſid. 2. Secondly, That the Lord will moſt certainly be avenged upon thee for theſe things except thou repent, O read and tremble at the word of God, Eccleſ. 5. 4. When thou voweſt a vow unto God, defer not to pay it: for he hath no pleaſure in fools? pay that which thou haſt vowed. But better it is that thou ſhouldeſt not vow, than that thou ſhouldeſt vow and not pay. Suffer not thy mouth to cauſe thy fleſh to ſin, neither ſay thou before the Angel, that it was an errour; wherefore [ſhould God be angry] at thy vice, and [deſtroy] the works of thy hands? Mark, God will be angry, and in that anger he will deſtroy the Work of thy hand, ( i. e. ) ſaith Dirdate, bring thee and all thy actions to nought, by reaſon of thy perjury. Now the anger of God, which thy breach of promiſe kindles, as appears by this Text, is a dreadful fire. Oh what Creature can ſtand before it! as Aſaph ſpeaks, Pſal. 76. 7. Thou, even thou art to be feared: and who may ſtand in thy ſight when once thou art angry?

Conſid. 3. Conſider, thirdly, that all this while thou ſinneſt againſt Knowledge and Conviction: for did not thy Conſcience plainly convince thee, when imminent danger open'd its mouth, that the matter of thy neglected vow was a moſt neceſſary duty; If not, why didſt thou bind thy Soul to forſake ſuch practices, and to perform ſuch duties? Thou didſt ſo look upon them then; by which it appears, thy Conſcience is convinced of thy duty, but Luſt maſters and over-rules: And if ſo, poor ſinner, what a caſe art thou in, to go on from day to day ſinning againſt Light and Knowledge? Is not this a fearful rate of ſinning? and will not ſuch ſinners be plunged deeper into Hell than the poor Indians that never ſaw the evil of their ways, as thou doeſt? Ponder but two or three Scriptures in thy thoughts, and ſee what a dreadful way of ſinning this is: Rom. 2. 9. Tribulation, anguiſh and wrath to every Soul of man that doth evil, to the [Jew firſt] and alſo to the Gentile. To the Jew firſt ( i. e. ) to the Jew eſpecially and principally; he had a precedency in means and light, and ſo let him have in puniſhment. So Jam. 4. 17. To him that knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is ſin ( i. e. ) Sin with a witneſs, horrid ſin, ſin that ſurpaſſes the deeds of the wicked. So Luke 12. 47. And that ſervant that knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his will, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes. Which is a plain alluſion to the Cuſtom of the Jews in puniſhing an offender, who being convicted, the Judge was to ſee him bound faſt to a Pillar, his cloaths ſtript off, and an Executioner with a Scourge to beat him with ſo many ſtripes: But now thoſe ſtripes came but from the arm of a Creature; Theſe that the Text ſpeaks of, are ſet on by the omnipotent arm of God. Of the former there was a determinate number ſet down in their law, as forty ſtripes, and ſometimes they would remit one of that number too, in mercy to the offender, as you ſee in the example of Paul, 2 Cor. 11. 24. Of the Jews I received forty ſtripes ſave one, but in Hell no mitigation at all, nor allay of mercy. The arm of his power ſupports the Creature in its being, while the arm of his juſtice lays on eternally. Soul, conſider theſe things; do thou not perſiſt any longer then in ſuch a deſperate way of ſinning againſt the clear conviction of thine own Conſcience, which in this caſe muſt needs give teſtimony againſt thee.

Well then; go to God with the words of David, Pſal. 66. 13, 14. and ſay unto him, I will pay thee my vows which my lips have uttered, and my tongue hath ſpoken when I was in trouble. Pay it, Soul, and pay it ſpeedily unto God, elſe he will recover it by Juſtice, and fetch it out of thy bones in Hell. O trifle not any longer with God, and that in ſuch ſerious matters as theſe are

And now I have done my endeavour to give your former Mercies and Promiſes a Reſurrection in your Conſciences; O that you would ſit down and pauſe a while upon theſe things, and then reflect upon the paſt Mercies of your lives, and on what hath paſt betwixt God and your Souls, in your former ſtraights and troubles! let not theſe plain words work upon thy ſpleen, and make thee ſay, as the Widow of Sarepțha did to the Prophet Elijah, 2 Kings 17. 18. What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? Art thou come to call my ſin to remembrance? But rather let it work kindly on thy heart, and make thee ſay as David to Abigail, 1 Sam. 25. 32, 33. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, which ſent thee this day to meet me, and bleſſed be thy advice.

V. CAUTION.

THE fifth and laſt danger I ſhall warn you of, is, Your contempt and ſlighting of Death. Ah how light a matter do many of you (at leaſt in words) make of it? It ſeems you have little reverential fear of this King of terrors; not onely that you ſpeak ſlightly of it, but alſo becauſe you make no more preparation for it, and are no more ſenſible of your preſervations and deliverances from it. Indeed, the heathen Philoſophers did many of them profeſs a Contempt of Death upon the account of Wiſdom and Fortitude; and they were accounted the braveſt men that moſt deſpiſed and ſlighted it: But alas, poor Souls, they ſaw not their enemy againſt whom they fought, but skirmiſht with their eyes ſhut. They ſaw indeed its pale face, but not its ſting and dart. There is alſo a lawful contempt of death: we freely grant, that in two Caſes a believer may contemn it; firſt, when it is propounded to them in a temptation, on purpoſe to ſcare them from Chriſt and duty, then they ſhould ſlight it; as Rev. 12. 11. They loved not their lives to the death. Secondly, When the natural evil of death is ſet in Competition with the enjoyment of God in Glory, then a believer ſhould deſpiſe it, as Chriſt is ſaid to do, Heb. 12. 2. though his was a ſhameful death. But upon all other accounts and conſiderations, it is the height of ſtupidity and ſecurity to deſpiſe it.

Now to the end that you might have right thoughts and apprehenſions of death, which may put you upon ſerious preparation for it; and that when ever your turn comes to conflict with this King of terrors, under whoſe hand the Pompeys, Cæſars, and Alexanders of the world, who have been the terrors of Nations, have bowed down themſelves; I ſay, that when your turn and time comes (as the Lord onely knows how ſoon it may be) you may eſcape the ſtroke of its dart and ſting, and taſte no other bitterneſs in death, than the natural evil of it; To this end I have drawn the following Queſtions and Anſwers, which, if you pleaſe, may be called The Sea-man's Catechiſm. And Oh that you might not dare to launch forth into the deeps, until you have ſeriouſly interrogated and examined your hearts upon thoſe particulars! Oh that you would reſolve, before you go forth, to withdraw your ſelves a while from all clamours and diſtractions, and calmly and ſeriouſly Catechiſe your own ſelves in this manner.

Queſt. 1. What may the iſſue of this Voyage be?

Anſw. Death. Prov. 27. 1. Boaſt not thy ſelf of to morrow, for thou knoweſt not what a day may bring forth. Jam. 4. 13, 14. Go to now, ye that ſay, To day, or to morrow, we will go into ſuch a City, and continue there a year, and buy and ſell, and get gain: Whereas you know not what ſhall be on to morrow, for what is your life? It is even a vapour that appeareth for a little time, and then vaniſheth away.

Queſt. 2. What is Death?

Anſ. Death is a ſeparation of Soul and Body, till the Reſurrection, 2. Cor. 5. 1. We know that if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle be diſſolved. Job 14. 10, 11, 12. Read the words.

Queſt. 3. Is Death to be deſpiſed and ſlighted if it be ſo?

Anſ. O no! It's one of the moſt weighty and ſerious things that ever a creature went about. So dreadful doth it appear to ſome, that the fear of it ſubjects them to Bondage all their lives, Hebr. 2. 15. And to deliver them who through fear of death were all their lives ſubject to bondage. And in Scripture it's called, the King of terrors, Job 18. 14. Or the black Prince, as ſome tranſlate. Never had any Prince ſuch a title before. To ſome it hath been ſo terrible, that none might mention its Name before them.

Queſt. 4. What makes it ſo terrible and affrighting to Men?

Anſw. Several things concur to make it terrible to the moſt of Men: As firſt, its Harbingers and Antecedents, which are ſtrong Pains, Conflicts, and Agonies. Secondly, its office and work it comes about, which is to tranſfer us into the other world. Hence Rev. 6. 8. it's ſet forth by a Pale Horſe: An horſe, for its uſe and office, to carry you away from hence into the upper or lower region of Eternity; and a pale horſe, for it's ghaſtlineſs and terror. Thirdly, But above all, it's terrible in regard of its conſequence; for it's the door of Eternity, the parting-point betwixt the preſent world and that to come; the utmoſt line and boundary of all temporal things. Hence Heb. 9. It's appointed for all men once to die, and after that the Judgement. Rev. 6. 8. And I looked, and behold a pale Horſe, and his name that ſat on him was Death: and Hell followed him. Ah! it makes a ſudden and ſtrange alteration upon mens conditions, to be pluckt out of houſe, and from among friends, and honours, and ſo many delights, and hurried in a moment into the Land of Darkneſs, to be cloathed with flames, and drink the pure wrath of the Almighty for ever. This is it that makes it terrible.

Queſt. 5. If Death be ſo weighty a matter, am I prepared to die?

Anſw. I doubt not; I am afraid I want many things that are neceſſary to a due preparation for it.

Queſt. 6. What are thoſe things wherein a due preparation for Death conſiſteth?

Anſw. Many things are neceſſary. Firſt, Special and Saving Union with Jeſus Chriſt. This is it that diſarms it of its ſting; O Death, where is thy ſting? Thanks be to God who hath given [ us ] the victory through [ our ] Lord Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. So Joh. 11. 26. Whoſoever [ liveth ] and [ believeth ] in me, ſhall never die. Whoſoever liveth (i. e.) is quickned with a new ſpiritual Life and Principle, and ſo puts forth the principal act of that life, viz. Faith, he ſhall never die, (i. e.) eternally; This Hornet, Death, ſhall never leave its ſting in his ſides. Secondly, To entertain Death comfortably, the evidence and knowledge of this Union is neceſſary, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we [ know ] that if our earthly houſe of this Tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a building of God, &c. And then he cannot only be content, but groan to be uncloathed, ver. 2. A miſtake in the former will coſt me my Soul; and a miſtake here will loſe me my peace and comfort. Thirdly, in order to this evidence, it's neceſſary that I keep a good conſcience in all things, both towards God and man, 2 Cor. 1. 12. This is our rejoycing, even the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſincerity and godly ſimplicity, not in fleſhly wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, we have had our converſation in the world. This good Conſcience reſpects all and every part of our work and duty to be done, and all and every ſin to be renounced and denied: So that he that is early united unto Chriſt by Faith, hath the clear evidence of that Union; and the evidence fairly gathered from the teſtimony of a good Conſcience, witneſſing his faithfulneſs as to all duties to be done, and ſins to be avoided, he is fit to die; Death can do him no harm: but alas, theſe things are not to be found in me.

Queſt. 7. But what if I die without ſuch a preparation as this is, what will the conſequence of that be?

Anſw. Very terrible; even the ſeparation of my Soul and Body from the Lord to all eternity, John 3. 36. He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life; and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee life: but the wrath of God abideth on him. He ſhall not ſee life: there's the privative part of his miſery, ſeparation from the bleſſed God. And the [ wrath ] mark it, not anger, but wrath; not the wrath of a man, but of [ God ] at whoſe rebukes the Mountains skip like frighted men, and the Hills tremble: The wrath of God not only flaſhes out upon him, as a tranſient flaſh of lightening, but [ abideth ] dwells, ſticks faſt, there is no power in the world can looſe the ſoul from it. [ Upon him ] not the body only, nor the ſoul only, but on [ him ] ( i.e. ) the whole perſon, the whole Man. Here is the principal poſitive part of that man's miſery.

Queſt. 8. Can I bear this miſery?

Anſw. No: My heart cannot endure, nor my hand be ſtrong, when God ſhall have to do with me upon this account. I cannot bear this wrath; Angels could not bear it: it hath ſunk them into the depths of miſery. Thoſe that feel but a few ſparks of it in their Conſciences here, are even diſtracted by it, Pſal. 88. 15. Chriſt himſelf had never born up under it, had he not been ſupported by the infinite power of the divine nature, Iſa. 42. 1. Behold my ſervant whom I uphold. How then ſhall I live when God doth this? what will be done to the dry tree? Oh! there is no abiding of it, it is inſufferable. The ſinners in Zion are afraid, trembling ſurprizeth the hypocrite: who among us ſhall dwell with the devouring fire? who can endure the everlaſting burning? Iſa. 33. 14.

Queſt. 9. If it cannot be born, is there any way to prevent it.

Anſw. Yes; there is hope in Iſrael concerning this thing. And herein I am in better caſe than the damned: I have the [ may-be's ] of mercy, and they have not. Oh what would they give for a poſſibility of Salvation! Iſa. 1. 16, 17, 18. Waſh ye, make ye clean, put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well, &c. Come now, let us reaſon together: and though your ſins be as ſcarlet, they ſhall be as ſnow. Iſa 55. 7. Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. Though my diſeaſe be dangerous, it is not deſperate, it doth not ſcorn a remedy. Oh there is Balm in Gilead, and a Phyſician there. There is yet a poſſibility, not only of recovering my Primitive glory, but to be ſet in a better caſe than ever Adam was.

Queſt. 10. How may that be?

Anſw By going to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus. Rom. 8. 33, 34. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that juſtifieth, Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that died, yea, rather that is riſen again.

Queſt. 11. But what is it to go to Chriſt?

Anſw. To go to Chriſt, is to * embrace him in his a perſon, and b Offices, and to reſt c intirely and cloſely upon him for d pardon of ſin, and e eternal life; being deeply f ſenſible of the want and worth of him. Joh. 1. 12. To as many as [ received ] him, he gave power to become the Sons of God, even to as many as believed on his Name. John. 3. 36. He that believeth [ on the Son ] hath life. 1 Cor. 1. 30. And of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Sanctification, and Redemption. Acts. 4. 12. Neither is there Salvation in any other, &c. Acts 13. 39. And by him all that believe are [ Juſtified from all things ] from which ye could not be Juſtified by the Law of Moſes. Iſa. 45. 22. Look unto me and be ye ſaved. Acts 2. 37. Now when they heard this, they were pricked to the heart, &c.

* John 1. 12.
a John 3 36.
b 1 Cor. 1. 30.
c Acts 4 12.
d Acts 12. 29.
e Iſa 45. 22.
f Acts 2. 37.

Queſt. 12. But will Chriſt receive me, if I go unto him?

Anſw. Yes, Yes; He is more ready to receive thee, than thou art to come to him. Luk. 15. 20. And he aroſe and came to his Father. But when he was yet a great way off, his Father ſaw him, and had compaſſion on him, and ran and fell on his neck and kiſſed him. The Son doth but go, the Father ran: if he had but received him into the houſe, it had been much; but he fell on his neck, and kiſſed him. He beſpeaks him much after that rate he expreſt himſelf to returning Ephraim. My bowels are troubled for him: I will ſurely have mercy on him, Jerem. 31. 20. There is not the leaſt Parentheſis in all the pages of Free Grace, to exclude a Soul that is ſincerely willing to come to Chriſt.

Queſt. 13. But how may it appear that he is willing to receive me?

Anſw. Make trial of him thy ſelf. If thou did but know his heart to poor ſinners, you would not queſtion it. Believe what he ſaith in the Goſpel; there thou ſhalt find that he is a willing Saviour: for therein thou haſt, Firſt his moſt ſerious invitations, Matth. 11. 28. Come unto me ye that are weary and heavy laden. Iſa. 55. 1. Ho every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters. Theſe ſerious invitations are, Secondly, backt and confirmed with his Oath, Ezek. 35. 11. As I live I deſire not the death of a ſinner. Thirdly, ampliſied with pathetical wiſhes, ſighs and groans, Matth. 23. 29 Oh that thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy day. Fourthly, Yea, delivered to them in undiſſembled tears, Matth. 23. 37, 38. He wept over it, and ſaid, O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem. Fifthly, Nay, he hath ſhed not only tears, but blood to convince thee of his willingneſs. View him in his dying poſture upon the Croſs, ſtretching out his dying arms to gather thee, hanging down his bleſſed head to kiſs thee: every one of his wounds was a mouth opened to convince thee of the abundant willingneſs of Chriſt to receive thee.

Queſt. 14. But my ſins are died in grain: I am a ſinner of the blackeſt hue; will he receive and pardon ſuch an one?

Anſw. Yea, Soul, if thou be willing to commit thy ſelf to him, Iſa. 1. 18. Come, now let us reaſon together: Though your ſins be as ſcarlet, I will make them as ſnow; though they be red like crimſon, I will make them as wool.

Queſt. 15. This is comfortable news: but may I not delay my cloſing with him for a while, and yet not hazard my eternal happineſs, ſeeing I reſolve to come to him at laſt?

Anſw. No, There muſt be no delays in this caſe Pſ. 119. 60. I made haſte and delayed not to keep thy commandments

Queſt. 16. Why may I not defer it, at leaſt for a little while?

Anſw. For many weighty reaſons this work can bear no delays. Firſt, the offers of Grace are made to the preſent time, Heb. 3. 15. While it's ſaid, to day, harden not your heart. There may be a few more days of God's patience, but that is unknown to thee. Secondly, Your Life is immediate uncertain; how many thouſands are gone into Eternity ſince the laſt Night? If you can ſay to ſickneſs when it comes, Go, and come again another time, it were ſomewhat. Thirdly, Sin is not a thing to be dallied with. Oh! who would be willing to lie down one Night under the guilt of all his ſins? Fourthly, delays increaſe the difficulty of Converſion: Sin ſtill roots it ſelf deeper, habits are the more ſtrengthned, and the heart ſtill more hardned. Fifthly, There be thouſands now in Hell, that periſh through delays: Their Conſciences often urged and preſt hard upon them, and many reſolutions they had, as thou haſt now; but they were never perfected by anſwerable executions, and ſo they periſht. Sixthly, Thy way of ſinning now is deſperate; for every moment thou art acting againſt clear light and conviction; and that is a dreadful way of ſinning. Seventhly, There can be no ſolid reaſon for one hours delay; for thou canſt not be happy too ſoon: And be ſure of it, if ever thou come to taſt the ſweetneſs of a Chriſtian Life, nothing will more pierce and grieve thee than this, that thou enjoyedſt it no ſooner.

Qu. 17. Oh, but the pleaſures of ſin engage me to it, how ſhall I break theſe cords and ſnares?

Anſ. That ſnare may be broken by conſidering ſolemnly theſe five things. Firſt, that to take pleaſure in ſin, is an argument of a moſt deplorable and wretched ſtate of Soul. What a poyſonful nature doth it argue in a Toad, that is ſucking in nothing but poyſon and filth whereever he crawls! Oh what an heart haſt thou! haſt thou nothing to find pleaſure in, but that which makes the Spirit of Chriſt ſad, and the hearts of Saints ake and groan; which digged Hell, and let in endleſs miſeries upon the world? Secondly, think that the miſery it involves thee in, infinitely beyond the delights it tempts thee by: doth but delight the ſenſual part, and that but with brutiſh pleaſure; but will torment thy immortal ſoul, and that for ever. The pleaſure will quickly o off, but the ſting will remain behind. I taſted but little honey on the top of my rod (ſaid Jonathan) and muſt die, 1 Sam. 14. 43. Thirdly, Nay, that's not ll; but the Lord proportions wrath according to the leaſures ſouls have had in ſin, Rev. 18. 7. How uch ſhe hath lived deliciouſly, ſo much torment and ſorrow ve unto her. Fourthly, what doſt thou pay, or, leaſt, pawn for this pleaſure? Thy ſoul, thy preious ſoul, is laid to ſtake for it: and in effect thus ou ſayeſt, when thou deferreſt the cloſing with hriſt upon the account of enjoying the pleaſures of a little longer: Here, Devil, take my Soul into y poſſeſſion and power; if I repent, I will have it ain; if not, it is thine for ever. Oh dear-bought leaſures!

What is the world? A great exchange of ware, herein all Sorts and Sexes cheapning are:
e Fleſh, the Devils, ſit and cry, what lack ye?
hen moſt they fawn, they moſt intend to rack ye.
e wares are cups of joy, and beds of pleaſure;
ere's goodly choice, down weight, and flowing meaſure.

A Soul's the price, but they give time to pay
Upon the Death-bed, or the Dying-day.
Hard is the bargain, and unjuſt the meaſure,
When as the price ſo much outlaſts the pleaſure.

Quarles.

Laſtly, It's thy groſs miſtake to think thou ſhalt be bereaven of all delights and pleaſures, by coming under the government of Chriſt: For one of thoſe things in which his Kingdom conſiſts, is joy in the Holy Ghoſt, Rom. 14. 17. Indeed, it allows no ſinful pleaſures to the ſubjects of it, nor do they need it; but from the day thou cloſeſt in with Chriſt, all thy pure, real, and eternal pleaſures and delights begin and bear date. When the Prodigal was return'd to his Father, then, ſaith the Text, They began to be merry, Luke 15. 24. See Acts 8. 5, 6. No, no, Soul, thou ſhalt want no joy; for the Scripture ſaith, They ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe, and thou ſhalt make them drink the rivers of thy pleaſures; for with thee is the fountain of light, &c. Pſal. 36. 8, 9.

Qu. 18. But how ſhall I be able to undergo the ſeverities of Religion? There are difficult Duties to be done, and an heavy croſs to be taken up; theſe be the things that daunt me.

Anſ. If Pain and Suffering daunt thee, how is it thou art not more out of love with ſin than with Religion? For it is moſt certain, that the Sufferings for Chriſt are nothing to Hell, the juſt reward and certain iſſue of ſin: the pains of Mortification are nothing to the pains of Damnation. There is no compare betwixt ſuffering for Chriſt, and ſuffering from Chriſt, Matth. 5. 29. If thy right hand or eye offend thee, cut it off, and pluck it out: It is profitable for thee that one member ſuffer, than that the whole body be caſt into Hell. Secondly, Thou ſeeſt the worſt, but not the beſt of Chriſt. There be Joys and Comforts in thoſe difficult Duties and Sufferings, that thou ſeeſt not. Col. 1. 24. Who now rejoice in my ſufferings. Jam. 1. 2. My Brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations, &c. Thirdly, Great ſhall be thy aſſiſtance from Chriſt, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all things through him that ſtrengthens me. The Spirit helps our infirmities, takes the other end of the burden, Rom. 8. 26. What meaneſt thou to ſtand upon ſuch terms, when it is Heaven or Hell, eternal Life or Death, that lie before thee?

Qu. 19. But to what purpoſe will all my endeavours to come to Chriſt be? unleſs I be elected, all will be to no purpoſe.

Anſ. True: If thou be not elected, thou canſt not obtain him, or happineſs by him: But yet, that is no diſcouragement to ſtrive. For in thy unconverted ſtate, thy Election or Non-election is a ſecret to thee; the only way to make it ſure, is by ſtriving and giving all diligence in the way of duty, 2 Pet. 1. 10. And if you ponder the text well, you will find, that Election is not only made ſure in the way of diligence and ſtriving; but Calling is put before it, and lies in order to it. Firſt ſecure thy effectual Calling, and then thine Election.

Qu. 20. But I have no ſtrength of my own to come to Chriſt by; and is it not abſurd to urge me upon Impoſſibilities in order to my Salvation?

Anſ. Firſt, Certainly you are more abſurd in pleading and pretending your impotence againſt your duty: for you do think you have a power to come to Chriſt, elſe how do you quiet your Conſcience with Promiſes and Solves of Converſion hereafter? Secondly, Though it be true, that no ſaving Act can be done without the concurrence of ſpecial Grace; yet this is as true, that thy inability to do what is above thy power, doth not excuſe thee from doing what is in thy power to do. Canſt thou not forbear, at leaſt, many external acts of ſin? And canſt thou not perform, at leaſt, the external acts of duty? Oh, if thou canſt not come to Chriſt, yet, as the blind man, lie in the way of Chriſt; do what thou canſt do, and confeſs and bewail thine impotency that thou canſt do no more. Canſt thou not take thy Soul aſide in ſecret, and thus bemoan it; My poor Soul, what wilt thou do? Oh what will become of thee, thou art Chriſtleſs, Covenantleſs, Hopeleſs, and, which is moſt ſad, ſenſeleſs and bowelleſs. O! thou canſt not bear the infinite Wrath of the Eternal God, whoſe Almighty Power will be ſet on work to torment ſuch as thou art, and yet thou takeſt no courſe to prevent it. Thou ſeeſt the buſie diligence of all others, and how the Kingdom of Heaven ſuffers violence by them; and art not thou as deeply engaged to look to thy own happineſs, as any in the world? Will Hell be more tolerable to thee than others? Oh what a compoſition of ſtupidity and ſloth art thou? Thou liveſt after ſuch a rate, as if there were neither Fire in Hell to torment thee, nor Glory in Heaven to reward thee. If God and Chriſt, Heaven and Hell, were but dreams and fables, thou couldſt not be leſs affected with them. Ah, my Soul! my Soul! my precious Soul! Is it eaſie to periſh? Wilt thou die as a fool dieth? Oh that men would but do thus, if they can do no more!

And now, Soul, you ſee what death is, that you have made ſo ſlight of; and what is the only way that we, poor Sons of Death, have to eſcape its ſting. You have here ſeen the vanity of all your pleas and pretences againſt Converſion, and the way to Chriſt prepared and caſt up for you. Now, Sirs, I beg you in the name of God that made you, and as if I made this requeſt upon my bended Knees to you, that you will now, without any more delays, yield your ſelves to the Lord. Soul! I beſeech thee, haſte thee into thy Chamber, ſhut thy door, and beſpeak the Lord after ſome ſuch manner as this, before thou dareſt to launch out into the Deeps again:

O dreadful and glorious Majeſty! thou haſt bowels of mercy, as well as beams of glory: I have heard, the ſounding of theſe bowels for me this day. Lord, I have now heard a repreſentation of the grim and ghaſtly face of Death! Ah! I have now ſeen it as the King of Terrors, as the door of Eternity, as the Parting-point, where ſinners take their eternal farewel of all their delights. I have ſeen this black Prince mounted on his pale Horſe, and Hell following him. I have been convinced this day, that if he ſhould come and fetch away my Soul in that condition it is, Hell would follow him indeed. Lord! I have now heard of the Prince of Life alſo, in whoſe bleeding ſide Death hath left and loſt its envenomed ſting; ſo that though it may kill, yet it cannot hurt any of his Members. To this glorious Redeemer I have now been invited; all my pretences againſt him have been confuted, and my Soul in his Name aſſured of welcome, if I come unto him, and caſt my ſelf upon him. And now, Lord, I come, I come, upon thy call and invitation; I am unfeignedly willing to avouch thee, this day to be my God, and to take thee for my portion. Lord Jeſus, I come unto thee; thy Clay, thy Creature moves towards the Fountain of pity, look hitherto: Behold a ſpectacle of miſery. Bowels of mercy, hear, behold my naked Soul, not a rag of righteouſneſs to cover it; behold my ſtarving Soul not a bit of bread for you to eat; ah! it has fed upon wind and vanity hitherto: Behold my wounded Soul bleeding at thy foot; every part, Head and Heart, Will and Affections, all wounded by ſin. O thou compaſſionate Samaritan, turn aſide, and pour thy Sovereign blood into theſe bleeding wounds, which like ſo many opened mouths plead for pity. Behold a returning ſubmitting Rebel, willing to lay down the weapons of unrighteouſneſs, and to come upon the knee for a pardon. Oh I am weary of the ſervice of ſin; I can endure it no longer. Lord Jeſus, thou waſt anointed to preach glad tidings to the meek, and to proclaim liberty to the Captives, and the opening of the Priſon to them that are bound. Come now, and knock off thoſe fetters of unbelief; Oh ſet my Soul at liberty that it may praiſe thee! For ſo many years Satan hath cruelly tyrannized over me, oh that this might be the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of the ſalvation of my God! Lord, thou waſt lifted up to draw Men unto thee; and indeed thou art a drawing Saviour, a lovely Jeſus. I have hitherto ſlighted thee, but it was becauſe I did not know thee: mine eyes have been held by unbelief, when thou waſt opened in the Goſpel; but now I ſee thee as the chiefeſt of ten thouſands. Thou art the glory of Heaven, the glory of Earth, the glory of Sion; and oh that thou wouldſt be the glory of my Soul. I confeſs, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt look upon me; I may much rather expect to be trampled under the feet of Juſtice, than to be embraced in thine arms of Mercy; and that thou ſhouldſt rather ſhed my polluted blood, than ſprinkle thine own upon me. But Lord, what profit is there in my blood? Wilt thou purſue a dryed leaf? Shall it ever be ſaid, that the merciful King of Heaven hang'd up a poor ſoul that put the rope about its own neck, and ſo came ſelf-condemningly to him for mercy? O my Lord! I am willing to ſubmit to any terms, be they never ſo hard and ungrateful to the fleſh. I am ſure whatever I ſhall ſuffer in thy ſervice, cannot be like to what I have ſuffer'd, or am like to ſuffer by ſin: henceforth be thou my Lord and Maſter; thy ſervice is perfect freedom; be thou my Prieſt and Prophet, my Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs. I reſign up my ſelf unto thee: my poor Soul with all its faculties, my body with all its members, to be living inſtruments of thy glory. Let Holineſs to the Lord be now written upon them all; let my tongue henceforth plead for thee, my hands be lifted up unto thy teſtimonies, my feet walk in thy ways. O let all my affections, as willing ſervants, wait upon thee, and be active for thee. Whatever I am, let me be for thee; whatever I have, let it be thine; whatever I can do, let me do for thee; whatever I can ſuffer, let me ſuffer for thee. O that I might ſay before I go hence, My beloved is mine, and I am his! Oh that what I have begged on Earth might be ratified in Heaven! My Spirit within me ſaith, Amen. Lord Jeſus, ſay thou, Amen.

The Myſteries of Providence relating to Seamen, are opened; Their Sins and Dangers diſcovered; their Duties preſſed; and their ſeveral Troubles and Burdens relieved: In Six Practical and Suitable Sermons.

To all Maſters, Mariners, and Seamen, eſpecially ſuch as belong to the Port of Dartmouth, and the Adjacent Parts.

SIRS,

Your ready acceptation of my former Labours for you, hath encouraged this ſecond and laſt endeavour of mine this way to ſerve you. I have for many years been convinced of the great uſe and need you have of the following Diſcourſes: But the Motives that quickned me to their Publication at this time, were eſpecially theſe two.

Firſt, The hand of the Lord hath gone forth with terror gainſt you, this Winter, many of your Companions are one down to the bottom. Such a doleful account of Shipwracks from every Coaſt, and ſuch ſad lamentati ns as have been heard in almoſt every Maritine Town, annot but deeply affect every Heart with Sorrow and Compaſſion, and hath engaged me in this Service for the emnant that is left.

Secondly, The ſeaſonable and prudent care His Majeſty ath at this time manifeſted for the regulation and pre rvation of your Newland Trade, and encouragement of our honeſt induſtry therein; hath alſo provoked me to aſten this deſign, for the regulation of your lives and anners, without which, all external means will ſignifie ut little to your true proſperity.

This little Manual contains the ſum of your duty in e ſeveral parts of your employments, and faithfully diſ vers the Temptations and Dangers attending you in them ll. Upon which Conſideration it is fitly intituled, The eaman's Companion.

As God hath caſt my lot among you, ſo he hath inclined y heart ſtudiouſly to promote your welfare. I have been long obſervation convinced, that one principal cauſe of ur miſcarriages, is the neglect of God in your outſets. id you pray more, you might expect to proſper better. ndeed, if that Epicurean doctrine were true, That God ncerns not himſelf about the affairs of this lower World, but leaves all things to be ſwayed by the power of Natural cauſes, your neglect of prayer might be more excuſable: But whilſt Succeſſes and Diſappointments depend upon his pleaſure, it cannot but be the moſt direct courſe you can ſteer to ruin all, to forget and neglect God in your enterpriſes. To cure this evil, and prevent the manifold miſchiefs that follow it, the Firſt Sermon is deſigned. And if the Lord ſhall bleſs it to your Conviction and Reformation, I may then comfortably apply the words of Moſes to you, Deut. 33. 18 Rejoice Zebulun in thy going out.

You often hear the terrible voice of God in the Storms; and are at your wits end; not knowing what courſe to take, nor which way to turn for ſafety and comfort: And yet, how ſoon are all thoſe Impreſſions worn off? And thoſe Mercies which (whilſt new) were ſo affecting; after a few days become ſtale and common. I have therefore in the Second Sermon laboured not only to direct and ſupport you in thoſe ſtraights, but have alſo endeavoured to fix the Senſe of thoſe Providences upon your Hearts, and inſtruct you how to make due Improvements of them, by anſwering the ſeveral aims and deſigns of them.

It hath been much upon my Heart, to what and how many Temptations to ſin you are expoſed in Foreign Countries, where lawful Remedies are abſent, alluring Objects preſent, and Temptations exceedingly ſtrengthned upon you, by hopes of ſecrecy and concealment: And indeed for a Man whoſe Heart is not throughly ſeaſoned with Religion, and awed by the fear of God, to converſe in ſuch places, and with ſuch Company, and not be polluted with their ſins, is upon the matter as great a Miracle, as for the three Children to come out of the Fiery Furnace without an Hair ſinged, or the ſmell of Fire upon their Garments. I have therefore prepared for you the beſt preſervative from theſe Temptations in the Third Sermon, which the Lord make an effectual Antidote to your Souls againſt the Corruptions that are in the World through Luſt.

I have frequently obſerved the miſchievous influence that Succeſs and Proſperity have had upon ſome of you. How the God of your Mercies hath been forgotten, and his Mercies made inſtruments of ſin againſt him. How apt are Men to aſcribe all to their own wiſdom, care, and induſtry, as if God had no hand in it? The Fourth Sermon therefore leads up your thoughts to the Fountain of all your good, and drops many very ſeaſonable and neceſſary Cautions upon you, to keep you humble and thankful under Proſperity.

And becauſe Men will not own God in their Succeſs, but ſacrifice to their own Net: God often teaches them the evil of it by ſad Loſſes and Diſappointments. Yea, Diſappointments ſometimes follow the beſt of Men, and that in the moſt juſt and honeſt Employments. To caution the former ſort, and ſupport the latter, in ſuch a caſe, I recommend the Fifth Sermon to your ſerious conſideration, not doubting, if the Bleſſing of God go forth with it, but it may prove a very ſeaſonable and uſeful diſcourſe to you in that condition.

And laſtly, Becauſe it is ſo common for Seamen to forget the many Mercies they have received in a voyage, when it is over, and God hath brought them to the Havens of Deſire, and among their Relations, I have in the laſt Sermon inſtructed them in their duty, and laboured to work in ſuch a Senſe of Mercies upon their Hearts, as may engage them to a due and thankful acknowledgment of God in all.

You ſee by this brief account, how honeſt the deſign is in which I have engaged for you. But I am ſenſible, that the management is very defective, it being diſpatched in haſte, and when my hands were filled with other work, and my body clogged with many infirmities. But ſuch as it is, I heartily devote it to the ſpecial ſervice of your Souls, and remain

Yours,

SERMON I.

Acts XXI. 5, 6.

And we kneeled down on the ſhore, and prayed; and when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ſhip, and they returned home again.

THIS Scripture gives us an account of the manner of Paul's imbarking at Tyre, in his voyage for Jeruſalem; and therein an excellent pattern for all that go down into the Seas, to do buſineſs in the great Waters. It is true, his buſineſs in that voyage, was not to get an Eſtate, but to witneſs to the Truths of Jeſus Chriſt, with the hazard of his life. Many diſcouragements he met with in this Voyage, and not the leaſt at Tyre, where he met with certain Diſciples that ſaid to him by the Spirit, That he ſhould not go to Jeruſalem, though, in that they followed their own ſpirit; but he is not to be diſſwaded: Like that noble Roman, and upon a more noble account, he judged it neceſſary to go, but not to live. The Diſciples ſeeing his unalterable reſolution, expreſs their affections to him at parting, by bringing him to the Ship, and that with their whole Families, Wives and Children, Verſe 5. therein giving him the laſt mark of their dear Reſpects.

Neceſſe eſt ut eam, non ut vivam. Cæſar.

In this Farewel, their Chriſtian Affections are mutually manifeſted by two ſorts of Actions,

Viz. Sacred and Civil in Prayers and Salutations.

1. Prayers; the beſt office one Chriſtian can do another. As Prayer is the beſt Preface, ſo cer- ly it is the beſt Cloſe to any buſineſs or injoyment. which Prayer we may note the place, poſture, matter or ſcope.

irſt, The place, it was upon the Shore, the part- place near to which the Ship rode, waiting for Paul; And this was no unuſual thing among them in thoſe days. Tertullian tells us, They ſent their Prayers to Heaven from every Shore; and elſewhere he calls them iones littorales, Shore-Prayers. So cuſtomary it was holy Men in thoſe days, to be taken into the or Boat from their Knees, not from the Tavern le-houſe.

omne littus pre- ad cælum mit- Tertul. de Jecondly, The poſture, they kneeled down. As all es, ſo all poſtures have been uſed in Prayer. Some have uſed one poſture, and ſome another; but this is the common and ordinary poſture. Knees when they can (as an ingenious Author ſpeaks) then they muſt be bowed.

Thirdly, The matter and ſcope of the Prayer, which though it be not expreſſed, yet may with great probability be argued from the place and occaſion, to be, as Eraſmus ſpeaks, Pro fauſta Navigatione, for a proſperous voyage, and Divine protection. He knew to what, and how many hazards of life they are hourly expoſed, that border ſo near unto death, as Mariners and Paſſengers at Sea do; and therefore would not commit himſelf to the Sea, till firſt he had ſolemnly committed himſelf to God, whoſe voice the Winds and Seas obey. Nor was he willing to take his leave of his dear Friends, until he had poured out his heart to God with them, and for them, whoſe faces he might never ſee again in this World, and engaged their Prayers alſo for him.

2. As their Affections were mutually manifeſted by this Sacred action, Prayer; ſo by Civil ones too, affectionate Embraces and Salutations. When we had taken our leave one of another. Salutations were uſed among the Jews, both at their meeting and parting. This latter conſiſted in words and geſtures; the uſual words were, The Lord bleſs you, Ruth 2. 4. Peace be unto thee. Grace be with you, &c. The geſtures were kiſſing each other. Theſe were kiſſes which a Cato might give, and a Veſtal receive. In both theſe, viz. Their Prayers for, and Salutations of each other, they manifeſted their Chriſtian Affections mutually, but eſpecially by their Prayers at parting. Hence note, Doctr. Thoſe that undertake Voyages by Sea, had need not only to pray earneſtly themſelves; but alſo to engage the Prayers of other Chriſtians for them.

They that part praying, may hope to meet again rejoycing; and thoſe deſigns which are not prefaced with Prayer, cannot wind up with a Bleſſing. There are two ſorts of Prayer, ſtated, and occaſional.

Stated Prayer is our converſing with God, either publickly, privately, or ſecretly, at the conſtant ſeaſons allotted for it, in the returns of every week and day.

Occaſional, is the Chriſtians addreſs to God at any time upon extraordinary emergencies, and calls of Providence; or, when we undertake any ſolemn buſineſs (and what more ſolemn than this?) and then the chief matter and ſcope of Prayer is to be ſuited to the preſent occaſion, and deſign in hand; of this ſort is that I am here to ſpeak. Now in opening the Point, I will ſhew,

(1.) What thoſe ſpecial Mercies are that Seamen ſhould pray for, when they are to undertake a voyage.

(2.) What influence Prayer hath upon thoſe Mercies, and how it muſt be qualified for that end.

(3.) What aid and aſſiſtance the Prayers of other Chriſtians may contribute to the procurement of them.

And then make application of all.

(1.) We will inform the Seaman, what thoſe ſpecial Mercies are, he ſhould earneſtly pray for, when he undertakes a voyage.

And amongſt thoſe Mercies to be earneſtly requeſted of God by him; the firſt and principal is, The pardon of ſin. A Mercy which muſt make a part of every Prayer; and at this time to be earneſtly ſued for. Guilt is that Jonah in the Ship for whoſe ſake ſtorms, ſhipwracks, and ruin purſue it. It is ſaid Pſal. 148. 8. That the ſtormy winds fulfil God's word. If the word there ſpoken of, be the word of God's threatning againſt ſin, as ſome expound it; then the ſtormy Winds, and lofty Waves, are God's Serjeants ſent out with commiſſion to arreſt Sinners upon the Sea, his Water-Bailiffs to execute the Threatnings of God upon them in the great Deeps. Hence thoſe expreſſions of Scripture, Numb. 32. 23. Be ſure your ſin will find you out; and Gen. 4. 7. Sin lieth at the door. In both which places, the Spirit of God compares a Mans guilt to a Blood-hound, that purſues and follows upon the ſcent whereever a Man goes. And indeed our ſins are called debts, Matth. 6. 12. Not that we owe them to God, or ought to ſin againſt him; but metonymically, becauſe as pecuniary debts oblige him to ſuffer that hath not wherewith to pay, and expoſe him to the danger of Serjeants and Bailiffs whereever he ſhall be found; ſo do our ſins in reference to God, who hath reckoned with many thouſands of Sinners upon the Sea, there arreſted them by his Winds and Waves which he ſent out after them, and laid their Bodies in the bottom of the Sea, and their Souls in the bottom of Hell. O, that is a diſmal Storm that is ſent after a Man, to drive Soul and Body to deſtruction! With what heart or courage can that Man go down into the Deeps, and expoſe himſelf among the raging Waves, and roaring Winds, that knows God hath a controverſie with him; and for ought he knows, the next Storm may be ſent to hurry him to the Judgment-Seat of the great and terrible God? Certainly, Friends, it is your great concern to get a Pardon, and be at peace with God; a thing ſo indiſpenſible, that you cannot have leſs; and ſo comprehenſive, that you cannot deſire more. If ſin be pardoned you are ſafe, you need fear no Storms within, whatever you find without: But wo to him that finds at once a raging Sea, and a roaring Conſcience; trouble without, and terror within; Ship and Hope ſinking together. You are privy to all the evils and wickedneſs of your hearts and lives. You know what treaſures of guilt you have been heaping up all your days; and think you when diſtreſſes and extremities come upon you, Conſcience will be as quiet and ſtill, as it is now? No, no, guilt will flie in your faces then, and ſtop your mouths. O therefore humble your ſelves at the feet of God for all your iniquities; apply your ſelves to the Blood of Sprinkling; pray, and plead with God for remiſſion of ſin: Without which you are in a woful caſe to adventure your ſelves at Sea, to thoſe eminent perils of life.

(2.) Another Mercy you are earneſtly to pray for, is, That the preſence of God may go with you, I mean not his general preſence, which fills the World: That will be with you, whether you pray for it, or no: But his gracious ſpecial preſence, which was that Moſes ſo earneſtly ſued for in Exod. 33. 15. If thy preſence go not with me, carry us not hence. He and the people were now in a waſte howling Wilderneſs, but bound for Canaan, that Earthly Paradiſe; yet you ſee, he chuſes rather to be in a Wilderneſs with God, than in a Canaan without him: And no wonder, for this gracious preſence of God, as to comfort, is all that a gracious Soul hath, or deſires to have in this World: And as to ſecurity and protection from dangers, it is the only Aſylum, Sanctuary and Refuge in the day of trouble. If the preſence of God be graciouſly with us, it will guard the heart againſt terror in the moſt eminent diſtreſs, as you ſee Pſal. 23. 4. Yea, though I walk through the Valley of the ſhadow of Death (that is, through the moſt apparent and eminent dangers of death) yet will I fear no evil, for thou art with me. And indeed there is no room for fear; for with whomſoever God is in a gracious and ſpecial manner preſent, theſe three matchleſs Mercies are ſecured to that Man.

Quamvis in ſumma mortis ipſius periculis incurram. Gloſs. Pſal. Sacr.

Firſt, That God's ſpecial providence ſhall watch over him in all dangers. Pſal. 91. 1. & 4. He ſhall abide under the ſhadow of the Almighty; he ſhall cover thee with his Feathers, and under his Wings ſhalt thou truſt. As the Hen gathers her brood under her Wings, not only to cheriſh, but to defend them from all danger. So God takes his people under his Providential Wings for their ſecurity.

Secondly, He appoints for them a guard of Angels, whoſe office is to watch over and miniſter to them in all their ſtraits. So we read Pſal. 91. 11. He ſhall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. Many inviſible ſervices they do for us. Luther tells us the Angels have two offices, Superius canere, & inferius vigilare: To ſing above, and watch below. Theſe are as a Lifeguard to that Man with whom the Lord is.

Thirdly, He readily hears their cries in a day of diſtreſs, and is with them to ſave and deliver them. So Verſ. 15. He ſhall call upon me, and I will anſw him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver and honour him. O, what a matchleſs Mercy is th How many times, when poor Seamen have ſe death apparently before their eyes, have they cri Mercy! Mercy! how ordinary is it for their eyes (o ſuch occaſions) to add Salt water, where alas, the was too much before! But now to have God wi you in ſuch an hour of ſtraits, to hear, ſuppo and deliver you; O, you cannot eſtimate the wo of ſuch a Mercy. Pray therefore, for it is a Mer indiſpenſably neceſſary for you; and ſay to him, Moſes, Lord if thy preſence may not go with us, carry not hence.

(3.) A third Mercy you are ſpecially concern to beg of God, is, That you may be kept from temptations to ſin, you will meet with, when y are abroad in the World. The whole World lies in wickedneſs, 1 John 5. 19. Every place, every employment, every company hath its ſnares and temptations attending it. And you know you have corrupt natures, as much diſpoſed to cloſe with temptations, as Tinder is to catch Fire: So that unleſs the preventing, reſtraining, and mortifying Grace of God be with you, they will but touch and take. If there were no Devil to tempt you externally; yet ſuch a corrupt heart meeting with a ſuitable temptation and occaſion, is enough to overcome you. Jam. 1. 14. Every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own luſts and enticed. Alas, you know not what hearts you have till temptations prove them; and what comfort can you take in the ſucceſs and proſperity of your affairs, be it never ſo great, if you return with Conſciences polluted and wounded with ſin? He that brings home a pack of fine cloaths, infected with the Plague, hath no ſuch great bargain of it, how cheap ſoever he purchaſed them. O therefore beg earneſtly of God, you may be kept from ſin, pray that you be not led into temptation.

(4.) Pray for Divine Protection in all the dangers and hazards to which you ſhall be expoſed. You know not how ſoon your life and eſtate ſhall be in jeopardy. This night you may ſleep quietly in your Cabin, to morrow you may be tugging at the Pump, and the next night take up your lodging upon a cold Rock. How ſmartly doth the Apoſtle James reprehend the ſecurity of Trading Perſons. Jam. 4. 13, 14. Go to now ye that ſay, to day or to morrow we will go to ſuch a City, and continue there a year, and buy, and ſell, and get gain; whereas you know not what ſhall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appears for a little time, and then vaniſheth away. How eaſily can God daſh all your deſigns, and hopeful projects in one hour! You know you are every moment as near death, as you are near the Water, which is but a remove of one or two inches. How poor a defence is the ſtrongeſt Ship againſt the lofty Seas, and lurking Rocks! How innumerable are the accidents and contingencies in a voyage, which the moſt skilful Navigator cannot foreſee or prevent!

Invenit: Ambiguis ars ſtupet ipſa malis. Ovid.

They are as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, at their wits end, ſal. 107. 26 But, O how ſecure and ſafe, amidſt ll dangers, is that Man whom the Lord takes into s ſpecial protection? And he will not ſhut out hoſe that ſincerely commit themſelves to him: The Winds and Seas obey his voice; he can with a word rn the Storm into a Calm, Pſal. 107. 29. Or or-r means for your preſervation, when you ſeem ſt to the eye of Senſe and Reaſon. I have read a young Man, that being in a great Storm at Sea, as obſerved to be very chearful, when all the reſt ere as dead men: And being asked the reaſon of s chearfulneſs, in a caſe of ſo much danger; he plied, Truly I have no cauſe to fear; for the Pilot of Ship is my Father. O, it is an unſpeakable comt when a Man hath committed himſelf into the nds of God, as a Father, and truſted him over (5.) Pray for Counſel and Direction in all your irs, and undertakements, and lean not to your n underſtandings. I know, O Lord, (ſaith the Prot) that the way of man is not in himſelf; neither is him that walks to direct his own ſteps, Jer. 10.23. Undertake nothing without asking God's leave, and counſel. How many that have ſtronger heads than you, have miſerably ruined themſelves and their deſigns, by truſting to their own prudence? A man's heart (ſaith Solomon) deviſeth his way; but the Lord directeth his ſteps. Prov. 16. 9. We muſt ſtill reſerve the power of Gods Providence (ſaith one). God would not have us too carnally confident. The Lord can blaſt your enterprize, though managed with never ſo much wiſdom and contrivance. You are not only to look to God as the Author of Succeſs; but as the Director and Guider of the Action: It is by his Conduct and Bleſſing, that all things come to paſs. If your deſigns ſucceed not, you are preſently ready to aſcribe it to ill fortune, and ſay, you had bad luck; when indeed you ruined it your ſelves in the firſt moulding of it, by undertaking of it without asking counſel of God. In all thy ways acknowledge him, Prov. 3. 5.

Manton on Jude. It is robbery to uſe goods without the Owners leave. We forget to bid our ſelves good-ſpeed, when we do not acknowledge God's Dominion. This is but a piece of Religious manners.

(6.) Pray for Succeſs upon your lawful employments and deſigns, and own it to be from the Lord. You have an excellent pattern in Abraham's Servant. Gen. 24. 12. O Lord God of Abraham thy ſervant, ſend me good ſpeed this day. He reverences the ſoveraignty of Providence, and acknowledges Succeſs to be a flower of the Imperial Crown of Heaven, and the Bridle that God hath upon the reaſonable Creature, to diſpoſe of the Succeſs of Human Affairs. I look on that buſineſs or deſign in a fair and hopeful way to proſper, wherein we have engaged God to be with us, by asking his counſel, and recommending the Succeſs to his Bleſſing. Theſe are the Mercies you are to pray for.

Secondly, Next I will ſhew you what influence Prayer hath into thoſe Mercies you are to pray for; and it hath much every way: To be ſhort, it hath a threefold influence into them.

(1.) It is a proper and effectual means to obtain and procure them. God will have every thing fetched out by Prayer, Ezek. 36. 37. I will yet for this be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael, to do it for them. God gives not our Mercies for our Prayers, nor will he give them without our Prayers. This is the ſtated method in which our Mercies are conveyed to us; and therein the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God are eminently diſcovered. His Wiſdom in making us to ſee the Author of every Mercy in the way of receiving it, and ſecuring his own glory in the diſpenſing of every Mercy: His Goodneſs to us, in ſweetening every Mercy this way to us, and raiſing its value in our eſtimation. Prayer coming between our wants and ſupplies, is a ſingular means to raiſe the price of Mrecies with us, and engage us to due improvements of them. So that it is an idle pretence for any to ſay, God knows our wants, whether we pray or no; and if Mercies be decreed for us, we ſhall have them, though we ask them not: For though God knows our wants, yet he will have us know them too, and ſenſibly to feel the need of Mercy. And though Prayer be altogether needleſs to his Information, yet it is very neceſſary to teſtifie our ſubmiſſion: And though it is true, if God have decreed Mercy for us, we ſhall have it; yet it is not true, that therefore we need not pray for it: For Decrees exclude not the ſecond Means, nor render the Creatures duty unneceſſary. I know the thoughts, that I think, towards you, ſaith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end; then ſhall you call upon me, and you ſhall go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you, Jer. 29. 11, 12. So that it is plain, Mercies muſt be expected in the way of Prayer, that being God's appointed way, and ſtated method in the diſpenſing of them.

(2.) As Prayer hath an influence into the procuring of our Mercies, ſo it hath a ſingular influence into the ſweetning of them: No Mercies ſo ſweet as thoſe that are received upon the knee. There is a twofold ſweetneſs Men taſte in their Earthly enjoyments: One is natural, and that thoſe that never eye God in them, may reliſh as much as others; the other is ſpiritual, and ſupernatural, reſulting from the conſideration of the way in which, and the end for which they are given. And I am confident, ſuch is the refreſhing ſweetneſs of Mercies coming in the way of Prayer, that they derive a thouſand times more ſweetneſs from the Channel, through which they come, than they have in their own natures. So that it was rightly obſerved by him that ſaid, A believer taſtes more ſweetneſs in the common Bread he eats at his own Table, than another can do in the Conſecrated Bread he eats at the Lord's Table. And then

(3.) Prayer hath a ſanctifying influence upon all our enjoyments; and therefore no wonder it makes them ſo ſweet. What you obtain this way, you obtain with a Bleſſing, and that is the ſweeteſt and beſt part of any enjoyment. So you find, 1 Tim. 4. 5. every Creature is ſanctified by the Word of God and Prayer. One Mercy of this kind is better than Ten thouſand promiſcuouſly diſpenſed in the way of common Providence. By theſe no Man knows love or hatred; but theſe ſurely come from God's love to us, and end in the increaſe of our love to him. So that you ſee Prayer hath a manifold influence upon our Mercies. But it is not any kind of Prayer that doth thus procure, ſweeten, and ſanctifie our Mercies to us. Some Mens Prayers rather obſtruct than farther their Mercies; but if it be the fervent Prayer of a righteous Man, directed by the Rule of the Word, to the Glory of God; we may ſay of ſuch Prayer as David ſaid of Saul's Sword, and Jonathan's Bow, It never returns empty.

Thirdly, I ſhall ſhew you what aid and aſſiſtance the Prayers of others may give to the procurement of the Mercies we deſire: For you ſee this inſtance in the Text, it was the united Joint-Prayers of the Diſciples with Paul, that on this occaſion was judged neceſſary.

Now conſidering Prayer according to its uſe, and end, as a means of obtaining Mercy from the Lord; the more diſpoſed, apt, and vigorous the means are, the more ſurely and eaſily the Mercies are obtained which we pray for. There may be much zeal, fervency, and ſtrength in the Prayer of a ſingle Saint. Jacob alone may wreſtle with God, and as a Prince prevail; but much more in the joint united force of many Jacobs. Vis unita fortior: If one can do much, many can do more. O what may not a bleſſed combination of holy and humble Spirits obtain from the Lord? If one Man's heart be dead and out of tune, another's may be lively and full of affection. Beſides, God delights in thoſe Acts of mercy moſt, by which many are refreſhed and comforted; and where there is a common ſtock of Prayers going, like a common Adventure in one Ship, there the return of Prayer, like the return of ſuch a Ship, makes many glad hearts. Certainly it is of great advantage for the people of God, to ingage as many as they can to pray for them. When Daniel was to obtain that ſecret from the God of Heaven, Dan. 1. 17, 18. he makes uſe of his three friends to improve their acquaintance with God, and intereſt in God for him upon that occaſion. Then Daniel went to his houſe, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah, his companions; that they would deſire mercies of the God of Heaven, concerning this ſecret. Some Chriſtians have greater intimacies with God than others, they are ſpecial favourites in the Court of Heaven; and what an advantage it is to be upon their hearts, when they are with God, judge ye. I remember, S. Bernard having ſpoken of the due frames and tempers that Chriſtians ſhould ſtrive to work their hearts into, when they are engaged in this work of Prayer, concludes with this requeſt, Et quum talis fueris, memento mei. And when thy heart (ſaith he) is in this temper, then remember me. O, it is a ſingular Mercy to be intereſted in their Prayers that are in ſpecial favour with God. It is true, Jeſus Chriſt is the great Favourite, for whoſe ſake all Prayers are heard; and without his interceſſion, the interceſſions of an Abraham, a Moſes, a Jacob, ſignifie nothing; but in the virtue of his interceſſion, the interceſſions of others may be ſingularly advantagious to us. Job's friends were good Men, but yet they muſt go to Job, and get his Prayers for them, before God would be intreated for them. Job 42. 8.

And indeed, upon the contrary, it is a ſad ſign that God deſigns not to give us that Mercy which he takes off our own heart, or the hearts of others from praying for. When he ſaith, Pray not for ſuch a Man, or for ſuch a Mercy for him, the caſe then becomes hopeleſs, the Mercy is ſet, and there is no moving it, Jer. 14. 11. But if once a Spirit of Prayer be poured upon you, and upon others too, in your behalf, you may look upon the Mercy as even at the door, and count it as good as if it were in your hand. And thus you ſee what the Mercies are you ſhould pray for, what influence Prayer hath upon them, and what aſſiſtance the Prayers of other Chriſtians may contribute to the obtaining of them; that ſo your hearts may be excited and encouraged, not only to pray for your ſelves, but to engage as many as you can, to ſeek the Lord for you, as you ſee Paul here did, when he was undertaking his dangerous voyage. In the next place I ſhall apply it.

Uſe 1. And firſt, this may ſerve ſharply to reprove the generality of our Seamen, who mind every thing neceſſary to their voyage, except Prayer, the principal thing; who go out in voyages without asking God's leave or bleſſing. And here three ſorts of perſons fall under conviction, and juſt rebuke.

Firſt, Such as do but mock God, and delude themſelves by heartleſs, dead, and empty Formalities. Some there be, that dare not altogether ſlight and neglect Prayers, but, pro forma, they will do ſomething themſelves; and it may be as a complement, or, at moſt, as a cuſtomary thing, will deſire the Prayers of others: But alas! There is no heartine or ſincerity in theſe things. They are no way affecte with the ſenſe of their own wants, ſins, or, dangers; they never underſtood the uſe, nature, or end of Pra er. We blame the blind Papiſts, and that juſtly, fo their blind Devotions, who reckon their Prayers b number, and not by weight; and truly, there is b little difference betwixt theirs, and ſome of our Devotions. It is S. Auguſtines counſel, Do you learn to have in your hearts what every one hath in his lips. O that you would once learn to be in earneſt with God, to pray as Men that underſt and with whom you have to do ; and what great things you have to tranſact with God ! Ah my Friends, you may believe it, that if ever you had felt the weight of ſin upon your Conſciences, and had had ſuch ſick days and nights for it, as ſome have had, you would not ask a pardon ſo coldly and indifferently, as you do. If you did but know the benefits of Gods preſence with you in troubles, how ſweet it is ; or could but apprehend how terrible a thing it is to be left of God ( as Saul was ) in a day of diſtreſs ; you would weep and make ſupplication for his Gracious preſence to go forth with you, and would ſay with Moſes, If thy preſence may not go with me, then carry me not hence. But alas , theſe things appear not to you in their reality and importance. And hence is all that wretched formality, and deadneſs of ſpirit.

Secondly, It rebukes much more ſuch as wholly ſlight and neglect Prayer, as a uſeleſs and vain thing ; who undertake deſigns without Prayer, not at all acknowledging God in any of their ways. And it is juſtly to be ſuſpected, there are multitudes of ſuch practical Atheiſts among Sea-men, as well as other orders of Men. Poor Men ! My heart mourneth over you ; you are certainly a forlorn ſort of men, who live without God in the World.

Qui neſcit

It was anciently ſaid, He that would learn to pray, let him go to Sea : But now how long may a Man be at Sea, before he hear a praying Sea-man ? Let your Families , from which you part, witneſs what conſcience you have made to ſeek God ( as you have been here directed ) before your out-ſet ; It is ſaid, Deut. 33. 18. to the Tribe of Sea-men, Rejoice Zebulun in thy goings out ; but in this caſe we may invert the words, and ſay, Mourn, O ye Sea-men, for your going out. How deplorable a caſe is this? Let your Cabbins witneſs what Conſcience you make of the duty of Prayer ? You can talk and ſleep there? but when did you pray there? You there hear the oice of God in the roaring Seas ; but when did God hear your voice in Prayer ? You ſee the wonders of God in the Deeps, wonders of Creation, and wonders of Preſervation, but mean time you your ſelves are the greateſt wonders that are to be ſeen in the Sea. Men immediately depending upon God for their lives, liberties, and eſtates, every moment, and not once owning or acknowledging him by Prayer.

Ἀλλὰ πῶς χρὴ

t Socrates.
Ὅτι ἐὰν Θεὸς

imeo.

The very Heathens will riſe up in judgment againſt you, and condemn you. I remember Plato brings in Alcibiades asking Socrates, How he ought to expreſs his reſolutions and purpoſes ; to whom he thus anſwereth, Before every undertakement thou muſt ſay, If God ill. And we know the Eaſtern Nations would undertake nothing of moment, without firſt acknowledging God by Prayer. The Greeks σὺν Θεῷ, by e leave or bleſſing of God is known to all. The rks will condemn ſuch as you are, for they fail t to pray five times a day, how urgent ſoever eir buſineſs be. The blind and ſuperſtitious *Pa*ſts will condemn you, with whom it is a Proverb, aſs and Meat hinder no man. O, whither will you rn ? And, who ſhall comfort you, when trouble mes upon you ? Wonder not at croſſes and diſappointments in your buſineſs ? how can you expect it uld be otherwiſe, as long as God is neglected, a, diſowned ? Say not, this is the fruit of ill-luck, t of your prophane neglects. If the Succeſs of all your buſineſs depends upon God, ( as none but Atheiſts dare deny) then certainly the directeſt and readieſt courſe a man can take to deſtroy all, is to diſingage God by a ſinful neglect of him. The moſt compendious way to ruin , is to forget God, and caſt off Prayer. Pour out thy fury ( ſaith the Prophet) upon the Heathen that know thee not, and upon the Families that call not upon thy name. Jer. 10. 25. Will nothing leſs than extremity make you cry to God ? Wonder not then, if God bring you into that extremity which your prophaneneſs makes neceſſary for your awakening.

Thirdly and laſtly, How much ſadder, and more deplorable is the caſe of thoſe that not only neglect to call upon the Name of God by prayer, but do alſo wound his Name through and through by their curſed Oaths and Blaſphemies, who inſtead of going on board praying, as Paul here did, go on board curſing, ſwearing, and Blaſpheming his great and dreadful Name ; not going from their bended knees, but drunken Ale-benches to the Ship.

O the admirable patience of God ! O the power of his long-ſuffering ! That ever that Ship ſhould ſwim one hour above Water, that carries ſuch loads of ſin and guilt within it. It is noted in Gen. 4. 26. in the days of Seth , That then men began to call upon the Name of the Lord. Some tranſlate the word לִקְרֹא Invocation, or Prayer, and ſome prophanation ; then began prophaneneſs in callling upon the Name of the Lord. In a mournful feeling of this diſhonour done to God by it, Seth calls the ſon that was born to him in thoſe times, Enoſh , or Sorrowful. Sure I am , however the word be here to be tranſlated, there is a vile generation in our days, that inſtead of calling upon the Name of the Lord by Prayer, do call upon it prophanely, rending and tearing that great and terrible Name with the language of Hell. Poor Man ! With what hope or incouragement can thoſe lips of thine, in the day of thy extremity, cry , Mercy ! Mercy ! that have ſtruck through the ſacred Name of God ſo many times with Blaſphemy ? O that you would lay it to heart : O that this day God would ſet your ſins in order before you.

Is this a beginning that promiſes a comfortable iſſue ? Do you thus prepare your ſelves to meet death, and danger ? O my Soul, come not thou into their ſecrets. O let God rather ſtrike me perfectly dead whilſt I live, than afflict my Soul through my ears with theſe dreadful Dialects of the damned.

Uſe. 2. In the next place this point is exceeding uſeful by way of Exhortation, to perſwade all men, and particularly Sea-men to be men of Prayer ; to imitate that noble pattern in the Text, and no longer to live in the neglect of a duty ſo neceſſary, ſo ſweet, and ſo beneficial to them, as the duty of Prayer is. O that you did but know the excellency of this duty ! How would you give your ſelves unto Prayer ! As David ſpeaks, Pſal. 109. 4. Now to perſwade you to be praying men, and no longer to live in the neglect of ſo excellent a duty, I will offer theſe Motives to your conſideration.

Motive 1. God hath ſtiled himſelf a God hearing Prayer. For your incouragement to this duty, he hath aſſumed this title to himſelf, Pſal. 65. 2. O thou that heareſt Prayer, unto thee ſhall all fleſh come. You cry not as the Heathens do, to ſtocks and ſtones, that cannot help or hear them that ſeek to them, but to the living and true God ; by whom never did any upright Soul loſe a Prayer. And to come home to your caſe more fully, he is a God that hears the Prayers of poor diſtreſſed men upon the Sea, when all hope and human help hath utterly failed them, So you read in Pſal. 107. 23. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. They that go down into the Sea in Ships, that do buſineſs in great Waters; theſe ſee the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the Deep: For he commandeth, and raiſeth the ſtormy Wind which lifteth up the Waves thereof. They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the depths; their Soul is melted, becauſe of trouble. They reel to and fro and ſtagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their diſtreſs. So that what the Pſalmiſt elſewhere ſpeaks of the myſtical depths of trouble, is true here, even in a proper literal ſenſe Out of the depths have I cryed unto thee, O Lord, hear my voice. Pſal. 130. 1, 2. Many a Prayer hath been heard, and miraculouſly anſwered upon the Sea. There have men been convinced and fully ſatisfied, that it is not in vain to cry to the Lord, So evident and clear have been the appearances of God at the cry of the poor diſtreſſed Creatures, that they have ſenſibly and thankfully acknowledged him according to his name, The hope of the ends of the Earth, and the confidence of them that are afar off upon the Sea, Pſal. 65. 5. Who is there among you, that hath not either heard of, or himſelf been an example, and inſtance of this Truth? I might here inſert many famous examples to confirm it, but the caſe is too plain to need them, and it would be too great a digreſſion.

Motive 2. Prayer is certainly the beſt relief to the diſtreſſed. We may ſay of it, as David ſaid of the Sword of Goliah; give me that, for there is none like it. You that are Seamen, know what the uſe of the Pump is, when the Waters leak into your Ship, and of what uſe the Scupper-holes are to you, when Waves break and waſh over your Decks: Why of the ſame uſe is Prayer, when ſorrow leaks into your hearts, and diſtreſſes are ready to overwhelm your Souls. This gives a vent to that which elſe would quickly ſink you. Your heart ſhall live, that ſeek the Lord Pſal. 69. 32. Prayer will buoy up your fainting ſpirits; it will ſenſibly eaſe an oppreſſed heart. No fear of fainting, while a man continues praying. Luther was wont to call Prayers the Leaches of his cares and troubles. O but if troubles come in upon a man every way, and he have no vent, no outlet for them; when the ordinary vents of Reaſon, Courage, and Reſolution, are all choaked (as ſometimes they are) and there is no ſuccour or relief coming in from Heaven: What a wretched forlorn condition is ſuch a poor creature in? O therefore get acquaintance with this excellent duty.

Motive 3. All ſecondary means of deliverance and comfort, neceſſarily depend upon the will and pleaſure of God, and ſignify nothing without him. What the Pſalmiſt ſaith of an Horſe, I may ſay of a Ship. Pſal. 33. 17. That it is a vain thing for ſafety. Alas! What a poor defence is it againſt thoſe giant-like Waves of the Sea? and that men (eſpecially Seamen) may be convinced of this, God hath many times cauſed thoſe ſtately and ſtrong built Ships to periſh, and be daſhed all to pieces, and preſerved thoſe that were not ſafe in them, upon a Plank or broken piece of the Ship, Acts. 27. 44. which have carried them more ſafely to the ſhore than it could do. And will you not yet ſee that means ſignifie nothing without God, and that your dependance upon him, is neceſſary in every condition, and the acknowledgment thereof ſo too? I am perſwaded there would not be half ſo many Shipwrecks, and diſappointments as there are, if your carnal confidence in the means were leſs, and your relyance upon the Lord more. Therefore it is, you ſo often receive the ſentence of death in your ſelves, that you may learn not to truſt in your ſelves, but in God. O were but your Sails filled by Prayer, how proſperous would your deſigns be?

Motive 4. Whatever deliverances from dangers, or ſucceſs in buſineſs, you receive out of the way of Prayer, can yield you but little comfort, for they are not ſanctified to you. You may be delivered, though you pray not; and Succeſs may follow thoſe that ſeek not God for it; but that which you call Deliverance, is rather a reſervation to future miſery; and that you call Succeſs, is but a ſnare to your Souls. You have the things, but not the comfort and bleſſing of them. God may give your deſire to your ruin: Your lives may be reſcued for a time from death, that you may fill up the meaſure of your iniquities. Your affairs may proſper, and that proſperity may deſtroy you. Prov. 1.32. At beſt it is but an effect of common providence; and of ſuch Deliverances you can never ſay as Hezekiah ſaid of his; and every one that receives the like Mercy in the way of Prayer, may ſay of his. Iſa. 38. 17. But thou haſt in love to my ſoul, delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou haſt caſt all my ſins behind thy back. I deny not, but a Deliverance by the hand of common Providence, is a Mercy in it ſelf; and it may prove a very great Mercy to you in the event, if time thereby added to your life be a ſpace of Repentance; elſe it is but a ſhort reprieval of your damnation, and leaves you to periſh under greater guilt, then was upon you before. But on the contrary, how ſweet are thoſe Mercies, that come in the way of Prayer, that diſcover God's love to you, and inflame yours to him? One ſuch Mercy is worth a thouſand of the former.

Motive 5. Conſider all you that go out without Prayer, how ſoon you may be out of a capacity of Prayer. Now you will not, and ſhortly you may not, have one opportunity to pray for evermore: Now unbelief ſhuts your Mouths, and ſhortly death may do it. How ſoon may you be paſt Prayers, both your own and others; and be fixed by death in your unalterable condition? O ſeek the Lord therefore whilſt he may be found, call upon him whilſt he is yet near! Now is your praying ſeaſon; hereafter there will be no uſe of Prayer. For this (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) ſhall every one that is godly pray unto thee, in a time when thou mayeſt be found: Surely in the Floods of great Waters they ſhall not come nigh unto him. Pſal. 32. 6. (i.e.) Saith Deodate upon the place, In the time of the general deſtruction of ſinners, as it was in the Deluge; then there is no coming nigh to God by Prayer, nor canſt thou come nigh him in the day of thy particular deſtruction, by the Floods of great Waters. O therefore live not a day longer in the prophane and ſinful neglect of this great duty of Prayer.

Object. Why, but I obſerve thoſe that pray not, generally eſcape as well as they that do.

Anſw. This Objection was once made by a Soldier in the time of fight, when he was preſſed by his companion to pray; and God quickly ſtopt his Blaſpheming mouth with a mortal bullet. Have a care of ſuch bold Atheiſtical pleas; they greatly provoke the Lord againſt you: I had rather die praying, than live prayerleſs.

Object. But to what purpoſe is it for me to pray, if I am unregenerate? God hears not ſuch Prayers, if I make them; and beſides, the Prayers of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord.

Anſw. Labour therefore to get into a regenerate ſtate, and be not perſwaded to reſt a day longer in ſo ſad a condition. However in the mean time, you muſt know, that Prayer being a part of Natural Worſhip, all Men, even the unregenerate, are obliged to it by the Light and Law of Nature; otherwiſe, the neglect of it could not be their ſin Object. But many pray, and receive not: I my ſelf have often done ſo.

Anſw. You ask and receive not, becauſe you ask amiſs, Jam. 4. 3. If we were diſpoſed to receive, as God is to give, we ſhould not be long without the anſwer of our Prayers.

If (1.) your perſons were accepted through Chriſt, your Prayers ſhould be accepted too. Gen. 4. 4. But you are in a ſtate of Nature, deſtitute of the Spirit, Job. 15. 7. And ſo your voice is to God not the voice of a Child, but a ſtranger.

(2) If your Prayers were regulated by the Will of God, they could not miſs of the deſired Succeſs. 1 Joh. 5. 14 If we ask any thing according to his Will, he heareth us.

(3.) If your Prayers had more faith and fervency, they would not return empty. See Jam. 1. 6. & 5. 16. Well then, object no more againſt your duty; but in the fear of God apply your ſelves to it; and dare not to go forth in any deſign, until thou haſt by Prayer recommended thy ſelf, and thy affairs to God. Go alone, my Friends, retire from the World; and ſay not, you cannot ſpare time for prayer: Better any thing elſe were neglected than this. Tell the Lord, thou art now launching forth into the Ocean, and knoweſt not what this voyage may bring forth. Poſſibly thou mayeſt never return to the Land of thy Nativity any more; but however it ſhall pleaſe him to diſpoſe the event, beſeech him with all earneſtneſs, that thou mayeſt have the pardon of ſin ſealed to thee before thou go. O beg him to ſeparate guilt from thy perſon, before thou be ſeparated from thy Habitation and Relations; leſt that ſtroke that ſhall ſeparate thy Soul from thy Body, ſhould eternally ſeparate both Soul and Body from God.

Deſire of the Lord that his preſence may go with thee where-ever thou ſhalt go. Tell him, it is the Fountain, both of thy ſafety and comfort; Deſire him, if his preſence may not go with thee, not to carry thee thence. All the relief thou haſt againſt trouble, is wrapt up in that promiſe of his, I will be with him in trouble. Tell him, thoſe will be taſtleſs comforts, and ſuccourleſs troubles, in which he is not.

Intreat the Lord with all inportunity, to keep thee by his fear from the ſins and temptations that are in the World. Tell him, thou art ſenſibly affected with the danger, which thy own corrupt heart will every where expoſe thee to: Sins in Buying and Selling, into which thou mayeſt eaſily be drawn by an earthly covetous heart; Sins in Drinking, wherein thou mayeſt be intangled (except he keep thee) by evil company and an irregular appetite: Sins of Uncleanneſs, by which thou mayeſt be overcome in the abſence of lawful Remedies, and preſence of alluring objects, except his fear quench the temptation, and break the ſnare.

Be earneſt alſo with the Lord for his gracious protection of thee in all thy dangers. Tell him, thou canſt not be in ſafety any where, but under the ſhadow of his wings. Tell him, at what time thou art afraid, thou wilt truſt in him; and beſeech him, that when thy heart ſhall be overwhelmed with fears and troubles, he will lead thee to the Rock that is higher than thee. Beſeech him alſo to give thee counſel in all thy ſtreights and difficulties, that thou mayeſt not lean to thine own underſtanding; but that he will make thy way plain before thee.

And if it be his good pleaſure, that he would bleſs thy juſt and honeſt enterpriſes with Succeſs and Proſperity. Which if he ſhall do, tell him, it is thy deſire, and beg the aſſiſtance of his Grace, that thou mayeſt improve all thy Mercies to his praiſe. If thus you ſet forth in the fear of God, you may expect a ſweet Succeſs, and happy Iſſue.

THE SEAMAN in a Storm.

SERMON II.

PSAL. CVII. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27.

They that go down to the Sea in Ships, that do buſineſs in great Waters: Theſe ſee the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep. For he commandeth and raiſeth the Stormy Wind which lifteth up the Waves thereof. They mount up to Heaven, they go down again to the Depths; their Soul is melted, becauſe of trouble. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken Man, and are at their wits end. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he brings them out of their diſtreſs.

THIS Pſalm contains an excellent account of the myſterious and admirable effects of Providence. And this Paragraph contains that Vein or Branch of Divine Providence which reſpects Sea-men; a ſort of Men more immediately depending upon the favour of Providence than any Men in the World; though all do neceſſarily, and continually depend upon it.

In theſe Verſes we have a deſcription, both (1) of the perſons, (2) of the danger, (3) of the deliverance; by the wonderful working of Divine Providence for them.

Firſt, a deſcription of the perſons about whom this wonderful Providence is exerciſed. They that go down to the Sea in Ships; that do buſineſs in great Waters; the Periphraſis of a Seaman. Theſe are ſaid to go down to the Sea in Ships, not becauſe the Sea is lower than the Land, but becauſe it is lower than the Shore, which is the Rampire raiſed by Providence againſt its Inundations. And their end or deſign in going down into the Sea, is not pleaſure and recreation; but to do buſineſs, (i. e.) to Export and Import ſuch Wares and Commodities as are neceſſary, if not to the Being, at leaſt, to the well-being of the ſeveral Kingdoms and Countries of the World. Theſe are the Men here ſpoken of, who ſee (more than any) the Works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deeps. Works and Wonders by an ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, uſual Figure, is as much as his wonderful Works; namely, of Creation, in the ſtrange and monſtrous productions of the Sea, and of Preſervation, with reſpect to themſelves, in the dreadful dangers they there encounter. Thus the Perſon or Subject is deſcribed.

Secondly, The danger is likewiſe deſcribed, in which theſe Seafaring-men are ſometimes involved: And indeed the Pſalmiſt here gives us a very rhetorical and elegant deſcription of their condition in the Stormy Sea; and ſhews us how deplorable their ſtate and condition is at ſuch a time. Where we are to note both the Cauſes and Effects of theſe Tempeſts.

1. The Cauſes, and they are twofold.

Firſt, The principal cauſe, the will and pleaſure of God. He commandeth and raiſeth the Stormy Wind. This is God's Prerogative, none can raiſe Winds, but himſelf; and if Devils or Witches do it at any time; yet it is ſtill by his permiſſion, as you ſee in Job 1. 12, 19. The Lord is ſaid to hold the Wind in his Fiſts. Prov. 30. 4. As a Man holds a wild fierce Beaſt in a Chain, or by a Collar: And when they blow he brings them out of his treaſuries, Pſal. 135. 7. There is indeed a Natural Cauſe of Winds, of which Philoſophers give us this rational account. That it is a hot, and dry exhalation raiſed from the Earth, by the power of the Heavenly Bodies, which being repelled or forced back by the coldneſs of the middle Region, moves obliquely or ſlantingly, and ſometimes very violently through the Air. But though this be the Natural Cauſe of the Wind; yet this doth not at all reſtrain the abſolute Soveraignty of God over them. It is he that commands and raiſeth them, as the Text ſpeaks; and though it be ſaid Job 3. 8. The Wind blows where it liſteth; yet that expreſſion makes it not an arbitrary creature: But the meaning is either thus, It blows where it liſteth, for any oppoſiition that Man can make to it, though it cannot blow where it liſteth with reſpect to God. Or thus, Such is the great variableneſs and inſtability of the Winds, blowing now this way, now that, that it ſeems to move with a kind of ſpontaneity, as a Bird doth in the Air; though indeed it doth but ſeem ſo, for all its motions are ordered of the Lord. And you cannot ſay in this ſenſe, as 1 Kings 9. 11. That God is not in the Wind. Now when it pleaſeth the Lord to ſhew his power upon the great Deeps, he ſends forth theſe Winds out of his Treaſure. This is the principal Cauſe. Then next,

2. We have the inſtrumental ſubordinate and next Cauſe of the Storm; and that is, the Winds lifting up the Waves of the Ocean. There is naturally in the Sea a continual agitation, and rolling of its Waters hither and thither; it cannot reſt, as the Prophet ſpeaks; but when a violent Wind blows upon it, the Ocean is incenſed and inraged; and the Winds roul, moving Mountains of Water before them. Then like Wild Beaſts, the Waves ſeem to brea break looſe and rage, not only to be latrantes undas, as Virgil calls them, barking Waves; but κύματα ἄγρια, raging Waves, as Jude ſpeaks Verſe 13. Yea, roaring Waves, as our Saviour ſtiles them, Thus of the Cauſes of the Storm Principal and Subordinate. Next we have Undæ maris efferatæ. Beza.

Fluctus truces.

Luke 21. 25.

Secondly, The terrible Effects of the Tempeſts, and that upon both their Bodies and their Minds.

(1.) External upon their Bodies; it toſſes them up and down in a dreadful manner, which the Pſalmiſt elegantly expreſſes in the Text. They mount up to Heaven, they go down to the Depths, a lofty hyperbolical expreſſion; very near unto it is that of Virgil.

Tollimur in cœlum, curvato gurgite; & iidem.
Æn. 3.

They ſeem to mix with the very Clouds; and then, open deep Graves for them in the bottom Sands. Yea, it moves them not only perpendicularly, lifting them up, and caſting them down, but obliquely and circularly alſo. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken man, or as ſome tranſlate, agitantur in gyrum, they run round: They are indeed moved according to the unſtable motion of the Waves, on whoſe proud backs they are mounted. This is the External Effect of the Storm upon their Bodies.

(2.) The Internal Effect of it upon their Minds, which is far more terrible. For it is ſaid here, Their Soul is melted becauſe of Trouble, and they are at their wits end. Both which expreſſions do import a greater commotion, and ſtorm in the Paſſions of the Mind, than that is in the Waves of the Sea. The ſtouteſt ſpirit quails and melts when it comes to this; and the wiſeſt Artiſt is at his wits end. Thus you have the deſcription of the perſons, and of their danger, both in the Cauſe and Effects upon the Body and Mind. Next (3.) We have their deliverance by the wonderful hand of Divine Providence, in Verſ. 27. Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he brings them out of their diſtreſs. Their uſual cry in ſuch extraordinary exigencies is Mercy! Mercy! Now they can pray, that could not pray before. Extremity drives them to their knees, not only with cries, but vows to the Lord. And he delivers them out of their diſtreſs: Some delivered one way, and ſome another, but all in a ſtupendious way, which cannot but aſtoniſh them that are ſo delivered, and make them acknowledge the Finger of God was in it.

From all this we obſerve,

Doctr. That the Preſervations and Deliverances of Seamen in the dreadful Storms and Tempeſts at Sea, is the wonderful Work of Divine Providence.

The Works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein. Pſal. 111. 2. And among his Providential Works none greater, and more admirable, than thoſe which Seamen daily behold in their marvellous Protections upon the Sea.

Now the Glory of Divine Providence towards Seamen, ſhines and diſplays it ſelf in three things. Eſpecially firſt, in making the Ocean navigable for them at any time. Secondly, In preſerving them from Shipwracks in the fury and ſtreſs of Weather. Thirdly, In finding out ways, and ſtrangely providing means of ſafety when their Ships are loſt, and broken upon the Sea.

1. It is a wonderful providence of God, to make the Ocean navigable for Men at any time; that ſuch a fluid Body as Water is, which cannot ſupport a Stone or Bullet of an ounce weight, ſhould yet by reaſon of its own Saltneſs, and the innate property of Timber, be able to ſupport ſhips of ſuch vaſt burthen, which are carried daily from place to place, being mounted on the backs of its proud Waves. Who can but acknowledge a moſt wiſe Providence, in gratifying the Natural wit and deſire of Man, which fits him for Converſe and Traffick with Foreign Nations, with inſtruments and materials ſo fit for his purpoſe; as Timber, Iron, Hemp, Pitch, the Loadſtone, and whatever elſe is neceſſary for his purpoſe? I cannot open the Wiſdom of God's Providence in this reſpect, to better advantage than I find it done by the Learned Pen of Dr. More in his Antidote againſt Atheiſm. Pag. 58. Navigation (ſaith he) being of ſo great conſequence to the delight, and convenience of Humane life; and there being both wit and courage in Man to attempt the Seas, were he but fitted with right Materials, and other advantages requiſite; when we ſee there is ſo pat a proviſion made for him to this purpoſe, in large Timber for the building of his Ship, a thick Sea-water to bear the Ships burthen; in the Magnet or Loadſtone for his Compaſs; in the ſteddy and parallel Direction of the Axis of the Earth for his Cynoſura: And then obſerving his natural wit and courage to make uſe of them, and how that ingenite deſire of knowledge and converſe, and of the improving of his own parts, and happineſs, ſtir him up to ſo notable a deſign. We cannot but conclude from ſuch a train of Cauſes, ſo fitly and congruouſly complying together, that it was really the counſel of an Univerſal and Eternal Mind, that hath the over-ſeeing and guidance of it, &c.

2. But (to come home to the caſe before us) that men ſhould be preſerved at Sea from immediate ruin in the dreadful Tempeſts that befal them there, this is a myſterious, and admirable Work of God; that a poor Ship ſhould not be ſwallowed up by the furious Ocean, when Mountains of Water come rolling towards it with an horrid noiſe, and give it ſuch dreadful ſtripes; when Seas roll over it, and ſo cover it with the Waves, that for a time they know not whether they ſink or ſwim; to ſee it emerge out of ſuch fatal dangers, keep up its head, and mount upon the backs of thoſe lofty Seas that threaten immediately to overwhelm it. O how great is the power and care of Providence in ſuch a caſe! eſpecially, if you conſider theſe following particulars, among many others, which threaten ruin on every ſide: And ſhould but one of theſe many contingencies befall them, in the eye of Reaſon they are loſt Men.

1. Of how many parts comparted together, doth a Ship conſiſt? Theſe parts indeed are faſtened together with Bolts of Iron; but being in ſo many Planks, what a wonder is it that none Springs, that no Bolt gives way, or Seams open, whilſt every part works with ſuch violence, and ſo great a ſtreſs of Weather lies upon it. Should ſuch a thing fall out (as it is a wonder it ſhould not) how ſoon would the Ship ſwim within as well as without?

2. How often are they put from their courſe by ſtreſs of Weather, and know not where they are; not being able for many days to take any obſervation? So that they muſt go whither Winds and Waves will drive them? For there is no dropping Anchors in the Main, nor reſiſting the courſe of the Seas, to which they can make no more reſiſtance than a Child to a Giant. And how is it they are not daſhed upon the Rocks, or foundered in the Sands, ſeeing the Winds ſhape their Courſe, and not Art? But there is a God that ſteers your courſe for you, when you cannot.

3. How often are you even fallen upon Rocks and Shores before you ſee them, and are almoſt paſt hope before you begin to fear ? Sometimes almoſt imbayed, and as much as ever you can do to weather a Rock, or Head-Land, which you diſcern'd not till it was almoſt too late ?

I remember Doctor Johnſon, in that ingenious and wonderful Narrative of his Voyage to the Sound, when he had ſurvived two Shipwracks, and was imbarked in the Third Ship; We had not (ſaith he) been above two or three hours at Sea, but there was a ſad diſtraction amongſt us in the Ship, and the Mariners crying Mercy! Mercy! for we had almoſt fallen foul on a Rock, which lay ſo cunning in the Water, that we did not eſpy it till we were upon it; but by the goodneſs of God, we ſailed cloſe by it, and ſo eſcaped it : The leaſt touch of it had been our ruin.

4. How often do you ride at Anchor in furious Weather, near Rocks and Shores ? Your Lives, under God, every moment depending upon a Cable and Anchor ; if the one break, or the other come home, you are loſt Men. And how wonderful is it they do not ! What is a Cable in a Storm ? But as the new Cords with which the Philiſtines bound Sampſon, and as eaſily would they be ſnapt aſunder like a Thread of Tow, were it not for the care of Providence over you? Theſe, and an hundred other Accidents, which hourly threaten you, might, and would ſend you down to the Bottom, but that the Lord permits it not ſo to be.

3. And yet more wonderful than all this, how often doth God ſuffer Ships to founder and ſink under you, and to be daſhed to pieces againſt the Rocks, and yet preſerve you when the Ordinary Means of Preſervation are cut off and gone? Who like theſe ſee the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep ?

For Firſt, Sometimes a ſmall Boat ſhall ſave them, when a ſtout Ship could not. Thus many of them have been wonderfully preſerved; and thus the forementioned Author relates the manner of his wonderful Preſervation ; Our Ship (ſaith he) had ſprung a Leak, or rather a Plank, and was ready to ſink; O, how the Face of every Man was changed at this Affrightment! One was at his Prayers, another wringing his Hands, a third ſhedding Tears, when we had no need of more Salt-Water. After this Fit they fell to work, and (as it is uſual in ſuch Extreams) we were all buſy in doing of nothing, and did we knew not what. The Maſter's Mate whom we ſent down to ſearch out the Leak, quickly return'd to us with a Sad Countenance, Trembling Hands, and gnaſhing of Teeth, a Quivering Tongue, and Words half ſpoken, ſignifying unto us, that the Wound was incurable. Here was now no room for Counſel, neither had we time to ask one another, what was beſt to be done ; but we preſently caſt out our Long-Boat, and ſhot off Eight or Nine Guns, which ſeem'd to me to be ſo many Tolls of a Paſſing-Bell before our Death. I leaped into the Boat, but leaped ſhort ; one Leg in the Boat, Alterum in Charontis cymba. Now were we left in the North Seas, which ſeldom wear a ſmooth Brow ; but at this time contending with the Wind, ſwelled into Prodigious Mountains. It blew half a Storm, and we were now in a Small Veſſel: What credit could we give to our Safety in a ſmall and open Shalop, when ſo ſtately a Caſtle of Wood, which we but now loſt, cou'd not defend it ſelf againſt the inſolency of the Waves ? We were many Leagues from any Shore, having no Compaſs to guide us, nor Proviſions to ſuſtain us, and the Night grew back upon us——-—— Nothing but a Miracle could preſerve us, being out of the reach of Human help———. We fell to Prayer, and our Extremity pleaded for us; —— For in this Moment of Death, when we were without the leaſt expectation of deliverance, he ſent a Ship to us, which we muſt needs confeſs to be the Finger of God, &c. Thus he——— And this hath been the wonderful Door opened in Extremity to multitudes more for their eſcape. But O how aſtoniſhing are theſe ways of the Lord ! Well may we ſay, His ways are in the Sea, and his Paths in the great Deep, and his Footſteps are not known, Pſal. 77. 19.

Secondly, Sometimes they ſhall be caſt upon a Rock in the Sea, where they ſhall be preſerved till ſome other way of deliverance come; yea, preſerved ſtrangely, God bleſſing a ſmall matter of Proviſion which they ſaved to ſuſtain them ; though they ſaid of it, as the Widow of Sarepta to the Prophet, 1 Kings 17. 12. I have but an handful of Meal, and a little Oyl, and I am gathering two Sticks, that I may go in and dreſs it, for me and my Son, that we may eat it, and die. Or if they could ſave nothing, yet a few Muſcles, or Birds Eggs, with God's Bleſſing, have ſuſtained them till the time of Mercy came. This hath been the Caſe of many. Think upon this, you that abuſe the good Creatures of God by Drunkenneſs ; how ſweet would a Cup of Freſh Water be to you, when reduc'd to ſuch Extremity! O, if your Hearts be not harder than the Rocks you lay upon, how would ſuch extraordinary Mercies melt you into Love and Thankfulneſs!

Thirdly, Sometimes they have been wafted to the Shore ſafely upon the Wrack, or by making a Raft of the broken Pieces of the Ship, and torn Sails, and Ropes; and upon this (God knows, a poor ſecurity againſt the boiſterous Waves) have they ventur'd themſelves. A ſinking Man (as we ſay) will catch at a Bulruſh. Paul, and thoſe that ſuffer'd Shipwrack with him, were thus ſaved. The Centurion commanded, That they which could ſwim, ſhould caſt themſelves firſt into the Sea, and get to Land. And the reſt, ſome on Boards, and ſome on broken pieces of the Ship: and ſo it came to paſs that they eſcaped all ſafe to Land, Acts 27. 43, 44.

O the Miraculous Works of the Lord! to ſave by ſuch contemptible and improbable means! Who can but ſee and acknowledge the Finger of God to be here ? Lo, theſe are parts of his ways ; but how ſmall a portion is heard of him? Job 26. 14.

1. Uſe of Reproof. If your Preſervation in Storms at Sea, be the Wonderful Works of Divine Providence, then divers of you deſerve to be ſharply reproved from this Truth. And I beſeech you ſuffer the Word of Reproof meekly and penitently. I ſhall ſpeak nothing to reproach you ; no, it is not to reproach, but to reform you : And if you hate Reproof, and mock at Counſel, God may ſhortly ſpeak in ſuch Thundering Language to your Conſciences, as will be terrible for you to hear. I remember it is ſaid of St. Bernard, That whilſt he was ſeriouſly reproving the prophaneneſs of one (and if I miſremember not, it was his own Brother) who was a Soldier, and obſerving how he ſlighted his holy and ſerious Counſel, his Spirit was greatly grieved at it; and he told him, Brother, God, I fear, will ſhortly make way to your Heart with a Sword, to which my words can find no acceſs; and the Event ſoon verified the ſad Prediction. I pray God none of you may be taught by Captivities and Shipwracks, what it is to reject Faithful Reproofs, and wholeſome Counſel, ſeaſonably given for your good. You that read theſe Lines, ſeriouſly ask your own Conſciences theſe following Queſtions :

(1.) Have you not ſoon forgotten the Works and Wonders of the Lord, which your Eyes have ſeen? It may be, for the preſent, you have been ſenſibly affected with your Danger, and the Mercy of God in your Deliverance, but hath it remained upon your Hearts? I doubt theſe Mercies have been written in the Duſt, which ſhould have been ingraven, as in the Rock for ever. Thus it was with Iſrael, a People that ſaw as many Wonders wrought for them by the immediate Finger of God, as ever did any People in the World; and yet it is ſaid of them, even after the Red-Sea Deliverance, in which God divided the Sea for them, when the Waves thereof roared, Iſa. 51. 15. And with which, for the preſent, their Hearts were greatly affected; for it is ſaid, Pſal. 106. 12. That they believed his Word, and ſang his Praiſes. But in the next Verſe you read, that a little time eaſily wiped out the ſenſe of this Mercy; for it is ſaid, Ver. 13. They ſoon forgot his works, and waited not for his counſels. I doubt this was not the Sin of Iſrael only, but is the caſe of many of you at this Day. Well, God did not forget you in the Time of your Extremity, though you ſo quickly forget him. Think not to excuſe your ſelves from this guilt, by ſaying, you do ſtill remember the Thing: You may do ſo, and yet be ſaid to forget his Mercy. For a Deliverance may be remembred by him that received it two ways; namely, ſpeculatively, and affectingly. A ſpeculative remembrance is only to call to mind the Stories of ſuch a Danger, and Preſervation: This you may do, and yet God account himſelf forgotten, except you ſo remember it, as ſtill to feel the Powerful Impreſſions thereof upon your Hearts, melting them into Thankfulneſs, Love, and Dependance upon the God of your Salvations.

(2.) Have you not walked very unanſwerably to your Deliverances, yea, and to the Solemn Engagements you made to God in the Day of your Diſtreſs? I fear ſome of you have walked, after God hath reſcued you by a wonderful immediate Hand from the Jaws of Death; as if you had been delivered to commit all theſe Abominations. As it is Jer. 7. 10. It may e the laſt Week or Month you were reeling to and fro upon the ſtormy Sea, and ſtaggering like drunken Men; and thus reeling and ſtaggering along the reets really drunken. O horrid Abomination! Do e thus requite the Lord, who pitied you in your diſtreſs, and, being full of compaſſion, ſaved you, when ou cried to him? Is this the Fruit of your wonderl Salvation? If a Man ſhould have told you in that ay, it would have been thus, you your ſelves could ot have believed it, but would have anſwer'd as Hael did to the Prophet, 2 Kings 8. 13. What! is thy rvant a Dog, that he ſhould do ſuch things? Yet ſo it as, and ſo it is ſtill: The Lord humble you for this eat Wickedneſs. If this be all the Fruit of Mery and Deliverance, it had been better for you that u had gone down to the Bottom then, rather than live only to treaſure up more wrath againſt the y of wrath, and fill up your meaſure.

(3.) Are there not a ſort of Atheiſtical Sea-men, who n not Providence at all, either in the raiſing of ſe horrid Tempeſts, or in their marvelous Preſertion in them? but look on all as coming in a Naal way, and their eſcape to be only by good Forne, and Chance. How wonderful a thing is it, the Eyes of all conſidering Men, that Providence uld take any notice of them in a way of Favour, t ſo wickedly diſown it, and ſo directly diſoblige How can you poſſibly ſhut your Eyes againſt ſuch ar light, and ſtop your Ears againſt ſuch loud and in Language, whereby the Power and Goodneſs God proclaims it ſelf to you in theſe Providences! ! methinks you ſhould moſt readily and thankfulubſcribe that great Truth, Pſal. 68. 20. He that is our God, is the God of Salvation; und unto God the Lord belong the iſſues from Death. But though Men ſee Signs and Wonders, they will not believe, yea, though themſelves become Wonders to the World by their Miraculous Deliverances; yet ſo bruitiſh and ſtupid are they, that they will not ſee the Hand that ſaves them. Take heed what you do: You ſet your ſelves in the direct way to deſtruction by this, and highly provoke the Lord to abandon, and caſt you out of the care of his Providence; and if he once do ſo, you are loſt Men.

(4.) And yet more vile (if more vileneſs can be in Sin) than all this. Are there not a Generation of Wretched Men among you, that fall a ſwearing, curſing, and blaſpheming God, even when he is uttering his Terrible Voice in the Tempeſt, and every moment threatning to intomb them in the Deep? When you ſhould be upon your Knees bewailing your ſins, and pleading with God for Mercy (as I doubt not but ſome of you do) to be yet more and more provoking him, daring him to his Face; and yet more incenſing his Indignation, which is already kindled againſt you; who, that hears this, can chuſe but admire the riches of God's Patience and Forbearance towards ſuch Men? The very Heathen Mariners in a Storm, called every Man upon his God, Jonah 1. 5. We ſay, Extremity will cauſe the worſt of Men to pray, and compoſe the Vaineſt Spirit unto Seriouſneſs; but it ſeems by you, it will not. Is this the Frame and Temper you will meet Death in? What, ſpeaking the Language of Devils and damned Spirits before you come among them? Haſting on your own Ruin, as if it were too ſlack and lingring in its Motion? The Lord open the Eyes of theſe miſerable Creatures, and convince them, that they are not only going to Hell as others are, but that they are the Forlorn of all that Wretched Crew that are bound thither; and proportionably will be their Miſery, except they repent.

2. Uſe of Exhortation. This Point is yet farther improvable for you by way of Exhortation, ſerving to preſs you to thoſe proper Duties which God calls you to by his Terrible Providential Voice in the Storms, and by your wonderful Deliverances.

1. And the firſt Leſſon you are to learn from hence, is, To adore the Power of God. O what a Manifeſtation of Divine Power is here! You are the Men that ſee more than others, the Works of the Lord, and his Wonders in the Deep. It is one of God's Ends, in ſhewing you theſe Wonders, To make his mighty Power known, Pſal 106. 8. O what a Terrible Voice doth God utter upon the Seas, when the Heavens are black above you, the furious Winds and dreadful Thunders ratling about you, the Sea and Waves roaring beneath you! Is not this Voice of the Lord full of Majeſty? Doth it not awe your Hearts, and make them tremble? In three things his Infinite Power is diſcovered to you.

Firſt, In raiſing theſe Terrible Tempeſts, and that from ſo ſmall and weak a beginning as a thin Vapour from the Earth is: This is the Wonderſul Work of God, Pſal. 135. 7. He cauſeth the Vapours to aſcend from the ends of the Earth; he maketh Lightnings for the Rain, he bringeth Wind out of his Treaſures.

Secondly, In limiting and bounding their Force and Power: What prodigious Effects elſe would follow? The Wind is a fierce and boiſterous Creature, and would (if God did not by his Providence reſtrain) deſtroy, and overturn all, both by Sea and Land. Or if Satan, who is ſtiled The Prince, or the Power of the Air, were left at liberty to execute his Malice by ſuch an Inſtrument, not a Ship ſhould croſs the Seas, nor a Houſe be ſafe at Land; as is evident enough by the furious haſte he made to overturn the Houſe with an horrible Tempeſt upon Job's Children, as ſoon as he had received a permiſſion from Heaven to do it.

And Third, No leſs viſible is the Power of God in calming and appeaſing the ſtormy Winds, and remanding them into his Treaſuries, Pſal. 107. 29. He maketh the Storm a Calm: Yea, he doth ſo in the very nick of time, when all is concluded loſt. Thus you read in Mark 4. 39. When the waves beat into the Ship, ſo that it was now full, and the Diſciples cried to the Lord, Maſter, careſt thou not that we periſh? He aroſe and rebuked the wind, and ſaid to the Sea, Peace, be ſtill; and the wind ceaſed, and there was a great calm. Juſt as one would huſh a Child, Peace, be ſtill; O the Sovereign Power of God! How ſhould it be reverenced and adored by all that behold it, in theſe marvelous effects of it?

2. The Second Leſſon you are taught by this Doctrine, is, To admire the Mercy of God. Mercy is no leſs diſcovered than Power; yea, the Power of God is put forth to give his Mercy a fair occaſion to ſhine forth in your Deliverance. God ſometimes permits your danger to grow to an Extremity, and delays your Deliverance to the laſt Moment, till all hopes of ſafety are gone, upon the like reaſon, That Lazarus's Reſurrection was deferr'd; that the Work of God in your Preſervation may commend it ſelf to you under the greateſt advantage.

O that you would view theſe Mercies in all their indearing Circumſtances. I can only hint your Duty generally in this Caſe; you may enlarge upon it, if you have hearts fit for ſuch a bleſſed Work. And mark particularly the multitudes of Mercies that are complicated and involved in one Deliverance. Obſerve the Seaſon when, the manner how, the means by which your Salvation was wrought. It is a thouſand pities that ſo much of God's glory, and your comfort as any one, even the ſmalleſt circumſtance may contain, ſhould be loſt.

3. Laſtly, and above all. See that you anſwer God's ends in your Deliverance. If that be loſt, God may ſay concerning you, as David did of Nabal, 1Sam. 25. 21. Surely, in vain have I kept all that this Fellow hath in the Wilderneſs; ſo that nothing was miſſed of all that pertained to him; and he hath requited me evil for good. So here in vain have I kept this Fellow upon the Sea, when I ſuffered others to ſink: In vain have I preſerv'd his Life, Liberty, and Eſtate; ſo often by an out-ſtretched Arm of Power and Mercy to him, ſeeing he requites me evil for good.

O let me intreat you to be careful to comply with the Deſigns and Ends of God in theſe your wonderful Preſervations. If you enquire what God's Ends in your Deliverance are, I anſwer.

Firſt, It is to lead you to Repentance. The goodneſs of God (ſaith the Apoſtle) leadeth thee to repentance, Rom. 2. 4. Doſt thou not know the Voice of Mercy? Why, it beſpeaks thy Return to God. It may be thou haſt ſpent all thy Life, to this Day, in the Service of Sin: Thou never redeemeſt one of all thy precious Hours, to conſider thine own Eſtate, to bewail thy Sin and Miſery, to ſeek after an Intereſt in Chriſt. Why, now here is a Providence faln in that doth, as it were, take thee by the Hand, and lead thee to this great neceſſary Work. The End of God in raiſing this Storm, was to deliver thee from the more dreadful Tempeſt of his Wrath, which without Repentance muſt ſhortly overtake thy Soul in the blackneſs of Darkneſs for ever. Now God hath awakened thy Conſcience by this Fright, made it charge home thy Sins upon thee, terrified thee with diſmal Apprehenſions of Death and Hell. O, what a fair opportunity and advantage hath he now put into thy hand for Repentance, Reformation, and gaining an Intereſt in Jeſus Chriſt. If this Seaſon be loſt, Conſcience ſuffered to fall again into a dead Sleep, and thy Heart be again hardened by the deceitfulneſs of Sin, thou maiſt never have ſuch an opportunity for Salvation opened to thee any more.

Secondly, If this End be anſwer'd, then a farther deſign God hath in thy Deliverance, is to ingage, and incourage thy Soul to dependance upon God, in future ſtraits and dangers. This is Food for Faith, and now you are funiſh'd with experience of the Power, Mercy, and Goodneſs of God, to inable you to roll your ſelves upon him, when new Exigencies befal you. If God exerciſe you with ſuch Extremities another time you may ſay with the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 1. 10. Who delivered us from ſo great a Death, and doth deliver; in whom we truſt he will yet deliver us.

If your firſt Deliverance were a Deliverance without a Promiſe, when you were without Chriſt, what incouragement have you to depend upon him, when his End is anſwered in your Repentance and Converſion; and being in Chriſt, are intituled to all the Promiſes?

Thirdly, and laſtly, God's End in your marvellous Preſervations and Deliverances, is, to furniſh you for, and engage yon to a Life of Praiſe. O! how ſhould the high Praiſes of God be ever in your Mouths! You have ſeen his Works and Wonders in the Deeps. And this is it which the Pſalmiſt preſſes upon you, as a becoming Return for your Mercies, in the Words following my Text; O that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the Children of Men.

O with what warm and inlarged Affections ſhould you expreſs your Thankfulneſs to the God of your Salvation! and ſay as David, What am I, O Lord, God; and what is my Father's Houſe, that thou ſhouldſt do ſuch great things for me? Was ſuch a life as mine worth the working of ſo many Wonders to ſave it? O Lord, thou knoweſt it hath been a life ſpent in Vanity. Thy glory hath not been precious in mine Eyes, but my life hath been precious in thine Eyes. Many more uſeful, and leſs ſinful than my ſelf, have periſhed, and I am ſaved. O Lord, ſhew me the Deſigns and gracious Ends of theſe Deliverances. Surely there is ſome great thing to be done by me, or elſe ſo great a Salvation had not been wrought for me. The Lord ſaw in what a ſad caſe my poor Soul was, to be ſummoned immediately before his Judgment Sea that if I had gone down under all my guilt, I had ſunk to the bottom of Hell: But thou in love to my Soul haſt delivered it from the Pit of Corruption, that I might yet enjoy a Seaſon for Salvation; and be once more intruſted with the precious Talents of Time and Means. O that I may not abuſe the Grace of God in this new Inſtrument, as I have done in the former. Let me not live as one delivered to commit all theſe Abominations.

And now after all that is come upon me for my Evils, ſeeing thou, my God, haſt puniſhed me leſs than mine Iniquities deſerve; and haſt given me ſuch a Deliverance as this; ſhould I again break thy Commandments? Ezra 9. 13, 14. O let this new Mercy produce a new Heart and Life!

SERMON III.

Pſal. CXXXIX. 9, 10.

If I take the Wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the Sea; even there ſhall thy right hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me.

IN this Pſalm the Omnipreſence and Omniſcience of God, are the ſubjects of the Pſalmiſt's Meditation; and theſe Attributes are here promiſcuouſly diſcourſed, not only becauſe of the near affinity that is betwixt their Natures, but becauſe the one is the demonſtration of the other: It is evident God knows all things, becauſe he fills all places. Touching the Omniſcience of God, he diſcovers the infinite perfection of that Attribute by the particular and exact notice it takes of all our ways: Ver. 3. Thou compaſſeſt my paths, and art acquainted with all my ways. Of all our words, Ver. 4. There is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knoweſt it altogether. Yea, of all our thoughts; and that not only in the inſtant of their conception, but long before they were conceived: Ver. 2. Thou underſtandeſt my thoughts afar off, even from eternity. Thus he diſplays the Omniſcience of God. And then to make demonſtration of the truth, and certainty of this Doctrine of God's Omniſcience, he proves it from his Omnipreſence: q. d. He that fills all things, cannot but know all things. Now God's preſence fills Heaven, yea, and Hell too, Ver. 8. and all parts of the Earth and Sea, even the remoteſt, Ver. 9, 10. And therefore no Creature, nor action of any Creature, can eſcape his cogniſance. It is not here, as among men; if a malefactor be condemned by the Laws of one Kingdom, he may eſcape by flying into another; but it is far otherwiſe here, for, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, (perſonating a guilty fugitive indeavoring to make an eſcape from the arreſt of God's Juſtice) If I take the Wings of the Morning, and flee into the uttermoſt parts of the Sea; even there ſhall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me.

In which words you have theſe two things mainly remarkable.

1. The greateſt ſecurity and incouragement to a ſinner ſuppoſed.

2. That ſuppoſed ſecurity and incouragement utterly deſtroyed.

Alludit ad celerrimam radiorum ſolis excurſionem, qui momento ab oriente ad occidentem perveniunt. Calvin.

1. The greateſt ſecurity and incouragement to a ſinner ſuppoſed; If I take the Wings of the Morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the Sea. Where two things ſeem to offer towards his Protection.

Firſt, The Place; the remoteſt part of the Sea, by which you are to underſtand the moſt obſcure nook in the Creation; fartheſt removed from any inſpection or obſervation.

And ſecondly, His ſwift and ſpeedy flight, after the commiſſion of ſin, to this ſuppoſed Refuge and Sanctuary: It is here ſuppoſed, that a ſinner ſhould flie as ſwift as the light of the Sun, which in a moment ſhines from the Eaſt to the Weſt; and ſo the meaning is, Could I flee with a celerity equal to the Sun, or his Beams of Light, which breaking forth in the Morning, do in an inſtant inlighten the remoteſt part of the Hemiſphere: Could I as ſwiftly flee to the moſt obſcure, remote, ſolitary place in all the World. Thus the ſinner's ſecurity is ſuppoſed.

2. This ſuppoſed ſecurity and incouragement is utterly deſtroyed. Even there ſhall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me. The leading hand of God is not here to beunderſtood, as a directing or guiding hand, to ſhew the fugitive ſinner the way of his eſcape; but contrarily, Thy hand ſhall lead me, as a Keeper leads his priſoner back to the place of cuſtody, from which he indeavored an eſcape. And the following clauſe is exegetical; Thy right hand ſhall hold, or detain me, viz. in ſtrict cuſtody. So that the ſum of all is this:

Non accipitur deducere pro viam monſtrare; Sed deducet me manus tua tanquam cuſtos captivum ſibi commiſſam deduxit. Vatab.

Doct. That the whole World affords no place of ſecrecy or ſecurity for a ſinner to eſcape the obſerving Eye, and righteous Hand of God.

Jonah fled from the Lord to Tarſhiſh; but could he eſcape ſo? No, the Lord ſent a Storm after him, which brought back the fugitive, Jonah 1. 3, 4. We read, Iſa. 29. 15. of ſuch as dig deep, to hide their counſels from the Lord, (i. e.) They plot, contrive and ſtudy to conceal their wicked deſigns, to ſin with greateſt ſecreſy and ſecurity. But, what can poſſibly be a covering from him, to whoſe ſight all things are naked and manifeſt? Where can a ſinner be hid from him, whoſe preſence fills Heaven and Earth? Jer. 23. 24. The Scripture gives full proof to this great Truth. It is clear from Prov. 15. 3. The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good. And again, Job 34. 21, 22. For his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he ſeeth all his goings; there is no darkneſs, nor ſhadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves. Whoever goes about to conceal a ſin in ſecret, attempts a fooliſh and impoſſible deſign. Pſal. 44. 21. Shall not God ſearch this out? for he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro, through the whole Earth, 2 Chron. 16. 9.

Now in the handling of this point, I purpoſe to ſhew you,

1. That men are often induced to ſin, upon hopes of ſecreſie and concealment.
2. That to ſin upon theſe incouragements, ſtrongly argues their natural Atheiſm: They think they are ſafe, if men know it not; they reckon not upon God's diſcovery of them.
3. That theſe incouragements to ſin, are vain things, it being impoſſible any place can hide a ſinner from God; and how it appears, that the Eye of God is, and muſt needs be upon us, and our actions, wherever we are, and how cloſely ſoever we indeavor to hide them. And then apply it.

Firſt, Men are often induced to commit ſin upon the hopes of ſecreſy and concealment. Sin (eſpecially ſome kinds of ſin) carry ſo much ſhame and odium in them, that it reſtrains men from the open practice of them; but if Satan can perſwade them they ſhall never be divulged to their reproach, they will venture upon them. See that Text, The eye of the Adulterer waiteth for the twilight, ſaying, No eye ſhall ſee me, and diſguiſeth his face, Job 24. 15. reckoning himſelf ſecure, if he can carry his wickedneſs under a vail of darkneſs, not caring what wickedneſs he doth, ſo he may do it undiſcerned. It is not the acting of ſin, but the diſcovery of it that puts them into terrors. So it is added with reſpect, both to the Adulterer, and the Thief; Ver. 17. The morning is to them as the ſhadow of death, if one know them; they are in the terrors of the ſhadow of death. i. e. If a man, eſpecially a man in Authority, a Magiſtrate meet them, it is as if the Image of death paſſed before them in a viſion. So thoſe Idolaters, Ezek. 8. 12. Son of man, haſt thou ſeen what the antients of the houſe of Iſrael do in the dark, every man in the houſe of his imagery? For they ſay, the Lord ſeeth us not. They conclude all is well, if nothing appear. This incouragement of Secreſy is the great argument, by which Satan prevails with men to commit any ſin that hath ſhame or danger attending it. But his promiſes of concealment are uſually made good, as his promiſes of great wealth are to Witches. This is the incouragement.

Secondly, Next I will make it evident to you, that to ſin upon this incouragement argues Atheiſm in him that commits it. This is plain, for did men believe the Omnipreſence and Omniſcience of God, ſuch an incouragement to ſin as ſecreſy could have no force with them. Thus when the Antients of Iſrael practiſed their Idolatry in the dark, it is plain they thought God ſaw them not: Ezek. 8. 12. For they ſay, the Lord ſeeth us not, the Lord hath forſaken the Earth. (i. e.) They did not really believe God's Omnipreſence and Omniſcience. And Job tells us, Chap. 31. 26, 27, 28. That if he had beheld the Sun in his brightneſs, (i. e.) to admire and worſhip it as a God: Or, his heart been ſecretly inticed; he ſhould have denied the God that is above. Every one that is inticed to ſin upon the incouragement of Secreſy, doth ſo far deny the God that is above. If ſuch a man did really believe there is a God that ſees him, whoſe eyes are as flames of fire, Revel. 1. 14. To whom the darkneſs and the light are both alike, Pſal. 139. 12. it were impoſſible he ſhould be ſo terrified at the diſcovery of a Creature, and ſo ſecure and wholly unconcerned at the diſcovery of God: It could not be, that the obſervation of the great God ſhould not ſo much trouble them, as the obſervation of a little child.

Thus we find the inward thoughts of mens hearts, concerning God, diſcovered by their bold attempts upon ſecret ſins. Iſa. 29. 15. Wo to them that ſeek deep to hide their counſel from the Lord, and their works are in the dark; and they ſay, Who ſeeth us, and who knoweth us? They think if their works are ſhrowded under a vail of darkneſs, they are ſafe enough: If they can eſcape the Bar of an Earthly God (a Magiſtrate) they ſhall never be accountable at any other Bar. We have another ſad inſtance of the ſame impiety in Pſal. 73. 11. And they ſay, How doth God know? And is there knowledg in the moſt high? If men did not fancy to themſelves, there is no God, or (which is all one) that he is like unto themſelves, one that cannot ſee in darkneſs; they could never incourage themſelves as they do, to ſin upon ſuch a fooliſh pretence.

Thirdly, But my proper buſineſs in this place, is to prove, That theſe incouragements to ſin are vain things; that no ſinner can hide himſelf from the Eye of God. This is plain both from Scripture and Reaſon.

The Scriptures ſpeak full home to this Truth. Prov. 5. 21. The ways of a man are before the Lord; and he pondereth all his paths. To ponder or weigh our paths, is more than ſimply to obſerve and ſee them. He not only ſees the action, but puts it into the ballances, with every circumſtance belonging to it, and tries how much every ingredient in the action weighs, and what it comes to. So that God hath not only an univerſal inſpection upon every action, but he hath a critical inſpection into it alſo. The Lord is a God of knowledg, and by him actions are weighed, 1 Sam. 2. 3. So Jer. 13. 25, 27. Thou haſt forgotten me, and truſted in falſhood. I have ſeen thy Adulteries, and thy neighings, the lewdneſs of thy whoredoms and abominations. q. d. Thou forgetteſt there is a God in the Heavens that beheld thee, and didſt verily believe all was ſafe, becauſe ſecret from man. In this falſhood or cheat put upon thee, by the devil, and thine own Atheiſtical heart, thou didſt truſt. But I have ſeen thee, and all thy ſecret leudneſs. It is a Proverb among ſinners, Si non caſte, tamen caute. Carry the matter, if not honeſtly, yet warily: If thou have a mind to ſin, yet order it ſo, that the World may be never the wiſer. But how vain a thing is this? If men do not, the Lord doth ſee it. I know, and am a witneſs, ſaith the Lord, Jer. 29. 23. Thus the Scripture ſpeaks roundly and fully to the point in hand.

But becauſe the Atheiſm of the World is ſo great, and it is a hard thing to convince men of this great truth, ſo as to over-aw them from any ſecret ſin by it, I will by rational arguments demonſtrate the truth to every man's conſcience, and give you plain and full evidence, that how ſecretly ſoever men carry their ſinful deſigns, yet the Lord muſt needs be privy to them; and it is impoſſible they ſhould eſcape his cogniſance.

1. For firſt, he that formed all, cannot but know all. The Workman cannot be ſuppoſed to be ignorant of any part of his own work. Now God is the Former of all things; every place, and every perſon he hath made. Where then ſhall the workers of iniquity hide themſelves? You have the folly of ſinners, in thinking to conceal themſelves from the Eye of God, convinced and reproved by this very argument. Iſa. 29. 15, 16. Wo unto them that ſeek deep to hide their counſels from the Lord, and their words are in the dark; and they ſay, Who ſeeth us? and who knoweth us? Surely, your turning of things upſide down ſhall be eſteemed as the Potters clay. For ſhall the work ſay to him that made it, he made me not? Or ſhall the thing framed, ſay of him that framed it, he hath no underſtanding? q. d. Think ye by deep-laid deſigns, by the advantage of darkneſs, by moulding and new moulding your crafty deſigns in your heads, as the clay is moulded now into this, then into that ſhape by the Potter's hands, to hide it from me? O brutiſh Creatures, and without underſtanding! Am not I the God that formed you? And can it be ſuppoſed, I ſhould not know the moſt ſecret thoughts, plots, and deſigns of mine own Creatures, who cannot contrive a deſign, nor conceive a thought without me? How abſurd is this? Find out a place which God made not, or a Creature which he formed not; and then your pretences to that Creatures concealment from God, in ſuch a place, may have ſome colour. And this Argument is again urged to convince the brutiſh Atheiſt. Pſal. 94. 8, 9, 10. Underſtand ye brutiſh among the people; and ye fools, when will ye be wiſe? He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear? He that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee? He that chaſteneth the Heathen, ſhall he not correct? He that teacheth man knowledg, ſhall not he know? The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity. So that it is the vaineſt of all vanity in the World, to think of hiding your ſins from the Lord.

2. He that ſuſtains all, cannot but know, and diſcern all. You that ſeek to hide counſel from the Lord, know you not, That in him you live, move, and have your being? Acts 17. 28. Do not you derive that very power from him, which you abuſe to ſinning againſt him? And do you depend neceſſarily, and continually upon God for all? Muſt he give you the power to move, and by that power can you move beyond him, and get out of his reach? Cannot you think a thought without him, and yet can exclude him from thoſe very thoughts which you had no power to conceive, but from him? Exerciſe but common Reaſon in the caſe, and it will hiſs at your abſurd deſigns.

3. He that governs all, can be ignorant of nothing. There is a perpetual influence of Providence, ſwaying and governing all the Creatures, and all their actions; elſe the very ligaments of Nature would crack, and the World break up and disband. This Providence extends it ſelf to the leaſt and loweſt of Creatures, and their actions. Luke 12. 6. A Sparrow falls not to the ground without it. The great God hath ſomething to do about the moſt minute and inconſiderable things, yea, the moſt contingent and uncertain things, as is the diſpoſal of a Lot, Prov. 16. 33. And indeed, this Omniſcience of God is that which is neceſſary to his Univerſal Government. How ſhall he rule that perſon, or in that place, which he knows not? Indeed Earthly Governors may do ſo: It is not neceſſary they have a perſonal immediate cognizance of each place and perſon in their dominions; it is enough that they be virtually and mediately governed by them: but it is not ſo with God. It is neceſſary his eye ſhould immediately ſee all the parts of his Dominion. He could not rule the World, if he were not an Omniſcient God. Pſal. 66. 7. He ruleth by his power for ever, his eyes behold the Nations: Let not the rebellious exalt themſelves.

4. He that hath ſet a ſpy to obſerve, and note what every man doth, cannot but know his actions, how ſecret ſoever they be. Now ſo it is here, God ſends a ſpy with you to obſerve and record your moſt ſecret actions and thoughts, in every place; I mean your own Conſciences, from whoſe obſervation none of your ways can poſſibly be exempt. The ſenſe of this made the Heathen ſay, Turpe quid auſurus, te ſine teſte time. When thou art attempting a ſinful act, fear thy ſelf without any other witneſs, Conſcience is privy to your moſt ſecret deſigns and thoughts. 1 Kings 2. 44. Thou knoweſt all the wickedneſs which thy heart (i. e. thy Conſcience) is privy to. And if Conſcience know all, God muſt needs ſee and know it. So the Apoſtle reaſons, from the leſſer to the greater, 1 John 3. 20. If our heart condemn us, (which is there put for our Conſcience) God is greater than our hearts, and knoweth all things. If the ſpirit of a man knows the things of a man, much more he that formed that Spirit, and indowed man with it.

5. He that knows things, more ſecret and unſearchable than our moſt ſecret actions can be, muſt needs know them how ſecret ſoever they be. Now there are many things more cloſe and ſecret, than any action of ours can poſſibly be, and yet God knows them. The thoughts of the heart are more ſecret than any external action, ſo ſecret, that no Creature can ſearch them; the Devil himſelf hath but a conjectural gueſs at them. But the Lord telleth unto man what is his thought, as in Amos 4. 13. So Jer. 17. 10. I the Lord ſearch the heart, I try the reins; i. e. The moſt obſcure, inward, and deep ſecrets lodged in the heart: Nay, which is more, he not only knows our thoughts when they are formed, and conceived in the heart, but long before their conception Pſal. 139. 2. Thou knoweſt my thoughts afar off. Divines generally interpret it from eternity; even ſo long before they were actually thought, he foreknew every thought we would think: and what can be imagined more ſecret, and undiſcernable, than a future thought?

Now if this be known to him, how much more our thoughts formed into projects and deſigns, and theſe executed by external actions? O deceive not your ſelves with hopes of ſecreſy; nothing can be a ſecret to him that knows the counſels of all hearts.

6. He that providentially brings to light the moſt ſecret contrivances of men, and publiſhes them before all Iſrael, and before the Sun, muſt needs ſee them, and know them. How cloſely had Achan covered his wickedneſs? He never ſuſpected a diſcovery, yet God brought it to light. With how much contrivance was the ſin of David covered, yet God diſcovered it. Thou didſt this thing ſecretly, but I will do this thing before all Iſrael, and before the Sun; 1 Sam. 12. 12. Hiſtories abound with Examples of God's bringing to light murders, ſo ſecretly committed that it was impoſſible they ſhould ever be revealed in this World, without a miracle of Providence; and yet ſo they have been brought to light. Beſſus having committed ſuch a murder, fancied the Swallows that were chattering in the Chimney, had ſaid, Beſſus killed a Man; and thereupon confeſſed the fact. How ſecure were the contrivers of the Popiſh Powder-plot, that Catholick Villany, in a double ſenſe having ſworn all their Accomplices to ſecreſy, and managed the whole deſign ſo cloſely, that Guy Faux upon the diſcovery of it, ſaid, The Devil muſt needs be the diſcoverer of it. How eaſie were it to expatiate upon this Theam? But I will not be tireſom in inſtances: All Ages are the witneſſes of this truth. Who then can deny or queſtion that great confeſſed truth, Dan. 2. 28. There is a God in Heaven that reveals ſecrets? And if he reveals them, he muſt needs know them.

7. He that will judg all ſecrets, cannot but know them. Now God will judg the ſecrets of men in that great day. Rom. 2. 16. God will bring every work into judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil, Eccl. 12. ult. The Judg of the whole Earth will not judg at random, his Judgment will be infallible, becauſe his Omniſcience is ſo. His eyes are upon the ways of man, and he ſeeth all his goings; for he will not lay upon man more than right, that he ſhould enter into judgment with God, Job 34. 21, 23.

So that the truth of this point is beyond all controverſie and contradiction, That the whole World affords no place of ſecreſy or ſecurity for a ſinner, to eſcape the obſerving eye, and righteous hand of God.

The Uſes follow in theſe Inferences.

1. Infer. If this be ſo, then Time, Place, and Opportunity, how much ſoever they ſeem to promiſe ſecreſy and concealment, ſhould never further a temptation to ſin.

Suppoſe all circumſtances concurring, ſo that in the eye of Reaſon you ſeem ſecured from the ſhameful conſequences of ſin; yet methinks the conſideration of this truth ſhould ſufficiently deter you from a wicked purpoſe. Prov. 5. 20. And why wilt thou, my Son, be raviſhed with a ſtrange Woman? and imbrace the boſom of a ſtranger? For the ways of a man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. There be four things which ſtrengthen temptations to ſin; and particularly the ſin of uncleanneſs upon Seamen. Firſt, The abſence of lawful Remedies. Secondly, The preſence of alluring objects. Thirdly, Ths inſtigation of wicked examples. Fourthly, And the hopes of concealment, being remote from their acquaintance; ſo that their ſins, in probability, ſhall never diſgrace them. This laſt circumſtance is not the leaſt: O how many hath it prevailed upon! But I hope you will never yield to this temptation, whoſe heart and ſtrength is broken by this conſideration of the Eye of God upon you. A chaſte Woman being once ſollicited to folly, told him that ſollicited her, She could never yield to the motion, till he could find a place where God ſhould not ſee.

Nay, my friends, it ſhould do more than reſtrain you from the groſs acts of ſin, it ſhould powerfully curb the very thoughts and firſt motions of ſin in your hearts. That was the uſe holy Job made of this truth; Job 31. 1, 4. I have made a Covenant with mine eyes, why then ſhould I think upon a Maid? Doth he not ſee my ways, and count all my ſteps?

Suppoſe you ſhould carry your wickedneſs ſo cloſe, that none on Earth ſhould know it; yet the Lord ſees it, and will bring it into judgment, and your own Conſcience is privy to it. I pray Sirs tell me, Is it not a great comfort to a Malefactor, that he acted his crime ſo cloſely, that none but the Judg, and one authentick Witneſs more (whoſe teſtimony is as good as a thouſand) beheld it? Why this is the caſe of all ſecret ſinners. But to preſs home this great and neceſſary truth more particularly, I beſeech you to conſider.

1. God doth not only behold you, but beholds you with deteſtation and abhorrence in your ways of iniquity; it is a ſight that grieves him to the heart. Gen. 6. 5, 6. And the Lord ſaw the wickedneſs of Man was great on the Earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. Here was wickedneſs, great wickedneſs breaking out externally, and evil, only evil, and that continually working internally. So that, both heart and life were evil extenſively, intenſively, and protenſively. This the Lord ſaw; and how it affected him, the ſixth Verſe tells you. And it repented the Lord he had made man on the Earth, and it grieved him at the heart. Ah it cuts him to the heart, to ſee your ſinful hearts and courſes. Nothing can be ſo contrary to the pure and holy Nature of God, as this is. This made the Prophet admire how his patience could indure ſuch a ſight. Hab. 1. 13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canſt not look upon iniquity; wherefore lookeſt thou upon them that deal treacherouſly? &c. And if he ſhould ſay, Lord how canſt thou behold thy ſelf affronted by vile Creatures, and hold thy hands from avenging it? O the ſtupendious patience of God!

2. It doth not only grieve him to the heart, but it puts his patience to the greateſt trial and exerciſe in beholding it. Therefore he is ſaid, to indure with much long-ſuffering, Rom 9. 22. It doth, as it were, create a conflict betwixt his Patience and Juſtice. He is ſo provoked by your ſin, that he expreſſes it as a difficulty to bear it, Amos 2. 13. I am preſſed under you, as a Cart is preſſed that is full of Sheaves; burdened till the Axel-tree of infinite Patience be ready to crack under the weight.

Nay thirdly, He doth not only ſee your evils, but he regiſters and records them, in order to a day of reckoning with you for all together, except ye repent. Deut. 32. 34. Is not this laid up in ſtore with me, and ſealed up among my Treaſures? A Metaphor taken from the Clerk of the Aſſize, who ſeals up the Bag of Inditements againſt the time of tryal. You think if you can blind the eyes of men, all is well, you ſhall hear no more of it: Ah, but it is ſealed up among God's Treaſures, i. e. the things he records and reſerves for the day of account.

4. God doth not only ſee you, but he will alſo one day make you ſee your ſelves, and your ways, and that with horror and conſternation. You think you ſhall taſte nothing but the ſweet and pleaſure of ſin; but how are you deceived? The days are coming, when ſin that is now pleaſant, ſhall be turned into Wormwood and Gall. You will not ſee the evil of it, and, becauſe you ſee it not, you think God doth not. Theſe things (ſaith God) haſt thou done, and I kept ſilence; and thou thoughteſt that I was altogether ſuch a one as thy ſelf;

but I will reprove thee, and ſet them in order before thine eyes, Pſal. 50. 21. God ſees them now, and he will make you ſee them too, by opening your eyes in this World graciouſly, or in that to come judicially.

5. God doth not only ſee your ways, but he will make all the World ſee them too. For, there is nothing hid that ſhall not be revealed, nor covered that ſhall not be made known, Matt. 10. 26. There is a day when God will make manifeſt the hidden counſels of the heart, 2 Cor. 4. 5. When that which hath been ſpoken in darkneſs, ſhall be heard in light; and that which ye have ſpoken in the ear in cloſets, ſhall be proclaimed upon the houſe tops, Luk. 12. 3. Well then, whenever the occaſions and opportunities of ſin are preſented to you, under this incouragement of Secreſy, I beſeech you remember this truth, that no place can hide you from the Eye of God. He ſees all your ways, yea, he ſees them with abhorrence; the ſight of them is the greateſt exerciſe of his patience: His ſight of them is not a tranſient Glance, but he ſees and records your evils, they are ſealed up among his Treaſures: He ſees, and will make you ſee them too with horror, when he ſhall ſet them in order before you. He ſees them, and will make Angels and Men ſee them in the great day. O then never let Secreſy any more incourage you to ſin.

2. Inference. What prodigious Sinners muſt they be, that ſeek no covert for their ſin in darkneſs, but with an impudent face declare, yea, glory in their ſhame? who are not aſhamed to ſin openly with a bare face, and a Whores forehead? Theſe are ſinners of the firſt magnitude. They declare their ſin as Sodom, and hide it not, Iſa. 3. 9. It is natural to man to indeavour to hide his ſin as Adam; and you ſee from the Text, guilty ſinners fain would (if it were poſſible) fly to any obſcure corner from the obſervation of God and Men; and it is a Mercy, God hath planted ſuch an affection, as ſhame is, in the Soul of Man, to be a Bridle to reſtrain his exorbitant Luſts. But yet there is a Generation of monſtrous Sinners, who have ſo far unmanned themſelves, That they are not at all aſhamed when they commit abominations, neither can they bluſh, Jer. 6. 15. If there be any remains of ſhame left in them, they exerciſe it upon a wrong Object: They are aſhamed of that which would be their glory, and glory in that which is their ſhame; they add Impudence to their Sin, and bluſh not to proclaim that which others ſtudy to conceal.

Such a vile Temper as this, ſhews a man even ripe for Wrath; he hath even filled up his meaſure, and is come to the very culminating point and top of Wickedneſs. There be ſome Men arrived to ſuch a degree of Holineſs, that all that converſe with them, judg them even ripe for Heaven: They ſpeak the Dialect, and have the very ſavour of Heaven upon them. Others are come to ſuch a prodigious height of Impiety, that underſtanding Men cannot but conclude they are nigh unto Damnation; they ſpeak the very Language, and have the very ſcent of Hell upon them. Such are they that openly declare eir Sin as Sodom, and glory in their ſhame.

Thus we ſee ſome Drunkards will glory in eir ſtrength, to pour down Wine and ſtrong rink, and can boaſt of the number of their ps: Some Adulterers can glory in their acts Wickedneſs, not ſufficing themſelves to damn their own Souls, but labouring to infect and corrupt as many as they can by their filthy Tongues, that they may draw them into the ſame Miſery. We can hardly tell how to ſcrew up Sin one Peg higher than this. Firſt to practiſe Sin, then defend it, then boaſt of it. Sin is firſt a Man's Burden, next his Cuſtom, next his Delight, and then his Excellency. Lord, whither is Man faln! that Holineſs ſhould ever be his diſgrace, and ſin, yea the vileſt of ſins, his Glory! O the power of Divine Patience!

3. Inference. If the Eye of God ſearches every obſcure corner in the World, to behold the evil that is committed there, then certainly the Eye of God cannot but look into every ſecret place in the World, to ſee the good that is done there. The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil, and the good, Prov. 15. 3. The good as well as the evil; yea, he beholds with delight the good done in ſecret.

As ſome Sinners ſeek corners to act their Wickedneſs in, and cannot ſatisfy themſelves to commit Sin in the light, (for as our Saviour ſaith, Joh. 3. 20. He that doth evil, hateth the light) ſo on the contrary, a truly godly Man ſeeks Corners to pray in, to meditate in, and to examine his own Heart in, and thinks theſe Duties of Godlineſs can never be managed with too great a privacy; not that he is in the leaſt aſhamed of his Duty, no, that is not the reaſon, but he is afraid of Hypocriſie, when Duties lie too open, and expoſed to the eyes of Men. A Sinner takes his full liberty to vent his corruptions, when he can do it in ſecret; and a Saint takes his full liberty to vent and exerciſe his Graces, when no Eye but the Eye of God ſees him. Thou, when thou prayeſt (ſaith our Saviour) enter into thy Cloſet, and ſhut thy Door, and Pray to thy Father which is in ſecret, and thy Father (which ſeeth in ſecret) ſhall reward thee openly. O how much better is it, both as to your preſent comfort, and future account, to get into a corner to pray, than to whore, or drink? To pour out your Souls to God graciouſly, than to pour out your Luſts againſt God ſo wickedly? How contrary are the principles of Grace and Corruption? The ſtudy of ſinners is to hide their Evils from the eyes of Men, the ſtudy of a Saint is to hide his Duties from the eyes of Men: The Sinner would not have the World ſuſpect what he hath been about, nor would the Saint have all the World know what he hath been about. The way of an Adulterer is as the way of an Eagle in the Air, or as a Serpent upon a Rock; i. e. a ſecret way, where they leave no prints or tracks behind them. So is the way of an adulterous Woman, ſhe eateth and wipeth her mouth, and ſaith, I have done no wickedneſs, Prov. 30. 19, 20. By wiping the mouth, is there meant preventing all ſuſpition; ſuffering no ſign of the action to remain upon them: So contrarily, a gracious perſon that hath been with God in ſecret Prayer, or Faſting, when his duty is ended, he labours to avoid all oſtentations. And therefore you have the caution from Chriſt, Matth. 6. 17, 18. But thou, when thou faſteſt, anoint thy head, and waſh thy face; that thou appear not unto men to faſt, but unto thy Father which is in ſecret. The meaning is, carry thy private Duties ſo cloſe, that none may know what paſſeth between God and thee: When thou haſt been entertained in ſecret with hidden Manna, a Feaſt of fat things, wipe thy mouth in a holy ſenſe, i. e. wipe off all ſuſpition of Hypocriſy and Vanity by a prudent and humble concealment. Religion doth not lay all open, as we ſay: As ſinners have their ſecret pleaſures, their ſtoln Waters which are ſweet to them; ſo the Saints have their ſecret delights in God, their hidden Manna, which no man knows but he that eateth of it. And as the Eye of God vindictively beholds the one, ſo it delightfully beholds the other; and ſo you find it, Cant. 2. 14. O my Dove, (ſaith Chriſt to the Church) Thou art in the Clefts of the Rocks, in the ſecret places of the Stairs: Let me ſee thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for ſweet is thy voice, and thy countenance comely. Let this incourage you to ſecret Duties; let not others find more pleaſure in ſecret Luſts, than you can do in God and ſecret duties.

4. Inference. Doth the Eye of God ſee all the evil and wickedneſs that is committed in all the ſecret corners of the World, how admirable then is the Patience of God towards the World! who can imagine, how much wickedneſs is ſecretly practiſed in a Town, or City every day? Or, if all the villanies that are perpetrated in a ſmall circumference, in one day, were known to us, we ſhould admire, that God doth not make us like Sodom for judgment and deſolation before the next day: What then are the innumerable ſwarms of ſin, which are as the Sand upon the Sea-ſhore, from all the parts and corners of the Earth! Alas, there is not the ten thouſandth part of the groſſer ſort of wickedneſſes committed in the World, that ever comes to our eye or ear; and if it did, we cannot eſtimate the evil of ſin, as God doth; nor feel with that reſentment the burden of it, as he doth; and yet the long-ſuffering God forbears it with infinite patience. Surely his power was not more diſcovered in making the World, than it is in forbearing to deſtroy it again, for the wickedneſs that is in it. But the World ſtands for the Churches ſake that is in it. And were it not, that the Lord of Hoſts had left unto us a ſmall remnant, we had been as Sodom, we had been like unto Gomorrah, Iſa. 1. 9. There is alſo an elect remnant to be called and gathered by the Goſpel out of it, in their ſeveral Generations; and when that number ſhall be accompliſhed, God will ſet fire to the Four quarters of it, and it ſhall lie in white Aſhes; till then, the long-ſuffering of God waiteth.

5. Inference. If God ſee all the ſecret wickedneſs that is committed in every corner of the World; how clear is it, that there is a Judgment to come, and that this Judgment will be exact?

That there is a Judgment to come is by this manifeſt, that there is abundance of ſin committed in the World, which never comes to light here, nor never will in this World. It is true, ſome mens Sins are open, and the Judgments of God upon them are as open; but it is not ſo with all. The Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Tim. 5. 24. Some mens ſins are open before-hand, going before-hand to Judgment; and ſome mens, they follow after. Some Mens Sins are written as it were in their foreheads, every one ſees them, but others follow after, are not diſcovered till the day of the revelation of the Secrets of all hearts, and then that which is now done in cloſets ſhall be proclaimed as upon houſe-tops: though they were never put to ſhame for their ſins in the places where they committed them, yet God will ſhame them, before Men and Angels. This is the day to judg ſecrets, 1 Cor. 4. 5.

And, as it is certain there will be ſuch a Judgment, ſo it is certain this Judgment will be exact; for the Judge of all hath ſeen all: Whatever he charges any Man with, hath been acted before his face. Pſal. 90. 8. Thou ſetteſt our ſecret ſins in the light of thy countenance. Here can be no miſtake, the Omniſcient God will judg for what he hath ſeen; For his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he ſeeth all his goings, for he will not lay upon man more than right that he ſhould enter into judgment with God. The meaning is, he cannot miſtake in his judgment, being Omniſcient, and having ſeen all the ways of man; ſo that there can be no plea offered by any man for a reverſe of his ſentence.

O then let us be exact and careful, as well in our ſecret as in our open actions; for God ſhall bring every work into judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Ecceſ. 12. ult.

6. Inference. Laſtly, If the Eye of God be in every place upon us, and all our Actions: Then let thoſe whoſe condition of life hath ſent them out of the eyes and obſervations of their Parents and Maſters, keep the ſenſe of God's Eye upon their hearts, as ever they would eſcape Sin and Ruin.

It is no ſmall advantage to young unprincipled Perſons, to live under the Diſcipline of pious and careful Governors; but it often falls out, that they are early tranſplanted into another Soil, ſent into Foreign Countrys in order to their Education or Imployment; and as often are there corrupted and debauched by the evil examples of the places where they reſide; they learn another Language, or drive another Trade than that their Parents or Maſters deſigned them for. But if the ſenſe of this great Truth might accompany them where-ever they are, O what a Soveraign Antidote would it prove againſt thoſe deadly poiſons of Temptations! This alone would be a ſufficient Preſervative. If our Children and Servants have but the awful ſenſe of God's Eye upon them, we may turn them looſe in the wide World without fear.

If Providence ſhall direct this diſcourſe to your hands, my Hearts deſire and prayer for you is, That the Spirit of the Lord would imprint this great Truth upon your hearts. And I am the more moved to indeavour your Preſervation, upon the conſideration of the apparent danger you are in, and the manifold diſappointments and miſchiefs that muſt unavoidably follow the corrupting of your tender years. The danger you are in is great, whether you conſider, Firſt, The infecting catching nature of Sin. No Plague is more infectious and inſinuating than Sin is. Many are the Wiles, Devices, Stratagems, and Baits, Satan lays to draw you into ſin, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Or,

Secondly, The proneſs that is in your own Nature, to cloſe with the offers and temptations that you are tried with: it is as great a wonder if you eſcape, as that one that lives in a Peſt-houſe, ſhould remain healthy; or that dry Tinder ſhould not catch, when thouſands of ſparks fly about it, and light upon it. Or,

Thirdly, The abſence of all thoſe means by which you have formerly been preſerved from ſin. You are now without the Ordinances of God, the Family Duties, the Admonitions, Counſels, Examples, and Obſervations of your Parents, Maſters, and Friends: All which have been of great uſe to keep you from ſin, and repreſs the vanities of Youth. Or laſtly, Fourthly, The manifold furtherances to Temptations which your Age affords; Childhood and Youth are vanity. Inconſiderateneſs, Raſhneſs, Injudiciouſneſs, and the want of experience, do all caſt you into the very ſnare. See how the Holy Ghoſt hath ſignified the danger of perſons at your age, in Prov. 7. 7.

All theſe things do greatly indanger you. And if any, or all of them together, prevail to the vitiating and corrupting of you, then what a train of ſad conſequences will follow upon it! For,

1. The Great God will be diſhonored and reproached by you, even that God whoſe diſtinguiſhing Mercies are now before your eyes, and ſhould be admired by you, that cauſed you to ſpring up in a better ſoil, and not from Idolaters in a Land of Darkneſs.

2. Conſcience will be wounded and polluted with guilt; and though at preſent you feel not the remorſe and gnawings of it, yet now you are preparing for it. The ſins of Youth, are complaints and Sorrows of old Age, Job 13. 26.

3. The hearts of your Friends (if Godly) will be grieved and greatly troubled, to find their expectations and hopes diſappointed; and all thoſe Prayers for you, and counſels beſtowed on you to come to nothing. If an unequal match by Eſau was ſuch a grief of heart to Iſaac and Rebecca, what will prophaneſs and uncleanneſs be to your Parents? Gen. 26. 34.

4. The ſerviceableneſs and comfort of your whole Life, will in all probability be deſtroyed by the corruption of your Youth. If Bloſſoms be withered, and Buds nipt, what Fruit can be expected? To conclude,

5. Your precious and immortal Souls are hazarded to all Eternity. And what ſhall it profit a man to gain the whole World, and loſe his own ſoul? or what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul? Mat. 16. 26.

All this miſchief may be happily prevented by the ſerious conſideration of this point, you have now been reading. For if God ſhall fix that Truth in your Hearts by Faith, then Firſt, Inſtead of running with others into the ſame exceſs of Riot, you will keep your ſelves pure and unſpotted in an unclean defiling World. You will anſwer all temptations to ſin, as Joſeph did, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this great wickedneſs, and ſin againſt God?

Secondly, Inſtead of joining with others in ſin, you will mourn for the Sins of others. You will ſay with David, Pſal. 120. 5. Wo is me, that I ſojourn in Meſhec, that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar! Your Soul, like Lot's, will be vexed from day to day with the filthy Converſations of the Wicked, 2 Pet. 1. 17, 18.

Thirdly, Inſtead of returning to your Country with a wounded Name and Conſcience, you will return full of inward Comfort and Peace, and to the joy of all your Friends and Relations.

Fourthly, To conclude, you will give fair incouragements to the expectations of all that know you, of becoming uſeful Inſtruments for the Glory of God, and benefit of the World in your Generation. O therefore beg of God, that this Truth may be deeply ingraven upon your Hearts.

The Succeſsful SEAMAN.

SERMON IV.

DEUT. VIII. 17, 18.

And thou ſay in thine heart, My Power, and the might of mine Hand hath gotten me this VVealth: But thou ſhalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is he that giveth thee Power to get VVealth.

THIS Context contains a neceſſary and very ſeaſonable Caution to the Iſraelites, who were now paſſing out of their Wilderneſs-ſtraits into the rich and fruitful Land of Canaan, which abounded with all Earthly Bleſſings and Comforts. Now when the Lord was about to give them poſſeſſion of this good Land, he firſt gives them ſome wholeſom Caveats to prevent the abuſe of theſe Mercies. He knew how apt they were to forget him in a proſperous eſtate, and aſcribe all their comfortable fruitions to their own prudence and valor; to prevent this he reminds them of their former eſtate, and warns them about their future eſtate. He reminds them of their former condition whilſt they ſubſiſted upon his immediate care in the Wilderneſs. Ver. 15, 16. Who led thee through the great and terrible Wilderneſs, wherein were fiery Serpents, and Scorpions, and Drought, where there was no Water; here were their dangers and wants. Who brought thee forth Water out of the Rock of Flint, who fed thee in the Wilderneſs with Manna, which thy Fathers knew not; here were their ſupplies in theſe ſtraits. That he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end; Here was the wiſe and gracious deſign of God in all this.

But wherein did God humble them by feeding them with Manna? Were they not ſhrewdly humbled (ſaith Mr. Garnal, Vol. 2. p. 345. an ingenious Author) to be fed with ſuch a dainty diſh, which had God for its Cook, and was called Angels food for its delicacy? It was not the meanneſs of the fare, but the manner of having it, by which God intended to humble them. The food was excellent, but they had it from hand to mouth; ſo that God kept the Key of their Cupboard, they ſtood to his immediate allowance. This was an humbling away. But now the diſpenſation of Providence was juſt upon the change, they were going to a Land, where they ſhould eat Bread without ſcarceneſs, Ver. 9. and have their comforts in a more natural ſtated and ſenſible way; and now would be the danger. Therefore

He not only reminds them of their former eſtate, but in this Text cautions them about their future eſtate, Say not in thy heart, My power, or the might of my hand hath gotten me this wealth, &c. In this Caution we have theſe two things eſpecially to obſerve:

1. The falſe cauſe of their proſperity removed.

2. The true and proper cauſe thereof aſſerted.

1. The falſe cauſe removed: Not their power, or the might of their hand. That is ſaid to be gotten by the hand, that is gotten by our wiſdom, as well as labour: Head-work and Wit-work, is Hand-work in the ſenſe of this Text. It cannot be denied, but they were a great People, prudent, induſtrious, and had an excellent Polity among them: But yet, tho they had all theſe natural external means of inriching themſelves in that fertile ſoil, God will by no means allow them to aſcribe their Succeſs and Wealth to any of theſe cauſes: for alas, what are all theſe without his Bleſſing?

2. The true and proper cauſe aſſerted: It is the Lord that gives thee power to get wealth. i. e. All thy care, labour, wiſdom, ſtrength, ſignifies nothing without him; it is not your pains, but his bleſſing that makes your deſigns to proſper: And therefore in all your proſperity, ſtill acknowledg him as the Author of all. Hence note,

Doct. That the Proſperity and Succeſs of our Affairs, is not to be aſcribed to our own abilities, but to the Bleſſing of God upon our lawful indeavours.

We find two Proverbs in one Chapter that ſeem to differ in the account they give of this matter; and indeed they do but ſeem ſo. It is ſaid in Prov. 10. 4. The hand of the diligent maketh rich; aſcribing riches and proſperity to humane diligence. And Verſ. 22. The bleſſing of the Lord, it maketh rich. But theſe two are not really oppoſed to each other, but the one ſubordinated to the other. The diligent hand, with God's bleſſing upon it, makes rich; neither of them alone, but both conjoined. A diligent hand cannot make rich without God's bleſſing; and God's bleſſing doth not ordinarily make rich without a diligent hand. And theſe two are put together in their proper places, 1 Chron. 22. 16. Up and be doing, and the Lord be with you. It is a vain pretence for any Man to ſay, If the Lord be with me, I may ſit ſtill, and do nothing; and a wicked one to ſay, If I am up and doing, I ſhall proſper whether God be with me, or no. The Sluggard would fain proſper without diligence; and the Atheiſt hopes to proſper by his diligence alone: But Chriſtians expect their proſperity from God's Bleſſing, in the way of honeſt diligence.

It is a common thing for men to benum their own arms, and make them as dead and uſeleſs by leaning too much upon them: So it is in a Moral, as well as Natural way. All the prudence and pains in the World avail nothing without God. So ſaith the Pſalmiſt, in Pſal. 127. 2. It is in vain for you to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eat the bread of ſorrows, for ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep.

A Man would think he that riſes betime, fares hard, works hard, ſits up late, cannot but be a thriving Man; and probably he would be ſo, if God's bleſſing did ſecond his diligence and frugality. But the Pſalmiſt intends it of diligence in a ſeparate ſenſe; a diligent hand working alone, and then it is all in vain, and ſerves only to confirm the common Proverb, Early up, and never the nearer. Labour without God cannot proſper; and labour againſt God will not only deſtroy it ſelf, but the labourer to boot.

Now, that this is really ſo as the Doctrine ſtates it, I ſhall indeavour to make evident,

1. By a General Demonſtration of the whole Matter.
2. By a Particular Enumeration of the ordinary Cauſes and Means of all Succeſs; which are all dependent things upon the Lord's Bleſſing.

Firſt, That Succeſs in Buſineſs is not in the power of our Hand, but in the Hand of Providence, to diſpoſe it as he pleaſes, and to whom he pleaſes, appears by this: That Providence ſometimes blaſts and fruſtrates the moſt prudent, and well-laid deſigns of Men; and in the mean time, ſucceeds and proſpers more weak and improbable ones. What is more common in the Obſervation of all Ages, than this? One Man ſhall toil, as in the fire, for very vanity; run to and fro, plot and ſtudy all the ways in the World to get an eſtate, deny back and belly, and all will not do: He ſhall never be able to attain what he ſtrives after, but his deſigns ſhall be ſtill fruitleſs. Another hath neither a head to contrive, nor a hand to labour as the former hath; nor doth he torture his brains about it, but manages his affairs with leſs judgment, and ſpends fewer thoughts about it, and yet Succeſs follows it. It ſhall be caſt in upon ſome, who as they did not, ſo (conſidering the weak management of their buſineſs) had little rational incouragement to expect it; and flie from others, who induſtriouſly purſue it in the prudent choice and diligent uſe of all the proper means of attaining it. And this is not only an obſervation grounded upon our own experience, but confirmed by the wiſeſt of Men; Eccleſ. 9. 11. I returned, and ſaw under the Sun, that the race is not to the ſwift, nor the battel to the ſtrong; neither yet bread to the wiſe, nor yet riches to Men of underſtanding, nor yet favour to men of ſkill; but time and chance hapneth to them all. If two men run for a prize, Reaſon gives the prize to the ſwifteſt; if two Armies join battel, Reaſon gives the victory to the ſtrongeſt; if two men undertake a deſign to get Wealth, Reaſon gives the Riches to the wiſeſt; yea, but Providence ſometimes diſpoſes it quite contrary to the verdict of Reaſon, and the Prize is given to the ſloweſt, the Victory to the weakeſt, the Eſtate to the more ſhallow capacity: So that theſe events ſeem to fall out rather caſually, than anſwerably to the means imployed about them. And who that obſerves this, can doubt but it is the Hand of God's Providence, and not our diligence, that diſpoſes the iſſues of theſe things? For why doth God ſo often ſtep out of the ordinary way, and croſs his hands, as old Iſrael did, laying the right hand upon the younger, and the left upon the elder; I mean, give Succeſs to the weak, and diſappointment to the ſtrong, but to convince us of this great truth which I here bring it to confirm? And becauſe men are ſo apt to ſacrifice to their own Prudence, and diſown Providence, therefore it ſometimes makes the caſe much plainer than ſo: It denies riches to the induſtrious, that live for no other end but to get them, and caſts them in upon thoſe that ſeek them not at all, and indeed are ſcarcely competent for buſineſs. Ariſtides, one of the wiſeſt Men of his age, was yet ſtill ſo poor, that Plutarch ſaid, it brought a ſlur upon Juſtice it ſelf, as if ſhe were not able to maintain her Followers. Socrates, one of the prime Grecian Sages, was ſo exceeding poor, that Apuleius could not but note, That Poverty was become an Inmate with Philoſophy; when in the mean time, the empty, ſhallow, and fooliſh, ſhall come up with it, and overtake it without any pains at all, which others proſecute in the moſt rational courſe all their life, and all to no purpoſe. Thus it is noted of Pope Clement the Fifth, None more rich, none more fooliſh. And this is the ground of that Proverb, Fortuna favet fatuos; Fortune favours fools. Though the Author of that Proverb, in nicknaming Providence, ſhewed as little Wiſdom as he that is the Subject of it.

Paupertas eſt Philoſophiæ Vernacula.

Epitom. Hiſt. Gallic.

By all which, this point is in the general made good; it is not Induſtry, but Providence, that directs and commands the Succeſs of Buſineſs: It being much in the attaining of Riches, as the Apoſtle ſaith it is in the obtaining of Righteouſneſs: The Gentiles which followed not after Righteouſneſs have attained to Righteouſneſs; but Iſrael which followed after the Law of Righteouſneſs, hath not attained to the Law of Righteouſneſs, Rom. 9. 30, 31. So it is here, for the vindication of the honour of Providence, which men would ſcarcely own, if it did not thus baffle them ſometimes: They that follow the World, cannot attain it; and they attain it, that follow it not; that all men may ſee their good is not in their own hand; and leſt man who is not only a covetous Creature, and would ingroſs all to himſelf, but as proud as covetous, ſhould aſcribe all to himſelf. But this will farther appear,

Secondly, By a particular enumeration of the ordinary Cauſes and Means of all Succeſs in buſineſs, which are all dependent things upon a higher Cauſe.

Now, if we proceed upon a rational account, we ſhall find five things required to the ſucceſs of our affairs; and that I may ſpeak to your capacity, I will inſtance in that affair of Merchandizing, in which you are imployed, as the Hands that execute what the Heads of your Merchants contrive; and will ſhew you, that neither their wiſdom in contriving, nor your skill and induſtry in managing their deſigns, can proſper without the leave and bleſſing of Divine Providence. Let us therefore conſider what is neceſſary to the raiſing of an Eſtate in that way of imployment; and you will find that in a rational and ordinary way, Succeſs cannot be expected, unleſs

1. The deſigns and projects be prudently laid, and moulded with much conſideration and foreſight. An error here is like an error in the firſt concoction, which is not to be rectified afterwards. The wiſdom of the prudent (ſaith Solomon) is to underſtand his way; that is, to underſtand and throughly to conſider the particular deſign and buſineſs in which he is to ingage. Raſhneſs and inconſiderateneſs here hath been the ruin of many thouſand enterpriſes. And if a deſign be never ſo well laid, yet

2. No ſucceſs in buſineſs can be rationally expected, except there be an election of proper Inſtruments to manage it. The beſt laid Deſign in the World may be ſpoiled by an ill management. If the perſons imployed, be either uncapable or unfaithful, what but trouble and diſappointment can be expected? He that ſendeth a meſſage (ſaith Solomon) by the hands of a fool, cutteth off the legs, and drinketh damage. It is as if a man ſhould ſend him on his buſineſs that hath no legs to go (i. e.) one that is incompetent for the buſineſs he is imployed about. All that a man ſhall reap from ſuch a deſign, is damage. And if the Inſtrument imployed be never ſo capable, yet if he be not alſo faithful to the Truſt committed to him, all is loſt: And ſuch is the depth of deceit in the heart of man, that few or none can be ſecured againſt it. Solomon was the wiſeſt of men, and yet fatally miſcarried in this matter. He ſeeing the young Man (Jeroboam) that he was a mighty man of valor, and that he was induſtrious, made him Ruler over all the charge of the houſe of Joſeph, 1 King. 11. 28. And this was the Man that rent the Kingdom from his Son, even ten Tribes from the Houſe of David. And yet

3. Let Deſigns be projected with the greateſt prudence, and committed to the management of the fitteſt inſtruments; all is nothing as to Succeſs, without the concurrence of Health, Strength, favorable Winds, ſecurity from the hands of Enemies, and perils of the Deep. If any of theſe be wanting, the deſign miſcarries, and all our projects fail. How often are hopeful and thriving Undertakings fruſtrated by the failure of any one of theſe perquiſits? Go to now ye that ſay, To day or to morrow we will go unto ſuch a City, and remain there a year, and buy and ſell, and get gain; whereas ye know not what ſhall be on the morrow: for what is your life? it is even a vapor that appeares for a little while, and then vaniſheth away, Jam. 4. 13, 14. How ſoon are the purpoſes of mens hearts broken off, and their Thoughts periſh in one day? They think to ſend or go to ſuch a place, and there inrich themſelves, and return proſperous; but ſometimes Death, ſometimes Captivity, ſometimes croſs Winds daſh all their hopes.

4. Proper Seaſons muſt be nickt, and hit, elſe all ſucceſs and expectation of increaſe is loſt. There is (ſaith Solomon) a ſeaſon for every thing, and a time to every purpoſe under the Sun, Eccleſ. 3. 1. This being taken, gives facility and ſpeedy diſpatch to a Buſineſs; and therefore he gives this reaſon, why Man miſcarries ſo frequently, and is diſappointed in his enterpriſes, becauſe he knows not the time. Eccleſ. 9. 11. He comes (as one ſaith) when the Bird is flown. It is a wiſe and weighty Proverb with the Greeks, That there is much time in a ſhort opportunity: That is, a man hitting the ſeaſon of a buſineſs, may do more in a day, than loſing it, he may be able to do in a year. This is of a ſpecial conſideration in all Humane Affairs, and is the very Hinge upon which Succeſs turns: So that to come before, is to pluck Apples before they are ripe, and to come after it, is to ſeek them when they are faln and periſhed.

5. Laſtly, In getting Wealth, the Leaks in our Eſtates muſt be ſtopped; elſe we do but put it into a Bag with Holes, as the Prophet's phraſe is in Hag. 1. 6. If a man loſe as much one way, as he gets another, there can be no increaſe. Hence it is, that many are kept low and poor all their days: If one deſign proſpers, yet another miſcarries; or, if all ſucceed well abroad, yet there is a ſecret conſumption of it at home, by Prodigality, Riot, Luxury, or a ſecret Curſe upon it, which the Scripture calls God's blowing upon it, Hag. 1. 9. If therefore by any of theſe ways, our gains moulder away, we do but diſquiet our ſelves in vain, and labour in the fire for very vanity. Thus you ſee what things are requiſit to the advancement of an Eſtate, upon a prudential account.

Now let us particularly obſerve, what a dependence here is upon Providence in all theſe things; and then it will be clear that our Good is not in our hand, nor Succeſs at our beck, but it is the Lord that gives us power to get Wealth. For,

As to the moulding and projecting of a Deſign, we may ſay, both of the prudent Merchant and ingenious Sea-man, what the Prophet doth of the Husbandman, Iſa 28. 16. It is his God that inſtructs him to diſcretion, and teacheth him: There is indeed a Spirit in Man, But it is the inſpiration of the Almighty that giveth underſtanding, Job 32. 8. The Faculty is Man's, but the Light of Wiſdom, whether natural or ſpiritual, is God's: And the Natural Faculty is of it ſelf no more capable of directing us in our Affairs without his teaching, than the Dial is to inform us of hours without the Suns ſhining upon it. And becauſe Men are ſo dull in apprehending, and backward in acknowledging it, but will lean to their own underſtandings; thence it is, that prudent Deſigns are ſo often blaſted, and weaker ones ſucceeded.

And no leſs doth Providence manifeſt it ſelf in directing to, and proſpering the means and inſtruments imployed in our buſineſs. It is of the Lord, that they prove ingenious, active and faithful Servants to us; that your Factors abroad, prove not Malefactors to you; that every deſign is not ruined by the Negligence, Ignorance, or Treachery of them that manage it. If God qualifie Men to be fit inſtruments to ſerve you, and then providentially direct you to them, his Hand is thankfully to be owned in both. It was no ſmall Mercy to Abraham, that he had ſo diſcreet, pious, and faithful a Servant to manage even his weightieſt Affairs, ſo prudently and proſperouſly for him. Laban, Pharaoh, and Jethro, never proſpered, as when Jacob, Joſeph, and Moſes, had the charge of their buſineſs. Laban ingenuouſly acknowledged, That he had learned by experience, the Lord hath bleſſed him for Jacob's ſake, Gen. 30. 27. A Heathen you ſee is more ingenuous in owning the Mercy of God to him in this caſe, than many profeſſed Chriſtians are, who ſacrifice all to their own Net, and burn Incenſe to their Drag, (i. e.) idolize the means and inſtruments of their Proſperity, and ſee nothing of God in it.

And then as to the preſervation of thoſe that go down into the Sea, to do our buſineſs in the great Waters; who can but acknowledg this to be the peculiar Work of God? Doth not daily experience ſhew how often poor Sea-men are cut off in the proſecution of our deſigns? Sometimes by ſickneſs, ſometimes by ſtorms, and ſometimes by Enemies, to whom they become a prey. If they eſcape all theſe, yet how often do they lie Windbound, or hindered by croſs accidents, till the proper Seaſon be over, and the deſign loſt? Certainly, if Providence ſhall ſo far favor men, as to prevent all theſe, to command Winds fit for their purpoſe, reſtrain Enemies, preſerve Life, and carry them ſafely and ſeaſonably to their Ports, it deſerves a thankful acknowledgment; and thoſe that do not acknowledg Providence, do diſoblige it.

Laſtly, Who is it that ſtops the Leaks in your Eſtates, prevents the waſting of your Subſtance, and ſecures to you what you poſſeſs? Is it not the Lord? How many fair Eſtates moulder away inſenſibly, and come to nothing? Certainly, as there is a ſecret Bleſſing in ſome Families, ſo that themſelves can ſcarce give any account how they are provided for; ſo there is a ſecret blaſt and conſumption upon others, which brings Poverty upon them like an armed man. And this is the true ſenſe of that Scrtpture, Hag. 1. 6. Ye have ſown much, and bring in little: Ye eat, but ye have not enough: Ye drink, but are not filled with drink: Ye clothe you, but are not warm: And he that earneth wages, earneth wages to put it into a Bag with holes; or, as in the Hebrew, a Bag pierced, or bored through; what goes in at one end, goes out at another, and ſo all labour is loſt; nothing ſtays with them to do them good. So that it is an undeniable truth, That Proſperity and Succeſs is not to be aſcribed to our Abilities, but to the Bleſſing of God upon our lawful Endeavours.

1. Inference. And if ſo, how are they juſtly reprovable, that wholly depend upon means in the neglect of Providence; that never eye God, or acknowledg him in any of their ways! This is a very great evil, and highly provoking to the Lord: It is the fruit and diſcovery of the Natural Atheiſm of the Hearts of Men. How confident are Men of Succeſs and Proſperity, when ſecond Cauſes ly fair for it, and ſmile upon them! And on the contrary, how dejected and heartleſs, when they ſeem to ly croſs to their hopes! O how few conſider and believe that great truth, Eccleſ. 9. 1. That the righteous, and the wiſe, and their works are in the hand of God. To be in the hand of God, noteth both their ſubjection to his Power, and to his directive Providence. Whether your works be in your hand, or put out of your hand, they always are in God's hand, to proſper or fruſtrate them at his pleaſure.

Fooliſh man decreeth Events, without the leave of Providence; as if he were abſolute Lord of his own Actions, and their Succeſs. Indeed you may then ſpeak of Succeſs, when you have asked God's leave. Job 22.28. Acquaint thy ſelf with God, then ſhalt thou decree a thing, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed. But your confidence in the means, whilſt God is neglected, lected, will ſurely be followed either with a Diſappointment or a Curſe. For what is this, but to labour without God, yea, to labour againſt God? for ſo do all they, that give the Glory of God to the Creature, that ſet the inſtrumental and ſubordinate in the place of the principal efficient Cauſe. It is juſt with God to deny you your comfort in thoſe things, wherein you rob him of his Glory.

2. Inference. How vain and unreaſonable are the proud boaſts of Men, in the midſt of their Succeſſes and Proſperity? If God be the ſole Author of it, and it is not your power, nor the might of your hand, that hath gotten you this Wealth; why do you glory in it, as if it were the effect and fruit of your own Prudence and Induſtry? How ſoon do the Spirits of Men riſe with their Eſtates? How haughtily do they look? How proudly do they ſpeak? What a ſenſible change of Temper doth a ſmall change of the Condition work? It is an exceding hard thing to keep down the Heart, when Providence exalteth a Man's Eſtate. Magnæ fœlicitatis eſt, a fœlicitate non vinci, ſaith Auſtin. It is a great Felicity, not to be overcome by Felicity. That Man is ſurely rich in Grace, whoſe Graces ſuffer no eclipſe by his Riches. It is as hard to be proſperous and humble, as to be afflicted and chearful. But to keep down thy heart in times of Succeſs and Proſperity, I will offer thee, Reader, a few humbling Conſiderations about this Matter.

1. And the firſt is this, Though Providence do ſucceed and proſper thy Earthly deſigns, yet this is no Argument at all of the love of God to thy Soul: Thou mayeſt be the object of his Hatred and Wrath for all this. No Man knows either love or hatred by all that is before him, Eccleſ. 9. 1. How weak an evidence for Heaven muſt that be, which millions now in Hell have had in a greater meaſure than you have? The leaſt dram of Grace is a better pledg of Happineſs, than the greateſt Sum of Gold and Silver that ever lay in any Man's Treaſury. Externals diſtinguiſh not Internals; you cannot ſo much as gueſs what a Man's Spiritual eſtate is, by the view of his Temporal. Iſhmael was a great Man, the Head of a Princely Family, but excluded from the Covenant, and all its Spiritual Bleſſings, Gen. 17. 20, 21. He that reads the 73 Pſalm, and Job 21. will plainly ſee how wretched a caſe that Man is in, who hath no better evidence for the Love of God, than this amounts to.

2. Be not proud of outward Proſperity and Succeſs; for Providences are very changeable in theſe things; yea, it daily rings the Changes all the World over. Many a greater Eſtate than yours, and every way as well, yea, far better ſecured to the eye of Reaſon, hath he ſcattered in a moment. It is the ſaying of a Philoſopher, ſpeaking of the Eſtates of Merchants and Sea-men, Non amo fœlicitatem e funibus pendentem; I like not that Happineſs that hangs upon Ropes. I need not here cite Hiſtories to confirm this Truth: There is none of you but can abundantly confirm it your ſelves, if you will but recollect thoſe inſtances and examples which have faln within your time and remembrance. It is a poor happineſs that may leave a Man more miſerable to morrow, than he that never arrived to what you have, can be.

3. Pride not your ſelves in your Succeſs; for as Providences are very changeable, ſo the change ſeems very nigh to you, when your Heart is thus lifted up, eſpecially if you be ſuch, to whoſe eternal Happineſs God hath any ſpecial regard. To be ſure, he will pull down that proud heart, and quickly order Humbling Providences to that end: He looketh upon every one that is proud, to abaſe him, Job 40. 11. The Heart of good Hezekiah was tickled with vain glory, and he muſt needs ſhew the King of Babylon's ſervants all his treaſures, and precious things; and at that very time came the Prophet Iſaiah to him with a ſad meſſage from the Lord, That all theſe Treaſures in which he had gloried muſt be carried to Babylon, Iſa. 39. If you hope comfortably to enjoy the good of Providence, provoke it not by ſuch vain oſtentations. It is an ingenious note even of a Heathen,

Tu quoque fac timeas, & quæ tibi læta videntur,
Dum loqueris, fieri triſtia poſſe, puta.

Ovid.

Excercise Fear in Proſperity, and think with thy ſelf, when thy heart is moſt affected with it; that whilſt the boaſt is in thy Lips, the ſcene may alter, and thy Happineſs be turned into Sorrow. Whilſt that proud boaſt was in the mouth of Nebuchadnezzar, the voice from Heaven told him, His Kingdom was departed from him, Dan. 4. 30, 31. Pride ſhews that Proſperity which feeds it, to be at its Vertical Point.

3. Inference. If Succeſs in Buſineſs be from the Lord, then certainly the true way to Proſperity is to commend our Affairs to God by Prayer. He takes the true way to thrive, that ingages God's Bleſſing upon his indeavors. Commit thy way unto the Lord, truſt alſo in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſs, Pſal. 37. 4. It is a vile thing for any Man to grudg that time that is ſpent in Prayer, as ſo much time loſt in his buſineſs. But having preſſed this point before, I ſhall add no more here.

4. Inference. Doth all Succeſs and Proſperity depend upon and come from God? Then let it be faithfully imployed to his Glory. If it be of him, and through him, then it's all the reaſon in the World it ſhould be to him, Rom. 11. 36. You do but give him of his own, as David ſpeaks. All this ſtore cometh of thine hand, and is thine own, 1 Chron. 29. 16. He never intended your Eſtates for the gratifying of your Luſts, but to give you a larger capacity thereby of honouring him in the uſe of them. O conſider, when God hath proſpered your Eſtates abroad, and you return ſucceſsfully home, now you have an opportunity of honouring God, and evidencing your ſenſe of his goodneſs to you, by relieving of the poor with a liberal and chearful Charity; by incouraging the Goſpel, and making them partakers of your good things, who labour for your Souls, and diſpenſe better things to you than you can return to them. I would not here be miſ-interpreted, as tho I pleaded my own Intereſt, under a pretence of pleading God's. No, God forbid, I am well ſatisfied with a capacity of doing any good, how little ſoever I receive; nor can many of you reap the fruit of my labours. But I would not leave you ignorant, or regardleſs of ſo great and plain a duty as this is. You are bound to this retribution by a plain and poſitive Precept; Gal. 6. 6. Let him that is taught in the Word, communicate to him that teacheth in all good things. You are obliged to do it, proportionably to the ſucceſs God gives you in your Trade, 1 Cor. 16. 2. And matter, 1 Cor. 9. 11. but the diſcharge of a plain and neceſſary duty.

5. Inference. Let not your hearts be ſatisfied with all the Succeſs and Increaſe in the World, except your Souls thrive as well as your Bodies, and your Eternal concerns proſper as well as your Temporal. It was a pious wiſh of St. John for Gaius his Hoſt, That he might proſper and be in health, even as his Soul proſpered, d3 Epiſt. Joh. Verſ. 2. But it were to be wiſhed, that your Souls did but proſper, as your Bodies and Eſtates do. It is a poor comfort to have an increaſing Eſtate, and a dead or declining Soul. When a conſiderable Preſent was ſent to Luther, he earneſtly proteſted, God ſhould not put him off with thoſe things. O Friends I beſeech you take not up in theſe Injoyments.

6. Inference. Laſtly, If God be the Author of all your Succeſs, how prodigious an evil is it, to make your Proſperity an inſtrument of diſhonouring him that gave it, to abuſe the Eſtates Providence gives you, to rioting and drunkenneſs? Do you thus requite the Lord? Is this the thanks you give him for all his care over you, and kindneſs to you? You would never be able to bear that from another, which God bears from you. If God do you good, O do not return him evil for it, when you have ſo done, not to think it any great

SERMON. V.

Luke V. 5.

Maſter, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing.

THeſe words are the Reply made by Peter unto Chriſt, who in the former Verſe had commanded him to Lanch out into the Deep, and let down the Nets for a Draught. Peter is diſcouraged as to any farther attempt at that time; having already taken ſo much pains to ſo little purpoſe: We have (ſaith he) toiled all night, and taken nothing. In which Reply we note theſe two things.

1. The great pains he and his Company had taken in their honeſt Calling and Imployment, to get a livelihood. We have toiled all night. No calling more lawful, no diligence in an honeſt imployment could be greater; not only to ſpend the night, when other Labourers take their reſt, in watching, but in toiling. The word κοπιάσαντες comes from a Verb that ſignifies waſting, tiring, ſpending, labour. Here was great diligence, even to the wearying and waſting of their Spirits. They toiled, and that all the night.

κοπιάω, quando quis conſumpto labore, feſſus ſuccumbit.

2. The unſucceſsfulneſs & fruitleſneſs of their Labours, they caught nothing. Tho their deſign was honeſt, and their induſtry great, yet it ſucceeded not according to their deſires and expectations: It proved but loſt labour, and pains to no purpoſe. Hence the Note will be,

Doct. That God ſometimes fruſtrates and blaſts the moſt diligent Labours of Men, in their juſt and lawful Callings.

What imployment more honeſt or laborious than that of the Husbandman, who eats his Bread in the ſweat of his brows, and ſuſtains all that ſpending toil and labour by an expectation of Fruit in the Seaſon? And yet ſometimes it ſo falls out, that after all his labours and hopes, he reaps nothing but ſhame and diſappointment. Joel 1. 11. Be ye aſhamed, O ye Husbandmen; howl O ye Vine-dreſſers for the Wheat, and for the Barly, becauſe the harveſt of the Field is periſhed.

The imployment of the Mariner is as lawful as it is beneficial. What he gets is gotten with eminent hazard of Life and Liberty, as well as Watchings and Labours; and yet it ſo falls out ſometimes, that they labour but for the wind, and ſpend their ſtrength for very vanity: God cuts off their expectations and lives together. There is a time when they return rich and proſperous; and a time, when they either return empty, or return no more. So it was with Tyre, that renowned Mart and famous Empory; the flouriſhing and fall of whoſe Trade you have in Ezek. 27. 33, 34. When thy Wares went forth out of the Seas, thou filledſt many people, thou didſt inrich the Kings of the Earth with the multitude of thy riches, and of thy merchandiſe. Here was their Proſperity and Succeſs: But will this day always laſt? Shall the Sun of their proſperity never ſet? No, no, the change was at hand; for in the next Verſe the ſcene alters, In the day when thou ſhalt be broken by the Seas, in the depths of the Waters, thy merchandiſe, and all thy company in the midſt of thee ſhall fall.

Now if we ſearch into the Grounds and Reaſons of theſe Diſappointments by the hand of Providence, we ſhall find them reducible to a threefold Cauſe and Reaſon.

1. The ſoveraign pleaſure of God ſo diſpoſes it.
2. The good of the People of God requires it.
3. The manifold ſins of Men in their Callings, provoke it.

Firſt, The ſoveraign pleaſure of God ſo diſpoſes it. He is the Rector of the Univerſe, and as ſuch will ſtill aſſert his Dominion. It is his pleaſure to eſtabliſh this order in the World, to exalt ſome and depreſs others; to ſet ſome above, and others below: All muſt not be rich and great, but ſome muſt be poor and low, and to theſe ends Providences are ſuted: On ſome it ſmiles, on others it frowns. 1 Sam. 2. 7. The Lord maketh poor, and maketh rich; he bringeth low, and lifteth up. And certainly there is much of Divine Wiſdom ſhining forth in this ordination and diſpoſition of perſons, and their conditions. If Providence had alike proſpered every Man's deſigns, and ſet them upon a Level, there had been no occaſion to exerciſe the rich Man's Charity, or the poor Man's Patience. Nay, without frequent Diſappointments, it ſelf would ſcarcely be owned in Succeſſes, nor thoſe Succeſſes be half ſo ſweet to them that receive them, as now they are. The very Beauty of Providence conſiſts much in theſe various and contrary effects: So that with reſpect to the infinite Wiſdom which governs the World, it is neceſſary ſome ſhould be croſſed, and others proſpered in their deſigns.

Secondly, And if we conſider the gracious ends and deſigns of God towards his own people, it appears needful, that all of them, in ſome things, and many of them in moſt things (relating to their outward condition in this World) ſhould be fruſtrated in their expectations and contrivements. For, if all things here ſhould ſucceed according to their wiſh, and a conſtant tide of Proſperity ſhould attend them;

1. How ſoon would Senſuality and Earthlineſs invade their hearts and affections? Much proſperity like the pouring in of much Wine intoxicates, and overcomes our weak heads and hearts. Earthly as well as Heavenly objects have a transforming efficacy in them. There cannot but be much danger in thoſe Earthly things that give or promiſe us much delight. Can a Chriſtian keep his heart as looſe from the ſmiling, as from the frowning World? We little think how deeply it inſinuates into our affections in the day of Proſperity; but when Adverſity comes, then we find it.

2. How ſoon would it eſtrange them from their God, and interrupt their communion with him? He is certainly a very mortified and heavenly Chriſtian, whoſe walk with God ſuffers no interruption by the multitude of Earthly affairs, eſpecially when they are proſperous. When Iſrael was ſetled in the midſt of the riches and delights of Canaan, then ſay they, (even to their Benefactor, the Author of all their Proſperity) We are Lords, we will come no more to thee, Jer. 2. 31. Or, if it do not wholly interrupt their communion, yet it ſecretly deſtroys and waſtes the vigor, life, and ſweetneſs of it. So that Divine Wiſdom ſees it neceſſary to croſs and diſappoint them in the World, to prevent the miſchievous influences that Proſperity would have upon their duties. He had rather you ſhould miſs your deſired comforts in theſe things, than that he ſhould miſs that delightful fellowſhip with you, which he ſo deſires.

3. How loth ſhould we be to leave this, if conſtant Succeſs and Proſperity ſhould follow our affairs and deſigns here? We ſee that notwithſtanding all the cares, fears, ſorrows, croſſes, wants, and diſappointments we meet with from year to year, and from day to day; yet we are apt to hug the World in our Boſoms. As bitter as it is, we court it, admire it, and zealouſly proſecute it. We cling to it, and are loth to leave it, tho we have little reſt or comfort in it. What would we do then, if it ſhould anſwer our expectations and deſires? If we graſp with pleaſure, a Thorn that pierces and wounds us; what would we do, if it were a Roſe that had nothing but delight and pleaſure in it?

Thirdly, And as Diſappointments fall out as the Effects of Soveraign pleaſure, and are ordered as preventive means of much miſchief, which Proſperity would occaſion to the People of God; ſo it comes as a righteous retribution and puniſhment of the many evils that are committed in our trading and dealings with Men. It is a hard thing to have much buſineſs paſs through our hands, and no iniquity cleave to them, and defile them. If God be provoked by our iniquities againſt us, wonder not, that things go croſs to our deſires and hopes. God may ſuffer ſome Men to proſper in their wickedneſs, and others to miſcarry in their juſt and righteous enterpriſes; but ordinarily we find, that crying ſins are remarkably puniſhed ſooner or later with viſible judgments. So that if others do not, yet we our ſelves may obſerve the Relation that ſuch a Judgment bears to ſuch a Sin.

And from among many, I will here ſelect theſe following evils which have deſtroyed the Eſtates and Hopes of many.

(1.) Irreligious and Atheiſtical neglect and contempt of God and his Worſhip, eſpecially in thoſe that have been inlightned, and made profeſſion of Religion. This was the ſin which brought that blaſting judgment upon the eſtates and labours of the Jews, as the Prophet Haggai tells them, Chap. 1. Verſ. 2, 4, 6, 9. compared; They neglected the Houſe of God, i. e. were careleſs and regardleſs of his Worſhip, and in the mean time were wholly intent upon their own houſes and intereſts; as he tells them in Verſ 2, 4. And what was the iſſue of this? Why, ruin to all their Earthly comforts and deſigns; ſo he tells them, Verſ. 6, 9. Ye have ſowen much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm: And he that earneth wages, doth it to put it into a bag with holes. Ye looked for much, and lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it. Why, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts? Becauſe of mine houſe that is waſte, and ye turn every Man unto his own houſe. Here are great and manifold Diſappointments of their hopes, a curſe, a blaſt upon all they took in hand; and the procuring cauſe of all this, was their eager proſecution of the World, in a careleſs diſregard of God, and his Service.

(2.) Injuſtice and Fraud is a blaſting ſin. A little unjuſt gain mingled with a great eſtate, will conſume it like a Moth. The Spirit of God hath uſed a very lively ſimilitude to repreſent to us the miſchievous effects of this ſin upon all Humane diligence and induſtry; Jer. 17. 11. As the Partridg ſitteth upon Eggs and hatcheth them not; ſo he that getteth riches, and not by right, ſhall leave them in the midſt of his days, and at his end ſhall be a fool.

Unjuſt gain, how long ſoever men ſit brooding upon it, ſhall after all their ſedulity and expectation, turn to no other account than a Fowls ſitting upon a Neſt of addle-eggs uſes to do: If ſhe ſit till ſhe have pined away her ſelf to death, nothing is produced.

You think you conſult the intereſt of your Families herein; but the Lord tells you, That you conſult ſhame to your houſes, Hab. 2. 10. This is not the way to Feather, but to Fire your Neſt. A quiet Conſcience is infinitely better than a full Purſe. One Diſh of wholeſom, though coarſer food, is better than an hundred delicate, but poiſoned diſhes. If a man have eaten the beſt food in the world, and afterwards ſips but a little poiſon, he loſeth not only the benefit and comfort of that which was good, but his life or health to boot. It may be you have gotten much honeſtly, what pity is it all this ſhould be deſtroyed for the ſake of a little gotten diſhoneſtly? This is the reaſon why ſome Men cannot proſper.

(3.) Oppreſſion is a blaſting ſin to Mens Eſtates and Imployments. It is a crying ſin in the ears of the Lord, and ordinarily intails a Viſible curſe upon Mens Eſtates. This like a Moth will ſuddenly fret and conſume the greateſt Eſtate. Jam. 5. 2, 4. Your riches are corrupted, and your Garments Moth-eaten: (i. e.) The ſecret of God waſtes and deſtroys what you get. And what was the cauſe? he tells us, Verſ. 4. Behold, the hire of the laborers, that have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped, are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbath.

The oppreſſion of poor Laborers doth more miſchief to the oppreſſors, than it doth to them that are oppreſſed. It is noted by one upon this Scripture, that it is twice repeated in this Text, Which have reaped your fields, and then again, The cry of them which have reaped; and the reaſon is, becauſe it is their life, and ſo an act of the greateſt unmercifulneſs. And beſides, they are diſappointed of the ſolace of their Labors. Deut. 24. 14, 15. He hath ſet his heart upon it; (i. e.) He comforts himſelf in the toils and labors of the day, by reckoning upon his wages at the end of the day.

I wiſh thoſe that are Owners and Imployers of poor Sea-men may ſeaſonably conſider this evil. What a wo is denounced upon him, that uſeth his neighbours ſervice without wages! Jer. 22. 13. Or, that by crafty pretences defraud them of any part thereof, or by tireſom delays wear out their patience, and caſt them upon manifold ſufferings and inconveniences while they wait for it. God hath not only threatned to be a ſwift witneſs againſt thoſe that oppreſs the hireling in his wages, but hath ſtrictly forbidden the detaining of their wages. The Jews were commanded to make payment before the Sun ſet, Deut. 24. 14, 15. Levit. 19. 30. Be juſt in all your dealings and contracts, or never expect the Righteous God ſhould ſmile upon your undertakings.

Minus ſolvit, qui minus tempore ſolvit.

(4.) Falſhood and Lying is a Blaſting ſin to our Imployments: A ſin which tends to deſtroy all converſe, and diſband all civil Societies. And though by falſhood men may get ſome preſent advantages; yet hear what the Holy Ghoſt ſaith of Riches gotten this way: The getting of Riches by a lying Tongue, is a Vanity toſſed to and fro of them that ſeek death, Prov. 21. 6. Some trade in Lies, as much as in Wares; yea, they trade off their Wares with lies. And this proves a gainful Trade (as ſome men count gain) for the preſent; but in reality, it is the moſt unprofitable Trade that any man can drive. For it is but the toſſing of a vanity to and fro: A phraſe importing labor in vain, it profits nothing in the end; and as it profits nothing, ſo it hurts much. They ſeek profit intentionally, but death eventually; i. e. it will bring deſtruction and ruin, not only upon our Trades, but our Souls. The God of Truth will not long proſper the way of lying. One penny gotten by a laborious Hand, is better than great Treaſures gotten by a lying Tongue. Take heed you ſeek not Death, in ſeeking an Eſtate this way. It is a Sin deſtructive to Society; for there is no trade where there is no truſt, nor no truſt where there is no truth; and yet this curſed trade of Lying creeps into all trades, as if there were no living (as one ſpeaks) without lying: But ſure it is better for you to be loſers than lyers. He ſells a dear bargain indeed, that ſells his Conſcience with his Commodity.

(5.) Perjury or Falſe-ſwearing is a Blaſting Sin. That Man cannot proſper that lies under the guilt thereof. It is ſaid, Mal. 3. 5. That God will be a ſwift witneſs againſt the falſe ſwearer; i. e. It ſhall not be long before God by one remarkable ſtroke of Judgment or another witneſſeth againſt ſo great and horrid an evil. And again, Zach. 5. 4. the curſe, yea, the roll of curſes ſhall enter into the houſe of the falſe Swearer, and ſhall remain in the midſt of his houſe, and ſhall conſume it, with the timber thereof, and the ſtones thereof. This is a Sin that hath laid many Houſes waſte, even great and fair, without Inhabitant. The Ruins of many that were once flouriſhing and great men, are at this day left to be the laſting Monuments of God's righteous Judgments, and dreadful warnings to Poſterity.

And thus I have ſhewed you, what are thoſe common evils in Trade, which are the cauſes of thoſe Blaſts and Diſappointments upon it. It now remains that we apply it.

1. Inference. Doth God ſometimes diſappoint the moſt diligent labours of Men in their lawful Callings? Then this teacheth you Patience and Submiſſion under your Croſſes and Diſappointments; for it is the Lord that orders it to be ſo. Events are in his hand, and it is a Sin of great aggravation to fret and murmur at them, when they fall out croſs to your deſires and hopes. Behold is it not of the Lord of Hoſts, that the people ſhall labour in the very fire, and the people ſhall weary themſelves for very vanity? Hab. 2. 13.

To labour in the very fire, notes intenſe Labour, ſuch as exhauſts the very ſpirits of Men whilſt they are ſweltering and toiling at it; and yet all is to no purpoſe, they labour but for vanity: And whence is it, that ſuch vigorous indeavours are blaſted and miſcarry? Is it not of th Lord? And if it be of the Lord, Why do we fr and quarrel at his diſpoſals? Indeed many dar not openly and directly charge God, but ſeek t cover their Diſcontent at Providence, by a groundleſs quarrel with the Inſtruments, who it may be are chargeable with nothing; but that after they have done all they could, in the uſe of proper means, they did not alſo ſecure the Event. It is true, the Dominion of Providence doth not excuſe the negligence of Inſtruments; and in many caſes, theſe may be juſtly reproved, when Providence is duly honored and ſubmitted to: But when Men groundleſly quarrel with Inſtruments, becauſe they are croſſed in their expectations, the quarrel is commenced againſt God himſelf; and our diſcontents with Men, are but a covert for our diſcontents with God.

Now this is a ſore evil, a Sin of great and dreadful aggravations. To be given over (ſaith a grave Author) to a contradicting Spirit, to diſpute againſt any part of the Will of God, is one of the greateſt Plagues that a Man can be given up to. Who art thou that replieſt againſt God? Rom. 11. It may be thou haſt loſt an Eſtate, thy friends fail, thy hopes are faln; God hath blown upon all the projects that thy heart did fancy to it ſelf. Poſſibly in one day, the deſigns, labours, and hopes of many years are deſtroyed: Well, be it ſo, yet repine not againſt the Lord. Conſider, he is the Soveraign and only Lord, who may do whatever he pleaſeth to do, without giving thee any account of his matters. Who can ſay to him, What doſt thou? Beſide, if thou be one that God delights in, even theſe Diſappointments are to be numbred with thy beſt Mercies. Theſe things are permitted to periſh, that thou mayeſt not periſh for ever; and it ſhould trouble thee no more, than when thy Life is preſerved, by caſting out the wares and goods of the Ship. It is better that theſe periſh, than that thou ſhouldſt periſh: But if thou be one that haſt mingled Sin (eſpecially ſuch as were beforementioned) with thy Trade, and ſo haſt pulled down miſery upon thine own head, by provoking the Lord againſt thee; With what face canſt thou open thy mouth to complain gainſt him? Will you lay a train to blow up all our ſucceſs, and then fret againſt God, when ou ſee the iſſue? O how unreaſonable is this!

Maſter Strong of the will of God, P. 242.

But becauſe Diſappointments fall out ſo freuently, and it is ſo hard to bring our hearts to a uiet ſubmiſſion to the Will of God under them, will not diſmiſs this Point, until I have offered ou ſome proper and weighty Conſiderations, to ork your hearts into a calm and meek ſubmiſſin to the Will of God; and I ſhall account it a reat mercy, if they may prevail.

1. Conſideration. And in the firſt place, if thou e one that feareſt God, conſider, That Diſapointments in Earthly things fix no mark of Gods atred upon thee. He may love thee, and yet roſs thee: Ecclef. 9. 1, 2. No man knows either ve or hatred by all the things that are before him. ll things come alike to all; there is one event to the ghteous, and to the wicked. Yea, we often find cceſs and Proſperity following the Wicked, hileſt the Rod of God is upon the Tabernacles the Righteous. Theſe are the ungodly that proſper the World (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) whileſt in the ean time he was plagued all the day long, and aſtned every morning, Pſal. 73. 12, 14. Well en, if you have no other ground than this, you nnot infer the want of love, from the want of cceſs. A man may be proſpered in Wrath, d croſſed in Mercy

2. Conſideration. And what tho your projects, hopes, and expectations of inlarging your Eſtates, fail; yet you may live as happily and comfortably in the condition you are, (if God give you a heart ſutable to it) as if you had injoyed all that Succeſs you ſo fancied and deſired.

It is not the increaſe of an Eſtate, but the bleſſing of God upon a competency, that makes our condition comfortable to us. As the Eſtate inlarges, ſo doth the Heart. The Prophet Habakkuk ſpeaking of the Chaldean Prince, Hab. 2. 6. ſaith, He keeps not at home, he inlarges his deſire as Hell, and is as Death, and cannot be ſatisfied, but gathereth unto him all Nations, and heapeth unto him all People. And this is the nature of every Man's heart, to inlarge its deſire under the greateſt inlargements of Providence. Still the heart is projecting for ſome farther comfort and content, in ſome new acquiſition; when indeed, a Man is as near it in a lower condition, as in the higheſt exaltation.

It is ſtoried of Pyrrhus King of Epirus, that having inlarged his Dominions by the Conqueſt of Macedonia, he thirſted after Italy; and demanding the advice of Cineas his great Counſellour, he asked the King, What he meant to do when he had conquered Italy? Why then ſaid he, I mean to get Sicily, which is near, rich, and powerful. When you have gotten Sicily (ſaid Cineas) what then? Afric, ſaid the King, is not far off; and there be many goodly Kingdoms, which by my Fame, and the valour of my Soldiers I may ſubdue. Be it ſo, ſaid Cineas: When you have Afric, and all in it; what will you do then? Why then, ſaid the King, thou and I will be merry, and make good chear. Cineas replied, Sir, if this be the end you aim at, what need you venture your Kingdom, Perſon, and Honour, to purchaſe what you have already? Surely, Epirus and Macedonia are ſufficient to make you and me merry: And had you all the World, you could not be more merry than you may now be.

Reader, I adviſe thee, under all Diſappointments of thy expectations, to bleſs God for any comfortable injoyment thou haſt. If God give thee a ſmaller Eſtate, and a contented Heart; it is as well, yea' better, than if thou hadſt injoyed thy deſire. The Bee makes a ſweater meal upon two or three Flowers, than the Ox that hath ſo many Mountains to graze upon.

3. Conſideration. And what if by theſe Diſappointments, God be carrying on the great deſign of his eternal Love upon thy Soul? This may be the deſign of theſe Providences; and if ſo, ſure there is no cauſe for thy deſpondencies. There is a double aim of theſe Providences; ſometimes they are ſent to awaken and rouze the dull decayed habits of Grace, which under proſperous Providences fell aſleep, by the intermiſſion of acts, and remiſſion of wonted vigor and activity? And ſhould the Lord permit things to run on at this rate, what a deplorable caſe would this grow to? Let a man live (ſaith one) but two or three years without affliction, and he is almoſt good for nothing; he cannot pray, nor meditate, nor keep his heart fixed upon Spiritual things: But let God ſmite him in his Health, Child, or Eſtate; now he can find his Tongue and Affections again; now he awakes and falls to his duty in earneſt; now God hath twice as much honour from him as he had before. Now, ſaith God, this amendment pleaſeth me; this rod was well beſtowed: I have diſappointed him him to his great benefit and advantage. And thus God chides himſelf friends with his people again.

And ſometimes they prove the bleſſed occaſions to work Grace. If they be bound in fetters, and holden in cords of affliction, then he ſheweth them their works, and their tranſgreſſions that they have exceeded: He openeth alſo their ear to diſcipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity, Job 36. 8, 9, 10.

And if this be the fruit of it, you will bleſs God through eternity for theſe happy Diſappointments. Then theſe things periſhed, that thy Soul might not periſh.

4. Conſideration. Be patient under Diſappointments; for if you meekly ſubmit, and quietly wait upon God, he can quickly repair all that you have loſt, and reſtore it by other Providences double to you. Have you not heard after all Job's deprivations, and the fruſtrations of all his earthly hopes, and his admirable patience under all, what a gracious end the Lord made with him? And why may not you hope for ſuch a comfortable change of Providence towards you, if you carry it under Diſappointments as he did? Certainly, ſad Providences are near their change, when the heart is calmed in the Will of God, and corrected home to him.

5. Conſideration. And why ſhould it ſeem ſo hard, and grievous to you, for God to diſappoint your hopes, and purpoſes, when you cannot but know, that you have diſappointed his expectations from you ſo often, and that in greater and better things than theſe?

He hath looked for fruit (as it is Iſai. 5. 4.) for obedience, reformation, and renewed care of duty from you many times; he promiſed himſelf, and made account of a good return of his afflictions and mercies, and you promiſed him as much, and yet have failed his expectation: And is it ſtrange that you ſhould fail of your hopes, who have failed God ſo often?

O then ſee that you be quiet in the Will of God; fret not at the defeating of your hopes: Wreak not your diſcontent upon innocent inſtruments; but look to the juſt, holy, and good Will of God in all things. The Wife is ſometimes angry with the Servant for what he hath done, till he tell her that it was his Maſter's order, and then ſhe is quiet.

Is a Ship miſcarried, a Voyage loſt, a Relation dead, an Eſtate gone, a Friend carried into captivity, whoſe return was expected with ſo much comfort? Why, if it be ſo, it is the Lord hath done it, and be thou ſilent before him. Your repining will not make it better; ſin is no proper cure for affliction. A quiet ſubmiſſive ſpirit is pleaſing to God, and profitable for you.

2. Inference. Doth God ſometimes diſappoint the expectations of Men in their imployments? then never ſet your hearts immoderately upon Earthly things, nor raiſe up to your ſelves too great expectations from theſe things. The ſtronger your expectations, the heavier God's Diſappointments will be.

There is a double evil in over-reckoning our ſelves, and over-acting our confidence about worldly things: It provokes God to diſappoint us, and then makes the Diſappointment much more grievous when it comes.

It provokes a Diſappointment, eſpecially to the Godly. The Lord is jealous of their affections, and will not indure that any thing ſhould be a corrival or competitor with him for their Hearts: Yea, it is ſo uſual with God to daſh, and remove whatever ingroſſes too much of the heart, that a gracious Soul cannot but reckon that comfort in great danger to be loſt, which he finds to be overloved.

If David ſet his heart upon Abſolom, God will not only ſmite him, but ſmite David by him, and make him firſt the inſtrument of his ſorrow, and then the object of it. Jonah did but take a little too much comfort in his Gourd, and the next news we hear, was, That God prepared a Worm to ſmite it, and cauſe it to wither away.

And when your inordinate hopes are croſt, (as it is very probable they will be) how will your ſorrows be aggravated in proportion to them! Thoſe things that ſeemed to promiſe us moſt comfort, are the things that give us moſt ſorrow. Strong affections make ſtrong afflictions. Our ſorrows uſually riſe from what was our hope, and our comforts from that which was leaſt regarded.

3. Inference. If it be ſo, then labour to make ſure things eternal, leſt you be eternally diſappointed there alſo. O what a ſad caſe is that Man in, whoſe expectations fail from both Worlds! If your hopes from this World fail; yet you may bear it comfortably, if you fail not in your better hopes: But if this fail too, you are of all men the moſt miſerable. You know by experience, how ſad it is to have your hopes cut off in theſe ſmaller concerns; to go forth in expectation of a profitable voyage, and to return in a worſe caſe than you went out: It may be you thought to get an eſtate, but the iſſue is, to loſe that little you had. You thought to go to ſuch a place, and there meet with a good market, and poſſibly your ſelves may be carried as ſlaves to be ſold in the market. Theſe Diſappointments are very ſad and cutting things, but nothing to an Eternal Diſappointment in your great concern.

For a Man to hope he is in Chriſt, and a pardoned ſtate, and at laſt find himſelf deceived, and that all the ſins of his nature, heart, and practice, lie upon him: To hope for admiſſion into Heaven, when he is turned out of this World by death, and find the door ſhut againſt him; to cry with thoſe poor diſappointed wretches, Matth. 7. 22. Lord, Lord, open to us; and receive ſuch an unexpected return from Chriſt, as they did, Depart from me, I know you not: Lord, how intolerable is ſuch a defeat of hope as this! O, who can think of it without horror!

The things about which your expectations are fruſtrated in this World, are ſmall things; you may be happy in the want of them: But the fruſtration of your hopes from the World to come, is in things of infinite weight. Theſe Diſappointments are but for a little while; but this will be for ever. O therefore be provoked, even by theſe things, to a diligent and ſeaſonable prevention of a far greater miſery.

Since theſe things cannot be ſecured, labour to ſecure thoſe things that may. O that you were but as full of thoughts, cares, and fears for Heaven, as you are for the World! You have ſpent many thouſand thoughts about theſe things to no purpoſe. All your thoughts about them are come to nothing; but had they been ſpent for your Souls, to what a comfortable account wou they now have turned? Friends, I beſeech you make ſure for eternity, and let theſe croſſes, an loſſes in the World, be the happy occaſions to a waken you to a ſerious diligence for your everlaſting intereſts. Then you are no loſers by your loſſes; nay, you will have cauſe to call them proſperous Diſappointments, and gainful Loſſes to you.

4. Inference. Then as you would not have the works and labours of your hands blaſted, beware of thoſe ſins that provoke God to blow upon them. Think not that injuſtice, oppreſſion, deceit, and perjury, ſhall ever profit you. God hath curſed all the ways of ſin, and you cannot proſper in them. Above all, beware of Atheiſm and Irreligion: God will not own them, that diſown him, and ſlight his Worſhip. I doubt your prophanation of the Lords day, by drunkenneſs, idleneſs, and worldly imployments, is not the leaſt cauſe of thoſe diſappointments and loſſes that have befaln you: The firſt day of the week, like the firſt fruits of the Jews Harveſts, might ſanctifie the whole lump.

And let none pretend, that multiplicity of buſineſs will not allow them time and diſpoſition for Sabbath work. If you be too buſie to attend the Lord's ſervice, he can quickly give you a Writ of Eaſe, and make you keep more reſting days from your labours, than you are willing to do. The Lord would not excuſe the Iſraelites, no not in the buſieſt Seaſons, the times of Earing, and Harveſt, and the very building of the Tabernacle; but all muſt give way to the Sabbath. And I am ſure, the promiſe of Bleſſing and Succeſs, is made to the conſcionable obſervation of it: Iſa. 58. 13, 14. If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleaſure upon my holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, and honourable; and ſhalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleaſures, nor ſpeaking thine own words: Then ſhalt thou delight thy ſelf in the Lord: There is a recompence to the Soul. And he ſhall cauſe thee to ride on the high places of the Earth: There is a reward to the Body. Godlineſs is profitable to all things.

The Sea-man's Return.

SERMON VI.

DEUT. XXXIII. 19.

They ſhall call the People unto the Mountain, there they ſhall offer Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs: For they ſhall ſuck of the abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sand.

THIS Scripture is part of the laſt words of Moſes: A Man that in his life was a great Bleſſing to Iſrael; and when he was to be ſeparated from them by death, he pronounces diſtinct and ſuitable Bleſſings upon all the Tribes. As Chriſt parted from the Diſciples, bleſſing them; ſo doth Moſes from his People: Only with this difference, Moſes as God's Mouth pronounced, but God alone could confer the Bleſſing. Moſes bleſſed them authoritatively, but could not bleſs them poteſtatively as Chriſt did. Now theſe words contain the Bleſſing of the Tribe of Zebulun, which was the Tribe of Sea-men. And in them we ſhall conſider theſe two parts, Viz,

1. Their Privilege.
2. Their Duty.

Firſt, Their Privilege: That they ſhould ſuck f the abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sands. To ſuck the abundance of the Sea, is a metonymical expreſſion, ſignifying as much as to be inriched and ſtored with the Wares and Merchandize imported by Sea to them. eographers attribute to the Sea, Arms and Bo-ms; and the Scripture, Breaſts. The Sea like an indulgent Mother imbraces thoſe that live upon it in her Boſom, and with full flowing Breaſts nouriſheth them, and feeds them, as a Mother doth the Infant that ſucks, and depends for its livelihood upon her Breaſts.

ffluentiam ma-is ſugere, eſt ma-nis bonis, & ercibus abunda-. Gloſ.

And theſe Breaſts do not only afford thoſe that hang upon them the neceſſaries of Life, Bread, Rayment, &c. but the Riches, Ornaments, and Delights of life alſo. The Treaſures hid in the Sand; as Gold, Coral, Ambergriece, and ſuch like precious and rich treaſures which it yields. This was the Bleſſing and Privilege of this Tribe of Zebulun, whoſe Cities and Villages were commodiouſly ſituated upon the Sea-ſhore, for Merchandize and Traffick: As you may ſee Joſ. 19. 11.

Referunt ad ea quæ evomere ſolent maria, ſcil. ad auri fodinas. Effodient e terra arenoſa aurum. Pol. Synop. in Loc.

Secondly, Their Duty, to which theſe Mercies and Privileges obliged them. They ſhall call the People to the Mountain, there they ſhall offer Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs. By the Mountain, we are here to underſtand the Temple, which Moſes by the Spirit of Propheſy foreſaw to be built upon Mount Sion, and Mount Moriah; which two were as the Shoulders that ſupported it, Ver. 12. Here was the Worſhip of God; the Sacrifices were here offered up to him. And hither Zebulun, in the ſenſe of God's Mercies to them, ſhould call the People, i. e. ſay ſome, their own People, their Families, and Neighbours; or as others, the Strangers that were among them for Traffick; ſaying as Iſa. 2. 3. Come, let us go up to the Houſe of the Lord, to the Mountain of the God of Jacob. And here they ſhall offer the Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs. By which we are to underſtand their Thank-offerings for the Mercies they had received of the Lord. The Jews had not only Expiatory Sacrifices to procure the pardon of ſins committed, but Euchariſtical Sacrifices, or Thank-offerings, to teſtifie the ſenſe they had of Mercies received. Theſe Sacrifices typified Moral Duties; and when theſe Types were aboliſhed, the Apoſtle ſhews, that the calves of our lips, the ſacrifices of praiſe, are in the ſtead of them, Heb. 13. 15.

So then, the ſum of all is this, That when they returned from Sea, or had received the Bleſſings thereof, from the Hand of God, they ſhould repair to the place of his Worſhip, and there acknowledg and praiſe the God of their Mercies. So that the whole Verſe thus explained, caſts it ſelf into this Doctrinal Obſervation.

Doct. That it is the ſpecial duty of Sea-men, when God returns them to their habitations in peace, thankfully to acknowledg and bleſs his Name, for all the preſervations and mercies they have received of his hand.

Theſe are Mercies indeed, which are obtained from God by Prayer, and returned to him again by Praiſe. When we have received our Mercies, God expects his Praiſes: After the Pſalmiſt had opened the hazards and fears of Sea-men upon the Stormy Ocean, and the goodneſs of God in bringing them to their deſired Haven, Pſal. 107. 30. he preſently calls upon them for this duty, Verſ. 31. O that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

O that men would! Why how is it imaginable they ſhould not? He hath the heart of a Beaſt, not of a Man, that will not. Did I ſay the heart of a Beaſt? Give me that word again. There is a kind of gratitude, even in Beaſts, to their Benefactors. The Ox knoweth his owner, and the Aſs his Maſters Crib, Iſa. 1. 3.

Now the method into which I will caſt the Diſcourſe, ſhall be,

Firſt, To open the nature of the Duty, and to ſhew you what it is to praiſe God for his Mercies.

Secondly, To give you the Grounds and Reaſons of the Duty, why God expects it, and you ought to give it him. And then,

Thirdly, To apply it in the ſeveral Uſes it is improvable unto.

1. The nature of the Duty needs opening, for few underſtand what it is. Alas, it is another manner of thing than a cuſtomary formal cold, God be thanked. Now, if we ſearch into the nature of this duty, we ſhall find that whoever undertakes this Angelical work, muſt, Firſt, Be a heedful Obſerver of the Mercies he receives. This is fundamental to the Duty. Where no Obſervations of Mercies have been made, no Praiſes for them can be returned. God was never honoured by his unobſerved Mercies. When David had opened the Providences of God, to the ſeveral degrees and orders of Men, in its various adminiſtrations; and called upon them diſtinctly, to praiſe God for them; he adds in the cloſe of all, Whoſo is wiſe, and will obſerve theſe things, even they ſhall underſtand the loving kindneſs of the Lord, Pſal. 107. ult. It is God's charge againſt Iſrael, Hoſea 2. 8. She did not know that I gave her Corn, and Wine, and Oil, and multiplied her Silver: i. e. She did not obſerve and take notice of theſe Mercies, as coming from my hand; but only look'd at the next cauſe. Thus it is with many, they think not upon their own Mercies; others can obſerve them, but they cannot; they can quickly obſerve what troubles befal them, but take little notice of their own Mercies. Such men can never be thankful.

Secondly, The thankful man muſt not only obſerve what Mercies he hath, and from whom they come; but muſt particularly conſider them, in their natures, degrees, ſeaſons, and manner of conveyance. There is much of God's glory, and our comfort loſt for want of this. The works of the Lord are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein, Pſal. 111. 2. And indeed, there is no imployment in all the World, that yields more pleaſure to a gracious Soul, than the Anatomizing of Providences doth. How ſweet is it to obſerve the mutual reſpects, coincidencies, and introductive occaſions of our Mercies! Every minute circumſtance hath its weight and value here. He hath little pleaſure in his meat, that ſwallows it whole without chewing.

Thirdly, The thankful perſon muſt duly eſtimate and value his Mercies. It is impoſſible that man can be thankful for Mercies he little eſteems. Iſrael could not praiſe God for that Angels food with which he fed them, whilſt they deſpiſed it in ſaying, There is nothing but this Manna.

And ſurely it ſhews the great corruption of our nature, That thoſe things which ſhould raiſe the value of Mercies with us, cauſe us the more to ſlight them; yet thus it falls out. The commonneſs, or long continuance of Mercies with us, which ſhould indear them the more, and every day increaſe our obligation to God, cauſes them to ſeem but cheap and ſmall things. And therefore doth God ſo often threaten them, yea, and remove them; that their worth and excellency may thereby be acknowledged.

Fourthly, The thankful perſon muſt faithfully record his Mercies, elſe God cannot have his due praiſe for them. Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul, and forget not all his benefits, Pſal. 103. 2. Forgotten Mercies bear no fruit: A bad memory in this caſe, makes a barren heart and life.

I confeſs, the Mercies of God are ſuch a multitude, that a memory of Braſs cannot retain them. I will come before thee in the multitude of thy mercies, ſaith David, Pſal. 5. 7. They are called Showers of Bleſſings, Ezek. 34. 26. And as impoſſible it is diſtinctly to recount all our Mercies, as to number the drops of rain that fall in a ſhower. Nevertheleſs, it hath been the pious care and indeavour of the People of God, to preſerve and perpetuate his Mercies, by uſing all the helps to memory they could. Therefore they have kept Regiſters, Exod. 17. 14. indited Pſams, to bring to remembrance, Pſal. 70. Title; denominated Places from the Mercies received there. Thus Jacob called the place where he found ſo much mercy, Bethel. Hagar named the Well, where God unexpectedly ly relieved her, Beerlahairoi, the Well of him that liveth and looketh upon me, Gen. 16. 13, 14.

They have ſtamped the Mercies upon the Days in which they received them. Thus the Jews called thoſe Days in which God wrought their deliverance, Purim, after the name Pur, ſignifying the Lot Haman had caſt for their lives; Eſth. 9. 26. Yea, they have called their Mercies upon their Children, 1 Sam. 1. 20. Thus thankful Souls have ſtriven to recognize their Mercies, that God might not loſe the praiſe, nor themſelves the comfort of them.

Fifthly, The thankful Perſon muſt be ſutably affected with the Mercies he receives. It is not a ſpeculative, but an affectionate remembrance that becomes us: Then God hath his glory, when the ſenſe of his Mercies melts our hearts into holy joy, love, and admiration. Thus David ſits down before the Lord like a man aſtoniſhed at his goodneſs to him; 2 Sam. 7. 20. And what can David ſay more? For thou Lord knoweſt thy ſervant. The Mercies of God have made the Saints hearts leap for joy within them: Pſal. 92. 4. Thou Lord haſt made me glad, through thy Works; therefore will I triumph in the Works of thy hands. Mercies are not Mercies, Deliverances are no Deliverances to us, if we that receive them, are not glad of them.

Sixthly, The thankful Perſon muſt order his Converſation ſutably to the ingagements that his Mercies have put him under. When we have ſaid all, it is the life of the thankful, that is the very life of thankfulneſs. Obedience and ſervice are the only real manifeſtations of gratitude. He that offereth praiſe, glorifieth me; and to him that ordereth his converſation aright, will I ſhew the ſalvation of God, Pſal. 50. 23. Set down this for an Everlaſting truth, That God was never praiſed and honored by an abuſed Mercy. God took it ill from Hezekiah, That he rendred not again according to the benefit done unto him, 2 Chron. 32. 25. He that is truly thankful, will ſay as David, Pſal. 116. 12. What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his benefits? We then glorify God with his Mercies, when we imploy them to right ends, when we thankfully take out our own ſhare of comfort from them, receiving them with thankſgiving, as from the hand of a Father. Mr. Swinock tells of a young man, who lying upon his ſick bed, was always calling for meat; but as ſoon as it was brought him, he ſhook and trembled dreadfully at the ſight of it, and ſo continued till it was taken away; and before his death, acknowledged God's juſtice, for that in his health he ordinarily received his Meat without thankſgiving.

Swinock's Chriſtian Man's Calling, pag. 409.

Uſe all God's Mercies with thankfulneſs: God will remember them in fury, who forget him in his favours.

And think not what God beſtows upon you, is wholly for your own uſe: But honour God with your Mercies, by clothing the naked, and feeding the hungry, eſpecially ſuch as are Godly. This is a due improvement of your Eſtates; thus you may make to your ſelves friends of the Mammon of unrighteouſneſs. Ah, how little do we conſider, what praiſe, what glory we may occaſion this way from others to the Name of God! It is ſtoried of Dionyſius, the Syracuſian Tyrant; that when he ſaw what heaps of Gold and Silver his Son hoarded up in his Cloſet, he asked him, what he meant to let it lie there, and not to make friends with it, to get the Kingdom after his death? O Son (ſaid he) thou haſt not a ſpirit capable of a Kingdom. Thus honour the Lord with your ſubſtance; look upon all you have as your Maſter's Talents, for which you muſt give an account: And ſo uſe and imploy them for God, that you may give up your account with joy; and then you will ſhew your ſelves thankful indeed. Thus you ſee what is included in real thankfulneſs. O, it is another matter than we take it to be.

Juſtin. Lib. 51.

2. Next I promiſed to give you the Grounds and Reaſons of this Duty: Why you are obliged after the receit of Mercies, to ſuch a thankful return of praiſes. And among many I will only ſingle out theſe three, and briefly open them.

Firſt, God requires and expects it. It is ſo ſpecial and peculiar a part of his glory, as he will never part with it. As great Landlords oblige their Tenants to a homage and ſervice, when they make over their Eſtates to them, and reſerve a quit rent to themſelves, which they value at a high rate; ſo God when he beſtows Deliverances of Mercies upon us, ſtill reſerves an acknowledgment to himſelf: And this is dear to him, he will not indure to be defrauded of it; much leſs, that it be given to another. You find this reſervation of praiſe expreſly made by him in Pſal. 50. 15. Call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee, and thou ſhalt glorifie me. Where you have the requeſt, the grant, and the reſervation in the grant, q. d. When I have granted thee thy deſire, ſee thou do not defraud me of my glory. There be three things in every Mercy, the matter of it, the comfort of it, and the glory of it. The two firſt God makes over freely to us, he gives the Mercies themſelves, he allows us to ſuck out all the lawful pleaſure and delight that is in them; but the third he reſerves to himſelf, and will never part with to any other. If an Hezekiah himſelf render not to God due acknowledgments, as well as God loves him, there ſhall be great wrath upon him, and Judah, for the default, 2 Chron. 32. 26.

Secondly, You are under manifold ingagements to render it to the Lord.

(1.) Common ingenuity obliges to a due acknowledgment of favors freely received; and unthankfulneſs on that ſcore, is the odium of mankind. Ingratum ſi dicas, omnia dixeris. You cannot give a man a more odious character among men, than to ſay, He is an ungrateful man.

(2.) The examples of the very Heathen will condemn you. They praiſed their Gods, which yet were no Gods, when they received any deliverance, Judg. 16. 24. Shall Idols, Dunghil-Deities, receive their ſacrifices and praiſes, whilſt the true God is forgotten?

Nay (3.) many of you have formally and expreſly obliged your Souls to it, by ſolemn vows and promiſes in the day of your diſtreſs: And yet will you deal perfidiouſly with God? Will you not pay the vows which your lips have uttered? Certainly, you can never free your Souls from the guilt of perfidiouſneſs againſt God, whilſt you give him not the glory due to his Name.

3. Laſtly, Your ingratitude is the ready way to deprive you of the Mercies you have, and to withhold from you the Mercies you might have in your future diſtreſſes and wants. He that is ungrateful for Mercies received, provokes God to remove them. Thus it fell out with ungrateful Iſrael: Hoſ. 2. 5, 8, 9. She did not know, (i. e.) She did not with conſideration and thanks duly acknowledg) That I gave her Corn, and Wine, and Oyl. Therefore will I return, and take away my Corn in the time thereof, and my Wine in the ſeaſon thereof: And will recover my Wool, and my Flax. Thus they ſuffered their Mercies to lapſe into the Lord's hand for non-payment of their Duties. If you be weary of your Mercies, and willing to be rid of them, you cannot take a more effectual courſe, than to forget from whom you had them, and withhold his praiſe for them.

And then, for future Mercies and Deliverances, you have no ground to expect any more from God, whom you have thus requited for former favours. He that gives no thanks for one Mercy, hath little ground to expect another. It was a ſad word which God ſpake upon this very provocation, Judg. 10. 11, 12, 13. When a new diſtreſs befel Iſrael by the Ammonites, and they cried to the Lord for help; he tells them, That he had many times delivered them from their enemies: Yet, ſaith he, have you forſaken me, and ſerved other gods. Wherefore I will deliver you no more; go and cry to the gods which ye have choſen, and let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation. q. d. With what face can you come to me for new Mercies and Deliverances, when your ſelves know, how former Mercies have been abuſed! Think ye that I am weary of my Mercies, to caſt them away upon ſuch unthankful wretches? No, no. Expect no more Mercies from me, I will deliver you no more. One of the Fathers calls ingratitude, Obex infernalis, An Helliſh ſtop; which interrupts the courſe and current of all God's, Mercies. Mercy is not only a precious thing, too good to be caſt away, but it is a very tender thing, and God deeply reſents the abuſes of it. Thus you ſee the Grounds and Reaſons of your duty; it remains now that we apply it.

1. Uſe. Is it your unqueſtionable Duty to return praiſes upon every receit of Mercies? Then in the firſt place, bear your ſhame and juſt reproof for your manifeſt unthankfulneſs. You dare not deny, but you have received many ſignal and eminent Mercies from the Hands of God. If you ſhould deny that, I need go no farther to prove you prodigiouſly ungrateful. But it is too manifeſt to be denied: You have found God a very preſent help in trouble; his Mercy hath often reſcued you out of the very jaws of death. Some of you have been in dangers in the Deeps; in Deaths oft. You have been put to your wits end; all viſible hope and help failed. You might have ſaid with the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 142. 4. I looked upon my right hand, and there was none; and upon the left, but refuge failed. You have ſeen your companions intombed before your eyes in the Seas, and concluded in your own thoughts, your turn was next. You have been in danger by barbarous enemies, that have chaſed you upon the Sea, to make you a prey: Yea, it may be you have been a prey to them, and never thought to have ſeen the Land of your Nativity; your Houſes, Wives, and Children any more. You have languiſhed under dangerous diſeaſes, and that remote from friends, and neceſſary accommodations. You have loſt your Eſtates, and been reduced to a low ebb, and never thought to have ſeen a day of proſperity any more. Yet hath the Lord delivered you out of all your troubles: He hath provided unexpected means of preſervation, when the proud Waters were ready to go over your Souls. And tho others went down before your eyes, you were marked out for Deliverance. God ſpake to the raging Waves, ſaying, Touch not this Man, I will not deliver him up, tho I have done ſo by others. When cruel enemies chaſed you, he delivered you, cauſing the darkneſs of the night to interpoſe ſeaſonably betwixt you and them; as the dark ſide of the Cloud ſhadowed Iſrael from the Egyptians that purſued them, Exod. 14. 20. Sometimes giving you a favourable gale, which blew Mercy and Deliverance to you: Sometimes by ſtrengthning you to reſiſt their furious attacks, and delivering you from their rage; or, if he delivered you into their hands, yet there he preſerved you, inabling you to indure their ſeverities, or cauſing the enemy to treat you well; and finding out a way which you knew not, to bring you at laſt out of the Houſe of Bondage.

He pitied you under your dangerous diſeaſes; and tho neceſſary accommodations and means might be wanting, he was your Phyſician, and healed you; he recovered you immediately without means, or bleſſed weak and ſmall means to your good. When you were reduced by loſſes, and captivities to a low ebb, ſo that you might ſay as the Church, Lam. 3. 17. I forgat Proſperity; he hath not only recruited thy ſtrength, but thy eſtate alſo: and when both thy body and eſtate, like an old leaky Ship, have been ready to ſink; he hath ſtopped the leaks in both, careened, repaired, and launched thee into the World again, as whole, as ſound, and ſtrong as ever.

And now Reader, ſuffer me to account and expoſtulate a little with thy Conſcience. What hath the fruit of all theſe Mercies been to thee? And how haſt thou carried it ſince thoſe days, towards the God of thy Mercies? Haſt thou indeed been melted by the ſenſe of all this kindneſs into love, thankfulneſs, and new obedience? Have theſe favours ingaged thee to more ſtrictneſs in thy duties, and greater watchfulneſs againſt ſin? Haſt thou ſaid with that good man, Ezra 9. 13, 14. And now, my God, ſeeing thou haſt puniſhed me leſs than mine iniquities deſerve, and haſt given me ſuch Deliverances as theſe, ſhould I again break thy Commandments? If it be ſo, ſurely Mercy and Goodneſs ſhall follow thee all the days of thy life. The Lord then reckons all theſe Mercies well beſtowed, and will never repent that he hath done thee good.

But I fear this is not thy caſe. Sure I am, there are ſome among you that have quickly forgotten the God that delivered you. Some that have abuſed him to his face, by aſcribing his Mercies to good luck, chance, and fortune; not once owning him as your Deliverer. And ſome that have made his Mercies weapons of ſin, to wound him withal, waſting your eſtates by prodigality, which were given to refreſh your Families, and God's poor; yea, abuſing them to drunkenneſs and luxury. And is this the thanks you return him? For which of all my good Works (ſaith Chriſt to the Jews) do you ſtone me? So ſay I, for which of all God's kindneſſes to you, do you thus diſhonour and abuſe him? O let ſhame cover your faces this Day! Go Reader, fold down this Leaf, and get thee to thy knees, and ſay, I am the man to whom this reproof is ſent. I have abuſed the God of my Mercies, I have turned his Grace into wantonneſs. Smite with Ephraim upon thy thigh, and ſay, What have I done! Mourn heartily for thy unkindneſs to thy beſt Friend, The God that hath done thee good all thy life long, and deſerves other returns from thee than theſe.

2. Uſe. Laſtly, It calls upon you all to be thankful for your Mercies. Chryſoſtom once wiſhed for a voice like Thunder, that all Men might hear him. O that I could ſo call you to this duty, that ſome of you might effectually hear God's call in this Exhortation!

Will you own the Hand that delivers you, that feeds, clothes, and heals you? Will you reſolve to live the life of praiſe? and render to the Lord according to the benefits you have received? Will you indeed walk humbly and thankfully under all your Deliverances and Succeſſes, and glorifie God by that wherewith he hath comforted and refreſhed you? If there be any ſaving knowledg of God, and ſpiritual ſenſe of his love in your Souls, methinks I ſhould prevail with you; for do but weigh theſe following Arguments ſeriouſly, and they will ingage you to it.

1, Argument. How freely have all your Mercies ſtreamed to you from the Fountain of Grace! There was nothing in you to ingage it. The very notion of Mercy includes freeneſs; they are all beſtowed upon us, not only as we are immerentes, but male merentes, undeſerving, but ill deſerving Creatures; not only without our merits, but againſt our merits. And what, tho there be a concurrence of your abilities, head-work, and hand-work, in the procurement of ſome of your Mercies, yet ſtill thoſe Mercies are the pure effects of Free-grace: For all thoſe indeavours of yours had ſignified nothing to their procurement, without God's Bleſſing; yea, and that wiſdom and induſtry which you uſed, are themſelves the Free-gifts of God. You know there be thouſands in the World, as induſtrious and wiſe as you, and ſuch as never provoked God by ſuch ſins as you have; who yet are denied the Mercies you injoy. O, how ſhould this indear you to God!

2, Argument. How ſeaſonably your Mercies have been beſtowed upon you, in the very nick of extremity and danger. God hath on purpoſe ſuffered it to grow to an extremity, that thereby he might commend his Mercy to you with the greater advantage. In the Mount of the Lord it hath been ſeen, Gen. 22. 14. Without this, God ſaw his Mercies would have been ſlighted and low prized by you. But God hath watched the opportunity of beſtowing his goodneſs upon you, for no other end, but to magnifie his Mercies in your eyes, and make the deeper and more laſting impreſſions upon your hearts. Shall ſuch Mercies, which at firſt were ſo amazing, and overwhelming to you; at the receit whereof, you were like men that dreamed, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 126. 1. ſo ſoon grow ſtale and common? God forbid.

3. Argument. How ſpecial and diſtinguiſhing have ſome of your Mercies been? God hath not dealt with every one, as he hath with you. Are not ſome that went out with you, found wanting at your return? They are among the dead, it may be among the damned, and you among the living, yet injoying the capacity and means of Salvation. God hath proſpered your Voyage, and returned you with Succeſs; you have ſucked the abundance of the Sea, and the Treaſures hid in the Sand, as the Text ſpeaks: but others may ſay as Naomi, Ruth 1. 21. I went out full, and am come back empty. I went out full of hopes, and am come back with ſad diſappointments. And is not this a ſtrong tie to Thankſgiving?

4, Argument. Did not your Mercies find you under great guilt? You know what your own tranſgreſſions againſt the Lord were; and yet ſuch was the ſtrength of Mercy, that it brake through all your great provocations, and made its way to you through a multitude of iniquities. It came triumphing over all your great unworthineſs; and is not ſuch Mercy worthy to be admired and recorded for ever! O what will affect and melt your hearts, if this will not? Surely ſuch Mercies have a conſtraining power in them, upon all ſenſible Souls.

5. Argument. To conclude: if all the Goodneſs of God, which hath paſſed before your eyes, do indeed prevail upon you, to love the Lord, and fear to offend him; if they really conſtrain you to give up your ſelves, and all you have, to be his: Then all theſe are but the beginnings of Mercies, and you ſhall ſee yet greater things than theſe. God hath more Mercies yet behind, and thoſe of a higher kind, and more excellent nature than theſe Temporal Mercies are. You are now delivered from the dangers of the Sea, and have eſcaped thoſe perils: O but what is this, to deliverance from wrath to come? You have been preſerved from, or delivered out of Turkiſh ſlavery: But what is that to a Deliverance from the curſe of the Law, the bondage of your Luſts, and the power of Satan? Happy Souls, if theſe Deliverances prove introductive to the great Salvation.

The Concluſion.

Thus I have (as the Lord hath inabled me) indeavoured to chuſe, and improve proper ſubjects for your Meditation in every condition that befals you. I cannot carry theſe Truths one degree farther; it is the Lord only, that can make them effectual to your Souls. But it is my earneſt requeſt to you Maſters, that have the overſight, and muſt give an account for your Companies, That you will not only read and conſider theſe things your ſelves, but that you will at fit ſeaſons, eſpecially upon the Lord's day, read and inculcate them unto your Servants and Company; and that, as thoſe who muſt give an account. Will not this be a better expence of that precious and hallowed time, than to ſpend it in ſleeping in your Cabins, or drinking in Tipling-Houſes? All that ſin of theirs which you may prevent, and do not, becomes your own ſin. And have you not perſonal ſins enough already, but you muſt draw the guilt of their ſins upon you alſo? I beſeech you, and it is my laſt requeſt, That you will faithfully labour, that you and your Companies may ſerve the Lord.

OR,

The Great Work of a Chriſtian Open'd and Preſs'd, from Proverbs IV. 23.

The Epiſtle Dedicatory

To my dearly beloved and longed for, the Flock of Jeſus Chriſt in Dartmouth, over whom the Holy Ghoſt hath made me an Overſeer: Sound Judgment, True Zeal, and Unſtained Purity, is heartily wiſhed.

My Dear Friends,

THere are three ſad Sights with which our Eyes ſhould continually affect our Hearts: The (1.) Is to behold in every place, ſo many prophane and diſſolute ones, who bear the very Image of Satan; the face of whoſe Converſation plainly diſcovers what they are, and whither they are going, Philip. 3. 18, 19. Theſe look like themſelves, the Children of Wrath: The (2.) Is to ſee ſo many curſed Hypocrites artificially diſguiſing themſelves, and with marvellous dexterity acting the parts of Saints, ſo that even a judicious Eye may ſometimes miſtake the Similar Workings of the Spirit on them, for his Saving Workings on others: To hear ſuch a Perſon conferring, praying, bewailing his Corruptions, and talking of his Ezperiences; would eaſily perſwade a Man to believe that he hath the Heart, as well as the Face, of a ſincere Chriſtian: For,

> Sic oculus, ſic ille manus, ſic ora ferebat.

So the People of God do ſpeak, ſo they pray, and even ſo they open their conditions: Theſe look like Saints, but are none. The (3.) Is to ſee ſo many real Saints in whom the Spirit of Truth is, who yet through the impetuous workings of their Corruptions, and neglecting of the Watch over their Hearts, do often fall into ſuch ſcandalous Practices, that they look like Hypocrites, tho' they are not ſo.

Theſe are three ſad Sights indeed, and Oh that my Head were Waters, and mine Eyes Fountains of Tears, that I might weep abundantly over them all!

For the firſt I would mourn heartily, conſidering that they (ſo continuing) muſt be damned eternally, 2 Theſſ. 1. 8, 9. 1 Cor. 6. 9.

For the ſecond, I would both weep and tremble, conſidering that they (ſo abiding) muſt be damned doubly, Matth. 24. 51.

And for the third, no leſs than any of the reſt, becauſe, tho' they themſelves may and ſhall be ſaved, yet they themſelves make faſt the Bonds of Death upon both the former; Mat. 18. 7. 2 Sam. 12. 13, 14.

Alas! that ever they ſhould ſhed the Blood of others Souls, for whom Chriſt ſhed his own Blood!

That ever they ſhould be Cruel to others, who have found Chriſt ſo Kind to them! I know they dare not do it directly and intentionally, but ſo it proves occaſionally and eventually. Suffer me here to digreſs a little, and expoſtulate with theſe prejudiced and hardened Souls, I will preſently return to you again. O why do you miſchief your own Souls by other Mens Examples? Becauſe they ſtumble and break their Shins, will you fall, and break your Necks? I deſire all ſuch as harden themſelves by theſe things, and take up a good Opinion of their own Deplorable Condition, that they would ſoberly conſider, and anſwer theſe three Queries.

Query 1. Doth Religion any way countenance or patronize the ſinful Practices of its Profeſſors? Or doth it not rather impartially and ſeverely condemn them? It is the Glory of the Chriſtian Religion, that it is pure and undefiled, Jam. 1. 27. No Doctrine ſo holy, Pſal. 19. 8. Nor doth any make more proviſion for an holy Life, Tit. 2. 11, 12. Indeed there is a Caſe wherein we may charge the evil Practices of Men upon their Principles, but that is, when their Practices naturally flow from, and neceſſarily follow their Principles: As for Example, If I ſee a Papiſt ſin boldly, I may charge it upon his Principles, for they ſet Pardons to ſale, and ſo make way for Looſneſs. If I ſee an Arminian ſlight the Grace of God, and proudly advance himſelf, I may cry ſhame upon his Principles, which directly lead to it: But can I do ſo where ſuch Practices are condemned, and provided againſt by their own avowed Principles that commit them?

Q. 2. Is it not a moſt irrational thing to let fly at Religion becauſe of the ſcandalous ways of ſome, whilſt in the mean time you wholly ſlight and over-look the holy and heavenly Converſations of many others? Are all that profeſs Godlineſs looſe and careleſs in their Lives? No, ſome are an Ornament to their Profeſſion, and the Glory of Chriſt: And why muſt the Innocent be condemned with the Guilty? Why the Eleven, for one Judas?

Q. 3. If you condemn Religion becauſe of the ſcandalous Lives of ſome that profeſs it, muſt you not then caſt off all Religion in the World, and turn downright Atheiſts? Surely this is the Conſequent of it: For what Religion is there, but ſome that profeſs it walk contrary to their Profeſſion? And then, as Conſtantine told the Novation, you muſt ſet up your Ladder, and go to Heaven by your ſelf.

But alas! It is not our printed Apologies for Religion, but the viſible Reformations of its Profeſſors that muſt both ſalve its Honour, and remove thoſe fatal Stumbling-blocks at which the blind World ſtrikes, and falls into Eternal Perdition.

Now there are two ways by which this may be effected: Firſt, By convincing the Conſciences of Profeſſors of their Miſcarriages, and the Evil and Aggravations of them. Secondly, By Medicating the Heart, and cleanſing the Fountain whence they proceed. In the firſt of theſe, a worthy and eminent Servant of Chriſt hath lately laboured, holding a clear Goſpel-Glaſs before the Faces of Profeſſors, which truly repreſents their Spots and Blemiſhes: If he that reads it will conſider, apply and practice, it ſhall doubtleſs turn to his Salvation; but if it turn to no good Account to him that reads it, I know it ſhall turn to a Teſtimony for him that wrot it. The ſecond is a principal deſign of this ſmall Treatiſe, the Subject whereof is exceeding weighty, and of daily uſe to the People of God, tho the manner of handling it be attended with many Defects and Weakneſſes: Every one cannot be Excellent, who yet may be Uſeful.

See Goſpel-Glaſs.

I will exerciſe your Patience no longer than whilſt I tell you,

1. Why I publiſh it to the View of the World.
2. Why I direct it particularly to you.

Firſt, For the Publication of it, take this ſincere and brief Account, That as I was led to this Subject by a ſpecial Providence, ſo to the Publication of it by a kind of Neceſſity: The Providence at firſt leading me to it, was this: A dear and choice Friend of my intimate Acquaintance being under much inward trouble upon the Account of ſome ſpecial Heart-Diſorder, open'd the caſe to me; and earneſtly requeſted ſome Rules and Helps in that particular; whilſt I was bending my thoughts to that ſpecial Caſe, divers other Caſes of like Importance (ſome of which were dependent upon that conſideration) occurred to my thoughts, and this Scripture which I have inſiſted upon, preſented it ſelf, as a fit foundation for the whole Diſcourſe; which being lengthen'd out to what you ſee, divers Friends requeſted me to tranſcribe for their uſe, divers of the Caſes here handled, and ſome others, begg'd me to publiſh the whole, to which I was in a manner neceſſitated to ſave the pains of Tranſcribing, which to me is a very tedious and tireſome Work: And juſt as I had almoſt finiſh'd the Copy, an opportunity preſented (and that ſomewhat ſtrangely) to make it publick. So that from firſt to laſt I have been carried beyond my firſt Intentions in this thing.

Object. If any ſay the World is even cloyed with Books, and therefore tho' the Diſcourſe be neceſſary, yet the Publication is needleſs.

Sol. 1. I anſwer, There are multitudes of Books indeed, and of them, many concern not themſelves about Root-Truths, and Practical Godlineſs, but ſpend their ſtrength upon impracticable Notions and frivolous Controverſies: Many alſo ſtrike at Root-Truths, and endeavour to undermine the Power of Godlineſs: And ſome there are that nouriſh the Root, and tend to clear and confirm, to prepare and apply the great Truths of the Goſpel, that they may be bread for Souls to live and feed on: Now, though I could wiſh, that thoſe that have handled the Pen of the Scribe, had better imployed their time and pains than to obtrude ſuch uſeleſs Diſcourſes upon the World, yet for Books of the latter rank, I ſay, that when Husbandmen complain of two much Corn, let Chriſtians complain of too many ſuch Books.

2. and if you be ſo highly conceited of your own furniture and ability, that ſuch Books are needleſs to you: If you let them alone, they will do you no hurt, and other poor hungry Souls will be glad of them, and bleſs God for what you deſpiſe and leave.

Obj. If it be ſaid that ſeveral of the caſes here handled touch not your condition, I anſwer.

Sol. 1. That which is not your condition may be anothers condition. If you be placed in an caſie, full, and proſperous ſtate, and ſo have no need of the helps here offered to ſupport your Heart under pinching wants, others are forced to live by Faith for every days proviſion: If you be dandled upon the knee of Providence, ſome of your Brethren are under its feet. If you have inward peace, and tranquility of Spirit, and ſo need not the Counſels here given, to ward off thoſe deſperate concluſions that poor afflicted Souls are ready to draw upon themſelves at ſuch a time; yet it may be a word in ſeaſon to them, and they may ſay as David to Abigail, Bleſſed be thou of the Lord, and bleſſed be thy Advice.

2. That may be your condition ſhortly, which is not your condition at preſent: Say not thy Mountain ſtands ſtrong, thou ſhalt never be moved: There are changes in the Right Hand of the moſt High, and then thoſe Truths which are little more eſteemed than Hedge-fruits, will be as Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver: In Jer. 10. 11. The Prophet there teaches the Jews (who then dwelt in their own Houſes) how to defend their Religion in Babylon, and what they ſhould ſay to the Caldeans there, and therefore that Verſe is written in Caldee. So much for the reaſons of its Publication: Next for the Dedication of it to you, I was induced thereto by the Conſideration,

1. Of the relation I have to you above all the people in the world: I look upon my Gifts as yours, my Time as yours and all the Talents I am intruſted with, as yours: It is not with you as with a Woman whoſe Husband is dead, and ſo is freed from the Law of her Husband, the relation ſtill continues, and ſo do all the mutual Duties of it.

2. By the conſideration of my neceſſitated abſence from you, I would not that perſonal abſence ſhould by inſenſible degrees untwiſt (as uſually it doth) the Cord of Friendſhip; and therefore have endeavoured (as abſent Friends uſe to do) to preſerve and ſtrengthen it by this ſmall remembrance. It was Veſpaſian's anſwer to Apollonius when he deſired acceſs for two Philoſophers: My Doors (ſaid Veſpaſian) are always open to Philoſophers, but my very Breaſt is open to thee. I cannot ſay with him, my Doors are open for the free acceſs of Friends, being by a ſad Providence ſhut againſt my ſelf; but this I can ſay, my very Breaſt is ſtill open to you; you are as dear to me as ever.

3. Another inducement (and indeed the main) was the perpetual uſefulneſs and neceſſity of theſe

Truths for you, which you will have continual need of: And I know few of you have ſuch happy Memories to retain, and I cannot be always with you to inculcate theſe things, but litera ſcripta manet; I was willing to leave this with you as a Legacy, as a Teſtimony of ſincere love for, and care over you: This may counſel and direct you when I cannot: I may be rendred uſeleſs to you by a civil or natural Death; but this will out live me, and Oh that it my ſerve your Souls when I am ſilent in the duſt.

To haſten now to a Concluſion, I have only theſe three Requeſts to you, which I earneſtly beſeech you not to deny me; yea, I charge you, as ever you hope to appear with comfort before the great Shepherd, do not dare to ſlight theſe Requeſts.

1. Above all other ſtudies in the World, ſtudy your own Hearts: Waſte not a minute more of your precious time about frivolous and ſapleſs Controverſies; it is reported even of Bellarmine (how truly I examine not) Quod a ſtudiis ſcholaſticæ Theologiæ averteretur fere nauſeabundus, quoniam ſucco carebant liquide pietatis, (i. e.) he turned with loathing from the ſtudy of School-divinity, becauſe it wanted the ſweet juice of Piety; I had rather it ſhould be ſaid of you, as one ſaid of * Swinkfeldius, (He wanted a regular Head, but not an honeſt Heart) then that you ſhould have regular Heads, and irregular Hearts: My dear Flock, I have according to the Grace given me, laboured in the courſe of my Miniſtry among you, to feed you with the Heart-ſtrengthning Bread of Practical Doctrine, and I do aſſure you, it is far better you ſhould ſhould have the ſweet and ſaving impreſſions of Goſpel-Truths, feelingly and powerfully conveyed to your Hearts; then only to underſtand them by a bare ratiocination, or a dry ſyllogiſtical inference. Leave trifling Stndies to ſuch as have time lying on their hands, and know not how to imploy it: Remember you are at the door of Eternity, and have other work to do; thoſe hours you ſpend upon Heart-work in your Cloſets, are the golden ſpots of all your time, and will have the ſweeteſt influence into your laſt hour: Never forget thoſe Sermons I Preached to you, upon that Subject, from 2 Kings 20. 2, 3. Heart-work is weighty and difficult work; an Error there, may coſt you your Souls: I may ſay of it, as Auguſtine ſpeaks of the Doctrine of the Trinity, Nihilo facilius aut periculoſius erratur; a Man can err in nothing more eaſily or more dangerouſly: O then, ſtudy your Hearts.

* Caput regulatum ille defuit, cor bonum non defuit.

2. My next requeſt is, That you will carefully look to your Converſations, and be accurate in all your ways, hold forth the word of Life: Be ſure by the ſtrictneſs and holineſs of your Lives, to ſettle your ſelves in the very Conſciences of your Enemies. Remember that your Lives muſt be produced in the great Day, to judge the World, 1 Cor. 6. 2. Oh then what manner of Perſons ought you to be! You have many Eyes over you, the Omniſcient Eye of God, that ſearches the Heart and Reins, Rev. 2. 23. The vigilant Eye of Satan, Job 1. 7, 8. The envious Eyes of Enemies, that curiouſly obſerve you, Pſal. 5. 8. The quick and obſervant Eye of Conſcience, which none of your Actions eſcape, Rom. 9. 1.

Oh then be preciſe, and accurate in all manner of Converſation: Keep up the power of Godlineſs in your Cloſets and Families, and then you will not let it fall in your more publick Imployments and Converſes in the World: I have often told you that it is the honour of the Goſpel, that it makes the beſt Parents and Children; the beſt Maſters and Servants; the beſt Husbands and Wives in the World.

My third and laſt requeſt is, That you pray for me: I hope I can ſay, and am ſure ſome of you have acknowledged, that I came at firſt among you, as the return and anſwer of your Prayers: And indeed ſo it ſhould be, ſee Luke 10. 2. I am perſwaded alſo, I have been carryed on in my Work by your Prayers: 'tis ſweet when 'tis ſo; ſee Epheſ. 6. 18, 19. And I hope by your Prayers to receive yet a farther benefit, even that which is mentioned, Heb. 13. 18, 19. Philem. 22. And truly 'tis but equal you ſhonld pray for me, I have often prayed for you: Let the Pulpit, Family and Cloſet, witneſs for me: And God forbid I ſhould ſin againſt the Lord in ceaſing to pray for you.

Yea, Friends, your own intereſt may perſwade to it: What mercies you obtain for me, redound to your own advantage; if God preſerve me, it is for your uſe and ſervice: The more Gifts and Graces a Miniſter hath, the better for them that ſhall wait on his Miniſtry: The more God gives in to me, the more I ſhall be able to give out to you. I will detain you no longer, but to entreat you to accept this ſmall Teſtification of my great Love, and have recourſe to it, according as the exigencies of your condition ſhall require: Read it conſideringly, and obediently; Judge it not by the dreſs and ſtile, but by the Weight and Savour of what you read. # A SAINT INDEED, &c.

Prov. IV. 23.

Keep thy Heart with all diligence, for out of it are the Iſſues of Life.

THE Heart of Man is his worſt part before it be Regenerate, and the beſt afterwards; it is the Seat of Principles, and Fountain of Actions. The Eye of God is, and the Eye of the Chriſtian ought to be principally fixed upon it.

The greateſt difficulty in Converſion, is to win the Heart to God; and the greateſt difficulty after Converſion, is to keep the Heart with God. Here lies the very pinch and ſtreſs of Religion; here's that that makes the way to Life a narrow Way, and the Gate of Heaven a ſtrait Gate. Direction and help in this great work, is the ſcope and ſum of this Text; wherein we have,

1. An Exhortation, Keep thy Heart with all diligence.

2. The Reaſon or Motive inforcing it, For out of it are the iſſues of life.

In the Exhortation I ſhall conſider,

1. The Matter of the Duty.
2. The Manner of performing it.

1. The Matter of the Duty, Keep thy Heart. Heart is not here taken properly for that noble part of the Body which the Philoſphers call the primum vivens, & ultimum moriens; the firſt that lives, and the laſt that dies; but by Heart in a Metaphor, the Scriptures ſometimes underſtands ſome particular noble faculty of the Soul: In Rom. 1. 21. It is put for the underſtanding part, their fooliſh Heart, (i. e.) their fooliſh underſtanding was darkned. And Pſal. 119. 11. It is put for the Memory, Thy word have I hid in my Heart. And 1 John 3. 10. it is put for the Conſcience, which hath in it both the light of the Underſtanding, and the recognitions of the Memory: If our heart condemn us, (i. e.) if our Conſcience; whoſe proper Office it is to condemn. But here we are to take it more generally for the whole Soul, or inner Man; for look what the Heart is to the Body, that the Soul is to the Man: and what Health is to the Heart, that Holineſs is to the Soul: Quod ſanitas in corpore id ſanctitas in corde. The ſtate of the whole Body depends upon the ſoundneſs and vigour of the Heart, and the everlaſting ſtate of the whole Man upon the good or ill condition of the Soul.

And by keeping the Heart, underſtand the diligent and conſtant uſe and improvement of all holy means and Duties, to preſerve the Soul from ſin, and maintain its ſweet and free cummunion with God, * Lavator in loc. will have the word taken from a beſieged Garriſon, begirt by many Enemies without, and in danger of being betrayed by treacherous Citizens within, in which danger the Soldiers upon pain of death are commanded to watch; and whereas the expreſſion, (keep thy heart) ſeems to put it upon us as our work; yet it doth not imply a ſufficiency or ability in us to do it; we are as able to ſtop the Sun in its courſe, or make the Rivers run back-ward, as by our own skill and power to rule and order our hearts: We may as well be our own Saviours, as our own Keepers, and yet Solomon ſpeaks properly enough, when he ſaith Keep thy Heart; becauſe the duty is ours, though the power be Gods. A Natural man hath no power, a Gracious man hath ſome, though not ſufficient; and that power he hath, depends upon the exciting and aſſiſting ſtrength of Chriſt; Gratia gratiam poſtulat, Grace within us is beholding to Grace without us, John 15. 5. Without me ye can do nothing. So much of the Matter of the Duty.

2. The Manner of performing it is, With all diligence; the Hebrew is very emphatical, מכל משמר cum omni cuſtodia, keep with all keeping, q. d. keep, keep; ſet double guards, your hearts will be gone elſe. And this vehemency of expreſſion with which the duty is urged, plainly implies how difficult it is to keep our hearts, and how dangerous to let them go.

2. The Reaſon, or Motive quickning to this Duty, is very forcible and weighty; For out of it are the iſſues of life. That is, it is the Sourſe and Fountain of all vital Actions and Operations; Hinc Fons boni & peccandi origo, ſaith Jerom; it is the ſpring and original both of Good and Evil, as the ſpring in a Watch that ſets all the Wheels in motion. The Heart is the Treaſury, the Hand and Tongue but the Shops, what is in theſe came from thence; the Hand and Tongue always begin where the Heart ends. The heart contrives, and the Members execute, Luke 6. 46. A good man out of the good treaſury of his heart bringeth forth good things, and an evil man out of the evil treaſury of his heart bringeth forth evil things; for out of the abundance of his heart his mouth ſpeaketh. So then, if the heart err in its work, theſe muſt needs miſcarry in theirs; for heart errours are like the errours of the firſt concoction which cannot be rectified afterwards: Or like the miſ-placing and inverting of the ſtamps and letters in the Preſs, which muſt needs cauſe ſo many Errata's in all the Copies that are printed off. Oh then! how important a Duty is that which is contained in the following Propoſition?

Doct. That the keeping and right managing of the heart in every condition, is the great buſineſs of a Chriſtians life.

What the Philoſopher ſaith of Waters, is as properly applicable to Hearts, Suis terminis difficile continentes; 'tis hard to keep them within any bounds; God hath ſet bounds and limits to them, yet how frequently do they tranſgreſs, not only the bounds of Grace and Religion, but even of Reaſon and common Honeſty? Hic labor hoc opus

* I ſay conſtant, for the reaſon added in the Text, extends the duty to all the ſtates and conditions of a Chriſtians life, and makes it bind ad ſemper: If the heart muſt be kept becauſe out of it are the iſſues of life, then as long as theſe iſſues of life do flow out of it, we are obliged to keep it.

opus eſt, this is that which affords the Chriſtian matter of labour, fear and trembling to his dying day. 'Tis not the cleanſing of the hand that makes a Chriſtian, for many a Hypocrite can ſhew as fair a hand as he, but the purifying, watching, and right ordering of the heart; this is the thing that provokes ſo many ſad complaints, and coſts ſo many deep groans and briniſh tears. 'Twas the Pride of Hezekiah's heart that made him lie in the duſt mourning before the Lord, 2 Chron. 32. 26. 'Twas the fear of Hypocriſie invading the Heart, that made David cry, Let my heart be ſound in thy Statutes, that I be not aſhamed Pſal. 119. 80. 'Twas the ſad experience he had of the Diviſions and Diſtractions of his own heart in the Service of God, that made him pour out that Prayer, Pſal. 86. 1. Unite my heart to fear thy Name.

The Method in which I ſhall improve the Point, ſhall be this.

1. Firſt, I ſhall enquire what the keeping of the heart ſuppoſes and imports.

2. Secondly, Aſſign divers Reaſons, why Chriſtians muſt make this the great work and buſineſs of their Lives.

3. Thirdly, Point at thoſe ſpecial ſeaſons which eſpecially call for this diligence in keeping the heart.

4. Fourthly and laſtly, Apply the whole in ſeveral Uſes.

1. What the keeping of the Heart ſuppoſes and imports.

To keep the heart neceſſarily ſuppoſes a previous Work of Sanctification; which hath ſet the heart right, by giving it a new ſpiritual bent and inclination; for as long as the heart is not ſet right by Grace, as to its habitual frame, no Duties or Means can keep it right with God. Self is the Poiſe of the unſanctified heart, which byaſſes and moves it in all its deſigns and actions; and as long as it is ſo, it is impoſſible that any external means ſhould keep it with God.

Man by Creation was of one conſtant, uniform frame, and tenour of Spirit, held one ſtrait and even courſe; not one thought or faculty ravell'd or diſorder'd, his Mind had a perfect illumination to underſtand and know the will of God, his Will a perfect compliance therewith; his ſenſitive Appetite and other inferiour Powers, ſtood in a moſt obedient ſubordination.

Man by degeneration is become a moſt diſordered and rebellious Creature, conteſting with and oppoſing his Maker, as the firſt Cauſe, by ſelf-dependance, as the chiefeſt Good, by ſelf-love; as the higheſt Lord, by ſelf-will; and as the laſt End, by ſelf-ſeeking; and ſo is quite diſordered, and all his acts irregular: His illuminated Underſtanding is clouded with ignorance, his complying Will, full of rebellion and ſtubbornneſs; his ſubordinate Powers, caſting off the dominion and government of the ſuperiour Faculties.

But by Regeneration this diſordered Soul is ſet ight again; Sanctification being the rectifying nd due framing, or as the Scripture phraſes it, he renovation of the Soul after the Image of God; ph. 4. 24. in which, ſelf-dependance is removed y Faith; ſelf-love, by the love of God; ſelf-will, y ſubjection and obedience to the will of God; nd ſelf-ſeeking, by ſelf-denial. The darkned nderſtanding is again illuminated, Eph. 1. 18. the fractory Will ſweetly ſubdued, Pſal. 110. 3. the bellious Appetite, or Concupiſcence, gradually conquered, Rom. 6. 7. per tot. And thus the Soul which Sin had univerſally depraved, is again by Grace reſtored and rectified.

This being preſuppoſed, it will not be difficult to apprehend, what it is to keep the heart, which is nothing elſe but the conſtant care and diligence of ſuch a renewed man, to preſerve his ſoul in that holy frame to which Grace hath reduced it, and daily ſtrives to hold it.

For though Grace hath in great meaſure rectified the Soul, and given it an habitual and heavenly temper; yet Sin often actually diſcompoſes it again; ſo that even a gracious heart is like a muſical Inſtrument, which though it be never ſo exactly tuned, a ſmall matter brings it out of tune again; yea, hang it aſide but a little, and it will need ſetting again, before you can play another Leſſon on it; even ſo ſtands the caſe with gracious hearts; if they are in frame in one duty, yet how dull, dead and diſordered when they come to another? And therefore every duty needs a particular preparation of the heart, Job 11. 13. If thou prepare thine heart, and ſtretch out thy hands towards him: Well then, to keep the heart, is carefully to preſerve it from ſin, which diſorders it; and maintain that ſpiritual and gracious frame which fits it for a life of communion with God: and this includes theſe ſix Acts in it.

1. Firſt, Frequent obſervation of the frame of the heart, turning in and examining how the caſe ſtands with it, this is one part of the work. Carnal and formal perſons take no heed to this, they cannot be brought to confer with their own hearts; there are ſome men and women that have lived forty or fifty years in the world, and have ſcarce had one hours diſcourſe with their own hearts all that while: 'Tis an hard thing to bring a Man and himſelf together upon ſuch an account; but Saints know thoſe Soliloquies and Self-conferences to be of excellent uſe and advantage. The Heathen could ſay, Anima ſedendo & quieſcendo fit ſapiens, the Soul is made wiſe by ſitting ſtill in quietneſs; though Bankrupts care not to look in their Books of Accompt, yet upright hearts will know whether they go backward or forward, Pſal. 77. 6. I commune with mine own heart; The heart can never be kept, until its caſe be examin'd and underſtood.

2. It includes deep Humiliations for heart-evils and diſorders; thus Hezekiah humbled himſelf for the Pride of his heart, 2 Chron. 32. 26. Thus the People were order'd to ſpread forth their hands to God in Prayer, in a ſenſe of the Plague of their own Hearts, 1 Kings 8. 38. Upon this account many an upright heart had been laid low before God: O what an heart have I? they have in their Confeſſions pointed at the heart, the pained place, Lord here is the wound, here is the Plague-ſore. It is with the heart well kept, as it is with the eye, which is a fit emblem of it, if a ſmall duſt get into the eye, it will never leave twinkling and watering till it have wept it out: So the upright heart cannot be at reſt till it have wept out its troubles, and poured out its complaints before the Lord.

3. It includes earneſt Supplications and inſtant Prayer for heart purifying and rectifying Grace, when Sin hath defiled and diſorder'd it, ſo Pſal. 119. 12. Cleanſe thou me from ſecret faults; and Pſal. 86. 11. Unite my heart to fear thy Name. Saints have always many ſuch Petitions depending before the Throne of Grace; this is the thing which is moſt pleaded by them with God: When they are praying for outward Mercies, happily their Spirits may be more remiſs, but when it comes to the Heart-caſe, then they intend their Spirits to the utmoſt, fill their Mouths with Arguments, weep and make ſupplication; Oh, for a heart to love God more! To hate ſin more, to walk more evenly with God; Lord deny not to me ſuch a heart whatever thou deny me; Give me an heart to fear thee, love, and delight in thee, if I beg my bread in deſolate places. 'Tis obſerved of holy Mr. Bradford, that when he was confeſſing ſin, he would never give over confeſſing untill he had felt ſome brokenneſs of heart for that ſin; and when praying for any ſpiritual Mercy, would never give over that ſuit, till he had got ſome reliſh of that Mercy; that's the third thing included in keeping the heart.

4. It includes the impoſing of ſtrong ingagements and bonds upon our ſelves to walk more accurately with God, and avoid the occaſions whereby the heart may be induced to ſin: Well compoſed, adviſed and deliberate Vows, are in ſome caſes of excellent uſe to guard the Heart, againſt ſome ſpecial ſin; ſo Job 31. 1. I made a covenant with mine eyes; by this means, holy ones have over-awed their Souls, and preſerved themſelves from defilement by ſome ſpecial heart-corruptions.

5. It includes a conſtant holy jealouſie over our own hearts; quick-ſighted ſelf-jealouſie is an excellent preſervative from ſin, he that will keep his heart, muſt have the eyes of his Soul awake and open upon all the diſorderly and tumultuous ſtirrings of his Affections; if the Affections break looſe, and the Paſſions be ſtirred, the Soul muſt diſcover and ſuppreſs them before they get to an height: O my Soul, doſt thou well in this? My tumultuous thonghts and paſſions, where is your Commiſſion? State viri, quæ cauſa via? quive eſtis in armis. Virg.

Happy is the man that thus feareth always, Prov. 28. 14. By this fear of the Lord it is that Men depart from evil, ſhake off ſecurity, and preſerve themſelves from iniquity; he that will keep his heart muſt feed with fear, rejoice with fear, and paſs the whole time of his ſojourning here in fear, and all little enough to keep the heart from ſin.

6. And laſtly, to add no more, It includes the reallizing of God's Preſence with us, and ſetting the Lord always before us: This the People of God have found a ſingular means to keep their hearts upright, and awe them from ſin; when the eye of our Faith is fixed upon the eye of God's Omniſcience, we dare not let out our thoughts and affections to vanity: Holy Job durſt not ſuffer his heart to yield to an impure, vain thought; and what was it that moved him to ſo great a Circumſpection? Why, he tells you, Job 31. 4. Doth he not ſee my ways, and count all my ſteps? Walk before me (ſaith God to Abraham) and be thou perfect, Gen. 17. 1. Even as Parents uſe to ſet their Children in the Congregation before them, knowing that elſe they will be toying and playing; ſo would the Heart of the beſt man too, were it not for the Eye of God.

In theſe and ſuch like particulars, do gracious Souls expreſs the care they have of their hearts; they are as careful to prevent the breaking looſe of their corruptions in times of temptation, as Seamen are to bind faſt the Guns, that they break not looſe in a ſtorm; as careful to preſerve the ſweetneſs and comfort they have got from God in any duty, as one that comes out of an hot Bath, or great Sweat, is of taking Cold, by going forth into the chill Air. This is the work, and of all works in Religion it is the moſt difficult, conſtant and important work.

1. 'Tis the hardeſt work; Heart-work is hard work indeed: To ſhuffle over Religious Duties with a looſe and heedleſs Spirit, will coſt no great pains; but to ſet thy ſelf before the Lord, and tie up thy looſe and vain thoughts to a conſtant and ſerious attendance upon him; this will coſt thee ſomething: To attain a facility and dexterity of Language in Prayer, and put thy meaning into apt and decent expreſſions, is eaſie; but to get thy heart broken for ſin, whilſt thou art confeſſing it; melted with free grace, whilſt thou art bleſſing God for it; to be really aſhamed and humbled through the apprehenſions of God's infinite holineſs, and to keep thy heart in this frame, not only in, but after Duty; will ſurely coſt thee ſome groans, and travelling pains of Soul: To repreſs the outward acts of ſin; and compoſe the external part of thy life in a laudable and comely manner, is no great matter, even carnal perſons by the force of common Principles can do this; but to kill the root of corruption within, to ſet and keep up an holy Government over thy thoughts, to have all things lye ſtraight and orderly in the heart, this is not eaſie.

2. 'Tis a conſtant work; the keeping of the heart is ſuch a work, as is never done till life be done; this labour and our life, end together: It is with a Chriſtian in this buſineſs, as it is with Sea-men, that have ſprung a Leak at Sea; if they tug not conſtantly at the Pump, the water encreaſes upon them, and will quickly ſink them: 'Tis in vain for them to ſay the work is hard, and we are weary: There is no time or condition in the life of a Chriſtian, which will ſuffer an intermiſſion of this work. It is in the keeping watch over our hearts, as it was in the keeping up of Moſes his hands, whilſt Iſrael and Amalek were fighting below, Exod. 17. 12. No ſooner do Moſes his hands grow heavy and ſink down, but Amalek prevails. You know it coſt David and Peter many a ſad day and night for intermitting the watch over their own hearts but a few minutes.

3. 'Tis the moſt Important Buſineſs of a Chriſtians life; without this, we are but Formaliſts in Religion: All our Profeſſions, Gifts and Duties ſignifie nothing: My Son, give me thine heart, Prov. 23. 26. God is pleaſed to call that a gift, which is indeed a debt; he will put this honour upon the Creature to receive it from him in the way of a gift; but if this be not given him, he regards not whatever elſe you bring to him: There is ſo much only of worth and value in what we do, as there is of heart in it. Concerning the heart, God ſeems to ſay, as Joſeph of Benjamin, If you bring not Benjamin with you, you ſhall not ſee my face. Among the Heathens, when the Beaſt was cut up for Sacrifice, the firſt thing the Prieſt look't upon was the heart, and if that were unſound and naught, the Sacrifice was rejected. God rejects all duties (how glorious ſoever in other reſpects) offered him without a heart. He that performs duty without a heart, viz. heedleſly, is no more accepted with God, than he that performs it with a double heart, viz. hypocritical, Iſa. 66. 3. And thus I have briefly open'd the nature of the Duty, what is imported in this Phraſe, Keep thy Heart.

2. Next, I ſhall give you ſome rational Account why Chriſtians ſhould make this the great buſineſs of their lives, to keep their hearts?

The importance and neceſſity of making this our great and main buſineſs, will manifeſtly appear in that, 1. The honour of God. 2. The ſincerity of our Profeſſion. 3. The beauty of our Converſation. 4. The comfort of our Souls. 5. The improvement of our graces: And, 6. Our ſtability in the hour of Temptation, are all wrapt up in, and dependent on our ſincerity and care in the management of this work.

1. The Glory of God is much concerned therein; heart-evils are very provoking evils to the Lord. The Schools do well obſerve, that outward ſins are majoris infamiæ, ſins of greater infamy, but heart-ſins are majoris reatus, ſins of deeper guilt. How ſeverely hath the great God declared his Wrath from Heaven againſt heart-wickedneſs? The great Crime for which the old World ſtands indicted, Gen. 6. 5, 6, 7. is heart-wickedneſs; God ſaw that every imagination (or fiction) of their heart was only evil, and that continually: for which he ſent the dreadfulleſt Judgment that was ever executed ſince the World began: And the Lord ſaid, I will deſtroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth, both man and beaſt, and the creeping things, and the fowls of Heaven, for it repenteth me that I have made man, v. 7. We find not their murders, adulteries, blaſphemies, (though they were defiled with theſe) particularly alledged againſt them; but the evils of their hearts: Yea, that which God was ſo provoked by, as to give up his peculiar inheritance into the enemies hand, was the evil of their hearts, Jer. 4. 14. O Jeruſalem, waſh thine heart from wickedneſs, that thou maiſt be ſaved; how long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within thee? The wickedneſs and vanity of their thoughts God took ſpecial notice of; and becauſe of this, the Chaldean muſt come upon them as a Lion from his thickets, v. 7. and tear them to pieces. For the very ſin of thoughts it was that God threw down the faln Angels from Heaven, and keeps them ſtill in everlaſting Chains to the Judgment to which they are reſerved; as Priſoners that have moſt Irons laid upon them, may be ſuppoſed to be the greateſt Malefactors: And what was their ſin? Why only ſpiritual wickedneſs, for they having no bodily Organs, could act nothing externally againſt God. Yea, meer heart-evils are ſo provoking, that for them he rejects with indignation all the duties that ſome men perform unto him, Iſa. 66. 3. He that killeth an x, is as if he ſlew a man; he that ſacrificeth a Lamb, as if he cut off a Dogs neck; he that offereth Oblation, as if he offered Swines blood; he that rneth incenſe, as if he bleſſed an Idol. In what ords could the abhorrence of a Creatures acti s be more fully expreſſed by the holy God? urder and Idolatry are not more vile in his ac unt than their Sacrifices, though materially ſuch himſelf appointed: And what made them ſo? e following words inform us, Their ſoul delighteth heir abominations.

To conclude, ſuch is the vileneſs of meer rt-ſins, that the Scriptures ſometimes intimate difficulty of pardon for them. So in the caſe of Simon Magus, Acts 8. 21. his heart was not right, he had vile thoughts of God, and the things of God, the Apoſtle bids him repent and pray, if perhaps the thoughts of his heart might be forgiven him. O then never ſlight heart-evils! for by theſe God is highly wronged and provoked, and for this reaſon, let every Chriſtian make it his work to keep his heart with all diligence.

The ſincerity of our Profeſſion much depends upon the care and conſcience we have in keeping our hearts; for it's moſt certain, that a man is but an hypocrite in his Profeſſion, how curious ſoever he be in the externals of Religion, that is heedleſs and careleſs of the frame of his heart; you have a pregnant inſtance of this in the caſe of Jehu, 2 Kings 10. 31. But Jehu took no heed to walk in the ways of the Lord God of Iſrael with his heart. That Context gives us an Account of the great ſervice perform'd by Jehu againſt the Houſe of Ahab and Baal, as alſo of a great temporal reward given him by God for that ſervice, even that his children to the fourth Generation ſhould ſit upon the Throne of Iſrael. And yet in theſe words Jehu is cenſured for an Hypocrite; though God approved and rewarded the work, yet he abhorred and rejected the perſon that did it, as hypocritical: And wherein lay his hypocriſie, but in this, that he took no heed to walk in the ways of the Lord with his heart, (i. e.) he did all inſincerely and for ſelf-ends? And though the work he did were materially good, yet he not purging his heart from thoſe unworthy ſelf-deſigns in doing it, was an hypocrite: And Simon, of whom we ſpake before, though he appeared ſuch a perſon that the Apoſtle could not regularly refuſe him, yet his hypocriſie was quickly diſcovered: And what diſcovered it but this, that though he profeſſed and aſſociated himſelf with the Saints, yet he was a ſtranger to the mortification of heart-ſins? Thy heart is not right with God, Acts 8. 21. ——'Tis true, there is a great difference among Chriſtians themſelves, in their diligence and dexterity about heart-work; ſome are more converſant and ſucceſsful in it then others are; but he that takes no heed to his heart, he that is not careful to order it aright before God, is but a Hypocrite, Ezek. 33. 31, 32. And they come unto me as the people cometh, and ſit before thee (as my people) and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for with their mouth they ſhew much love, but their heart goes after their covetouſneſs. Here were a company of formal hypocrites, as is evident by that expreſſion (as my people) like them, but not of them: And what made them ſo? Their outſide was fair, here were reverent poſtures, high profeſſions, much ſeeming joy and delight in Ordinances, Thou art to them as a lovely Song; yea, but for all that, they kept not their hearts with God in thoſe Duties, their hearts were commanded by their Luſts, they went after their Covetouſneſs; had they kept their hearts with God, all had been well; but not regarding which way their heart went in duty, there lay the core of their hypocriſie.

Object. If any upright Soul ſhould hence infer, then I am an hypocrite too, for many times my heart departs from God in Duty, do what I can, yet I cannot hold it cloſe with God.

Sol. To this I anſwer, The very Objection carries in it its own Solution: Thou ſayeſt, Do what I can, yet I cannot keep my heart with God. Soul, if thou doſt what thou canſt, thou haſt the bleſſing of an upright, though God ſees good to exerciſe thee under the affliction of a diſcompoſed heart. There remains ſtill ſome wildneſs in the thoughts and fancies of the beſt to humble them; but if you find a care before to prevent them; and oppoſition againſt them when they come, grief and ſorrow afterwards; you will find enough to clear you from raigning hypocriſie.

(1.) This fore-care is ſeen partly in laying up the word in thine heart to prevent them, Pſal. 119. 11. Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee: partly in our endeavours to engage our hearts to God, Jer. 30. 21. and partly in begging preventing Grace from God in our onſets upon duty, Pſal. 119. 36, 37. 'tis a good ſign where this care goes before a Duty.

And (2.) 'tis a ſweet ſign of uprightneſs to oppoſe them in their firſt riſe, Pſal. 119. 113. I hate vain thoughts. Gal. 5. 17. The ſpirit luſteth againſt the fleſh.

And, (3.) Thy after-grief diſcovers thy upright heart; if with Hezekiah thou art humbled for the evils of thy heart, thou haſt no reaſon from thoſe diſorders to queſtion the integrity of it; but to ſuffer ſin to lodge quietly in the heart, to let thy heart habitually and uncontrolledly wander from God, is a ſad and dangerous ſymptom indeed.

3. The beauty of our Converſation ariſes from the heavenly frames, and holy order of our ſpirits; there is a ſpiritual luſtre and beauty in the Converſation of Saints, T*he righteous is more excellent than his Neighbour*, they ſhine as the Lights of the World; but whatever luſter and beauty is in their lives, comes from the excellency of their ſpirits; as the Candle within puts a luſtre upon the Lanthorn in which it ſhines. It is impoſſible that a diſordered and neglected heart, ſhould ever produce a well-ordered converſation; and ſince (as the Text obſerves) the iſſues or ſtreams of Life flow out of the heart as their Fountain, it muſt needs follow, that ſuch as the heart is, the life will be: hence, 1 Pet. 2. 11, 12. Abſtain from fleſhly luſts——having your converſation honeſt * or beautiful, as the Greek word imports. So Iſa. 55. 7. Let the wicked forſake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts. His way notes the courſe of his life, his thoughts the frame of his heart; and therefore ſince the way and courſe of his life flows from his thoughts, or the frame of his heart, both or neither will be forſaken: The heart is the womb of all actions, theſe actions are virtually, and ſeminally contained in our thoughts, theſe thoughts being once made up into affections, are quickly made out into ſuitable actions and practiſes. If the heart be wicked, then as Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 15. 19. Out of the heart proceed evil Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, &c. Mark the order, firſt, wanton, or revengeful thoughts, then unclean or murderous practiſes.

And if the heart be holy and ſpiritual, then as David ſpeaks from ſweet experience, in Pſal. 45. 1. My heart is (inditing) a good matter, I ſpeak of the things which (I have made) my tongue is as the pen of a ready writer. Here's a Life richly beautified with good works; ſome ready made; I will ſpeak of the things which I have made: Others upon the Wheel making, my Heart is enditing, but both proceeding from the heavenly frame of his Heart.

Put but the Heart in frame and the Life will quickly diſcover that it is ſo. I think it is not very difficult to diſcern by the Duties and Converſes of Chriſtians, what frames their Spirits are under; take a Chriſtian in a good frame, and how ſerious, heavenly, and profitable will his Converſes and Duties be! What a lovely Companion is he, during the continuance of it! 'Twould do any ones heart good to be with him at ſuch a time, Pſal. 37. 30, 31. The mouth of the righteous ſpeaketh wiſdom, and his tongue talketh of judgment, the Law of his God is in his heart.

When the heart is up with God, and full of God, how dexterouſly and ingeniouſly will he wind in ſpiritual diſcourſe, improving every occaſion and advantage to ſome heavenly purpoſe? Few words run then at the waſte ſpout.

And what elſe can be the reaſon, why the Diſcourſes and Duties of many Chriſtians are become ſo frothy and unprofitable, their Communion both with God, and one another, become as a dry ſtalk, but becauſe their Hearts are neglected? Surely this muſt be the reaſon of it, and verily it is an evil greatly to be bewailed; for want of this Chriſtian-fellowſhip it became a ſapleſs thing, ſo the attracting beauty that was wont to ſhine from the Converſations of the Saints upon the Faces and Conſciences of the World, (which if it did not allure, and bring them in love with the ways of God; yet at leaſt left a teſtimony in their Conſciences of the excellency of thoſe Men and their way) this is in a great meaſure loſt, to the unſpeakable detriment of Religion.

Time was when Chriſtians did carry it at ſuch a rate, that the World ſtood at a gaze at them, as that word ξενίζονται, 1 Pet. 4. 4. Imports, their Life and Language was of a different ſtrain from others, their Tongues diſcovered them to be Galileans where-ever they came; but now ſince vain ſpeculations, and fruitleſs controverſies have ſo much obtained, and heart-work, practical godlineſs ſo much neglected among Profeſſors, the caſe is ſadly altered, their diſcourſe is become like other Mens: If they come among you now, they may (to allude to that, Acts 2. 6.) Hear every Man ſpeak in his own language. And truly I have little hope to ſee this evil redreſſed, and the credit of Religion again repaired; till Chriſtians fall to their old work, till they ply heart-work cloſer: When the Salt of heavenly mindedneſs is again caſt into the Spring, the Streams will run clearer and ſweeter.

4. The comfort of our Souls doth much depend upon the keeping of our Hearts, for he that is negligent in attending his own Heart, is (ordinarily) a great ſtranger to aſſurance, and the ſweet comforts flowing from it.

Indeed, if the Antinomian Doctrine were true, which teaches you to reject all marks and ſigns for the trial of your conditions, telling you it is only the Spirit that immediately aſſures you by witneſſing your Adoption directly without them, then you might be careleſs of your Hearts, yea, ſtrangers to them, and yet no ſtrangers to comfort: But ſince both Scripture and Experience do confute this dotage, I hope you will never look for comfort in that unſcriptural way. I deny not but it is the work and office of the Spi to aſſure you, and yet do confidently affirm, tha if ever you attain Aſſurance in the ordinary wa wherein God diſpenſes it, you muſt take pa with your own Hearts; you may expect your comforts upon eaſier terms; but I am miſtaken, if ever you enjoy them upon any other: Give all diligence, prove your ſelves: This is the Scripture way. I remember Mr. Roberts in his Treatiſe of the Covenant, tells us, That he knew a Chriſtian who in the Infancy of his Chriſtianity, ſo vehemently panted after the infallible Aſſurance of God's Love, that for a long time together he earneſtly deſired ſome voice from Heaven; yea, ſometimes walking in the ſolitary Fields, earneſtly deſired ſome miraculous voice from the Trees and Stones there; this, after many deſires and longings was denied him: But in time a better was afforded in the ordinary way of ſearching the Word, and his own Heart. An inſtance of the like nature the Learned Gerſon gives us, Of one that was driven, by Temptation, upon the very borders of deſperation; at laſt being ſweetly ſetled and aſſured, one asked him, How he attained it? He anſwered, Non ex nova aliqua revelatione, &c. Not by any extraordinary Revelation, but by ſubjecting his underſtanding to the Scriptures, and comparing his own Heart with them. The Spirit indeed aſſures by witneſſing our Adoption; and he witneſſeth two ways.

(1.) Objectively, (i. e.) by working thoſe Graces in our Souls which are the Conditions of the Promiſe, and ſo the Spirit and his Graces in us are all one; the Spirit of God dwelling in us, is a mark of our Adoption. Now the Spirit cannot be diſcerned in his Eſſence, but in his Operations; and to diſcern theſe, is to diſcern the Spirit; and how theſe ſhould be diſcerned, without ſerious ſearching, and diligent watching of the Heart, I cannot imagine.

(2.) The other way of the Spirits witneſſing is effectively, (i. e.) by irradiating the Soul with a Grace-diſcovering Light, ſhining upon his own work; and this in order of nature follows the former work: He firſt infuſes the Grace, and then opens the Eye of the Soul to ſee it. Now ſince the Heart is the ſubject of that infuſed Grace, even this way of the Spirit's witneſſing alſo includes the neceſſity of keeping carefully our own Hearts: For,

(1.) A neglected Heart is ſo confuſed and dark, that the little Grace which is in it, is not ordinarily diſcernable: The moſt accurate and laborious Chriſtians, that take moſt pains, and ſpend moſt time about their hearts, do yet find it very difficult to diſcover the pure and genuine workings of the Spirit there: How then ſhall the Chriſtian which is (comparatively) negligent and remiſs about heart-work, be ever able to diſcover it? Sincerity, which is the quæſitum, the thing ſought for, lies in the heart like a ſmall piece of Gold in the bottom of a River, he that will find it muſt ſtay till the water be clear and ſettled, and then he ſhall ſee it ſparkling at the bottom; and that the heart may be clear and ſettled, How much pains and watching, care and diligence will it coſt?

(2.) God doth not uſually indulge lazy and negligent Souls with the Comforts of Aſſurance, he will not ſo much as ſeem to patronize ſloth and careleſneſs; he will give it, but it ſhall be in his own way: His command hath united our care and comfort together; they are miſtaken that think the beautiful Child of Aſſurance may be born without pangs: Ah, how many ſolitary hours have the People of God ſpent in heart-examination? How many times have they looked into the Word, and then into their hearts? Sometime they thought they diſcovered Sincerity, and were even ready to draw forth the triumphant concluſion of Aſſurance; then comes a doubt they cannot reſolve, and daſhes all again; many hopes and fears, doubtings and reaſonings they have had in their own breaſts, before they arrived at a comfortable ſettlement.

To conclude, Suppoſe it poſſible for a careleſs Chriſtian to attain Aſſurance, yet its impoſſible he ſhould long retain it; for it is with thoſe whoſe hearts are big with the joys of Aſſurance, as with a pregnant Woman ſubject to miſcarriages; if extraordinary care be not uſed, it is a thouſand to one if ever ſhe embrace a living Child: So 'tis here, a little pride, vanity, careleſneſs, daſhes all that for which thou haſt been labouring a long time in many a weary Duty. Since then the joy of our life, the comfort of our Souls, riſes and falls with our diligence in this work; keep your hearts with all diligence.

5. The Improvement of our Graces depends on the keeping of our hearts; I never knew Grace thrive in a negligent and careleſs Soul; the habits and roots of Grace are planted in the heart; and the dependency is radicated there, the more thriving and flouriſhing Grace is: In Eph. 3. 17. We read of being rooted in Grace: Grace in the heart is the root of every gracious word in the mouth, and of every holy work in the hand, Pſal. 116. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 13. 'Tis true, Chriſt is the root of a Chriſtian; but Chriſt is Origo originans, the originating Root, and Grace Origo originata, a root originated, planted and influenced by Chriſt; according as this thrives under Divine Influences, ſo the acts of Grace are more or leſs fruitful or vigorous: Now in a heart not kept with care and diligence, theſe fructifying influences are ſtopt and cut off, multitudes of vanities break in upon it, and devour its ſtrength; the heart is as it were the Paſture, in which multitudes of thoughts are fed every day; a gracious heart diligently kept, feeds many precious thoughts of God in a day, Pſal. 139. 17. How precious are thy thoughts to me, O God! How great is the ſum of them? If I ſhould count them, they are more in number then the ſand; and when I awake, I am ſtill with thee. And as the gracious heart feeds and nouriſhes them, ſo they refreſh and feaſt the heart, Pſal. 63. 5, 6. My ſoul is filled as with marrow and fatneſs whilſt I think upon thee, &c. But in the diſregarded heart, ſwarms of vain and fooliſh thoughts are perpetually working, and juſtle out thoſe ſpiritual Idea's and thoughts of God, by which the Soul ſhould be refreſhed.

Beſides, the careleſs heart makes nothing out of any Duty or Ordinance it performs or attends on, and yet theſe are the Conduits of Heaven from whence Grace is watered and made fruitful: A man may go with an heedleſs ſpirit from Ordinance to Ordinance, abide all his days under the choiceſt teaching, and yet never be improved by them; for heart-neglect is a leak in the bottom, no heavenly influences, how rich ſoever, abide in that Soul, Math. 13. 3, 4. The heart that lies open and common, like the Highway, free for all Paſſengers, when the Seed fell on it, the Fowls came and devoured it. Alas! it is not enough to hear, unleſs we take heed how we hear; A man may pray, and never the better, unleſs we watch unto Prayer. In a word, all Ordinances, Means and Duties are bleſſed unto the improvement of Grace, according to the care and ſtrictneſs we uſe in keeping our hearts in them.

6. Laſtly, The ſtability of our Souls in the hour of Temptation, will be much according to the care and conſcience we have of keeping our hearts; the careleſs heart is an eaſie Prey to Satan in the hour of Temptation, his main Batteries are raiſed againſt that Fort-Royal, the Heart; if he wins that, he wins all, for it commands the whole man; and alas, how eaſie a conqueſt is a neglected heart? 'tis no more difficult to ſurpriſe it, than for an Enemy to enter that City, whoſe Gates are open and unguarded; 'tis the watchful heart that diſcovers and ſuppreſſes the Temptation before it comes to its ſtrength. Divines obſerve this to be the method in which Temptations are ripened and brought to their full ſtrength.

ὄρεξις. There is (1.) The irritation of the Object, or that power is hath to work upon and provoke our corrupt Nature; which is either done by the real preſence of the Object, or elſe by Speculation, when the Object (though abſent) is held out by the Phantaſie before the Soul.

ὁρμὴ. (2.) Then follows the motion of the ſenſitive Appetite, which is ſtirred and provoked by the Phantaſie, repreſenting it as a ſenſual good, as having profit or pleaſure in it.

βούλησις. (3.) Then there is a conſultation in the Mind about it, deliberating about the likelieſt means of accompliſhing it.

αἵρησις. (4.) Next follows the election or choice of the Will.

βούλημα. (5.) And laſtly, The deſire or full engagement of the Will to it; all this may be done in a few moments, for the debates of the Soul are quick, and ſoon ended: When it comes thus far, then the Heart is won, Satan hath entred victoriouſly, and diſplayed his Colours upon the Walls of that Royal Fort; but had the Heart been well guarded at firſt, it had never come to this height; the Temptation had been ſtopt in the firſt or ſecond act; and indeed there it's ſtopt eaſily; for it is in the motions of a tempted Soul to Sin, as in the motion of a Stone falling from the Brow of an Hill, its eaſily ſtopt at firſt, but when once it's ſet a going, Vires acquirit eundo: And therefore it's the greateſt Wiſdom in the World to obſerve the firſt motions of the Heart, to check and ſtop ſin there: The motions of ſin are weakeſt at firſt; a little care and watchfulneſs may prevent much miſchief now, which the careleſs Heart not heeding, is brought within the power of Temptation; as the Syrians were brought blindfold into the midſt of Samaria, before they knew where they were.

By this time, Reader, I hope thou art fully ſatisfied how conſequential and neceſſary a work the keeping of the Heart is, it being a Duty that wraps up ſo many dear Intereſts of the Soul in it.

3. Next, according to the method propounded, I proceed to point out thoſe ſpecial Seaſons in the Life of a Chriſtian, which require and call for our utmoſt diligence in keeping the Heart: For though (as was obſerved before) the Duty binds ad ſemper and there be no time or condition of Life in which we may be excuſed from this work; yet there are ſome ſignal Seaſons, critical Hours, requiring more than a common vigilance over the Heart.

And the firſt,

1. Seaſon. “ Is the time of Proſperity, when “ Providence ſmiles upon us, and dandles us up-
“ on her knee. Now Chriſtian, keep thy Heart
“ with all diligence; for now 'twill be exceed“ ing apt to grow ſecure, proud and earthly, “ Rara virtus eſt humilitas honorata (ſaith Ber- “ nard (to ſee a man humble under Proſperity,
“ is one of the greateſt Rarities in the World.
“ Even a good Hezekiah could not hide a vain-“ glorious Temper under his Temptation, and “ hence that Caution to Iſrael, Deut. 6. 10, 11, 12.
“ And it ſhall be when the Lord thy God ſhall have “ brought thee into the Land which he ſware to thy “ Fathers, to Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, to give “ thee great and goodly Cities which thou buildeſt not,
“ and houſes full of all good things which thou filleſt
“ not, &c. Then beware leſt thou forget the Lord: And “ indeed ſo it fell out, for Jeſurun waxed fat and “ kicked, Deut. 32. 15.

Now then, the firſt Caſe will be this, viz.

1. Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from Pride and carnal Security under the ſmiles of Providence, and confluence of Creature-comforts?

There are ſeven choice helps to ſecure the Heart from the dangerous Snares of Proſperity; the firſt is this.

1. To conſider the dangerous inſnaring Temptations attending a pleaſant and proſperous condition; few, yea, very few of thoſe that live in the pleaſures and proſperity of this World, eſcape everlaſting perdition, Matth. 19. 24. 'Tis eaſier (ſaith Chriſt) for a Camel to paſs through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven, and 1 Cor. 1. 26. Not many mighty, not many noble are called. It might juſtly make us tremble when the Scripture tells us in general, that few ſhall be ſaved; much more when it tell us, that of that rank and ſort of which we are, but few ſhall be ſaved. When Joſhuah called all the Tribes of Iſrael to Lot upon them for the diſcovery of Achan, doubtleſs Achan feared; when the Tribe of Judah was taken, his fear increaſed; but when the Family of the Zarhites was taken, it was time then to tremble. So when the Scripture comes ſo near as to tell us that of ſuch a ſort of Men very few ſhall eſcape, 'tis time to look about; miror ſi poteſt ſervari aliquis rectorum, ſaith Chryſoſtom; I ſhould wonder if any of the Rulers be ſaved. Oh how many have been Coached to Hell in the Chariots of earthly Pleaſures, whilſt others have been Whipt to Heaven by the Rod of Affliction? How few, like the Daughter of Tyre, come to Chriſt with a gift! How few among the Rich intreat his favour!

2. It may yet keep us more humble and watchful in Proſperity, if we conſider that among Chriſtians many have been much the worſe for it; How good had it been for ſome of them if they had never known Proſperity! When they were in a low condition, how humble, ſpiritual and heavenly were they; but when advanced, what an apparent alteration hath been upon their Spirits? 'Twas ſo with Iſrael; when they were in a low condition in the Wilderneſs, then Iſrael was Holineſs to the Lord, Jer. 2. 23. But when they came into Canaan, and were fed in a fat paſture, then, We are Lords, we will come no more unto thee, ver. 31. Outward Gains are ordinarily attended with inward Loſſes, as in a low condition, their civil Imployments were wont to have a tang and ſavour of their Duties, ſo in an exalted condition their Duties commonly have a tang of the world. He indeed is rich in Grace, whoſe Graces are not hindred by his Riches; there are but few Jehoſaphat's in the World, of whom it is ſaid, 2 Chron. 17. 5, 6. He had ſilver and gold in abundance, and his heart was lifted up in the way of God's commands: Will not this keep thy Heart humble in Proſperity, to think how dear many godly Men have paid for their Riches, that through them they have loſt that which all the World cannot purchaſe? Then in the next place,

3. Keep down thy vain heart by this Conſideration, That God values no man a jot the more for theſe things. God values no Man by outward Excellencies, but by inward Graces, they are the internal Ornaments of the Spirit, which are of great price in God's Eyes, 1 Pet. 3. 4. he deſpiſes all wordly Glory, and excepts no Man's perſon, but in every nation, he that feareth God, and worketh righteouſneſs, is accepted of him, Acts 10. 35. Indeed if the Judgment of God went by the ſame Rule that Man's doth, we might value our ſelves by theſe things, and ſtand upon them. But as one ſaid (when dying) I ſhall not appear before God as a Doctor, but as a Man; tantus quiſquis eſt, quantus eſt apud Deum. So much every Man is, and no more, as he is in the Judgment of God. Doth thy Heart yet ſwell? And will neither of the former Conſiderations keep it humble?

4. Then Fourthly, Conſider how bitterly many Perſons have bewailed their folly when they came to die, that ever they ſet their Hearts upon theſe things, and heartily wiſh that they had never known them. What a ſad Story was that of Pius Quintus, who dying, cried out deſpairingly, When I was in a low condition, I had ſome hopes of Salvation, but when I was advanced to be a Cardinal, I greatly doubted it, but ſince I came to the Popedom, I have no hope at all. Mr. Spencer alſo tells us a real, but ſad Story, of a Rich Oppreſſor, who had ſcraped up a great Eſtate for his only Son; when he came to die, he called his Son to him, and ſaid, Son, do you indeed love me? The Son anſwered, That Nature, beſides his paternal Indulgence, obliged him to that; then ſaid the Father, Expreſs it by this, hold thy Finger in the Candle as long as I am ſaying a Pater Noſter; the Son attempted, but could not endure it; upon that the Father brake out into theſe Expreſſions, Thou canſt not ſuffer the burning of thy Finger for me, but to get this Wealth, I have hazarded my Soul for thee, and muſt burn Body and Soul in Hell for thy ſake; thy pains would have been but for a moment, but mine will be unquenchable Fire.

5. The Heart may be kept humble, by conſidering of what a clogging nature earthly things are to a Soul heartily engaged in the way to Heaven, they ſhut out much of Heaven from us at preſent, though they may not ſhut us out of Heaven at laſt. If thou conſider they ſelf under the notion of a Stranger in this World, travelling for Heaven, and ſeeking a better Countrey, thou haſt then as much reaſon to be taken and delighted with theſe things, as a weary Horſe hath with a heavy Cloak-bag: There was a ſerious truth in that Atheiſtical Scoff of Julian, when he took away the Chriſtians Eſtates, and told them, It was to make them fitter for the Kingdom of Heaven.

6. Is thy Spirit for all this flatulent and lofty, then urge upon it the conſideration of that aweful day of Reckoning, wherein according to our receipts of Mercies ſhall be our accompts for them: And methinks this ſhould awe and humble the vaineſt Heart that ever was in the Breaſt of a Saint. Know for certain, that the Lord records all the Mercies that ever he gave thee, from the begining, to the end of thy Life, Micah 6. 4. Remember O my people; from Shittim unto Gilgal, &c. Yea, they are exactly numbred, and recorded in order to an account; and thy account will be ſuitable, Luke 12. 48. To whomſoever much is given, of him much ſhall be required. You are but Stewards, and your Lord will come to take an account of you; And what a great account have you to make who have much of this World in your hands? What ſwift Witneſſes will your Mercies be againſt you, if this be the beſt fruits of them?

7. It is a very humbling Conſideration, That the Mercies of God ſhould work otherwiſe upon my Spirit than they uſe to do upon the Spirits of others, to whom they come as ſanctified Mercies from the Love of God. Ah Lord! What a ſad conſideration is this? Enough to lay me in the duſt: When I conſider,

(1.) That their Mercies have greatly humbled them; the higher God hath raiſed them, the lower they have laid themſelves before God. Thus did Jacob when God had given him much ſubſtance, Gen. 22. 5, 10. And Jacob ſaid, I am not worthy of the leaſt of all thy Mercies, and all the truth which thou haſt ſhewed thy ſervant; for with my ſtaff I paſſed over this Jordan, and now am become two bands. And thus it was with holy David, 2 Sam. 7. 18. When God had confirmed the Promiſe to him, to build him a Houſe, and not reject him as he did Saul, he goes in before the Lord, and ſaith, Who am I? And what is my Fathers houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? And ſo indeed God required, Deut. 26. 5. when Iſrael was to bring to God the Firſt Fruits of Canaan, A Syrian ready to periſh was my Father, &c. Do others raiſe God the higher for raiſing them? And the more God raiſes me, the more ſhall I abuſe him and exalt my ſelf? Oh what a ſad thing is this!

(2.) Others have freely aſcribed the glory of all their Enjoyments to God, and magnified not themſelves, but him, for their Mercies: So David, 2 Sam. 7. 26. Let thy name be magnified, and the houſe of thy ſervant be eſtabliſhed. He doth not fly upon the Mercy, and ſuck out the ſweetneſs of it, looking no farther than his own comfort; no, he cares for no Mercy except God be magnified in it. So Pſalm. 18. 2. when God had delivered him from all his Enemies, The Lord (ſaith he) is my ſtrength, and my rock, he is become my ſalvation. They did not put the Crown upon their own Heads, as I do.

(3) The Mercies of God have been melting Mercies unto others, melting their Souls in love to the God of their Mercies. So Hannah, 1 Sam. 2. 1. when ſhe received the Mercy of a Son, My Soul (ſaith ſhe) rejoyceth in the Lord, not in the Mercy, but in the God of the Mercy: And ſo Mary, Luke 1. 46. My ſoul doth magnifie the Lord, my ſpirit rejoiceth in God my Saviour; the word ſignifies, to make more room for God: Their Hearts were not contracted, but the more inlarged to God.

(4.) The Mercies of God have been mighty reſtraints to keep others from ſin. So Ezra 9. 13. Seeing thou our God haſt given us ſuch a deliverance as this, ſhould we again break thy Commandments? Ingenuous Souls have felt the force of the Obligations of Love, and Mercy upon them.

(5.) To conclude, the Mercies of God to others have been as Oyl to the Wheels of their Obedience, and make them fitter for ſervice, 2 Chron. 17. 5. Now if Mercies work contrarily upon my Heart, what cauſe have I to be afraid that they come not to me in love? I tell you, this is enough to damp the Spirit of any Saint, to ſee what ſweet effects they have had on others, and what ſad effects on him.

2. Seaſon. “ The ſecond ſpecial Seaſon in the “ Life of a Chriſtian, requiring more than a com“ mon diligence to keep his Heart, is the time of “ adverſity; when Providence frowns upon you,
“ and blaſts your outward Comforts, then look
“ to your Hearts, keep them with all diligence
“ from repining againſt God, or fainting under “ his Hand; for troubles, though ſanctified, are “ Troubles ſtill; even Sweet-briar, and holy “ Thiſtle have their prickles. Jonah was a good “ Man, and yet how pettiſh was his Heart under “ Affliction? Job was the Mirrour of Patience,
“ yet how was his Heart diſcompoſed by trouble?
“ You will find it as hard to get a compoſed Spi“ rit under great afflictions, as it is to fix Quick-“ ſilver: Oh the hurries and tumults which they “ occaſion even in the beſt Hearts! Well then,
“ the ſecond Caſe will be this.

2. Caſe. How a Chriſtian under great afflictions may keep his Heart from repining or diſponding under the Hand of God? Now there are Nine ſpecial Helps I ſhall here offer, to keep thy Heart in this condition; and the firſt ſhall be this, To work upon your Hearts this great Truth.

1. That by theſe croſs Providences, God is faithfully purſuing the great deſign of Electing Love upon the Souls of his People, and orders all theſe afflictions as means ſanctified to that end.

Afflictions fall not out by Caſualty, but by Counſel, Job. 5. 6. Eph. 1. 11. by this Counſel of God they are ordained as means of much ſpiritual good to Saints, Iſa. 27. 9. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, &c. Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit, &c. Rom. 8. 38. All things work together for good; they are God's Workmen upon our Hearts, to pull down the Pride and carnal Security of them; and being ſo, their Nature is changed; they are turned into Bleſſings and Benefits, Pſal. 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted. And ſure then, thou haſt no reaſon to quarrel with, but rather to admire that God ſhould concern himſelf ſo much in thy good, to uſe any means for the accompliſhing of it, Philip. 3. 11. Paul could bleſs God, if by any means he might attain the reſurrection of the dead. My Brethren, (ſaith James) count it all joy when you fall into divers temptations, Jam. 1. 2, 3. My Father is about a deſign of Love upon my Soul, and do I well to be angry with him? All that he doth is in purſuance of, and reference to ſome Eternal Glorious Ends upon my Soul. O 'tis my ignorance of God's deſign, that makes me quarrel with him! He ſaith to thee in this caſe, as to Peter, What I do thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou ſhalt know it.

2. Help. Though God hath reſerved to himſelf a liberty of afflicting his People, yet he hath tyed up his own hands by promiſe, never to take away his loving kindneſs from them. Can I look that Scripture in the Face with a repining diſcontented Spirit, 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be his Father, and he ſhall be my ſon; if he commit iniquity, I will chaſten him with the rod of men, and with the ſtripes of the children of men: nevertheleſs my mercy ſhall not depart away from him. O my Heart, my haughty Heart; doſt thou well to be diſcontented, when God hath given thee the whole Tree, with all the cluſters of comfort growing on it, becauſe he ſuffers the Wind to blow down a few Leaves? Chriſtians have two ſorts of Goods, the Goods of the Throne, and the Goods of the Footſtool; Moveables and Immoveables; if God have ſecured theſe, never let my Heart be troubled at the loſs of thoſe: Indeed, if he had cut off his Love, or diſcovenanted my Soul, I had reaſon to be caſt down; but this he hath not, he cannot do.

3. Help. It is of marvellous efficacy to keep the Heart from ſinking under affliction, to call to mind, that thine own Father hath the ordering of them: Not a Creature moves Hand or Tongue againſt thee, but by his permiſſion. Suppoſe the Cup be a bitter Cup, yet 'tis the Cup which thy Father hath given thee to drink; and canſt thou ſuſpect Poiſon to be in that Cup which he delivers thee? Fooliſh Man, put home the caſe to thine own Heart, conſult with thine own Bowels; canſt thou find in thy Heart to give thy Child that which would hurt and undo him? No, thou wouldſt as ſoon hurt thy ſelf as him; If thou then being evil, knoweſt how to give good gifts to thy children, how much more doth God? Matth. 7. 11. The very conſideration of his Nature, a God of Love, Pity, and tender Mercies, or of his relation to thee, as a Father, Husband, Friend; might be ſecurity enough, if he had not ſpoken a word, to quiet thee in this caſe; and yet you have his word too, Jer. 25. 6. I will do you no hurt. You lye too near his Heart to hurt you, nothing grieves him more than our groundleſs and unworthy ſuſpicions of his deſigns do; would it not grieve a faithful tender-hearted Phyſician, when he hath ſtudied the Caſe of his Patient, prepared the moſt excellent Receipts to ſave his Life, to hear him cry out, Oh he hath undone me! he hath poiſoned me; becauſe it gripes and pains him in the Operation? O when will you be Ingenuous!

4. Help. God reſpects you as much in a low, as in a high condition; and therefore it need not ſo much trouble you to be made low; nay, to ſpeak home, he manifeſts more of his Love, Grace, and Tenderneſs, in the time of Affliction than Proſperity. As God did not at firſt chuſe you becauſe you were high, ſo he will not forſake you becauſe you are low: Men may look ſhy upon you, and alter their reſpects, as your condition is altered: When Providence hath blaſted your Eſtates, your Summer Friends may grow ſtrange, as fearing you may be troubleſome to them; but will God do ſo? No, no; I will never leave thee nor forſake thee, Heb. 13. 5. Indeed if adverſity and poverty could bar you from acceſs to God, it were a ſad condition; but you may go to God as freely as ever, My God (ſaith the Church) will hear me, Micah 7. Poor David, when ſtript out of all earthly Comforts, could encourage himſelf in the Lord his God, and why cannot you? Suppoſe your Husband or Child had loſt all at Sea, and ſhould come to you in Rags; could you deny the Relation, or refuſe to entertain him? If you would not, much leſs will God: Why then are you ſo troubled? Though your condition be changed, your Fathers love and reſpects are not changed.

5 Help. And what if by the loſs of outward Comforts, God will preſerve your Souls from the ruining power of Temptation? Sure then, you have little cauſe to ſink your Hearts, by ſuch ſad Thoughts about them. Are not theſe earthly Enjoyments the things that make Men ſhrink and warp in times of trial? For the love of theſe many have forſaken Chriſt in ſuch an hour, Matth. 19. 22. He went away ſorrowful, for he had great Poſſeſſions: And if this be God's deſign; what have I done in quarrelling with him about it? We ſee Mariners in a Storm, can throw over-board rich Bales of Silk, and precious things, to preſerve the Veſſel and their Lives with it; and every one ſaith they act prudently; we know 'tis uſual for Soldiers in a City Beſieg'd, to batter down or burn the faireſt Buildings without the Walls, in which the Enemy may ſhelter in the Siege; and no Man doubts but 'tis wiſely done: Such as have Gangreened Legs or Arms can willingly ſtretch them out to be cut off, and not only thank, but pay the Chyrurgion for his pains; And muſt God only be repined at, for caſting over what would ſink you in a ſtorm? For pulling down that which would advantage your Enemy in the Siege of Temptation? For cutting off what would endanger your everlaſting Life? O inconſiderate, ingrateful Man! Are not theſe things for which thou grieveſt, the very things that have ruin'd thouſands of Souls? Well, what Chriſt doth in this, thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou maiſt.

6. Help. It would much ſtay the Heart under adverſity, to conſider, That God by ſuch humbling Providences, may be accompliſhing that for which you have long prayed and waited: And ſhould you be troubled at that? Say Chriſtian, haſt thou not many Prayers depending before God upon ſuch accounts as theſe; that he would keep thee from Sin, diſcover to thee the emptineſs and inſufficiency of the Creature; that he would kill and mortifie thy Luſts, that thy Heart may never find reſt in any enjoyment but Chriſt? Why now, by ſuch humbling and improveriſhing ſtrokes, God may be fulfilling thy deſire: Wouldſt thou be kept from Sin? Lo, he hath hedged up thy way with thorns: Wouldſt thou ſee the Creatures Vanity? Thy affliction is a fair Glaſs to diſcover it: for the Vanity of the Creature is never ſo effectually and ſenſibly diſcovered, as in our own experience of it: Wouldſt thou have thy Corruptions mortified? This is the way: Now God takes away the Food and Fewel that maintain'd them; for as proſperity begat and fed them, ſo adverſity, when ſanctified, is a means to kill them. Wouldſt thou have thy Heart to reſt no where but in the Boſom of God? What better way canſt thou imagine Providence ſhould take to accompliſh thy deſire, than by pulling from under thy Head, that ſoft Pillow of Creature-delights on which thou reſtedſt before? And yet you fret at this, peeviſh Child, how doſt thou exerciſe thy Father patience! If he delay to anſwer thy Prayers, thou art ready to ſay he regards thee not; if he do that which really anſwers the ſcope and main end of them, but not in the way thou expectedſt, thou quarrelleſt with him for that; as if inſtead of anſwering, he were croſſing all thy hopes and aims; is this ingenuous? Is it not enough that God is ſo gracious to do what thou deſireſt, but thou muſt be ſo impudent to expect he ſhould do it in the way which thou preſcribeſt?

7. Help. Again, It may ſtay thy Heart, if thou conſider; That in theſe troubles, God is about that work, which if thou didſt ſee the deſign of, thy Soul would rejoyce. We poor Creatures are bemiſted with much ignorance, and are not able to diſcern how particular Providences work towards God's end; and therefore, like Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, are often murmuring, becauſe Providence leads us about in a howling Deſart, where we are expoſed to ſtraits; though yet, then he led them, and is now leading us, by the right way, to a City of Habitations: If you could but ſee how God in his ſecret Counſel hath exactly laid the whole plot and deſign of thy Salvation; even to the ſmalleſt means and circumſtances; this way, and by theſe means, ſuch a one ſhall be ſaved, and by no other; ſuch a number of afflictions I appoint for this Man, at this time, and in this order; they ſhall befall him thus, and thus they ſhall work for him; could you I ſay, but diſcern the admirable harmony of Divine Diſpenſations, their mutual relations to each other; together with the general reſpect and influence they all have into the laſt end; of all the conditions in the World, you would chuſe that you are now in, had you liberty to make your own choice. Providence is like a curious piece of Arras, made up of a thouſand ſhreds; which ſingle we know not what to make of, but put together and ſtitch'd up orderly, they repreſent a beautiful Hiſtory to the Eye: As God works all things according to the Counſel of his own Will, ſo that Counſel of God hath ordained this, as the beſt way to bring about thy Salvation: Such a one hath a proud Heart, ſo many humbling Providences I appoint for him, ſuch a one an earthly Heart; ſo many impoveriſhing Providences for him: Did you but ſee this, I need ſay no more to ſupport the moſt dejected Heart.

8. Help. Farther, It would much conduce to the ſettlement of your Hearts, to conſider, That by fretting and diſcontent, you do your ſelves more injury than all the afflictions you lye under could do; your own diſcontent is that which arms your troubles with a ſting, 'tis you that makes your burthen heavy, by ſtrugling under it: Could you but lye quiet under the Hand of God, your condition would be much eaſier and ſweeter than it is: Impatiens ægrotus crudelem facit Medicum. This makes God lay on more ſtrokes, as a Father will upon a ſtubborn Child that receives not Correction.

Beſides, it unfits the Soul to pray over its troubles, or take in the ſenſe of that good which God intends by them: Affliction is a Pill, which being rapt up in Patience, and quiet Submiſſion, may be eaſily ſwallowed; but Diſcontent chews the Pill, and ſo imbitters the Soul: God throws away ſome comfort which he ſaw would hurt you, and you will throw away your Peace after it; he ſhoots an Arrow which ſticks in yonr Cloaths, and was never intended to hurt, but only to fright you from Sin: And you will thruſt it onward to the piercing of your very Hearts, by deſpondency and diſcontent.

9. Help. Laſtly, if all this will not do, but thy Heart (like Rachel) ſtill refuſes to be comforted, or quieted, then conſider one thing more, which if ſeriouſly pondered, will doubtleſs do the work, and that is this, Compare the condition thou art now in (and art ſo much diſſatisfied with) with that condition others are, and thy ſelf deſerveſt to be in: Others are roaring in Flames, howling under the ſcourge of Vengeance, and amongſt them I deſerve to be. O my Soul! Is this Hell? Is my condition as bad as the Damned? O what would thouſands now in Hell give, to change conditions with me? It is a famous inſtance which Dr. Taylor gives us of the Duke of Conde, I have read (ſaith he) that when the Duke of Conde had entred voluntarily into the incommodities of a religious Poverty, he was one day eſpied and pitied by a Lord of Italy, who out of tenderneſs, wiſhed him to be more careful and nutritive of his Perſon: The good Duke anſwered, Sir, be not troubled, and think not that I am ill provided of conveniencies, for I ſend an Harbinger before me, who makes ready my Lodgings, and takes care that I be Royally Entertained. The Lord asked him who was his Harbinger? He anſwered, The knowledge of my ſelf, and the conſideration of what I deſerve for my Sins, which is Eternal Torments; and when with this knowledge I arrive at my Lodging, how unprovided ſoever I find it, methinks it is ever better than I deſerve. Why doth the living man complain? And thus the Heart may be kept from deſponding or repining under Adverſity.

Great Exemp. p 310.

3. Seaſon. “ The third Seaſon calling for more “ than ordinary diligence to keep the Heart is the “ time of Sion's trouble: When the Church,
“ like the Ship in which Chriſt and his Diſciples “ were, is oppreſſed and ready to periſh in the “ waves of Perſecution, then good Souls are ready
“ to ſink, and be ſhipwrackt too upon the Bil-“ lows of their own fear. I confeſs moſt Men “ rather need the Spur, than the Reins in this “ caſe, and yet ſome ſit down as over-weighed “ with the Senſe of the Churches Troubles; the “ loſs of the Ark coſt old Eli his Life, the ſad po-
“ ſture Jeruſalem lay in, made good Nehemiah's “ Countenance change in the midſt of all the plea-“ ſures and accommodations of the Court, Neh.
“ 2. 2. Ah this goes cloſe to honeſt Hearts.

“ But though God allow, yea, command the “ moſt awakened apprehenſions of theſe Calami“ ties, and in ſuch a day calls to mourning, weeping,
“ and girding with ſackcloth, Iſa. 22. 12. and ſe-“ verely threatens the inſenſible, Amos 6. 1. yet
“ it will not pleaſe him to ſee you ſit like penſive “ Elijah under the Juniper-tree, 1 Kings 19. 4.
“ Ah Lord God! it is enough, take away my life
“ alſo: No, Mourners in Sion, you may, and ought “ to be; but ſelf-tormentors you muſt not be:
“ Complain to God you may, but to complain of “ God (though but by an unſuitable Carriage and “ the Language of your Actions) you muſt not.

3. Caſe. The third Caſe that comes next to be ſpoken to is this, How publick and tender Hearts may be relieved and ſupported when they are even over-weighed with the burdenſome ſenſe of Sion*'s troubles?* “ I grant, it is hard for him that pre-
“ ferreth Sion to his chief joy, to keep his Heart
“ that it ſink not below the due ſenſe of its trou“ bles; and yet this ought and may be done by “ the uſe of ſuch Heart-eſtabliſhing Directions as “ theſe.

1. Direct. Settle this great truth in your hearts, That no trouble befalls Sion, but by the permiſſion of Sion*'s God; and he permits nothing out of which he will not bring much good at laſt to his people.*

There is as truly a principle of quietneſs in the permitting, as in the commanding Will of God. See it in David, 2 Sam. 16. 10. Let him alone, it may be God hath bidden him: And in Chriſt, Joh. 19. 11. Thou couldſt have no power againſt me, except it were given thee from above; it ſhould much calm our Spirits, that it is the will of God to ſuffer it; and had he not ſuffered it, it could never have been as it is.

This very conſideration quieted Job, Eli, David and Hezekiah; that the Lord did it, was enough to them, And why ſhould it not be ſo to us? If the Lord will have Sion plowed as a Field, and her goodly Stones lye in the duſt; if it be his pleaſure that Antichriſt ſhall rage yet longer, and wear out the Saints of the moſt High; if it be his will, that a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity by the Lord God of Hoſts ſhall be upon the Valley of Viſion, that the wicked ſhall devour the Man that is more righteous than he, What are we that we ſhould conteſt with God? Fit it is that we ſhould be reſigned up to that Will whence we proceeded; and he that made us ſhould diſpoſe of us as he pleaſeth: He may do what ſeemeth him good without our conſent: Doth poor Man ſtand upon equal ground, that he ſhould capitulate with his Creator, or that God ſhould render him an account of any of his matters? It's every way as reaſonable we be content however God diſpoſe of us, as that we be obedient to whatever he commands us.

But then, if we purſue this Argument further, by conſidering that God's permiſſions do all meet at laſt in the real good of his people, this will much more quiet our Spirits. Do the Enemies carry away the good Figs, even the beſt among the people into Captivity? This looks like a ſad Providence: But yet, God ſends them thither for their good, Jer. 24. 5. Doth God take the Aſſyrian as a ſtaff in his Hand to beat his people with? Thoſe blows are ſmart, and make them cry; but the end of his ſo doing is, That he may accompliſh his whole work upon Mount Sion, Iſa. 10. 12. If God can bring much good out of the worſt and greateſt evil of Sin, much more out of temporal afflictions; and it is as evident that he will, as that he can do ſo. For it is inconſiſtent with the wiſdom of a common Agent, to permit any thing (which he might prevent if he pleaſed) to croſs his great deſign and end; and can it be imagined that the moſt wiſe God ſhould do ſo?

Well then, as Luther told Melancthon, Deſinat Philippus eſſe rector mundi: So ſay I to you, let Infinite Wiſdom, Power and Love alone, for by theſe all Creatures are ſwayed, and actions guided, in reference to the Church. It's none of our work to rule the World, but to ſubmit to him that doth, non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ, the motions of Providence are all judicious, the Wheels are full of Eyes: It is enough that the Affairs of Sion are in a good Hand.

2. Direct. Ponder this Heart-ſupporting Truth in reference to Sion's trouble. That how man

troubles ſoever are upon her, yet her King is in her.

What? Hath the Lord forſaken his Churches? Hath he ſold them into the Enemies hand? Doth he not regard what evil befalls them? That our Hearts ſink at this rate? Is it not too ſhameful an undervaluing of the great God? And too much magnifying of poor impotent Men, to fear and tremble at Creatures, whilſt God is in the midſt of us? The Churches Enemies are many and mighty, let that be granted; yet that Argument with which Caleb and Joſhuah ſtrove to raiſe their own Hearts, is of as much force now as it was then: The Lord is with us, fear them not, Numb. 14. 9. The Hiſtorian tell us, that when Antigonus over-heard his Souldiers reckoning how many their Enemies were, and ſo diſcouraging one another; he ſuddenly ſteps in among them with this Queſtion, And how many (ſaid he) do you reckon me for? Diſcouraged Souls, How many do you reckon the Lord for? Is he not an overmatch for all his Enemies? Is not one Almighty more than many Mighties? Doth his preſence ſtand for nothing with us? If God be for us, who can be against us? Rom. 8. 31. What think you was the reaſon of that great Exploration Gideon made in Judges 6. He queſtions, ver. 12, 13. he deſires a ſign, v. 17. and after that another, v. 36. and what was the end of all this? But that he might but write this Motto upon his Enſign, The ſword of the Lord, and of Gideon. So then, if you can be well aſſured, the Lord is with his people, you will get thereby above all your diſcouragements: And that he is ſo, you need not (with him) deſire a ſign from Heaven, lo, you have a ſign before you, even their marvellous preſervation amidſt all their Enemies. If God be not with his people, how is it they are not ſwallowed up quick? Do their Enemies want malice, power, or opportunity? No, but there is an inviſible Hand upon them. Well then, as it is, Exod. 33. 14. Let his Preſence give us reſt; and though the Mountains be hurled into the Sea, though Heaven and Earth mingle together, fear not, God is in the midſt of her, ſhe ſhall not be moved.

3. Direct. Ponder the great advantages attending the people of God in an afflicted condition. If a low and an afflicted ſtate in the World be really beſt for the Church, then your dejections are not only irrational but ungrateful; indeed, if ye eſtimate the happineſs of the Church by its worldly eaſe, ſplendor and proſperity, then ſuch times will ſeem bad for it; but, if you reckon its glory to conſiſt in its humility, faith, patience and heavenly-mindedneſs, no condition in the World abounds with advantages for theſe, as an afflicted condition doth. It was not Perſecutions and Priſons, but worldlineſs and wantonneſs, that was the Poyſon of the Church; neither was it the earthly Glory of its Profeſſors, but the Blood of its Martyrs, that was the Seed of the Church. The Power of Godlineſs did never thrive better than in Affliction, and never ran lower than in times of greateſt Proſperity; when we are left a poor and an afflicted people, then we learn to truſt in the Name of the Lord, Zeph. 3. 12. What ſay ye Sirs? Is it indeed for the Saints advantage to be weaned from the loves and delights of enſnaring worldly Vanities? To be quickned and prickt forward with more haſte to Heaven, to have clearer diſcoveries of their own Hearts, to be taught to Pray more fervently, frequently, ſpiritually; to look and long for the Reſt to come, more ardently? If this he for their advantage, experience teacheth us, that no condition is ordinarily bleſt with ſuch Fruits as theſe, like an afflicted Condition.

And is it well done then to repine and droop, becauſe your Father conſults more the advantage of your Souls, than the pleaſing of your Humours? Becauſe he will bring you a nearer way to Heaven than you are willing to go? Is this a due requital of his Love, who is pleaſed ſo much to concern himſelf in your welfare? Which is more then he will do for Thouſands in the World, upon whom he will not lay a Rod, or ſpend an Affliction for their good, Hoſ. 4. 17. Matth. 15. 14. But alas! we judge by ſenſe, and reckon things good or evil, according to what we for the preſent can taſte and feel in them.

4. Direct. Take heed that you overlook not the many precious Mercies which the People of God enjoy amidſt all their trouble.

'Tis pity that our Tears upon the account of our Troubles, ſhould ſo blear and blind our Eyes, that we ſhould not ſee our Mercies and Grounds of Comfort. I will not inſiſt upon the Mercy of having your lives given you for a prey, nor yet upon the many outward Comforts, temporal Conveniences, and Accommodations, which you enjoy even above what Chriſt and his precious Servants, of whom the World was not worthy, ever had.

But what ſay you to pardon of Sin? Intereſt in Chriſt? The Covenant of Promiſe? And an Eternity of Happineſs in the preſence of God after a few days are over? O that ever a people Intitled to ſuch Mercies as theſe, ſhould droop under any temporal Affliction, or be ſo much concerned for the Frowns of Men, and loſs of Trifles! You have not the ſmiles of great Men, but you have the favour of the great God: You are it may be caſt back in your Eſtates, but thereby farthered in Spirituals. You cannot live ſo bravely, plentifully, and eaſily as before, but ſtill you may live as holy and heavenly as ever. Will you then grieve ſo much for theſe Circumſtantials, as to forget your Subſtantials? Shall light troubles make you forget weighty mercies? Remember the Churches true Riches are laid out of the reach of all its Enemies: They may make you poor, but not miſerable. What though God do not diſtinguiſh in his outward Diſpenſations betwixt his own and others? Yea, what though his Judgments ſingle out the beſt, and ſpare the worſt? What though an Abel be killed in Love, and a Cain ſurvive in Hatred, a bloody Dionyſius die in his Bed, and a good Joſiah fall in Battel? What though the Belly of the wicked be filled with hid Treaſures, and the Teeth of the Saints broken with Gravel-ſtones, yet ſtill here is much matter of praiſe: For electing Love hath diſtinguiſhed, though common Providence did not; and whilſt proſperity and impunity ſlay the wicked, even ſlaying aud adverſity ſhall benefit and ſave the righteous.

5. Direct. Believe, that how low ſoever the Church be plunged under the waters of adverſity, it ſhall aſſuredly riſe again. Fear not, for as ſure as Chriſt aroſe the third day, notwithſtanding the Seal and Watch that was upon him; ſo ſure the Church ſhall ariſe out of all her Troubles, and lift up its victorious Head over all its Enemies: There's no fear of ruining that People that thrive by their Loſſes, and multiply by being diminiſhed. O be not too quick to bury the Church before ſhe be dead! Stay till Chriſt hath tryed his skill before you give it up for loſt; the Buſh may be all in a flame, but ſhall never be conſumed, and that becauſe of the good will of him that dwelleth in the Buſh.

6 Direct. Record the famous inſtances of God's care and tenderneſs over his people in former ſtraits. Chriſt hath not ſuffered it to be be devoured yet; for above theſe 1700 years the Chriſtian Church hath lived in affliction, and yet it is not conſumed: Many a Wave of Perſecution hath gone over it, and yet it is not drowned; many deſigns to ruin it, and hitherto none hath proſpered: This is not the firſt time that Haman's and Achitophel's have plotted its ruin; that an Herod hath ſtretched out his hand to vex it. Still it hath been preſerved from, ſupported under, or delivered out of all its troubles: And is it not as dear to God as ever? Is he not as able to ſave it now as formerly? Though we know not whence deliverancc ſhould ariſe, Yet the Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of temptations, 2 Peter 2. 9.

7. Direct. If you can fetch no comfort from any of the former Arguments, then in the laſt Place, Try whether you cannot draw ſome comfort out of your very troubles. Surely this trouble of yours is a good Argument of your integrity; union is the ground of ſympathy, if you had not ſome rich adventnre in that Ship, you would not tremble as you do when it is in danger: Beſides, this frame of Spirit may afford you this Argument, that if you be ſo ſenſible of the Churches Troubles, Jeſus Chriſt is much more ſenſible of, and ſolicitous about it than you can be; and he will caſt an Eye of favour upon them that mourn for it, Iſa. 57. 18.

4. Seaſon. “ The fourth ſpecial Seaſon of expreſſing
“ our uttmoſt diligence in keeping our “ Hearts, is the time of danger and publick diſtraction:
“ In ſuch times the beſt Hearts are but too
“ apt to be ſurpriſed by ſlaviſh fear, it is not eaſie
“ to ſecure the Heart againſt Diſtraction in times
“ of common Deſtruction: If Syria be Confederate “ with Ephraim, how do the Hearts of “ the Houſe of David ſhake; even as the Trees of “ the Wood which are ſhaken with the Wind, “ Iſa. 7. 2. When there are ominous ſigns in the “ Heavens, on the Earth diſtreſs of Nations, with “ perplexity; the Sea and Waves roaring, then
“ the Hearts of Men fail for fear, and for looking “ after thoſe things which are coming on the “ Earth, Luke 21. 25, 26. Even a Paul himſelf “ may ſometimes complain of fightings within, when “ there are fears without, 2 Cor. 7. 5.

But my Brethren, theſe things ought not to be ſo; Saiuts ſhould be of a more raiſed Spirit: So was David when his Heart was kept in a good frame, Pſal. 27. 1. The Lord is my light and my ſalvation; whom ſhall I fear? The Lord is the ſtrength of my life, of whom ſhall I be afraid? Let none but the Servants of ſin be the Slaves of fear, let them that have delighted in evil, fear evil, impius tantum metuit, quantum nocuit. O let not that which God hath threatned as a Judgment upon the Wicked, ever ſeize upon the Breaſts of the Righteous; I will ſend (ſaith God ( faintneſs into their hearts in the land of their enemies, and the ſound of a ſhaking leaf ſhall chaſe them, Lev. 26. 36. O what poor ſpirited Men are theſe, to fly at a ſhaking leaf! which makes a pleaſant, and not a terrible noiſe, and is in it ſelf a kind of natural Muſick; but to a guilty Conſcience, the whiſtling leaves are Drums and Trumpets: But God hath not given us the ſpirit of fear, but of love, and of a ſound mind, 2 Tim. 1. 7. A ſound Mind as it ſtands there in oppoſition to the Spirit of fear, is an unwounded Conſcience, not infirm'd by guilt: And this ſhould make a man as bold as a Lion. I know it cannot be ſaid of a Saint, what God ſpake of Leviathan, that he is made without fear: There is a natural fear in every Man, and it's as impoſſible to be wholly put off, as the Body it ſelf is: 'Tis a perturbation of the mind, riſing from the apprehenſion of approaching danger; and as long as dangers can approach us, we ſhall find ſome perturbations within us. 'Tis not my purpoſe to commend to you a Stoical Apathy, nor yet to take you off from ſuch a degree of cautional preventive fear as may fit you for trouble, and be ſerviceable to your Souls. There is a provident fear that opens our Eyes to foreſee danger and quickens to a prudent and lawful uſe of means to prevent it: Such was Jacob's fear, Gen. 32. 7, 9, 10, &c. But it is the fear of diffirence, I perſwade you to keep your Hearts from that Tyrannical Paſſion which invades the Heart in times of danger, diſtracts, weakens, and unfit the Heart for Duty drives Men upon unlawful means, and brings a ſnare with it. Well then, the fourth Caſe will be this.

4. Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from diſtracting and tormenting fears in times of great and threatning Dangers.

Now there are fourteen excellent Rules or helps for the keeping of the Heart from ſinful fear when eminent Dangers threaten us: And the firſt is this.

1. Rule. Look upon all the Creatures as in the Hand of God, who manages them in all their motions; limiting, reſtraining, and determining them all at his pleſure.

Get this great Truth well ſetled by Faith in your hearts, it will marvellouſly guard them againſt ſlaviſh fears; the firſt of Ezkiel contains an admirable Scheme or Draught of Providence; there you may ſee the Living Creatures who move the Wheels, viz. the great Affairs and Turnings of things here below, coming unto Chriſt, who ſits upon the Throne to receive new Orders and Inſtructions from him, v. 24, 25, 26. And in Rev. 6. you read of white, black, and red Horſes, which are nothing elſe but the Inſtruments which God imploys in executing his Judgments in the World, as Wars, Peſtilence and Death: But when theſe Horſes are prancing and trampling up and down the world? here is that may quiet our Hearts, that God hath the Reins in his Hand. Wicked Men are ſometimes like mad Horſes, they would ſtamp the People of God under their Feet, but that the Bridle of Providence is in their Lips, Joh. 19. 11, 12. A Lion at liberty is terrible to meet; But who is afraid of the Lion in the Kepers hand?

2. Rule. Remember that this God in whoſe hand all the Creatures are, is your Father, and is much more tender over you, than you are or can be over your ſelves; He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eye, Zech. 2. 8. Let me ask the moſt timerous Woman, whether there be not a vaſt difference between the ſight of a drawn Sword in the Hand of a bloody Ruffian, and the ſame Sword in the Hand of her own tender Husband? As great a difference there is in looking upon Creatures by an Eye of Senſe, and looking on them as in the Hand of your God by an Eye of Faith; that is a ſweet Scripture to this purpoſe, Iſa. 54.5. Thy Maker is thine Husband, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name; he is Lord of all the Hoſts of Creatures in the World: Who would be afraid to paſs through an Army, though all the Soldiers ſhould turn their Swords and Guns towards him, if the General of that Army were his Friend or Father? I have met with an excellent Story of a Religious young Man, who being at Sea with many other Paſſengers in a great Storm, and they being half dead with fear, he only was obſerved to be very chearful, as if he had been but little concerned in that danger; one of them demanding a reaſon of his chearfulneſs, Oh, ſaid he, 'tis becauſe the Pilot of the Ship is my Father. Conſider Chriſt, firſt as the King and Supream Lord over the Providential Kingdom, and then as your Head, Husband and Friend, and thou wilt quickly ſay, Return unto thy reſt, O my Soul. This truth will make you ceaſe trembling, and fall a ſighing in the midſt of dangers, Pſal. 47. 7. The Lord is King of all the earth, ſing ye praiſe with underſtanding, or as the Hebrew word is, Every one that hath underſtanding, viz. of this Heart-reviving and eſtabliſhing Doctrine of the Dominion of our Father over all the Creatures.

3 Rule. Urge upon your Hearts the expreſs prohibitions of Chriſt in this Caſe; and let your Hearts ſtand in awe of the violations of them.

He hath charged you not to fear, Luke 21. 9. When ye ſhall hear of wars and commotions, ſee that ye be not terrified. And Phil. 1. 28. In nothing be terrified by your Adverſaries: Yea, in Mat. 10. 26, 28, 31. and within the compaſs of ſix Verſes, our Saviour commands us thrice, not to fear Man. Doth every big word of proud Duſt and Aſhes make thee afraid? Doth the voice of a Man make thee tremble? And ſhall not the voice of God? If thou art of ſuch a fearful and timerous Spirit, How is it that thou feareſt not to diſobey the flat commands of Jeſus Chriſt? Methinks the command of Chriſt ſhould have as much power to calm, as the voice of a poor Worm to terrifie thy Heart, Iſa. 51. 12, 13. I, even I am he that comforteth you; Who art thou, that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of a Man that ſhall die, and of the Son of Man, that ſhall be made as the Graſs, and forgetteſt the Lord thy Maker? We cannot fear Creatures ſinfully, till we have forgotten God; did we remember what he is, and what he hath ſaid, we ſhould not be of ſuch feeble Spirits: Bring thy Heart then to this Dilemma in times of danger; if I let into my Heart the ſlaviſh fear of Man, I muſt let out the reverential awe and fear of God; And dare I caſt off the fear of the Almighty, for the frowns of a Man? Shall I lift up proud Duſt above the great God? Shall I run upon a certain ſin, to ſhun a probable danger? Oh keep thy Heart by this Conſideration.

4 Rule. Remember how much needleſs trouble your vain fears have brought upon you formerly, and how you have diſquieted your ſelves to no purpoſe.

Iſa. 51. 13. And haſt feared continually becauſe of the oppreſſor, as if he were ready to devour; and where is the fury of the oppreſſor? He ſeem'd ready to devour, but yet you are not devoured; I have not brought upon you the thing that ye feared; you have waſted your Spirits, diſordered your Souls, and Weakened your hands, and all this to no purpoſe. You might have all this while enjoyed your Peace, and poſſeſſed your Souls in patience. And here I cannot but obſerve a very deep policy of Satan managing a deſign againſt the Soul by theſe vain fears: I call them vain, in regard of the fruſtration of them by Providence; but certainly they are not in vain, as to the end Satan aims at in raiſing them, for herein he acts as Soldiers uſe to do in the Siege of a Garriſon, who on purpoſe to wear out the Baſieged by conſtant watchings, and thereby unfit them to make reſiſtance when they ſtorm it in earneſt, do every night give them falſe Allarms, which though they come to nothing, yet doth notably ſerve this further deſign of the Enemy. O when will you beware of Satan's Devices?

5 Rule. Conſider Solemnly, That though the things you fear ſhould really fall out, yet there is more evil in your own fear, than in the thing feared.

And that not only as the leaſt evil of ſin, is worſe than the greateſt evil of ſuffering; but as this ſinful fear hath really more torment and trouble in it, than is in that condition you are ſo much afraid of, fear is both a multiplying and a tormenting Paſſion; it repreſents troubles much greater then they are, and ſo tortures and wracks the Soul much worſe then when the ſuffering it ſelf comes. So it was with Iſrael at the Red Sea, they cried out, and were ſore afraid till they put foot into the Water, and then a paſſage was opened through thoſe Waters which they thought would have drowned them. Thus it is with us, we looking through the Glaſs of carnal fear, upon the waters of Trouble, the ſwellings of Jordan, cry out, Oh they are unfordable! We muſt needs periſh in them: But when we come into the midſt of thoſe Floods indeed, we find the promiſe made good, God will make a way to eſcape, 1 Cor. 10. 13. Thus it was with bleſſed Bilney, when he would make a trial by putting his Finger to the Candle, and not able to endure that, he cried out, What? cannot I bear the burning of a Finger? How then ſhall I be able to bear the burning of my whole Body to morrow? And yet when that morrow came, he could go chearfully into the Flames, with that Scripture in his Mouth, Iſa. 43. 1, 2, 3. Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name, thou art mine; when thou paſſeſt though the waters, I will be with thee; when thou walkeſt through the fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt.

6 Rule. Conſult the many precious Promiſes which are written for your ſupport and comfort in all dangers.

Theſe are your Refuges to which you may fly and be ſafe: When the arrows of danger fly by night and deſtruction waſteth at noon-day. There are particular Promiſes ſuited to particular Caſes and Exigencies, and there are general Promiſes, reaching all Caſes and Conditions; ſuch are theſe, Rom. 8. 28. All things ſhall work together for Good, &c. And Eccl. 8. 12. Though a ſinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet it ſhall be well with them that fear the Lord, &c. Could you but believe the Promiſes, your hearts ſhould be eſtabliſhed, 2 Chron. 20. 29. Could you but plead them with God, as Jacob did, Gen. 32. 22. Thou ſaidſt, I will ſurely do thee good, &c. they would relieve you in every diſtreſs.

Object. But that Promiſe was made perſonally, and by name to him, ſo are not theſe to me.

Anſw. If Jacob's God be your God, you have as good an intereſt in them as he had. The Church a Thouſand Years after that Tranſaction betwixt God and Jacob, applied that which God ſpake to him, as if it had been ſpoken to themſelves, Hoſ. 12.1. He found him in Bethel,and there he ſpake with us.

7 Rule. Quiet your trembling Hearts by recording and conſulting your paſt experiences of the care and faithfulneſs of God in former Diſtreſſes.

Theſe Experiences are Food for your Faith in a Wilderneſs Condition, Pſalm. 74. 14. By this David kept his Heart in time of Danger, 1 Sam. 17. 37. and Paul his, 2 Cor. 1. 10. It was ſweetly anſwered by Silentiarius, when one told him, that his Enemies way-laid him to take away his Life, Si Deus mei curam non habet, quid vivo? If God take no care of me, how have I eſcaped hitherto? You may plead with God old experiences to procure new ones, for it is in pleading with God for new Deliverances, as it is in pleading for new Pardons. Now mark how Moſes pleads on that account with God, Numb. 14. 19. Pardon, I beſeech thee, the iniquity of this people, as thou haſt forgiven them from Egypt until now. He doth noth ſay as Men do, Lord this is the firſt fault, thou haſt not been troubled before to ſign their Pardon: But Lord, becauſe thou haſt pardoned them ſo often; I beſeech thee pardon them once again. So in new ſtraits, Lord, thou haſt often heard, helpt and ſaved, in former fears, therefore now help again, for with thee there is plenteous Redemption, and thine Arm is not ſhortned.

8 Rule. Be well ſatisfied that you are in the way of your Duty, and that will beget holy Courage in times of danger.

Who will harm you, if you be followers of that which is good? 1 Pet. 3. 13. Or, if any dare attempt it, you may boldly commit your ſelves to God in well-doing, 1 Pet. 4. 19. 'Twas this conſideration that raiſed Luther's Spirit above all fear: In the cauſe of God (ſaid he) I ever am, and ever ſhall be ſtout; herein I aſſume this Title, Cedo nulli, a good cauſe will bear up a Man's Spirit bravely. Hear the ſaying of a Heathen, to the ſhame of cowardly Chriſtians: ‘When the Emperor Veſpaſian had commanded Fluidius Priſcus not to come to the Senate, or if he did, to ſpeak nothing but what he would have him; the Senator return'd this noble Anſwer, “That as he was a Senator, it was fit he ſhould be at the Senate; and if being there he were required to give his advice, he would ſpeak freely that which his Conſcience commanded him; the Emperour threatning, that then he ſhould die; he anſwered, Did I ever tell you that I was immortal? Do you what you will, and I will do what I ought; it is in your power to put me to death unjuſtly, and in me to die conſtantly.

Char. of Wiſdom, p. 358.

Righteouſneſs is a Breſt-plate, the Cauſe of God will pay all your Expences, let them tremble whom danger finds out of the way of Duty.

9 Rule. Get your Conſciences ſprinkled with the Blood of Chriſt from all guilt, and that will ſet your Hearts above all fear.

'Tis guilt upon the Conſcience that ſoftens and cowardizes our Spirits: The Righteous is bold as a Lion, Prov. 28. 1. 'Twas guilt in Cain's Conſcience that made him cry, Every one that meets me will ſlay me, Gen 4. 14. A guilty Conſcience is more terrified with conceited dangers, than a pure Conſcience is with real ones. A guilty Sinner carries a Witneſs againſt himſelf in his own Boſom. 'Twas guilty Herod cried out, John Baptiſt is riſen from the dead. Such a Conſcience is the Devil's Anvil, on which he fabricates all thoſe Swords and Spears, with which the guilty Sinner pierces and wounds himſelf. Guilt is to Danger, what Fire is to Gun-powder; a Men need not fear to walk among many Barrels of Powder, if he have no Fire about him.

10 Rule. Exerciſe holy truſt, in times of great diſtreſs.

Make it your Buſineſs to truſt God with your Lives and Comforts, and then your Hearts will be at reſt about them. So did David, Pſal. 57. 3. At what time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee; q. d. Lord, if at any time a Storm riſe, I will make bold to ſhelter from it under the Covert of thy Wings. Go to God by acts of Faith and Truſt, and never doubt but he will ſecure you, Iſa. 62. 3. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whoſe mind is ſtayed on thee, becauſe he truſteth in thee; God takes it well when thou comeſt to him thus; Father, my Life, my Liberty, or Eſtate, are hunted after, and I cannot ſecure them; O let me leave them in thy Hand: The poor leaveth himſelf with thee; and doth his God fail him? No, Thou art the helper of the fatherleſs, Pſal. 10. 14. that is, thou art the helper of the deſtitute one, that hath none to go to but God. And that is a ſweet Scripture, Pſal. 112. 7. He ſhall not be afraid of evil tydings, his heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord; he doth not ſay, his Ear ſhall be priviledged from the report of evil tydings, he may hear as ſad tydings as other Men; but his Heart ſhall be priviledged from the terrour of thoſe tydings, his heart is fixed.

11 Rule. Conſult the honour of Religion more, and your perſonal ſafety leſs.

Is it for the honour of Religion, (think you) that Chriſtians ſhould be as timerous as Hares, to ſtart at every ſound? Will not this tempt the World to think, that whatever you talk, yet your Principles are no better than other Mens? O what michief may the diſcoveries of your fears before them do? 'Twas a Noble ſaying of Nehemiah, Chap. 6. 11. Should ſuch a man as I flee? And who being as I am would flee? Were it not better you ſhould die, than that the World ſhould be prejudiced againſt Chriſt by your example? For alas! how apt is the World (who judge more by what they ſee in your Practices, than by what they underſtand of your Principles) to conclude from your timerouſneſs, that how much ſoever you commend Faith, and talk of Aſſurance, yet you dare truſt to theſe things no more than they, when it comes to the trial. O let not your fears lay ſuch a ſtumbling-block before the blind World.

12 Rule. He that will ſecure his Heart from fear, muſt firſt ſecure the Eternal Intereſt of his Soul in the hands of Jeſus Chriſt.

When this is done, then you may ſay, Now World do thy worſt. You will not be very ſolicitous about a vile Body, when you are once aſſured it ſhall be well to all Eternity with your precious Souls. Fear not them (ſaith Chriſt) that can kill the body, and after that, have no more that they can do. The aſſured Chriſtian may ſmile with contempt upon all his Enemies, and ſay, Is this the the worſt that you can do? What ſay you Chriſtians? Are you aſſured that your Souls are ſafe; that within a few moments of your diſſolution, they ſhall be received by Chriſt into Everlaſting Habitations? Well, if you be ſure of that, never trouble you ſelves about the inſtruments and means of your diſſolution.

Object. O, but a violent Death is terrible to Nature?

Anſw. But what matter is it, when thy Soul is in Heaven; whether it were let out at thy Mouth, or at thy Throat? Whether thy familiar Friends, or barbarous Enemies ſtand about thy dead Body, and cloſe thine Eyes? Alas, it it not worth the making ſo much ado about, Nihil corpus ſentit in nervo cum anima ſit in cœlo, thy Soul ſhall not be ſenſible in Heaven how they Body is uſed on Earth; no, it ſhall be ſwallowed up in Life.

13 Rule. Learn to quench all ſlaviſh Creature fears, in the reverential fear of God.

This is a Cure by diverſion: 'Tis a rare piece of Chriſtian Wiſdom to turn thoſe Paſſions of the Soul which moſt predominate, into Spiritual Channels; to turn natural Anger into ſpiritual Zeal, natural Mirth into holy Chearfulneſs, and natural Fear into an holy Dread and Awe of God. This method of Cure Chriſt preſcribes in that forementioned place, Mat. 10. like to which is that in Iſa. 1. 12, 13. Fear not their fear; but how ſhall we help it? Why, ſanctifie the Lord of Hoſts himſelf, and let him be your fear and your dread. Natural fear may be allayed for the preſent by natural reaſon, or the removal of the occaſion, but then 'tis but like a Candle blown out with a puff of breath, which is eaſily blown in again; but if the fear of God extinguiſh it, then 'tis like a Candle quencht in Water, which cannot eaſily be rekindled.

14 Rule. Laſtly, Pour out thoſe fears to God in Prayer, which the Devil and your own unbelief, pour in upon you in times of danger.

Prayer is the beſt outlet to fear; where is the Chriſtian that cannot ſet his Probatum eſt to this direction? I will give you the greateſt Example in the World to encourage you in the uſe of it, even the Example of Jeſus Chriſt, Mark 14. 22. When the hour of his Danger and Death drew nigh, he gets into the Garden, ſeparates from the Diſciples, and there wreſtles mightily with God in Prayer, even unto an Agony: In reference to which the Apoſtle ſaith, Heb. 5. 7. Who in the days of his fleſh, when he had offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong cries and tears, to him that was able to ſave him from death, and was heard in that he feared. He was heard as to ſtrength and ſupport to carry him through it, though not as to deliverance, or exemption from it.

Now, O that theſe things might abide with you, and be reduced to practice in theſe evil days, that many trembling Souls may be eſtabliſhed by them.

5 Seaſon. “ The Fifth Seaſon to exert this “ diligence in keeping the Heart, is the time of “ ſtraits and outward pinching wants; although “ at ſuch times we ſhould complain to God, and “ not of God, (the Throne of Grace being erected for a time of need, Heb. 4. 16.) yet when “ the Waters of Relief run low, and Wants begin “ to pinch hard, how prone are the beſt hearts to “ diſtruſt the Fountain! when the Meal in the “ Barrel, and the Oyl in the Cruiſe are almoſt “ ſpent, our Faith and Patience are almoſt ſpent “ too. Now 'tis difficult to keep down the proud “ and unbelieving Heart in an holy quietude and “ ſweet ſubmiſſion at the Foot of God. 'Tis an eaſie thing to talk of truſting God for daily Bread “ while we have a full Barn or Purſe; but to ſay “ as the Prophet, Hab. 3. 17. Though the fig-tree “ ſhould not bloſſom, neither fruit be in the vine, &c. “ yet will I rejoyce in the Lord; Sure this is not eaſie. The fifth Caſe therefore ſhall be this.

5 Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his Heart from diſtruſting God, or repining againſt him, when outward wants are either felt or feared.

This caſe deſerves to be ſeriouſly pondred, and eſpecially to be ſtudied now, ſince it ſeems to be the deſign of Providence to empty the People of God of their Creature-fulneſs, and acquaint them with thoſe ſtraits which hitherto they have been altogether ſtrangers to.

Now, to ſecure the Heart from the fore-mentioned dangers attending this condition, theſe following Conſiderations, through the bleſſing of the Spirit may prove effectual. And the firſt is this,

1 Conſid. That if God reduce you to ſtraits and neceſſities, yet he deals no otherwiſe therein with you, than he hath done with ſome of the choiceſt and holieſt Men that ever lived.

Your condition is not ſingular, though; you have hitherto been ſtrangers to Wants, other Saints have daily converſed, and been familiarly acquainted with them. Hear what bleſſed Paul ſpeaks, not of himſelf only, but in the names of other Saints reduc'd to like exigencies, 1 Cor. 4. 11. Even to this preſent hour we both hunger and thirſt, and are naked, and buffetted, and have no certain dwelling place. To ſee ſuch a Man as Paul going up and down the World with a naked Back, and empty Belly, and not a Houſe to put his Head in, one that was ſo far above thee in Grace and Holineſs, one that did more Service for God in a day, then perhaps thou haſt done him all thy days, and yet thou repine as if hardly dealt with! Have you forgot what neceſſities and ſtraits, even a David hath ſuffered? How great were his ſtraits and neceſſities? 1 Sam. 25. 8. Give I pray thee (ſaith he to Nabal) whatſoever cometh to thy hand, to thy ſervants and to thy Son David. Renowned Muſculus was forced to dig in the Town-ditch for a Maintenance. Famous Ainſworth (as I have been credibly informed) was forced to ſell the Bed he lay on to buy Bread. But what ſpeak I of theſe? Behold a greater than any of them, even the Son of God, who is the Heir of all things, and by whom the Worlds were made. Yet ſometimes would have been glad of anything, having nothing to eat, Mark 11. 12. And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry; and ſeeing a Fig-tree afar off, having leaves, he came if happily he might find [ any thing ] thereon.

Well then, Hereby God hath ſet no mark of Hatred upon you; neither can you infer the want of Love from the want of Bread. When thy repining Heart puts the Queſtion, Was there ever any Sorrow like unto mine? Ask theſe Worthies, and they will tell thee, though they did not complain and fret as thou doſt, yet they were driven to as great ſtraits as thou art.

2 Conſid. If God leave you not in this neceſſitous condition without a promiſe, you have no reaſon to repine or deſpond under it.

That is a ſad condition indeed, to which no Promiſe belongs. I remember Mr. Calvin upon thoſe words, Iſa. 9. 1. Nevertheleſs the dimneſs ſhall not be ſuch as was in her vexation, &c. ſolves the Doubt, in what ſenſe the darkneſs of the Captivity was not ſo great, as the leſſer Incurſions made by Tiglath Pileſer. In the Captivity the City was deſtroyed, and the Temple burnt with Fire, there was no compariſon in the Affliction; but yet the darkneſs ſhould not be ſuch, and the reaſon (ſaith he) is this: Huic certam promiſſionem eſſe additam, cum in prioribus nulla eſſet; (i. e.) there was a certain Promiſe made to this, but none to the other.

'Tis better be as low as Hell with a Promiſe, than in Paradiſe without one. Even the darkneſs of Hell it ſelf would be comparatively no darkneſs at all, were there but a Promiſe to enlighten it. Now God hath left many ſweet Promiſes for the Faith of his Poor People to feed on in this condition, ſuch are theſe: Pſal. 34. 9, 10. O fear the Lord, ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that fear him; the Lyons do lack and ſuffer hunger, but they that fear the Lord ſhall want nothing that is good. Pſal. 33. 18, 19. The eye of the Lord is upon the righteous, to keep them alive in Famine. Pſal. 84. 11. No good thing will be with-held from them that walk uprightly. Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things. Iſa. 41. 17. When the poor and the needy ſeek water and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirſt, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Iſrael will not forſake them. Here you ſee, firſt, their extream Wants, Water being put even for the Neceſſaries of Life, (2.) their certain Relief, I the Lord will hear them; in which it is ſuppoſed, that they cry unto him in their ſtraits; and he hears their cry.

Having therefore theſe Promiſes, why ſhould not your diſtruſtful Hearts conclude like David's, Pſal. 23. 1. The Lord is my Shepherd, I ſhall not want.

Obj. But theſe Promiſes imply Conditions; if they were Abſolute, they would afford more ſatisfaction.

Sol. What are thoſe tacite conditions you ſpeak of, but theſe: (1.) That either he will ſupply or ſanctifie your Wants; (2.) That you ſhall have ſo much as God ſees fit for you. And doth this trouble you? Would you have the Mercy whether Sanctified or no? Whether God ſees it fit for you or no? Methinks the appetites of Saints after earthly things ſhould not be ſo ravenous, to ſeize greedily upon any enjoyment, not caring how they have it.

But Oh, when Wants pinch, and wee ſee not whence ſupplies ſhould come, then our Faith in the Promiſe ſhakes, and we, like murmuring Iſrael, cry, He gave Bread, can he give Water alſo? O unbelieving Hearts! When did his Promiſe fail? Who ever truſted them, and was aſhamed? May not God upbraid thee with thine unreaſonable Infidelity, as Jer. 2. 31. Have I been a Wilderneſs unto you? &c. Or as Chriſt ſaid to the Diſciples, Since I was with you, lacked ye any thing? Yea, may you not upbraid your ſelves, may you not ſay with good old Polycarp, Thus many years I have ſerved Chriſt, and found him a good Maſter? Indeed he may deny what your wantonneſs, but not what your real wants call for: He will not regard the cry of your Luſts, nor yet deſpiſe the cry of your Faith; though he will not indulge and humour your wanton Appetites, yet he will not violate his own faithfull Promiſes. Theſe Promiſes are your beſt ſecurity for Eternal Life; and 'tis ſtrange if they ſhould not ſatisfie you for daily Bread: Remember ye the words of the Lord, and ſolace your Hearts with them amidſt all your wants. 'Tis ſaid of Epicurus, that in the dreadful fits of the Collick, he often refreſhed himſelf, Ob memoriam inventorum, by calling to mind his Inventions in Philoſophy: And of Poſſidonius the Philoſopher, that in a great Fit of the Stone, he ſolaced himſelf with Diſcourſes of Moral Virtue: And when the pain twinged him, he would ſay, Nihil agis dolor quamvis ſis moleſtus numquam confitebor te eſſe malum: O Pain, thou doſt nothing; though thou art a little troubleſome, I will never confeſs thee to be evil. If upon ſuch grounds as theſe, they could ſupport themſelves under ſuch grinding and racking Pains, and even delude their Diſeaſes by them, How much rather ſhould the precious Promiſes of God, and the ſweet Experiences which have gone along ſtep by ſtep with them, make you to forget all your wants, and comfort you over every ſtrait?

3. Conſid. If it be bad now, it might have been worſe; hath God denied thee the comforts of this Life? He might have denied thee Chriſt, Peace and Pardon alſo, and then thy Caſe had been woful indeed. You know God hath done ſo to millions in the World: How many ſuch wretched Objects may our Eyes behold every day, that have no comfort in hand, nor yet in hope, are miſerable here, and will be ſo to eternity; that have a bitter cup, and nothing to ſweeten it; no, not ſo much as any hope that it will be better. But it is not ſo with you, though you be poor in this World, yet rich in faith, and heirs of the Kingdom which God hath promiſed, Jam. 2. 5. O learn to ſet ſpiritual Riches over againſt temporal Poverty. Ballance all your preſent Troubles with your ſpiritual Priviledges. Indeed, if God had denied your Souls the Robes of Righteouſneſs to cloath them, the hidden Manna to feed them; the Heavenly Manſions to receive them; if your Souls were left deſtitute, as well as your Bodies, you might well be penſive; but this conſideration hath enough to bring the conſidering Soul to reſt under any outward ſtrait. 'Twas bravely ſaid by Luther, when Want began to pinch him, Let us be contented with our hard fare, (ſaid he) for do we not feaſt with Angels upon Chriſt the Bread of Life? And bleſſed be God (ſaid Paul) who hath abounded to us in all ſpiritual Bleſſings, Epheſ. 1. 3.

4. Conſid. This affliction, though great is not ſuch an affliction, but God hath far greater, with which he chaſtiſes the dearly beloved of his Soul in this World; and ſhould he remove this, and inflict thoſe, you would account your preſent ſtate a very comfortable ſtate, and bleſs God to be as now you are.

What think ye Sirs? Should God remove your preſent Troubles, ſupply all your outward Wants, give you the deſire of your Hearts in Creature-comforts, but hide his Face from you, ſhoot his Arrows into your Souls, and cauſe the Venome of them to drink up your Spirits? Should he leave you but a few days to the buffeting of Satan, and his Blaſphemous Injections, Should he hold your Eyes but a few nights waking with horrors of Conſcience, toſſing to and fro till the dawning of the day, Should he lead you through the Chambers of Death, ſhew you the viſions of darkneſs? and make his Terrors ſet themſelves in array againſt you? Then tell me if you would not count it a choice mercy to be back again in your former neceſſitous condition, with Peace of Conſcience; and count Bread and Water, with God's Favour, a happy ſtate? O then! take heed of repining.

Say not God deals hardly with you, leſt you provoke him to convince you, by your own ſenſe and feeling, that he hath worſe Rods than theſe for unſubmiſſive and froward Children.

5. Conſid. If it be bad now, it will be better ſhortly.

O keep thy Heart by that conſideration: The Meal in the Barrel is almoſt ſpent; well, be it ſo, why ſhould that trouble me, if I am almoſt beyond the need and uſe of all theſe things. The Traveller hath ſpent almoſt all his Money, but a ſhilling or two left; Well, (ſaith he) though my Money be almoſt ſpent, yet my Journey is almoſt finiſh'd too; I am near home, and then ſhall be fully ſupply'd. If there be no Candles in the Houſe, yet 'tis a comfort to think, that its almoſt day, and then there will be no need of Candles. I am afraid, Chriſtian, thou miſreckoneſt thy ſelf, when thou think'ſt, my Proviſion is almoſt ſpent, and I have a great way to travel; many years to live, and nothing to live upon; it may be not half ſo many as thou ſuppoſeſt; in this be confident, if thy Proviſion be ſpent, either freſh Supplies are coming (though thou ſeeſt not from whence) or thou art nearer thy Journeys end than thou reckoneſt thy ſelf to be. Deſponding Soul, doth it become a Man or Woman travelling upon the Road to that Heavenly City, and almoſt arriv'd there, within a few days Journey of his Father's Houſe, where all his Wants ſhall be ſupplied, to take on thus about a little Meat, Drink, or Cloaths, which he fears he ſhall want by the way? It was a noble ſaying of the Forty Martyrs, famous in the Eccleſiaſtical Story, when turned out naked in a Froſty night to be ſtarved to death, with theſe words they comforted one another δριμυς ὁ χεῖμων, &c. The Winter indeed is ſharp and cold, but Heaven is warm and comfortable; here we ſhiver for cold, but Abraham's boſome will make amends for all.

Obj. 1. But I may dye for want.

Sol. (1.) Who ever did ſo? Where were the Righteous forſaken? (2.) If ſo, your Journey is ended, and you fully ſupply'd.

Obj. 2. But I am not ſure of that, were I ſure of Heaven, it were another matter.

Sol. Are you not ſure of that? Then you have other Matters to trouble your ſelves about than theſe; Methinks this ſhould be the leaſt of all your Cares; I do not find that Souls perplexed and troubled about the want of Chriſt, pardon of Sin, &c. are uſually very anxious, or ſolicitous about theſe things. He that ſeriouſly puts ſuch Queſtions as theſe, What ſhall I do to be ſaved? How ſhall I know my Sin is pardon'd? doth not uſually trouble himſelf with, What ſhall I eat, what ſhall I drink, or wherewith ſhall I be cloathed?

6. Conſid. Doth it become the Children of ſuch a Father to diſtruſt his All-ſufficiency, or repine againſt any of his Diſpenſations?

Do you well to queſtion his care and love upon every new Exigence? Say, Have you not been aſhamed of this formerly? Hath not your Fathers ſeaſonable Proviſions for you in former ſtraits, put you to the bluſh, and made you reſolve never to queſtion his love and care any more, and yet will you renew your unworthy ſuſpicions of him again? Diſ-ingenuous Child! reaſon thus with thy ſelf; If I periſh for want of what is good and needfull for me, it muſt either be becauſe my Father knows not my Wants, or hath not wherewith to ſupply them: Or elſe regards not what becomes of me. Which of theſe ſhall I charge upon him? Not the firſt; for, Mark 6. 32. My Father knows what I have need of, my condition is not hid from him: Nor the ſecond, For the earth is the Lords, and the fullneſs of it, Pſal. 24. 1. His Name is God All-ſufficient, Gen. 17. 1. Not the laſt, for, as a Father pities his Children, ſo the Lord pities them that fear him, Pſal. 103. 13. The Lord is exceeding pittiful, and of tender mercy, Jam. 5. 11. He hears the young ravens when they cry, Job 38. 41. And will he not hear me? Conſider (ſaith Chriſt) the fowls of the air, Matth. 6. 26. Not the Fowls at the door, that are every day fed by hand; but the Fowls of the Air, that have none to provide for them. Doth he feed and cloath his Enemies, and will he forget his Children? He heard the very cry of Iſhmael in diſtreſs, Gen. 21. 17. O my unbelieving Heart! doſt thou yet doubt? Remember Hagar and the Child.

7. Conſid. Your poverty is not your ſin, but your affliction only! if by ſinful means you have not brought it upon your ſelves; and if it be but an affliction, it may be born the eaſier for that.

'Tis hard indeed to bear an affliction coming upon us as the fruit and puniſhment of ſin, when Men are under trouble upon that account; they uſe to ſay, O! if it were but a ſingle affliction coming from the Hand of God by way of tryal, I could bear it, but I have brought it upon my ſelf by ſin, it comes as the puniſhment of ſin; the marks of Gods Diſpleaſure are upon it; 'tis the guilt within that troubles and galls more, than the want without.

But it is not ſo here, and therefore you have no reaſon to be caſt down under it.

Object. But though there be no ſting of guilt, yet this condition wants not other ſtings: As firſt, the diſcredit of Religion; I cannot comply with mine engagements in the world, and thereby Religion is like to ſuffer.

Sol. 'Tis well you have an Heart to Diſcharge every Duty, yet if God diſable you by Providence, 'tis no diſcredit to your Profeſſion, becauſe you do not that which you cannot do, ſo long as it is your deſire and endeavour to do what you can and ought to do; and in this caſe God's Will is, that lenity and forbearance be exerciſed towards you, Deut. 24. 12, 13.

2. Object. But it grieves me to behold the neceſſities of others whom I was wont to relieve and refreſh, but now cannot.

Sol. If you cannot, it ceaſes to be your Duty, and God accepts the drawing out of your Soul to the hungry in compaſſion and deſire to help them, though you cannot draw forth a full purſe to relieve and ſupply them.

3. Object. But I find ſuch a condition full of temptations, a ſore clog in the way to Heaven.

Sol. Every condition in the World hath its clogs and attending temptations; and were you in a proſperous condition, you might there meet with more temptations and fewer advantages than you now have: For though I confeſs Poverty hath its Temptations as well as Proſperity, yet I am confident Proſperity hath not thoſe excellent Advantages that Poverty hath: For here you have an opportunity to diſcover the ſincerity of your love to God, when you can live upon him, find enough in him, and conſtantly follow him, even when all external inducements and motives fail. And thus I have ſhewed you how to keep your Hearts from the temptations and dangers attending a poor and low condition in the World, when want pinches, and the Heart begins to ſink, then improve and bleſs God for theſe helps to keep it.

6. Seaſon. “ The ſixth Seaſon of expreſſing “ this diligence in keeping the Heart, is the Sea- “ ſon of Duty; when we draw nigh to God in “ publick, private, or ſecret Duties, then 'tis “ time to look to the Heart; for the vanity of the “ Heart ſeldom diſcovers it ſelf more than at ſuch “ times. How oft doth the poor ſoul cry out, “ O Lord, how fain would I ſerve thee, but vain “ thoughts will not let me; I came to open my “ Heart to thee, to delight my Soul in commu- “ nion with thee, but my Corruptions have ſet “ upon me: Lord, raſe off theſe vain thoughts, “ and ſuffer them not to proſtitute the Soul, “ which is eſpouſed to thee, before thy face. The “ ſixth Caſe then is this.

6 Caſe. How the Heart may be kept from diſtractions by vain thoughts, in the time of Duty.

There is a twofold diſtraction or wandring of the Heart in Duty: (1.) Voluntary and habitual, Pſal. 78. 8. They ſet not their hearts aright, and their ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God. This is the caſe of Formaliſts, and it proceeds from the want of an holy bent and inclination of the Heart to God; their Hearts are under the Power of their Luſts, and therefore 'tis no wonder they go after their luſts, even when they are about holy things, Ezek. 33. 31. (2.) Involuntary and lamented diſtractions, Rom. 7. 21. 24. I find then a Law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me; O wretched man that I am, &c. This proceeds not from the want of a holy bent and aim, but from the weakneſs and imperfection of Grace. And in this caſe the Soul may make the like complaint againſt its own Corruptions that Abijah did againſt Jeroboam, 2 Chr. 13. 6, 7. Yet Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat is riſen up againſt his Lord, when Rehoboam was young and tender-hearted, and could not withſtand them, and there are gathered unto him vain men, the Children of Belial; Grace hath a dominion, but Luſts are mutinous and ſeditious, during the infancy thereof. But it is not my buſineſs to ſhew you how theſe diſtractions come into the Heart, but rather how to get and keep them out of the Heart; in order whereto take theſe ten following Helps.

1 Help. Sequeſter your ſelves from all earthly Employments, and ſet apart ſome time for ſolemn preparation to meet God in Duty: you cannot come reeking hot out of the World into God's preſence, but you will find a tang of it in your Duties: It is with the Heart a few minutes ſince plunged in the World, now at the feet of God, juſt as with the Sea after a Storm, which ſtill continues working, muddy, and diſquiet, though the wind be laid, and ſtorm over: Thy Heart muſt have ſome time to ſettle. There are few Muſicians that can take down a Lute or Viol, and play preſently upon it, without ſome time to tune it; there are few Chriſtians can preſently ſay, as Pſal. 57. 7. O God, my heart is fixed, it is fixed. O when then goeſt to God in any Duty, take thy Heart aſide, and ſay, O my Soul, I am now addreſſing my ſelf to the greateſt work that ever a Creature was employed about: I am going into the awful preſence of God about buſineſs of everlaſting Life.

Oh my Soul, leave trifling now, be compoſed, watchful, ſerious, this is no common Work; 'tis God-work, Soul-work; Eternity-work, I am now going forth bearing ſeed, which will bring forth fruit to life or death in the World to come; pauſe a while upon thy Sins, Wants, Troubles; ſteep thy thoughts a while in theſe before thou addreſs thy ſelf to Duty. David firſt muſed, and then ſpake with his Tongue, Pſal. 39. 3, 4. So Pſal. 45. 1. My Heart is inditing, &c.

2 Help. Having compoſed thy Heart by previous meditation, preſently ſet a guard upon thy Senſes: How often are poor Chriſtians in danger of loſing the eyes of their mind by thoſe of their body, for this David prayed, Pſal. 119. 37. Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken thou me in thy way. This may ſerve to expound that myſtical Arabian Proverb, which adviſes to ſhut the windows, that the houſe may be light: 'Twere excellent if you could ſay in your Onſets upon Duty, as an holy Man once did, when he came off from Duty: Claudimini oculi mei claudimini, &c. Be ſhut, O mine eyes, be ſhut: For it is impoſſible you ſhould ever ſee ſuch beauty and glory in any Creature, as I have now ſeen in God. You had need avoid all occaſions of diſtraction from without; for be ſure you will meet enough from within, intention of Spirit in the work of God, locks up the eye and ear againſt vanity. When Marcellus entred the gates of Syracuſe, Archimedes was ſo intent about his Mathematical Scheme, that he took no notice of the Soldiers when they entred his very Study with drawn Swords; a fervent, cannot be a vagrant Heart.

3 Help. Beg of God a mortified Fancy. A working Fancy (ſaith one) how much ſoever it be extoll'd among Men, is a great ſnare to the Soul; except it work in Fellowſhip with right Reaſon, and a ſanctified Heart: The phantaſie is a power of the Soul placed between the Senſes and the Underſtanding, 'tis that which firſt ſtirs its ſelf in the Soul, and by its motion the other powers are ſtirred; 'tis the common Shop where Thoughts are firſt forged and framed, and as this is, ſo are they; if Imaginations be not firſt caſt down, 'tis impoſſible that every thought of the Heart ſhould be brought into obedience to Chriſt 2 Cor. 10. 5. This Fancy is naturally the wildeſt and moſt untameable power in the Soul. Some Chriſtians (eſpecially ſuch as are of hot and dry Conſtitutions) have much to do with it.

And truly, the more ſpiritual the Heart is, the more 'tis troubled about the vanity and wildneſs of it. O what a ſad thing it is! that thy nobler Soul muſt Lackey up and down after a vain roving Fancy, that ſuch a Beggar ſhould ride on Horſeback, and ſuch a Prince run after it on Foot; that it ſhould call off the Soul from attendance upon God, when it is moſt ſweetly engag'd in Communion with him, to proſecute ſuch vanities as it will ſtart at ſuch times before it! Beg earneſtly of God that the power of Sanctification may once come upon it. Some Chriſtians have attained ſuch a degree of Sanctification of their Fancies, that they have had much ſweetneſs left upon their Hearts by the ſpiritual workings of it in the Night Seaſon: When thy Fancy is more mortified, thy Thoughts will be more orderly and fixed.

4 Help. If thou wouldſt keep thy Heart from thoſe

vain excurſions, realize to thy ſelf by faith, the holy and awful preſence of God in duties.

If the preſence of a grave man will compoſe us to ſeriouſneſs, how much more the preſence of an holy God? Thinkſt thou, thy Soul durſt be ſo gariſh and light, if the Senſe of a Divine Eye were upon it? Remember the place where thou art, is the place of his feet, Iſa. 60. 13. act faith upon the Omniſciency of God, All the Churches ſhall know that I am he that ſearcheth the heart, and tryeth the reins, and I will give to every one of you according to your works, Rev. 2. 23. All things are naked and open to the Eyes of him with whom we have to do. Heb. 4. 12. Realize his infinite Holineſs; into what a ſerious compoſed frame did the ſight of God in his holineſs put the ſpirit of the Prophet? Iſa. 6. 5. Labour to get alſo upon thy heart due apprehenſions of the greatneſs of God, how tender he is over his Worſhip, Lev. 10. 3. And Moſes ſaid unto Aaron, This is that the Lord ſpake, ſaying, I will be ſanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified.

“ A man that is praying (ſaith Bernard) ſhould behave himſelf as if he were entring into the Court of Heaven, where he ſees the Lord upon his Throne, ſurrounded with ten thouſand of his Angels and Saints miniſtring unto him. When thou comeſt from a duty in which thy heart hath been toying and wandring, thou mayſt ſay, Verily God was in this place, and I knew it not. Suppoſe all the impertinences and vanities which have paſt through thine heart in a duty were written out, and interlined with thy petitions, couldſt thou have the face to preſent it to God? Should thy tongue but utter all the thoughts of thy heart in Prayer, would not men abhor thee? Why, thy thoughts are vocal to God, Pſal. 139. 2. If thou wert petitioning the King for thy Life, would it not provoke him to ſee thee playing with thy Band-ſtrings, or catching every Fly that lights upon thy cloaths whilſt thou art ſpeaking to him about ſuch ſerious matters? O think ſadly upon that Scripture, Pſal. 87. 7. God is greatly to be feared in the Aſſemblies of his Saints, and to be had in reverence of all that are round about him. Why did God deſcend in Thundrings and Lightnings, and dark Clouds upon Sinai? Exod. 19. 16, 18. Why did the Mountains ſmoak under him? The People quake and tremble round about him, yea Moſes himſelf not exempted, but to teach the People that Great Truth, Heb. 12. 28, 29. Let us have grace, whereby we my ſerve him acceptably with reverence and godly fear, for our God is a conſuming fire? Preſent God thus before thee, and thy vain heart will quickly be reduced to a more ſerious frame.

5. Help. Maintain a praying frame of heart in the intervals of duty: What is the reaſon our hearts are ſo dull, careleſs and wandring, when we come to hear or pray, but becauſe there have been ſuch long intermiſſions in our communion with God; by reaſon whereof the heart is out of a praying frame? If that ſpiritual warmth, thoſe holy impreſſions we carry from God in one duty, were but preſerved to kindle another duty; it would be of marvellous advantage to keep the heart intent and ſerious with God.

To this purpoſe thoſe intermediate ejaculations, betwixt ſtated and ſolemn duties, are of moſt ſweet and excellent uſe; by theſe, one duty is as it were linked to another, and ſo the Soul as it were wraps up it ſelf in a chain of duties. That Chriſtian ſeldom miſſes his mark in ſolemn duty, that ſhoots up many of theſe darts in the intervals of duty; 'tis an excellent commendation Chriſt beſtows upon the Spouſe, Cant. 4. 11. Thy lips, O my Spouſe, drop as the honey comb: Upon which Text one gives this ſweet note, the honey-comb drops actually but ſometimes, but it always hangs full of ſweet drops ready to fall; if our ejaculations were more, our lamentations upon this account would be fewer.

6 Help. Endeavour to engage and raiſe thy affections to God in duty, if thou wouldſt have thy diſtractions cured.

A dropping eye, and a melting heart, are ſeldom troubled as others upon this account: When the Soul is intent about any work, it gathers in its ſtrength, and bends all the thoughts about it; and when it is deeply affected, it will be intent, the affections command the thoughts to go after them, deadneſs cauſes diſtraction, and diſtraction increaſes deadneſs; could you but look upon duties as the Galleries of Communion in which you walk with God, where your Souls may be filled with thoſe raviſhing, and matchleſs delights that are in his preſence, your Soul would not offer to ſtir from thence.

It is with the heart in duty, as it is with thoſe that dig for Gold Ore; they try here, and finding none, try there; and ſo go from place to place, till at laſt they hit upon the rich Vein, and there they ſit down. If thy heart could but once hit the rich Vein in duty, it would dwell and abide there with delight and conſtancy. O how I love thy Law, it is my Meditation day and night! Pſal. 119. 97. The Soul could dwell day and night upon its knees, when once its delights, loves, and deſires are engaged. What's the reaſon your hearts are ſo ſhuffling, eſpecially in ſecret duties? Why are you ready to be gone almoſt as ſoon as you are come into the preſence of God, but becauſe your affections are not ingaged?

7 Help. Mourn over the matter to God, and call in aſſiſtance from Heaven, when vain thoughts aſſault thy heart in duty.

When the meſſenger of Satan buffeted Paul by wicked injections, as is ſuppoſed, he goes to God, and mourns over it before him, 2 Cor. 12. 8. never ſlight wandring thoughts in duty as ſmall matters, follow every vain thought with a deep ſigh, turn thee to God with ſuch words as theſe, Lord I came hither to ſpeak with thee, and here a buſie Devil, and a vain heart conſpiring together have ſet upon me. O my God! what an heart have I? Shall I never wait upon thee without diſtraction! When ſhall I enjoy an hour of free communion with thee? Help me, my God, this once; do but diſplay thy glory before mine eyes, and my heart ſhall quickly be recovered: Thou knoweſt I came hither to enjoy thee, and ſhall I go away without thee? See, how the heart of thy poor child works towards thee! Strives to get near thee, but cannot: My heart is aground, come thou North wind, blow South wind, O for a freſh gale now from thy Spirit, to ſet my affections afloat! Couldſt thou but thus affectionately bewail thy diſtractions to God, thou mighteſt obtain help and deliverance from them: He would ſay to Satan, and thine imperious luſts, as Ahaſhuerus ſaid of Haman, What! Will he force the Queen before my face? Who are theſe, that ſet upon my child in my work, and preſence?

8 Help. Look upon the ſucceſs and ſweetneſs of thy duties, duties, as very much depending upon the keeping of thy heart cloſe with God in them.

Theſe two things, the ſucceſs, and ſweetneſs of duty, are as dear to a Chriſtians as his two eyes; and both of theſe muſt neceſſarily be loſt, if the heart be loſt in duty, Job. 25. 13. Surely God heareth not vanity, neither doth the Almighty regard it: The promiſe is made to an heart ingaged, Jer. 29. 13. Then ſhall you ſeek me, and find me, when ye ſhall ſearch for me with all your heart. Well then, when thou findeſt thy heart under the power of deadneſs and diſtraction, ſay to thy Soul, O what do I loſe by a careleſs heart now! My praying times are the choiceſt parts, the golden ſpots of all my time: could I but get up this heart with God, I might now obtain ſuch mercies as would be matter for a ſong to all eternity.

9 Help. Look upon it as a great diſcovery of the ſincerity, or hypocriſie of your hearts, according as you find them careful, or careleſs, in this matter.

Nothing will ſtartle an upright heart more than this: What, ſhall I give way to a cuſtomary wandring of heart from God? Shall the ſpot of the hypocrite appear upon my Soul? They indeed can drudge on, in the round of duty, never regarding the frames of their Hearts, Ezek. 33. 31, 32. but ſhall I do ſo? When men come into the Preſence-Chamber, and the King is not there, they bow to the empty Chair. O never let me be ſatisfied with empty Duties! Never let me take my leave of a duty, until mine eyes have ſeen the King, the Lord of hoſts.

10 Help. Laſtly, 'Twill be of ſpecial uſe to keep thine heart with God in duties, to conſider what influence all thy duties have into thy Eternity.

Theſe are your ſeed times, and what you ſow in your Duties in this World, you muſt look to reap the fruit of it in another World, Gal. 6. 7, 8. If you ſow to the fleſh, of that you ſhall reap corruption; but if to the Spirit, life everlaſting. O my Soul, anſwer ſeriouſly; Wouldſt thou be willing to reap the fruit of vanity, in the World to come? Dareſt thou ſay, when thy thought are roving to the ends of the earth in duty, when thou ſcarce mindeſt what thou ſayeſt or heareſt, Now Lord, I am ſowing to the Spirit, now I am providing and laying up for Eternity, now I am ſeeking for glory, honour, and immortality, now I am ſtriving to enter in at the ſtrait gate, now I am taking the Kingdom of Heaven by an holy violence? O ſuch a conſideration as this, ſhould make the multitudes of vain thoughts that preſs in upon thy heart in duty, to fly ſeven ways before it. And thus I have ſhown you how to keep your hearts, in the times of Duty.

7 Seaſon. “The Seventh ſeaſon calling for “more than common diligence to keep the Heart, “is, when we receive injuries and abuſes from “Men. Such is the depravedneſs and corruption “of Man in his collapſed ſtate, that homo homini “lupus, one Man is become a Wolf, a Tiger, to ano“ther; they are as the Prophet complains, Hab. 1. “24. as the fiſhes of the Sea, and as the creeping things “that have no ruler over them; and as wicked “Men are cruel and oppreſſive one to another, “ſo they conſpire together to abuſe and wrong “the people of God, as the ſame Prophet com“plains, ver. 13. The wicked devoureth the man “that is more righteous than he. Now when we “are thus abuſed and wronged, 'tis hard to keep “the heart from revengful motions; to make “it meekly and quietly to commit the cauſe to “him that judgeth righteouſly; to exerciſe no “other affection but pity towards them that a“buſe us. Surely the ſpirit that is in us luſteth “to revenge, but it muſt not be ſo; you have “choyce helps in the Goſpel to keep down your “hearts from ſuch ſinful motions againſt your e“nemies, and to ſweeten your imbitter'd Spi“rits. The ſeventh caſe then ſhall be this.

7 Caſe. How a Chriſtian may keep his heart from revengeful motions, under the greateſt injuries and abuſes from men?

The Goſpel indeed allows a liberty to vindicate our innocency, and aſſert our rights; but not to vent our corruptions, and invade Gods right; when therefore thou findeſt thy heart begin to be inflamed by revengful motions, preſently apply the following remedies; and the firſt is this.

1 Rem. Urge upon thy heart the ſevere prohibitions of revenge by the law of God. Remember that this is forbidden fruit, how pleaſing and luſcious ſoever it be to our vitiated appetites. O ſaith Nature, revenge is ſweet; O but, ſaith God, the effects thereof ſhall be bitter: How plainly hath God interdicted this fleſh pleaſing ſin, Prov. 20. 22. Say not, I will recompence evil, Prov. 24. 29. Say not I will do ſo to him as he hath done to me. Rom. 12. 27. Recompenſe to no man evil for evil, and ver. 19. Avenge not your ſelves, but rather give place to wrath: Nay, that's not all; but Prov. 25. 21. If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirſt, give him drink. The Word feed him, as Criticks obſerve, ſignifies to feed chearfully and tenderly, as Birds do their young ones: The Scripture is a great friend to the Peace and Tranquility of humane Societies, which can never be preſerved, if Revenge be not depoſed: It was wont to be an argument urged by the Chriſtians to prove their Religion to be ſupernatural and pure, that it forbids Revenge which is ſo ſweet to Nature; and verily 'tis a Thouſand pities ſuch an Argument ſhould be loſt. Well then, awe your hearts with the authority of God in theſe Scriptures; and when carnal Reaſon ſaith mine Enemie deſerves to be hated, let Conſcience reply, But doth God deſerve to be diſobeyed? Thus, and thus hath he done, and ſo he hath wronged me; but what hath God done, that I ſhould wrong him? If he dare be ſo bold to break the Peace, ſhall I be ſo wicked to break the Precept? If he fears not to wrong me, ſhall not I fear to wrong God? O let the fear of Gods threatnings repreſs ſuch ſinful motions.

2 Rem. Set before your eyes the moſt eminent Patterns of Meekneſs and Forgiveneſs, that your Soul may fall in love with it.

This is the way to cut off thoſe common Pleas of the fleſh for Revenge: As thus, No man would bear ſuch an affront; yes, ſuch and ſuch have born as bad and worſe: I ſhall be reckoned a coward, a fool, if I paſs by this; no matter, as long as I follow the Examples of the wiſeſt and holieſt of Men: Never did any ſuffe more and greater abuſes from Men than Chri did, and never did any carry it more peaceabl and forgivingly, Iſa. 53. 7. He was oppreſſed, and h was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he wa brought as a lamb to the ſlaughter, &c. Th Pattern the Apoſtle ſets before you for yo imitation, 1 Pet. 2. 21, 22, 23. For even he unto are you called, becauſe Chriſt alſo ſuffe for us, leaving us an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps: Who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he ſuffered, he threatned not, but committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly. To be of a meek forgiving ſpirit is Chriſt-like, God-like; then ſhall you be the Children of your Father, which is in Heaven, for he maketh his ſun to riſe upon the evil, and upon the good, and ſendeth rain on the juſt, and on the unjuſt, Mat. 5. 45. How eminently alſo did this Spirit of Chriſt reſt upon his Apoſtles? Never were there ſuch men upon Earth for true excellency of Spirit. None were ever abuſed more, or ſuffered their abuſes better: Being reviled, (ſay they) we bleſs; being perſecuted, we ſuffer it; being defam'd, we intreat; 1 Cor. 4. 12, 13. Mr. Calvin though a man of a quick ſpirit, yet had attained ſuch a degree of this Chriſt-like forgiveneſs, that when Luther had uſed ſome opprobrious language of him, the good man ſaid no more but this, "Although he ſhould call me Devil, yet I will acknowledge him to be an eminent ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt.

I Have often heard it Reported of Holy Mr. Dod, that when one, inraged at his cloſe convincing Doctrine, pick'd a quarrel with him, ſmote him on the face, and daſht out two of his Teeth; this meek ſervant of Chriſt ſpat out the Teeth and Blood into his hand, and ſaid, See here, you have knockt out two my Teeth, and that without any juſt provocation; but on condition I might do your Soul good, I would give you leave to daſh out all the reſt: Here is the the excellency of a Chriſtians Spirit, above all the attainments of Moral Heathens: Though they were excellent at many other things, yet they could never attain this forgiving Spirit. It is the firſt Office of Juſtice (ſaid Tully) to hurt no body, unleſs firſt provoked by an injury; whereupon Lactantius, O quam ſimplicem veramque ſententiam duorum verborum, adjectione corrupit! What a dainty Sentence ſpoiled the Oratour by adding thoſe two laſt words! Strive then for this excellency of Spirit, which is the proper excellency of Chriſtians, do ſome ſingular thing that others cannot do, and then you will have a teſtimony in their Conſciences: When Moſes outdid the Magicians, they were forced to confeſs the finger of God in that buſineſs.

3 Remed. Conſider well the quality of the perſon that hath wronged thee; either he is a good man or a wicked man, that hath done thee the injury; if he be a good man, there is light and tenderneſs in his Conſcience, and that will bring him at laſt to a ſenſe of the evil he hath done; however Chriſt hath forgiven him greater injuries than theſe, and why ſhouldſt not thou? Will not Chriſt upbraid him with any of thoſe wrongs done to him, but frankly forgives him all, and wilt thou take him by the throat for ſome petty abuſe that he hath done to thee?

Or is he a wicked man? If ſo, truly you have more need to exerciſe pity, than revenge towards him, and that upon a double account: For (1.) He is beſide himſelf, ſo indeed is every unconverted ſinner, Luke 15. 17. Should you go into Bedlam, and there hear one rail at you, another mock you, and a third threaten you, would you ſay I will be revenged upon them? No, you would rather go away pitying them. Alas, poor Creatures! They are out of their Wits, and know not what they do. Beſides, (2.) There is a day a coming, if they repent not, when they will have more Miſery than you can find in your hearts to wiſh them; you need not ſtudy revenge, Gods Vengeance ſleepeth not; and will ſhortly take place upon them, and is not that enough? Have they not an Eternity of Miſery coming? If they Repent not, this muſt be the Portion of their Cup; and if ever they do repent, they will be ready to make you reparation.

4 Rem. Keep down thy Heart by this Conſideration, that by Revenge thou canſt but ſatisfie a Luſt, but by Forgiveneſs thou ſhalt Conquer a Luſt.

Suppoſe, by Revenge thou ſhouldſt deſtroy one Enemy, I will ſhew thee how by forgiving thou ſhalt Conquer Three: Thine own Luſt, the Devils Temptation, and thine Enemies Heart; and is not this a more glorious Conqueſt? If by revenge thou overcome thine Enemy, yet (as Barnard ſaith) Infelix victoria, ubi ſuperans virum ſuccumbit vitio: Unhappy Victory, when by overcoming another Man, thou art overcome by thine own Corruption; but this way you may obtain a Glorious Conqueſt indeed. What an Honourable and dry Victory did David this way obtain over Saul, 1 Sam. 24. 16, 17. And it came to paſs when David had made an end of ſpeaking theſe Words, that Saul lift up his Voice and Wept; And he ſaid to David, Thou art more Righteous than I.

It muſt be a very Diſ-ingenuous nature indeed, upon which meekneſs and forgiveneſs will not Work; A ſtony Heart which this fire will not Melt: To this ſenſe is that, Prov. 25. 21. If thine Enemy Hunger, Feed him; If he thirſt, give him Drink; For in ſo doing thou ſhalt Heap Coals of fire upon his Head. Some will have it a ſin-puniſhing fire, but others, an Heart Melting fire: To be ſure, 'twill either Melt his Heart, or Aggravate his Miſery. Auguſtine thinks that Stephens Prayer for his Enemies, was the great means of Paul's converſion.

5 Rem. Seriouſly propund this Queſtion to thy own Heart, Have I got any good by the Wrongs and Injuries received, or have I not? If they have done you no good, turn the Revenge upon your ſelves. O that I ſhould have ſuch a bad Heart, that can get no good out of ſuch Troubles. O that my Spirit ſhould be ſo unlike to Chriſts! The Patience and Meekneſs of other Chriſtians have turned all the injuries thrown at them, into Precious Stones; the Spirits of others have been raiſed in Bleſſing God, when they have been loaded with Reproaches by the World, they have bound them as an Ornament to their Necks. Superbus fio (ſaid Luther) Quod video nomen peſſimum mihi creſcere. I could even be Proud upon it, that I have a bad name among Wicked Men: to the ſame purpoſe Jerome ſweetly, Gratias ago Deo meo quod dignus ſum quem mundus oderit. I thank my God, that I am Worthy to be hated of the World; Thus their Hearts were provoked by injuries to Magnifie God, and bleſs him for them; If it work contrary with me, I have cauſe enough to be filled with ſelf-diſplacency.

If you have got any good by them, if the Reproaches and Wrongs you have Received, have made you ſearch your Hearts the more, watch your ways the more narrowly; If their wronging you, have made you ſee how you have wronged ed God, then let me ſay for them as Paul did for himſelf, pray forgive them this Wrong.

What, can you not find an Heart to forgive one that hath beeu inſtrumental of ſo much good to you? That's ſtrange! What though they meant it for evil? Yet if God hath turned it to good, you have no more Reaſon to rage againſt the Inſtrument, than he had who received a Wound from his Enemy, which onely brake, and let out that impoſthume, which otherwiſe had been his death.

6 Rem. 'Tis of excellent Uſe to keep the Heart from Revenge, to look up and eye the firſt Cauſe by which all our Troubles are ordered.

This will calm and meeken our Spirits quickly; never did a wicked Tongue try the Patience of a Saint more than David's was tryed by that railing Shimei: Yet the Spirit of this good Man was not at all poiſoned with Revenge, though he goes along curſing and caſting Stones at him all the way: Yea, though Abiſhai offered David, if he pleaſed, the Head of that Enemy; but the King ſaid, What have I to do with you, ye Sons of Zerviah? So let him curſe, becauſe the Lord hath ſaid unto him, Curſe David; Who ſhall then ſay, Wherefore haſt thou done ſo? It may be God uſes him as his Rod to laſh me, becauſe I by my ſin made his Enemies to blaſpheme him: And ſhall I be angry with the Rod? How irrational were that? This alſo was it that quieted Job; he doth not rail, and vow Revenge upon the Caldeans and Sabeans, but eyes God as the Orderer of thoſe Troubles, and is quiet: The Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be his Name, Job 1. 21.

Object. But you will ſay, To turn aſide the Right of a Man, to ſubvert a Man in his Cauſe, the Lord approveth not, Lam. 3. 36.

Anſ. True, but though it fall not under his Approving, yet it doth under his Permitting will, and there is a great Argument for quiet Submiſſion in that: Nay, he hath not only the permitting, but the ordering of all thoſe Troubles; did we ſee more of an holy God, we ſhould ſhow leſs of a corrupt Nature in ſuch Tryals.

7 Rem. Conſider how you daily wrong God, and you will not be ſo eaſily inflamed with Revenge againſt others that have wronged you.

You are daily grieving and wronging God, and yet he bears, forgives, and will not take Vengeance upon you; and will you be ſo quick in avenging your ſelves upon others? O what a ſharp and terrible Rebuke is that, Matt. 18. 32, 33? O thou wicked and ſloathful Servant! I forgave thee all that Debt becauſe thou deſiredſt me, ſhouldſt not thou alſo have had Compaſſion on thy fellow Servant, even as I had pity on thee? None ſhould be filled with bowels of pity, forbearance, and mercy, to ſuch as wrong them, as thoſe ſhould be that have experienced the riches of mercy themſelves; methinks the Mercy of God to us, ſhould melt our very bowels into Mercy over others; 'tis impoſſible we can be cruel to others, except we forget how kind Chriſt has been to us; thoſe that have found Mercy, ſhould ſhew Mercy; if kindneſs cannot work, methinks Fear ſhould: If ye forgive not men their Treſpaſſes, neither will your Father forgive you your Treſpaſſes, Mat. 6. 15.

8 Rem. Laſtly, Let the Conſideration of the Day of the Lord, which draweth nigh, with-hold your Hearts from anticipating it by Acts of Revenge.

Why are you ſo quick? Is not the Lord at hand, to avenge all his abuſed Servants? Be patient therefore, my Brethren, unto the coming of the Lord: Behold the Husbandman waiteth, &c. Be ye alſo patient, for the coming of the Lord draws nigh: Grudg not one againſt another, Brethren, leaſt ye be condemned. Behold the Judge ſtandeth at the door, Jam. 5. 7, 8, 9. This Text affords three Arguments againſt Revenge. (1) The Lords near approach. (2) The Example of the Husbandmans Patience. (3) The Danger we draw upon our ſelves by anticipating God's Judgment: Vengeance is mine, ſaith the Lord; he will diſtribute Juſtice more equally and impartially than you can; they that believe they have a God to right them, will not ſo much wrong themſelves as to avenge their own Wrongs.

1 Obj. But Fleſh and Blood are not able to bear ſuch Abuſes.

Sol. If you reſolve to conſult Fleſh and Blood in ſuch Caſes, and do no more but what that will enable you to do: Never pretend to Religion. Chriſtians muſt do ſingular and ſupernatural Things.

2 Obj. But if I pack up ſuch Abuſes, I ſhall be reckoned a Fool, and every one will trample upon me.

Sol. (1) You may be reckoned ſo among Fools, but God and good Men will account it your Wiſdom, and the Excellency of your Spirits. (2) It muſt be a baſe Spirit indeed that will trample upon a meek and forgiving Chriſtian: And thus learn to keep your Hearts from Revenge under all your Provocations.

8 Seaſon. "The next Seaſon is which we are in Danger of loſing our Hearts, is, when we meet with great Croſſes and Provocations; then ſinful paſſion is apt to tranſport the Heart; 'tis the Fault of many good Men to be of haſty and quick Spirits when provoked; tho' they dare not concoct Anger into Malice, for that would be a note of Wichedneſs, yet are they very incident to ſudden Anger, which is a ſign of Weakneſs. Beza, in the Life of Calvin obſerves, that he was of a keen and haſty Spirit: And he that writes the Life of Great Cameron, ſaith, that his Anger was ſoon ſtirred towards his near and familiar Friends, but then he would eaſily depoſe it, and acknowledg his Weakneſs; alas, when Provocations, and Tryals of our Patience come, we know not what Spirits we are of. The eighth Caſe therefore is this.

Bez. in Vit. Cal. p. 100.

8 Caſe. How the Heart may be kept meek and patient under great Croſſes and Provocations.

There are three Sorts of Anger, natural, holy, and ſinful Anger. (1) Natural, which is nothing elſe but the Motion of the iraſcible Appetite towards an offenſive Object: And this in it ſelf is no ſin, they are Propaſſions rather than Paſſions; the Infelicities rather than the Sins of Nature, as Jerom calls them; Reaſon (ſaith Plutarch) is the Driver, the Soul is the Chariot, and the two Horſes that draw it on in all its Motions, are the concupiſcible and iraſcible Appetites; whileſt theſe are rightly managed by Reaſon, they are not only lawful, but very uſeful to the Soul. God would not have us to be ſtupid and inſenſate, though he would have us to be meek and patient: In Eph. 4. 26. He allows the natural motion, but forbids the ſinful exorbitancy. (2) Holy Anger, which is a pure flame, kindled by an heavenly ſpark of Love to God, and in Scripture is called Zeal, which is (as one ſaith) the Dagger which Love draws in God's Quarrel. Such was Lot's againſt the Sodomites, and that of Moſes againſt the Idolatrous Iſraelites. When Servetus condemned Zwinglius for his harſhneſs, his anſwer was, In aliis manſuetus ero, in blaſphemiis in Chriſtum, non ita; In other caſes I will be mild, but in the cauſe of Chriſt, not ſo. That which the World calls moderation and mildneſs here, is in Gods account ſtupidity and cowardlineſs; neither of theſe are that which I am now perſwading you to keep your hearts againſt. But (3) There is ſinfull Paſſion, that's the thing which endangers you. Now Anger becomes ſinful when 'tis either Cauſleſs, Matth. 5. 22. or Exceſſive; and that either in meaſure or time, exceeding the value of the impulſive cauſe, be it more tranſient or abiding, yet 'tis a ſin and is matter of humiliation before God. Now the means to keep the heart from it under provocations, are theſe.

1 Means. Get low and humble thoughts of your ſelves, and then you will have meek Spirits, and peaceab'e deportments towards others.

The humble, is ever the patient man; Pride is the root of Paſſion, a lofty, will be a ſurly Spirit; Bladders blown up with wind, will not lie cloſe together; but prick them, and you may pack a thouſand in a ſmall room: Only by pride cometh Contention, Prov. 13. 10. When we over-rate our ſelves, then we think we are unworthily treated by others, and that provokes; and here (by the way) take notice of one great benefit of acquaintance with your own Hearts, even the meekning and calming of your Spirits. Chriſtian, methinks thou ſhouldſt know ſo much by thy ſelf, that 'tis impoſſible any ſhould lay thee lower, or have baſer thoughts of thee, than thou haſt of thy ſelf. Some render the original of that Text, Hab. 2. 5. thus: The proud man is as he that tranſgreſſeth by Wine; and Drunkards, you know, are quarrelſome: O get more Humility, and that will bring you more Peace.

2 Means. Be often ſweetning your Spirits in Communion with God, and they will not eaſily be imbittered with wrath toward men.

A quiet Conſcience never produced an unquiet Converſation: The Peace of God doth βραβεύειν, rule in the Heart, as an Umpire in appeaſing ſtriſes, for ſo much that Word, Col. 3. 15. Imports; Wrath and Striſe are hugely oppoſite to the Frame and Temper of a ſpiritual Heart, becauſe inconſiſtent with the delight and contentment of that Dove-like Spirit, which loves a ſedate and quiet Breſt. O, ſaith a Soul, that feeds upon the ſweet Communion of the Spirit, ſhall the Sparkles of Provocations now catch in my Paſſions, and raiſe ſuch a Smoke in my Soul as will offend and drive away the Comforter from me? This is ſo effectual a Remedy againſt Paſſion, that I durſt almoſt venture, in a Chriſtian of a haſty Nature, to make long ſuffering a ſign of Communion with God. Seeſt thou ſuch a Chriſtian quiet and calm under Provocations, 'tis very like his Soul feeds upon ſuch Sweetneſs in God as he is loth to leave: And on the other ſide, ſeeſt thou a Chriſtian Turbulent and Clamorous, doubtleſs all is not well within; his Spirit is like a Bone out of joynt, which cannot move without Pain and Trouble.

3 Means. Get due Apprehenſions of the evil Nature and Effects of ſinful Anger: Ira furor brevis, Anger is a ſhort Madneſs (ſaith one:) Ira animæ febris, (ſaith another) Anger is the Feaver of the Soul; 'Tis the Interregnum and Eclipſe of Reaſon (ſaith a third.)

The Effects of it are alſo very ſad,

(1) It grieves the Spirit of God, Eph. 4. 30. Baniſhes him from that Breaſt in which it rages and tumultuates, God is the God of Peace; the Preſence and Comforts of God are only injoyed in a Calm: 'Tis a golden Note one gives upon the fore-cited Text, God doth not uſually bleſs with Peace of Conſcience, ſuch as make no Conſcience of Peace. (2) It gives Advantage to the Devil, Eph. 4. 26, 27. Satan is an angry and diſcontented Spirit, and finds no reſt but in reſtleſs Hearts; he lives like the Salamander in Fires of Contention; he beſtirs himſelf when the Spirits are in a Commotion, ſometimes he fills the Heart with revengeful Thoughts, ſometimes he fills the Lips, and inflames the Tongue with undecent Language; even a meek Moſes ſometimes ſpake unadviſedly with his Lips. (3) It diſ-tunes the Spirit for Duty; upon this Account the Apoſtle diſſwades Husbands and Wives from jarring Carriages and Contentions, that their Prayers be not hindered, 1 Pet. 3. 7. All Acts of Worſhip muſt be ſuitable to the Object of Worſhip; but God is the God of Peace, the God of Love. (4) To mention no more, it diſparages the Chriſtian Religion. How would Plato and Pythagoras ſhame us, if they were now living? Chriſt was a Lamb for meekneſs, and doth it become his Followers to be like Lyons? O keep your Hearts, or you will at once loſe, not onely your own Peace, but the credit of Religion.

4 Means. Conſider how ſweet a thing it is to a Chriſtian to conquer his Corruptions and carry away the Spoils of them.

He that is ſlow to Anger, is better than the Mighty; and he that ruleth his Spirit, than he that taketh a City, Prov. 16. 32. Is there any content in venting a Paſſion? How much more in mortifying it? When thou comeſt in a Calm mood, or upon a Death-bed to review thy Life, how comfortable then will it be, to reflect upon the Conqueſts thou haſt got by the Fear of God, over the evil Propenſions of thine own Heart! 'Twas a memorable ſaying of Valentinian the Emperour, when he came to die: 'Amongſt all my Conqueſts '(ſaid he) there is but one that now comforts me; 'and being asked what that was, he anſwered, I 'have overcome my worſt Enemy, mine own 'naughty Heart.

5 Means. Shame your ſelves by ſetting before you thoſe eminent patterns that have been moſt excellent for meekneſs.

Above all, compare your Spirits with the Spirit of Chriſt; Learn of me (ſaith he) for I am meek and lowly, Matt. 11. 29. Chriſt was meek and lowly, but I am proud and paſſionate; it was the high Commendation of Moſes, Numb. 12. 3. Now the Man Moſes was meek above all the Men of the Earth: And this was the Man that knew

God face to face. 'Tis ſaid of Calvin and Urſin, that they both were of cholerick natures, but yet had ſo learned the meekneſs of Chriſt, as not to utter one word, under the greateſt provocation, unbeſeeming Religion. When I read the pretty ſtories of the very Heathens, that never had the advantages we have, how the Pythagorians, what ever fewds had been among them in the day, would huſh all, by ſending to each other this meſſage, The Sun is almoſt ſet; and that of Plato to his Scholar, I would beat thee, if I were not angry.

When I read what lenity and tenderneſs Lycurgus ſhewed to an inſolent fellow that had ſtruck out one of his eyes; I am aſhamed to ſee how much Chriſtians are out-ſhot by Heathens: who by meer moral Arguments and Precepts, had thus meekned their Spirits and conquered their Paſſions; the dim light of Nature could teach Seneca to ſay, That Anger will hurt a man more than the Offence; for there is a certain bound in the Offence, but I know not how far mine Anger will carry me. 'Tis a ſhame that theſe men who come far behind us in means and advantages, ſhould ſo far out-ſtrip us in meekneſs and patience.

Means 6. Laſtly, Avoid all irritating occaſions.

He that will not hear the Clapper, muſt not pull the Rope: Grievous words ſtir up anger, (ſaith Solomon) Prov. 15. 1. Do not only pray, and reſolve againſt it, but get as far as you can out of the way of it; 'tis true Spiritual Valour, to run as faſt, and far as we can, out of ſins way: If you can but avoid Anger in its firſt riſe, there is no great fear of it afterwards; for it is not with this ſin as it is with other ſins; other ſins grow to their full ſtrength by degrees, their firſt motions are the weakeſt; but this ſin is born in its full ſtrength, 'tis ſtrongeſt at firſt; withſtand it then, and it falls before you. Thus learn to keep your hearts when provocations ariſe.

9 Seaſon. The ninth Seaſon of exerting our greateſt diligence, "Is the critical hour of temp" tation, wherein Satan lays cloſe Siege to the " Fort-Royal of a Chriſtians heart, and often
" ſurpriſes it for want of watchfulneſs: To keep
" thy heart now, is no leſs a Mercy than a Duty;
" few Chriſtians are ſo well skilled in detecting
" the fallacies, and retorting the arguments by " which Satan uſes to draw them to ſin, as to " come off ſafe in thoſe Encounters. Watch and
" Pray (ſaith our Lord) leſt ye enter into tempta-
" tion, Mark 14. 38. Even an eminent David,
" and a wiſe Solomon, have ſmarted for their care-
" leſneſs at ſuch a time as this. The ninth Caſe
" therefore ſhall be this.

Caſe 9. How a Chriſtian when ſtrongly ſolicited by the Devil to ſin, may keep his heart from yielding to the temptation?

Now there are ſix ſpecial Arguments by which Satan ſubtilly inſinuates and winds in the temptation; in all which I ſhall offer thee ſome help for the keeping of thy heart; and the firſt is this:

Arg. 1. The firſt Argument is drawn from the pleaſure of ſin: O (ſaith Satan) here is pleaſure to be enjoyed; the temptation comes with a ſmiling countenance, and charming Voice: What, art thou ſo flegmatick and dull a ſoul, as not to feel the powerful charmes of pleaſure? Who can with-hold himſelf from ſuch delights?

Now thine heart may be kept from the danger of this temptation, by retorting this Argument of pleaſure upon the Tempter; which is done two wayes.

1. Thou telleſt me, Satan, that ſin is pleaſant; be it ſo: But are the gripes of Conſcience, and the flames of Hell, ſo too? Is it pleaſant to feel the wounds and throbs of Conſcience? If ſo, Why did Peter weep ſo bitterly? Mat. 26. 75. Why did David cry out of broken bones? Pſal. 51. I hear what thou ſayeſt of the pleaſure of ſin, and I have read what David hath ſaid of the terrible effects of ſin in his Pſalm to bring to remembrance, Pſal. 38. ver. 2. Thine Arrowes ſtick faſt in me, and thy Hand preſſeth me ſore: Ver. 3. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh, becauſe of thine anger; neither is there any reſt in my bones becauſe of my ſin. Ver. 4. For mine iniquities are gone over mine head as an heavy burden; they are too heavy for me: Ver. 5. My wounds ſtink and are corrupt, becauſe of my fooliſhneſs: Ver. 6. I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly, I go mourning all the day long: Ver. 7. My loins are filled with a loathſome Diſeaſe, and there is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh: Ver. 8. I am feeble and ſore broken, I have roared by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of my heart.

Here I ſee the true face of ſin; if I yield to thy temptation, I muſt either feel theſe pangs of Conſcience, or the flames of Hell.

2. What talkeſt thou of the pleaſure of ſin, when by experience I know there is more true pleaſure in the mortification, than can be in the commiſſion of ſin? O how ſweet is it to pleaſe God, to obey Conſcience, to preſerve inward Peace! To be able to ſay, In this tryal I have diſcovered the ſincerity of my heart; now I know I fear the Lord, now I ſee that I truly hate ſin. Hath ſin any ſuch delight as this? This will choak that temptation.

Arg. 2. The ſecond Argument is drawn from the Secreſie of ſin: O (ſaith Satan) this ſin will never diſgrace thee abroad, none ſhall know it.

This Argument may be retorted, and the heart ſecured thus: Thou ſayeſt, None ſhall know it; but Satan canſt thou find a place void of the Divine Preſence for me to ſin in? Thus Job ſecured his heart from this temptation, Job 13. 4. Doth he not ſee my wayes, and count all my ſteps? Therefore he makes a Covenant with his eyes, ver. 1. After the ſame manner Solomon teaches us to retort this temptation, Prov. 5. 20, 21. And why, my Son, wilt thou be raviſhed with a ſtrange woman, and embrace the boſome of a ſtranger? For the ways of man are before the Eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings. What if I hide it from the eyes of all the world for the preſent? I cannot hide it from God; and the time is at hand, when all the world ſhall know it too; for the Word aſſures me, Luke 8. 17. That what is done now in ſecret, ſhall be proclaimetd as upon the houſe top. Beſides, is not my Conſcience as a thouſand witneſſes? Do I owe no reverence to my ſelf? Could the Heathen men ſay, Turpe quid auſurus, te ſine teſte time; When thou are tempted to commit ſin, fear thy ſelf without any other witneſs: And ſhall not I be afraid to ſin before mine own Conſcience, which always hath a Reproof in its Mouth, or a Pen in its Hand, to record my moſt ſecret Actions?

Arg. 3. The third Argument by which Satan tempteth to ſin, is taken from the gain and profit ariſing out of it: Why ſo nice and ſcrupulous? 'Tis but ſtretch Conſcience a little, and thou mayeſt make thy ſelf; Now is thy opportunity.

The heart may be kept from falling into this dangerous ſnare, by retorting the temptation thus: But what profit will it be, if a Man ſhould gain the whole World, and loſe his own Soul? Or what ſhall a Man give in exchange for his Soul! Shall I hazard thee for all the good that is in this World? There is an immortal Spirit dwelling in this fleſhly Tabernacle, of more value than all earthly things, which muſt live to all Eternity, when this World ſhall lie in white aſhes: A Soul for which Jeſus Chriſt ſhed his precious and invaluable blood. I was ſent into this World to provide for this Soul; indeed God hath alſo committed to me the care of my Body, but (as one happily expreſſes it) with this difference; a Maſter commits two things to a Servant, the Child and the Childs cloaths: Will the Maſter thank the Servant, if he plead, I have kept the Cloaths, but I have neglected the Life of the Child?

Goſpel Glaſs, p. 3.

Arg. 4 The fourth Argument is drawn from the ſmalneſs of the ſin; 'Tis but a little one, a ſmall matter, a trifle; who would ſtand upon ſuch niceties?

This Argument may be retorted three ways.

1. But is the Majeſty of Heaven a little one too? If I commit this ſin, I muſt offend and wrong a great God, Iſa. 40. 15, 16, 17, 22.

2. Is there any little Hell to torment little ſinners in? Are not the leaſt ſinners there filled with the fulneſs of Wrath? O there is great Wrath treaſured up for ſuch as the World counts little ſinners.

3. The leſs the ſin, the leſs the inducement to commit it: What, ſhall I break with God for a trifle? Deſtroy my peace, wound my Conſcience, grieve the Spirit, and all this for nothing? O what madneſs is this?

Arg. 5. A Fifth Argument is drawn from the Grace of God, and hopes of Pardon: Come, God will paſs by this as an Infirmity, he will not be extream to mark it.

But ſtay my Heart,

1. Where do I find a Promiſe of Mercy to Preſumptuous ſinners? Indeed for involuntary ſurpriſals, unavoidable and lamented infirmities, there is a Pardon of courſe; But where is the Promiſe to a daring ſinner, that ſins upon Preſumption of Pardon? Pauſe a while, my Soul, upon that Scripture, Numb. 15. 27. 30. And if a Soul ſin through Ignorance, then he ſhall bring a She-Goat, of the firſt year for a Sin-offering, &c. But the Soul that doth ought Preſumptuouſly, the ſame reproacheth the Lord, and that Soul ſhall be cut off from among his People.

2. If God be a God of ſo much Mercy, How an I abuſe ſo good a God? Shall I take ſo glorious an Attribute as the Mercy of God is, and buſe it unto ſin? Shall I wrong him becauſe he is ood? or ſhould not rather the goodneſs of God ead me to repentance? Rom. 2. 4. There is ercy with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared, Pſal. 30. 4.

Arg. 6. Laſtly, Sometimes Satan incourages to ſin from the examples of good and holy men; thus, and thus they have ſinned, and been reſtored, therefore this may conſiſt with grace; and thou be ſaved nevertheleſs. The danger of this temptation is avoided, and the heart ſecured; by retorting the Argument theſe three ways:

1. Though good men may commit the ſame ſin materially, which I am tempted to, yet did ever any good men venture to ſin, upon ſuch a ground and incouragement as this?

2. Did God record theſe Examples for my imitation, or for my warning? Are they not ſet up as Sea-marks, that I might avoid the rocks upon which they ſplit? 1 Cor. 10. 6. Now theſe were our examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted.

3. Am I willing to feel what they felt for ſin? O I dare not follow them in the ways of ſin! quia me veſtigia terrent; Leſt God ſhould plunge me into the deeps of horror, into which he caſt them.

Thus learn to keep your hearts in the hour of temptation to ſin.

10 Seaſon. "The tenth ſpecial Seaſon to keep the heart with all diligence, is the time of ſpiritual darkneſs and doubting when it is with the Soul, as it was with Paul in his dangerous voyage, neither Sun, nor Moon, nor Star appears for many days: When by reaſon of the hidings of Gods face, the prevalency of corruption, and the inevidence of grace, the Soul is even ready to give up all its hopes and comforts for loſt; to draw ſad and deſperate concluſions upon it ſelf; to call its former comforts vain deluſions; its grace hypocriſie. When the ſerene and clear Heavens are overcaſt with dark clouds, yea filled with Thunders, and horrible Tempeſts, when the poor penſive Soul ſits down and weeps forth this ſad Lamentation, My hope is periſhed from the Lord! Now to keep the heart from ſinking in ſuch a day as this, to enable it to maintain its own ſincerity, is a matter of great difficulty. The tenth Caſe then will be this.

Caſe 10. How the people of God in dark and doubting Seaſons, may keep their hearts from entertaining ſuch ſad concluſions about their eſtates, as deſtroy their Peace, and unfit them for their Duty.

There are two general heads, to which the grounds of doubting our ſincerity may be reduced. (1) Gods carriage towards the Soul, either in the time of ſome extraordinary affliction, or of ſome long and ſad deſertion. Or, (2) The Soul's carriage towards God: And here it uſually argues againſt the truth of its own graces, either (1) From its relapſes into the ſame ſins, from which it hath formerly riſen, with ſhame and ſorrow. Or, (2) From the ſenſible declining of its affections from God. Or, (3) From the exceſs of the affections towards creature-comforts and enjoyments. Or, (4) From its enlargements in publick and often ſtraitnings in private Duties. Or, (5) From ſome horrid injections of Satan, with which the Soul is greatly perplexed. Or, Laſtly, from Gods ſilence, and ſeeming denyal of its long depending Suits and Prayers.

Theſe are the common grounds of thoſe ſad concluſions: Now in order to the eſtabliſhment and ſupport of the heart in this condition, it will be neceſſary,

1. That you be acquainted with ſome general Truths, which have a tendency to the ſettlement of a trembling and doubting Soul.

2. That you be rightly inſtructed about the forementiond Particulars, which are the grounds of your doubting.

The general truths requiſite for poor doubting ſouls to be acquainted with, are theſe :

1. That every working and appearance of hypocriſie doth not preſently prove the perſon in whom it is, to be an hypocrite. You muſt carefully diſtinguiſh between the preſence and predominancy of hypocriſie : There are remains of deceitfulneſs in the beſt hearts ; David and Peter had ſad experience of it, yet the ſtanding frame and general bent of the heart being upright, it did not denominate them hypocrites.

2. That we ought as well to hear what can be ſaid for us, as againſt us : It is the ſin of upright hearts ſometimes to uſe an over rigid, and mercileſs ſeverity againſt themſelves : They do not indifferently conſider the caſe of their own Souls : It is in this caſe, as Solomon ſpeaks in another, Prov. 12. 7. There is that maketh himſelf rich, and yet hath nothing ; and there is that maketh himſelf poor, and yet hath great riches. 'Tis the damning ſin of the ſelf-flattering hypocrite, to make his condition better than 'tis : And it is the ſin and folly of ſome upright ones, to make their condition worſe than indeed it is. Why ſhould you be ſuch enemies to your own peace? To read over the evidences of Gods love to your Souls, as a man doth a Book which he intends to confute? Why do you ſtudy to find evaſions, to turn off thoſe comforts which are due to you? 'Tis ſaid of Joſeph, that he was minded to put away his eſpouſed Mary, not knowing that that holy thing which was conceived in her, was by the holy Ghoſt : And this may be your caſe. A third truth is this,

3. That many a Saint hath charged and condemned himſelf for that, which God will never charge him with, nor condemn him for. Why haſt thou hardned our Hearts from thy Fear ( ſaith the Church ) Iſa. 63. 17. and yet the verſe before manifeſts, that their hearts were not ſo hardned : Godly Bradford wrote himſelf an hypocrite, a painted ſepulchre ; yet doubtleſs God acquitted him of that charge.

4. Every thing which is a ground of grief to the people of God, is not a ſufficient ground of queſtioning their ſincerity. There are many more things to trouble you, than there are to ſtumble you : If upon every ſlip and failing through infirmity, you ſhould queſtion all that ever was wrought upon you, your life muſt be made up of doubtings and fears : You can never attain a ſettled peace, nor live that life of praiſe and thankfulneſs, the Goſpel calls for.

5. The Soul is not at all times fit to paſs judgment upon its own condition : To be ſure in the dark day of deſertion, when the Soul is benighted ; and in the ſtormy day of temptation, when the Soul is a hurry ; 'tis utterly unfit to judge its eſtate : Examine your Hearts upon your Beds, and be ſtill, Pſal. 4. This is rather a Seaſon for watching and reſiſting, than for judging and determining.

6. That every breach of peace with God, is not a breach of Covenant with God. The wife hath many weakneſſes and failings, often grieves and diſpleaſes her Husband ; yet in the main is faithful, and truly loves him : Theſe failings may cauſe him to alter his carriage, but not to withdraw his Love, or deny his Relation. Return, O blackſliding Iſrael, for I am Marryed unto you.

7. Laſtly, Whatever our ſin, or trouble be, it ſhould rather drive us to God, than from God. Pardon my ſin for it is great, Pſal. 25. 11. Suppoſe it be true, that thou haſt ſo and ſo ſinned, that thou art thus long and ſadly deſerted : Yet 'tis a falſe Inference, that therefore thou ſhouldeſt be diſcouraged, as if there were no help for thee in thy God. When you have well digeſted theſe ſeven eſtabliſhing Truths, if ſtill the doubt remain, then conſider, what may be replyed to the particular grounds of thoſe Doubts. As,

1. You doubt, and are ready to conclude, the Lord hath no regard or love for your Souls, becauſe of ſome extraordinary affliction which is come upon you : But I would not have thy Soul ſo to conclude, till thou be able ſatisfactorily to Anſwer theſe Three Queſtions.

1 Queſt. If great troubles and afflictions be marks of Gods hatred, Why ſhould not impunity and conſtant proſperity be tokens of his love? For contrariorum contraria eſt ratio & conſequentia? of contrary things, there is a contrary reaſon and conſequence : But is this ſo indeed? or ſaith not the Scripture quite otherwiſe? Prov. 1. 32. The proſperity of fools deſtroy them. So Pſal. 73. 5.

2 Queſt. Dare I draw the ſame concluſion upon all others that have been as much, yea more afflicted than my ſelf? If this Argument conclude againſt thee, then ſo it doth againſt every one in thy condition ; yea, the greater the affliction of any Child of God hath been, the more ſtrongly the Argument ſtill concludes : And then woe to David, Job, Heman, Paul, and all that have been afflicted as they were.

3. Queſt. Had God extempted you only from thoſe Troubles, which all other his People feel, would not that have been a greater ground of doubting to you than this? Eſpecially ſince the Scripture ſaith, Heb. 12. 8. If ye be without Chaſtenings, whereof all are partakers, then are ye Baſtards, and not Sons.

Oh how is our Father put to it by froward Children! If he afflicts, then one crys he loves me not : If he exempt from Affliction, others queſtion his love upon that ground. Surely you have other work to do under the Rod, than this.

2. Or do you raſhly infer the Lord hath no love for you, becauſe he hides his Face from you ; that your condition is miſerable, becauſe dark and uncomfortable? Before you draw ſuch raſh Concluſions, ſee what Anſwer you can give to theſe Four following Queries.

1 Quer. If any Action of God towards his People will bear a favourable, as well as a harſh and ſevere conſtruction, Why ſhould not his People interpret it in the beſt ſenſe? And is not this ſuch? May he not have a deſign of Love, as well as of Hatred, in this Diſpenſation? May he not depart for a Seaſon, and not for ever ; yea, that he might not depart for ever? You are not the firſt that have miſtaken God's ends in Deſertion, Iſa. 49. 14. Sion ſaid, the Lord hath forſaken me, my God hath forgotten me: Was it ſo indeed? Nothing leſs, Ver. 15. Can a Mother forget, &c.

2 Quer. Do you find the marks of an abſulute, total and final Deſertion upon your own Spirits, that you are ſo apt to conclude yours to be ſuch? Do you find your heart inclined to forſake God? Have you loſt your conſcientious tenderneſs in point of ſin?

If ſo, ſad Characters appear upon you indeed; but if in this dark Hour you are as tender of Sin as ever‘ as much reſolved to cleave to God as ever; I cannot, I will not forſake God, let him do what he will with me; Oh no, I cannot. If your Hearts work thus, it can be but a partial, limited, and temporary Deſertion; by this he ſtill keeps his Intereſt in your Hearts, a ſure ſign he will return, and viſit you again.

3 Quer. Is Senſe and Feeling a competent Judge of God's Actions and Deſigns? Or may a Man ſafely rely upon its Teſtimony after ſo many Diſcoveries of the Infallibility of it? Is this a ſound Argument? If God had any Love for my Soul, if it were not quite gone, I ſhould feel it now as well as in former times; but I cannot feel it, therefore it's quite gone. Do not you know the Sun ſtill keeps on his Courſe in the Heavens, even in full and cloſe Weather, when you cannot ſee it? And may it not be ſo with the Love of God? Read Iſa. 50. 10. May not I as well conclude in Winter, when the Flowers have hid their beautiful Heads under Ground, they are quite dead and gone, becauſe I cannot find them in December, where I ſaw them in May?

4 Quer. Think you the Lord cares not to break his Childrens Hearts, and his own Promiſe too? Hath he no more Regard to either? If he return no more, theſe muſt be the conſequents, Iſa. 57. 16, 17. Heb. 13. 5.

Well then, from God's Carriage towards you, either in Affliction or Deſertion, no ſuch Diſcouraging, Heart-ſinking Concluſions can be inferr'd. Next let us ſee whether they may not be inferr'd from our Carriage towards God: And here the principal Grounds of Doubting are ſuch as theſe:

1. I have fallen again into the ſame Sin from which I have formerly riſen with Repentance and Reſolution, therefore my Sinning is cuſtomary Sinning, a Spot that is not the Spot of God's Children: Hence the upright Soul trembles; upon this 'tis ready to affirm, that all its former Humiliations for, and Oppoſitions unto Sin, were but Acts of Hypocriſie. But ſtay, poor trembling Heart:

1 Quer. If this be ſo, how comes it to paſs that Chriſt put ſuch a favourable Conſtruction upon the Diſciples ſleeping the third time, when he had as often reproved them for it? Matth. 26. 40, 41. And how is it that we find in Scripture ſo many Promiſes made not only to the ſirſt Sins, but alſo to the Backſlidings of God's People? Jer. 3. 22. Hoſ. 14. 4.

2 Quer. Is not your Repentance and Care renewed as often as your Guilt is renewed? Yea, the oftner you ſin, the more you are troubled; it is not ſo in Cuſtomary Sinning, the riſe whereof Bernard excellently diſcovers: 1. (ſaith he) when a Man accuſtomed to good, ſinneth grievouſly, it ſeems inſupportable, ea, he ſeems to deſcend alive into Hell. 2. In Proceſs of Time it ſeems not inſupportable, but eavy; and betwixt inſupportable and heavy, there s no ſmall Deſcent. 3 Next it becomes Light, his onſcience ſmites but faintly, and he feels not he Stripes of it. 4. Then there is not only a otal Inſenſibleneſs of it, but that which was itter and diſpleaſing, is now become ſweet and leaſing in ſome Degree. 5. Then 'tis turned in Cuſtom, and not only pleaſes, but daily pleaſes. Laſtly, Cuſtom is turned into Nature, he cannot be pulled away from it; but defends and pleads for it: This is Cuſtomary Sinning, this is the Way of the wicked; but the quite contrary is our Condition.

Lib. de Conſc. 1. 109.

3 Quer. Are you ſure from Scripture Grounds, that a good Man may not relapſe again and again into the ſame Sin? 'Tis true, as for groſs Sins, they do not uſe to relapſe into them. David committed Adultery no more: Paul perſecuted the Church no more: Peter denyed Chriſt no more: But I ſpeak of ordinary Infirmities: Job's Friends were good Men, yet (ſaith he) Chap 19. 3. Theſe ten times have ye reproached me. So then, no ſuch Concluſions follow from this firſt Ground of Doubting.

2 The ſecond Ground is, the Declining and Withering of our Affections to ſpiritual Things. O! (ſaith the upright Soul) if ever I had been planted a right Seed, I ſhould have been as a green Olive-Tree in the Houſe of my God; but my Branches wither, therefore my Root is naught. But ſtay,

1 Quer. May you not be miſtaken about the decay of Grace, and fading of your Affections? What if they be not ſo quick and raviſhing as at firſt; May not that be recompenſed in the Spirituality and Solidity of them now? Phil. 1. 9. I pray God your Love may abound more and more in all Judgment: It may be more ſolid, though not ſo ferverous: Or do you not miſtake, by looking forward to what you would be, rather than backward to what once you were? 'Tis a good Note of Ames: We diſcern the Growth of Grace, as the Growth of Plants, which we preceive rather Creviſſe quam Creſcere, to have grown, than to grow.

2 Quer. But grant it be ſo indeed as you affirm, muſt it needs follow, that the Root of the Matter is not in you? David's laſt Ways are diſtinguiſhed from his firſt, 2 Chr. 17. 3. and yet both firſt and laſt, a Holy Man. The Church of Epheſus is charged by Chriſt for leaving her Firſt Love, and yet a Golden Candelſtick, many precious Saints in that Church, Rev. 2. 2, 3, 4.

3. A Third Ground of theſe ſad Concluſions, is, The Exceſs of our Affections to ſome Creature Enjoyments. I fear, I love the Creature more than God; and if ſo, my Love is but Hypocritical: I ſometimes feel ſtronger, and more ſenſible Motions of my Heart, to Earthly Comforts, than I do to Heavenly Objects; Therefore my Soul is not upright in me. But ſtay Soul,

1 Quer. May not a Man love God, more ſolidly and ſtrongly, than the Creature, and yet his Affections to the Creatures be ſometimes moved more violently and ſenſibly than toward God? As rooted Malice argues a ſtronger Hatred, than a ſudden, though more violent Paſſion: So we muſt meaſure our Love, not by a violent Motion of it, now and then, but by the depth of the Root, and Conſtancy of its Actings; becauſe David was ſo paſſionately moved for Abſalom, Joab concludes, that if he had lived, and all the People dyed, it would have pleaſed him well, 2 Sam. 19. 7. But that was argued more like a Souldier than a Logician.

2 Quer. If you indeed love the Creature for it ſelf, if you make it your End, and Religion but a means, then the Concluſion is rightly drawn upon you.

But if you love the Creature in reference to God, and ſee nothing in it ſeparated from him, though ſometimes your Affections offend in the exceſs; This is conſiſtent with ſincere Love to God. To Love the Creature inordinately, (i. e.) to put it in God's room, and make it a Mans end; This is the Love of a Carnal Heart; To Love it Immoderately, that is, to let out more Affection to it than we ought, is ſometimes the ſin of the beſt Hearts.

3 Quer. Have not many Souls feared as you do, that when Chriſt and Creatures ſhould ſtand as Competitors in ſome eminent Tryal, they ſhould forſaek Chriſt rather than the Creature; and yet when brought to that Dilemma, have been able to caſt all the World at their Heels for Chriſt? Many of the Martyrs had ſuch fears, and thus they were ſatisfied: The Prevalency of Love is beſt ſeen at Parting; There may be more Love to Chriſt in thy Soul than thou art now aware of; And if God bring thee to ſuch a pinch, thou mayſt ſee it.

4. A Fourth Ground of theſe ſad Concluſions is from hence, That we find our Hearts ſometimes more ſtraitned in private, than in Publick Duties. Oh if my Soul were ſincere, its actings in Duty would be uniform. I fear I am but a Phariſee upon this Ground. 'Tis ſad indeed we ſhould at any time find our Hearts ſtraitned in Private; But

1 Query Do not all thine Enlargements in Duty whether Publick, or Private, depend upon the Spirit, who is the Lord of Influences, and according as he gives out, or holds back thoſe Influences, ſo art thou inlarged or ſtraitned? And what if ſometimes he pleaſe to give that in a publick, which he withholds in a private Duty, as long as thy Soul is ſatisfied in neither, without Communion with God, and the ſtraitneſs of thy Heart is indeed its Burden? Doth that argue thee to be an Hypocrite?

2 Quer. Doſt thou not make Conſcience of Private Duties, and ſet thy ſelf as before the Lord in them? Indeed, if thou live in the conſtant neglect or careleſs performance of them, if thou art curious about Publick, and careleſs about Private Duties, that would be a ſad ſign: But when you have Conſcientiouſly performed, and often met with God in them, it will not follow you are inſincere, becauſe that Communion is ſometimes interrupted. Beſides,

3 Quer. May there not be ſomething at ſometimes in a Publick, which is wanting in a Private Duty, to raiſe and advantage thine affections? God may ſometimes make uſe of the melting affections of them with whom thou heareſt or prayeſt, as petty Inſtruments to move thy affections; this advantage is wanting in private: Therefore from hence (the caſe ſo ſtanding) no ſuch inference can be drawn.

5. Another ground is from thoſe horrid injections of Satan, with which, the Soul is greatly perplexed; by theſe I may ſee, what an Heart I have: Can grace be where theſe are?

Yes, Grace may be where ſuch thoughts are, though not where they are lodg'd and conſented to; Doſt thou cry out under the Burthen? Enter thy proteſt in Heaven againſt them; Strive to keep up holy and Reverend Thoughts of God? then 'tis a Rape, not a Voluntary Proſtitution.

6. The laſt Ground of theſe ſad Concluſions, is the Lords long ſilence, and ſeeming denyal of our long depending ſuits and Prayers. O if God had any regard to my Soul, he would have heard my cries before now! But I have no anſwer from him, therefore no intereſt in him. But ſtay doubting Soul.

1 Quer. Have not many Saints ſtumbled upon this ſtone before thee? Pſal. 31:22. I ſaid in my haſte, I am cut off from before thine Eyes: Nevertheleſs thou heardeſt the Voice of my Supplication. So the Church, Lam. 3. 44. "Thou covereſt thy ſelf "with a Cloud, that our Prayers ſhould not paſs "through. Jonah 2. 4. Then ſaid I, I am caſt out of thy ſight. And may not you be miſtaken in this matter as well as they?

2 Quer. Though Gods abhoring, and final rejecting prayer, be an Argument of his abhorring the perſon that prays; Yet dare we conclude ſo from a meer ſuſpenſion of the anſwer? God may bear long with his own Elect, that cry unto him Day and Night, Luke 18. 7.

3 Quer. Can you deny but that there are ſome ſigns appearing in your Souls, even whilſt God ſuſpends his anſwer, that argue your Prayers are not rejected by him? as (1.) Though no anſwer come, yet you are ſtill reſolved to wait: You dare not ſay as that profane wretch did, 2 Kings 6. 33. This evil is of the Lord, why ſhould I wait for him any longer? (2.) Yo can clear and juſtify God ſtill, and lay the reaſon and cauſe of his ſilence upon your ſelves. So did David, Pſal. 22. 2, 3. O my God, I cry in the day time, and thou heareſt not; and in the Night, and am not ſilent, but thou art holy, &c. (3.) The ſuſpenſion of Gods anſwer makes you inquiſitive into your own Hearts, what evils are there that obſtruct your Prayers? So the Church, Lam. 3. 8. He ſhutteth out my Prayer: And how doth he this Work? You may ſee, v. 40. Let us ſearch and try our ways: Well then, neither from hence may you conclude that God hath no love for your Souls.

And thus I have ſhewn you, how to keep your Hearts in a dark and doubting ſeaſon from thoſe deſperate concluſions of unbelief. God forbid any falſe heart ſhould incourage it ſelf from theſe things, 'tis our unhappineſs, that when we give Saints and ſinners their proper portions, that each of them are ſo prone to take up the others part.

Caution.

11 Seaſon. "The eleventh ſpecial ſeaſon calling "for this Diligence to keep our Hearts, is, "when ſufferings for Religion come to an height, "then look to your Hearts. Mat. 24. 8, 9, 10 "All theſe are the begining of ſorrows, and they "ſhall deliver you up to be afflicted, and ſhall ki "you; and ye ſhall be hated of all Nations for m "names ſake: and THEN ſhall many be Offend- "ded. When ſufferings for Religion grow hot "then Bleſſed is he that is not offended in Chriſt "troubles are then at an height. (1.) When "mans neareſt Friends and Relations forſake an "leave him, Micha. 7. 5, 6. 2 Tim. 4. 16. Whe "a Man is ingaged alone. (2.) When it come "to reſiſting to Blood, Heb. 12. 4. (3.) Whe "temptations are preſented to us in our ſuffering "Heb. 11. 37. (4.) When eminent Perſons f "profeſſion turn aſide, and deſert the cauſe "Chriſt, 2 Tim. 2. 19. (5.) When God hid "his face in a ſuffering hour, Jer. 17. 17. (6. "When Satan falls upon us with ſtrong Temp "tions, to Queſtion the grounds of our Suffering "or the Souls Intereſt in Chriſt: Now "hard to Keeep the Heart from Turni

"ba

"back, and the ſteps from declining God's ways.
"The Eleventh Queſtion then ſhall be this:

11 Caſe. How the Heart may be Kept from relapſing under the greateſt ſufferings for Religion? If the bitterneſs of ſufferings at any time cauſe thy Soul to diſtaſte the way of God, and take up thoughts of forſaking it, ſtay thine heart under that Temptation, by propounding theſe Eight Queſtions ſolemnly to it.

1 Queſt. What reproach and diſhonour ſhall I pour upon Chriſt and Religion, by deſerting him at ſuch a time as this? This will proclaim to all the World, that how much ſoever I have boaſted of the Promiſes, yet when it comes to the Tryal, I dare hazard nothing upon the credit of them: And how will this open the Mouths of Chriſt's Enemies to Blaſpheme? O better had I never been Born, than that Worthy Name ſhould be Blaſphemed through me! Shall I furniſh the Triumphs of the Uncircumciſed? Shall I make Mirth in Hell? O if I did but value the Name of Chriſt as much as many a Wicked Man values his own Name, I would never endure to ſee it expoſed in ſuch Contempt! Will proud duſt and aſhes venture Death, yea Hell, rather than a blot upon their Name? And ſhall I venture nothing to ſalve the Honour and Reputation of Chriſt?

2 Queſt. Dare I Violate my Conſcience to ſave my fleſh? Who ſhall comfort me when Conſcieucc wounds me? What comfort is there in Life, Liberty, or Friends, when Peace is taken away from the Inner Man? When Conſtantius threatned to cut off Samoſatenus his Right hand, if he would not ſubſcribe ſomewhat that was againſt his Conſcience, he held up both his hands to the Meſſenger that was ſent, ſaying, He ſhall cut off both rather than I will do it: Farewell all Peace, joy and comfort, from that day forward; Had Zimri peace that ſlew his Maſter? ſaid Jezebel: So ſay I here, Had Judas peace? Had Spira peace? And ſhall you have peace, if you tread in their ſteps? O conſider what you do!

3 Queſt. Is not the publick intereſt of Chriſt and Religion, infinitely more than any private intereſt of my own? 'Tis a famous paſſage that of Terentius, Captain to Adrian the Emperour, he preſented a Petition to Adrian, That the Chriſtians might have a Temple by themſelves to Worſhip God apart from the Arians: The Emperour tore his Petition and threw it away, bidding him to ask ſomewhat for himſelf, and it ſhould be granted: But he Modeſtly gathered up the pieces of his Petition again, and told him, If he could not be heard in God's cauſe, he would never ask any thing for himſelf. Yea, even Tully, though an Heathen, could ſay, Ne immortalitatem quidem contra rem publicam. He would not except even of Immortality it ſelf againſt the Common-Wealth. O if we had more Publick, we ſhould not have ſuch Cowardly Spirits!

4 Queſt. Did Jeſus Chriſt ſerve me ſo, when for my ſake he expoſed himſelf to far greater ſufferings than can be, before me? His ſufferings were great indeed, he ſuffered from all Hands, in all his Offices, in every Member, not only in his Body, but in his Soul; yea, the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his ſufferings: Witneſs the bloody ſweat in the Garden, Witneſs that Heart-Melting and Heaven-Rending out-cry upon the Croſs, My God, My God, why haſt thou forſaken me? and yet he flinched not, he endured the Croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame. Alas! what are my ſufferings compar'd with Chriſts? he hath drunk up all that Vinegar and Gall that would make my ſufferings bitter. When one of the Martyrs was asked, Why he was ſo merry at his Death? Oh ſaid he! it is becauſe the Soul of Chriſt was ſo heavy at his Death. Did Chriſt bear ſuch a burden for me, with unbroken patience, and conſtancy? And ſhall I ſhrink back from momentary and light Afflictions for him?

5 Queſt. Is not eternal Life worth the ſuffering of a moments pain? If I ſuffer with him, I ſhall reign with him. O how will men venture Life and Limb for a fading Crown, ſwim through Seas of Blood to a Throne? And will I venture nothing? Suffer nothing for the Crown of Glory that fadeth not away? My dog will follow my horſes heels from morning to night, take many a weary ſtep through mire and dirt, rather than leave me, though at night all he gets by it is but Bones and blows. If my Soul had any true greatneſs, any ſparks of generoſity in it, how would it deſpiſe the ſufferings of the way, for the glory of the end! How would it break down all difficulties before it, whilſt by an eye of faith it ſees the forerunner who is already entered, ſtanding as it were upon the walls of Heaven, with the Crown in his hand, ſaying, He that overcometh ſhall inherit all thins: Come on then, my Soul, come on, there is eternal life laid up for them that by patient continuance in well doing, ſeek for glory, honour and immortality, Rom. 2. 7.

6 Queſt. Can I ſo eaſily caſt off the ſociety and company of the Saints, and give the right hand of fellowſhip to the Wicked? How can I part with ſuch lovely companions as theſe have been? How often have I been benefited by their Councels? Ezra. 10. 3. How often refreſhed, warmed and quickned by their Company? Eccleſ. 4. 10, 11. How often have I faſted and prayed with them? What ſweet counſel have I taken with them, and gone to the Houſe of God in company? And ſhall I now ſhake hands with them, and ſay, Farewel, all ye Saints, for ever; I ſhall never be among you more; come Drunkards, Swearers, Blaſphemers, Perſecutors, you ſhall be my everlaſting companions? O rather let my Body and Soul be rent aſunder, than that ever I ſhould ſay thus to the Excellent of the Earth, in whom is all my delight.

7 Queſt. Have I ſeriouſly conſidered the terrible Scripture-Comminations againſt backſliders? O my Heart! Dareſt thou turn thy back upon the very points of ſuch threatnings as theſe? Jer. 17. 5, 6. Thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the Man that truſteth in man, and maketh fleſh his Arm; And whoſe heart departeth from the Lord, for he ſhall be like the Heath in the Deſart, and ſhall not ſee when good cometh; (i. e.) the Curſe of God ſhall wither him Root and Branch. And Heb. 14. 26, 27. If we ſin wilfully after we have received the Knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſins, but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment, and fiery indignation which ſhall devour the adverſaries. And again ver. 38. If any Man draw back, my Soul ſhall have no pleaſure in him: As if he ſhould ſay, Take him World, take him Devil, for your own, I have no delight in him. O who dare draw back, when God hath hedged up the way with ſuch terrible threats as theſe!

Queſt. 8. Can I look Chriſt in the Face at the Day of Judgment, if I deſert him now?

He that is aſhamed of me and of my Words, in this adulterous and ſinful Generation, of him ſhall the Son of Men be aſhamed, when he cometh in the Glory of his Father, with the holy Angels, Mark 8. 38. Yet a little while, and you ſhall ſee the Sign of the Son of Man coming in the Clouds of Heaven with Power and great Glory; the laſt Trump ſhall ſound, the Dead, both Small and Great, even all that ſleep in the Duſt, ſhall awake, and come before that great white Throne, on which Chriſt ſhall ſit in that Day. And now do but imagine thou ſaweſt the trembling Knees, and quivering Lips of guilty Sinners; imagine thou heardeſt the dreadful Sentence of the Judge upon them, Go ye curſed, &c. And then a Cry, the weeping, Wailing, and wringing of Hands, that there ſhall be: Wouldſt thou deſert Chriſt now to protract a poor, miſerable Life on Earth? If the Word of God be true, if the Sayings of Chriſt be ſealed and faithful, this ſhall be the Portion of the Apoſtate. 'Tis an eaſie Thing to ſtop the Mouth of Conſcience now, but will it be eaſie to ſtop the Mouth of the Judge then? Thus keep thy Heart, that it depart not from the living God.

Seaſ. 12. The Twelfth Seaſon of looking diligently to our Hearts, and keeping them with greateſt Care, is the Time of Sickneſs: “When a Child of God draws nigh to Eternity, when there are but a few Sands more in the Upper-part of his Glaſs to run down: Now Satan buſily beſtirs himſelf; of him it may be ſaid, as of the natural Serpent, Nunquam niſi moriens producitur in longum; he is never ſeen at his full Length till dying: And now his great Deſign, ſince he cannot win the Soul from God, is to diſcourage, and make it unwilling to go to God, though the gracious Soul with Jacob, ſhould then rouze up it ſelf upon a dying Bed, and rejoyce that the Marriage Day of the Lamb is now almoſt come; though it ſhould then ſay with dying Auſtin, Vivere renuo ut Chriſto vivam; I deſpiſe Life to be with Chriſt. Or as dying Milius, when one asked him, Whether he were willing to dye? O, ſaid he, illius eſt nolle mori qui nolit ire ad Chriſtum; let him be unwilling to dye, who is unwilling to go to Chriſt. But O! what ſhrinking from Death? What Lothneſs to depart, may ſometimes (indeed too frequently) be obſerved in the People of God? How loth are ſome of them to take death by the cold Hand? If ſuch a Liberty were indulged to us, not to be diſſolved, till we diſſolve our ſelves; when ſhould we ſay with St. Paul, I deſire to be diſſolved? Well then, the laſt Caſe ſhall be this.

Caſe 12. How the People of God in Times of Sickneſs may get their Hearts looſe from all Earthly Engagements, and perſwade them into a Willingneſs to dye.

And there are ſeven Arguments, which I ſhall urge upon the People of God at ſuch a Time as this, to make them cheerfully entertain the Meſſengers of Death, and dye, as well as live, like Saints: And the firſt is this:

1 Argu. Firſt the Harmleſneſs of Death to the People of God. Though it keeps its dart, it hath loſt its Sting: A Saint (to allude to that, Iſa. 11. 8.) May play upon the hole of this Aſpe, and put his Hand into the Cockatrices den. Death is the Cockatrice, or Aſpe; the Grave is his Hole or Den; a Saint need not fear to put his Hand boldly into it: It hath left and loſt its Sting in the Sides of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 15. 55. O Death! Where is thy Sting? Why art thou affraid, O Saint, that this Sickneſs may be thy Death, as long as thou knoweſt, that the Death of Chriſt is the Death of Death? Indeed, if thou didſt dye in thy Sins, as, Job 8. 21. if Death, as a King, did reign over thee, Rom. 5. 14. if it could feed upon thee, as the Lyon doth upon the Prey he hath taken, as Pſal. 49. 14. If Hell followed the Pale Horſe, as it is, Rev. 6. 8. Then thou mighteſt well ſtartle and ſhrink back from it, but when God hath put away thy Sins from thee, as far as the Eaſt is from the Weſt, Pſal. 103. 12. As long as there is no other Evil left in Death, for thee to encounter with, but Bodily Pain; as long as the Scriptures repreſent it to thee under ſuch Harmleſs and eaſie Notions, as the putting off thy Cloaths, 2 Cor. 5. 2. And lying down to ſleep upon thy Bed, Iſa. 57. 2. Why ſhouldeſt thou be afraid? There is as much Difference betwixt Death to the People of God, and others, as betwixt the Unicorns Horn, when it is upon the Head of that fierce Beaſt, and when it is in the Apothecaries Shops, where it is made Salubrious and Medicinal.

2 Arg. Thy Heart may be kept from ſhrinking back at ſuch a Time as this, by Conſidering the Neceſſity of Death, in Order to the full Fruition of God.

Whether thou art willing to dye or no, I aſſure thee there is no other Way to obtain the full Satisfaction of thy Soul, and compleat its Happineſs till the Hand of Death do thee the Kind office to draw aſide the Curtain or Fleſh, thy Soul cannot ſee God: This Animal Life ſtands betwixt him and thee, 2 Cor. 5. 6. Whilſt we are at home in the Body, we are abſent from the Lord. Thy Body muſt be refined and caſt into a new Mould, elſe that new Wine of Heavenly Glory would break it. Paul in his higheſt Rapture, 2 Cor. 12. 4. when he heard Things unutterable, was then but as a Stander by, a Looker on; not admitted into the Company, as one of them; but as the Angels are in our Aſſemblies, ſo was Paul in that glorious Aſſembly above, and no otherwiſe; and yet even for this he muſt as it were be taken out of the Body, uncloathed for a little Time, to have a Glympſe of that Glory, and then put on his Cloaths again. O then! Who would not be willing to dye for a full Sight and Enjoyment of God? Methinks thy Soul ſhould look and ſigh, like a Priſoner, through the Grates of this Mortality; O that I had Wings like a Dove, then would I fly away and be at reſt: Moſt Men need Patience to dye, but a Saint that underſtands, what Death admits him to, ſhould rather need Patience to Live; methinks he ſhould often look out, and liſten on a Death-bed for his Lords Coming; and when he receives the News of his approaching Change, ſhould ſay, The Voice of my Beloved! Behold, he cometh leaping over the Mountains, skipping over the Hills, Cant. 2. 8.

Arg. 3. Another Argument perſwading to this Willingneſs, is the immediate Succeſſion of a more excellent and glorious Life.

'Tis but wink, and you ſhall ſee God: Your Happineſs ſhall not be deferred till the Reſurrection; but as ſoon as the Body is dead, the gracious Soul is ſwallowed up in Life, Rom. 8. 10, 11.

11. When once you have looſed from this ſhore in a few Moments, your Souls will be wafted over upon the Wings of Angels to the other ſhore of a Glorious Eternity. Phil. 1. 23. I deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt. Did the Soul and Body dye together, as Berilius taught; or did they ſleep till the Reſurrection, as others have groundleſly fancyed; it had been a Madneſs for Paul to deſire a Diſſolution for the injoyment of Chriſt: For if this were ſo, he enjoyed more of Chriſt whilſt his Soul dwelt in its fleſhly Tabernacle, then he ſhould out of it.

There are but two ways of the Souls living known in Scripture, viz. The life of Faith, and the Life of Viſion, 1 Cor. 5. 5. Thoſe two divide all Time, both preſent and future, betwixt them, 1 Cor. 13. 12. If when Faith fails, Sight ſhould not immediately ſucceed, what ſhould become of the unbodyed Soul? But bleſſed be God this great Heart-eſtabliſhing Truth is evidently revealed in Scripture, Luk. 23. 43. You have Chriſt's Promiſe, John 14. 3. I will come and receive you to my ſelf. O what a Change will a few Moments make upon your condition? Rouze up, dying Saint, when thy Soul is come out a little farther; when it ſhall ſtand like Abraham in its Tent Door, the Angels of God ſhall ſoon be with it: The Souls of the Elect are, as it were, put out to the Anges to Nurſe, and When they Dye, theſe Angels carry them home again to their Fathers Houſe: If an Angel were cauſed to fly ſwiftly to bring a Saint the Anſwer of his Prayer, Dan. 9. 22. How much more will the Angels come poſt from Heaven to Receive and Transfer the Praying Soul it ſelf?

4 Argu. Farther, It may much conduce to thy willingneſs to dye, to conſider, That by Death, God often-times hides his People out of the way of all Temptations and Troubles upon Earth, Rev. 14. 13. Write, From henceforth, Bleſſed are the Dead that dye in the Lord. 'Tis God's uſual way, when ſome extraordinary Calamities are coming upon the World, to ſet his People out of harms way before hand, Iſa. 57. 1. Merciful men are taken away from the evil to come. So Mich. 7. 1, 2. When ſuch an evil time comes as is there deſcribed, That they all lye in wait for Blood, and every man hunts his Brother in a Net: Before that, God by an Act of favour houſes his People before hand; Doſt thou know what evil may be in the Earth, which thou art ſo loth to leave? Thy God removes thee for thy great advantage; thou art disbanded by death, and called off the field; other poor Saints muſt ſtand to it, and endure a great fight of afflictions.

'Tis obſerved that Methuſala dyed the very year before the flood; Auguſtin, a little before the ſacking of Hippo, Parens juſt before the taking of Heydelburgh: Luther obſerves that all the Apoſtles dyed before the deſtructien of Jeruſalem, and Luther himſelf before the Wars brake out in Germany: It may be the Lord ſees thy tender heart cannot endure to ſee the miſery, or bear the Temptations that are coming, and therefore will now gather thee to thy Grave in peace; and yet wilt thou cry, O ſpare me a little longer?

5 Arg. If yet thy Heart hang Back, conſider the great advantage you will have by Death, above all that ever you enjoyed on earth; and that (1) As to your Communion with God: (2) As to your Communion with Saints.

1. For your Communion with God: The time of perfecting that, is now come: Thy Soul ſhall ſhortly ſtand before the Face of God, and have the immediate emanations and beamings forth of his Glory upon it; here thy Soul is remote from God, the beams of his Glory ſtrike it but obliquely and feebly, but ſhortly it will be under the Line, and there the Sun ſhall ſtand ſtill, as it did in Gibeon; there ſhall be no cloudings, nor declinings of it: O how ſhould this wrap thy Soul with deſires of being uncloathed!

2. As for the enjoyment of Saints, here indeed we have Fellowſhip with them of the Lower Form; but that Fellowſhip is ſo diſſweetned by remaining Corruptions, that there is no ſatisfaction in it: As it is the greateſt plague that can befall an Hypocrite to live in a pure Church, ſo 'tis the greateſt vexation to the Spirit of a Saint, to live in a corrupt and diſorder'd Church; but when Death hath admitted you into that Glorious Aſſemby of the Spirits of Juſt Men made perfect, you ſhall have the deſire of your hearts: Here you cannot fully cloſe on with another; yea, you cannot fully cloſe with your own Souls: O what Diſcords, Jarrings, Cenſurings are here? What perfect bleſſed harmony there? In Heaven each Saint loves another as himſelf, they are altogether lovely. O my Soul, haſte thee away from the Lyons Dens, from the Mountains of Bether, from divided Saints, to thoſe Mountains of Myrhe, and Hills of Franckincenſe; Thou art now going unto thine own People, as the Apoſtles Phraſe imports, 2 Cor. 5. 8.

6 Arg. If this will not do, Conſider what heavy burdens Death will eaſe thy ſhoulders of.

In this Tabernacle we groan, being burden'd, (1) With Bodily Diſtempers; how true do we find that of Theophraſtus, The Soul pays a dear Rent for the Tenement it now lives in? But Glorified Bodies are clogged with no indiſpoſitions; Death is the beſt Phyſitian, it will cure thee of all Diſeaſes at once. (2) With the indwelling of Sin; this makes us groan from the very Bowels, Romans 7. 24. But he that is dead, is free from ſin, Rom. 6. 7. Hath Juſtification deſtroyed its Damning Power, and Sanctification its Reigning Power? So Glorification deſtroys its very Being and Exiſtence. (3) We groan under Temptations here, but as ſoon as we are out of the Body, we are out of the Reach of Temptation: When once thou art [illegible] got into Heaven, thou mayſt ſay, Now Satan, I am there where thou canſt not come; for as the Damned in Hell are malo obformati, ſo fixed in ſin and miſery, that their condition cannot be altered; ſo Glorified Saints are bono confirmati; ſo fixed in Holineſs and Glory, that they cannot be ſhaken. (4) Here we groan under various Troubles and Afflictions, but then the days of our mourning are ended. God ſhall wipe away all tears from our eyes: O then let us haſte away, that we may be at reſt.

7 Arg. If ſtill thou linger like Lot in Sodom, then laſtly, Examine all the Pleas and Pretences for a longer time on Earth. Why art thou unwiling to Dye?

1 Object. Oh I have many Relations in the World, I know not what will become of them when I am gone.

Sol. 1. If thou art troubled about their Bodies, and outward Condition, Why ſhould not that Word ſatisfie thee, Jer. 49. 11. Leave thy Fatherleſs Children to me, I will keep them alive, and let thy Widows truſt in me. Luther in his laſt Will and Teſtament hath this Expreſſion, “Lord, thou haſt given me Wife and Children, I have nothing to leave them, but I commit them unto thee. O Father of the Fatherleſs, and Judge of Widows, Nutri, Serva, Doce; Nouriſh, Keep, and Teach them. Or, art thou troubled for their Souls? Thou canſt not convert them, if thou ſhouldſt live, and God can make thy Prayers and Counſels to live, and take Place upon them when thou art dead.

2 Object. I would fain live, to do God more Service in the World.

Sol. Well, but if he have no more Service for thee to do here, why ſhouldſt thou not ſay with David: If he have no delight to uſe me any farther, here am I, let him do what ſeemeth him good. In this World thou haſt no more do, but he is calling thee to an higher Service and Imployment in Heaven; and what thou wouldſt do for him here, he can do that by other Hands.

3 Object. I am not yet fully ready, I am not as a Bride compleatly adorned for the Bridegroom.

Sol. 1. Thy Juſtification is compleat already, though thy Sanctification be not ſo; and the Way to make it ſo, is to dye; for till then, it will have its Defects and Wants.

4 Object. O but I want Aſſurance, if I had that, I could dye preſently!

Sol. 1. Yea, there it ſticks indeed; but then conſider, That an Hearty Willingneſs to leave all the World to be freed from Sin, and be with God, is the next Way to that deſired Aſſurance; no Carnal Perſon was ever willing to dye upon this Ground.

And thus I have finiſh'd thoſe Caſes which ſo nearly concern the People of God, in the ſeveral Conditions of their Life, and taught them how to keep their Hearts in all. I ſhall next apply the whole.

I. Uſe of Information.

YOU have heared, that the Keeping of the Heart is the great Work of a Chriſtian, in which the very Soul and Life of Religion conſiſts, and without which, all other Duties are of no value with God; hence then I ſhall infer, to the Conſternation of Hypocrites, and Formal Profeſſors,

1. That the Pains and Labours which many Perſons have taken in Religion, is but loſt Labour, and Pains to no purpoſe, ſuch as will never turn to account.

Many great Services have been performed, many Glorious Works are wrought by Men, which yet are utterly rejected by God, and ſhall never ſtand upon Record in Order to an Eternal Acceptation, becauſe they took no heed to keep their Hearts with God in thoſe Duties: This is that Fatal Rock, upon which thouſands of vain Profeſſors ſplit themſelves eternally; they are curious about the Externals of Religion, but regardleſs of their Hearts. O how many Hours have ſome Profeſſors ſpent in Hearing, Praying, Reading, Confering? And yet, as to the main End of Religion, as good they had ſat ſtill, and done nothing: For all this ſignifies nothing, the great Work, I mean Heart-work, being all the while neglected; tell me, thou vain Profeſſor, when didſt thou ſhed a Tear for the Deadneſs, Hardneſs, Unbelief, or Earthlineſs of thy Heart? Thinkſt thou, ſuch an eaſie Religion can ſave thee? If ſo, we may invert Chriſt's Words, and ſay, Wide is the Gate, and broad is the Way, that leadeth to Life, and many there be that go in thereat: Hear me, thou ſelf-deluding Hypocrite, thou that haſt put off God with heartleſs Duties, thou that haſt acted in Religion as if thou hadſt been Bleſſing an Idol, that could not ſearch and diſcover thy Heart: Thou that haſt offered to God but the Skin of the Sacrifice, not the Marrow, Fat, and Inward of it; how wilt thou abide the coming of the Lord? How wilt thou hold up thy Head before him, when he ſhall ſay, O thou diſſembling falſe-hearted Man? How couldſt thou profeſs Religion? With what Face couldſt thou ſo often tell me, thou lovedſt me, when thou kneweſt all the while in thine own Conſcience, that thine Heart was not with me? O tremble to think, what a fearful Judgment it is to be given over to a heedleſs and careleſs Heart; and then to have Religious Duties, inſtead of a Rattle, to quiet and ſtill the Conſcience!

2. Hence I alſo infer for the Humiliation even of upright Hearts, That unleſs the People of God ſpend more Time and Pains about their Hearts, than generally and ordinarily they do, they are never like to do God much Service, or be Owners of much Comfort in this World.

I may ſay of that Chriſtian, that is remiſs and careleſs in keeping his Heart, as Jacob ſaid of Reuben, Thou ſhalt not excell. It grieves me to ſee how many Chriſtians there are, that go up and down dejected and complaining, that live at a poor low rate; both of Service and Comfort, and how can they expect it ſhould be otherwiſe as long as they live at ſuch a careleſs Rate? O how little of their Time is ſpent in the Cloſet, in ſearching, humbling, and quickning their Hearts?

You ſay, your Hearts are dead; and do you wonder they are ſo, as long as you keep them not with the Fountain of Life? If your Bodies had been dieted as your Souls have been, they would have been dead too; never expect better Hearts, till you take more Pains with them; qui fugit molam, fugit farinam, he that will not have the Sweat, muſt not expect the Sweet of Religion.

O Chriſtians! I fear, your Zeal and Strength hath run in the wrong Channel: I fear moſt of us may take up the Churches Complaint, Cant. 1. 6. They have made me the Keeper of the Vineyards, but mine own Vineyard have I not kept. Two Things have eaten up the Time and Strength of the Profeſſors of this Generation, and ſadly diverted them from Heart-work. (1) Fruitleſs Controverſies ſtarted by Satan, I doubt not to this very purpoſe, to take us off from practical Godlineſs, to make us puzzle our Heads, when we ſhould be ſearching our Hearts.

O how little have we minded that of the Apoſtle, Heb. 13. 9. 'Tis a good thing, that the Heart be eſtabliſhed with Grace, and not with Meats; (i. e.) with Diſputes and Controverſies about Meats, which have not profited them that have been occupyed therein.

O how much better is it to ſee Men live exactly, than to hear them diſpute ſubtilly! Theſe unfruitful Queſtions, How have they rened the Churches, Waſted Time and Spirits, and called Chriſtians off from their main Buſineſs, from looking to their own Vineyard? What think ye Sirs? Had it not been better if the Queſtions ventilated among the People of God of late Days, had been ſuch as theſe? How ſhall a Man diſcern the ſpecial, from the common Operations of the Spirit? How may a Soul diſcern its firſt Declinings from God? How may a Back-ſliding Chriſtian recover his firſt Love? How may the Heart be preſerved from unſeaſonable Thoughts in Duty? How may a boſom Sin be diſcover'd and mortify'd, &c. Would not this have tended more to the Credit of Religion, and Comfort of your Souls? O 'tis time to repent and be aſhamed of this Folly! When I read, what Suarez, a Papiſt, ſaid, who wrote many Tomes of Diſputations, that he prized the Time he ſet apart for the Searching and Examining of his Heart, in Reference to God, above all the Time, that ever he ſpent in other Studies: I am aſhamed to find the Profeſſors of this Age yet inſenſible of their Folly; Shall the Conſcience of a Suarez feel a relenting Pang for Strength and Time ſo ill employed? And ſhall not yours? This is it your Miniſters long ſince warned you of; your ſpiritual Nurſes were afraid of the Rickets, when they ſaw your Heads only to grow, and yonr Hearts to wither. O when will God beat our Swords into Plow-ſhares! I mean, our Diſputes and Contentions, into Practical Godlineſs. (2) Another Cauſe of neglecting our Hearts, hath been Earthly Incumbrances; the Heads and Hearts of many have been filled with ſuch a crowd and noiſe of Wordly Buſineſs, that they have ſadly and ſenſibly declined and withered in their Zeal, Love and Delight in God, in their heavenly, ſerious, and profitable Way of Converſing with Man.

O how hath this Wilderneſs intangled us! Our diſcourſes and Conferences; nay, our very Prayers and Duties have a Tang of it: We have had ſo much Work without Doors, that we have been able to do but little within. It was the ſad Complaint of an Holy One, ‘O (ſaith he) 'tis ſad to think, how many precious Opportunities I have loſt, how many ſweet Motions and Admonitions of the Spirit I have poſted over unfruitfully, and made the Lord to ſpeak in vain; in the ſecret Illapſes of his Spirit the Lord hath called upon me, but my wordly Thoughts did ſtill lodge within me, and there was no Place in my Heart for ſuch Calls of God. Surely there is a Way of enjoying God, even in our wordly Employments; God would never have put us upon them to our Loſs: Enoch walked with God, and begat Sons and Daughters, Gen. 5. 19. He walked with God, but did not retire and ſeparate himſelf from the Things of this Life: And the Angels, that are employed by Chriſt in the Things of this World, (for the Spirit of the living Creatures, as in the Wheels) they are finite Creatures, and cannot be in a twofold Ubi at one Time, yet they loſe nothing of the Beatifical Viſion, all the Time of their Adminiſtration; for Mat. 18. 10. Their Angels (even whilſt they are employed for them) behold the Face of their Father, which is in Heaven. We need not loſe our Viſions by our Employments, if the Fault were not our own: Alas! that ever Chriſtians, who ſtand at the Door of Eternity, and have more Work upon their Hands, than this poor Moment of interpoſing Time is ſufficient for, ſhould yet be filling both our Heads and Hearts with Trifles.

Mr. Strong.

3. Hence alſo I infer for the Awakening of all, That if the keeping of the Heart be the great Work of a Chriſtian, then there are but few real Chriſtians in the World.

Indeed, if every one that hath learned the Dialect of Chriſtianity, and can talk like a Saint, if every one that hath Gifts and Parts, and by the common aſſiſting Preſence of the Spirit, can preach, pray, or diſcourſe like a Chriſtian; in a Word, if ſuch as aſſociate themſelves with the People of God, and delight in Ordinances, might paſs for Chriſtians, the Number then is great.

But alas! to what a ſmall Number will they ſhrink, if you judge them by this Rule! How few are there, that make Conſcience of keeping their Hearts, watching their Thoughts, judging their Ends, &c. O there be but few Cloſet Men among Profeſſors! 'Tis far eaſier for Men, to be reconciled to any Duties in Religion, than to theſe: The profane Part of the World will not ſo much as touch with the out-ſide of Religious Duties, much leſs to this; and for the Hypocrite, though he be polite and curious about thoſe Externals, yet you can never perſwade him to this inward Work, this difficult Work: This Work, to which there is no Inducement by human Applauſe, this Work, that would quickly diſcover, what the Hypocrite ſeems not to know, ſo that by a general Conſent, this Heart-work is left to the Hands of a few ſecret ones, and I tremble to think in how few Hands it is.

II. Uſe of Exhortation.

IF the keeping of the Heart be ſo important a Buſineſs, if ſuch choice Advantages accrew to you thereby; if ſo many dear and precious Intereſts be wrapt up in it, then let me call upon the People of God every where to fall cloſe to this Work.

O ſtudy your Hearts, watch your Hearts, keep your Hearts: Away with fruitleſs Controverſies and all idle Queſtions, away with empty Names and vain Shews, away with unprofitable Diſcourſe and bold Cenſures of others; turn in upon your ſelves, get into your Cloſets, and now reſolve to dwell there. You have been Stangers to this Work too long, you have kept others Vineyards too long, you have trifled about the Borders of Religion too long, this World hath detained you from your great Work too long; will you now reſolve to look better to your Hearts? Will you haſte and come out of the Crowds of Buſineſs, and Clamours of the World? And retire your ſelves more than you have done? O that this Day you would reſolve upon it!

Reader, methinks I ſhould prevail with thee; all that I beg for is but this, That thou wouldſt ſtep aſide a little oftner to talk with God, and thine own Heart; that thou wouldſt not ſuffer every Trifle to divert thee, that thou wouldeſt keep a more true and faithful Account of thy Thoughts and Affections. That thou wouldeſt but ſeriouſly demand, of thine own Heart, at leaſt every Evening, O my Heart, where haſt thou been to day? Whither haſt thou made a Road to day? If all that hath been ſaid by Way of Inducement be not enough, I have yet more Motives to offer you: And the firſt is this:

1 Motive. The Studying, Obſerving, and diligent Keeping of your own Hearts, will marvellouſly help your Underſtanding in the deep Myſteries of Religion.

An honeſt well-experienced Heart, is a ſingular Help to a weak Head; ſuch a Heart will ſerve you inſtead of a Commentary upon a great Part of the Scriptures: By this means you ſhall far better underſtand the Things of God, than the Learned Rabbies and Profound Doctors, (if graceleſs and unexperienced) ever did; you ſhall not only have a more Clear, but a more ſweet Perception and guſt of them: A Man may diſcourſe orthodoxly and profoundly of the Nature and Effects of Faith, the Troubles and Comforts of Conſcience, the Sweetneſs of Communion with God, that never felt the Efficacy and ſweet Impreſſions of theſe Things upon his own Spirit: But, O how dark and dry are theſe Notions, compared with his, upon whoſe Heart they have been acted? When ſuch a Man reads David's Pſalms, or Paul's Epiſtles, there he finds his own Objections made and anſwered. O, ſaith he, theſe holy Men ſpeak my very heart! Their Doubts were mine, their Troubles mine, and their Experiences mine. I remember Chryſoſtome Speaking to his People of Antioch about ſome choice Experiences, uſeth this Expreſſion: Sciunt initiati quid dico: Thoſe that are initiated, know what I ſay: Experience is the beſt Schoolmaſter. O then! ſtudy your Hearts, keep your Hearts.

2 Mot. The Study and Obſervation of your own Hearts will antidote you againſt the dangerous and infecting Errors of the Times and Places you live in.

For what think you is the Reaſon, that ſo many Profeſſors in England have departed from the Faith, giving heed to Fables? That ſo many thouſands have been led away by the Error of the wicked, that Jeſuits and Quakers, who have ſown corrupt Doctrine, have had ſuch plentiful Harveſts among us, but becauſe they have met with a Company of empty notional Profeſſors, that never knew what belongs to practical Godlineſs, and the Study of their own Hearts.

If Profeſſors did but give Diligence to ſtudy, ſearch, and watch their own Hearts, they would have that ἰδιον ϛήριγμον, that Steadfaſtneſs of their own, that Peter ſpeaks of, 1 Pet. 3. 17. and this would ballaſt and ſettle them, Heb. 13. 9. Suppoſe a ſubtil Papiſt would talk to ſuch of the Dignity, and Merit of good Works, could he ever work the Perſuaſion of it into that Heart, that is conſcious to it ſelf of ſo much Darkneſs, Deadneſs, Diſtraction, and Unbelief attending its beſt Duties? 'Tis a good Rule, Non eſt diſputandum de guſtu. There is no diſputing againſt Taſte. What a Man hath felt and taſted, one cannot beat him off from that by Argument.

3 Mot. Your Care and Diligence in keeping your Hearts, will prove one of the beſt Evidences of your Sincerity.

I know no external Act of Religion, that differences the Sound from the Unſound Profeſſor: 'Tis wonderful to conſider, how far Hypocrites go in all external Duties; how plauſibly they can order the outward Man, hiding all their Indecencies from the Obſervation of the World.

But then, they take no heed to their Hearts, they are not in ſecret; what they appear to be in publick: And before this Tryal, no hypocrite can ſtand; 'tis confeſt, they may in a fit, under a Pang upon a Death-bed, cry out of the Wickedneſs of their Hearts; but alas! there is no heed to be taken to theſe extorted Complaints: In our Law, no Credit is to be given to the Teſtimony of one upon the Rack, becauſe it may be ſuppoſed, that the Extremity of the Torture may make him ſay any Thing to be eaſed. But if Self-jealouſie, Care, and Watchfulneſs, be the daily Workings and Frames of thy Heart, it ſtrongly argues the Sincerity of it: For what but the Sence of a Divine Eye, what but the real hatred of Sin as Sin, could put thee upon thoſe ſecret Duties, which lie out of the Obſervation of all Creatures?

If then it be a deſirable Thing in thine Eyes, to have a fair Teſtimony of thine Integrity, and to know of a Truth, that thou feareſt God: Then ſtudy thine Heart, watch thy Heart, keep thy Heart.

4 Mot. How fruitfull, ſweet and comfortable, would all Ordinances and Duties be to us, if our Hearts were better kept?

O what precious Communion might you have with God, every Time you approach him, if your Hearts were but in Frame! You might then ſay with David, Pſal. 104. 34. My Meditation of him ſhall be ſweet. That which loſes all our Comforts in Ordinances and more ſecret Duties, is the Indiſpoſedneſs of the Heart: A Chriſtian whoſe Heart is in a good Frame, gets the Start of all others that come with him in that Duty. They are tugging hard to get up their Hearts to God, now trying this Argument upon them, and then that, to quicken and affect them; and ſometimes go away as bad as they came. Sometimes the Duty is almoſt ended before their Hearts begin to ſtir to feel any Warmth, Quickning, or Power from it; but all this while the prepared Heart is at its Work, this is he that ordinarily gets the firſt Sight of Chriſt in a Sermon, the firſt Seal from Chriſt in a Sacrament, the firſt Kiſs from Chriſt in ſecret Prayer. I tell you, and I tell you but what I have felt, that Prayers and Sermons would appear to you other manner of Things, than they do, did you but bring better ordered Hearts unto them; you would not go away dejected and drooping, O this hath been a loſt Day, a loſt Duty to me, if you had not loſt your Hearts, it had not been ſo: If then the Comfort of Ordinances be ſweet, look to your Hearts, keep your Hearts.

5 Mot. Acquaintance with your own Hearts would be a Fountain of Matter to you in Prayer.

A Man, that is diligent in Heart-work, and knows the State of his own Soul; will have a Fountain-fulneſs of Matter to ſupply him richly in all his Addreſſes to God: His Tongue ſhall not faulter, and make Pauſes for Want of Matter, Pſal. 45. 1. My Heart is inditing a good Matter: Or as Montanus renders the Original, My Heart is boyling up good Matter, like a living Spring, that is ſtill boyling up freſh Water; and then my Tongue is as the Pen of a ready Writer: Others muſt pump their Memories, rack their Inventions, and are often at a loſs, when they have done all; but if thou have kept, and faithfully ſtudyed thine own Heart, 'twill be with thee (as Job ſpeaks in another Caſe) like Bottles, full of New Wine, that want vent, which are ready to burſt: As Holy Matter flows plentifully, ſo more feelingly and ſweetly from ſuch a Heart; when a Heart-experienced Chriſtian is mourning before God over ſome ſpecial Heart Corruption, wreſtling with God for the ſupply of ſome ſpecial inward Want, he ſpeaks not as other Men do, that have learned to pray by rote, their Confeſſions and Petitions are ſqueezed out, his drop freely, like pure Honey from the Comb; 'tis a Happineſs then to be with or near ſuch a Chriſtian. I remember Bernard, having given Rules to prepare the Heart for Prayer, concludes them thus, Et cum talis fueris memento mei; and (ſaith he) when thy Heart is in this Frame, then remember me.

6 Mot. By this the decayed Power of Religion will be recovered again among Profeſſors, which is the moſt deſirable Sight in this World.

O that I might live to ſee that Day! When Profeſſors ſhall not walk in a vain Shew, when they ſhall pleaſe themſelves no more with a Name to live, being ſpiritually Dead: When they ſhall be no more (as many of them now are) a Company of frothy, vain, and unſerious Perſons, but the Majeſtick Beams of Holineſs ſhining from their heavenly and ſerious Converſations, ſhall awe the World, and command Reverence from all that are about them; when they ſhall warm the Hearts of thoſe, that come nigh them, ſo that men ſhall ſay, God is in theſe Men of a Truth.

Well, ſuch a Time may again be expected according to that Promiſe, Iſa. 60. 21. The People ſhall be all righteous. But till we fall cloſer to this great Work of keeping our Hearts, I am out of Hopes to ſee thoſe bleſſed Days; I cannot expect better Times, till God give better Hearts; Doth it not grieve you to ſee what a Scorn Religion is made in the World? What Objects of Contempt and Scorn the Profeſſors of it are made in the World.

Profeſſors, Would you recover your-Credit? Would you again obtain an Honourable Teſtimony in the Conſciences of your very Enemies? Then, keep your Hearts, watch your Hearts; Tis the Looſneſs, Frothineſs, and Earthlineſs of our Hearts that hath made your Lives ſo; and his hath brought you under Contempt of the World, you firſt loſt your Sights of God, and ommunion with him, then your Heavenly and erious Deportment among Men; and by that, our Intereſt in their Conſciences: O then! For e Credit of Religion, for the Honour of your rofeſſion, keep your Hearts.

7 Mot. By Diligence in keeping our Hearts, we uld prevent, and remove the fatal Scandals and mbling-blocks out of the Way of the World.

Woe to the World (ſaith Chriſt) becauſe of Offences, Mat. 18. 7. Doth not ſhame cover your Faces? Do not your Hearts bleed within you, to hear of the ſcandalous miſcarriages of many looſe Profeſſors? Could you not, like Shem and Japhet, go backward with a Garment to cover the Shame of many Profeſſors? How is that worthy Name blaſphemed? Jam. 2. 7. 2 Sam. 12. 13, 14. the Hearts of the Righteous ſadned, Pſal. 25. 3. Ezek. 36. 20. by this the World is fearfully prejudiced againſt Chriſt and Religion, the Bonds of Death made faſt upon their Soul; thoſe that have a general Love and liking to the Ways of God, ſtartled and quite driven back, and thus Soul-blood is ſhed: Woe to the World.

Yea, How are the Conſciences of faln Profeſſors plunged, and even overwhelmed in the Deeps of Trouble? God inwardly Excommunicating their Souls from all comfortable Fellowſhip with himſelf, and the Joys of his Salvation; infinite are the Miſchiefs that come by the ſcandalous Lives of Profeſſors.

And what is the true Cauſe and Reaſon of all this, but the neglecting of their Hearts? Were our Hears better kept, all this would be prevented: Had David kept his Heart, he had not broken his Bones, a neglected careleſs Heart muſt of Neceſſity produce a diſorderly ſcandalous Life. I thank God for the Freedom and Faithfulneſs of a Reverend Brother, in ſhewing Profeſſors their manifold Miſcarriages, and from my Heart do wiſh, that when their Wounds have been throughly ſearched by that Probe, God would be pleaſed to heal them by this Plaiſter. O Profeſſors! If ever you will keep Religion ſweet, if ever you hope to recover the Credit of it in the World, keep your Hearts; either keep your Hearts, or loſe your Credit; keep your Hearts, or loſe your Comforts; keep your Hearts, leſt ye ſhed Soul-blood: What Words can expreſs the deep Concernments, the wonderful Conſequences of this Work! Every Thing puts a Neceſſity, a Solemnity, a Beauty upon it.

Goſpel-Glaſs.

8 Mot. An Heart well kept will fit you for any Condition God caſts you into, or any Service he hath to uſe you in.

He that hath learnt how to keep his Heart lowly, is fit for Proſperity; and he that knows how to uſe and apply to it Scripture Promiſes, and Supports, is fit to paſs through any Adverſity; he that can deny the Pride and Selfiſhneſs of his Heart, is fit to be employ'd in any Service for God. Such a Man was Paul, he did not only ſpend his Time in preaching to others, in keeping others Vineyards, but he lookt to himſelf, kept his own Vineyard, 1 Cor. 9. 27. Leſt when I have preached to others, I my ſelf ſhould be a caſt-away. And what an eminent Inſtrument was he for God? He could turn his Hand to any Work, he could dexterouſly manage both an adverſe and proſperous Condition. I know how to abound, and how to ſuffer Want: Let the People deifie him, it moves him not, unleſs to Indignation; let them Stone him, he can bear it: If a Man purge himſelf from theſe (ſaith he, 2 Tim. 2. 21.) He ſhall be a Veſſel unto Honour, ſanctified and meet for the Maſters Uſe, and prepared unto every good Work.

Firſt the Heart muſt be purged; and then it is prepared for any Service of God. When the Heart of Iſaiah was purified, which was the Thing ſignified by the touching of his Lips with a Coal from the Altar, Iſa. 6. 7. then he was fit for God's Work: Here am I, ſend me, Ver. 8. A Man that hath not learned to keep his Heart, put him upon any Service for God, and if it be attended with Honour, it ſhall ſwell up and over top his Spirit; If with ſuffering, it will exanimate and ſink him.

Jeſus Chriſt had an inſtrumental Fitneſs for his Fathers Work above all the Servants that ever God employed, he was zealous in publick Work for God, ſo zealous, that ſometimes he forgot to eat Bread, yea, that his Friends thought he had been beſides himſelf. But yet he ſo carried on his publick Work, as not to forget his own private Communion with God; and therefore you read, Matth. 13. 23. that when he had been labouring all Day, yet after that, he went up to a Mountain apart to pray, and was there alone. O let the Keepers of the Vineyards look to their own Vineyard! We ſhall never be ſo inſtrumental to the good of others, as when we are moſt diligent about our own Souls.

9 Mot. If the People of God would more diligently keep their Hearts, how exceedingly would the Communion of Saints be thereby ſweetned!

How goodly then would be thy Tents, O Jacob, and thy Tabernacles, O Iſrael! then as 'tis propheſied of the Jews, Zech. 8. 23. Men would ſay, we will go with you, for we have heard that God is among you. 'Tis the Fellowſhip your Souls have with the Father, and with the Son, that draws out the Deſires of others after Fellowſhip with you, 1 John 1. 3. I tell you, if Saints would be perſwaded to take more Pains, and ſpend more Time about their Hearts, there would quickly be ſuch a divine Luſtre upon the Face of their Converſations, that Men would account it no ſmall Priviledge, to be with or near them.

'Tis the Pride, Paſſion, and Earthlineſs of our Hearts, that hath ſpoiled Chriſtian Fellowſhip. Whence is it, That when Chriſtians meet, they are often jarring and contending, but only from their unmortified Paſſions? Whence are their uncharitable Cenſures of their Brethren, but only from Self-ignorance? Why are they ſo rigid, and unmerciful towards thoſe that are fallen? But becauſe they conſider not themſelves, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Gal. 6. 1. Why is their Diſcourſe ſo frothy and unprofitable when they meet? Is not this from the Earthlineſs and Vanity of their Hearts?

My Brethren, theſe be the Things, that have ſpoiled Chriſtian Fellowſhip, and made it become a dry and ſapleſs Thing; ſo that many Chriſtians are even weary of it, and are ready to ſay with the Prophet, Jer. 9. 2. O that I had a Cottage in the Wilderneſs, &c. That I might leave my People and go from them! And with David, Pſal. 120. 6. My Soul hath long dwelt with them that hate Peace. This hath made them long for the Grave, that they might go from them that are not their own People, to them that are their own People, as the Original of that Text imports, 2 Cor. 5. 8.

But now, if Profeſſors would ſtudy their own Hearts more, watch and keep them better, all this would be prevented; and the Beauty and Glory of Communion again reſtored. They would divide no more, contend no more, cenſure raſhly no more; when their Hearts are in Tune, their Tongues will not jarr, how charitable, pitiful and tender will they be one of another, when every one is dayly humbled under the Evil of his own Heart; Lord haſten thoſe much deſired Dayes, and bleſs theſe Counſels in order to them.

10 Mot. Laſtly, By this the Comforts of the Spirit, and precious Influences of all Ordinances would be fixed, and much longer preſerved in your Souls, than now they are.

Ah! what would I give, that my Soul might be preſerved in that Frame I ſometimes find it after an Ordinance! Aliquando intromittis me Domine in affectum multum inuſitatum introrſus ad neſcio quam dulcedinem, &c. Sometimes, O Lord, (ſaith one of the Fathers ſweetly) thou admitteſt me into the moſt inward, unuſual and ſweet Delights, to I know not what Sweetneſs, which were it perfected in me, I know not, what it would be; or rather, what it would not be. But alas! the Heart grows careleſs again, and quickly returns, like Water removed from the Fire, to its native Coldneſs: Could you but keep thoſe Things for ever in your hearts, what Chriſtians would you be! what Lives would you live! and how is it, that theſe Things remain no longer with us? Doubtleſs it is, becauſe we ſuffer our Hearts to take cold again: We ſhould be as careful after an Ordinance or Duty to prevent this, as one that comes out of an hot Bath, or great Sweat is, of going out into the chill Air. We have our hot and cold Fits by Turns, and what is the Reaſon but our Unskilfulneſs and Careleſneſs in keeping the Heart?

'Tis a thouſand Pities, that the Ordinances of God, as to their quickning and comforting Effects, ſhould be like thoſe humane Ordinances the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, that periſh in the uſing. O then, let me ſay to you, as Job 15. 11. Do the Conſolations of God ſeem ſmall to you? Look over theſe ten ſpecial Benefits, weigh them in a juſt Ballance; are they ſmall Matters? Is it a ſmall Matter to have thy weak Underſtanding aſſiſted? Thy endangered Soul antidoted, thy Sincerity cleared, thy Communion with God ſweetned, thy Sails filled in Prayer? Is it a ſmall Thing to have the decayed Power of Godlineſs again recovered, all fatal Scandals removed, an inſtrumental Fitneſs to ſerve Chriſt obtained, the Communion of Saints reſtored to its Primitive Glory, and the Influences of Ordinances abiding in the Souls of Saints? If theſe be no common Bleſſings, no ſmall Benefits, then ſurely 'tis a great Duty to keep the Heart with all Diligence.

The III. Uſe for Direction.

THE next Uſe ſhall be for Direction to ſome ſpecial Means for the keeping of the Heart; and here, beſides what hath been hinted in the Explication of the Duty at the beginning of this Diſcourſe, to which I refer the Reader, and all thoſe Directions throughout the whole, appropriated to particular Caſes and Seaſons: I ſhall farther add ſeveral other General Means of excellent Uſe to this End: And the firſt is this.

1 Means. Would you thus keep your Hearts as hath been perſwaded, then furniſh your Hearts richly with the word of God; which is their beſt Preſervative againſt Sin.

Keep the Word, and the Word will keep you: As the firſt receiving of the Word regenerated your Hearts, ſo the keeping of the Word within you, will preſerve your Hearts. Col. 3. 16. Let the Word of Chriſt dwell richly in you; let it dwell, not tarry with you for a night, and let it dwell richly, or plentifully; in all that is of it, in its Commands, Promiſes, Threats; in all that is in you, in your Underſtandings, Memories, Conſciences, Affections, and then 'twill preſerve your Hearts, Pſal. 119. 11. Thy Word have I hid in mine Heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee: 'Tis the Slipperineſs of our Hearts in Reference to the Word, that cauſes ſo many Slips in our Lives. Conſcience cannot be urged, or awed with forgotten Truths; but keep it in the Heart, and it will keep both Heart and Life upright, Pſal. 37. 31. The Law of his God is in his Heart, none of his Steps ſhall ſlide, or if he do, the Word will recover the ſtraying Heart again. Mat. 26. 57. Then Peter remembred (the Words of Jeſus ) and wept bitterly: We never loſe our Hearts, till they have firſt loſt the efficacious and powerfull Impreſſions of the Word.

2 Mea. Call your Hearts frequently to an Account, if ever you mean to keep them with God.

Thoſe that put a Stock into the Hands of unfaithful or ſuſpicious Servants, will be ſure to make ſhort Reckonings with them; the Heart is deceitful above all Things, and deſperately wicked, Jer. 17. 9. O 'tis as neceſſary, as ſweet, that we and our Reins; that is, we and our ſecret Thoughts, ſhould confer together every Night, Pſal. 16. 7. We ſhould call our Hearts to Account every Evening, and ſay, O my Heart! where haſt thou been to Day? Where have thy Thoughts wandred to Day? what Account canſt thou give of them? O naughty Heart, vain Heart, couldſt thou not abide by the Fountain of Delights? Is there better Entertainment with the Creature than with God? The oftner the Heart meets with Rebukes and Checks for wandring, the leſs 'twill wander; if every vain Thought were retracted with a Sigh, every excurſion, of the Heart from God, with a ſevere Check, it would not dare ſo boldly and frequently to digreſs and ſtep aſide; thoſe Actions which are committed with reluctancy, are not committed with frequency.

3 Mea. He that will keep his Heart, muſt take heed of plunging himſelf into ſuch a Multiplicity of earthly Buſineſs, as he cannot manage without neglecting his main Buſineſs.

It cannot be imagined, he ſhould keep his Heart with God, that hath loſt himſelf in a Wood of Earthly Buſineſs; take heed you do not pinch your Souls, by gratifying the immoderate Deſires of your Fleſh. I wiſh many Chriſtians could truly ſay, what an Heathen once did, I do not give, but only lend my ſelf to my Buſineſs. 'Tis ſaid Germanicus reigned in the Romans Hearts; Tyberius only in their Provinces: Though the World be in your Hands, let it not juſtle Chriſt out of your Hearts.

Seneca.

Take heed, Chriſtian, leſt thy Shop ſteal away thy Heart from thy Cloſet: God never intended Earthly Employments for a Stop, but rather for a Step to Heavenly Ones. O let not Ariſtippus the Heathen ariſe in Judgment againſt thee, who ſaid, He would rather neglect his Means than his Mind, his Farm than his Soul. If thy Ship be overladen, thou muſt caſt ſome over-board; more Buſineſs than thou canſt well manage, is like more Meat than thou canſt well digeſt, which will quickly make a ſickly Soul.

4 Mea. He that means to keep his Heart, muſt carefully obſerve its firſt Declinings from God, and ſtop it there.

He that will find his Houſe in good Repair, muſt ſtop every Chink as ſoon as diſcovered, and he that will keep his Heart, muſt not let a vain Thought be long neglected: The Serpent of Heart Apoſtaſie is beſt killed in the Egg of a ſmall Remiſſion. O if many poor decayed Chriſtians had lookt to their Hearts in Time, they had never come to that ſad paſs they now are: We may ſay of Heart Neglects, as the Apoſtle doth of vain Bablings, that they increaſe to more and more Ungodlineſs. Nemo repente fit turpiſſimus; little Sins neglected will quickly become great and maſterleſs: The greateſt Crocodile once lay in an Egg, the greateſt Oak was once but an Acorn. The firing of a ſmall Train of Powder may blow up all by leading to a greater Quantity. Men little think what a proud, vain, wanton or worldly Thought may grow to: Behold how great a Matter a little Fire Kindles!

5 Mea. Take heed of loſing the Livelineſs and Sweetneſs of your Communion with God, leſt thereby your Hearts be looſed off from God.

The Heart is an hungry and reſtleſs Thing, it will have ſomething to feed upon; if it enjoy nothing from God, it will hunt for ſomething among the Creatures, and there it often loſes it ſelf, as well as its End. There is nothing more engages the Heart to a Conſtancy and Evenneſs in walking with God, than the Sweetneſs, which it taſtes therein: As the Gauls, when once they taſted the ſweet Wine of Italy, could never be ſatisfied till they conquered that Country, where it grew.

'Tis true, Conſcience of Duty may keep the Heart from neglecting it, but when there is no higher Motive, it drives on deadly, and is filled with Diſtractions; that which we delight in, we are never weary of, as is evident in the Motions of the Heart to earthly Things, where the Wheels being oyled with delight, run nimbly, and have often need of trigging; the Motions of the Heart upward would be as free, if its Delight in heavenly Things were as great.

6 Mea. Habituate thy Heart to ſpiritual Meditations, if thou wouldſt have it freed from thoſe burdenſome Diverſions.

By this Means you will get a Facility, and Dexterity in Heart Work: 'Tis pity thoſe ſmaller Portions of our Time betwixt ſolemn Duties ſhould lie upon our Hands, and be rendered uſeleſs to us. O learn to ſave, and be good Husbands upon your Thoughts; to this purpoſe, a neat Author ſpeaks, ‘ Theſe Parentheſes, ‘ which happen to come between
‘ the more ſolemn Paſſages (whe‘ ther Buſineſs or Recreations)
‘ of human Life, are wont to be ‘ loſt by moſt Men, for Want of a due value for ‘ them, and even by good men, for want of Skill to ‘ preſerve them: for though they do not properly
‘ deſpiſe them, yet they neglect, or loſe them,
‘ for Want of knowing how to reſcue them, or

Boyles occaſional reflect. pag. 9, 10.

“ what to do with them; but although grains “ of ſand and aſhes be apart but of a deſpicable “ ſmallneſs, and lyable to be ſcattered and blown “ away, yet the ſkilful artificer by a vehement “ fire brings numbers of theſe to afford him that “ noble ſubſtance Glaſs, by whoſe help we may “ both ſee our ſelves, and our blemiſhes live“ly repreſented, (as in looking Glaſſes) and diſ“cern cœleſtial objects (as with Teleſcopes) and “ with the Sun-beams kindle diſpoſed materials “ (as with burning glaſſes;) ſo when theſe lit“tle fragments, or parcels of time, which if not “ carefully lookt to, would be diſſipated and loſt, “ come to be managed by a ſkilful Contemplator, “ and to be improved by the cœleſtial fire of De“votion, they may be ſo ordered as to afford us “ both looking-glaſſes to dreſs our Souls by, and “ proſpectives to diſcover Heavenly wonders, and “ incentives to inflame our hearts with zeal: Thus “ far he.

Something of that nature I have under hand, for a publick benefit, if God give life to finiſh, and opportunity to produce it: certainly this is a great advantage for the keeping of the heart with God.

IV. Uſe of Conſolation.

I Shall now cloſe the whole with a word or two of conſolation to all diligent and ſerious Chriſtians, that faithfully and cloſely ply heart-work; that are groaning and weeping in ſecret over the hardneſs, pride, earthlineſs and vanity of their hearts, that are fearing and trembling over the experienced deceitfulneſs, and falſeneſs of them, whilſt other vain profeſſors eyes are abroad, their time and ſtrength eaten up by fruitleſs diſputes, and earthly imployments; or at beſt by a cold and formal performance of ſome heartleſs and empty Duties: Poor Chriſtian, I have three Things to offer thee in order to thy ſupport and comfort, and Doubtleſs either of them alone mixed with Faith is Sufficient to comfort thee over all the trouble thou haſt with thine own heart.

1 Comfort. This argues thy heart to be upright and honeſt, whatever thy other gifts and abilities are.

'Tis uprightneſs of heart will comfort thee upon a death-bed. 2 Kings 20. 2, 3. Then he turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord, ſaying, Remember now O Lord, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect Heart, &c.

I am really of his mind, who ſaid, Si mibi daretur optio, eligerim Chriſtiani ruſtici ſordidiſſimum & maxime agreſte opus præ omnibus victoriis & triumphis Alexandri aut Cæſaris. Might I have my wiſh, I would prefer the moſt deſpicable and ſordid work of a ruſtick Chriſtian, before all the victories and triumphs of Alexander or Cæſar; Yea, let me add, before all the elaborated duties and excellent gifts of vain profeſſors; before the tongues of men and Angels: It will ſignifie more to my comfort to ſpead one ſolitary hour in mourning before the Lord over heart corruption, than many hours in a ſeeming zealous, but really dead performance of common duties with the greateſt enlargements and richeſt embelliſhments of parts and gifts.

By this very thing Chriſt diſtinguiſhes the formal and ſerious Chriſtian, Mat. 6. 5. The one is for the Street and Synagogue, for the obſervation and applauſe of men, but the other is a Cloſet-man; he drives on a home-trade, a heart-trade. Never be troubled then for the want of thoſe things that a man may have and be eternally Damned, but rather bleſs God for that which none but the Favourites, and darlings of heaven have; Many an one is now in Hell that had a better head than thine, and many a one now in Heaven that complained of as bad an heart as thine.

2 Comf. Know further for thy comfort, that God would never leave thee under ſo many heart troubles and burdens, if he intend not thy real benefit thereby.

Thou art often crying out, Lord why is it thus, why go I mourning all the day, having ſorrow in my heart, thus long have I been exerciſed with hardneſs of heart, and to this day have not obtained a broken heart, many years have I been praying and ſtriving againſt vain thoughts, yet am ſtill infeſted and perplexed with them. O when ſhall I get a better heart! I have been in travel, and brought forth but wind, I have obtained no deliverance, neither have the corruptions of my heart fallen! I have brought this heart many times to Prayers, Sermons, Sacraments, expecting and hoping for a cure from them, and ſtill my ſore runneth and ceaſeth not.

Penſive Soul, let this comfort thee, thy God deſigns thy benefit, even by theſe occaſions of thy ſad complaints. For (1) Hereby he would let thee ſee what thy heart by Nature is and was, and therein take notice how much thou art beholding to Free-Grace. He leaves thee under theſe exerciſes of Spirit, that thou mayeſt lye as with thy face upon the ground, admiring that ever the Lord of Glory ſhould take ſuch a Toad, ſo vile a Creature into his boſome. Thy baſe heart, if it be good for nothing elſe, yet ſerves to commend and ſet off, the unſearchable riches of Free Grace. (2) This ſerves to beat thee off continually from reſting, yea, or but glancing upon thine own righteouſneſs, or excellency: the corruption of thy heart, working in all thy duties, makes thee ſenſible to feel that the Bed is too ſhort, and the Covering too narrow: Were it not for thoſe reflections thou haſt after duties, upon the dulneſs and diſtractions of thine heart in them; how apt wouldſt thou be to fall in love with, and admire thine own Performances, and Enlargements? For if notwithſtanding theſe, thou haſt much to do with the pride of thy heart; how much more, if ſuch humbling and ſelf-abaſing conſiderations were wanting. And laſtly, this tends to make thee the more compaſſionate and tender towards others; Perhaps thou wouldſt have little pity for the diſtreſſes, and ſoul troubles of others, if thou hadſt leſs experience of thine own.

3 Comf. To conclude, God will ſhortly put a bleſſed end to all theſe Troubles, cares and watchings.

Th

The time is coming when thy heart ſhall be as thou wouldſt have it, when thou ſhalt be diſcharged of theſe cares, fears and ſorrows, and never cry out, Oh my hard, my proud, my vain, my earthly heart any more. When all darkneſs ſhall be baniſhed from thine underſtanding; and thou ſhalt clearly diſcover all truths in God, that Chryſtal Ocean of truth: When all vanity ſhall be purged perfectly out of thy thoughts, and they be everlaſtingly, raviſhingly, and delightfully entertained and exerciſed upon that ſupream Goodneſs, and infinite excellency of God, from whom they ſhall never ſtart any more like a broken Bow. And as for thy pride, paſſion, earthlineſs, and all other the matters of thy complaint and trouble, it ſhall be ſaid of them; as of the Egyptians to Iſrael, Stand ſtill, and ſee the ſalvation of God. Theſe corruptions thou ſeeſt to day, henceforth thou ſhalt ſee them no more for ever: When thou ſhalt lay down thy Weapons, of prayers, tears, and groans, and put on the Armour of light, not to fight, but Triumph in.

Lord, when ſhall this bleſſed day come? How long, How long, Holy and True? My ſoul waiteth for thee; Come my Beloved, and be thou like a Roe, Or a young Hart upon the Mountains of Bether. Amen.

The Signs of Grace, and Symptoms of Hypocriſie; Opened in a Practical Treatiſe upon Revelations III. 17, 18.

The Epiſtle to the Reader.

READER,

AMONG the Difficulties and ſeverities of true Religion, the faithful ſearching, and diligent keeping of our hearts, are found in the firſt and higheſt rank of difficulties; theſe two take up the main work of a Christian betwixt them, Hic labor, hoc opus eſt: I had hopes that theſe Eſſaies for the ſearching of the Heart, might much ſooner have followed my former * for keeping the heart: but Providence hath reſerved it for the fitteſt ſeaſon.

* A Saint indeed.

It comes to thy hand, Reader, in a day of ſtraits and fears, a dark and gloomy ſeaſon; when the Nations about us are made drunk with their own blood, and filled with the wine of aſtoniſhment; In a day when the Cup is ready to paſs unto us, and a ſtorm ſeems to be riſing in the fears of many, and threatning the *P*roteſtant intereſt in theſe reformed Nations. Some men, very conſiderable for Piety and Learning, from that Scripture, Rev. 13. 3. The deadly Wound, (Viz. That given the Beaſt by the Reformation) was healed, have concluded that Popery will once more over-run the reformed Nations; and one of great renown in all the Churches of Chriſt, foretelling this furious (but ſhort) ſtorm, comforts the People of God with this, that it is like to fall heavieſt upon the Worſhippers in the outward Court, namely, the formal Profeſſors of the times.

Oh! How much is every Man now concerned to have his eſtate and condition well cleared, and to give all diligence to make his calling and election ſure!

It ſhould both amaze and grieve a pious mind, to ſee how ſome ingenious Perſon can ſit with unwearied patience and pleaſure racking their Brains upon ſome dry School Problem, or ſome nice Mathematical Point; Whil'ſt no Reaſons or Perſwaſions can prevail with them to ſpend one ſerious hour in the ſearch and ſtudy of their own hearts.

It was the ſaying of the great Cicero, Libenter omnibus omnes opes conceſſerim, ut mihi liceat, vi nullâ interpellante, iſto modo literis vivere. I would give all the Wealth in the World that I might wholly live in my Studies, and have nothing to hinder me. What a brave offer had that been, if Heaven and the clearing of a title to it had been the ſubject-matter of thoſe ſtudies! Crede mihi, extingui dulce eſſet, Mathematicarum artium ſtudio, ſaith another, (i. e.) Believe me, it were a ſweet death to dye in the ſtudy of the Mathematical Arts: And I ſhould be apt to believe it too, did I not know that eternal Judgment immediately follows death; and that they who ſtand at the door of Eternity have higher matters to mind than Mathematical Niceties. To diſcern the harmonies and proportion of the Signs of Grace wrought in our Souls, is a far more pleaſant and neceſſary imployment; and to be extinguiſhed in ſuch a work as this, were a lovely death indeed; Bleſſed is that Servant, whom his Lord when he cometh ſhall find ſo doing.

My Friends, a day of trouble is near, a dying hour approacheth us, and when our Eye-ſtrings, and Heart-ſtrings are breaking, when we are taking the laſt graſp of Chriſt and the Promiſes, you will then know to what purpoſe thoſe hours ſpent in ſuch Work as this were. Search your ſelves, yea ſearch your ſelves before the decree bring forth, as that Text may be read, Zeph. 2. 1, 2. Enter into thy Chamber, Chriſtian, and ſhut thy Door; ſit cloſe to this Imployment thou art here directed to; and however Times ſhall govern, whether it be fair or foul Weather abroad, thou ſhalt never repent ſuch an Expence of thy Time; Nuſquam requiem inveni, niſi in libro & clauſtro; ſaid a devout Soul once. I am never better, than when I am at my Book, or on my Knees.

This may ſeem but a dull Melancholy Life to the briſk and aiery Spirits of theſe times; but let us be content with it as it is, and leave them (if we cannot have their Company) to their Sportiveneſs and Frolicks, never once grudging them their ſhort and dear bought Pleaſures. Aſſurance that Sin is pardoned, and Chrſt is ours; with the unſpeakable joys that are inſeparably connected therewith, is that White Stone, and New Name, which none knows but he that receives it; for no Words can poſſibly ſignifie to another what that Soul taſts and feels in ſuch an Hour as that is.

And be not diſcouraged at the Difficulty of obtaining it, this White Stone is no Philoſophers Stone, which no Man could ever ſay he had in his own Hand, for many a Chriſtian hath really found it in waiting upon the Lord by Prayer and diligently ſearching the Scriptures and his own Heart.

Reader, The Time will come when they that ſcoff at the ſerious Diligence of the Saints, and break many a pleaſant Jeſt upon the moſt ſolemn and awfull things in Religion, will tremble when they ſhall hear the Midnight-Cry, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh; and ſee the Lamps of all Vain and Formal Profeſſors expire, and none admitted into the Marriage, but ſuch whoſe Lamps are furniſhed with Oyl (i. e.) ſuch whoſe Profeſſions and Duties are enlivened and maintained by vital Springs and Principles of real Grace within them.

It is a very remarkable Story that Melchior Adams records in the Life of Gobelinus, That a little before his Time there was a Play ſet forth at Iſenach in Germany, of the Wiſe and Fooliſh Virgins: wherein the Virgin Mary, who was one of the Five Saints that repreſented the Wiſe Virgins, was brought in with the reſt, telling the Fooliſh Virgins that cryed to her for Oyl, that it was too late: And then others repreſenting the Fooliſh Virgins, fell a weeping and making moſt bitter Lamentations.

Melch. Adams in vita Gobelni perſonæ vixit Anno 1420.

Hereat Prince Frederick (who was one of the Spectators) greatly amazed, cryed out, Quid eſt fides noſtra Chriſtiana, ſi neque Maria, neque alia Sancta exorari poteſt, &c. What is our Faith worth, and to what purpoſe are all our good Works, if neither Mary, nor any other Saint can help us! And ſuch was his Conſternation, that it threw him into a ſore and violent diſeaſe, which ended in an Apoplex, whereof he died about four Days after.

If the Repreſentation of theſe Things in a Play ended the Life of ſo great a Man, ſo tragically; Oh think with thy ſelf, Reader, what will the Effects of the Lords real Appearance in the Clouds of Heaven, and the Mourning and Wailing of the Tribes of the Earth in that Day be? Think I ſay and think again, and again, what the diſmal Effects of ſuch a Sight and Sound will be upon all that neglect ſerious Preparation themſelves, and ſcoff at them that do prepare to meet the Lord.

The Deſign of this Manual is to bring every Mans Gold to the Touchſtone and Fire, I mean every Mans Grace to the Tryal of the Word, that thereby we may know what we are, what we have, and what we muſt expect and truſt to at the Lords coming. I pretend not to any Gift of diſcerning Spirits. Such an extraordinary Gift there once was in the Church, and very neceſſary for thoſe times (wherein Satan was ſo buſie, and the Canon of Scripture not compleated) which the Apoſtle calls the Gift of diſcerning Spirits, 1 Cor. 12. 10. And ſome are of Opinion that by Vertue of this Gift, Peter diſcerned the Hypocriſie of Ananias and Saphira, but whatever that Gift was, it is utterly ceaſed now; no Man can pretend to it, but the Ordinary Aids and Aſſiſtances of the Spirit are with us ſtill, and the lively Oracles are among us ſtill, to them we may freely go for Reſolution of all Doubts, and Deciſion of perplexed Caſes: And thus we may diſcern our own Spirits, though we want the extraordinary Gift of diſcerning other Mens Spirits.

I have little to ſay of this Treatiſe in thy Hands, more than that it is well aimed, and deſigned, how ever it be managed: The Ear tries Words, as the Mouth taſteth Meat; theſe Things will reliſh according to the Palates it meets with.

It is not the pleaſing, but profiting of Men that I have herein laboured for. I know of nothing in it that is like to wound the upright, or ſlightly heal the Hypocryte, by crying Peace, Peace, when there is no Peace. Scripture light hath been my Cynoſura, and with that Thread in my Hand, I have followed the Search of Hypocriſie through the Labyrinths of the Heart. Some Aſſiſtance I hope I have had alſo from Experience; for Scripture and Experience are ſuch Relatives, and the Tye betwixt them ſo diſcernable, as nothing in Nature can be more ſo. What we feel in our Hearts, we might have read in the Scriptures before ever we felt it.

That the Bleſſing of God may go forth with it, and accompany it to thy Soul, Reader, is the Hearts deſire and prayer of

Thine and the Churches

Servant in Chriſt,

CHAP. I.

Wherein the Text is opened, and the Doctrines propounded.

ALthough the Revelation be a Compendium of intricate Viſions and obſcure Prophecies, containing almoſt as many Myſteries as Words: Yet that Cloud overſhadows the Prophetical Part only; which begins where this Chapter (with the doctrinal Part) ends: Here the Waters are found no deeper than in other Places of Scripture; but if we go a little farther they become an overflowing Flood: Hitherto we touch Ground, but a ſtep further delivers us into the Deeps, which are above the Heads of the talleſt Chriſtians: Here the Spirit ſpeaks doctrinally, and perſpicuouſly; but in the following Chapters myſtically, and in great Obſcurity.

Tot myſteria quot verba. Hieron.

Seven Epiſtles are found in this Doctrinal Part, immediately dictated from Heaven, and ſent by John to the Seven Churches of Aſia, to inſtruct, correct, encourage, and confirm them, as their ſeveral Caſes required.

My Text falls in the laſt Epiſtle, ſent to the Church of Laodicea; the worſt, and moſt degenerate of all the reſt. The beſt had their Defects, and infirmities; but this laboured under the moſt dangerous Diſeaſe of all. The faireſt Face of the ſeven had ſome Spots, but a dangerous Diſeaſe ſeems to have invaded the very Heart of this.

Not that all were equally guilty, but the greateſt Part (from which the whole is denominated) were lukewarm Profeſſors; who had a Name to live, but were dead, who being never throughly engaged in Religion, eaſily embraced that Principle of the Gnoſticks, which made it ἀδιάφορον, a matter of Indifferency to own or deny Chriſt in time of Perſecution. The moſt ſaving Doctrine that ſome Profeſſors are acquainted with. This lukewarm temper Chriſt hated, he was ſick of them, and loathed their Indifferency: I wiſh (ſaith he) v. 16. thou wert either cold or hot; an Expreſſion of the ſame amount with that in 1 King. 18. 21. How long halt you between two Opinions? And is manifeſtly tranſlated from the Qualities of Water, which is either cold, or hot; or lukewarm, a middle Temper betwixt both, and more nauſeous to the Stomach than either of the former. Cold is the Complexion and natural temper of thoſe that are wholly alienated and eſtranged from Chriſt and Religion. Hot, is the gracious Temper of thoſe that know and love Jeſus Chriſt in an excelling degree. Lukewarm, or tepid, is the Temper of thoſe who have too much Religion to be eſteemed Carnal, and too little to be truly Spiritual; a Generation that is too politick to venture much, and yet ſo fooliſh as to loſe all: They are loth to forſake Truth wholly, and more loth to follow it too cloſely: The Form of Religion they affect as an honour, the Power of it they judge a Burden.

Frigidos vocat plane a Chriſto alienos. Fervidos, vera Chriſti cognitione in excellenti gradu præditos. Tepidos, qui cum Chriſtiani dici velint, nec cauſam religionis ſerio agunt, nec vitam confeſſioni conformem dignamque ducunt. Sol. Glaſſ. Rhet. Sacra. par. 3. p. 165.

This is that Temper which the Lord hates, and this was the Diſeaſe of Laodicea, which Chriſt the great and only Heart-Anatomiſt and Soul-Phyſican diſcovers in v. 17. and preſcribes a Cure for it in v. 18. So that the Words reſolve themſelves into two Parts: viz,

{Firſt, A faithful Diſcovery, } the Diſeaſe
{Secondly, A proper Remedy, of } of Laodicea.

1. Firſt, Their Diſeaſe is faithfully diſcovered to them, both in its Symptoms, Cauſe, and Aggravation.

Firſt, Its Symptome, an unconcerned, indifferent regardleſs Spirit in matters of Religion; nor hot, nor cold; the true Temper of Formal-Profeſſors, who never engaged themſelves throughly and heartily in the Ways of God, but can take, or leave as times govern, and wordly Intereſt come to be concerned.

Secondly, Its Cauſe and Root, which is the Defect and Want of the Truth, and Power of inward Grace; noted in theſe Expreſſions, Thou art wretched, and miſerable, poor, blind, and naked; (i. e.) thou art deſtitute of a real Principle, a ſolid Work of Grace; theſe five Epithets do all Point at one and the ſame thing; namely, the Defectiveneſs and Rottenneſs of their Foundation. The two firſt, ὁ ταλαιπωρὸς ϗ ὁ ἐλεεινὸς, wretched and miſerable; are more general, concluding them in a ſad Condition, a very ſinful and lamentable Eſtate: The three laſt, πτωχὸς, τυφλὸς, ϗ γυμνὸς, viz. poor, blind and naked, are more particular, pointing at thoſe grand Defects, and Flaws in the Foundation, which made their Condition ſo wretched and miſerable.

Firſt, Poor, that is, void of Righteouſneſs, and true Holineſs before God; theſe are the true riches of Chriſtians, and whoſo wants them, is poor, and miſerable; how rich ſoever he be in Gifts of the Mind, or Treaſures of the Earth.

πτωχὸς deſtitutus Juſtitia, & Sanctitate vera, coram Deo. Grotius.

Secondly,

τυφλὸς Nec morbum ſciens, nec remedium.

Secondly, Blind, (i. e.) without ſpiritual Illumination, and ſo neither knowing their Diſeaſe, nor their Remedy; the Evil of Sin, or Neceſſity of Chriſt. Durham in Loc.

γυμνὸς Carens juſtitia qua veſtitus eſt Chriſtianorum. Pareus.

Thirdly, Naked, without Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs. Sin is the Souls Shame and Nakedneſs. Chriſts pure and perfect Righteouſneſs is its covering, or Garment: This they wanted, how richly ſoever their Bodies were adorned. Theſe were Laodiceans, (i. e.) a juſt or righteous People; (according to the Notation of that Word) whoſe Garments with which they covered themſelves, were made of the home-ſpun Thread of their own Righteouſneſs.

Thirdly, The Diſeaſe of Laodicea is here opened to them in its Aggravations. Thou ſaidſt I am rich, and increaſed with Goods, and have need of nothing; but knoweſt not, &c.

Nil miſerius miſero non miſerante ſeipſum.

To be really graceleſs, and Chriſtleſs, is a miſerable Condition; but to be ſo, and yet confidently perſwaded of the contrary, is moſt miſerable: To have the very Symptoms of Death upon us, and yet tell thoſe that pity us, we are as well as they, is lamentable indeed.

O the Efficacy of a Spiritual Deluſion! This was their Diſeaſe, Graceleſneſs, and the Aggravation of it, was their Senſleſneſs.

2. Secondly, We have a proper Remedy preſcribed, v. 18. I counſel thee to buy of me Gold tried in the Fire, that thou mayeſt be rich, &c. In which we have to conſider, Firſt, what is preſcribed for the Cure. Secondly, where it is to be had. Thirdly, how to be obtained.

Firſt, What are the Remedies preſcribed, and they are three; Gold, White-rayment, and Eye-ſalve. Firſt, Gold the Cure of Poverty; yea, Gold tried in the Fire, (i. e.) Grace that hath been variouſly proved already, and the more it is proved, the more its Truth will be conſpicuous. The next is White-rayment, the Remedy againſt Nakedneſs. And laſtly Eye-ſalve, the effectual Cure of Blindneſs. Under all theſe choice Metaphors, more choice and excellent Things are ſhadowed, even ſpiritual Graces, real Holineſs, more precious than Gold. Chriſt's imputed Righteouſneſs, the richeſt Garment in all the Wardrobe of Heaven; and ſpiritual Illumination, the moſt excellent Collyrium or Eye-ſalve that ever was or can be applyed to the mental Eye or Underſtanding of Man in this World.

Secondly, Where theſe precious Remedies may be had, and you find Chriſt hath the Monopoly of them all; buy of me, ſaid Chriſt in the Text; he is the Repoſitory of all Graces. Angels, Miniſters, Ordinances, cannot furniſh you with them, without Chriſt.

Thirdly, How they may be obtained from him; buy of me; on this Place Eſtius, and others build their Doctrine of Merit; which is to build a Superſtructure of Hay and ſtubble upon a Foundation of God. The Exigence of the very Text it ſelf deſtroys ſuch Conceits: For what have they that are poor, wretched, miſerable, and want all things, to give as a Price, or by Way of Merit for thoſe ineſtimable Treaſures of Grace? Buying therefore in this Place, can ſignifie or intend no more than the Acquiſition, compaſſing, or obtaining theſe Things from Jeſus Chriſt in the Uſe of ſuch Means and Methods as he hath appointed, and in the Uſe of them we merit Grace no more, than the Patient merits of his Phyſician by coming to him, and carefully following his Preſcriptions in the Uſe of ſuch Medicaments as he freely gives him: and that Place, Iſa. 55. 1. (from which this Phraſe ſeems to be borrowed) fully clears it: He that hath no Money, let him come and buy Wine, and Milk, without Money, and without Price.

From all which, theſe three Obſervations fairly offer themſelves to us.

Doct. 1. That many Profeſſours of Religion are under very great and dangerous Miſtakes in their Profeſſion.

Doct. 2. That true Grace is exceeding precious, and greatly enriches the Soul that poſſeſſeth it.

Doct. 3. That only is to be accounted true Grace, which is able to endure all thoſe Trials appointed, or permitted for the Diſcovery of it.

The firſt Doctrine naturally riſes out of the Scope of the Text, which is to awaken and convince unſound Profeſſors.

The ſecond from the Uſe the Holy Ghoſt makes of the beſt and choiceſt Things in Nature, to Shadow forth the ineſtimable Worth and Preciouſneſs of Grace,

And the Third, from that particular, and moſt ſignificant Metaphor of Gold tried in the Fire; by which I here underſtand, a real and ſolid Work of Grace, evidencing it ſelf to be ſo, in all the Proofs and Tryals that are made of it; for whatſoever is probational of Grace, and puts its Soundneſs and Sincerity to the Teſt, is that to it which Fire is to Gold: In this Senſe it is uſed in Scripture, Pſal. 66. 10. Thou haſt tried us as Silver is tried: And Zach. 13. 9. I will bring the third part through the Fire, and will refine them as Silver is refined, and try them as Gold is tried. So that whatſoever it is which examines and tries Grace, whether it be ſound, and ſincere, that is the Fire Chriſt here ſpeaks of; and ſuch Grace as abides theſe Trials, is the Gold here intended.

CHAP. II.

Wherein the firſt Doctrine is opened and improved briefly as a preliminary Diſcourſe to the principal Subject herein deſigned.

Doct. 1. That many Profeſſors of Religion are under very great and dangerous Miſtakes in their Profeſſion.

SECT. I. ALL Flattery is dangerous, Self-flattery is more dangerous, but Self-flattery in the Buſineſs of Salvation, is the moſt dangerous of all.

To pretend to the good we know we have not, is Groſs Hypocriſie; to opine and perſwade our ſelves of the good we have not, though we think we have it, is formal Hypocriſie; and this was the Caſe of thoſe Self-deceivers in the Text.

My Deſign in this Diſcourſe is not to ſhake the well-built Hopes of any Man, or beget groundleſs Jealouſies; but to diſcover the real dangerous Flaws in the Foundation of many Mens Hopes for Heaven: Every thing is as its Foundation is, and debile fundamentum fallit opus; that failing all fails.

There is a twofold Self-ſuſpicion or Fear in God's own People. The one is a Fear of Caution, awaking the Soul to the uſe of all preventive Means for avoiding Danger; this is Laudable. The other a groundleſs Suſpicion of reigning Hypocriſie, tending only to Deſpondency; this is Culpable: By the former the Soul is guarded againſt Danger, by the later it is betrayed into needleſs Trouble; and debarred frm Peace.

Good Men have ſometimes more Fear than they ought, and wicked Men have leſs than they ought: The former do ſometimes ſhut their Eyes againſt the fair Evidences of their own Graces, the latter ſhut their Eyes againſt the ſad Evidences of their Sin and Miſery. This is an Evil in both, but not equally dangerous; for he that ſhuts his Eyes againſt his own Graces and Privileges, loſeth but his Peace and Comfort for a time; but he that ſhuts his Eyes againſt the Evidences of his Sin and Miſery loſeth his precious Soul to all Eternity! Of this latter Sort of Self-deceivers the World is full, and theſe are the Men I am concerned with in this Point.

O that ſome Men had leſs Trouble! And Oh that ſome had more! If the fooliſh Virgins had been leſs confident, they had certainly been more ſafe, Matth. 25. If thoſe glorious Profeſſors in Matth. 7. 22. had not ſhut their Eyes againſt their own Hypocriſie, Chriſt had not ſhut againſt them the Door of Salvation and Glory. Ananias and Saphira; Hymeneus and Philetus; Alexander and Demas: With multitudes more of that Sort, are the ſad Inſtances and Proofs of this Point. It is ſaid, Prov. 30. 12. There is a Generation that is pure in their own Eyes, and yet is not waſhed from their Filthineſs. Through what falſe Spectacles do the Men of that Geneaation look upon their own Souls; The Men of that Generation are multiplied in this Generation: Never was any Age over-run with a Generation of vain, Self-couzening, formal Profeſſors, as this Generation is.

Three Things I ſhall here endeavour to do.

(1.) To give Evidence beyond Contradiction to this ſad truth; That among Profeſſors are found many Self-deceivers.

(2.) To aſſign the true Cauſes and Reaſons why it is ſo. And,

(3.) Improve it in thoſe practical Inferences the Point affords.

SECT. II.

THAT there are multitudes of ſuch ſelf-deceivers among Profeſſors, will appear;

1. Firſt, by this, that there are every where to be found many more Profeſſors, than Converts. Unregenerate Profeſſors, whoſe Religion is but the Effect of Education. Chriſtianity by the favour of an early Providence was the firſt Comer, it firſt beſpake them for it ſelf; theſe are Chriſtians of an humane Creation, rather born, than new-born Believers. Now, all theſe are ſelf-deceived, and haſting to Damnation, under the Efficacy of a ſtrong Deluſion; for if a man think himſelf to be ſomething, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himſelf, ſaith the Apoſtle, Gal. 6. 3. Surely our Birth-priviledge, without the new Birth, is nothing; yea, worſe than nothing, as to our laſt, and great Account; that which Stands for a great Summ in our Arithmetick, it's nothing, it is but a Cypher you ſee, in God's, Except a man be born again, (ſays the Lips of Truth) he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God, Joh. 3. 3.

Poor Self-deceivers, ponder thoſe Words of Chriſt; you have hitherto thought your civil Education, your dead and heartleſs Duties enough to denominate you Chriſtians before God; but go now, and learn what that Scripture meaneth; and be aſſured, you muſt experience another manner of Converſion, or elſe it is impoſſible for you to eſcape eternal Damnation.

2. Secondly, It is too manifeſt by this, that many Profeſſors are only acquainted with the Externals of Religion; and all their Duties are no more but a Complyance of the outward man with the Commands of God: This is the ſuperficial Religion which deceives and betrays multitudes into eternal Miſery. True Religion ſeats it ſelf in the inward man, and acts effectually upon the vital Powers: Killing Sin in the Heart, and purging its Deſigns and Delights from Carnality and Selfiſhneſs; engaging the Heart for God, and ſetting it as a Bow in its full Bent for him, in the Approaches we make to him: But how little are many Profeſſors acquainted with theſe things!

Alas! If this be all we have to ſtand upon, how dangerous a Station is it! What is external Conformity, but an artificial Imitation of that which only lives in the Souls of good Men? Thus was Jehu deceived; he did many Acts of external Obedience to God's Command, but Jehu took no heed to walk in the Way of the Lord God of Iſrael with his Heart, 2 Kings 10. 31. and this was his Overthrow.

This alſo was the Ruine of thoſe Formaliſts, Ezech. 33. 31. they came and ſate before the Lord as his People; The Word was to them as a lovely Song; mightily charmed with the Modulation of the Prophets Voice, and his lively Geſtures; but all the while their Hearts went after their Covetouſneſs: And what Abundance of ſuch Phariſaical, Superficial Religion is every where to be found?

3. Thirdly, It appears by this, that every Tryal made by Sufferings upon Profeſſors, blows away multitudes like dry leaves in Autumn, by a ſtormy Wind; many fall from their own Stedfaſtneſs in ſhaking Times: Proſperity multiplies vain Profeſſors, and Adverſity purges the Church of them. Then ſhall many be offended, Matth. 24. 10.

This the Scripture every where marks as a Symptome of Hypocriſie, Pſal. 78. 8. A Generation that ſet not their Heart aright: And whoſe Spirit was not ſtedfaſt with God. 1 Joh. 2. 19. But they went out, that they might be made manifeſt, that they were not of us, Matth. 13. 21. For when Tribulation or Perſecution ſecution ariſeth becauſe of the Word; by and by he is offended. But ſhould one have told them in the Days of their firſt Profeſſion, that all their Zeal and Labour in Religion would have ended in this; it is like they would have replyed as Hazael to the Man of God, 2 King. 8. 13. But what is thy Servant a Dog, that he ſhould do this great Thing! Quantum mutatus ab illo?

Oh how unlike is their dark and dirty Evening, to their glorious and hopefull Morning! Theſe Profeſſors have more of the Moon than of the Sun; little Light, leſs heat; but many changes: They deceive many, yea, they deceive themſelves, but cannot deceive God. During the Calm, what a Flouriſh do they make! And with what Gallantry do they ſail! By and by you may hear horrendas tempeſtates, and ſoon after you may ſee, fienda naufragia, a dreadful Shipwrack, after a furious Storm; and no Wonder, for they wanted that ἴδιον στηριγμὸν, that Ballaſt and Eſtabliſhment in themſelves that would have kept them tite and ſtable.

1 Pet. 3. 17.

4. Fourthly, It is too apparent by this, that many Profeſſors ſecretly indulge and ſhelter beloved Luſts under the Wings of their Profeſſion. This like a Worm at the Root will wither and kill them at laſt, how fragrant ſoever they may ſeem to be for a Seaſon. Gideon had ſeventy Sons, and one Baſtard; but that one Baſtard was the Death of all his ſeventy Sons.

Some Men have many excellent Gifts, and perform Multitudes of Duties, but one ſecret Sin indulged and allowed, will deſtroy them all at laſt. He that is partial as to the Mortification of his Sins, is undoubtedly hypocritical in his Profeſſion. If Davids Evidence was good for his Integrity, ſurely ſuch Profeſſors will never clear themſelves of Hypocriſie. I was alſo upright before him, and kept my ſelf from mine Iniquity, ſaith he, Pſal. 18. 23. This is the right Eye, and right Hand which every ſincere Chriſtian muſt pluck out, and cut off, Matth. 5. 29, 30.

Which is a Metaphor from Chirurgeons, whoſe Manner it is when the whole is in Danger by any Part, to cut it off, ne pars ſincera trahatur; leſt all Periſh.

Their ſuppreſſing ſome Luſts raiſeth their Confidence, the Indulging of one razeth the Foundation of their Hopes, and thus they deceive themſelves.

5. Fifthly, This alſo manifeſts the ſelf-deceits of many Profeſſors, That the ſecret Duties of Religion, or at leaſt the ſecret Intercourſe of the Soul with God in them, is a ſecret hid from the Knowledge and Experience of many Profeſſors.

To attend the Ordinances of God in the Seaſons of them they know, to pray in their Families at the ſtated Hours thereof they know; but to retire from all the World into their Cloſets, and there to pour out their Hearts before the Lord, they know not.

To feel ſomewhat within, paining them like an empty hungry Stomach, until they have eaten that hidden Manna, that Bread in ſecret; I mean refreſhed their Souls with real Communion with the Lord there; this is a Myſtery locked up from the Acquaintance of many that call themſelves Chriſtians; and yet this is made a Characteriſtical Note of a ſincere Chriſtian by Chriſt himſelf, in Matth. 6. 6.

O Reader, If thy Heart were right with God, and thou didſt not cheat thy ſelf with a vain Profeſſion, thou wouldſt have frequent Buſineſs with God, which thou wouldſt be loth thy deareſt Friend, or the Wife of thy Boſome ſhould be privy to: Non eſt religio ubi omnia patent. Religion doth not lay all open to the Eyes of Men. Obſerved Duties maintain our Credit, but ſecret Duties maintain our Life. It was the ſaying of of an Heathen about his ſecret Correſpondency with his Friend, What need the World be acquainted with it? Thou and I are Theatre enough to each other: There are encloſed Pleaſures in Religion, which none but renewed ſpiritual Souls do feelingly underſtand.

6. Laſtly, How many more profeſs Religion in theſe Days, than ever made Religion their Buſineſs! Philoſophy tells us, there is a τὸ ἔργὸν, and a παρεργὸν, a Main-buſineſs, and a By-buſineſs, the ſame is found in Religion alſo.

There are that give themſelves to the Lord, 2 Cor. 8. 5. whoſe Converſation or Trade is in Heaven; Phil. 3. 18. the End or Scope of whoſe Life is Chriſt, Heb. 13. 7, 8. who give Religion the Precedency both in Time and Affection, Pſal. 5. 3. Rom. 12. 11. who are conſtant and indefatigable in the Work of the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. 58.

And there are alſo that take up Religion rather for Oſtentation, than for an Occupation, who never mind the Duties of Religion, but when they have nothing elſe to do; and when their outward Man is engaged in the Duties of it, yet their Heart is not in it; they hear, they pray, ἡ δὲ ψυχὴ ἔξω, as Chryſoſtome ſpeaks, but their Souls, their Thoughts and Minds are abroad. It is not their Buſineſs to have Fellowſhip with God in Duties, to get their Luſts mortified, their Hearts tryed, their Souls conformed to the Image of God in Holineſs.

They pray as if they prayed not; and hear as if they heard not, and if they feel no Power in Ordinances, no Quickening in Duties, it is no Diſappointment at all to them; for theſe were not their Deſigns in drawing nigh to God in theſe Appointments.

And thus you ſee what Numbers of Profeſſors deceive themſelves.

SECT. III.

AND if we ſeriouſly enquire into the Grounds and Cauſes of this Self-deceit among Profeſſors, we ſhall find theſe four Things conſpiring to delude and cheat them, in the great Concern of their Salvation.

1. Firſt, The natural Deceitfulneſs of the Heart, than which nothing is more treacherous, and falſe, Jer. 17. 9. The Heart is deceitful above all Things, and deſperately wicked; עקב דרב מכל Supplantativum cor præ omnibus, the Heart is the greateſt Supplanter, the moſt crafty and ſubtil Cheat of all, it deceives us as Jacob did his Brother, (to whoſe Name this Text alludes.) It defeats us of our heavenly Heritage, as Jacob ſupplanted him in his earthly one; while we are gone a hunting after earthly Trifles. And wherein its Deceitfulneſs principally appears, you may ſee by the ſolemn Caveat of the Apoſtle James, 1. 22. wherein he warns us to beware, that in hearing the Word we deceive not our ſelves by falſe Reaſonings; for for ſo παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαυτοὺς imports, and may be ſtrictly rendred, falſe reaſoning themſelves, namely, by making falſe ſyllogiſms; whereby they miſconclude about their ſpiritual and eternal eſtate and condition, and befool themſelves.

The time will come when a mans own heart will be found to have the chief hand in his ruine; and what Apollodorus did but fancy his heart ſaid to him, ſome mens hearts will tell them in earneſt when they come to the place of miſery and torment; ἐγὼ σοὶ τέτων αἰτία. I have been the cauſe of all this. I have betrayed thee into all theſe torments. It was my lazineſs, my credulity, my averſneſs to the ways of ſtrict godlineſs, mortification, and ſelf denyal have for ever undone thee. When thou ſateſt under the convincing truths of the Goſpel; It was I that whiſpered thoſe Atheiſtical ſurmiſes into thine ear, perſwading thee all thou heardſt was but the intemperate heat of an hot brained zealot; when the Judgements of God were denounced, and the miſery thou now feeleſt forewarned and threatned, it was I that whiſpered what the tongue of another once ſpake out, Tunc credam, cùm illuc venero. I will believe it when I come thither.

Surely this is a great truth which was obſerved by the wiſeſt of men, He that truſteth in his own heart is a fool, Proverbs 28. 26. And thouſands of ſuch fools are to be found among Profeſſours.

2. Secondly, Satan is a chief conſpirator in this treacherous deſign; we are not Ignorant (ſaith the Apoſtle) of his devices; νοήματα his Sophiſtry and ſleights, 2 Cor. 2. 21. his μεθοδείας, trains and methods of Temptation, which are throughly ſtudied, artificially moulded and ordered; even ſuch Syſtemes as Tutors and Profeſſours of Arts and Sciences have, and read over to their Auditors; as one judiciouſly obſerves, to be the import of that Text, Eph. 6. 11. Nor it is to be wondred at, conſidering his vaſt knowledge, deep Malice, and long experience in this Art of cheating; together with the great corruption and pronity of the Hearts of Men to cloſe with his devices, and believe his impoſtures; that ſo vaſt a Number of ſouls are taken captive by him at his will, 2 Tim: 2. 26.

Dr. Goodwin Child of Light.

'Tis the God of this World that blinds the minds of them that believe not, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. The God of this World, (ſo call'd by a Mimeſis) who leads a World of poor deluded wretches to deſtruction, having firſt blinded their minds, that is deluded, and with his helliſh art practiſed upon their underſtanding, that τὸ ἡγεμόνικον, leading and directive faculty, which is to the ſoul what eyes are to the body.

I remember Baſil brings in Satan thus inſulting Chriſt, I have them, I have them: For all thy blood and Miracles, thy Wooings and beſeechings, thy knockings and ſtrivings, I have couzened thee of them at the very gates of Heaven: For all their illuminations, and taſting of the Powers of the World to come; I have ſhipwrackt them in the very mouth of the Haven.

3. Thirdly, The common works found in unregenerate ſouls, deceive many, who cannot diſtinguiſh them from the ſpecial works of the Spirit in Gods Elect: See that ſtartling Scripture, Heb. 6. 4. Where you find among the common operations of the Spirit upon Apoſtates, Illumination, which gives perſpicuity to their minds in diſcerning ſpiritual truths, and that frequently with more diſtinctneſs and depth of Judgment, than ſome gracious ſouls attain unto; beſides, it is the matter out of which many rare and excellent gifts are formed in admirable variety; which are ſingularly uſeful to others as they are exerciſed in expounding the Scriptures, defending the truths of Chriſt by ſolid arguments, preaching, praying, &c. And make the ſubject of them renowned and honoured in the Church of God; whilſt mean time, they are dazled with their own ſplendour, and fatally ruined by them.

There you find alſo Taſting as well as enlightening. So that they ſeem to abound not only in knowledge, but in ſenſe alſo, (i. e.) in ſome kind of experience of what they know; for Experience is the bringing of things to the Teſt of ſpiritual ſenſe. They do taſte or experience the good that comes by the promiſes of the word, and diſcoveries of Heaven and glory; though they feel not experimentally the transforming efficacy of theſe things upon their own ſouls.

Now that illumination furniſhing them with excellent gifts (as before was noted) enabling them to Aſſent to Goſpel truths, which the Scripture calls Faith, Acts. 8. 12. and working in them conviction of ſin, 1 Sam. 15. 24. Reformation of life, 2 Pet. 2. 20. and touching their affections alſo with tranſient joy in the diſcovery of thoſe truths.

And this Taſte which comes ſo near to the experience which the ſanctified ſoul enjoys: theſe things ſeem to put their condition beyond all controverſie, and lay a foundation for their ill built confidence; nothing is more apt to beget and nouriſh ſuch a Confidence than the meltings and workings of our affections about ſpiritual things; for as a grave Divine hath well obſerved, ſuch a man ſeems to have all that is required of a Chriſtian, and to have attained the very end of all knowledg, which is operation and influence upon the affections. When they ſhall find heat in their affections, as well as light in their minds; how apt are they to ſay (as theſe ſelf-deceivers in the Text did) they are rich, and have need of nothing! Now of all the falſe ſigns of grace, by which men couzen themſelves, none are ſo dangerous and deſtructive to ſouls, as thoſe that come neareſt true ones: never doth Satan more effectually and ſecurely mannage his cheats, than when he is transformed into an Angel of light.

Mr. A. Burges.

Among this ſort of ſelf-deceivers, how many gifted men, and among that ſort ſome imployed in the office of the Miniſtry, will be found! whoſe daily imployment being about ſpiritual things, ſtudying, preaching, praying, &c. conclude themſelves ſanctified perſons, becauſe they are converſant about ſacred imployments, as if the Subject muſt be, becauſe the object is ſacred. Oh that ſuch would ſeriouſly ponder thoſe two Scriptures, Mat. 7. 22. Many will ſay unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied in thy name? and in thy name have caſt out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful things? and 1 Cor. 9. 27.——leaſt that by any means, when I have preached unto others, I my ſelf ſhould be caſt away.

4. Laſtly, To add here no more, this ſtrengthens ſelf-deceit exceedingly in many, viz. Their obſervations of and comparing themſelves with others. Thus the Phariſees, (thoſe groſs ſelf-deceivers) ceivers ) truſted in themſelves that they were righteous, and deſpiſed others, Luke 18. 9. their Low rating of others, gave them that high rate and value of themſelves: And thus the Proverb is made good, Regnat luſcus inter cæcos, he that hath but one Eye, is a King among the Blind.

Thus the falſe Apoſtles cheated and befool'd themſelves, 2 Cor. 10. 12. But they meaſuring themſelves by themſelves, and comparing themſelves among themſelves, are not wiſe. God hath not made one Man a Meaſure or Standard to another Man, but his Word is the common Beam or Scale to try all Men.

Theſe Men are as ſharp ſighted to note other Mens Evils, as their own Excellencies, to eye the Miſcarriages of others with Deriſion, and their own Performances with Admiration.

They bleſs themſelves when they behold the profane in their Impieties, Luke 18. 11. God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, Extortioners, Unjuſt, Adulterers, or even as this Publican, q. d. O what a Saint am I in compariſon of theſe Miſcreants! The Phariſees Religion you ſee runs all upon Nots; a negative Holineſs is enough to him; and the Meaſure he takes of it is by compariſon of himſelf, with others more externally vile than himſelf. A Chriſtian may ſay with Praiſe and Humility, I am not as ſome men are, but though he know nothing by himſelf, yet is he not thereby juſtified, 1 Cor. 4. 4. he neither rakes together the Enormities of the vileſt, or the Infirmities of the holieſt, to juſtifie and applaud himſelf as theſe Self-deceivers do. And theſe are the Cauſes and Occaſions of that general Deception, under which ſo great a Part of the profeſſing World bow down, and periſh.

SECT. IV.

3. IN the laſt Place I ſhall prove this Point variouſly according to the Importance and uſefulneſs of it, with as much Brevity and Cloſeneſs of Application as I can: And

Uſe 1. Shall be for Caution to Profeſſors; before I tell you what Uſe you ſhould make of it, I muſt tell you what Uſe you may not make of it.

Firſt, Don't make this Uſe of it, to conclude from what hath been ſaid, that all Profeſſors are but a Pack of Hypocrites, and that there is no Truth nor Integrity in any Man: This is both intolerable Arrogance to aſcend the Throne of God, and unparallel'd Uncharitableneſs to judge the Hearts of all Men.

Some Men are as apt to conclude others to be Hypocrites, by meaſuring their Hearts by their own, as others are to conclude themſelves Saints, by comparing their own Excellencies with other Mens Corruptions: but bleſſed be God there is ſome Grain among the Heap of Chaff, ſome true Diamonds among the counterfeit Stones. The Devil hath not the whole Piece; a remnant according to Election belongs really to the Lord.

2. Secondly, Don't make this Uſe of it, that Aſſurance muſt needs be impoſſible, becauſe ſo many Profeſſors are found to be Self-deceivers.

That Aſſurance is one of the great Difficulties in Religion, is a great Truth; but that it is therefore unattainable in this World, is very falſe. Popiſh Doctrine indeed makes it impoſſible, but that Doctrine is practically confuted in the comfortable Experience of many Souls: All are commanded to ſtrive for it: 2 Pet. 1. 10. Give Diligence to make your Calling and Election ſure: And ſome have the Happineſs to obtain it: 2 Tim. 1. 12. For I know whom I have believed, and I am perſwaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him againſt that Day.

Let the Similar Works upon Hypocrites reſemble as much as they will the ſaving Works of the Spirit upon Believers; yet God doth always, and the Saints do ſometimes plainly diſcern the Difference.

3. Thirdly, Don't make this Uſe of it, to conceal and hide the Truths or Graces of God, or refuſe to profeſs, and confeſs them before Men, becauſe many Profeſſors deceive them ſelves and others alſo by a vain Profeſſion; becauſe another profeſſeth what he hath not, muſt you therefore hide or deny what you have? 'Tis true, the Poſſeſſion of Grace and Truth in your own Souls is that which ſaves you; but the Profeſſion and Confeſſion of it, is that which honours God, and edifies; yea, ſometimes is the Inſtrument to ſave others: It's your Comfort that you feel it, it's others Comfort to know that you do ſo. Oſtentation is your Sin, but a ſerious and humble Profeſſion is your Duty, Rom. 10. 9.

SECT. V.

Uſe 2. HAving ſhewed you in the former Section what Uſe you ought not to make of this Doctrine, I will next ſhew you what Uſe you ought to make of it; and ſurely you cannot improve this Point to a better purpoſe than from it to take Warning, and look to your ſelves, that you be not of that Number who deceive themſelves in their Profeſſion. If this be ſo, ſuffer me cloſely to preſs that great Apoſtolical Caution, 1 Cor. 10. 12. Let him that thinks he ſtands, take heed leſt he fall. O Profeſſors, look carefully to your Foundation; be not high minded, but fear: You have it may be done and ſuffered many things in and for Religion; you have excellent Gifts, and ſweet Comforts, a warm Zeal for God, and high Confidence of your Integrity; all this may be right ( for ought I or ( it may be ) you know ) but yet 'tis poſſible it may be falſe alſo; you have ſometimes judged your ſelves, and pronounced your ſelves upright; but remember your final Sentence is not yet pronounced by your Judge. And what if God weigh you over again in his more equal Ballance, and ſhould ſay Mene tekel, thou art weighed in the Ballance, and art found wanting; What a confounded Man wilt thou be under ſuch a Sentence! Quæ ſplendent in conſpectu hominis, ſordent in conſpectu Judicis; Things that are highly eſteemed of Men, are an Abomination in the Sight of God; he ſeeth not as Man ſeeth.

Thy Heart may be falſe, and thou not know it; yea, it may be falſe, and thou ſtrongly confident of its Integrity.

The Saints may approve thee, and God condemn thee, Rev. 3. 1. Thou haſt a Name that thou liveſt, but thou art dead: Men may ſay, There's a true Nathanael, and God may ſay, There's a ſelf-couzening Phariſee.

Reader, thou haſt heard of Judas and Demas; of Ananias and Saphira, of Hymeneus and Philetus; once renowned and famous Profeſſors, and thou haſt heard what they proved at laſt.

Take heed their Caſe be not thine own; do they not all as it were with one Mouth cry to thee, O Profeſſor! If thou wilt not come where we are, don't couzen thy ſelf as we did: If thou expecteſt a better Place and Lot, be ſure thou get a ſincerer Heart: Had we been more ſelf-ſuſpicious, we had been more ſafe.

I would not ſcare you with needleſs Jealouſies, but I would fain prevent fatal Miſtakes. Don't you find your Hearts deceitful in many things? Don't they ſhuffle over ſecret Duties? Don't they cenſure the ſame Evils in others, which they ſcarce reprove in your ſelves? Are there not many by-ends in Duties? Don't you find they are far leſs affected with a great deal of Service and Honour done to God by others, than with a little by your ſelves?

Is it not hard to look upon other Mens Excellencies without Envy, or upon your own without Pride?

And are you not troubled with a buſie Devil, as well as with a bad Heart? Hath not he that circuits the whole World, obſerved you? Hath he not ſtudied your Conſtitution Sins, and found out that Sin which moſt eaſily beſets you? Hath he leſs Malice againſt your Souls than others? Surely you are in the very Thick of Temptations; thouſands of Snares are round about you. Oh how difficultly are the Righteous ſaved! How hard to be upright! How few even of the profeſſing World win Heaven at laſt!

O therefore ſearch your Hearts, Profeſſors, and let this Caution go down to your very Reins; let him that thinks he ſtands, take heed leſt he fall.

Away with raſh uncharitable Cenſures of others, and be more juſt and ſevere in cenſuring your ſelves. Away with dry and unprofitable Controverſies, and ſpend your Thoughts upon this great Queſtion, Am I ſound, or am I rotten at Heart? Am I a new Creature, or an old Creature ſtill, in a new Creatures Dreſs and Habit? Beg the Lord that you be not deceived in that great Point (your Integrity) whatever you may be miſtaken in. Pray that you be not given up to an heedleſs, careleſs, and vain Spirit, and then have Religious Duties for a Rattle to ſtill and quiet your Conſciences.

Surely that Ground-work can never be laid too ſure, upon which ſo great a ſtreſs as thy Soul and Eternity muſt depend. It will not repent thee (I dare promiſe) when thou comeſt to die, that thou haſt employed thy Time and Strength to this End: Whileſt others are panting after the Duſt of the Earth, and ſaying, Who will ſhew us any Good? be thou panting after the Aſſurance of the Love of God, and crying, Who will ſhew me how to make my Calling and Election ſure?

O deceive not your ſelves with Names and Notions! Think not, becauſe you are for a ſtricter Way of Worſhip, or becauſe you aſſociate with (and are accordingly denominated) one of the more reformed Profeſſors; that therefore you are ſafe enough: Alas! How ſmall an intereſt have Titles, Modes, and Denominations in Religion? Suppoſe a curious Artiſt take a Lump of Lead and refine it, and caſt it into the Mould; whence it comes forth ſhining, and bearing ſome noble Figure, ſuppoſe of an Eagle, yet it is but a leaden Eagle. Suppoſe the Figure of a Man, and that in the moſt exact Lineaments and Proportions, yet ſtill is it but a leaden Man. Nay, let it bear the Figure of an Angel, it is but a leaden Angel: For the baſe and ignoble Matter is the ſame it was, though the Figure be not. Even ſo, Take an unregenerate carnal Man, let his Life be reformed, and his Tongue refined; and call him a zealous Conformiſt, or a ſtrict Non-conformiſt; call him a Presbyterian, an Independant, or what you will; he is all the while but a carnal Conformiſt, or Non-conformiſt; an unregenerate Presbyterian, a carnal Independant; for the Nature is ſtill the ſame, though the ſtamp and Figure his Profeſſion gives him, be not the ſame.

O my Friends, believe it, fine Names, and brave Words, are of little value with God. God will no more ſpare you for theſe, than Samuel did Agag for his delicate Ornaments, and ſpruce Appearance: Either make ſure the Root of the Matter, or the leaves of a vain Profeſſion will not long cover you.

To be deceived by another is bad enough, but to deceive our ſelves is a thouſand Times worſe.

To deceive our ſelves in Truths of the Superſtructure is bad, and they that do ſo ſhall ſuffer loſs; 1 Cor. 3. 12. But to deceive our ſelves in the Foundation is a deſperate Deceit, and ſhipwracks all our Hope and Happineſs at once.

If any Man loſe his Money by a cheat it troubles him, but to loſe his Soul by a cheat will confound him: If a Man loſe an Eye, an Ear, a Hand, a Foot; yet omnia Deus dedit duplicia, as Chryſoſtome ſpeaks; God hath given theſe Members double; ſo that there's another left; animam vero unam; but the Soul is one, and only one, and if that be damned, you have not another to be ſaved.

O therefore be reſtleſs till it be, and till you know it be out of eternal Danger.

SECT. VI.

Uſe 3. IN Concluſion, If ſo many Profeſſors of Religion be cheated in their Profeſſion, let all that are well ſatisfied and aſſured of their Integrity bleſs the Lord whil'ſt they live, for that Mercy. O 'tis a Mercy that no unſanctified Soul can have; yea, and it's a Mercy that many gracious Souls cannot obtain, though they ſeek it with Tears; and would part with all the pleaſant Things they have in the World to enjoy it.

This is that Mercy that gives Souls the higheſt Pleaſures this World is acquainted with, or the State of this Mortality can bear: For let the well aſſured Soul but conſider what it is aſſured of: Chriſt with the Purchaſes of his Blood. O what is this! I am my beloveds, and my Beloved is mine, Cant. 2. 16. what a vital raviſhing overpowering Efficacy is in that Voice of Faith! Let it but look back a few Years, and compare what it was with what it is: It was afar off, it's now made nigh, Epheſ. 2. 12, 13. It was not beloved, but is now beloved, Rom. 25. 26. it had not obtained Mercy, but now hath obtained Mercy, 1 Pet. 2. 10. or let the aſſured Soul look forward and compare what it now is, and hath, with what it ſhortly ſhall be made, and put in Poſſeſſion of: Beloved (ſaith the Apoſtle) now are we the Sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we ſhall be: But we know that when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is, 1 John 3. 2.

I ſay let the aſſured Soul but ſteep its thoughts by meditation in theſe ſubjects, and it as impoſſible to keep him from his tranſports of Joy, as it is for a Man to forbear laughing when he is tickled.

O what a life have you in compariſon of other Men? Some have two Hells, one preſent, another coming; you have two Heavens; one in hand, the other in hope. Some of your own Brethren in Chriſt, that have been it may be many years panting after aſſurance, are ſtill denyed it; but God hath indulged ſo peculiar a favour to you. Bleſs ye the Lord, and make his praiſe glorious.

CHAP. III.

Containing the Proof and Improvement of Doct. 2. That true Grace is exceeding precious, and greatly enricheth the Soul that hath it: It's Chriſts Gold.

SECT. I. THE Lord Jeſus here chooſeth the moſt pure, precious, reſplendent, durable, and valuable thing, in all the Treaſuries and magazines of Nature, to ſhadow forth ſaving Grace, which is infinitely more excellent: certainly that muſt be the beſt thing, which the beſt things in Nature can but imperfectly ſhadow forth. What was the golden Oyl emptied through the two Golden pipes, Zech. 4. 12. but the precious Graces of God, flowing through Chriſt, into all his Members! Gold is precious, but one drachm of ſaving grace is more precious than all the Gold of Ophir. It cannot be gotten for gold, neither ſhall ſilver be weighed for the price thereof, Job 28. 15. Surely Gold and Silver, Saphires, Diamonds and Rubies are not worth the mentioning, when ſaving Grace is once mentioned. For Conſider it,

1. Firſt, In its cauſe, and fountain from whence it flows; and you ſhall find it to be the fruit of the Spirit, Gal. 5. 22. Who upon that accompt is called the Spirit of Grace, Heb. 10. 29. It derives its original from the moſt high; it is Spirit born of Spirit, John 3. 6. All the rules of Morality, all humane diligence and induſtry can never Produce one gracious habit or act alone, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are ſufficient of our ſelves, &c.

Nay, we ſpeak not becoming the incomparable Worth of Grace, when we ſay, it is the Fruit and Birth of the Spirit; for ſo are common Gifts alſo. There are ſeveral Emanations from this Sun, divers ſtreams from this Fountain; but of all his operations and productions, this of ſaving grace is the moſt noble and excellent. Gifts are from the Spirit as well as Grace, but grace is more excellent than the beſt gifts, 1 Cor. 12. 31. Covet earneſtly the beſt gifts, and yet ſhew I unto you a more excellent way. Hence you read in Phil. 1. 10. Of things that are excellent, or as the original, τὰ διαφέροντα might be rendred, things that differ. Namely, in reſpect of excellency; not as good and evil, but as leſs good, and more good differ. Gifts have their value and preciouſneſs, but the beſt gifts differ as much from grace, as Braſs from Gold; though both be generated by the influence of the ſame Sun. Gifts (as one ſaith) are dead Graces, but Graces are living Gifts: It is the moſt excellent production of the higheſt and moſt excellent cauſe.

2. Secondly, Conſider it in its Nature, and you will find it Divine, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Partakers of the Divine Nature, viz. in our Sanctification: not that it gives us the Properties of the Divine Nature, they are incommunicable; but the ſimilitude, and reſemblance of it is ſtamped upon our Souls, in the Work of Grace.

The new man is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him, Col. 3. 10. The Schoolmen and ſome of the Fathers place this image or reſemblance of God, in the natural faculties of the ſoul, viz. the underſtanding, memory and will; which is an umbrage of a Trinity in Unity: but it rather conſiſts in the renovation of the Faculties by grace; for in this we bear the Divine Image upon our Souls, and that Image or Reſemblance of God in holineſs, is the beauty and honour of our Souls.

It is their beauty, How fair, and how pleaſant art thou, O love, for delights! ſaith Chriſt of his People, Cant. 7. 6. Natural Beauty conſiſts in the Symmetry, and comely proportion of parts each with other; Spiritual beauty in the harmony or agreeableneſs of our ſouls to God: And as it is our chiefeſt beauty, ſo certainly it is our higheſt honour; for it gives us acceſs unto God, who is the Fountain of Honour and Glory; and this makes the righteous more excellent than his Neighbour; let his Neighbour be what he will, tho' the blood of Nobles run in his Veins, the righteous is more excellent than he; except ſaving grace be alſo diffuſed into his Soul.

3. Thirdly, Conſider it in its recipient ſubject, and you will find its value ſtill to increaſe: For the precious oyl of Saving Grace is never poured into any other than an elect veſſel.

Hence Faith, one branch of ſanctification, is with reſpect to its ſubject, ſtiled the Faith of Gods Elect, Tit. 1. 1. Whoſoever finds true grace in his Soul, may (during the evidence thereof) from it ſtrongly conclude his Election, looking backward, and his Salvation looking forward, Rom. 8. 30. It marks and ſeals the Perſon in whom it is for Glory. God hath ſet apart him that is godly for himſelf, Pſal. 4. 3.

4. Fourthly, View the precious worth of grace in its excellent effects and influences upon the Soul, in which it inheres.

(1.) It adorns it with incomparable Ornaments, which are of great price in the ſight of God, 1 Pet. 3. 4. yea it reflects ſuch beams of Glory in the ſoul where its ſeat is, that Chriſt himſelf the Author, is alſo the Admirer of it, Cant. 4. 9. Thou haſt raviſhed my heart, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe; thou haſt raviſhed my heart, with one of thine eyes, with one of the chains of thy neck. And as one overcome with its excelling beauty, he ſaith, Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have overcome me, Cant. 6. 5.

(2.) It Elevates and ennobles a Mans Spirit beyond all other principles in Man. It ſets the heart and affections upon Heaven, and takes them up with the glory of the inviſible World, Phil. 3. 20. But our Converſation is in Heaven, from whence we look for a Saviour. Whilſt others are trading for Corn, and Wine; for Sheep and Oxen; for Feathers and Trifles; the gracious Soul is trading with God for pardon and peace; for Righteouſneſs and Life; for Glory and Immortality.

lity. Truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Chriſt Jeſus, 1 John 1. 3.

(3.) It doth not only raiſe the Spirit by Converſing with God, and Things above; but transforms the Soul, by that Converſe, into the Likeneſs of thoſe heavenly Objects it converſeth with. It changeth them into the ſame Image, 2 Cor. 3. 18. ſo that though the ſanctified Man ſtill remains the who he was, yet not the what he was before, the very temper of his Spirit is altered.

(4.) It doth not only transform the Soul in which it is, but preſerves the Subject in which it is: It is a ſingular Preſervative from Sin; ſo that though Sin be in them ſtill, and works in them ſtill; yet it cannot prevail in them ſtill to fulfill the Luſts of it, as it was want to do, Gal. 5. 17. Sin conceives, but cannot bring forth Fruit unto Death; this gives it a miſcarrying Womb.

(5.) It doth not only preſerve it from Sin, but Grace eſtabliſheth the Soul in whom it is, far beyond any other Arguments without, or any other Principles within a Man. It is a good thing that the Heart be eſtabliſhed with Grace, Heb. 13. 9. This is that which the Apoſtle calls our own Stedfaſtneſs; or that Ballaſt we have within our ſelves; which keeps us tite and ſtable. O the Excellencies of Grace!

(6.) To conclude, it is the Root of all that precious Fruit which we bring forth to God in this World. It is the Root of every gracious Word in our Lips, and of every gracious Work in our Hands: Be the Matter of our gracious Thoughts never ſo excellent, the Matter of our heavenly Diſcourſes and Prayers never ſo ſweet; ſtill Grace is the Root of the Matter; Job 19. 28. O then what a precious thing is Grace!

5. Fifthly, View it in its Properties, and you will ſoon diſcover its tranſcendent Excellencies: The richeſt Epithets are no Hyperboles here, we ſpeak not byond the Value of it, when we call it Supernatural Grace, for ſo it is. It comes down from above, from the Father of Lights, Jam. 1. 17. Nature can never be improved to that Height, how much ſoever its Admirers boaſt of it: Nor do we ſtrain too high, when we call it Immortal Grace; for ſo hath God made it: This is that Water which ſprings up in the ſanctified Soul into eternal Life, John 4. 14. It will not dye when thou dieſt, but aſcend with the Soul from which it is inſeparable; and be ſwallowed up with it into Glory, Rom. 8. 10. you may out-live your Friends, you may out-live your Eſtates, you may out-live your Gifts; but you can't out-live your Graces.

Shall I ſay, it is the moſt ſweet and comfortable Thing that ever the Soul was acquainted with in this World, next Jeſus Chriſt, the Author and Fountain of it? Sure if I ſo ſpeak, I have as many Witneſſes to atteſt it, as there be gracious Souls in the World: Nothing is more comfortable than Grace, except Chriſt, and yet without Grace no Soul can feel the Comforts of Chriſt, in the Troubles of Life, or in the Straits of Death: This is a Spring of Comfort.

6. Sixthly, Conſider it in its Deſign and Scope; and you will ſtill diſcern more and more of its precious Excellency: For what is the Aim and End of God in the Infuſions and Improvements of Grace, but to attemper and mould our Spirits by it, into a Meetneſs and Fitneſs for the Enjoyment of himſelf in the World to come? Col. 1. 12. Giving Thanks to the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light: Compare this with 2 Cor. 5. 5. Now he that hath wrought us for the ſelf-ſame Thing is God.

O bleſſed Deſign! How precious muſt that Work be, which is wrought for ſo high and glorious a purpoſe as this is! No Work more excellent, no End more noble.

7. Seventhly, Conſider the Means and Inſtruments, both principal, and ſubordinate, imployed in this Work: Many bleſſed Inſtruments are ſet on Work to beget, conſerve, and improve it in our Souls: And theſe all ſpeak the precious Worth of it: No wiſe Man will dig for a baſe and worthleſs Metal with golden Mattocks. The Blood of Chriſt was ſhed to procure it, Heb. 13. 12.

The Spirit of God is ſent forth to form and create it; for it is his own Workmanſhip, Epheſ. 2. 10. his Fruit, Gal. 5. 22.

The Ordinances and Officers of the Goſpel were at firſt inſtituted, and ever ſince continued in the Church, for this works ſake, John 17. 17. and Eph. 4. 12. it's the Fruit of Chriſt's Blood; yea, and it hath coſt the Sweat and Blood of the Diſpenſers of the Goſpel too.

Nay, all the Works of Providence look this Way, and aim at this thing, Rom. 8. 28. What is the errand of all God's Rods, but to make us Partakers of his Holineſs? Heb. 12. 10.

8. Eighthly, The high value that the moſt high God ſets upon Grace, ſhews it to be an excellent Thing indeed: It is of great Price in his ſight, 1 Pet. 3. 4. no Service finds Acceptation with God, but what is performed by Grace: None but ſanctified Veſſels, are meet for the Maſters Uſe. The End of the Commandment is Charity, out of a pure Heart, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

The weakeſt Performances of Grace find Acceptance with him, though clog'd with many ſinfull Weakneſſes and Infirmities, Heb. 11. 31, 32. If God ſo prize it, well may we: He that made the Jewel, beſt underſtands the value of it.

9. Ninthly, The Hypocritical Pretences made to it all over the Profeſſing World, ſhew what a moſt precious and deſirable Thing it is: If there were not ſome ſingular Glory in it, why doth every one covet to be reputed gracious? Nay, the Devil himſelf baits many of his Hooks of Temptation with a ſhew of Grace; For he knows Sin hath no native Beauty of its own to entice; and therefore he borrows the Paint and Pretence of Holineſs, to cover it: But O what a Dilemma will the Hypocrite be poſed with at laſt? And how can he anſwer it when God ſhall demand,

If Grace were evil, why didſt thou ſo affect the Name and Reputation of it? And if it were good, why didſt thou ſatisfie thy ſelf with the empty Name and Shadow of it only?

10. Tenthly, To conclude; The incomparable Eſteem that all good men have for it, ſhews it to be a Thing of ineſtimable Price.

Grace is the Sum of all their Prayers, the Scope of all their Endeavours, the Matter of their chief Joy, the Reward of their Afflictions and Sufferings. Their chief Joys and Sorrows, Hopes and Fears in this World, are taken up about it: By all which it appears that its Price is above Rubies; and all the Gold and Silver in the World are but dung and droſs in Compariſon with it.

SECT.

SECT. II.

Containing ſix practical Inferences from this precious Truth.

Infer. 1. Is ſaving Grace more precious than Gold? Let them that have it bleſs God for it, and not boaſt: Mens Hearts are as apt to puff up and ſwell with ſpiritual, as with material Gold: It's hard to be an Owner of much of this Gold, and not be lifted up with it. To keep down thy Heart, and preſerve thine Eyes from being dazled with theſe their gracious Excellencies; it will be needful for thee Chriſtian ſometime to conſider,

That altho' Grace be one of the moſt excellent Things that ever God created, yet it is but a Creature, a dependent Thing, 1 Cor. 5. 17.

Yea it is not only a Creature, but a very imperfect Creature yet in thy Soul; labouring under many Weakneſſes, Phil. 3. 12. and ſometimes ready to die, Rev. 3. 2.

Though it can do many things for you, yet it cannot juſtifie you before God: You cannot make a Garment of it to cover your Guilt, nor plead the Dignity of it at God's Bar for your Diſcharge; 'tis not your inherent, but Chriſt's imputed Righteouſneſs muſt do that for you; though in other Reſpects it be very neceſſary.

Nay, remember; how excellent ſoever it be, it's not the native Growth and Product of your Hearts; all the Grace you have is foraign to your Natures, and what you have, is received, 1 Cor. 4. 7.

And Laſtly, Remember he that is moſt proud and conceited of his own Graces, will be found to be the Owner of leaſt Grace, and hath moſt Cauſe to Queſtion, whether he have any or no. It's the Nature of Grace to humble, abaſe and empty the Soul; and it's the Strength of our Corruptions which thus puffs us up with vain Conceits.

Infer. 2. Is ſaving Grace more excellent than Gold? What Cauſe then have the poorest Chriſtians to be well ſatisfied with their Lot? To others God hath given Iſhmael's Portion, the Fatneſs of the Earth; to you Iſaac's, the Graces of the Covenant: Their Portion is paid in Braſs, yours in Gold: Many of you are poor in the World, but rich in Faith; and Heirs of the Kingdom which God hath promiſed, Jam. 2. 5. what is the Duſt of the Earth, to the Fruits of the Spirit? You are troubled that you have no more of the World; it may be if you had more Gold, you would have leſs Grace: You conſider not how many are poor and wretched in both Worlds; Monyleſs, and Chriſtleſs too: You don't conſider you are near come to that State, in which all your Wants will be fully ſupply'd; where you ſhall not need the Treaſures of the Earth, and have your Deſires ſatisfied out of the Treaſures of Grace and Glory.

Infer. 3. Is ſaving Grace Gold, yea, infinitely more precious than Gold? Then ſurely declining Chriſtians are great Loſers, and have Cauſe to be great Mourners. The Remiſſion of the leaſt Degree of Grace, is more to be lamented than the loſs of the greateſt Sum of Gold.

Though the Habits of Grace be not loſt; yet the Acts of Grace may be ſuſpended, 2 Sam. 12. 31. The Degrees of Grace may be remitted, Rev. 3. 3. The Evidences of Grace may be clouded, and conſequently the Comforts of Grace may be ſuſpended, Iſa. 50. 10. and the leaſt of theſe is ſuch a Loſs, as all the Treaſures of the Earth cannot repair: Well therefore may declined Chriſtians challenge the firſt Place among all the Mourners in the World.

Infer. 4. Is Grace ſo invaluably precious? How precious then ought the Ordinances of God to be to our Souls, by which Grace is firſt communicated, and afterwards improved in our Souls! The Law of thy Mouth is better unto me than thouſands of Gold and Silver, Pſal. 119. 72. and good Reaſon, whilſt it imparts and improves that to which Gold and Silver is but droſs and dung.

None but thoſe that value not Grace, will ever ſlight the Means, or deſpiſe and injure the Inſtruments thereof. It's a ſad Sign of a graceleſs World, when theſe precious Things fall under Contempts and Slights.

Infer. 5. If Grace be ſo precious, how watchful ſhould all gracious Perſons be in the Daies of Temptation! The Deſign of Temptation is to rob you of your Treaſure: When Cut-purſes get into the Croud, we uſe to ſay; Friends, look to your Purſes. How many brave Criſtians have we read and heard of, that have rather choſen to part with their Lives, than with their Graces, who have reſiſted unto Blood, ſtriving againſt Sin? Heb. 12. 4.

O Chriſtians, you live in a cheating Age, many ſeeming Chriſtians have loſt all, and many real Chriſtians have loſt much, ſo much, that they are like to ſee but little Comfort in this World: Who are like to go Mourning to the Grave with that Lamentation, Job 29. 2, 3. O that it were with me as in times paſt!

Inf. 6. To conclude. Is there ſuch precious worth in ſaving Grace? Then bleſs God for, and diligently uſe all Means to increaſe and improve it in your Souls. It's Gold for Preciouſneſs, and for Uſefulneſs; and muſt not be laid up in a Napkin: That's a Sin condemned by the very Scope of that Parable, Mat. 25. 14, 15, &c.

All Chriſtians indeed have not the ſame Advantages of Improvement, but all muſt improve it according to the Advantages they have in Order to an Account. Reſerved Chriſtians who live too abſtracted from the Society and Communion of others, and diſperſe not their Streams abroad to the Benefit of others; nor improve the Graces of others for their own Benefit, are wanting both to their own Duty and Comfort. See you a Man rich in Grace; O trade with him if you can, to improve your ſelves by him; and the rather, becauſe you know not how ſoon Death may ſnatch him from you, and with him all his Stock of Grace is gone from you too, except what you made your own whilſt you converſed with him: But alas, alas! inſtead of holy profitable Soul-improving Communion, ſome are ſullenly reſerved; ſome are negligent and lazy; ſome are litigious and wrangling; more apt to draw forth the Droſs, than the Gold; I mean the Corruptions, than Graces of others. And how few there be that drive a profitable Trade for increaſe of Grace, is ſad to conſider.

And as Grace is not improved by Communion with Men, ſo I doubt moſt Chriſtians thrive but little in their Communion with God: We are too ſeldom in our Cloſets, too little upon our Knees, and when we are there, we gain but little, we come not off ſuch Gainers by Duty as we might.

O

O Chriſtians, think when you are hearing and praying, I am now trading with Heaven for that which is infinitely better than Gold. God is rich to all that call upon him, what a treaſure may I get this hour, if the fault be not in mine own heart? And thus of the ſecond Obſervation.

CHAP. IV.

Wherein the Third Doctrine, being the main ſubject of this Treatiſe is opened, and the method of the whole diſcourſe ſtated.

Doct. 3. That only is to be accounted true Grace which is able to endure all thoſe tryals appointed or permitted for the diſcovery of it.

SECT. I. THE moſt wiſe God hath ſeen it fit to ſet all his people in a ſtate of tryal in this world. Firſt, He tryes, and then he Crowns them, James 1. 12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation πειρασμὸν, (i. e.) probation or tryal ] for when he is tryed, he ſhall receive the crown of life: &c.

No man can ſay what he is, whether his graces be true or falſe, till they be tryed and examined by thoſe things which are to them as fire is to gold. Theſe ſelf-deceivers in the Text, thought they had grace; yea they thought they had been rich in grace; but it proved no better than droſs: And therefore Chriſt here counſels them to buy of him gold tryed in the fire, (i. e.) true grace indeed, which appears to be ſo upon the various proofs and examinations of its ſincerity, which are to be made in this world, as well as in the great ſolemn tryal it muſt come to in the world to come.

The Scriptures ſpeak of a twofold tryal, viz.

A tryal of Mens { Opinions and Graces.

1. Firſt, The Opinions and Judgments of men are tryed as by fire, in which ſenſe we are to underſtand that place, 1 Cor. 3. 12, 13. Now if any man build upon this foundation, Gold, Silver, precious ſtones; wood, hay, ſtubble! every mans work ſhall be made manifeſt for the day ſhall declare it, becauſe it ſhall be revealed by fire, and the fire ſhall try every mans work of what ſort it is.

This text ſpeaks of ſuch perſons as hold the foundation of Chriſtianity, but yet ſuperſtructed ſuch Doctrines and practices, as were no more able to endure the Tryal, than Hay, Wood, or ſtubble can endure the fire. Such a perſon hereby brings himſelf into danger, nd though the Apoſtle will not deny the poſſibility, yet he aſſerts the difficulty of his ſalvation: he ſhall be ſaved, yet ſo as by fire, (i. e.) as a man is ſaved by leaping out of his houſe at midnight, when it is all on fire about his ears: r ſo that phraſe imports Amos 4. 11. and Jude 3. Glad to eſcape naked, and with the loſs of s goods, bleſſing God, he hath his life for a ey: as little regard ſhall ſuch have to their er- neous notions, and unſcriptural opinions at t.

Quo ex judicio ve- t ex incendio nu- lus effugit. Chry- ſt.

2. Secondly, The graces of men are brought to e teſt as well as their Opinions. Tryal will be made of their hearts, as well as of their heads; and upon this tryal the everlaſting ſafety and happineſs of the Perſon depends: If a mans opinions be ſome of them found hay or ſtubble, yet ſo long as he holds the head, and is right in the foundation, he may be ſaved; but if a mans ſuppoſed graces be found ſo, all the world cannot ſave him: there is no way of eſcape if he finally deceive himſelf herein: and of this tryal of Graces my text ſpeaks: Sincere Grace is Gold tryed by fire.

There is a twofold tryal of grace, Active, and Paſſive.

Firſt, An Active tryal of it, in which we try it our ſelves, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves, prove your ſelves: (i. e.) meaſure your hearts, duties and graces by the rule of the word; ſee how they anſwer to that rule, bring your Hearts and the Word together by ſolemn ſelf-examination: confer with your reins, and commune with your own hearts.

Secondly, A Paſſive tryal of it: whether we try it or no, God will try it, he will bring our gold to the touchſtone, and to the fire. Thou O Lord knoweſt me, thou haſt ſeen me and tryed mine heart towards thee, ſaith the Prophet, Jer. 12. 3.

Sometimes he tryes the ſtrength and ability of his ſervants graces, and thus he tryed Abraham, Heb. 11: 17. and ſometimes he trys the ſoundneſs and ſincerity of our graces, ſo the Epheſian Angel was tryed and found droſs, Rev. 2. 2. And ſo Job was tryed and found true gold, Job 23. 10. Theſe tryals are not made by God for his own information, for he knows what is in man, his eyes pierce his Heart and Reins; but for our information, which is the true ſence of Deut. 8. 2. Thou ſhalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee theſe fourty years in the Wilderneſs, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thy heart, (i.e.) to make thee know it, by giving thee ſuch experiments and tryals of it in thoſe wilderneſs ſtraits and difficulties.

And theſe are the tryals of grace I am here to ſpeak of, not excluding the Active tryals made by our ſelves; no, no, all theſe tryals made by God upon us, are deſigned to put us upon the tryal of our ſelves: When God trys, we ſhould try too.

Now the method into which I ſhall caſt this diſcourſe ſhall be to ſhew you,

1. Firſt, What thoſe things are which try the ſincerity of our Graces, as fire tryes Gold.
2. Secondly, For what ends doth God put the graces of his people upon ſuch tryals in this world.
3. Thirdly, That ſuch grace only is ſincere as can endure theſe tryals.
4. Fourthly and Laſtly, To apply the whole, in the main uſes of it.

SECT. II.

1. Firſt, W*HAT thoſe things are which try the ſincerity of grace, as fire tryes gold.*

Before I enter into Particulars, it will be needful to acquaint you, that the ſubject before me is full of difficulties. There is need (as one ſpeaks) of much cautious reſpect to the various ſizes and degrees of growth among Chriſtians, and the viciſſitudes of their inward caſe: elſe we may darken and perplex the way inſtead of clearing it.

The pourtraicture of a Chriſtian is ſuch as none can draw to one Model, but with reſpect to the infan- cy of ſome, as well as the Age and Strength of others.

Great heed alſo ought to be had in the Application of Marks and Signs, we ſhould firſt try them, before we try our ſelves, or others by them. Marks and Signs are by ſome diſtinguiſhed into excluſive, incluſive, and poſitive : Excluſive Marks ſerve to ſhut out bold Pretenders, by ſhewing them how far they come ſhort of a ſaving Work of Grace, and they are commonly taken from ſome neceſſary common Duty, as hearing, praying, &c. he that doth not theſe Things, cannot have any Work of Grace in him ; and yet if he do them, he cannot from thence conclude his eſtate to be gracious : He that ſo concludes deceives himſelf.

Incluſive Marks rather diſcover the Degrees, than the Truth of Grace, and are rather intended for Comfort than for Conviction : If we find them in our ſelves, we do not only find Sincerity, but Eminency of Grace : They being taken from ſome raiſed degree and eminent Acts of Grace in confirmed and grown Chriſtians.

Betwixt the two former there is a middle Sort of Marks, which are called poſitive Marks, and they are ſuch as are always and only found in regenerate Souls. The Hypocrite hath them not, the grown Chriſtian hath them, and that in an eminent Degree, the pooreſt Chriſtian hath them in a lower but ſaving Degree : Great Care muſt be taken in the Application of them. And it's paſt doubt that many Weak and injudicious Chriſtians have been greatly prejudiced by finding the Experiences of eminent Chriſtians propoſed as Rules to meaſure their Sincerity by. Alas! theſe no more fit their Souls, than Sauls Armour did Davids Body.

Theſe Things being premiſed, and a due care carried along with us through this Diſcourſe ; I ſhall next come to the Particulars, and ſhew you what thoſe Things are which diſcover the State and Tempers of our Souls. And though it be true, that there is no Condition we are in, no Providence that befals us, but it takes ſome Proof, and makes ſome Diſcovery of our Hearts: Yet to limit this Diſcourſe, and fall into Particulars as ſoon as we can, I ſhall ſhew what Tryals are made of our Graces in this World, by our Proſperity, and our Adverſity, by our Corruptions, and our Duties : And laſtly by our Sufferings upon the Score and Account of Religion.

SECT. III.

Firſt, Proſperity, Succeſs, and the Increaſe of outward Enjoyments, are to Grace what Fire is to Gold. Riches and Honours make Tryal what we are, and by theſe things many a falſe Heart hath been detected, as well as the Sincerity and Eminency of others Graces diſcovered. We may fancy the Fire of Proſperity to be rather for Comfort than Tryal ; to refreſh us rather than to prove us ; but you will find Proſperity to be a great Diſcovery; and that ſcarce any thing proves the Truth and Strength of Mens Graces and Corruptions more than it doth : Rara virtus eſt humilitas honorata, ſaid Bernard, to find Humility with Honour is to find a Phœnix ; let an obſcure perſon be lifted up to Honour, and how ſteady and well-compoſed ſoever he was before, it's a thouſand to one but this Eyes will dazle, and his Head run round when he is upon the lofty Pinacle of Praiſe and Honour : Prov. 27. 21. As the fining Pot for Silver, and the Furnace for Gold ; ſo is a Man to his Praiſe : Put the beſt Gold into the fining Pot of Praiſe, and it's a great Wonder if a great Deal of Droſs do not appear, Iſa. 39. 2. the vain Glory of good Hezekiah roſe like a Froth or Scum upon the Pot, when heated by Proſperity. It was ſuch a fining Pot to Herod as diſcovered him to be droſs it ſelf, Acts 12. 23. How did that poor Worm ſwell under that Tryal into the Conceit of a God ? And was juſtly deſtroyed by Worms, becauſe he forgat himſelf to be one: We little think what a ſtrange Alteration an exalted Eſtate will make upon our Spirits. When the Prophet would abate the vain Confidence of Hazael, who could not believe that ever he ſhould be turned into ſuch a ſalvage Beaſt as the Prophet had foretold : He only tells him, The Lord hath ſhewed me that thou ſhalt be King over Syria, 2 King. 8. 13. The Meaning is, don't be too confident, Hazael, that thy Temper and Diſpoſition can never alter to that Degree, Thou never yet ſateſt in a Throne; when men ſee the Crown upon thy Head, then they will better ſee the true Temper of thy Heart.

Magiſtratus indicat virum.

How humble was Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, tame and tractable in a lean Paſture ; but bring them once into Canaan, and the World is ſtrangely altered ; then, we are Lords, ſay they, we will come no more unto thee, Jer. 2. 2, 7, 31. Proſperity is a Criſis both to Grace and Corruption. Thence is that Caution to Iſrael, Deut. 10. 11, 12. When thou haſt eaten, and art full, Then beware leſt thou forget the Lord thy God. Then beware, that's the Critical Time ; ſurely that man muſt be acknowledged rich, very rich in Grace, whoſe Grace ſuffers no Diminution or Eclipſe by his Riches ; and that Man deſerves double Honour, whoſe Pride the Honours of this World cannot provoke and inflame.

It was a ſad Truth from the Lips of a pious divine in Germany upon his Death-bed ; being ſomewhat diſconſolate by reflecting upou the Barrenneſs of his Life : Some Friends took thence an Occaſion to commend him; and mind him of his painful Miniſtry, and fruitful Life among them ; but he cryed out, Auferte ignem, adhuc enim paleas habeo ; Withdraw the Fire, for I have Chaff in me ; meaning that he felt his Ambition like Chaff catching Fire from the Sparkles of their Praiſes : like unto which was the ſaying of another, He that praiſeth me, wounds me.

But to deſcend into the particular Diſcoveries that Proſperity and Honour make of the Want of Grace in ſome, and of the Weakneſs of Grace in others : I will ſhew you what Symptomes of Hypocriſie appear upon ſome Men under the Tryals of Proſperity, and what Signs of Grace appear in others under the ſame Tryal.

SFCT. IV.

Proſperity diſcovers many ſad Symptoms o a naughty Heart, and among others theſe ar ordinarily moſt conſpicuous.

1. Firſt, It caſts the Hearts of ſome Men int a deep Oblivion of God, and makes them lay aſid all Care of Duty : Rare fumant fælicibus Ar The Altars of rich Men ſeldom ſmoke, Deut. 3 13, 14, 15. Jeſurun ſucked Honey out of th Rock, eat the fat of Lambs, and Kidneys o

Wheat ; but what was the effect of this ? he kicked, and forſook God which made him, and lightly eſteemed the rock of his ſalvation ; inſtead of lifting up their hearts in an humble thankful acknowledgment of Gods bounty, they lifted up the heel in a wanton abuſe of his mercy : in the fatteſt earth we find the moſt ſlippery footing.

He that is truely gracious may in proſperity remit ſome degrees, but a Carnal heart there loſeth all that which in a low condition he ſeemed to have. Agurs deprecation as to himſelf, no doubt was built upon his frequent obſervation how it was with others, Prov. 30. 8, 9. Leſt I be full, and deny God. It's ſaid in Eccleſ. 5. 12. That the abundance of the rich will not ſuffer him to ſleep, and I wiſh that were the worſt injury it did him ; but alas, it will not ſuffer him to pray, to meditate, to allow time and thoughts about his eternal concernments ; he falls aſleep in the lap of proſperity, and forgets that there is a God to be ſerved, or a ſoul to be ſaved. O this is a dangerous ſymptom of a very graceleſs heart.

2. Secondly, Proſperity meeting with a graceleſs heart, makes it wholly ſenſual, and entirely ſwallows up its thoughts and affections : Earthly things transform and mold their hearts into their own ſimilitude and nature : The whole ſtrength of their ſouls goes out to thoſe injoyments. So thoſe graceleſs, yet proſperous perſons are deſcribed, Job 21. 11, 12, 13. They take the Timbred and Harp, and rejoyce at the ſound of the Organ, they ſpend their days in wealth ; They take the Timbrel, not the Bible. They rejoyce at the ſound of the Organ, not a word of their rejoycing in God. They ſend forth their little ones in the dance. That is all the Catechiſm they are taught. They ſpend their days in wealth. Their whole time, that precious ſtock and Talent is wholly laid out upon theſe ſenſitive things : Either the pleaſure of it powerfully charms them, or the cares of it wholly engroſs their minds ; that there is no time to ſpare for God : They live in pleaſure upon earth, as it is, Jam. 5. 5. Juſt as the fiſh lives in the water its proper element, take him off from theſe things, and put him upon ſpiritual ſerious heavenly imployments, and he is Piſcis in arido : Like a fiſh upon the dry Land.

Now though Proſperity may too much influence, and enſnare the minds of good men, and eſtrange them too much from Heavenly things ; yet thus to engroſs their hearts, and convert them into their own ſimilitude and nature, ſo that theſe things ſhould be the Center of their hearts, the very proper element in which they live, is utter impoſſible.

An Hypocrite indeed may be brought to this, becauſe though Janus like, he have two faces, yet he really hath but one principle ; and that is wholly carnal and earthly : So that it's eaſie to make all the water to run in one channel, to gather all into one entire ſtream, in which his heart ſhall pour out all its ſtrength to the Creature.

But a Chriſtian indeed hath a double principle that acts him : though we have a law of ſin that moves him one way, yet there is in him alſo the Law of grace, which thwarts and croſſes that principle of corruption ; ſo that as grace cannot do what it would, becauſe of ſin ; ſo neither can ſin do what it would, becauſe of grace, Gal. 5. 17.

The heart of a Chriſtian in the midſt of enſnaring ſenſitive enjoyments finds indeed a corrupt principle in it, which would incline him to fall aſleep upon ſuch a ſoft pillow ; and forget God and duty : but it cannot, Oh no, it cannot do ſo, there's a principle of grace within him that never leaves jogging, diſturbing, and calling upon him, till he riſe and return to his God the true reſt of his ſoul.

3. Thirdly, A falſe pretender to Religion, an Hypocritical Profeſſour meeting with proſperity and ſucceſs, grows altogether unconcerned about the intereſt of Religion, and ſenſeleſs of the calamities of Gods people. Thus the Prophet convinces the Jews of their hypocriſie, Amos 6. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. They were at eaſe in Zion, and truſted in the Mountain of Samaria : And ſo having a ſhadow of Religion, and a fulneſs of all earthly things, they fell to feaſting and ſporting : They drank wine in bowls, and anointed themſelves with the chief oyntments, but were not grieved for the affliction of Joſeph. They condolled not, Gnalſheber, over the breakings or tearing to pieces of Joſeph ; if they are out of danger once, let the Church ſhift for it ſelf ; they are ſecure in a warm neſt, let the birds of prey catch and devour that flock with which they ſometimes aſſociated, they are not toucht with it. Moſes could not do ſo, though in the greateſt ſecurity, and confluence of the honours and pleaſures of Egypt, Acts 7. 23. Nehemiah could not do ſo, though the ſervant and favorite of a mighty Monarch, and wanted nothing to make him outwardly happy : Yet the pleaſures of a Kings Court could not chear his heart, or ſcatter the clouds of ſorrow from his Countenance, whileſt his brethren were in affliction, and the City of his God lay waſte, Nehemiah 2. 1, 2, 3. Nor indeed can any Gracious heart be unconcerned and ſenſeleſs ; for that Union that all the Saints have with Chriſt their head, and with one another as fellow members in Chriſt, will beget ſympathy among them in their ſufferings. 1 Cor. 12. 26.

SECT. V.

BUT as the fire of proſperity diſcovers this, and much more droſs in a graceleſs heart ; ſo it diſcovers the ſincerity and grace of Gods people. I ſay not that it diſcovers nothing but grace in them. O that it did not ! alas ! many of them have had a great deal of droſs and corruption diſcovered by it, as was noted before : but yet in this Tryal, the graciouſneſs and uprightneſs of their hearts will appear in theſe and ſuch like workings of it.

1. Firſt, Under proſperity, ſucceſs and honour, the upright heart will labour to ſuppreſs pride, and keep it ſelf lowly and humble, and ſtill the more grace there is, the more humility there will be. If God lift him up, he will lay himſelf low, and exalt his God high. So did Jacob when God had raiſed and enlarged him, Gen. 32. 10. I am not worthy of the leaſt of all the mercies, and of all the truth which thou haſt ſhewed unto thy ſervant, for with my ſtaff I paſſed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

Great was the difference in Jacobs outward condition at his return, from what it was at firſt paſſage over Jordan : then poor, now rich ; then ſingle and comfortleſs, now the head of a great family. Yea, but though his outward eſtate was altered, the frame of his heart was not altered. Jacob was an holy and humble man when he went out, and ſo he was when he returned: He ſaw a multitude of Mercies about him, and among them all, not one but was greater than himſelf.

I dare not ſay every Chriſtian under Proſperity can at all times manifeſt like humility; but I am ſure what Pride and Vanity ſoever may riſe in a gracious Heart tryed by Proſperity, there's that within him will give check to it: He dare not ſuffer ſuch proud Thoughts to lodge quietly in his Heart: For alas he ſees that in himſelf, and that in his God that will abaſe him; Grace will make him look back to his original Condition, and ſay with David, What am I O Lord God, and what is my Fathers Houſe; that thou haſt brought me hitherto? 2 Sam. 7. 18.

It will make him look in, and ſee the Baſeneſs of his own Heart, and the Corruptions that are there, and admire at the Dealings of God with ſo vile a Creature. O thinks he, if others did but know what I know of my ſelf, they would abhor me more than now they eſteem and value me.

2. Secondly, Proſperity uſually draws forth the Saints Love to the God of their Mercies: That which heats a wicked Mans Luſts, warms a gracious Mans Heart with Love and Delight in God.

Theſe were the Words of that lovely Song which David ſang in the Day that the Lord delivered him out of the Hands of all his Enemies, and from the Hand of Saul, and he ſaid, I will love thee O Lord my Strength; Pſal. 18. Title & v. 1. compared: Theſe outward things are not the main Grounds and Motives of their Love to God; no, no, they love him when he takes away, as well, as when he gives: But they are ſanctified Inſtruments to inflame their Love to God: They boyle up a wicked Mans Luſts, but they melt a gracious Mans Soul. O in what a Pang of Love did David go into the Preſence of God under the Senſe of his Mercies! his melting Mercies; when he thus poured out his whole Soul in a Stream of Love to his God, 2 Sam. 7. 19, 20. Is this the manner of men, O Lord God! and what can David ſay more unto thee! An Expreſſion that turns up the very Bottom of his Heart.

3. Thirdly, Proſperity and comfortable Providences do uſually become Cautions againſt Sin when they meet with a ſanctified Soul. This is the natural Inference of a gracious Soul from them, Hath God pleaſed me, then hath he obliged me to take more care to pleaſe him. O let me not grieve him, that hath comforted me. So Ezra 9. 13. After ſuch a Deliverance, as this, ſhould we again break thy Commandments! What! break his Commandments who hath broken our Bonds! God forbid.

It was an excellent Reſolution of a Chriſtian once, who Receiving an eminent Mercy, at the ſame time he felt himſelf under the Power of a ſpecial Corruption; Well, (ſaith he) now will I go forth in the Strength of this Mercy to mortifie and ſubdue that Corruption. I will not meaſure every Chriſtian by the eminent Workings of Grace in ſome one; but ſurely ſo far I may ſafely go, That Sincerity knows not how to ſin becauſe Grace hath abounded, any more than it dare Sin that Grace may abound.

4. Fourthly, A truly gracious Soul will not be ſatisfied with all the Proſperity and Comforts in the World for his Portion. Not thine Lord, but Thee is the Voice of Grace: When Providence had been more than ordinarily bountiful in outward things to Luther, he began to be afraid of its Meaning, and earneſtly proteſted, God ſhould not put him off ſo. The Lord is my Portion ſaith my Soul, Lam. 3. 24. and the Soul can beſt tell what it hath made its choice, and wherein it hath beſtowed its chief Delights and Expectations.

An unſound Heart will accept theſe for its Portion: If the World be ſure to him, and his Deſigns fail not there; he can be content to leave God, and Soul, and Heaven, and Hell at Hazard: But ſo cannot the upright. Theſe things in Subordination; but neither theſe, nor any thing under the Sun in Compariſon with, or Oppoſition to God.

CHAP. V.

Shewing what Probation Adverſity makes of the Sincerity or Unſoundneſs of our Hearts.

SECT. I. THat Adverſity is a Furnace to try of what Metal our Hearts are, none can doubt, that hath either ſtudied the Scriptures, or obſerved his own Heart under Afflictions.

When the Droſs and Ruſt of Hypocriſie and Corruption had almoſt eaten out the Heart of Religion among the Jews; then ſaith God, I will melt them, and try them; for what ſhall I do for the Daughter of my People? Jer. 9. 7. Here Affliction is the Furnace, and the People are the Metal caſt into it; and the End of it is Tryal. I will melt them and try them; what other Courſe ſhall I take with them? If I let them alone, their Luſts like the Ruſt and Canker in Metals will eat them out. Proſperity multiplies Profeſſors, and Adverſity brings them to the Teſt: Then Hirelings quickly become Changlings: The gilded Potſherd gliſters till it come to ſcouring. The Devil thought Job had been ſuch a one, and moves that he may be tried this way; being confident he would be found but droſs in the Tryal, Job 1. 11. But tho' the Furnace of Affliction diſcovered ſome Droſs in him, (as it will in the beſt of Men) yet he came forth as Gold.

In this Furnace alſo Grace is manifeſted: 'Tis ſaid, Rev. 13. 10. Here is the Patience and Faith of the Saints: (i. e.) here is the Trial and Diſcovery of it in theſe Days of Adverſity. It was a weighty ſaying of Tertullian to the Perſecutors of the Church in his Days, Probatio innocentiæ noſtra, eſt iniquitas veſtra. Your Wickedneſs is the Trial of our Innocency. Conſtantius the Father of Conſtantine made an exploratory Decree, That all who would not renounce the Chriſtian Faith, ſhould loſe their Places of Honour and Profit; This preſently ſeparated the Droſs from the Gold; which was his Deſign: For many renounced Chriſtianity, and thereupon were renounced by him; and thoſe that held their Integrity, were received into Favour.

Tertul. in Apol.

In time of Proſperity, Hypocriſie lies covered in the Heart like Neſts in the green Buſhes; but when the Winter of Adverſity hath made them bare, every Body may ſee them without ſearching.

But to fall into cloſer Particulars, it will be neceſſary to enquire what Effects of Adverſity are common to both the Sound and the Unſound; and then what are proper to either in this cloſe Trial by Adverſity.

SECT

SECT. II.

IT will be expedient to the Deſign I manage in this Diſcourſe, to ſhew in the firſt Place what are common Effects of Adverſity to both the godly and ungodly, for in ſome things they differ not, but as it is with the one, ſo alſo with the other: As,

1. Firſt, Both the godly and ungodly may fear Adverſity before it comes. To be ſure a wicked Man cannot, and it's evident many godly Men do not come up to the Height of that Rule, Jam. 1.2. To account it all Joy when they fall into divers Temptations, or Trials by Adverſity.

'Tis ſaid, Iſa. 33. 14. The Sinners in Sion are afraid, trembling ſurprizeth the Hypocrite. Namely, under the Apprehenſion of approaching calamities: And it's true alſo, the Saints in Sion may be afraid: My Fleſh trembleth for Fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy Judgments; ſaid holy David, Pſ. 119. 120. and Job 3. 23. The thing which I greatly feared (ſaith that upright Soul) is come upon me: There is a vaſt Difference betwixt a Saints firſt meeting with Afflictions, and his parting with them: he entertains them ſometimes with trembling, he parts with them rejoycing, ſmiling on them, and bleſſing them in the Name of the Lord. So that by this the upright, and the falſe Heart, are not diſcriminated: Even ſanctified Nature declines Sufferings and Troubles.

2. Secondly, Both the godly and ungodly may entertain Afflictions with Regret and Unwillingneſs when they come. Afflictions and Troubles are Wormwood and Gall, Lam. 3. 19. and that goes not down pleaſantly with Fleſh and Blood, Heb. 12. 11. No Affliction for the preſent ſeemeth joyous, but grievous; he means to God's own People. They are in heavineſs through manifold Temptations or Trials by the Rod: 1 Pet. 1. 6. When God gives the Cup of Affliction into the Hands of the wicked, how do they reluctate and loath it? How do their Stomacks riſe at it? And though the Portion of the Saints Cup be much ſweeter than theirs, (for that bitter Ingredient of God's vindictive Wrath is not in it) yet even they ſhrink from it, and loth they are to taſte it.

3. Thirdly, Both the one and other may be impatient and fretful in Adverſity: it's the very Nature of Fleſh and Blood to be ſo. The wicked are like the troubled Sea which cannot reſt, whoſe Waters caſt forth Mire and Dirt, Iſa. 57. 20. It's an Alluſion to the unſtable and ſtormy Ocean: You know there is naturally an Eſtuation, and working in the Sea, whether it be incenſed by the Wind or no; but if a violent Wind blow upon the unquiet Ocean, Oh what raging and foaming is there! What Abundance of traſh and filth doth it at ſuch times caſt out!

Now, though Grace make a great Difference betwixt one and another, yet I dare not ſay, but even a gracious Heart may be very unquiet and tumultuous in the Day of Affliction. Sanctified Souls have their Paſſions and Luſts which are too little mortified, even as ſweet Bryar, and Holythiſtles have their Prickles, as well as the worthleſs Bramble. Jonah was a good Man, yet his Soul was ſadly diſtempered by adverſe Providences! Jonah 4. 9. Yea (ſaith he, and that to his God) I do well to be angry, even unto Death.

4. Fourthly, Both the one and the other may be weary of the Rod, and think the Day of Adverſity a tedious Day, wiſhing it were once at an End. Babylon ſhall be weary of the Evil that God will bring upon it, Jer. 51. ult. and Oh that none of Sions Children were weary of Adverſity too! How ſad a Moan doth Job make of his long continued Affliction, Job 16. 6, 7. Though I ſpeak, my Grief is not aſſwaged, and though I forbear, what am I eaſed? But now he hath made me weary.

And if you look into Pſal. 6. 3. 6. you may ſee another ſtrong Chriſtian even tyred in the Way of Affliction: My Soul (ſaith David in that Place) is ſore vexed, but thou O Lord how long! I am weary with my groaning.

5. Fifthly, Both the one and other may be driven to their Knees by Adverſity. Lord in Trouble have they viſited thee, they have poured out a Prayer when thy chaſtening was upon them, Iſa. 26. 16. Not that a godly Perſon will pray no longer than the Rod is at his Back; O no, he cannot live without Prayer long, how few calls ſoever he hath to that Duty by the Rod: but when the Rod is on his Back, he will be more frequently, and more fervently upon his Knees: Indeed many graceleſs Hearts are like Childrens Tops which will go no longer than they are whipt; they cannot find their Knees and their Tongues, till God find a Rod to excite them. A dangerous Symptom. The ſame Affliction may put a gracious, and a graceleſs Soul to their Knees; but tho' in the external matter of Duty, and in the external Call or Occaſion of Duty they ſeem to agree; yet is there a vaſt Difference in the Principles, Manner, and Ends of theſe their Duties; as will evidently appear in its proper Place in our following Diſcourſe.

But by what hath been ſaid in this Section, you may ſee how in ſome things the holy upright Soul acts too like the unſanctified, and in other Things how much the Hypocrite may act like a Saint: He may be externally humbled, ſo was Ahab: He may pray under the Rod, Mal. 2. 13. yea, and requeſt others to pray for him, ſo did Simon, Acts 8. 24.

SECT. III.

BUT though the ſound and unſound Heart differ not in ſome external Carriages under the Rod; yet there are Effects of Adverſity which are proper to either, and will diſcriminate them. To which End let us firſt ſee what effects Adverſity is uſually followed withal in unſound and carnal Hearts: And we ſhall find among other, theſe five Symptoms of a naughty Heart appearing under Croſſes and Afflictions.

1. Firſt, A graceleſs Heart is not quickly and eaſily brought to ſee the Hand of God in thoſe Troubles that befall it, and be duly affected with it, Iſa. 26. 11. Lord when thy Hand is lifted up they will not ſee: when it hath ſmitten, or is lifted up to ſmite, they ſhut their Eyes: 'Tis the Malice of this Man, or the Negligence of that, or the Unfaithfulneſs of another that hath brought all this Trouble upon me: Thus the Creature is the Horizon that terminates their Sight, and beyond that they uſually ſee nothing: Sometimes indeed the Hand of God is ſo immediately manifeſted, and convincingly diſcovered in Afflictions, that they cannot avoid the Sight of it, and then they may (in their Way) pour out a Prayer before him, but ordinarily they impute all to ſecond cauſes, and overlook the firſt Cauſe of their troubles.

2. Secondly, Nor is it uſual with theſe Men under the Rod to retire into their Cloſets, and ſearch their hearts there; to find out the particular cauſe and provocation of their affliction: No man repented him of his wickedneſs, ſaying what have I done? Jer. 8. 6. What curſed thing is there with me, that hath thus incenſed the anger of God againſt me? God viſits their iniquities with afflictions, but they viſit not their own hearts by ſelf-examinations. God judges them, but they judge not themſelves; he ſhews their iniquities in a clear glaſs, but none ſaith, What have I done? This phraſe, What have I done? Is the voice of one that recollects himſelf after a raſh action; or the voice of a Man aſtoniſhed at the diſcovery afflictions make of his ſins, but no ſuch voice as this is ordinarily heard among carnal Men.

3. Thirdly, An unſound Profeſſor if left to his choice, would rather chuſe Sin than Affliction; and ſees more evil in that, than in this.

And it cannot be doubted, if we conſider the principle by which all unregenerate Men are acted, is ſenſe not faith: hence Jobs friends would have argued his Hypocriſie, Job 36. 21. And had their application been as their rule, it would have concluded it. This ( viz. Sin ) haſt thou choſen, rather then affliction.

I do not ſay that an upright man cannot commit a moral evil, to eſcape a pœnal evil. O that daily obſervation did not too plentifully furniſh us with ſad inſtances of that kind! but upright ones do not, dare not upon a ſerious deliberate diſcuſſion and debate chuſe ſin rather than affliction; what they may do upon ſurpriſals, and in the violence of temptation is of another nature.

But a falſe and unſound heart diſcovers it ſelf in the choice it makes upon deliberation, and that frequently, when ſin and trouble come in competition: put caſe, ſaith Auguſtine, a Ruffian ſhould with one hand ſet the cup of drunkenneſs to thy mouth, and with the other a dagger to thy breaſt; and ſay, Drink or die: thou ſhouldeſt rather chuſe to die ſober, than to live a drunkard: and many Chriſtians have reſiſted unto blood ſtriving againſt ſin, and with renowned Moſes choſen affliction, the worſt of afflictions; yea death it ſelf in the moſt formidable appearance, rather than ſin: And it is the habitual temper and reſolution of every gracious heart ſo to do, tho' thoſe holy reſolutions are ſometimes overborn by violence of temptation.

But the Hypocrite dreads leſs the defilement of his ſoul, than the loſs of his eſtate, liberty or life. If you ask upon what ground then doth the Apoſtle ſuppoſe, 1 Cor. 13. 3. a man may give his body to be burnt, and not have charity? that the Salamander of Hypocriſie may live in the flame of Martyrdom? The anſwer is at hand, they that chooſe death in the ſenſe of this Text, do not chooſe it to eſcape ſin, but to feed and indulge it. Thoſe ſtrange adventures ( if any ſuch be ) are rather to maintain their own honour, and enroll their names among worthy and famous Perſons to Poſterity; or out of a blind zeal to their eſpouſed errors and miſtakes; than in a due regard to the glory of God, and the preſervation of integrity. I fear to ſpeak it, but it muſt be ſpoken, (ſaith Hierom) That even Martyrdom it ſelf, when ſuffered for Admiration and Applauſe, profits nothing; but that blood is ſhed in vain.

Timeo dicere, ſed dicendum eſt; martyrium ipſum ſi ideo fiat ut admirationi & laudi habeatur a fratribus; fruſtrà ſanguis effuſus eſt. Hier.

4. Fourthly, It is the property of an unregenerate ſoul under adverſity to turn from creature to creature for ſupport and comfort, and not from every creature to God alone. So long as their feet can touch ground, I mean feel any creature relief or comfort under them, they can ſubſiſt and live in afflictions; but when they loſe ground then all creature-refuge fails, then their Hearts fail too.

Thus Zedekiah and the ſelf-deceiving Jews, when they ſaw their own ſtrength failed them, and there was little hope left that they ſhould deliver themſelves from the Chaldeans, what do they in that ſtrait? Do they with upright Jehoſophat ſay, Our eyes are unto thee? No, no, their eyes were upon Egypt for ſuccour, not upon Heaven: Well, Pharaoh and his aids are left ſtill, all hope is not gone: Jer. 37. 9. See the like in Ahaz, in a ſore plunge and diſtreſs he Courts the King of Aſſyria for help, 2 Chron. 28. 22, 23. That project failing, why then he will try what the gods of Damaſcus can do for him: any way rather than the right way, Flectere ſi nequeam ſuperos, Acheronta movebo.

So it is with many others. If one child die, what do they do, run to God and comfort themſelves in this, The Lord liveth tho' my Child die? If an Eſtate be loſt and a Family ſinking, do they with David comfort themſelves in the everlaſting Covenant, ordered and ſure? No, no; but if one Relation die, there's another alive; if an Eſtate be gone, yet not all: ſomething is left ſtill, and the caſe will mend.

As long as ever ſuch Men have any viſible encouragement, they will hang upon it; and not make up all in Chriſt, and encourage themſelves in the Lord. To tell them of rejoycing in the Lord, when the Fig-tree bloſſoms not, is what they cannot underſtand.

5. Fifthly, To conclude, An unſound heart never comes out of the Furnace of affliction purged, mortified, and more ſpiritual and holy than when he was caſt into it: his ſcum and droſs is not there ſeparated from him: nay, the more they are afflicted, the worſe they are. Why ſhould ye be ſmitten any more? ye will revolt more and more, Iſa. 1. 5. And to keep to our Metaphor, conſult Jer. 6. 29. God had put that incorrigible people into the Furnace of affliction, and kept them long in that fire; and what was the Iſſue? Why, ſaith the Prophet, The bellows are burnt, the lead is conſumed of the fire, the founder melteth in vain, &c. reprobate ſilver ſhall men call them, becauſe the Lord hath rejected them.

If the fire of affliction be continually blown till the very bellows be burnt, that is, the tongue, or rather the Lungs of the Prophet, which have ſome reſemblance to bellows; though theſe be even ſpent in reproving, and threatning, and denouncing woe upon woe, and Judgment upon Judgment; and God fulfils his word upon them; yet ſtill they are as before; the droſs remains: though Jeruſalem be made a Furnace, and the inhabitants, the fleſh boyling in it is noted ( pertinently to my Diſcourſe ) in Ezek. 24. 6. 13. the ſcum remains with them, and cannot be ſeparated by the fire; and the reaſon is plain, becauſe no affliction in its ſelf purges ſin, but as it is ſanctified, and works in the vertue of Gods bleſſing, and in purſuance of the promiſes.

O think on this you that have had thouſands of afflictions in in one kind and another, and none of them all have done you good: they have not mortified, humbled, or benefited you at all. And thus you ſee what the effects of adverſity are when it meets a graceleſs heart.

SECT. IV.

BY this time, Reader, I ſuppoſe thou art deſirous to know what effects adverſity and afflictions uſe to have when they meet with an honeſt and ſincere heart; only before I come to particulars, I think it needful to acquaint thee, That the fruits of afflictonsare moſtly after-fruits, and not ſo diſcernable by the Chriſtian himſelf under the Rod, as after he hath been exerciſed by it, Heb. 12. 11. and calmly reflects upon what is paſt; nor doth every Chriſtian attain the ſame meaſure and degree: ſome rejoyce, others commonly ſubmit: but I think theſe ſeven effects are ordinarily found in all upright hearts that paſs under the rod.

1. Firſt, The ſincere and upright ſoul betakes its ſelf to God in affliction, Job 1. 20. When God was ſmiting, Job was praying: when God afflicted, Job worſhipped: So David, Pſal. 116. 3,4. I found ſorrow and trouble, then called I upon the name of the Lord; And when the meſſenger of Satan buffeted Paul, For this cauſe (ſaith he) I beſought the Lord thrice, 2 Cor. 12. 8. Alas, whither ſhould a Child go in diſtreſs but to its Father?

2. Secondly, He ſees and owns the hand of God in his afflictions: how much or little ſoever of the inſtruments of trouble appear. The Lord hath taken away, ſaith Job, Job 1. 21. God hath bidden him, ſaith David, 2 Sam. 16. 10. If the blow come from the hand of a wicked man, yet he ſees that wicked hand in Gods righteous hand, Pſal. 17. 14. And this apprehenſion is fundamental to all that Communion men have with God in their afflictions, and to all that peaceableneſs, and gracious ſubmiſſion of their ſpirits under the rod: he that ſees nothing of God in his troubles, hath nothing of God in his ſoul.

3. Thirdly, He can juſtifie God in all the afflictions and troubles that come upon him, be they never ſo ſevere. Thou art juſt in all that is brought upon us, ſaith Nehemiah, Nehem. 9. 33. Thou haſt puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities deſerve, ſaith Ezra, Ezra 9. 13. It is of the Lords mercy we are not conſumed, ſaith the Church, Lam. 3. 22. Are we in Babylon? It's a Mercy we are not in Hell. If God condemn him, yet he will juſtifie God; if God caſt him into a ſea of Trouble, yet he will acknowledge in all that ſea of trouble, there is not one drop of injuſtice. If I have not deſerved ſuch uſage from the hands of men, yet I have deſerved worſe than this at the hands of God.

4. Fourthly, Afflictions uſe to melt and humble gracious hearts: there is an habitual tenderneſs planted in their ſpirits, and a juſt occaſion quickly draws it forth: And ſo uſual a thing it is for gracious Hearts to be humbled under the Afflictings of God, that Affliction is upon that Score called Humiliation: The Effect put for the Cauſe; to ſhew where one is, the other will be: 2 Cor. 12. 21. My God will humble me, (i. e.) he will afflict me with the Sight of your Sins, and diſorders: And if a gracious Soul be ſo apt to be humbled for other Mens Sins, much more for his own.

5. Fifthly, The upright Soul is inquiſitive under the Rod to find out that Evil for which the Lord contends with him by Affliction, Job 10. 2. Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me: And Job 34. 31. That which I ſee not, teach thou me: If I have done Iniquity, I will do no more. So Lam. 3. 39, 40. Let us ſearch and try our Ways, and turn again to the Lord: In Afflicting God ſearches them, and under Affliction they ſearch themſelves: Willing they are to hear the Voice of the Rod, and glad of any Diſcovery it makes of their Hearts.

6. Sixthly, The upright Heart chuſeth to lye under Affliction, rather than to be delivered from it by Sin. I ſay this is the choice and Reſolution of every upright Heart, however it may be ſometimes over-born by the Violence of Temptation, Heb. 11. 35. Not accepting deliverance, viz. upon ſinfull Terms, and Conditions.

They are ſenſible how the Fleſh ſmarts under the Rod, but had rather it ſhould ſmart, than Conſcience ſhould ſmart under Guilt. Affliction, ſaith an upright Soul, grieves me, but Sin will grieve God; Affliction wounds my Fleſh, but Sin will wound my Soul. Deliverance I long for, but I will not pay ſo dear for it, how much ſoever I deſire it. Nolo tanti emere pœnitentiam: Outward Eaſe is ſweet, but inward Peace is ſweeter.

7. Seventhly, He prizeth the ſpiritual Good gotten by Affliction, above Deliverance from it; and can bleſs God from his heart for thoſe Mercies how dear ſoever his Fleſh hath paid for them. Pſal. 119. 67. and 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted. Such is the Value the People of God have for ſpiritual Graces, that they cannot think them a dear penyworth, whatever their Fleſh hath paid for them. The Mortification of one Luſt, one Diſcovery of Sincerity, one Manifeſtation of God to their Souls, doth much more than make amends for all that they have endured under the Rod.

Is Patience improved, Self-acquaintance increaſed, the Vanity of the Creature more effectually taught, longings after Heaven inflamed? O bleſſed Afflictions that are attended with ſuch bleſſed Fruits! It was the ſaying of a holy Man under a ſore Trouble for the Death of an only Son; when in that dark Day God had graciouſly manifeſted himſelf to his Soul; O, ſaid he, I would be contented (if it were poſſible) to lay an only Son in the Grave every Day I have to live in the World, for one ſuch Diſcovery of the Love of God as I now enjoy.

CHAP. VI.

Shewing Indwelling ſin to be to grace, what fire is to gold, and how the ſoundneſs and unſoundneſs of our hearts are diſcovered by our Carriage toward it.

SECT. I. PRoſperity and Adverſity put Sincerity to the Tryal, but nothing makes a deeper Search into our Boſoms, nothing ſifts our Spirits more narrowly, or tells us what our State is more plainly, than our Behaviour towards that Corruption that dwells in us; the Thorn is next Neighbour to the Roſe: Sin and Grace dwell not only in the ſame Soul, but in the ſame Faculties. The Collier and Fuller dwell in one Room, what one cleanſeth the other Blacks: Of all the Evils God permits in this World, none is more grievous to his People than this: They ſometimes wonder why the Lord will ſuffer it to be ſo; why, ſurely among other wiſe and holy ends of this Permiſſion, theſe are ſome.

They are left to try you, and to humble you; there is no intrinſecal Goodneſs in Sin, but however in this it occaſions good to us, that by our Carriage towards it we diſcern our Sincerity. The Touch-ſtone is a worthleſs Stone in it ſelf, but it ſerves to trye the Gold: 1 Joh. 3. 9, 10. Whoſoever is born of God; doth not commit Sin, for his ſeed remaineth in him, and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God; in this the Children of God are manifeſt, and the Children of the Devil; q. d. In reſpect of their Carriage towards Sin, the one and other is plainly manifeſted: This is that which ſeparates the Droſs from the Gold, and ſhews you what the true State of Mens Perſons, and temper of their Hearts is. By not ſinning we are not to underſtand a total Freedom from it in this World, as if it implied any ſuch Perfection of the People of God in this World, that's the Popiſh and Pelagian Sence: Nor yet muſt we take it in the Arminian Sence, who to avoid the Argument of the Orthodox, will underſtand it of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt: What a ſtrange Thing would it be to make that a Characteriſtical Note of Diſtinction betwixt the godly and ungodly, which ſo very few even of the moſt ungodly are ever guilty of?

But the manner of our Behaviour towards Sin, and our Carriage towards it before, or under, or after the Commiſſion of it; in that the Children of God are manifeſt, and the Children of the Devil.

Now there are five Things relating to ſin that diſcriminate and mark the ſtate of the Perſons: The Difference is diſcernable,

In our
1. Abſtinence from Sin.
2. Hatred of Sin.
3. Troubles about Sin.
4. Subjection to Sin.
5. Oppoſition of Sin.

SECT. II.

(1.) THe Grounds and Motives of our Abſtinence do very clearly manifeſt the ſtate of our Souls; what they are in the Regenerate, and Unregenerate, is our next Work. And let it be conſidered,

Firſt, That an unſound and unrenewed Heart may abſtain from one Sin, becauſe it is contrary to, and inconſiſtent with another Sin: For it is with the Sins of our Natures, as it is with the Diſeaſes of our Bodies: Though all Diſeaſes be contrary to health, yet ſome Diſeaſes (as the Feaver and Palſie) are contrary to each other. So are Prodigality and Covetouſneſs, Hypocriſie and Profaneneſs: Theſe oppoſe each other, not for mutual Deſtruction as Sin and Grace do, but for Superiority, each contending for the Throne, and ſometimes taking it by Turns: It is with ſuch Perſons as with that poſſeſſed Man, Matth. 17. 15. whom the Spirit caſt ſometimes into the Fire, ſometimes into the Water: Or if one ſubdue the other, yet the Heart is alſo ſubdued to the Vaſſalage of that Luſt that is uppermoſt in the Soul.

2. Secondly, An unrenewed Soul may be kept from the Commiſſion of ſome Sin; not becauſe there is a Principle of Grace within him, but becauſe of ſome providential Reſtraint without him, or upon him: For it often falls out, that when Men have conceived Sin, and are ready to execute it, Providence claps on the Fetters of Reſtraint, and hinders them from executing it.

This was the Caſe of Abimeleck, Gen. 20. 6. and 17. compared, I withheld thee: And though Perſons ſo reſtrained, have not the Good of ſuch Providences, yet others have; for by it a World of Miſchief is prevented in the World, which otherwiſe would break out; and to this Act of Providence we owe our Lives, Liberties, Eſtates and Comforts in this World.

3. Thirdly, An unſound Heart may not commit ſome Sins; not becauſe he truly hates them, but becauſe his Conſtitution inclines him not to them: Theſe Men are rather beholding to a good Temper of Body, than to a gracious Temper of Soul. Some Men cannot be Drunkards if they would; others cannot be covetous and baſe, they are made è meliori luto, of a more refined Metal than others; but chaſt and liberal, juſt and ſober Nature, is but Nature ſtill: The beſt Nature in all its Endowments, is but Nature at the beſt.

4. Fourthly, A graceleſs Heart may be reſtrained from Sin by the Force of Education and Principles of Morality that Way inſtilled into it. Thus Jehoaſh was reſtrained from Sin, 2 Kings 12. 2. And Jehoaſh did that which was right in the Sight of the Lord all the Days wherein Jehojadah the Prieſt inſtructed him. The Fear of a Parent or Maſter, will do a great deal more with ſome in this Caſe, than the Fear of God. The Influence of a ſtrict Education nips off the Excreſcencies of budding Vice. The Way we are taught when young, we keep when old: This is the Influence of Man upon Man; not the Influence of the regenerating Spirit upon Men.

5. Fifthly, A graceleſs Heart may be kept from ſome Sins by the Fear of the Events, both in this World, and that to come. Sin that is followed with Infamy and reproach among Men, may on this Ground be forborn; not becauſe God hath forbidden it, but becauſe humane Laws will puniſh it, and the ſober World will brand us for it: And ſome look farther, to the Puniſhment of Sin in Hell: They are not afraid to Sin, but they are afraid to burn.

Here Sin is like a ſweet Roſe in a brake o Thorns: Fain we would have it, but are loth t tear our Fleſh to come by it. It's good that Si is prevented any way; but to be kept on thi Ground from Sin, doth not argue the Eſtate o the Perſon to be good: And thus you ſee ſom of the Grounds on which carnal Men are reſtrained: And in this the Children of the Devil are manifeſt.

SECT. III.

BUt there are Grounds of Abſtinence from Si by which the Children of God are alſo man feſted, and ſuch are theſe that follow.

1. Firſt, A ſincere Heart dares not ſin becau of the Eye and Fear of God which is upon hi So you find it in Job 31. 1: and 4. he durſt n allow his Thoughts to ſin, becauſe he lived under the Awe of Gods Eye. Nehemiah durſt not do as former Governours had done; though an Opportunity preſented to enrich himſelf; becauſe of the fear of his God, Nehem. 5. 15. The Soul that lives under the awe of this eye will be as conſcientious where no Diſcovery can be made by Creatures, as if all the World looked on, Levit. 19. 14. Thou ſhalt not curſe the Deaf, nor put a ſtumbling Block before the Blind; but ſhalt fear thy God, I am the Lord.

What if a Man do curſe the Deaf, the Deaf cannot hear him; and what if he do put a ſtumbling Block before the Blind, the Blind cannot ſee him: True, but God ſees him, God hears him, that's enough to a Man that hath the Fear of the Lord upon his Heart.

2. Secondly, As the Fear of God, ſo the Love of God, is a principle of reſtraint from ſin to the Soul that is upright. This kept back Joſeph from Sin, Gen. 39. 9. How can I do this great Wickedneſs, and Sin againſt God! How can I? He ſpeaks as a Man that feels himſelf bound up from Sin by the Goodneſs and Love of God that had been manifeſted to him, q. d. Hath he delivered me from the pit into which my envious Brethren caſt me? Hath he in ſo miraculous a Way advanced me to all this Honour and Power in Egypt? and now, after all his Kindneſs and Love to me, ſhall I ſin againſt him? O how can I do this againſt ſo good, ſo gracious a God? So Pſal. 97. 10. Ye that Love the Lord hate evil. Love will cry out in the Hour of Temptation, is this thy kindneſs to thy Friend? Doſt thou thus requite the Lord for all his Kindneſſes?

3. Thirdly, As the Love of God, ſo the intrinſecal Evil and Filthineſs that is in Sin keeps back the gracious Soul from it, Rom. 12. 9. abhor that which is evil, ἀποςογȣ̃ντες τὸ πόνερον, hate it as Hell it ſelf: Or as the French Tranſlation hath it, be in horrour: As the Apprehenſions of Hell, ſo the Apprehenſions of Sin impreſs horrour upon the Mind that's ſanctified: Nothing more loathſome to an holy Soul. Its Averſations from it are with the higheſt Indignation and loathing.

4. Fourthly, The renewed Nature of a Saint reſtrains him from Sin, Gal. 5. 17. The Spirit luſteth againſt the Fleſh, ſo that ye cannot do the thing that ye would: Ye cannot, why cannot ye? becauſe it is againſt your new Nature.

Beloved, This is a very remarkable thing in the Experience of all renewed Men, That upon the Renovation of Mens Principles, their Delights, and their Averſations and Loathings are laid quite croſs and oppoſite to what they were before. In their carnal ſtate, vain company, and ſinful exerciſes were their Delight. To be ſeparated from theſe, and tyed to Prayer, Meditation, heavenly diſcourſe, and Company; O what a Bondage would that have been! Now to be tyed to ſuch carnal ſociety, and reſtrained from duties of godlineſs, and the ſociety of the godly, becomes a much ſorer Bondage to the Soul.

5. Fifthly, Experience of the Bitterneſs of ſin, is a reſtraint to a gracious Heart. They that have had ſo many ſick Days, and ſorrowful Nights for Sin as they have had, are loth to taſte that wormwood and Gall again, which their Soul hath ſtill in remembrance, 2 Cor. 7. 11. In that ye ſorrowed after a godly Sort, what Carefulneſs it wrought! He would not grapple with thoſe inward Troubles again, he would not have the chearful Light of Gods's Countenance eclipſed again for all, and much more than all the Pleaſures that are in ſin.

6. Sixthly, The Conſideration of the Sufferings of Chriſt for Sin, powerfully withholds a gracious Soul from the Commiſſion of it: Rom. 6. 6. Our old man is Crucified with him, that the Body of ſin might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſin. Were there a Knife or Sword in the Houſe that had been thruſt through the Heart of your Father, would you ever endure the ſight of it? Sin was the Sword that pierced Chriſt, and ſo the death of Chriſt becomes the Death of Sin in his People. Thus the Ghildren of God, and the Children of the Devil are manifeſt, in the Principles and Reaſons of their abſtinence from ſin.

SECT. IV.

(2.) SEcondly, They are alſo manifeſted by their hatred of ſin: This puts a clear diſtinction betwixt them: For no falſe or unregenerate Heart, can hate Sin as Sin; he may indeed,

1. Firſt, Hate ſin in another, but not in himſelf: Thus one proud man hates another; Calco ſuperbiam Platonis, ſaid Diogenes, when he trampled Plato's fine Cloaths under foot; I ſpurn the pride of Plato: Sed majori ſuperbiâ, as Plato ſmartly replyed, Thou trampleſt upon my pride, but it is with greater pride. Why (ſaith Chriſt to the Hypocrite) beholdeſt thou the mote in thy Brothers Eye, but conſidereſt not the beam that is in thine own Eye? Matt. 7. 3. How quick in eſpying, and raſh in cenſuring the ſmalleſt fault in another, is the Hypocrite! it was but one fault, and that but a ſmall one, but a mote that he could find in another; yet this he quickly diſcerns: It may be there were many excellent graces in him, theſe he overlooks, but the mote he plainly diſcerns.

It may be that Mote in his brothers eye had drawn many Tears from it; but theſe he takes no notice of; and mean while there is a beam (i.e.) a great horrid flagitious evil in himſelf; but it is too near him to be diſcerned, or bewailed: This is a ſad Symptom of a naughty Heart.

2. Secondly, He may hate it in its Effects, and Conſequents; not in its own Nature: As the Thief hates the Gallows, not the wickedneſs that he hath done. It is not ſin in it ſelf, but ſin in its Connexion with Hell, that is frightful to him.

The unſound Profeſſor could wiſh that there were no ſuch threatning in the Bible againſt Sin: When Sin tempts him, I would, ſaith he, but I fear the Conſequence. O Sin, could I ſeparate thee from Hell, nothing ſhould ſeparate thee and me.

3. Thirdly, He may hate it in a mood or pang, but not with a rooted Habitual hatred. It's plain from 2 Pet. 2. 22. that ſin may ſometimes lye upon the Conſcience of an unregenerate man, as a load lyes upon a ſick ſtomach; and ſo he may diſcharge himſelf of it, by reformation, reſtitution, &c. but a little time reconciles the quarrel betwixt him and his Luſt again: If they fall out they will fall in again; the dog is returned to his vomit, and the ſow that was waſhed, to her wallowing in in the mire.

But an upright Soul hates ſin in another manner, and in this hatred of ſin the Children of God are manifeſt.

1. Firſt, The Oppoſition of ſin to God, is the very ground and formal reaſon upon which a gracious ſoul oppoſes and hates it: if it be oppoſite to the holy Nature and Law of God, it cannot but be odious in his eyes: This cut Davids Heart, Pſal. 51. 4. Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned q. d. I have wronged Uriah greatly, I have wronged my ſelf and family greatly; but the wrong I have done to others is not worth naming, in compariſon of the wrong I have done to thee.

2. Secondly, The upright ſoul hates ſin in himſelf, more than he hates it in any other? as a man hates a Serpent in the hedge, but much more in his own boſome: Rom. 7. 23. But I ſee another Law in my members: and ver. 21. I find then a Law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me: q. d. I don't know how others find it, but I am ſure I find ſin in my very boſome, in my very bowels, it is preſent with me. O wretched man that I am! A gracious ſoul can mourn to ſee it in others; but to find it in himſelf, pierceth him to the very heart.

3. Thirdly, The gracious ſoul hates not only this or that particular ſin, but the whole kind, every thing that is ſinful. True hatred is ϖρὸς τὰ γένη, of the whole nature or kind, Pſal. 119. 104. I hate every falſe way; his reaſonings proceed a quatenus ad omne, from ſin, as ſin; concluding againſt every ſin. Sins that are profitable, and pleaſant, as well as ſins that have neither profit nor pleaſure: ſins that are ſecret as well as ſins that are open, and will defame him.

Ariſt. Rhet. lib. 2. cap. 4.

And before this tryal a falſe heart cannot ſtand; for he always indulges to ſome Luſt: there is an Iniquity which he cannot be ſeparated from.

4. Fourthly, The ſincere ſoul Hates ſin with an irreconcileable hatred: There was a time when ſin and his ſoul fell out, but there never will be a time of reconciliation betwixt them again.

That breach which effectual conviction once made, can never be made up any more: they will return no more to folly, Pſal. 85. 8. And indeed it ſeems to them that have ſuffered ſo much for ſin, that have endured ſo many fears and ſorrows for it, the greateſt folly in the world to return to ſin again: No, no, they admire the mercy of their eſcape from ſin, to their dying day; and never look back upon their former ſtate but with ſhame and grief.

Ask a Convert, would you be back again where once you were? Would you be among your old Companions again? Would you be fulfilling the luſts of the fleſh again? And he will tell you he would not run the hazard to abide one day or one night in that condition again, to gain all the Kingdoms of the World the next morning.

5. Fifthly, The ſincere ſoul hates ſin with a ſuperlative hatred: He hates it more than any other evil in the world beſides it. Penal evils are not pleaſant themſelves, but yet if he muſt endure them, or ſin; then ſufferings to chuſe: Heb. 11. 25. Chuſing rather to ſuffer affliction than enjoy the pleaſures of ſin; the worſt of ſufferings, rather than the beſt of ſin.

6. Sixthly, To conclude, ſo deep is the hatred that upright ones bear to ſin, that nothing pleaſes them more than the thoughts of a full deliverance from it doth: Romans 7. 34. I thank God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. What doth he ſo heartily thank God for? O for a proſpect of his final deliverance from ſin, never to be intangled, defiled, or troubled with it any more: And this is one thing that ſweetens death to the Saints, as much as any thing in the world can do, except Chriſts victory over it, and lying in the grave for us. To think of a grave is not pleaſant in it ſelf, but to think of a parting time with ſin, that's ſweet and pleaſant indeed.

SECT. V.

(3.) THIRDLY, The Children of God and the Children of the Devil, pure Gold, and vile Droſs, are Manifeſt as in Hatred of ſin, ſo in their Troubles, and Sorrow about ſin.

All trouble for ſin argues not ſincerity, ſome have reaſon to be troubled even for their troubles for ſin. So have they,

1. Firſt, That are only troubled for the commiſſion of ſome more groſs ſins that ſtartle the natural Conſcience, but not for inward ſins that defile the ſoul. Judas was troubled for betraying innocent Blood, but not for that baſe Luſt of Covetouſneſs that was the root of it, or the want of ſincere love to Jeſus Chriſt: Matth. 27. 4, 5. Outward ſins are ſins majoris infamiæ, of greater ſcandal; but Heart-ſins are oftentimes majoris reatus, ſins of greater guilt: To be troubled for groſſer ſins, and have no trouble for ordinary ſins daily incurred, is an ill ſign of a bad heart.

2. Secondly, A graceleſs heart may be much troubled at the diſcovery of ſin, when it is not troubled for the guilt of ſin, Jer. 2. 26. As the Thief is aſhamed when he is found, ſo is the houſe of Iſrael aſhamed: Hence it is that they ſtick not to commit ten ſins againſt God, to hide one ſin from the eyes of men. It is a Mercy that ſin is the matter of mens ſhame, and that all are not arrived to that height of impudence to declare their ſin as Sodom, and Glory in their ſhame; but to be aſhamed only becauſe men ſee it, and not with Ezra to ſay, O my God I am aſhamed, and bluſh to look up unto thee, Ezra. 9. 6. Aſhamed that thou ſeeſt it, is but Hypocriſie.

3. Thirdly, A graceleſs heart may be troubled for the rod that ſin draws after it, but not for ſin it ſelf, as it provokes God to inflict ſuch rods.

But the troubles of upright ones for ſin are of another kind and nature.

1. Firſt, They are troubled that God is Wronged, and his Spirit troubled by their ſins. So the penitent Prodigal, I have ſinned againſt heaven, and in thy ſight, Luk. 15. 21. Againſt Heaven; that is, againſt him whoſe Throne is in Heaven, a great, glorious, and infinite Majeſty: a poor worm of the Earth, hath lifted up his hand againſt the God of Heaven.

2. Secondly, They are troubled for the defilement of their own ſouls by ſin: hence they are compared in Proverbs 25. 26. to a troubled fountain; you know its the property of a living ſpring, when any filth falls into it, or that which lies in the bottom of it's channel, is raiſed and defiles its ſtreams, never to leave working till it have purged it ſelf of it, and recovered it's purity again.

So it is with a righteous man; he loves purity in the precept, Pſal. 119. 140. And he loves it no leſs in the principle and practice: He thinks it is Hell enough to lie under the pollution of ſin, if he ſhould never come under Damnation for it.

3. Thirdly, They are troubled for the eſtrangements

ments of God, and the hiding of his face from them becauſe of their Sin. It would go cloſe to an Ingenuous ſpirit to ſee a dear and faithful friend whom he hath grieved, to look ſtrange and ſhy upon him at the next meeting; as if he did not know him: much more doth it go to the heart of a gracious man to ſee the face of God turned from him, and not to be towards him as in times paſt. This went to Davids heart after his fall, as you may ſee, Pſal. 51. 11. Caſt me not away from thy preſence, and take not thy holy Spirit from me; q. d. Lord, if thou turn thy back upon me, and eſtrange thy ſelf from me, I am a loſt man: That is the greateſt miſchief that can befal me.

4. Fourthly, Their troubles for ſin run deep, to what other Mens do. They are ſtrong to bear other troubles, but quail and faint under this: Pſal. 38. 4. Other ſorrows may for the preſent be violent, and make more noiſe; but this ſorrow ſoaks deeper into the ſoul.

5. Fifthly, Their troubles for ſin are more private and ſilent troubles than others are; their ſore runs in the night; as it is Pſal. 77. 2. Not but that they may, and do open their troubles to Men, (and it is a mercy when they meet with a judicious, tender, and experienced Chriſtian to unboſom themſelves unto;) but when all is done, it is God and thy ſoul alone that muſt whiſper out matter: Ille vere dolet, qui ſine teſte dolet: That is ſincere ſorrow for ſin indeed, which is expreſſed ſecretly to God in the Cloſet.

6. Sixthly, Their trobles are incurable by creature comforts: it is not the removing ſome outward preſſures and inconveniences, that can remove their burden; nothing but pardon, peace and witneſſed reconciliation can quiet the gracious heart.

7. Seventhly, Their Troubles for ſin are ordinate and kept in their own place; they dare not ſtamp the dignity of Chriſts blood upon their worthleſs tears and groans for ſin: Lava lachrymas domine, Aug. Lord, waſh my ſinful tears in the blood of Chriſt, was once the deſire of a true Penitent. And thus our trouble for ſin ſhews us what our hearts are.

SECT. VI.

(4.) FOURTHLY, The behaviour and carriage of the ſoul with reſpect to ſubjection to the commands of ſin, ſhews what our eſtate and condition is. This will ſeparate droſs from Gold. All unregenerate men are the ſervants of Sin, they ſubject themſelves to its commands. This the Scripture ſometimes calls a Converſation in the luſts of the fleſh, Eph. 2. 3. Sometimes the ſelling of themſelves to ſin, 1 Kings 21. 20. Now as a judicious Divine obſerves, tho' the Children of God complain with Paul, Romans 7. 14, 15. That they are ſold under ſin, yet there is a vaſt difference betwixt theſe two: The Saints are ſold to it by Adam, but others by their own continued conſent. But to ſhew you the difference in this matter, I conceive it neceſſary to ſhew, wherein the reigning power of ſin doth not conſiſt, and then wherein it doth: That you may plainly diſcern who are in ſubjection to the reigning power of their corruptions, and who are not. Now there be divers things common both to the regenerate and unregenerate, and we cannot ſay the dominion of ſin lies in any or in all of them, viz. abſtractly and ſimply conſidered.

Dr. Reynolds.

1. Firſt, Both one, and other having Original Corruption dwelling in them, may alſo find this fountain breaking forth into groſs and ſcandalous ſins: But we cannot ſay that becauſe original Coruption thus breaks forth into groſs and ſcandalous ſins in both; therefore it muſt needs reign in the one, as well as in the other: a Righteous Man may fall before the Wicked, as it is Proverbs 25. 26. He may fall in the dirt of groſſer iniquities, and furniſh them with matter of reproach. So did David, Peter, Abraham, and many more of the Lords upright Hearted ones, whoſe ſouls nevertheleſs ſin did not reign over, by a voluntary Subjection to its Commands, nor muſt this embolden any to ſin with more liberty.

2. Secondly, Tho an upright Soul fall once and again into ſin, tho' he reiterate the ſame act of ſin, which he hath repented of before; yet it cannot meerly from thence be concluded, that therefore ſin reigns over him, as it doth over a Wicked Man that makes it his daily Trade. I confeſs every Reiteration of ſin, puts a further Aggravation upon it: And its ſad we ſhould repent, and ſin; And ſin and repent: But yet you read, Proverbs 24. 16. A juſt man falleth ſeven times, and riſeth up again: Job's Friends were good men, yet he tells them, Theſe ten times have ye Reproached me, Job 19. 3. This indeed ſhews a heart that greatly needs purging; For it is with relapſes into ſpiritual as it is with relapſes into natural diſeaſes: A Recidivation or return of the diſeaſe ſhews that the Morbifique matter was not duly purged; But tho' it ſhew the foulneſs, it doth not always prove the falſneſs of the Heart.

3. Thirdly, Though one may be impatient of the reproof of his ſin, as well as the other; yet that alone will not conclude ſin to be in full dominion over one, as it is over the other.

It's pity any good Man ſhould ſtorm at a juſt rebuke of ſin; That ſuch a precious Oyl as is proper to Heal, ſhould be conceited to Break his head: But yet fleſh will be tender, and touchy; Even in good Men. Aſa was a good Man, and yet he was wroth with the Prophet who reproved him; As you find, 2 Chron. 16. 10. yet I doubt not but their Conſciences ſmite them for it, when pride ſuffers not another to do it: A reproof may be ill tim'd, and ill managed by another; And ſo may provoke; But they will hear the voice of conſcience in another manner.

4. Fourthly, Tho in both ſome one particular ſin may have more power than another, yet neither doth this alone conclude that therefore that ſin muſt reign in one, as it doth in another. Indeed the beloved Luſt of every Wicked Man is King over his ſoul; but yet a godly mans conſtitution, calling, &c. may incline him more to one ſin than another; And yet neither, that, nor any other may be ſaid to be in dominion; for tho' David ſpeaks of his iniquity, (i. e.) his ſpecial ſin, Pſal. 18. 23. Which ſome ſuppoſe to be the ſin of lying, from that intimation, Pſal. 119. 29. yet you ſee in one place he begs God to keep him from it, and in the other he tells us he kept himſelf from it, and both ſhew he was not the Servant of it.

5. Fifthly, Tho' both may ſin againſt knowledge, yet it will not follow from thence, that therefore ſins againſt knowledge muſt needs be ſins in Dominion in the one, as they are in the other: There was too much light abuſed, and violence offered in Davids deliberated ſin; as he confeſſes, Pſal. 51. 6. and the ſad ſtory it ſelf too plainly ſhews; and yet in the main, David was an upright Man ſtill, tho' this conſideration of the fact ſhrewdly wounded his integrity: and ſtands upon record for a caution to all others.

SECT. VII.

WE have ſeen what doth not infer the Dominion of ſin in the former particulars, being ſimply conſidered; I ſhall next ſhew you what doth; and how the ſincere and falſe Hearts are diſtinguiſhed in this trial. And

1. Firſt, Aſſent and Conſent upon deliberation notes the ſoul to be under the Dominion of ſin: When the mind approves ſin, and the will gives its Plenary conſent to it; This ſets up ſin in its Throne, and puts the ſoul into ſubjection to it: For the Dominion of ſin conſiſts in its Authority over us, and our Voluntary ſubjection to it. This you find to be the character of a Wicked graceleſs Perſon; Pſal. 36. 4. He Deviſeth Miſchief upon his bed, he ſetteth himſelf in a way that is not good, he abhorreth not evil.

The beſt Men may fall into ſin through miſtake, or be precipitated into ſin through the violence of Temptation; But to deviſe Miſchief, and ſet himſelf in an evil way; This notes full aſſent of the mind, and then not to abhor evil, notes full conſent of the Will, and theſe two being given to ſin, not only antecedently to the acting of it; but alſo conſequently to it: to like it afterward, as well as before; this puts the ſoul fully under the power of ſin; what can it give more?

This (as one ſaith) in direct oppoſition to the Apoſtle, Rom. 12. 1. Is to preſent their bodies a dead Sacrifice, Unholy, and abominable to God; Acceptable to the Devil, which is their Unreaſonable ſervice: All Men by nature are given to ſin, but theſe Men give themſelves to it.

Mr. Caryl.

2. Secondly, The cuſtomary practice of ſin, ſubjects the ſoul to the Dominion of ſin: And ſo he that is born of God, doth not commit Sin, 1 John 3. 9. Fall into ſin, yea the ſame ſin, he may, and that often; But then it's not without Reluctance, Repentance, and a proteſt entred by the Soul in Heaven againſt it: So that ſin hath not a quiet Poſſeſſion of his Soul; He is not the ſervant of Sin, nor doth he Willingly walk after its Commandments: But ſo do its own Servants; It's their Daily Practice: Jer. 9. 3. They proceed from evil to Evil.

3. Thirdly, Delight in ſin proves the Dominion of ſin. So the Servants of ſin are Deſcribed, Iſa. 66. 3. They have choſen their own Ways, and their Soul Delighteth in their Abominations.

Look as our delight in God is the meaſure of our holineſs; ſo our delight in ſin is the meaſure of our ſinfulneſs. Delight in ſin is one of the uppermoſt rounds of the Ladder, and much higher the ſoul of a ſinner cannot go, till it be turned off into Hell. It's a ſport to a fool to do miſchief, Prov. 10. 23. Never merrier than when he hath the Devil for his play-fellow, ſaith one upon that place: Mr. Trap.

4. Fourthly, Impatience of Chriſts Yoke and Government, argues the ſoul to be the ſubject of ſin. This is clear from the Apoſtles reaſoning in Rom. 6. 17, 18. But God be thanked that ye were the Servants of ſin, but you have obeyed from the heart the form of Doctrine which was delivered you: Being then made free from ſin, ye became the ſervants of righteouſneſs: Where you ſee plainly, that no man can have his manumiſſion or freedom from ſin, that comes not into Chriſt's ſervice, and yields himſelf up to his Obedience.

So then to fret at Chriſt's Laws that tie us up from our Luſts, to be weary of all ſpiritual imployments as a burden intolerable, never to be in our Element and Centre till we are off from God and plunging in the World, and our luſts; this is a ſad note of a ſoul in ſubjection to ſin.

Object. But may not an upright ſoul find ſome wearineſs in ſpiritual things?

Sol. Doubtleſs he may, for he hath fleſh as well as Spirit, and tho' the ſpirit be willing, the fleſh is weak: He is ſanctified but in part, and his Delight in the Law of God is but according to, or after the inner man, Romans 7. 22. But he ſees another law in his members, (i. e.) contrary inclinations. However, if he be weary ſometimes in the duties of Godlineſs, to be ſure he is more weary out of them, and is not Centred and at reſt till he be with his God again: But the Carnal heart is where it would be when it is in the ſervice of ſin: And as a Fiſh upon dry land, when ingaged in ſpiritual duties: Eſpecially ſuch as are ſecret, and have no external allurements of Reputation to engage him to them.

But what ſurpriſals or captivities to ſin ſoever may befal an upright ſoul, yet it appears by theſe eight following particulars, that he is not the ſervant of ſin, nor in full ſubjection to it. For,

1. Firſt, Tho' he may be drawn to ſin, yet he cannot reflect upon his ſin without ſhame and ſorrow; Which plainly ſhews it to be an involuntary ſurprize. So Peter wept bitterly, Mat 26. 75. And David mourned for his ſin heartily; others can fetch new pleaſures out of their old ſins by reflecting on them: And ſome can glory in their ſhame, Phil. 3. 19. Some are ſtupid and ſenſleſs after ſin; and the ſorrow of a carnal heart for it, is but a morning dew; but it is far otherwiſe with God's people.

2. Secondly, Tho' a Saint may be drawn to ſin, yet it is not with a deliberate and full conſent of his will: Their delight is in the law of God, Rom. 7. 22. They do that which they would not, ver. 16. (i. e.) there are inward diſlikes from the new nature: And as for that caſe of David, which ſeems to have ſo much of counſel and deliberation in it; yet it was but in a ſingle act; it was not in the general Courſe of his life: He was upright in all things (i. e.) in the general courſe and tenour of his life, 1 Kings 15. 5.

3. Thirdly, Tho an upright ſoul may fall into ſin, yet he is reſtleſs and unquiet in that condition; like a Bone out of joynt: and that ſpeaks him to be none of ſins Servants: as on the contrary, if a Man be ingaged in the external duties of Relgion, and be reſtleſs and unquiet there; his Heart is not in it, he is not at reſt till he be again in his earthly buſineſs; this Man cannot be reckoned Chriſts Servant: a gracious heart, is much after that rate imployed in the work of ſin, that a carnal heart is when imployed in the work of Religion : That's a good rule, Ea tantum dicuntur ineſſe, quæ inſunt per modum quietis : That's a mans true Temper wherein he is at reſt : Poor David fell into ſin, but he had no reſt in his bones becauſe of it, Pſal. 51. 10, 11,12. if his heart be off from God and Duty for a little while, yet he recollects himſelf, and ſaith, as Pſal. 116. 7. Return unto thy reſt, O my Soul.

4. Fourthly, Tho' a ſincere Chriſtian fall into ſin, and commit evil ; yet he proceeds not from evil to evil, as the ungodly do : Jer. 9. 3. but makes his fall into one ſin, a caution to prevent another ſin. Peter by his fall got eſtabliſhment for time to come : If God will ſpeak Peace to them, they are careful to return no more to folly, Pſal. 85. 8. In that ye ſorrowed after a godly ſort, what carefulneſs it wrought ? yea what fear ? 2 Cor. 7. 11: It is not ſo with the Servants of ſin, one ſin leaves them much more diſpoſed to another Sin.

5. Fifthly, A ſincere Chriſtian may be drawn to ſin, but yet he would be glad with all his Heart to be rid of ſin. It would be more to him than thouſands of Gold or Silver, that he might grieve and offend God no more ; and that ſhews ſin is not in Dominion over him : He that is under the Dominion of ſin, is loth to leave his Luſts. Sins ſervants are not willing to part with it, they hold it faſt, and refuſe to let it go, as that Text expreſſeth it, Jer. 8. 5. but the great Complaint of the upright is expreſſed by the Apoſtle according to the true ſenſe of their hearts, in Rom. 7. 24. Who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death?

6. Sixthly, It appears they yield not themſelves willingly to obey ſin, in as much as it is the matter of their joy when God orders any Providence to prevent ſin in them : Bleſſed be the Lord ( ſaid David to Abigail ) and bleſſed be thy advice, and bleſſed be thou, that haſt kept me this day from ſhedding blood, 1 Sam. 15. 32, 33.

Here's bleſſing upon bleſſing for a Sin-preventing Providence. The Author is bleſſed, the Inſtrument bleſſed, the Means bleſſed. O it's a bleſſed thing in the Eyes of a ſincere Man to be kept from ſin : He reckons it a great Deliverance, a very happy Eſcape if he be kept from ſin.

7. Seventhly, This ſhews that ſome who may be drawn to commit ſin, yet are none of the Servants of Sin, That they do heartily beg the aſſiſtance of Grace to keep them from ſin : Keep back thy ſervant from preſumptuous ſins ( ſaith the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 19. 13. ) let them not have dominion over me ; q. d. Lord, I find propenſions to ſin in my Nature ; yea, and ſtrong ones too ; if thou leave me to my ſelf, I am carried into ſin as eaſily as a Feather down the Torrent. O Lord keep back thy ſervant : And there is no petition that upright ones pour out their Hearts to God in, either more frequently, or more ardently than in this, to be kept back from ſin.

8. Eighthly, and Laſtly, This ſhews the Soul not to be under the dominion of ſin, that it doth not only cry to God to be kept back from ſin, but uſes the means of prevention himſelf ; he reſiſts it, as well as prays againſt it, Pſal. 18. 23. I was alſo uprigth before him, and kept my ſelf from mine iniquity: So Job 31. 1. I have made a Covenant with mine eyes; and yet more fully in Iſa. 33. 15. He ſhaketh his hands from holding bribes, and ſtoppeth his ears from hearing blood ; and ſhutteth his eyes from ſeeing evil. See with what care the Portals are ſhut at which ſin uſeth to enter. All theſe things are very relieving conſiderations to poor Souls queſtioning their integrity under the frequent Surpriſals of Sin. And the next Tryal no leſs.

SECT. VIII.

(5.) Fifthly, Our Oppoſition to and conflicts with Sin, diſcover what we are, gold, or droſs.

There are conflicts with ſin both in the Regenerate, and in the Unregenerate ; but there is a vaſt difference betwixt them, as will appear in the following account.

1. Firſt, There is an univerſal, and there is a particular Oppoſition to ſin ; the former is found in regenerate, the latter in unregenerate Souls : A gracious Heart hates every falſe way, Pſal. 119. 104. and muſt needs do ſo, becauſe he hates and oppoſes Sin as Sin; ſo that he can have no peccatum in deliciis; no excepted or reſerved Luſt; but fights againſt the whole body, and every limb and member of the body of ſin.

But it is not ſo with the Hypocrite or carnal Profeſſor : He hath evermore ſome reſerved ſin, that he cannot part with.

2. Secondly, There is an Oppoſition betwixt the new Nature and Sin, and there is an Oppoſition betwixt natural Conſcience and Sin ; the former is the caſe of an upright Soul, the latter may be of a Self-deceiver.

A regenerate Perſon oppoſeth Sin, becauſe there is an irreconcileable Antipathy betwixt it and the new Nature in him, as is clear from Gal. 5. 17. The fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh ; and theſe are contrary the one to the other : By fleſh underſtand corrupt Nature ; by Spirit not only the ſpirit of Man, but the Spirit of God, or principle of Regeneration in Man : By the luſting of theſe two againſt each other, underſtand the Deſire and Endeavour of each others deſtruction and ruine : And the ground of all this is the contrariety of theſe two Natures.

Theſe are contrary one to the other : There is a twofold Oppoſition betwixt them, one formal, their very Natures are oppoſite ; the other effective, their workings and deſigns are oppoſite, as it is betwixt Fire and Water.

But the Oppoſitions found in unrenewed Souls againſt Sin, is not from their Natures, for Sin is ſuitable enough to that ; but from the Light that is in their Minds and Conſciences which ſcares and terrifies them. Such was that in Darius, Dan. 6. 14. He was ſore diſpleaſed with himſelf, and ſet his heart on Daniel to deliver him ; and laboured till the going down of the Sun to deliver him: Here the conteſt was betwixt Senſe of Honour upon one ſide, and Conviction of Conſcience on the other ſide.

Sometimes a generous and noble diſpoſition oppoſes ſordid and baſe Actions : Major ſum, & ad majora natus ; quam ut corporis mei ſim mancipium: I am greater, and born to greater things ; than that I ſhould be a Slave to my Body, ſaid a brave Heathen.

3. Thirdly, There is a permanent, and there is a tranſient Oppoſition to Sin ; the former is the caſe of God's People, the latter of temporary and unſound Profeſſors.

The Saint when he draws the ſword in this warfare againſt Sin, throws away the ſcabbard; no End of this Combate with ſin till life end; their life and their troubles are finiſhed together, 2 Tim. 4. 7. I have fought the good fight, and have finiſhed my Courſe.

But in other Men it is but a tranſient quarrel; out with ſin one day, and in another; and the reaſon is plain by what was noted before; it is not the oppoſition of two Natures: It is like the oppoſition of the Wind and Tyde, theſe may be contrary and make a ſtormy Sea to day; but the Wind may come about, and go as the Tyde goes to morrow: But in a Chriſtian it is as the oppoſition of the River and the Dam, one muſt give way to the other, there's no reconciling them: But the other like the Dog, returns to his vomit, 2 Pet. 2. ult.

4. Fourthly, There is an oppoſition to the Root of ſin, and an oppoſition to the fruits of ſin. A gracious Soul oppoſeth root and fruit, but others the latter only. The great Deſign of an upright Soul, is not only to lop off this or that branch, but to kill the root of ſin which is in his Nature, Rom. 7. 24. Who ſhall deliver me from the body of this Death? But the great care and endeavours of others is to ſuppreſs outward acts of ſin, and eſcape the miſchievous conſequents of it: Yea, their ſtudy is, as Lactantins phraſeth it, Potius abſcondere, quam abſcindere vitia: To hide, rather than to kill their Luſts.

5. Fifthly, There is an oppoſition to ſin, in the ſtrength of God, and an oppoſition to ſin, in our own ſtrength: The former is proper to a real Chriſtian, the latter is found frequently with unſanctified perſons: When a Chriſtian goes forth againſt any Sin, it is in the ſtrength of God: So you read their rule directs them, Eph. 6. 10. Be ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might: Take unto you the whole armour of God: And ſuitably you ſhall find them frequently upon their knees begging ſtrength from Heaven againſt their Luſts; 2 Cor. 12. 8. For this cauſe I beſought the Lord thrice, ſaith Paul, (i. e.) often and earneſtly, that the Temptation might depart from him.

But others go forth againſt ſin only in the ſtrength of their own reſolutions; ſo did Pendleton in our Story: Theſe Reſolutions, or Vows which they have put themſelves under, are as frequently fruſtrated, as made.

6. Sixthly, There is a ſucceſsful oppoſition to ſin, and an oppoſition that comes to nothing. The former is that of true Chriſtians, the latter is found among unregenerate men.

The work of Mortification in the Saints is progreſſive, and increaſing: Hence Rom. 6. 6. Our old man is Crucified with him, that the Boby of ſin might be deſtroyed. Sin dyes in Believers much what as crucified perſons uſe to dye; viz. a ſlow, lingering, gradual, but ſure death: Its vigour and Life expires by degrees: Or as a conſumptive Perſon dyes; for to that alſo he alludes here: There is a diſeaſe which is called Conſumptio totius, a Conſumption of the whole, and thoſe that dye of that diſeaſe languiſh more and more, till at laſt they drop ſenſim, ſine ſenſu, by imperceptible degrees and ſteps into the grave.

But in the unregenerate whatever conflicts they have with ſin; no corruption falls before it: It may be ſaid of them, as the Churh in another caſe complains of her ſelf, Iſa. 26. 18. We have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind, we have not wrought any deliverance in the Earth, neither have the Inhabitants of the World fallen. So it fares with theſe profeſſors, they pray, they hear, they vow, they reſolve; but when all is done, their luſts are as ſtrong and vigorous as ever: No degree of Mortification appears after all.

And thus much of the Tryal of our Sincerity by our carriage towards ſin.

CHAP. VII.

Shewing what Proof and Tryal is made of the Soundneſs or unſoundneſs of our Graces by the Duties of Religion which we perform.

SECT. I. WE now come (according to the Method propoſed) to make Tryal of the Truth or Falſeneſs of Grace, by the Duties we daily perform in Religion. And certainly they alſo have the Uſe and Efficacy of Fire, for this Diſcovery, 1 Joh. 2. 4, 5. He that ſaith I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments [is a lyar] and the truth is not in him: But whoſo keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: And hereby know we that we are in him.

This is a practical lye; of which the Apoſtle ſpeaks here, by which Men deceive others for a while, and themſelves for ever: A lye not ſpoken, but done; when a mans courſe of life contradicts his profeſſion. The life of an Hypocrite is but one long or continued lye: He ſaith or profeſſeth he knows God, but takes no care at all to obey him in the Duties he commands: He either neglects them, or if he perform them, it is not as God requires: If they draw nigh him with their Lips, yet their Heart is far from him, Iſa. 29. 13. Thou art near in their mouth, but far from their reins, Jer. 12. 2.

There are ſome that feel the influence and power of their Communion with the Lord in Duties, going down to their very reins: And there are others whoſe lips and tongues only are toucht with Religion.

This is an age of light and much profeſſion: Men cannot now keep up a reputation in the ſober and profeſſing World, whileſt they let down, and totally neglect the duties of Religion: But ſurely if Men would be but juſt to themſelves, their very performances of duty would tell them what their Hearts are.

SECT. II.

FOr there are among others theſe following Particulars, that do very clearly difference the ſound from the unſound Profeſſor.

1. Firſt, The Deſigns and true Levels and Aims of Mens Hearts in Duty will tell them what they are.

An Hypocrite aims Low, Hoſ. 7. 14. They have not cried unto me with their heart, when they howled upon their beds; they aſſembled themſelves for Corn and Wine, and they rebell againſt me. It is not for Chriſt, and Pardon, for Mortification, and Holineſs; but for Corn, and Wine, thus they make a Market of Religion; all their ends in duty are either carnal, natural, or legal; it is either to accommodate their carnal ends, or ſatisfie and quiet their Conſciences: and ſo their duties are performed as a ſin-offering to God.

But an upright heart, hath very high, and pure aims in duty; the deſire of their ſoul is to God, Iſa. 26. 8. Their ſoul follows hard after God, Pſal. 63. 8. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, that will I ſeek after; that I might dwell in the houſe of the Lord all the days of my life, to ſee the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his Temple, Pſal. 27. 4. Theſe are the true Eagles that play at the Sun, and will not ſtoop to low and earthly objects. Alas! if the injoyment of God be miſſed in a duty, it is not the greateſt enlargments of gifts will ſatisfie: He comes back like a man that hath taken a long journey to meet his friend upon important buſineſs, and loſt his labour, his friend was not there.

2. Secondly, The engagements of mens hearts to God in duties will tell them what they are, The hypocrite takes little heed to his heart, Eſa. 29. 13. they are not afflicted really for the hardneſs, deadneſs, unbelief, and wandrings of their hearts in duty; as upright ones are: Nor do they engage their hearts, and labour to get them up with God in duty as his people do. I have intreated thy favour with my whole heart, ſaith David. Pſal 119. 58. They are not pleaſed in duty till they feel their hearts ſtand towards God like a bow in its full bent. I ſay not it is always ſo with them, what would they give that it might be ſo? but ſurely if their ſouls in duty be empty of God, they are filled with trouble and ſorrow.

3. Thirdly, The Conſcience men make of ſecret as well as publick duties, will tell them what their hearts and graces are, true or falſe. A vain Profeſſour is curious in the former, and either negligent, or at beſt formal in the latter: for he finds no inducements of honour, applauſe, or oſtentation of gifts externally moving him to them: nor hath he any experience of the ſweetneſs and benefit of ſuch duties internally to allure and engage his ſoul to them.

The Hypocrite therefore is not for the Cloſet, but the Synagogue, Matth. 6. 5, 6. Not but that education, example, or the impulſe of conſcience may ſometimes drive him thither; but it is not his daily delight to be there; his meat and drink to retire from the clamour of the world to enjoy God in ſecret. 'Tis the obſervation of their duties is the great inducement to theſe men to perform them; and Verily ſaith our Lord, ver. 2. they have their reward, ἀπέχουσι, they have it away; or they have carryed off all the benefit and advantage that ever they ſhall have by Religion. Much good do them with their applauſe and honour, let them make much of that airy reward, for it's all that ever they ſhall have.

But now for a ſoul truly gracious, he cannot long ſubſiſt without ſecret prayer. 'Tis true, there is not always an equal freedom and delight, a like enlargment and comfort in thoſe retirements; but yet he cannot be without them: He finds the want of his ſecret, in his publick duties: If he and his God have not met in ſecret, and had ſome Communion in the morning, he ſenſibly finds it in the deadneſs and unprofitableneſs of his heart and life all the day after.

4. Fourthly, The ſpirituality of our duties tryes the ſincerity of our graces: An unregenerate heart is carnal, whileſt engaged in duties that are ſpiritual. Some men deceive themſelves in thinking they are ſpiritual men, becauſe their imployment and calling is about ſpiritual things, Hoſea 9. 7. This indeed gives them the denomination, but not the frame of ſpiritual men: And others judge themſelves ſpiritual perſons, becauſe they frequently perform and attend upon ſpiritual duties: But alas the heart and ſtate may be carnal notwithſtanding all this. O my friends, it is not enough that the object of your duties is ſpiritual, that they reſpect an holy God; nor that the matter be ſpiritual, that you be converſant about holy things; but the frame of your heart muſt be ſpiritual, an heavenly temper of ſoul is neceſſary, and what are the moſt heavenly duties without it?

The end and deſign you aim at muſt be ſpiritual, the enjoyment of God, and a growing conformity to him in holineſs; elſe multiply duties as the ſand on the ſea-ſhore, and they all will not amount to one evidence of your ſincerity. God is my witneſs whom I ſerve with my ſpirit, ſaith the Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 9. He ſeems to appeal to God in this matter. I ſerve God in my ſpirit, and God knows that I do ſo; I dare appeal to him that it is ſo: He knows that my heart is with him, or would be with him in my duties: The arms of my faith do either ſenſibly graſp, or are ſtretched out towards him in my duties. O how little ſavour do gracious hearts find in the moſt excellent duties, if God and their ſouls do not ſenſibly meet in them!

Certainly Reader, There is a time when God comes nigh to men in duty, when he deals familiarly with men, and ſenſibly fills their ſouls with unuſual powers and delights. The near aproaches of God to their ſouls are felt by them, (for ſouls have their ſenſes as well as bodies;) and now are their minds abſtracted and marvellouſly refined from all that is material and earthly, and ſwallowed up in ſpiritual excellencies and Glories.

Theſe are the real prelibations or foretaſtes of Glory, which no man can by words make another to underſtand, as he himſelf doth that feels them.

Theſe ſeaſons I confeſs do but rarely occur to the beſt of Chriſtians, nor continue long when they do: alas! this wine is too ſtrong for ſuch weak bottles as we are. Hold Lord (ſaid an holy man once) it is enough, thy poor creature is a clay veſſel, and can hold no more: This is that Joy unſpeakable and full of glory, which is mentioned, 1 Pet. 1. 7, 8. Something that words cannot deſcribe: theſe ſeaſons are the golden ſpots of our lives, when we are admitted to theſe near and ineffable views and taſtes of God: Poſſibly ſome poor Chriſtians can ſay but little to theſe things; Their ſorrows are exerciſed in duties more than their Joys: They are endeavouring to mount, but the ſtone hangs at the heel: They eſſay, but cannot riſe to that height that others do, who are got up by their labouring faith into the upper Region, and there diſplay their wings and ſing in the Sun-beams: But though they cannot reach this height, yet have they no ſatisfaction in duties wherein there is no intercourſe betwixt God and their ſouls.

Rara hora, brevis mora; ſapit quidem ſuaviſſime, ſed guſtatur rariſſime. Bernard.

That which contents another, will not content a Chriſtian: If the King be abſent, men will bow to the empty Chair; but if God be abſent ſent, an empty duty gives no Satisfaction to a gracious Spirit. The pooreſt Chriſtian is found panting after God by ſincere Deſires, and labouring to get up that dead and vain Heart to God in duty; though alas! it's many times but the rolling of the returning ſtone againſt the hill: Yet he never expects advantage by that Duty wherein the Spirit of God is not; nor doth he expect the Spirit of God ſhould be, where his own Spirit is not.

5. Fifthly, Aſſiduity and Conſtancy in Duties of Religion makes a notable Diſcovery of the ſoundneſs or rottenneſs of mens hearts. The Hypocrite may ſhew ſome zeal and forwardneſs in duties for a time, but he will jade and give out at length: Job 27. 10. Will he delight himſelf in the Almighty? will he always call upon God? No, he will not. If his motions in Religion were natural, they would be conſtant; but they are artificial, and he is moved by external inducements; and ſo muſt needs be off and on: He prays himſelf weary of praying, and hears himſelf weary of hearing: His heart is not delighted in his duties, and therefore his duties muſt needs grow ſtale and dry to him after a while. There be three Seaſons in which the zeal of an Hypocrite may be inflamed in duties.

Firſt, When ſome imminent danger threatens him, ſome ſmart rod of God is ſhaked over him: When he ſlew them, then they ſought him, and returned and enquired early after God, Pſal. 78. 34. O the goodly words they give, the fair Promiſes they make; and yet all the while they do but flatter him with their Lips and lye unto him with their Tongues, ver. 36, 37. for let but that danger paſs over, and the Heavens clear up again, and he will reſtrain prayer, and return to his old courſe again.

Secondly, When the times Countenance and favour Religion, and the Wind is in his back; O what a zeal will he have for God! So in the ſtony Ground, Matth. 3. 5. the ſeed ſprung up and flouriſhed till the Sun of perſecution aroſe, and then it faded away; for it had no depth of Earth: No deep ſolid inward work or principle of Grace to maintain it.

Thirdly, When Self-ends and deſigns are accommodated and promoted by theſe things; this was the caſe of Jehu, 2 Kings 10. 16. Come ſee my zeal, for what? for a baſe Self-intereſt, not for God: How fervently will ſome men pray, preach, and profeſs, whileſt they ſenſibly feel the incomes and profit of theſe duties to their fleſh: Whileſt they are admired and applauded!

Theſe external incentives will put an Hypocrite into an hot fit of zeal, but then as it is with a Man whoſe colours are raiſed by the heat of the Fire, and not by the healthfulneſs of a good conſtitution; it ſoon fades and falls again.

But bleſſed be God it is not ſo with all. The man whoſe heart is upright with his God, will keep judgment, and do righteouſneſs at all times, Pſal. 106. 3. Whether dangers threaten or no; whether times favour Religion or no; whether his earthly intereſt be promoted by it or no; he will be holy ſtill: He will not part with his duties when they are ſtript naked of thoſe external advantages: As the Addition of theſe things to Religion did not at firſt engage him, ſo the Subſtraction of them, cannot diſengage him.

If his duty become his reproach, yet Moſes will not forſake it: Heb. 11. 26. If he loſe his Company, and be left alone, yet Paul will not flinch from his duty, 2 Tim. 4. 16. if hazard ſurround duty on every ſide, yet Daniel, will not quit it, Dan. 6. 10. for they conſidered theſe things at firſt, and counted the coſt, they ſtill find Religion is rich enough to pay the coſt of all that they can loſe or ſuffer for its ſake: Yea, and that with an hundred-fold reward, now in this life. They never had other deſign in engaging in Religious duties, but to help them to Heaven, and if they recover Heaven at laſt, whether the way to it prove better, or worſe; they have their deſign, and ends: And therefore they will be ſtedfaſt, always abounding in the work of the Lord, as knowing their labour is not in vain in the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. ult.

Sixthly, The humility and Self-denyal of our hearts in duties will try what they are for their integrity and ſincerity towards God. Doth a Man boaſt his own Excellencies in Prayer as the Phariſee did, Luke 18. 10, 11. God I thank thee I am not as other Men: Which he ſpeaks not in an humble acknowledgement of the Grace of God which differences man from man; but in a proud oſtentation of his own Excellencies? Doth a man make his duties his Saviours, and truſt to them in a vain confidence of their worth and dignity? Luke 18. 9. Surely his heart which is thus lifted up within him, is not upright, Hab. 2. 4. But if the heart be upright indeed, it will expreſs its humility, as in all other things, ſo eſpecially in its duties wherein it approaches the great and holy God.

Firſt, It will manifeſt its humility in thoſe awful and reverential apprehenſions it hath of God, as Abraham did, Gen. 18. 27. And now I that am but duſt and aſhes (ſaith he) have taken upon me to ſpeak unto God. The humility of Abrahams ſpirit is in ſome meaſure to be found in all Abrahams Children.

Secondly, In thoſe low and vile thoughts they have of themſelves, and their religious performances: Thus that poor Penitent, Luke 7. 38. ſtood behind Chriſt weeping: Yet the dogs eat the crumbs, ſaith another, Mark 7. 28. I am more brutiſh than any man, ſaith a third, Prov. 30. 7. I abhor my ſelf in duſt and aſhes, ſaith a fourth, Job 42. 6. and as little eſteem they have for their performances, Iſa. 64. 6. All our righteouſneſſes are as filthy rags. I deny not but there is pride and vanity in the moſt upright ones; but what place ſoever it finds in their converſes with men, it finds little room in their converſes with God; or if it do, they loath it, and themſelves for it.

Thirdly, But eſpecially their humility in duty is diſcovered in renouncing all their duties in point of dependance, and relying intirely upon Chriſt for righteouſneſs, and acceptance: They have ſpecial regard to duties in point of Obedience, but none at all in point of Relyance.

Seventhly, The Communion and intercourſe which is betwixt God and Men in duties, notably diſcovers what their Perſons and Graces are. And it muſt needs do ſo, becauſe what communion ſoever the Hypocrite hath with duties, or with Saints in duties; to be ſure he hath none with God.

None can come nigh to God in duty, but thoſe that are made nigh by reconciliation: All ſpecial Communion with Chriſt, is founded in real union with Chriſt: But The wicked are eſtranged from the womb, Pſal. 58. 3.

But now there is real communion betwixt God and his People in duties. Truly our fellowſhip κοινωνία, our Communion is with the Father and Son, 1 Joh. 1. 3. God pours forth of his Spirit upon them, and they pour forth their hearts to God. It is ſenſibly manifeſt to them when the Lord comes nigh to their Souls in duty, and as ſenſible they are of his retreats and withdrawments from their Souls, Cant. 3. 1, 4. They find their hearts like the Helotrope, open and ſhut according to the acceſſes and receſſes of the divine preſence. They that never felt any thing of this Nature, may call it a Fancy, but the Lords People are abundantly ſatisfied of the reality thereof.

Their very Countenance is altered by it, 1 Sam. 1. 18. the ſad and cloudy countenance of Hannah cleared up, there was fair weather in her very face, aſſoon as ſhe knew ſhe had audience and acceptance with her God. I know all communion with God doth not conſiſt in Joyes and Comforts, there is as real communion with God in the mortifying and humbling influences of his Spirit upon Men, as in the cheering and refreſhing Influences thereof. I know alſo there is a great diverſity in the Degrees and Meaſures thereof. It is not alike in all Chriſtians, nor with the ſame Chriſtian at all times: But that real Chriſtians have true and real Communion with God in their Duties, is a truth as manifeſt in ſpiritual ſenſe and experience of the Saints, as their Communion is one with another.

8. Eighthly, Growth and improvement of Grace in duties notably differences the ſound, and unſound heart. All the duties in the World will never make an Hypocrite more holy, humble, or heavenly than he is: But as the watering of a dry ſtick will ſooner rot it, than make it flouriſhing and fruitful. What was Judas the better for all thoſe heavenly Sermons, Prayers, and Diſcourſes of Chriſt which he heard? and what will thy Soul be the better for all the Duties thou performeſt weekly and daily, if thy heart be unſound? It's plain from Joh. 15. 4. there muſt be an implantation into Chriſt, before there can be an improvement in fruitful Obedience. And it is as plain from 1 John 2. 14. that the virtues of ordinances muſt remain, the efficacy and powers that we ſometimes feel under them, muſt abide and remain in the Heart afterwards; or we cannot grow, and be made fruitful by them.

But the falſe Profeſſor is neither rooted in Chriſt by union with him, nor doth or can retain the vertue of ordinances within him: But like one that views his face in a glaſs, quickly forgets what manner of man he was: His head indeed may grow, his knowledge may increaſe, but he hath a dead and withered heart.

But as the Saints have real Communion with God in duties, ſo they do make improvements anſwerable thereunto: There is more certainly ripening of their graces that way; a changing or gradual transformation from glory to glory; ſpringing up to that full ſtature of the Man in Chriſt. They that are planted in the Houſe of the Lord, ſhall flouriſh in the Courts of our God, Pſal. 92. 13, 14. There is pure and ſincere milk in the breaſts of ordinances: A believer ſucks the very breaſts of Chriſt in his duties, and doth grow thereby, 1 Pet. 2. 2. they do grow more and more judicious, experienced, humble, mortified, and heavenly, by converſing with the Lord frequently in his appointments.

There is I confeſs a more diſcernable growth and ripening in ſome Chriſtians, than in others: The Faith of ſome groweth exceedingly, 2 Theſ. 1. 3. others more ſlowly, Heb. 5. 12. but yet there are improvements of grace in all upright ones: Habits are more deeply radicated, or fruits of obedience more increaſed.

Obj. I*f any upright Soul be ſtumbled at this, as not being able to diſcern the increaſe of his graces after all his duties*;

Sol. Let ſuch conſider, the growth of grace is diſcerned as the growth of plants is, which we perceive rather creviſſe, quam creſcere: To have grown, than to grow: Compare time paſt and preſent, and you may ſee it: But uſually our Eager deſires after more, make us over-look what we have as nothing.

9. Ninthly, The Aſſiſtances and influences of the ſpirit in duties, ſhews us what we are: No vital ſanctifying influences can fall upon carnal hearts in duties. The ſpirit helps not their infirmities, nor makes interceſſion for them with groanings which cannot be utered, as he doth for his own people: Rom. 8. 26, 27. they have his aſſiſtances in the way of common Gifts, but not in the way of ſpecial Grace: He may enable them to preach judiciouſly, not experimentally: To pray orderly and neatly, not feelingly, believingly, and broken-heartedly: For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the ſons of God, Rom. 8. 14. he never ſo aſſiſts, but where he hath firſt ſanctified. Carnal men furniſh the materials of their duties out of the ſtrength of their parts; a ſtrong Memory, a good Invention, are the Fountains whence they draw.

But it is otherwiſe with Souls truly gracious: they have ordinarily a three-fold aſſiſtance from the Spirit in reference to their duties.

Firſt, Before duties, exciting them to it, making them feel their need of it: like the call of an empty ſtomach: Pſal. 27. 8. Thou ſaidſt, Seek my face: My heart anſwered, Thy face, Lord, will I ſeek.

Secondly, In their duties, furniſhing both matter and affection; as in that Text lately cited, Rom. 8. 26. guiding them not only what to ask, but how to ask.

Thirdly, After their duties, helping them not only to ſuppreſs the pride and vanity of their ſpirits, but alſo to wait on God for the accompliſhment of their deſires.

Now though all theſe things wherein the ſincerity of our Hearts is tryed in duties, be found in great variety (as to degrees) among Saints, yet they are Myſteries unknown by experience to other Men.

CHAP. VIII.

Opening the Tryals of Sincerity and Hypocriſie by ſufferings upon the account of Religion.

SECT. I. WE are now arrived at the laſt Tryal of Grace propounded, viz. by ſufferings for Religion.

Thouſands of Hypocrites embarque themſelves in the profeſſion of Religion in a Calm; but if the Wind riſeth, and the Sea rageth, and they ſee

Religion will not tranſport them ſafely to the Cape of their earthly hopes and expectations: They deſire to be landed again aſſoon as may be, for they never intended to ride out a ſtorm for Chriſt: So you find Matth. 13. 20, 21. He dureth for a while, but when Tribulation or Perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the Word, by and by he is offended.

But yet it is not every Tryal by ſufferings that ſeparates Gold from droſs, and therefore my Buſineſs will be to ſhew,

1. Firſt, When the Fire of ſufferings and Perſecution is hot and vehement enough to ſeparate them.

2. Secondly, Why it muſt needs diſcover Hypocriſie when it is at that height.

3. Thirdly, What advantages ſincere Grace hath to endure that ſevere and ſharp Tryal

SECT. II.

1. NOw the Fire of Perſecution or Sufferings for Religion, may be judged intenſe and high enough to ſeparate Gold and Droſs,

Firſt. When Religion expoſes us to eminent hazard of our deepeſt and deareſt Intereſts in this World. Such are our Liberties, Eſtates and Lives: Now 'tis a fierce and fiery Tryal indeed. Sometimes it expoſes the Liberties of its Profeſſors, Revel. 2. 10. The Devil ſhall caſt ſome of you into priſon: Sometimes their Eſtates, Heb. 10.34. Te took joyfully the ſpoiling of your goods; and ſometimes their Lives, Heb. 11.37. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, they were ſlain with the ſword. Whileſt it goes no higher than ſome ſmall inconveniencies of Life, Reputation and Senſe of Honour will hold a falſe heart; but when it comes to this, few will be found able to endure it, but thoſe that expect to ſave no more by Religion but their Souls, and account themſelves in good caſe if they can but ſave them with the loſs of all that is dear to them in this World.

Here the falſe heart boggles, here it uſually jades and faulters.

Secondly, The fiery Tryal is then high, when there remains no viſible hopes of deliverance or outward incouragements to ſenſe, that the Scene, will alter: When we ſee not our ſigns, there is no more any Prophet; nor any that can tell us how long, as the caſe with the Church was in Pſal. 74. 9. then their hands hang down, and their hearts faint: Nor is it to be wondred at, when the length of Troubles prove ſo ſore a Temptation even to the upright, to put forth their hands to Iniquity, as it is Pſal. 125. 3. if ſuch a Temptation ſhake ſuch men as build on the rock, it muſt quite overturn thoſe whoſe foundation is but ſand.

Thirdly, When a falſe Profeſſor is engaged alone in ſufferings, and is ſingled out from the Herd as a Deer to be run down, now it's a thouſand to one but he quits Religion to ſave himſelf: Good Company will encourage a faint hearted Traveller to jogg on a great way: But if he be forſaken by all, as Paul was, no man to ſtand by him, if left alone, as Elijah was, what can encourage him to hold out?

Indeed if they had the ſame inviſible ſupports thoſe good men had, that the Lord was with them, that would keep them ſteady: But wanting that Encouragement from within, and all ſhrinking away from without; they quickly tyre downright.

Fourthly, When near relations and intimates oppoſe and tempt us. The Prophet ſpeaks of a time when a mans Enemies ſhall be the men of his own houſe, it may be the wife of his boſome, Mica 7. 5, 6. O what a Tryal is that which Chriſt mentions in Luke 14. 26. when we muſt hate Father and Mother, Wife and Children, or quit claim to Chriſt and Heaven! This is hard work indeed.

How hard did that truly noble and renowned Galeacius Caracciolus find this! O what a conflict found he in his bowels! Now Chriſt and our deareſt Intereſt come to meet like two men upon a narrow bridge, if one go forward, the other muſt go back, and now the predominant Intereſt can no longer be concealed.

Fifthly, When powerful Temptations are mixed with cruel ſufferings, when we are ſtrongly tempted, as well as cruelly perſecuted; this blows up the Fire to a vehement height. This was the Tryal of thoſe precious primitive Believers, Heb. 11. 35, 37. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, they were tempted: Here was life, liberty and preferment ſet upon one hand; and death in the moſt formidable ſhape upon the other. This cannot but be a great Tryal to any: But eſpecially when a cruel death, and tender Temper meet; then the Tryal goes high indeed.

SECT. III.

(2.) AND that ſuch ſufferings as theſe will diſcover the falſeneſs and rottenneſs of Mens hearts cannot be doubted, if you conſider that this is the fire deſigned by God for this very uſe and purpoſe, to ſeparate the Gold from the droſs, ſo you will find it, 1 Pet. 4. 12. Beloved think it not ſtrange concerning the fiery tryal, which is to try you, (i. e.) the very deſign and aim of Providence in permitting and ordering them is to try you. The deſign of Satan is to deſtroy you, but God's deſign is to try you. Upon this account you find the hour of Perſecution (in a ſuitable notion) call'd the hour of Temptation, or Probation, Rev. 3. 10. for then Profeſſors are ſifted to the very bran: Searched to the very bottom principles. This is the day that burns as an Oven, in which all the proud, and all that do wickedly ſhall be as ſtubble, Mal. 4. 1. for,

1. Firſt, In that day the predominant Intereſt muſt appear, and be diſcovered: It can be concealed no longer, No man can ſerve two Maſters, ſaith Chriſt, Luke 16. 13. A man may ſerve many Maſters, if they all command the ſame things, or things ſubordinate to each other; but he cannot ſerve two Maſters if their Commands claſh and interfere with each other; and ſuch are the Commands of Chriſt and the fleſh in a ſuffering hour: Chriſt ſaith, Be thou faithful to the death; the fleſh ſaith, ſpare thy ſelf, and ſecure the comforts of life. Chriſt ſaith, He that loveth Father, or Mother, Wife or Children, Lands or Inheritances more than me, is not worthy of me. Fleſh ſaith, He that will grieve and break the Hearts of ſuch dear Relations, and forſake when he might keep ſuch earthly accommodations, is not worthy of them.

Thus the two Intereſts come in full oppoſition: And now have but patience to wait a little, and you ſhall diſcern which is predominant. A dog follows two men while they both walk one way; and you know not which of the two is his maſter; ſtay but a little till their path parts, and then you ſhall quickly ſee who is his Maſter. So is it in this caſe.

2. Secondly, In that day ſenſible ſupports fail, and all a mans relief comes in by the pure and immediate actings of faith; and were it not for thoſe reliefs, his heart would ſoon faint and dye away under diſcouragements, 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18. We faint not, whilſt we look not at the things which are ſeen, for they are temporal, but at the things which are not ſeen, for they are Eternal: q. d. No longer than we keep our eye intently fixed upon the inviſible and eternal things in the coming World; we feel our ſelves fainting, and dying away under the troubles and afflictions of this World. I had fainted (ſaith David) if I had not believed. How then ſuppoſe ye ſhall the Hypocrite live at ſuch a time, who hath no faith to ſupport him? No relief but what comes in through his ſenſes?

3. Thirdly, In that day all meer Notions and Speculations about Religion vaniſh, and nothing relieves and ſatisfies the ſuffering ſoul, but what it really believes, and what it hath ſatisfying proof and experience of in himſelf. There are a great many pretty pleaſing notions with which our minds are entertained with ſome delight in times of peace, which can do us no ſervice at all in the day of trouble: and for our ſpeculative unpracticable knowledge of the greateſt truths in Religion, as little ſervice is to be expected from them. Except we have better evidence and ſecurity about them, we ſhall be loth to venture all upon the credit of them: that's a very conſiderable paſſage to this purpoſe in Heb. 10. 34. Ye took joyfully the ſpoiling of your goods, [knowing in your ſelves,] that ye have in Heaven a better and more enduring ſubſtance: This knowing in your ſeves is by inward ſenſible experience, taſte and feeling, which is abundantly ſatisfying to the Soul; and ſtands oppoſed to all that traditional knowledge we receive from others; which, as it leaves the mind fluctuating, ſo the heart alſo dead and comfortleſs.

4. Fourthly, In that day the root and foundation of a mans faith and hope is tryed, and then they that have built upon the ſand muſt needs fail: for every thing is as its foundation is: Principles are to us, what a root is to a tree, or a foundation to an houſe; a flaw, or grand defect there ruines all: This we find to be the very ſcope of thoſe two famous parables, Luke 14. 25. and Matth. 13. 21. Leſſer troubles ſhake but the branches, but theſe try the root: If nothing be found there but ſelf-ends, the force of education, the influence of examples; ſurely when the winds riſe high, and beat upon it, they will quickly lay the loftieſt profeſſour even with the ground.

And thus you ſee what a Criſis an hour of temptation, the ſuffering hour is, and what diſcoveries of Hypocriſie it muſt needs make; for now the Hipocrite like Orpha will forſake Religion, but ſincerity will make the ſoul cleave to it, as Ruth did to Naomi.

SECT. IV.

3. WHAT Advantages Sincerity gives the ſoul for its eſtabliſhment and perſeverance in ſuffering times, I ſhall briefly account for in the following particulars.

1. Firſt, Sincere godlineſs dethrones that Idol the love of this World, in all true Chriſtians; and this is it that makes men ſhrink and flinch from Chriſt in a day of ſuffering. I do not deny but even believers themſelves love the world too much, but they love it not as their chief good; it is not their portion or happineſs, if any man ſo love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, 1 John 2. 15. How much ſoever a ſincere Chriſtian loves the world, yet ſtill it is in ſubordination to the love of God, John 21. 15. Sincerity can conſiſt with no other love of the world, it will not ſuffer ſuch a curſed plant to grow under its ſhadow.

Now, what is it but this inordinate ſupream love of the Creature that makes men forſake Chriſt in time of temptation? This was the ruine of that young man, Mat. 19. 22. He went away ſorrowful, for he had great poſſeſſions. This was the overthrow of Demas, 2 Tim. 4. 10. He hath forſaken me (ſaith the Apoſtle) having loved this preſent World: The love of this world like ſap in green wood will not ſuffer you to burn for Chriſt; get but the heart mortified to the Creature, by a diſcovery of better things in heaven; and it will eſtabliſh and fix your ſpirits, that it ſhall not be in the power of creatures to ſhake you off from Chriſt your foundation.

2. Secondly, Sincerity knits the ſoul to Chriſt, and union with him ſecures us in the great tryals: Munimur quatenus unimur. The Hypocrite having no union with Chriſt, can have no communion with him; nor communications of grace from him; and ſo that little ſtock of his own being quickly ſpent, (I mean natural courage and reſolution) and no incomes from Chriſt, he muſt needs give up in a ſhort time; but it is with a believer in a day of trouble, as it is with a Garriſon beſieged by Land, but free and open to the Sea; whence freſh ſupplys are daily ſent in to relieve it: ſee 2 Cor. 1. 5. As the ſufferings of Chriſt abound in us, ſo our conſolation alſo aboundeth by Chriſt: freſh aids and daily ſupplyes proportionable to our expences, and decays of ſtrength. So Col. 1. 11. Strengthned with all might in the inner man, according to his glorious power; unto all patience, and longſuffering with joyfulneſs: And this is the believers great advantage by his union with Chriſt in a day of Tryal.

3. Thirdly, As ſincerity unites the ſoul with Chriſt, ſo it ſets the heart upon heaven and things eternal, Col. 3. 1, &c. ſurely nothing is more conducive to our ſtability than this, in the hour of temptation.

This is the moſt effectual preſervative from temptations upon the right hand, and upon the left. Moſes could caſt a Kingdom at his heels, deſpiſe the riches, pleaſures and honours of Egypt, whilſt his eye was fixed upon him that is inviſible; and had reſpect to the recompence of reward, Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. And it was a brave reply of the Forty Martyrs to Valence the Emperour, tempting them with the preferments and honours of the world; Why offer you theſe trifles to us, when you know how the whole world is contemned by us? And for temptations on the left hand, how little can they move that ſoul, who realizes the glory of the approaching world, and ſees the afflictions and ſuffering of this world preparing him for, and haſtening him to the enjoyment of it; temptations meet but with cold entertainment from ſuch ſouls.

4 Fourthly, Sincerity drives but one deſign, and that is to pleaſe and injoy God; and what can more eſtabliſh and fix the ſoul in the hour of Temptations than this? The reaſon why the Hypocrite is unſtable in all his ways, is gven us by the Apoſtle James, 1. 8. He is a double minded man, δίψυχος ἀνὴρ, a man of two Souls in one Body; as a prophane wretch once boaſted, that he had one Soul for God, another for any thing: But all the deſigns of a gracious heart, are united in one: And ſo the intire ſtream of his affections runs ſtrong.

'Tis baſe by-ends and ſelf-intereſts, that like a great many ditches cut out of the bank of a River, draw away the ſtream out of its proper Channel, and make its waters fail: But if the heart be united for God as the expreſſion is, Pſal. 86. 11. Then we may ſay of ſuch a Chriſtian, as was ſaid of a young Roman, Quicquid vult, valde vult; What he doth, is done with all his might. And this was the ground of that ſaying, liberet me Deus ab homine unius tantùm negotii: A man of one only deſign puts to all his ſtrength to carry it: nothing can ſtand before him.

5 Fifthly, Sincerity brings a mans will into ſubjection to the will of God; and this being done, the greateſt danger and difficulty is over with ſuch a man. This is that holy Oyl, which makes the Wheels of the ſoul run nimbly even in difficult paths of obedience, non tardat uncta rota. Let but a man be once brought to that, The will of the Lord be done; as it is. Acts 21. 13. To ſee the higheſt reaſon of cheerful obedience in the holy, juſt and good will of God; and then the difficulty is over: He can ſuffer quietly, what men inflict unjuſtly.

6 Sixthly, Sincerity takes its meaſures of preſent things by the rules of faith, and eternity: it goes not by the ſame reckoning and account that others do, who judge of things by ſenſe, and the reſpects they have to the preſent World: 2 Cor. 4. 18. We look not at the things that are ſeen, but at the things that are not ſeen; And this is there given as the reaſon of his not fainting under preſent difficulties: ſo Rom. 8. 18. I reckon that the ſufferings of the preſent time, are not worthy to be compared with glory which ſhall be revealed in us: He will not allow himſelf to undervalue eternal glory by once mentioning preſent ſufferings, in a way of bemoaning himſelf for them: A ſteady eye upon the other world makes us more than Conquerours over the troubles of this World.

7 Seventhly, To conclude, Sincerity alone hath all the heavenly aids and aſſiſtances to ſtability and perſeverance in ſuffering times. Upright ones (and ſuch only) have Chriſts interceſſion in heaven for them, Rom. 8. 34. The Spirits conſolation in all their troubles, 1 Pet. 4. 14. The ſpirit of glory and of God reſteth on them: The beneficial Miniſtry of Angels, who are ſent forth upon their account, Heb. 1. 14. A ſtock of Prayers going for them all the World over, Eph. 6. 18. Multiudes of precious promiſes in the Scriptures, for every line, word and ſyllable of which the faithfulneſs of God ſtands engaged: So that it's impoſſible ſuch gold can periſh in the fire.

And thus of the ſeveral ways by which grace is here tryed.

CHAP. IX.

Opening the deſigns and ends of God in bringing of the profeſſours of Religion into ſuch various tryals of their graces in this World.

SECT. I.

THESE are ſome of the ways and methods in which God brings his Gold to the Touchſtone, and to the fire, even in this world; before the awful and ſolemn Tryal they muſt come to in the final Judgment. And if we deſire to be ſatisfied what the deſign and end of God in making ſuch probations of his people is;

We muſt conclude in the general, he certainly deſigns his own glory, and his peoples advantage, and profit in them. If he ſuffer them to be tryed by reproaches, happy are they, the ſpirit of God and glory reſteth on them; there's their profit, and though his name be evil ſpoken of, yet in the meekneſs of their ſpirits, he is glorified, as it is, 1 Pet. 4. 14. If the ſcourge ſlay ſuddenly, he laugheth at the tryal of the innocent, Job. 9. 23. Not at their afflictions, but at the effects and bleſſed iſſues and reſults of them: Not that it gives them pain, but that it gives him Glory: Upon this account the Apoſtle bids us count it all Joy when we fall into divers temptations or tryals: And ſtill the more tryals the more joy; for thereby God will produce ſuch effects, as are more precious than gold that periſheth, 1 Pet. 1. 7. O who can value the comfort that is taſted by the ſoul upon the tryal and diſcovery of its ſincerity! When after ſome ſore temptation, wherein God hath helped us to maintain our integrity; or after ſome cloſe pinching affliction, wherein we have diſcovered in our ſelves a ſweet reſignation to, and contentment in the will of God; an heart cleaving to the Lord, purged and made more ſpiritual under the rod; we can turn to the Lord, and appeal to him as the Prophet did, Jer. 12. 3. But thou O Lord knoweſt me, thou haſt ſeen me, and tryed mine heart towards thee.

I ſay who can duly value ſuch an advantage? who would exchange ſuch a comfort for all the gold and ſilver in the world? How many tryals ſoever God brings his people under, to be ſure neither his own glory nor their intereſt ſhall ſuffer any damage by them.

SECT. II.

BUT more particularly, let us bring our thoughts cloſe to the matter before us; and we ſhall find many great advantages and benefits riſing out of theſe Tryals of ſincerity; for, 1 Firſt, Hereby Hypocriſie is unmasked and diſcovered; The vizard is pluckt off from the falſe profeſſor, and his true natural face and complexion ſhewn to the world; and in this there is a great deal of good.

Object. Good, you will ſay, where lyes it? all the world ſees the miſchief and ſad effects of it; many are ſtumbled, many are hardned by it, woe to the world becauſe of offences, Mat. 16.7.

Sol. True, ſome are prejudiced and hardned by it, ſo as never to have good thoughts of the ways and people of God more; that's ſad indeed; however therein God accompliſhes his word, and executeth his decree. And though theſe periſh; yet

Firſt, Others are warned, awakened, and ſet a ſearching their own hearts more narrowly than ever; and this is good: 1 Cor. 10. 11, 12. Now theſe were our examples, wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

Secondly, Hereby ſin is aſhamed, and it is good when ſin that hath expoſed men to ſo much ſhame, ſhall be it ſelf expoſed to ſhame. This is the juſt reward of ſin, Jer. 13. 25, 26. This is thy lot, the portion of thy meaſures from me, ſaith the Lord; becauſe thou haſt forgotten me, and truſted in falſhood, therefore will I diſcover thy skirts upon thy face, that thy ſhame may appear.

The turning up the skirt is a modeſt expreſſion of expoſing a perſon to the greateſt ſhame: in the day of Tryal, God by diſcovering Hypocriſie ſhames the Hipocrite: and ſurely many ſuch diſcoveries are made of Men at this Day; we may ſee ſin that lurked cloſe in the Heart before, now laid open before all Iſrael and before the Sun.

Thirdly, Hereby the poor ſelf-couzening Hypocrite hath the greateſt opportunity and advantage that ever was before him in all his life, to recover himſelf out of the ſnare of the Devil: Now all his pretences are gone; Now that which like a ſhield was advanced againſt the arrows of reproof and conviction is gone: Now a poor Creature ſtands Naked and Stript out of all his pleas as a fair and open mark to the Word, and his own Conſcience; and happy will it be for him if now the Lord make conviction to enter point-blank into his ſoul: All theſe are bleſſed effects of the Diſcovery of Hypocriſie.

2. Secondly, By theſe Tryals integrity is cleared up, and the doubts and fears of many upright and holy ones allayed and quieted, reſolved and ſatisfied.

O what would many a poor Chriſtian give for ſatisfaction in that point of ſincerity! How many tears have been ſhed to God in ſecret upon that account? How many hours have been ſpent in examination of his own heart about it, and ſtill jealouſies and fears hang upon his heart? He doubts what he may prove at laſt: Well, ſaith God, let his ſincerity then come to the teſt; kindle the fire and caſt in my gold. Tryals are the high way to aſſurance: Let my child ſee that he loves me more than theſe, that his heart is upright with me. I will try him by proſperity and by adverſity; By perſecutions and temptations, and he ſhall ſee his heart is better than he ſuſpects it to be. This ſhall be the day of reſolution to his fears and doubts.

The Apoſtle ſpeaking of Hereſies, 1 Cor. 11. 7, 9. puts a neceſſity upon them. There muſt be Hereſies (ſaith he) that they which are approved may be made manifeſt. The ſame neceſſity there is (and for the ſame end) of all other tryals of grace, that the lovely beautiful ſweet face of ſincerity may be opened ſometimes to the world to enamour them, and to the ſoul in whom it is, to ſatisfie it that it doth not perſonate a Chriſtian, but lives the very Life of a Chriſtian, and hath the very ſpirit and principles of a Chriſtian in him.

3. Thirdly, By theſe tryals pride and ſelf-confidence is deſtroyed and mortified in the ſaints, as much as by any thing in the world: We never ſee what poor weak creatures we are, till we come to the tryal. It's ſaid, Deut. 8. 2. God led Iſrael through the deſart to prove them and to humble them: When we are proved, then we are humbled. Thoſe that over-reckon their graces before the tryal, ſee they muſt come to another account, and take new meaſures of themſelves after they have been upon tryal.

Ah! little did I think, ſaith one, that I had ſo much love for the World, and ſo little for God, till afflictions tryed it. I could not have believed that ever the creature had got ſo deep into my heart, till providence either threatned or made a ſeparation, and then I found it. I thought I had been rich in faith, till ſuch a danger befell me; or ſuch a want began to pinch hard; and then I ſaw how unable I was to truſt God for protection, or proviſion. O it's a good thing that our hearts be kept humble and lowly, how rich ſoever they be in grace.

4. Fourthly, By tryals grace is kept in exerciſe, and the gracious ſoul preſerved from ſecurity and ſpiritual ſlothfulneſs: Tryals are to grace what the eſtuations and continual agitations of the waters are to the ſea: or what the racking of Wines from the Lees is to it: Were it not for our frequent tryals and exerciſes, we ſhould quickly ſettle upon the Lees; and our duties would be (as God complains of Ephraim) like ſowre or dead drink, Hoſ. 4. 18. flat, and ſpiritleſs. Moab hath been at eaſe from his youth, and he hath ſettled on his lees, and hath not been emptied from veſſel to veſſel; Neither hath he gone into Captivity; Therefore his taſte remained in him, and his ſcent is not changed, Jer. 48. 11.

Much after that rate it would be with our hearts, did not the Lord frequently try and exerciſe them: let the beſt man be without ſome tryal or other but a few Months, and you may find the want of it in his prayers and conferences quickly. O what a tang of formality will be found in them! and is it for the honour of God, or profit of his people that it ſhould be ſo? No, no, the Lord knows it is not; but how ſhall their ſpirits be reduced to the former zealous heavenly temper again? Why, ſaith the Lord, they muſt into the furnace again. I will melt them and try them, for how ſhall I do for the Daughter of my people! Jer. 9. 7. I love them too well to loſe them for want of a Rod: Alas! if I ſhould ſuffer things to go on at this Rate, what will become of them in a little time? what delight can I take in their duties! When the Faith, Fervour, Humility, and holy Seriouſneſs of their Spirits is wanting in them? I will therefore refine them as Siver is refined, and try them as Gold is tryed ; and they ſhall call upon my Name, and I will hear them ; and I will ſay it is my people ; and they ſhall ſay the Lord is my God, Zech. 13. 9. and thus the Lord chides himſelf friend again with his People.

Thus he recovers them to their true temper, and thus his viſitations do preſerve their ſpirits: And when the Lord ſees theſe ſweet effects of his Tryals upon them, it greatly pleaſeth him. O now ſaith God, I like it. This Providence hath done them good, this rod was well beſtowed, the letting looſe of this Temptation or that Corruption upon them, 'hath made them find their knees again, now I hear the Voice of my Child again.

Beloved, this is a bleſſed fruit and effect of our frequent Tryals, and how ungrateful ſoever they are to fleſh and blood, that affects eaſe and is loth to be diſturbed ; yet it is neceſſary to the preſervation of our ſpirits.

5. Fifthly, By the Tryal of our graces Satan is defeated, and his accuſations of the Saints found to be meer ſlanders. It is a very common thing with the Devil and wicked men, to accuſe the people of God of Hypocriſie, and to tell the World they are not the men and women they are taken to be ; and that if their inſide were but turned out by ſome through Tryal, or deep ſearch, it would appear that Religion did not indeed live in their ſouls as they pretend ; but that they only act a part, and perſonate heavenly and mortified perſons upon the publick ſtage of profeſſion.

Thus the Accuſer of the Brethren ſuggeſts the Hypocriſie of Job, Cap. 2. 5. Put forth thine hand now and touch his bone and his fleſh, and he will curſe thee to thy face. q. d. Well might Job ſerve thee, whileſt thou haſt been ſo bountiful a Maſter to him ; he hath been well rewarded for all the ſervice he hath done thee ; but if thou ſtop the current of his proſperity, thou ſhalt ſee how quickly he will ſtop the courſe of his duty: A few laſhes from thy hand, will make him curſe thee to thy face: But O what ſhame and diſappointment was it to that envious ſpirit, what a vindication of Job's integrity, when under the greateſt Tryals of his Faith and Patience, he ſtill held faſt his integrity, and ſhews himſelf as great a pattern of patience under the Croſs, as he had been of piety in the days of his greateſt proſperity! Satan gets nothing by bringing forth the Saints upon the ſtage, to be made a Spectacle to Angels and Men, as it is, 1 Cor. 4. 9.

6. Sixthly, and Laſtly, The frequent Tryals of grace, exhibit a full and living Teſtimony againſt the Atheiſm of the world. Theſe prove beyond all words or arguments that Religion is no fancy, but the greateſt reality in the world: men would make Religion but a fancy, and the zeal of its profeſſors, but the intemperate heat of ſome crazy brains, overheated with a fond notion.

They that never felt the real influences of Religion upon their own ſouls, will not believe that others do feel them. Serious piety is become the ludicrous ſubject with which the wanton Wits of this Athieſtical world ſport themſelves. But behold the wiſdom and goodneſs of God exhibiting to the world the undeniable teſtimonies of the truth of Religion, as often as the ſincere profeſſours thereof are brought to the teſt by afflictions from the hand of God, or perſecutions from the hands of Men. Lo here is the faith and patience of the Saints: Here is their courage, meekneſs, and ſelf-denyal ſhining as gold in the fire: They have the real proofs of it before their eyes: inſtead of caſting them into hell, and convincing them by eternal fire, he is pleaſed to caſt his own people into the fire of affliction, that they who ſcoff at them may be convinced at an eaſier and Cheaper rate. It is no new thing to ſee the Enemies of Religion brought over to embrace it, by the conſtancy and faithfulneſs of the Saints in their Tryals and Sufferings for it. God grant that the Atheiſm of this preſent generation do not occaſion a more fiery Tryal to the people of God in it, than they have yet ſuffered.

CHAP. X.

Shewing that that grace only is to be reckoned ſincere and real, which can endure thoſe tryals which God appoints, or permits for the diſcovery of it.

SECT. I. BEFORE I offer you the proofs and Evidences of this truth, it will be Neceſſary to Prevent ſome miſtakes that may be occaſioned by miſunderſtanding of it.

Caution 1. And in the firſt place, we are not to think aſſurance of our ſincerity impoſſible to be had in this life, becauſe as long as we live here we are in a ſtate of Tryal ; and how many Tryals ſoever have been made upon us already, yet ſtill there are more to come ; and we know not what we ſhall prove in future tryals, though God hath kept us upright in former Tryals ; No, no, this is none of my meaning ; Nor doth ſuch a Concluſion Neceſſarily follow this Aſſertion: for a Chriſtian that hath rightly cloſed with Chriſt at firſt, and been faithful in the duties of active and paſſive obedience hitherto, may be aſſured upon good grounds of a Victory before he come to the fire of his remaining tryals. So was the Apoſtle, Rom. 8. 35, &c. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? ſhall tribulation, or diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword? nay in all theſe we are more than conquerours, through him that hath loved us: Here's an aſſured triumph before the Combate. So Job 23. 10. But he knoweth the way that I take; when he hath tryed me, I ſhall come forth as gold, he appeals to God for the ſincerity of his heart, ſo far as he had hitherto gone in the way of Religion ; and thence concludes that what ever tryals God ſhould bring him to for time to come, he ſhould come forth as gold, (i. e.) he ſhould not loſe one grain by the fire ; And this confidence of a gracious ſoul, is built not only upon experience gained in former Tryals, but upon faith in the Power, Promiſes, and Faithfulneſs of God which are engaged for him in the Covenant of grace, to keep him in the greateſt dangers that befall him in this world.

He believes the power of God is able to make him ſtand, though he hath no power nor might in himſelf to overcome the leaſt Temptation, 1 Pet. 1. 5. You are kept, φρουρουμένους, (kept as with a garriſon) by the Power of God through Faith unto ſalvation: when Chriſt hath once taken poſſeſſion of the ſoul by his Spirit, he fortifies it by his power as a garriſon, that uſing the means, it be ſurprized or betrayed no more into the enemies hand, ſo as finally to be loſt.

He builds this confidence alſo upon the promiſes of God, which are his ſecurity in all future dangers, and how are all the pages of the Bible beſpangled with ſuch promiſes, as the firmament is with bright and glorious Stars! ſuch are theſe of the firſt magnitude, 1 Cor. 1. 8, 9. Chriſt ſhall confirm you to the end, that ye may be blameleſs in the day of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; God is faithful by whom ye are called unto the fellowſhip of his Son Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: and no leſs ſatisfying and ſweet is that, Jer. 32. 40. And I will make an everlaſting Covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me: And of the ſame nature is that alſo, John 10. 27, 28. My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they ſhall never periſh; neither ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand.

If there be any Hypocrite in ſheeps-cloathing, he hath no part nor lot in this Promiſe; but it ſecures the whole flock of Chriſt, great and ſmall, againſt all danger.

He alſo builds his aſſurance upon the faithfulneſs of God, which ſtands engaged to make good every line, word and ſyllable of his promiſes to his people: ſo we find it in 1 Cor. 10. 13. There hath no temptation taken you but ſuch as is common to man; but God is faithful; who will not ſuffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with every temptation make a way to eſcape, that ye may be able to bear it: and 2 Theſ. 3. 3. but the Lord is faithful, who ſhall ſtabliſh you, and keep you from evil.

Add to this the conſtant prevalent interceſſion of Chriſt in heaven for his people in all their tryals, and then you will ſee a ſincere Chriſtian need not to deny himſelf the joy and comfort of his aſſurance upon the account and ſuppoſition of his future tryals.

SECT. II.

Caution 2. NOR do we here ſuppoſe in this aſſertion, that inherent grace in the ſaints hath a ſufficiency of ability in it ſelf to endure the greateſt and ſevereſt tryals that can befal it in this World. It is certain that it ſhall be carryed ſafely through all, but not in its own ſtrength and ability.

That is a true obſervation of the learned Gerſon: Perfectiones ſibi relictæ, ſunt pondera ad ruinam: The moſt perfect creature left to it ſelf will fall into ruine. This was exemplified in the Angels that fell, and in Adam, though in a perfect ſtate: Divine preſervation is the prop which ſupports the beſt creatures from ruine. Grace it ſelf is but a creature, and therefore a dependant being: It is but a ſtream, depends upon the ſupply of the fountain; if the fountain let not forth it ſelf, what becomes of the ſtream? That's a true and judicious obſervation of the learned Dr. Ames; Perſeverantia fidelium, vel immutabilis eorum conditio ſecundum integram ejus rationem, non provenit à principio intrinſeco ſolo, nec a ſolo extrinſeco; ſed partim ab intrinſeco, ex natura vitæ ſpiritualis a Chriſto fluentis; & partim ab extrinſeco, ex cuſtodia, protectione, & directione Dei: Ameſii Coronis, Art. 5. The perſeverance of believers, or the immutability of their condition, if we view the whole ground and reaſon of it, is not wholly from within, nor wholly from without it ſelf: But partly from Chriſt into them; and partly from the nature of the ſpiritual life which flows from the keeping, protection and direction of God. That protection is always afforded to this life of grace, and this life of grace always needs that protection. The beſt of men are but men at beſt, as one ſpeaks: It was not Peters grace and reſolution that kept him, but Chriſts care of him and interceſſion for him, Luke 22. 32. Be ſtrong in the Lord, (ſaith the Apoſtle) and in the power of his might, Epheſ. 6. 10. Without me (ſaith Chriſt) you can do nothing, John 15. 5.

Neither of theſe is that which I have before me to prove, but this is that which I aim at; That ſuch ſeeming grace as was never yet brought to the tryal, nor will be able to bear the tryal when God ſhall bring it thereto; muſt not paſs for currant (as too frequently it doth) among us; ſuch grace will neither comfort us now, nor ſave us hereafter: for,

SECT. III.

1. FIRST, Great numbers of perſons in the profeſſing world are deceived and deſtroyed by truſting to ſeeming and untried grace. This was the miſerable condition of theſe Laodicean profeſſours in the Text: They reckoned themſelves rich, but were really poor, all is not gold that gliſters: Their Gold (as they accounted it) was never tryed in the fire: If a mans whole Eſtate lay in ſome precious ſtone, ſuppoſe a rich Diamond, how is he concerned to have it throughly tryed? to ſee whether it will bear a ſmart ſtroke with the hammer, or fly like a Briſtol Diamond under it? All that you are worth lyes in the truth and ſincerity of your grace: And till that be tryed you know not whether you be worth any thing or nothing.

Reader, There are two ſad ſights in the world, which cannot but deeply affect every upright heart: one is to ſee ſo many thouſands of rational and ingenious men in the Romiſh Church, by an implicit faith in their guides, venturing their ſouls upon their bare word, never ſearching the Scriptures with their own eyes, but wholly truſting to the infallibility of the Pope, or a Council, when in the mean time, they would fear to take their word for a ſum of money without ſome farther ſecurity. It is amazing to behold the ſoul-deſtroying, eaſie credulity of theſe men: But this is a ſtroke of madneſs and ſpiritual infatuation judicially inflicted upon them; That the judgment which is written might be fulfilled in them, God ſhall ſend them ſtrong deluſions that they ſhould believe a lye, 2 Theſ. 2. 11.

And yet more amazing is that ſtroke of God upon multitudes of vain and formal profeſſours even in the Reformed Proteſtant Churches; where no man is reſtrained from ſearching the Scriptures; nay, where men are ſo frequently and earneſtly preſſed from Sabbath to Sabbath to examine themſelves; and prove their own work, that yet ſo many are content to leave all at hazard; and without any more ado or farther ſearch in the matter, credit the report of their own deceitful Hearts, and take all for Granted, without due Tryal or Examination of the matter.

Surely, no one thing ſends down more ſouls daily to hell out of the profeſſing world, than this doth. The five fooliſh Virgins ( i. e. the unprincipled Profeſſours in the Reformed Churches) periſhed this Way. They took it for granted all was well, becauſe they had lamps of profeſſion as well as others; and ſaw not the cheat, till the cry was heard at midnight, and their unfurniſhed Lamps went out, Mat. 25.

2. Secondly, The promiſes of ſalvation are made over to tryed grace, and ſuch only as will endure the tryal: So James 1. 12. Bleſſed is the man that endureth temptation: For when he is tryed he ſhall receive the Crown of life which God hath promiſed to them that love him: We muſt be firſt tryed, and then crowned If a man ſtrive for maſteries, yet is he not Crowned, except he ſtrive lawfully, 2 Tim. 2. 5. He manifeſtly alludes to the Roman Games to which there were Judges appointed, to ſee that no foul play were offered contrary to the Law for Wreſtling: And where it was found, the Crown was denyed them. Not to him that ſets forth in the morning with reſolution and gallantry, but to him that holds out till the evening of his life, is the promiſe made, Mat. 10. 22. He that endureth to the end ſhall be ſaved: ſo Rom. 2. 7. To them who by patient continuance in well doing ſeek for glory and Honour, and Immortality; eternal life: And once more, Heb. 3. 15. We are made partakers of Chriſt, if we hold the beginning of our confidence, ſtedfaſt unto the end. So that if you ſhould endure ſome few ſlighter troubles, and faint at laſt; give out when a cloſer tryal befals you; all your labours and ſufferings are in vain. Sincerity and final perſeverance are the conditions of all ſpecial promiſes.

3. Thirdly, Every mans graces and duties muſt be tryed and weighed by God in the great day; and if they cannot endure theſe leſſer Tryals, to which God expoſes them now, how will they endure that ſevere and exact tryal to which he will bring them then? No man can ſearch his own heart with that exactneſs in this World, as God will ſearch it in the world to come.

I may ſay in this caſe to you as the Lord ſpake to Jeremiah, Chap. 12. 5. If thou haſt run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee; Then how canſt thou contend with horſes? And if in the land of peace wherein thou truſtedſt, they have wearied thee; then how wilt thou do in the ſwelling of Jordan? This was ſpoken to encourage the Prophet to conſtancy in his work; and as if the Lord had ſaid, O Jeremy, do the ſtrivings of the men of Anathoth thine own Town, diſhearten thee? pluck up thy ſpirits and faint not; there are harder Tryals than theſe that thou muſt undergo at Jeruſalem: Theſe are no more to what is coming, than the running with footmen, is to contending with horſes: or the paſſing a ſmall Rivulet, to the ſwellings of Jordan.

To allude to this, If our graces and duties cannot bear theſe lighter tryals, if a little lift of proſperity, or lighter ſtroke of adverſity diſcover ſo much falſneſs, Rottenneſs, Pride, and ſelfiſhneſs in the heart: If we cannot reſiſt the motions of corruptions, but yield our ſelves to obey ſin in the luſts of it: If we can neither keep our hearts with God in duties, nor mourn for our wanderings from him: If a few ſcoffs from wicked tongues, or tryals of perſecution from the hands of men will cauſe us to faint in the way, and turn back from following the Lord: What ſhall we do when he comes whoſe fan is in his hand, and who will throughly purge his floor, Mat. 3. 12. Who will try every mans work as by fire, 1 Cor. 3. 13. Search the ſecrets of all hearts, Romans 2. 16. Weigh every man to his ounces and drachms; Surely we can take little comfort in that which is ſo unable to bear the ſevere tryals of that day, that it cannot ſtand before the ſlighter Tryals of this day.

4. Fourthly, True grace is willing to be tryed, and nothing is more deſirable to an upright ſoul, than to know his own condition. If therefore we ſhun the tryal, and are loth to ſearch our ſelves, or be ſearched by the Lord, our condition is ſuſpicious, and we can take little comfort in it. It was Davids earneſt deſire, Pſal. 139. 23. That God would throughly ſearch his heart and reins, and ſee if there were any way of Wickedneſs in him: Falſe grace is ſhy of Gods eye; it cares not to be examined; but this is the delight of ſincere ones: Every one that doth evil hateth the light, leſt his deeds ſhould be reproved; but he that doth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God, John 3. 20, 21.

The reaſon is plain why Hypocriſie cannot endure to come to the Touchſtone and teſt, for Hypocrites having a ſecret conſciouſneſs of their own guilt and unſoundneſs, know that by this means their vain confidence would quickly be confuted, and all their reputation for Religion blaſted: but O if men dare not ſtand before the word, as it is now opened and applyed by Miniſters; How will they ſtand when it ſhall be opened and applyed in another manner by Jeſus Chriſt?

O profeſſour, if thy condition be good, thy heart right, thou wilt deſire to know the very worſt of thy ſelf; and when thou haſt made the deepeſt ſearch thou canſt, thou wilt ſtill fear thou haſt not been ſevere enough, and impartial enough to thy ſelf: Nothing will give thee more conten than when thou feeleſt the word dividing thy ſoul and ſpirit, thy joynts and marrow: Nothing ſo much comforts thee under, or after an afflicti-on, as the diſcovery it hath made of thy heart, thou wilt ſeem to feel with what affections thoſ words came from the prophets lips, Jer. 12. 3. But thou O Lord knoweſt me, thou haſt ſeen me, an tryed my heart towards thee. O what a refreſhing ſweetneſs will ſtream through thy heart; and a the powers of thy ſoul, when thou canſt make th like appeal to God with like ſincerity! And cer tainly without ſuch a diſpoſition of ſpirit toward the tryal of our graces, we can have little evidenc of the truth of them.

CHAP. XI.

Containing divers practical inſtructive Inference from this doctrine, with a ſerious Exhortation t ſelf-tryal, and through examination.

SECT. I.

Infer. I. ARE there ſuch variety of trya appointed to exame the ſince ty of Mens graces, how great a vanity then is Hypocriſie, and to how little purpoſe do men endeavour to conceal and hide it! We ſay, Murder will out, and we may as confidently affirm hypocriſie will out. When Rebekah had laid the plot to diſguiſe her Son Jacob, and by perſonating his brother to get the bleſſing, Jacob thus objects againſt it, My Father peradventure will feel me, and I ſhall ſeem to him as a deceiver; and I ſhall bring a curſe upon me, and not a bleſſing, Gen. 27. 12. as if he ſhould ſay; But what if my Father detect the cheat, how then ſhall I look him in the face? how ſhall I eſcape a curſe? After the ſame manner every upright Soul ſcares it ſelf from the way of Hypocriſie. If I diſſemble, and pretend to be what I am not: My Father will find me out. Ah there is no darkneſs nor ſhadow of death that can conceal the Hypocrite: But out it will come at laſt, let him uſe all the art he can to hide it. Oftentimes God diſcovers him by the Tryals he appoints in this World, and men in that day ſhall return and diſcern betwixt the righteous and the wicked; between him that ſerveth God, and him that ſerveth him not, Mal. 3. 18. but if he make an hard ſhift to get by a private way to hell, carryiug this comfort with him to the laſt ſtep; that no body knows or thinks he is gone thither; yet there will be a day when God will ſtrip him naked before the great Aſſembly of Angels and Men, and all ſhall point at him and ſay,

Loe this is the Man that made not God his hope: This is he that wore a garment of profeſſion to deceive, but God hath now ſtript him out of it, and all men ſee what he is: For, There is nothing covered that ſhall not be revealed, and hid that ſhall not be known: Mat. 10. 26. and the Apoſtle aſſures us, 1 Tim. 5. 24, 25. That they that are otherwiſe cannot be hid: If mens works be not good, it's impoſſible they ſhould be hid long: A gilded piece of braſs may paſs from hand to hand a little while; but the Touch-ſtone will diſcover the baſe metal: If that do not, the fire will.

O Sinners, away with your Hypocriſie, be honeſt, ſincere, plain, and hearty in Religion; if not, confuſion of face ſhall be your recompence from the Lord, that is what you ſhall get by it.

Infer. 2. Secondly, Are there ſuch Tryals appointed and permitted by the Lord for the diſcovery of his Peoples ſincerity in this World, then let none of God's People expect a quiet ſtation in this World: Certainly you ſhall meet with no reſt here: You muſt out of one fire into another, and it is a merciful condeſcenſion of the Lord to poor Creatures, thus to concern himſelf for their ſafety and benefit: What is Man that thou ſhouldſt magnifie him? and that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart upon him? that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? Job 7. 17, 18.

O 'tis a great deal of honour put upon a poor worm, when God will every moment try him and viſit him: It argues the great eſteem the Goldſmith hath of his Gold, when he will ſit by the Furnace himſelf, and order the Fire with his own hand: When he pries ſo often, and ſo curiouſly into the fining pot, to ſee that none of his precious Metal, upon which he ſets his heart, be loſt. Think it not then a debaſing to you to be ſo ften expoſed to Tryals: If God did not value ou highly, he would not try you ſo frequently: What would become of you, if your condition ere ſhould be more ſettled and quiet than now it s? I believe you find droſs enough in your hearts after all the fires into which God hath caſt you: Surely there is filth enough in the beſt of God's People to take all this: It may be a great deal more trouble than they have yet met with: We fancy it a brave life to live at eaſe, and if we meet with long reſpits and intervals of tryal than uſual, we are apt to ſay, We ſhall never be moved, as David did, Pſal. 30. 6. or we ſhall dye in our neſt as it is, Job 29. 18. our hard and difficult days are over; but woe to us if God ſhould give us the deſire of our hearts in this: See what the Temper of thoſe Mens ſpirits is, that meet with no changes, Pſal. 55. 19. Becauſe they have no changes, therefore they fear not God: O it's better to be preſerved ſweet in brine, than to rot in honey.

Infer. 3. Thirdly, Let none boaſt in a carnal confidence of their own ſtrength and ſtability; you are yet in a State of Tryal: Hitherto God hath kept you upright in all your Tryals, bleſs God but boaſt not: You are but feathers in the Wind of Temptation, if God leave you to your ſelves. Peter told Chriſt (and doubtleſs he ſpake no more than he honeſtly meant) Though all men forſake thee yet will not I: And you know what he did when the hour of his Tryal came: Matth. 26. 35. Angels left to themſelves have fallen: It's better be a humble worm, than a proud Angel.

Ah how many Pendletons will this profeſſing age ſhew, if once God bring us to the fiery Tryal? Let him that thinks he ſtands take heed leſt he fall: You have not yet reſiſted unto blood ſtriving againſt ſin: None ſtand upon firmer ground, than thoſe that ſee nothing in themſelves to ſtand upon: He that leans upon his own arm, uſually benumbs it, and makes it uſeleſs.

Infer. 4. Fourthly, Doth God kindle ſo many fires in Sion, and ſet his Furnaces in Jeruſalem, to diſcover and ſeparate the droſs from the Gold, how contrary are thoſe men to God that allow, yea and prize the droſs of Hypocriſie which God hates, and ſtick not to make the holy God a patronizer and countenancer of it in the hearts and lives of men!

It is amazing to read what Popiſh pens have impudently written about this matter: Sylveſter puts the queſtion, whether it be a Sin to make a falſe ſhew of Sanctity? and anſwers it thus: If it be for the honour of God, and profit of others, it is no ſin: Nay, they have a reverence for Hypocriſie as an holy Art. Vincentius ſpends a whole Chapter in commendation of the Hypocriſie of St. Dominick; and entitles it, de ſancta ejus Hypocriſi (i. e.) of the holy Hypocriſie of that Saint: Reckoning it among his commendations, that he had the art of diſſembling. And yet one peg higher, A Religious perſon (ſaith another) that feigns himſelf to have more holineſs than he hath, that others may be edified, ſins not but rather merits.

A ſum. advi

Hypocriſis.
n. 1.

Bluſh O Heavens! that ever ſuch factors for Hell ſhould open and vend ſuch ware as this in the publick Market, and invite the World to Hypocriſie, as that which makes for the Glory of God, the edification of Men, and a work meritorious in the Hypocrite himſelf. This is the doctrine of Devils indeed.

Infer. 5. Fifthly, If it be ſo, that all grace muſt come to the Teſt, and be tryed as Gold in the fire, even in this World: How are all men concerned cerned to lay a ſolid foundation at firſt, and throughly deliberate the terms upon which they cloſe with Chriſt, and engage in the profeſſion of his name! Which of you ſaith Chriſt, intending to build a Tower, ſitteth not down firſt, and counteth the coſt? Luk. 14. 28. If ſome men had ſate down at firſt and pondered the conditions and terms of Chriſt, they had not ſate down now diſcouraged and tyred in the way. The Apoſtle Paul went to work at another rate: He accounted all but dung and droſs for Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8. and was of the ſame mind, when the actual Tryal came; for then he tells us, he counted not his life dear unto him, Acts 20. 24. And the Apoſtle Peter admoniſhes believers not to think it ſtrange concerning the fiery Tryal which was to try them, 1 Pet. 4. 21. q. d. Let none of theſe things be ſurpriſals to you, you were told before-hand what you muſt truſt to: Every Chriſtian muſt be a Martyr, at leaſt in the diſpoſition and reſolution of his heart.

O that men would ballance the advantages and diſadvantages of Religion, and throughly ponder the matter in their deepeſt thoughts: To the teſt you muſt come: The rain will fall, and the ſtorm beat upon your buildings, look carefully therefore to the foundations.

Infer. 6. Sixthly and Laſtly, Learn from this point the unavoidableneſs of ſcandals and offences in the way of Religion; for if there be a neceſſity of Tryal, there is alſo a neceſſity of Scandal. It muſt needs be that offences come, Luke 17. 1. Why muſt it needs be? The reaſon is evident, all muſt come to the Tryal, and all are not able to bear it. Our Lord tells us, Matth. 24. 8, 9, 10. of a day of great ſtraits and perplexity coming: And then (ſaith he) ſhall many be offended. The day of Tryal is the day of Scandal: By theſe offences ſome are put a ſearching themſelves, and ſome fall a cenſuring all others; but the holy God brings about his end both wayes, in them that are ſaved and in them that periſh.

SECT. II.

WEll then, if it be ſo that all muſt into the furnace, let every man try his own work; Examine your ſelves, profeſſors, ſearch your Hearts, commune with your reins: Nothing more concerns you in all the World than this doth. O that you would be more in your Cloſets, and oftner upon your knees: O that you would look into the Bible, then into your hearts; & then to God, ſaying with David, Search me O God and know my heart; prove me, and try my reins, and ſee if there be any way of iniquity in me: Never did Religion thrive in the World ſince mens heads have been ſo over-heated with Notions and Controverſies, and their hearts ſo ſenſibly cooled in their Cloſet-work. I have elſe where more largely preſſed this duty upon the profeſſors of this generation, and thither ſhall refer the Reader for the preſent to ſee the neceſſity and importance of this work.

See my Saint Indeed, p. 191, 192, 193, &c.

Here I ſhall only urge the duty of ſelf-tryal by ſome preſſing Motives, and awakening Conſiderations.

Motive 1. And the firſt ſhall be, the exceeding difficulty of this work: Difficulty in ſome caſes may be a diſcouragement, but where the matter is of abſolute neceſſity, as it is here; nothing provokes more to diligence; Strive (ſaith our Lord) to enter in at the ſtrait gate, for many will ſeek to enter in and ſhall not be able, Luke 13. 24. A double difficulty is found attending this work of Self-tryal. Difficulty in bringing the heart to it, and difficulty in the right and ſucceſsful management of it: Who find it not hard to perſwade his heart to ſuch work as this? Nature declines it, fleſh and blood reliſh it not: It's one of the great Severities in Religion: 'Tis no eaſie thing to bring a man and his own heart together.

It is in this caſe as in the ſtudy of Geography, we are more inquiſitive to know, and delighted when we diſcover the the Rarities of forraign Countreys, and ſtrange things in the remote parts of the world; than thoſe of our own native Countrey. I fear there be many profeſſors of Religion that can ſpend day after day in hearing, and love to be diſputing fruitleſs controverſies, that never ſpent one day in ſearching what influence all thoſe Sermons they have heard, have had upon their hearts, or in rightly ſtating and determining that great Controverſie, in whoſe right and poſſeſſion their ſouls are, and which way they ſhall go aſſoon as death hath divided them from thoſe mortal bodyes; yea, I doubt many ſinful hours are ſpent in prying into, reporting and cenſuring the failings of others, and not one hour faithfully imployed in judging their own hearts before the Lord: O men had rather be about any other work than this: There's no pleaſure in it to the fleſh.

And yet how difficult ſoever it be to bring our hearts to the work, it's certainly much more difficult to manage it ſucceſsfully, and bring the great queſtion of our ſincerity to a clear reſult and iſſue. O how many upright hearts have ſate cloſe to this work many a Year, and lifted up many a cry to Heaven, and ſhed many a ſecret and undiſſembled Tear about it; and yet ſtill are in the dark, and their minds greatly perplext, and filled with fear about it: What would they not do, what would they not ſuffer? what pleaſant Enjoyment would they not gladly part with to arrive at the deſire of their Souls, the full aſſurance of their ſincerity! It was the ſaying of a pious Woman, I have born (ſaid ſhe) ſeven Children, and they have coſt me as dear as ever Children did coſt a Mother; yet would I be content to endure all that ſorrow over again, to be aſſured of the love of God to my Soul.

Motive 2. Seccndly, And as the work is full of difficulty, ſo the diſcovery of your ſincerity will be full of ſweetneſs, and joy unſpeakable: It will never repent you that you have prayed and mourned, that you have trembled and feared, that you have ſearched and tryed: Nay, it will never repent you that God hath tryed you by thouſands of ſharp Afflictions and deep ſufferings, if after all, your ſincerity may be fully cleared up to the ſatisfaction of your ſouls; for in the ſame day your ſincerity ſhall be cleared, your title to Chriſt will be made as clear to your Souls as your ſincerity is: You may then go to the promiſes boldly, and take your own Chriſt into the arms of your Faith and ſay, My Beloved is mine, and I am his: Yea you may be confident it ſhall be well with you in the Judgment of the great day, for God will n caſt away the upright man, Job 8. 20. if the word clear you now, it cannot condemn you then.

O what an eaſe is it to the Soul when the fears and doubts that hanged about it are gone! when a Man ſees what he is, and what he hath in Chriſt and the Promiſes; and what he hath to do; even to ſpend the time betwixt this and Heaven in admiring the Grace of God that hath delivered him from the ruining Miſtakes and Miſcarriages by which ſo great a part of the profeſſing World periſh to all Eternity.

Motive 3. Thirdly, The deep concernment of your Souls in the matter to be tryed, ſhould awaken you to the utmoſt diligence about it. The Tryals of men for their life, at humane bars, is but a trifle to this: 'Tis your eternal happineſs that ſtands or falls with your ſincerity.

It's ſaid in the Tryal of opinions, that if a man ſuperſtruct hay or ſtubble upon the foundation, he ſhall ſuffer loſs, yet he himſelf may be ſaved, 1 Cor. 3. 12. But if Hypocriſie be in the foundation, there is no ſuch relief, there is no poſſibility of ſalvation in that caſe.

Ah Reader, thou muſt be caſt for ever according to the Integrity or Hypocriſie of thy heart with God. Summon in then all the Powers of thy ſoul, bring thy thoughts as cloſe as it is poſſible to bring them to this matter: If there be any Subject of Conſideration able to drink up the ſpirits of man, here it is: Never was time put to an higher improvement, never were thoughts ſpent upon a more important buſineſs than this is: Happy is the man that reſcues the Years, Months, Days, yea, the very Moments of his life from other imployments, to conſecrate them unto this ſolemn, awful, and moſt important buſineſs.

Motive 4. Fourthly, How evidential will it be of your ſincerity, when you are willing to come to the Tryal of your own hearts!

Suppoſe your doubts and fears ſhould in ſome degree remain with you, yet in this you may take ſome comfort, that if Hypocriſie be in your heart, it is not there by conſent: You are not loth to riſe and come to the Tryal, becauſe like Rachel you ſit upon your Idols: Certainly it is a good ſign thy heart is right, when it is filled with ſo much fear leſt it ſhould be falſe: You know all the Diſciples ſaid, Maſter, Is it I? before Judas who was the Traytor ſpake a word. Laſt of all (ſaith the Text) Judas ſaid, Is it I? Our willingneſs to be tryed, is a good ſign that the deſire of our Soul is to be right with God.

Motive 5. Fifthly, Conclude it to be your great advantage to be throughly tryed, whatever you be found to be in the Tryal: If you be found ſincere, you are richly rewarded for all your pains and labour: Never did that man repent of digging and toyling, that after all hit upon the rich vein that he digged for: What is a vein of Gold to a vein of ſincerity!

If upon ſearch you find the contrary, a falſe Hypocritical unſound heart, yet in that very ſad diſcovery you meet with the greateſt advantage that ever you had in your lives for ſalvation. This diſcovery is your great advantage: For now your vain Confidence being over-turned, and your ungrounded hopes deſtroyed; you lye open to the ſtroke of a deep and effectual conviction of your ſin and miſery, which is the introductive Mercy to all other Mercies to your Souls; and ſurely till you come to that, to give up your falſe hopes, and quit your vain pretenſions; there is no hope of you. Chriſt told the Phariſees, Mat. 21. 31. Publicans and Harlots enter into the Kingdom of Heaven before you: Publicans were the worſt ſort of men, and Harlots the worſt ſort of women, and yet they ſtood in a fairer way for Heaven than the Hypocritical Phariſees, becauſe conviction had eaſier acceſs to their conſciences: They had not thoſe defences and pleas of duty and ſtrictneſs to ward off the word, that the ſelf-couzening Phariſees had.

I may ſay of your vain and groundleſs hopes, as Chriſt in another Senſe ſaid to the Officers that came to ſeize him in the Garden: If you ſeek me, let theſe go their way. So 'tis here, if you expect Chriſt and ſalvation by him; let your vain confidences go their way: Away with your Maſques and Vizards, if ever you expect to ſee Chriſt. O 'tis your happineſs to have all theſe things ſtript off, and your nakedneſs and poverty diſcovered, that you may be rich, as the Text ſpeaks.

Motive 6. Sixthly Conſider how near the day of Death and Judgment approach you. Oh theſe are ſearching days wherein you cannot be hid: Will your Conſciences, think you, be put off in a dying day as eaſily as they are now? No, no; you know they will not.

I have heard of a good Man that conſumed not only the greateſt part of the day, but a very conſiderable part of the night alſo in Prayer, to the great weakening of his body; and being asked by a Relation why he did ſo, and prayed to favour himſelf, he returned this anſwer, O I muſt dye, I muſt dye: Plainly intimating, that ſo great is the concernment of dying in a clear aſſured condition, that it's richly worth the expence of all our time and ſtrength to ſecure it.

You know alſo that after Death the Judgment, Heb. 9. 27. you are haſtening to the Judgment of the great and terrible God. Death will put you into his ballance to be weighed exactly: And what gives the Soul a louder call to ſearch it ſelf with all diligence, whileſt it ſtands at the door of Eternity, and its turn is not yet come to go before that awful Tribunal? O that theſe conſiderations might have place upon our hearts!

CHAP. XII.

Containing divers Helps for the clearing of Sincerity, and diſcovery of Hypocriſie.

SECT. I.

YOU ſee of what importance the duty of ſelf-examination is, how many things put a neceſſity and a ſolemnity upon that work. Now in the cloſe of all, I would offer you ſome Helps for the due management thereof, that is as far as I can carry it; the Lord perſwade your hearts to the diligent and faithful Application and uſe of them. The general Rules to clear ſincerity are theſe that follow.

Rule 1.

We may not preſently conclude we are in the ſtate of Hypocriſie, becauſe we find ſome Workings of it, and tendencies to it in our ſpirits: The beſt gold hath ſome droſs and alloy in it. Hypocriſie is a weed naturally ſpringing in all ground, the beſt heart is not perfectly clear or free of it: It may be we are ſtumbled when we feel ſome workings or grudgings of this diſeaſe in our ſelves, and looking into ſuch Scriptures as theſe, John. 1. 47. Behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom there is no guile: and Pſal. 32. 1. Bleſſed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whoſe ſpirit there is no guile.

This I ſay may ſtumble ſome upright ſoul, not underſtanding in what an allayed and qualified ſenſe thoſe Scriptures are to be underſtood: For by a Spirit without guile, is not underſtood a perſon abſolutely free from all deceitfulneſs, and falſeneſs of heart; this was the ſole prerogative of the Lord Jeſus, who was ſeparated from ſinners, in whoſe mouth was no guile found: In whom the Prince of this World in all his tryals and attempts upon him found nothing: But we muſt underſtand it of reigning and allowed Hypocriſie: There is no ſuch guile in any of the Saints: Diſtinguiſh the preſence from the predominance of Hypocriſie, and the doubt is reſolved.

Rule 2.

Every true ground of humiliation for ſin, is not a ſufficient ground for doubting and queſtioning our eſtate and condition.

There be many more things to humble us upon the account of our infirmity, than there are to ſtumble us upon the account of our integrity: It is the ſin and affliction of ſome good ſouls to call their condition in queſtion, upon evey ſlip and failing in the courſe of their obedience. This is the way to debar our ſelves from all the peace and comfort of the Chriſtian life: We find that Joſeph was once minded to put away Mary his Eſpouſed Wife; not Knowing that the holy thing which was conceived in her was by the Holy Ghoſt. It is the ſin of Hypocrites to take Braſs for Gold, and the folly of Saints to call their gold, braſs: Be as ſevere to your ſelves as you will, always provided you be juſt: There is that maketh himſelf rich, and yet hath nothing; And there is that maketh himſelf poor, and yet hath great riches, Prov. 13. 7. Hiram called the Cities Solomon gave him Cabul, dirty, for they pleaſed him not, 1 Kings 9. 13. 'Tis but an ill requital, an ungreateful return to God, for the beſt of mercies, to undervalue them in our hearts, and be ready upon all occaſions to put them away as worth nothing.

Rule 3.

A ſtronger propenſion in our Nature, and more frequent incidence in our practice to one ſin than another, doth not preſently infer our hypocriſie, and the unſoundneſs of our hearts in Religion. 'Tis true, every Hypocrite hath ſome way of Wickedneſs: Some peccatum in deliciis, iniquity that he delights in, and rolls as a ſweet morſel under his tongue; ſome luſt that he is not willing to part with, nor can endure that the knife of mortification ſhould touch it, and this undoubtedly argues the inſincerity and rottenneſs of his heart: And it is true alſo, that the nature and conſtitution of the moſt ſanctified man inclines him rather to one ſin than to another, though he allow himſelf in none; yea, though he ſet himſelf more Watchfully againſt that ſin than another, yet he may ſtill have more trouble and vexation, more temptation and defilement from it than any other.

As every man hath his proper gift, one after this manner and another after that, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 7. 7. So every man hath his proper ſin alſo, one after this manner, and another after that: For it is with original ſin, as it is with the juice or ſap of the Earth, which though it be the common matter of all kinds of fruits, yet it is ſpecificated according to the different ſorts of plants and ſeeds it nouriſhes: In one it becomes an Apple, In another a Cherry, &c. Juſt ſo it is in Original Corruption, which is turned into this or that Temptation and ſin, according to this or that conſtitution or employment it finds us in: One it's Paſſion, in another Luſt, in a third Covetouſneſs, in a fourth Levity, and ſo on. Now I ſay the frequent aſſaults of this ſin, provided we indulge it not, but by ſetting double guards labour to keep our ſelves from our own iniquity, as David did, Pſal. 18. 23. will not infer the hypocriſie of our hearts.

Rule 4.

A greater backwardneſs and indiſpoſedneſs to one duty rather than another, doth not conclude the heart to be unſound and falſe with God, provided we do not inwardly diſlike and diſapprove any duty of Religion, or except againſt it in our agreement with Chriſt, but that it riſeth meerly from the preſent weakneſs and diſtemper we labour under.

There be ſome duties in Religion, as ſufferings for Chriſt, bearing ſharp reproofs for ſin, &c. that even an upright heart, under a preſent diſtemper may find a great deal of backwardneſs and lothneſs to; yet ſtill he conſents to the Law that it is good, is troubled that he cannot comply more cheerfully with his duty: And deſires to ſtand compleat in all the will of God: Perfection is his aim, and imperfections are his ſorrows.

Some Chriſtians have much ado to bring their hearts to fixed ſolemn Meditation, their hearts fly off from it, but this is their burden that it ſhould be ſo with them. Truth is, it is a very dangerous ſign of Hypocriſie when a mans zeal runs out in one channel of obedience only, and he hath not a reſpect to all Gods Commandments; as Phyſicians obſerve, the ſweating of one part of the body when all the reſt are cold, is Symptomatical, and argues an ill habit: But whileſt the ſoul heartily approves all the will of God, and ſincerely deſires to come up to it, and mourns for its backwardneſs and deadneſs to this or that duty, and this is not fixed, but occaſional under ſome preſent indiſpoſition, out of which the ſoul riſeth by the ſame degrees as ſanctification riſeth in him, and the Lord comes in with renewed ſtrength upon him; this I ſay may conſiſt and is very ordinarily found to be the caſe of upright-hearted ones.

Rule 5.

The glances of the eye at ſelf ends in duties, whileſt ſelf is not the weight that moves the wheels, the principal end and deſign we drive at, and whileſt thoſe glances are corrected and Mourned for ; do not conclude the heart to be unſound and Hypocritical in Religion : For even among the moſt deeply ſanctified, few can keep their eye ſo ſteady and fixed with pure and unmixed reſpects to the glory of God, but that there will be ( Alas too frequently ) ſome by-ends Inſinuating and creeping into the heart. Theſe like the fowls ſeize upon the ſacrifice, let the ſoul take what pains it can to fray them away. It's well that our High-Prieſt bears the iniquities of our holy things for us: Peter had too much regard to the pleaſing of men, and did not walk with that upright foot towards the Gentile Chriſtians and the believing Jews in the matter of liberty as became him, Gal. 2. 13, 14. For which, as Paul ſaith, he ought to be blamed, and did blame him ; but yet ſuch a failing as that in the end of his duty did not condemn him. In publick performances there may be too much vanity, in works of charity too much oſtentation, theſe are all workings of Hypocriſie in us, and matters of Humiliation to us ; but whileſt they are diſallowed, corrected and mourned over, are conſiſtent with integrity.

Rule 6.

The doubts and fears that hang upon and perplex our ſpirits about the hypocriſie of our hearts, do not conclude that therefore we are what we fear our ſelves to be. God will not condemn every one for an hypocrite that ſuſpects, yea, or charges himſelf with Hypocriſie. Holy David thought his heart was not right with God, after that great ſlip of his in the matter of Uriah, and therefore begs of God to renew a right ſpirit in him, Pſal. 51. 10, 11, 12. His integrity was indeed wounded, and he thought deſtroyed by that fall.

Holy Maſter Bradford ſo vehemently doubted the ſincerity of his heart, that he ſubſcribed ſome of his Letters ( as Maſter Fox tells us ) John Bradford the Hypocrite, a very painted Sepulchre: And yet in ſo ſaying he utterly miſjudged the ſtate and temper of his own ſoul.

SECT. II.

WELL then, let not the upright be unjuſt to themſelves in cenſuring their own hearts: They are bad enough, but let us not make them worſe than they are, but thankfully own and acknowledge the leaſt degrees of grace and integrity in them: And poſſibly our uprightneſs might be ſooner diſcovered to us, if in a due compoſure of ſpirit, we would ſit down and attend the true anſwers of our own hearts to ſuch queſtions as theſe are.

Queſtion 1.

Do I make the approbation of God or the applauſe of men the very end and main deſign of my Religious performances ; according to 1 Theſ. 2. 4. Col. 3. 23? Will the acceptation of my duties with men ſatisfie me, whether God accept my duties and perſon or not?

Queſt. 2

Is it the reproach and ſhame that attends ſin at preſent, and the danger and miſery that will follow it hereafter, that reſtrains me from the Commiſſion of it ? Or is it the fear of God in my ſoul, and the hatred I bear to ſin as it is ſin ? according to Pſal. 19. 12. and Pſal. 119. 113.

Queſt. 3.

Can I truly and heartily rejoyce to ſee Gods work carried on in the world, and his glory promoted by other hands, though I have no ſhare in the credit and honour of it, as Paul did? Philip. 1. 18.

Queſt. 4.

Is there no duty in Religion ſo full of difficulty and ſelf-denyal, but I deſire to comply with it ? And is all the holy and good will of God acceptable to my ſoul, though I cannot riſe up with like readineſs to the performance of all duties ; according to that pattern, Pſal. 119. 6 ?

Queſt. 5.

Am I ſincerely reſolved to Follow Chriſt and holyneſs at all ſeaſons, however the aſpects of the times may be upon Religion ? Or do I bear my ſelf ſo warily, and covertly as to ſhun all hazards for Religion : Having a ſecret reſerve in my heart to launch out no farther then I may return with ſafety ; contrary to the practice and reſolution of upright ſouls ? Pſal. 116. 3. Pſal. 44. 18, 19. Rev. 22. 11.

Queſt. 6.

Do I make no Conſcience of committing ſecret Sins, or neglecting ſecret duties ? or am I conſcientious both in the one and other, according to the rules and patterns of integrity? Mat. 6. 5, 6. Pſal. 19. 12.

A few ſuch Queſtions ſolemnly propounded to our own hearts, in a calm and ſerious hour, would ſound them, and diſcover much of their ſincerity towards the Lord.

SECT. III.

AND as upright hearts are too apt to apply to themſelves the threats and miſeries of Hypocrites, ſo Hypocrites on the contrary, are as apt to catch hold of the promiſes and priviledges pertaining to believers.

To detect therefore the ſoul-damning miſtakes of ſuch deceived ſouls, O that theſe following Rules might be ſtudied and faithfully applyed to their conviction, and recovery!

Rule 1.

It is not enough to clear a man from Hypocriſie, that he knows not himſelf to be an Hypocrite. All Hypocrites are not deſigning Hypocrites; they deceive themſelves, as well as others: Many will ſay to me in that day, Lord, have we not Propheſied in thy Name? &c. Mat. 7. 22. Hell will be a meer ſurprizal to multitudes of Profeſſors: A man may live and dye in a blind ungrounded confidence of his ſafe condition, and not fear his ruine, till he begin to feel it.

Rule 2.

Zeal and forwardneſs in the Cauſe of God, and for the Reformation of his Worſhip, will not clear a man from the danger of Hypocriſie. Jehu was a zealous reformer, and yet but a painted Sepulchre. In the Year 1549. Reformation grew ſo much in reputation even among the Nobles and Gentry of Germany, that many of them cauſed theſe five letters, V. D. M. I. Æ. being the initial letters of theſe words, Verbum Domini Manet In Æternum: (i. e.) The Word of the Lord abideth for ever, to be wrought or embroidered, or ſet in plates, ſome upon their Cloaks, and others upon the ſleeves of their Garments; to ſhew to all the World, (ſaith my Author) that forſaking all Popiſh Traditions they would now cleave to the pure doctrine and diſcipline of the Eternal Word.

John Wolfe, lect. memor. To. 2. ad An. 1549.

And no doubt they would have been as good as their word, if what was embroidered on their Cloaks, had been engraven on their hearts; but Come ſee my zeal, marrs all.

Rule 3.

It is no ſufficient evidence of a mans own integrity, that he hates Hypocriſie in another: For as one proud man may hate another, and he that's Covetous himſelf, will be apt to cenſure another for being ſo; (Luſts may be contrary to one another, as well as all of them contrary to Grace) ſo may an Hypocrite loath that in another, which yet he alloweth in himſelf: Nay, 'tis the policy of ſome to declaim againſt the Hypocriſie of others, thereby to hide their own. Hypocrites are none of the moſt modeſt cenſurers of others, Pſal. 35. 16. A ſalt jeſt ſeaſoned their meat.

Rule 4.

The meer performance of private duties, will not clear a man from Hypocriſie; the influence of education, or ſupport of reputation, or the impulſe of a convinced Conſcience may induce a man to it; and yet all this while his heart may not be carried thither with hungry and thirſty deſires after God: It is not the matter of any duty that diſtinguiſhes the ſound, and unſound profeſſor; but the motives, deſigns, and ends of the ſoul in them.

Rule 5.

The vogue and Opinion you have got among Chriſtians, of your ſincerity, will not be ſufficient to clear you from the danger of Hypocriſie. Chriſt tells the Angel of Sardis, Rev. 3. 1. Thou haſt a name that thou liveſt, and art dead. The fall of Hymeneus and Philetus, could never have ſhaken the Faith of the Saints as it did, had they not had great credit in the Church, and been men of renown for piety among them.

Rule 6.

Your reſpects and love to them that are the ſincere and upright ſervants of God, will not clear you from the danger of being Hypocrites your ſelves: For the bare loving of a Chriſtian is not Characteriſtical and evidential of a mans own Chriſtianity, except he love him, qua talis, as he is a Chriſtian, or as he belongs to Chriſt: And ſo his ſincerity becomes the attractive of thy affection. There be a thouſand by conſiderations and reſpects that may kindle a mans love to the Saints, beſides their integrity.

SECT. IV.

WELL then, if thou wouldſt indeed ſee the unſoundneſs of thy own heart, propound ſuch heart ſounding Queſtions as theſe to thy ſelf.

Queſt. 1.

Do I engage my heart to approach unto God in the courſe of my duties? or do I go in the round of duties, taking no heed to my heart in them? If ſo, compare this Symptom of thy Hypocriſie with that in 2 King. 10. 3. and that Ezek. 33. 31, 32.

Queſt. 2.

Am I not ſway'd and moved by ſelf-intereſt and carnal reſpects in the ways of Religion, the accommodation of ſome worldly intereſt, or getting a name and Reputation of Godlineſs? If ſo, how apparently do the ſame Symptoms of Hypocriſie appear upon my ſoul, which did upon Judas, Joh. 12. 6. and 2 Kings 9. 13, 14.

Queſt. 3.

Have I not ſome ſecret reſerves in my heart, notwithſtanding that face and appearance of zeal which I put on? Certainly if there be any ſin that I cannot part with, any ſuffering for Chriſt which I reſolve againſt in my heart: I am none of his diſciple, my heart is not right with God, the Searcher of hearts himſelf being Judge, Luke 14. 26, 27.

Queſt. 4.

What Conſcience do I make of ſecret Sins? Do I mourn for a vain heart, wandering thoughts, ſpiritual deadneſs? And do I conſcientiouſly abſtain from the practice of ſecret Sins, whe there is no danger of diſcovery, no fear of forfeiting my reputation by it? Is it God's Eye, o man's that awes me from commiſſion of ſin? Certainly, if I allow my ſelf in ſecret Sins; I am no of the Number of God's upright People; whoſ Spirits are of a contrary temper to mine, Pſal 119. 113. and Pſal. 12. 12.

SECT. V.

I Will ſhut up all with five or ſix concluding Counſels, ( which the Lord impreſs upon the heart of him that writes, and thoſe that ſhall read them ) to preſerve and antidote the ſoul againſt the dangerous inſinuation and Leven of Hypocriſie.

Counſel 1.

Intreat the Lord night and day for a renewed and right Spirit: All the Helps and Directions in the World will not antidote and preſerve you from Hypocriſie, nothing will be found able to keep you right, till ſanctification have firſt ſet you right, Ezek. 36. 27. I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my Statutes.

A Bowle may keep by a ſtrait line, ſo long as the impreſſed force of the hand that delivered it remains ſtrong upon it; but as that wears off, ſo its motion fails; and its own Bias ſwayes and turns it: A fright of Conſcience, a pang of warm affection, or the influence of ſome great Example, or a good Education may influence an unrenewed ſoul; and puſh it on in the way of Religion for a ſeaſon; but the heart ſo influenced muſt and will return to its own natural courſe again. And I think there wants nothing but time, or a ſuitable Temptation to diſcover the true Temper of many a profeſſours ſpirit; pray therefore as that holy Man did, Pſal. 119. 80. Let my heart be ſound in thy Statutes, that I be not aſhamed.

Counſel 2.

Always ſuſpect and examine your Ends in what you do: Sincerity and Hypocriſie lye much in your ends and deſigns: As they are, ſo are you. The intentions of the heart lye deep. A man may do the ſame action to an holy end, and his perſon and ſervice be accepted with God; which another doing for a corrupt end, it may be reckoned his ſin; and both his perſon and ſervice be abhorred by the Lord: We find two men riding in one Chariot, and both of them concerned in the ſame Expedition; Jehu the Son of Nimſhi, and Jonadab the Son of Rechab, 2 Kings 10. 15. 23. But though the work they engaged in was one and the ſame, yet the different ends they aimed at, made the ſame action an excellent duty in Jonadab, and an act of vile Hypocriſie in Jehu: Idem quod duo faciunt, non eſt idem: It was the ſaying of a good ſoul, commended for a good action; The work indeed is good, but I fear the Ends of it. Self-ends are creeping and inſinuating things into the beſt actions.

Counſel 3.

Scare your ſelves with the daily fears of the ſin that is in, and the miſery that will follow Hypocriſie: Look upon it as the moſt odious ſin in the eyes of God, and men: To want holineſs is bad enough, but to ſimulate and pretend it when we have it not, is double impiety: To make Religion, the moſt glorious thing in the World, a meer ſtirrup to preferment, and a covert to wickedneſs; Oh how vile a thing is it! God made Chriſt a Sacrifice for ſin, and the Hypocrite will make him a Cloak for ſin.

And as to the puniſhments that follow it, they are ſuitable to the Nature of the Sin; for as Hypocriſie is out of meaſure ſinful, ſo the reward and puniſhment of it, will be out of meaſure dreadful. Mat. 24. 51. He ſhall cut him aſunder, and appoint him his portion with Hypocrites, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

Counſel 4.

Be daily at work in the mortification of thoſe Luſts that breed Hypocriſie. It's plain without much ſifting, that pride, vain glory, ſelf-love, and a worldly heart are the ſeeds out of which this curſed plant ſprings up in the ſouls of men. Dig but to the Root, and you ſhall certainly find theſe things there; and till the Lord help you to kill and mortifie theſe, Hypocriſie will ſpring up in all your duties to God, and in all your converſes with men.

Counſel 5.

Attend the native voice of your own conſciences in the day of ſickneſs, fear or trouble, and take ſpecial notice of its checks, or upbraidings; which like a ſtitch in your ſide will gird you at ſuch times: Commonly in that lyes your greateſt danger: Beware of that evil which Conſcience brands and marks at ſuch times, whether it be your living in the practice of ſome ſecret ſin, or in the neglect of ſome known duty: Theſe frights of Conſcience mark out the corruption wherein your danger moſtly lyes.

Counſel 6.

Let us all that profeſs Religion be uniform and ſteady in the profeſſion and practice of it, without politick reſerves, and by ends.

O take heed of this Laodicean neutrality and indifferency, which Chriſt hates: Be ſure your ground be good, and then be ſure you ſtand your ground. The Religion of Time-ſervers is but Hypocriſie: They have ſluices in their Conſciences which they can open or ſhut as occaſion requires: Every Fox will have at leaſt two holes to his Den, that if one be ſtopt, he may eſcape at the other. The Hypocrite poyſeth himſelf ſo evenly in a mediocrity, that as it was ſaid of Baldwin, Let Anthony win, let Auguſtus win, all is one: So let Chriſt win, or let Antichriſt win, he hopes to make every wind that can blow, ſerviceable to waft him to the port of his own Intereſt.

The Hypocrite hath always more of the Moon than of the Sun; litle light, many ſpots and frequent Changes: It's eaſier to him to bow to the Croſs, than to bear the Croſs; to ſin, than to ſuffer.

Our own Story tells us of a poor ſimple Woman that lived both in the Reigns of Q. Mary, and Q. Elizabeth; and would conſtantly ſay her prayers both in Latine and Engliſh, that ſhe might be ſure to pleaſe one ſide or other; and let God, ſaid ſhe, take which likes him beſt: What is noted as an act of ridiculous ſimplicity in her, the time ſerving Hypocrite accounts a point of deep policy in himſelf.

The times under Diocleſian, were Pagan; under Conſtantine, Chriſtian; under Conſtantius, Arian; under Julian, Apoſtate; and under Jovian, Chriſtian again: And all this within the ſpace of ſeventy Years, the age of one man. O what ſhifting, and ſhuffling was there among the men of that generation! The changes of weather ſhew the unſoundneſs of mens bodies, and the changes of times, the unſoundneſs of their Souls.

Chriſtian, if ever thou wilt manifeſt and maintain thine integrity, be a man but of one deſign, and be ſure that be an honeſt and good deſign, to ſecure Heaven whatever becomes of Earth: To hold faſt integrity, whatever thou art forced to let go for its ſake.

Take heed of pious frands: Certainly it was the Devil that firſt married thoſe two words together, for they never did nor can agree betwixt themſelves, nor was ever ſuch a marriage made in Heaven.

Never ſtudy to model Religion and the exerciſes thereof in a conſiſtency with, or ſubſerviency to your fleſhly intereſts: If your Religion be but a mock Religion, your reward ſhall be but a mock Heaven, that is, a real Hell.

O the Vanity and Inutility of theſe Projects and deſigns! Men ſtrive to caſt themſelves into ſuch modes, and ſtint themſelves to ſuch meaſures of Religion, as they think will beſt promote, or ſecure their earthly intereſts: But it often falls out contrary to their expectation, their deep policies are ridiculous follies, they become the grief and ſhame of their friends, and the ſcorn and ſong of their Enemies. And often it fares with them, as with him that placed himſelf in the middle of the Table, where he could neither reach the diſh above him, nor that below him, Eſuriunt medii, &c, and (which is the very beſt of it) if earthly intereſt be accommodated by ſinful neutrality, and a Laodicean indifferency in Religion, yet no good man ſhould once feel a temptation to embrace it, except he think what is wanting in the ſweetneſs of his ſleep, may be fully recompenſed to him by the ſtatelineſs of his bed, and richer furniture of his Chamber; I mean that a fuller and higher condition in the World, can make him amends for the loſs of his inward peace, and the quiet repoſe of a good conſcience: Theſe by-ends and ſelf-intereſts, are the little paſſages through which Hypocriſie creeps in upon the Profeſſors of Religion.

O let this be your rejoycing, which was Paul's, The Teſtimony of your Conſcience, that in all ſincerity and godly ſimplicity, not in fleſhly wiſdom, but by the Grace of God, you have had your Converſations in this World, 2 Cor. 1. 12.

Let that be your daily Prayer and Cry to Heaven, which was David's, Pſal. 25. 21. Let integrity and uprightneſs preſerve me, for I wait on thee.

Counſel 7.

Keep your hearts day and night under the awe of Gods all-ſeeing Eye: Remember he beholds all your ways, and ponders all your thoughts; how covertly ſoever Hypocriſie may be carryed for a time, all muſt and will out at laſt, Luke 12. 3. Secreſie is the main inducement to Hypocriſie, but it will fall out with the Hypocrite, as it did with Ottocar the King of Bohemia, who refuſed to do homage to Rodolphus the Emperor, till at laſt chaſtiſed with War, he was content to do him homage privately in a Tent: But the Tent was ſo contrived by the Emperours ſervants, that by drawing one Cord it was taken all away; and ſo Ottocar preſented on his knees doing homage in view of three Armies.

Reader, Awe thy Heart with God's Eye, know that he will bring every ſecret thing into Judgment. Thus did Job, and it preſerved him, Job 31. 1. 4. Thus did David, and it preſerved him, Pſal. 18. 21, 22, 23. Thus do thou alſo, and it will preſerve thee blameleſs and without guile to the day of Chriſt.

The Advice of Chriſt to a Diſtreſſed Mother, bewailing the Death of her Dear and Only Son. Wherein, The Boundaries of Sorrow are duly fixed, Exceſſes reſtrained, the Common Pleas anſwered, and divers Rules for the Support of God's Afflicted Ones preſcribed.

The EPISTLE Dedicatory.

To his dearly beloved Brother and Siſter, Mr. J. C. and Mrs. E. C. the Author wiſheth Grace, Mercy and Peace.

Dear Friends,

T*HE double Tye of Nature and Grace, beſide the many endearing Paſſages that for ſo many Years have linked and glewed our Affections ſo intimately, cannot but beget a tender ſimpathy in me with you, under all your Troubles; and make me ſay of every affliction which befals you,* half s mine. I find it is with our Affections, as with the ſtrings of Muſical Inſtruments exactly ſet at the ſame height, if one be touched, the other trembles, though it be at ſome diſtance.

Our Affections are one, and ſo in a great meaſure have been our Afflictions alſo. You cannot forget that in the Years lately paſt, the Almighty viſited my Tabernacle with the Rod, and in one Year, cut off from it the Root, and the Branch, the tender Mother, and the only Son. What the effects of thoſe Strokes, or rather of my own unmortified Paſſions were, I have felt, and you and others have heard. Surely I was a Bullock unaccuſtomed to the Yoke. Yea, I may ſay with them, Lam. 3. 19, 20. Remembring mine affliction and my miſery, the wormwood and the gall, my ſoul hath them ſtill in remembrance, and is humbled in me.

I dare not ſay that ever I felt my Heart diſcontentedly riſing and ſwelling againſt God; no, I could ſtill juſtifie him, when I moſt ſenſibly ſmarted by his Hand: If he had plunged me into a Sea of Sorrow, yet I could ſay in all that Sea of Sorrow, there is not a drop of Injuſtice: But it was the over-heating, and over-acting of my fond and unmortified Affections and Paſſions that made ſo ſad Impreſſions upon my Body, and caſt me under thoſe Diſtempers which ſoon imbitterred all my remaining Comforts to me.

It was my earneſt Deſire ſo ſoon as I had Strength and Opportunity for ſo great a Journey, to viſit you; that ſo (if the Lord had pleas'd) I might both refreſh, and be refreſhed by you, after all my ſad and diſconſolate Dayes. And you cannot imagine what Content and Pleaſure I projected in that Viſit! but it proved to us (as all other Comforts of the ſame kind ordinarily do) more in Expectation, than in Fruition: For how ſoon after our joyful Meeting and Embraces, did the Lord over-caſt and darken our Day, by ſending Death into your Tabernacle, to take away the Deſire of your Eyes with a Stroke! to crop off that ſweet and only Bud from which we promiſed our ſelves ſo much Comfort. But no more of that; I fear I am gone too far already. It is not my Deſign to exaſperate your Troubles, but to heal them; and for that purpoſe have I ſent you theſe Papers, which I hope may be of uſe both to you and many others in your Condition, ſince they are the After-Fruits of my own Troubles; Things that I commended not to you from another Hand, but which I have (in ſome meaſure) proved and taſted in my own Tryals.

But I will not hold you longer here. I have only a few things to deſire for and from you, and I have done.

The Things I deſire, are

Firſt, That you will not be too haſty to get off the Yoke which God hath put upon your Neck. Remember when your Child was in the Womb, neither of you deſired it ſhould be delivered thence, till God's appointed time was fully come; and now that you travail again with Sorrow for its death, O deſire not to be delivered from your Sorrows one moment before God's time for your deliverance be fully come alſo. Let Patience have its perfect Work; that Comfort which comes in God's way and ſeaſon, will ſtick by you, and do you good indeed.

Secondly, I deſire, that though you and your Affections had a ſad Meeting, yet you and they may have a comfortable Parting. If they effect that upon your Hearts which God ſent them for, I doubt not but you will give them a fair Teſtimony when they go off.

If they obtain God's Bleſſing upon them in their Operation, ſurely they will have your Bleſſing too at their Valediction. And what you entertained with Fear, you will diſmiſs with Praiſe. How ſweet is it to hear the afflicted Soul ſay, when God is looſing his Hands, It's good for me that I have been Afflicted.

Thirdly, I heartily wiſh, that theſe ſearching Afflictions may make the moſt ſatisfying Diſcoveries, that you may now ſee more of the evil of Sin, the vanity of the Creature, and the fulneſs of Chriſt, than ever you yet ſaw. Afflictions are Searchers, and put the Soul upon ſearching and trying its ways, Lam. 3. 14. When our Sin finds us out by Affliction, happy are we, if by the light of Affliction we find out Sin. Bleſſed is the Man whom God chaſteneth, and teacheth out of his Law, Pſal. 94. 12. There are unſeen Cauſes many times of our Troubles; you have an Advantage now to ſift out the Seeds and Principles from which they ſpring.

Fourthly, I wiſh that all the Love and Delight you beſtowed on your little One, may now be placed to your greater Advantage upon Jeſus Chriſt; and that the Stream of your Affection to him may be ſo much the ſtronger, as there are now fewer Chanels for it to be divided into. If God will not have any part of your Happineſs, to lie in Children, then let it wholly lie in himſelf. If the Jealouſie of the Lord hath removed that which drew away too much of your Heart from him, and hath ſpoken by this Rod, ſaying, Stand aſide, Child, thou art in my way, and filleſt more room in thy Parents Hearts than belongs to thee. O then deliver up all to him, and ſay, Lord, take the whole Heart intirely and undividedly to thy ſelf. Henceforth let there be no parting, ſharing or dividing of the Affections betwixt God and the Creature, let all the Streams meet and centre in thee only.

Fifthly, That you may be ſtrengthned with all might in the Inner-Man to all Patience, that the Peace of God may keep your Hearts and Minds. Labour to bring your Hearts to a meek ſubmiſſion to the Rod of your Father. We had Fathers of the Fleſh who corrected us, and we gave them Reverence, ſhall we not much more be in ſubjection to the Father of Spirits and live? Is it comely for Children to conteſt and ſtrive with their Father! or is it the way to be freed from the Yoke by ſtrugling under it! O that your Hearts might be in a like frame with his that ſaid, Lord, thou ſhalt beat and I will bear. It was a good Obſervation that one made. Anima ſedendo & quieſcendo fit ſapiens. The Soul grows wiſe by ſitting ſtill and quiet under the Rod. And the Apoſtle calls thoſe excellent Fruits which the Saints gather from their ſanctified Afflictions, The peaceable Fruits of Righteouſneſs, Heb. 12. 11.

Laſtly, My Heart's Deſire and Prayer to God for you is, that you may die daily to all viſible Enjoyments, and by theſe frequent Converſes with Death in your Family, you may be prepared for your own Change and Diſſolution when it ſhall come.

O, Friends! How many Graves have you and I ſeen opened for our dear Relations? How oft hath Death come up into your Windows, and ſummoned the Delight of your Eyes? It is but a little while and we ſhall go to them; we and they are diſtinguiſhed but by ſhort Intervals.

Tranſivere patres, ſimul hinc tranſibimus omnes.

Our dear Parents are gone, our lovely and deſirable Children are gone, our boſom Relations that were as our own Souls, are gone: And do not all theſe Warning-Knocks at our Doors acquaint us, that we muſt prepare to follow ſhortly after them!

O that by theſe Things our own Death might be both more eaſie and familiar to us, the oftner it viſits us, the better we ſhould be acquainted with it; and the more of our beloved Relations it removes before us, the leſs of either Snare or Intanglement remains for us when our Turn comes.

My dear Friends, my Fleſh, and my Blood, I beſeech you for Religions ſake, for your own ſake, and for my ſake, whoſe Comfort is, in great part, bound up in your Proſperity and Welfare, that you read frequently, ponder ſeriouſly, and apply believingly theſe Scripture Conſolations and Directions, which in ſome haſte, I have gathered for your Uſe; And the God of all Conſolation be with you.

I am,

Your moſt endeared

Brother,

John Flavel.

LUKE VII. xiii.

And when the Lord ſaw her, he had Compaſſion on her, and ſaid to her, Weep not.

TO be above the Stroke of Paſſions is a Condition equal to Angels: To be in a State of Sorrow, without the Senſe of Sorrow, is a Diſpoſition beneath Beaſts; but duly to regulate our Sorrows, and bound our Paſſions under the Rod, is the Wiſdom, Duty, and Excellency of a Chriſtian. He that is without natural Affections, is deſervedly ranked among the worſt of Heathens; and he that is able rightly to manage them, deſerves to be numbred with the beſt of Chriſtians. Though when we are Sanctified, we put on the Divine Nature; yet till we are Glorified, we put not off the Infirmities of our humane Nature.

Whileſt we are within the reach of Troubles, we cannot be without the Danger, nor ought not to be without the Fear of Sin; and it is as hard for us to eſcape Sin, being in Adverſity, as becalming in Proſperity.

How apt we are to tranſgreſs the Bounds both of Reaſon and Religion under a ſharp Affliction, appears as in moſt Mens Experience, ſo in this Womans Example, to whoſe exceſſive Sorrow, Chriſt puts a ſtop in the Text: He ſaw her, and had Compaſſion on her, and ſaid to her, Weep not.

The Lamentations and Wailings of this diſtreſſed Mother, moved the tender Compaſſions of the Lord in beholding them, and ſtirred up more Pity in his Heart for her, than could be in her Heart for her Dear and Only Son.

In the Words we are to conſider, both the Condition of the Woman, and the Counſel of Chriſt, with reſpect unto it.

Firſt, The Condition of this Woman, which appears to be very Dolorous and Diſtreſſed; her Groans and Tears moved and melted the very Heart of Chriſt, to hear and behold them: When he ſaw her, he had Compaſſion on her.

How ſad an Hour it was with her when Chriſt met her, appears by what is ſo diſtinctly remarkt by the Evangeliſt, in Ver. 12. where it is ſaid, Now when they came nigh to the Gate of the City, behold, there was a dead Man carried out, the only Son of his Mother, and ſhe was a Widow, and much People of the City was with her.

In this one Verſe, divers Heart-piercing Circumſtances of this Affliction are noted.

First, It was the death of a Son. To bury a Child, any Child, muſt needs rend the Heart of a tender Parent; for what are Children but the Parent multiplied? A Child is a part of the Parent made up in another Skin. But to lay a Son in the Grave; A Son which continues the Name, and ſupports the Family; this was ever accounted a very great Affliction.

...ulas μέ- ...γισος δεο- ...ισαι τεκ- ...ωr γυναι. ...Græc.Comic.

Secondly, This Son was not carried from the Cradle to the Coffin, nor ſtript out of its Swathing, to be wrap'd in its Winding-Cloth: Had he died in Infancy, before he had engaged Affection, or raiſed Expectation, the Affliction had not been ſo pungent and cutting, as now it was; Death ſmote the Son in the flower and Prime of his time. He was a Man (ſaith the Evangeliſt) ver. 12. a young Man (as Chriſt calls him) ver. 14. He was now arrived * at that Age which made him capable of yielding his Mother all that Comfort which had been the Expectation and Hope of many Years, and the Reward and Fruit of many Cares and Labours: Yet then when the Endearments were greateſt, and her Hopes higheſt, even in the flower of his Age, he is cut off.

 In adoleſ- ...ia de- ...ſus fuit, ...plus do- ...dum ſuc- ...quia in ...ætatis ...fuit, & ...grandi ...re ac ...itudine ...ntum ...illam a- ...m per- ...us.* ...n. Cat. ...c.

Thus Baſil bewailed the Death of his Son:

> “Filius mihi erat adoleſcens, ſolus vitæ ſucceſſor, ſolatium ſenectæ, gloria generis, flos æqualium, fulcrum domus, ætatem gratioſiſſimam agebat: hic raptus periit, qui paulo ante jucundam vocem edebat, & jucundiſſimum ſpectaculum parentis oculis erat.

> I once had a Son who was a young Man, my only Succeſſor, the Solace of my Age, the Glory of his Kind, the Prop of my Family, arrived to the endearing Age; then was he ſnatcht from me by Death, whoſe lovely Voice but a little before I heard, who lately was a pleaſant ſpectacle to his Parent.

Reader, if this have been thine own Condition, as it hath been his that writes it, I need ſay no more to convince thee, that it was a ſorrowful State indeed Chriſt met this tender Mother in.

Thirdly, And which is yet more, he was not only a Son, but an Only Son: So you find in Ver 12. He was the only Son of his Mother. One in whom all her Hopes and Comforts of that kind were bound up. For,

Omnis in Aſcanio ſtat chari cura Parentis. Virg.

All her Affections were contracted into this one Object. If we have never ſo many Children, we know not which of them to ſpare. If they ſtand like Olive-Plants about our Table, it would grieve us to ſee the leaſt Twig amongſt them broken down. But ſurely the Death of one out of many, is much more tolerable, than of all in one.

Mortem levius toleraret, ſi non unicus fuiſſet; ſi alter qui parentis dolorem leniret ſuperfuiſſet. Ambroſ.

Nihil charius unico filio. ſic dolor de morte ipſius intenſiſſimus extitit. Carth. in loc.

Hence it's noted in Scripture as the greateſt of Earthly Sorrows, Jer. 6. 26. O Daughter of my People, gird thee with Sackcloath, and wallow thy ſelf in Aſhes. Make thee Mourning as for an only Son, moſt bitter Lamentation. Yea, ſo deep, and penetrating is this grief, that the Holy Ghoſt borrows it to expreſs the deepeſt ſpiritual troubles by it. Zech. 12. 10. They ſhall mourn for him, (namely Chriſt whom they pierced) as one mourneth for an only Son.

Fourthly, And yet to heighten the Affliction, it is ſuper-added, verſe 12. And ſhe was a Widow. So that the Staff of her age, on whom ſhe leaned, was broken: She had now none left to comfort or aſſiſt her in her helpleſs, comfortleſs State of Widowhood; which is a condition not only void of comfort, but expoſed to Oppreſſion and Contempt.

Duplici nomine chariſſimus fuit, tum quod eſſet unigenitus, tum quod eſſet ſolatium, & quaſi baculus viduitatis ipſius. Piſc. in loc.

Yea, and being a Widow, the whole burthen lay upon her alone; ſhe had not an Husband to comfort her, as Elkana did Hanah in 1 Sam. 1. 8. Why weepeſt thou, and why is thy heart grieved? am not I more to thee than ten Sons? This would have been a great relief; but her Husband was dead as well as her Son: both gone, and ſhe only ſurviving, to lament the loſs of thoſe comforts that once ſhe had. Her calamities came not ſingle, but one after another, and this reviving and aggravating the former. This was her caſe and condition when the Lord met her.

Secondly, Let us conſider the Counſel which Chriſt gives her, with reſpect to this her ſad and ſorowful caſe. And when the Lord ſaw her, he had compaſſion on her, and ſaid unto her, Weep not. Relieving and Supporting words; wherein we ſhall conſider,

The { Occaſion.
Motive.
Counſel it ſelf.

I. The occaſion of it, and that was his ſeeing of her. This Meeting at the Gate of the City, how Accidental and Occaſional ſoever it ſeems, yet without doubt it was providentially ſuited to the Work intended to be wrought: The Eye of his Omniſcience foreſaw her, and this Meeting was by him deſigned, as an Occaſion of that famous Miracle which he wrought upon the young Man. Chriſt hath a quick Eye to diſcern Poor Mourning and Diſconſolate Creatures: And though he be now in Heaven, and ſtands out of our ſight, ſo that we ſee him not; yet he ſees us; and his Eye (which is upon all our troubles) ſtill affects his heart, and moves his Bowels for us.

II. The Motive ſtirring him up to give this relieving and comfortable Counſel to her, was his own Compaſſion. She neither expected, nor deſired it from him; but ſo full of tender pity was the Lord towards her, that he prevents her with unexpected Conſolation: Her Heart was nothing ſo full of compaſſion for her Son, as Chriſt was for her: He bore our Infirmities, even Natural as well as Moral ones, in the days of his fleſh; and though he be now exalted to the higheſt Glory, yet ſtill he continues as merciful as ever, and as apt to be touched with the ſenſe of our Miſeries, Heb. 4. 15.

Laſtly, The Counſel it ſelf, Weep not, herein fullfilling the Office of a Comforter to them that Mourn, whereunto he was anointed, Iſa. 16. 1, 2, 3. Yet the words are not an abſolute prohibition of tears and ſorrow, he doth not condemn all Mourning as ſinful, or all expreſſions of grief for dead Relations as uncomely: no, Chriſt would not have his People ſtupid and inſenſate; he only prohibits the exceſſes and extravagancies of our ſorrows for the dead, that it ſhould not be ſuch a Mourning for the dead as is found among the Heathen, who ſorrow without Meaſure, becauſe without Hope, being ignorant of that grand relief by the Reſurrection which the Goſpel reveals.

The Reſurrection of her Son from the dead, is the ground upon which Chriſt builds her conſolation and relief. Well might he ſay, Weep not, when he intended quickly to remove the cauſe of her tears by reſtoring him again to life.

Now though there be ſomewhat in this caſe extraordinary and peculiar: for few or none that carry their dead children to the grave, may expect to receive them again from the dead immediately by a ſpecial Reſurrection, as ſhe did: I ſay this is not to be expected by any that now loſe their Relations; the occaſion and reaſons of ſuch Miraculous ſpecial Reſurrections being removed, by a ſufficient and full evidence and confirmation of Chriſt's divine Power and Godhead: Yet thoſe that now bury their Relations, if they be ſuch as die in Chriſt, have as good and ſufficient reaſon to moderate their paſſions, as this Mourner had, and do as truly come within the reach and compaſs of this Chriſt's comfortable and ſupporting Counſel, Weep not, as ſhe did; For do but conſider what of ſupport or comfort can a particular and preſent Reſurrection from the dead give us, more than that it is and as it is a Specimen, handſel or pledge of the General Reſurrection? It is not the returning of the Soul to its Body, to live an animal Life again in this World of Sin and Sorrow, and ſhortly after to undergo the agonies and pains of Death again, that is in it ſelf any ſuch priviledge as may afford much comfort to the Perſon raiſed, or his Relations: It is no Priveledge to the Perſon raiſed; for it returns him from Reſt to Trouble, from the Harbour back again into the Ocean. It is matter of trouble to many dying Saints, to hear of the likelihood of their returning again, when they are got ſo nigh to Heaven.

It was once the caſe of a Godly Miniſter of this Nation, who was much troubled at his return, and ſaid, I am like a Sheep driven out of the ſtorm almoſt to the fold, and then driven back into the ſtorm again: or a weary Traveller that is come near his home and then muſt go back to fetch ſomewhat he had forgotten: or an Apprentice, whoſe time is almoſt expired, and then muſt begin a New Term.

But to die, and then return again from the dead, hath leſs of Priviledge, than to return only from the brink of the grave; for the ſick hath not yet felt the agonies and laſt ſtruggles or pangs of Death, but ſuch have felt them once, and muſt feel them again; they muſt die twice, before they can be happy once: and beſides during the little time they ſpend on Earth betwixt the firſt and ſecond diſſolution, there is a perfect ἀμνησία, forgetfulneſs and inſenſibleneſs of all that which they ſaw or enjoyed in their Eſtate of ſeparation: It being neceſſary, both for them and others, that it ſhould be; for, for themſelves it's neceſſary, that they may be content to live, and endure the time of Separation from that bleſſed and ineffable State, quietly and patiently; and for others, that they may live by faith, and not by ſenſe, and build upon divine and not humane authority and report.

Victuroſque dii celant, ut vivere durent.

So that here you ſee, their agonies and pangs are doubled, and yet their Life not ſweetned by any ſenſe of their Happineſs which returns and remains with them, and therefore it can be no ſuch priviledge to them.

And for their Relations, though it be ſome comfort to receive them again from the dead; yet the conſideration, that they are return'd to them into the ſtormy Sea, to partake of new ſorrows and troubles, from which they were lately free; and in a ſhort time they muſt part with them again, and feel the double ſorrows of a parting pull, which others feel but once, ſurely ſuch a particular Reſurrection conſidered in it ſelf, is no ſuch ground of comfort as at firſt we might imagine it to be.

It remains then, that the ground of all ſolid Comfort and relief againſt the death of our Relations, lies in the general and laſt Reſurrection, and what is in a particular one, is: but as it were a Specimen, and evidence of the general: and there the Apoſtle places our relief, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. that we ſhall ſee and enjoy them again at the Lord's coming. And ſurely this is more, than if with this Mother (in the Text) we ſhould preſently receive them from the dead, as ſhe did her Son: And if we judge not ſo, it is becauſe our hearts are carnal, and meaſure things rather by time, and ſenſe, than by Faith and Eternity.

Calv. in lo

Thus you ſee the Counſel, with its ground, which for the moſt part is common to other Chriſtian Mourners with her; the difference ence being but inconſiderable, and of little advantage.

Here then you find many aggravations of Sorrow meeting together: A Son, an only Son, is carrying to the Grave; yet Chriſt commands the penſive Mother, not to Mourn.

Hence we note,

Doct. That Chriſtians ought to moderate their ſorrows for their dead Relations, how many afflicting circumſtances and aggravations ſoever do meet together in their Death.

It is as common with Men, yea, with good Men, to exceed in their Sorrows for dead Relations, as it is to exceed in their Love and delights to living Relations; and both of the one and other, we may ſay as they ſay of Waters, It's hard to confine them within their Bounds. It is therefore grave Advice which the Apoſtle delivers in this caſe, 1 Cor. 7. 29, 30. But this I ſay, Brethren the time is ſhort; it remaineth that both they that have Wives, be as though they had none; and they that weep, as though they wept not; and thoſe that rejoice, as if they rejoiced not. As if he had ſaid, the floating World is near its Port: God hath contracted the Sails of Man's Life: It is but a point of time we have to live, and ſhortly it will not be a point to chooſe, whether we had Wives or not, Children or not: All theſe are time-eaten things, and before the expected fruit of theſe comforts be ripe, we our ſelves may be rotten. It is therefore an high point of Wiſdom, to look upon things which ſhortly will not be, as if already they were not, and to behave our ſelves in the loſs of theſe carnal enjoyments, as the natural Man behaves himſelf in the uſe of Spiritual Ordinances: He hears as if he heard not, and we ſhould weep as if we wept not; their Affections are a little moved ſometimes by Spiritual things, but they never lay them ſo to heart, as to be broken-hearted for the Sin they hear of, or deeply affected with the Glory revealed: We alſo ought to be ſenſible of the ſtroke of God upon our dear Relations: But yet ſtill we muſt weep, as if we wept not; that is, we muſt keep due bounds and moderation in our Sorrows, and not to be too deeply concerned for theſe dying, ſhort-liv'd things.

Quæ ardenter diligimus habita, graviter ſuſpiramus, amiſſa. Greg. mor.

καιρὸς συνεσταλμένος

To this purpoſe the Apoſtle exhorts, Heb. 12. 5. My Son deſpiſe not the Chaſtening of the Lord; neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. Theſe are two extreams, deſpiſing and fainting: When God is correcting, to ſay, I do not regard it, let God take all if he will; if my Eſtate muſt go, let it go; if my Children die, let them die; this is to deſpiſe the Lords chaſtening: and God cannot bear it, that we ſhould bear it thus lightly.

There is alſo another extream, and that is Fainting, If when Goods are taken away, the Heart be taken away, and when Children die, then the Spirit of the Parent dies alſo; this is fainting under the Rod. Thou lamenteſt (ſaith Seneca) thy deceaſed Friend, but I would not have thee grieve beyond what is meet: That thou ſhouldſt not grieve at all, I dare not require thee; Tears may be excuſed, if they do not exceed: Let thine Eyes therefore be neither wholly dry, nor yet let them overflow; Weep thou maiſt, but Wail thou muſt not.

Happy Man that ſtill keeps the Golden Bridle of Moderation upon his Paſſions and Affections, and ſtill keeps the poſſeſſion of himſelf, whatſoever he loſe the poſſeſſion of.

Now the Method in which I propoſe to proceed ſhall be,

1. To diſcover the Signs
2. To diſſwade from the Sin
3. To remove the Pleas
4. To propoſe the cure

} of immoderate Sorrow.

Firſt I ſhall give you the Signs of immoderate Sorrow, and ſhew you when it exceeds its bounds, and becomes ſinful, even a Sorrow to be ſorrowed for; and for clearneſs ſake, I will firſt allow what may be allowed to the Chriſtian Mourner, and then you will the better diſcern wherein the exceſs and ſinfulneſs of your Sorrow lies.

1. And firſt, How much ſoever we cenſure and condemn immoderate Sorrow, yet the Afflicted muſt be allowed an awakened and tender ſenſe of the Lord's afflicting hand upon them. It's no Vertue to bear what we do not feel: Yea, it is a moſt unbecoming temper, not to tremble when God is ſmiting.

The Lord ſaith to Moſes, in the caſe of Miriam, Numb. 12. 24. If her Father had ſpit in her Face, ſhould ſhe not be aſhamed ſeven Days. The Face is the Table and Seat of Beauty and Honour; but when it is Spit upon, it is made the Sink of Shame. Had her own Father ſpit upon her Face when ſhe had diſpleaſed him, would ſhe not have gone aſide as one aſhamed by ſuch a rebuke, and not have ſhewed her Face to him again in Seven Days? How much more ſhould ſhe take it to heart, and be ſenſible of this rebuke of mine, who have filled her Face with Leprous Spots, the ſigns of my diſpleaſure againſt her? Surely God will be aſhamed of thoſe, that are not aſhamed when he rebukes them.

It is not Magnanimity, but Stupidity to make light of God's Corrections, and for this the afflicted are ſmartly taxed, Jer. 5, 3. I have ſmitten them, but they have not grieved, When God ſmote Job in his Perſon, Children, and Eſtate, he aroſe and rent his Mantle, and put duſt upon his Head, to ſhew he was not ſenſeleſs and unaffected; and yet bleſſed the afflicting God, which as plainly ſhewed he was not Contumacious and Unſubmiſſive.

Secondly, We muſt allow the Mourning afflicted Soul, a due and comely expreſſion of his Grief, and Sorrow, in his complaints both to God and Men.

It's much more becoming a Chriſtian ingenuouſly to open his Troubles, than ſullenly to ſmother them. There is no Sin in complaining to God, but much Wickedneſs in complaining of him. Griefs are eaſed by Groans, and Heart preſſures relieved by utterance. This was David's courſe, and conſtant way, who was a Man of afflictions;

Pſal. 142, 2, 3. I poured out my complaint before him, I ſhewed before him my trouble: when my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knoweſt my Path.

To whom ſhould Children go, but to their Father to make their moan? Whence may they expect relief and comfort but from him? The 102 Pſalm is intituled, A Pſalm for the Afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his Complaint before the Lord.

And happy were it, if every afflicted Soul would chuſe this way to expreſs his Sorrows. Did we complain more to God, God would complain leſs of us, and quickly abate the matters of our Complaint. O you cannot think how moving, how melting, how prevailing it is with God, when his poor Burdened and Afflicted People, in a day of Diſtreſs and Deſpondency, when Deep calleth unto Deep, and one Wave drives on another, then for the oppreſſed Soul with humility, Filial Confidence and Faith, to turn it ſelf to the Lord, and thus beſpeak him, ‘Father, What ſhall I do? My Soul is greatly bowed down by Trouble, I am full to the Brim, my vain Heart hath looked for relief this Way and that way, but none comes, every Door of Comfort is ſhut up againſt me: Thou haſt multiplied my Sorrows, and renewed thy Witneſſes againſt me: Comfort is removed from my outward, and Peace from my inner Man, Sharp Afflictions without, and bitter Reflections within. O Lord, I am oppreſſed, undertake for me. Fathers of the Fleſh pity their diſtreſſed Children when they complain to them, and wilt not thou, O Lord, whoſe Compaſſions as far exceed Creature-Compaſſions, as the Sea exceeds a Drop: O my Father, pity me, ſupport me, deliver me.

Oh how acceptable is this to God! how advantagious to the Soul!

We may alſo make our Complaint to Men, So did Job, Chap. 19. 21. Have pity, have pity on me, O ye my Friends; for the Hand of God hath touched me. And it is a Mercy if we have any Friends that are Wiſe, Faithful, and Experienced. They are born for ſuch a time as this, Prov. 17. 17. But be they what they will, they cannot pity as God, relieve and ſuccour as he: And oftentimes we may ſay with Job, Chap. 21. 4. As for me, is my complaint to Men? And if it were, Why ſhould not my ſpirit be troubled? q. d. What great advantage can I get by theſe complaints? I may burden the Heart of my Friend, but how little doth that eaſe my own? Yet the very opening of the Heart to an experienced tender Chriſtian is ſome relief, and the engaging his Prayers is more. Thus far you moan ſafely: In all this there is no danger.

Thirdly, The afflicted Perſon may (ordinarily) accuſe, judge and condemn himſelf, for being the cauſe and procurer of his own Troubles. He may lawfully be diſcontented, and vexed with himſelf for his own Folly, when the iniquity of his Heels compaſſeth him about. And truly it is but ſeldome that any great affliction befals a gracious Perſon, but he ſaw the need of ſuch a Rod before he felt it.

Hath God ſmitten thy Child or Friend, and didſt thou not foreſee ſome ſharp trial coming? Did not thy fond, ſecure, carnal temper need ſuch a ſcourge to awaken, quicken and purge thee? Or if you did not foreſee it, it's now your duty to ſearch and examine your ſelves. So the Church in their affliction, reſolved, Lam. 3. 40. Let us ſearch and try our ways. When God is ſmiting we ſhould be a ſearching. Surely our Iniquities will enquire after us, if we will not enquire after them. Yea, in the day of affliction, a gracious Soul is inquiſitive about nothing more than the procuring and provoking cauſe of his Troubles, Job 10. 2. Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me; q. d. Lord, what ſpecial corruption is it that this Rod is ſent to rebuke; What ſinful neglect doth it come to humble me for? O diſcover it now to me, and recover me now from it.

And having found the Root and cauſe of their Troubles, ingenuous Souls will ſhame themſelves for it, and give glory to God by an humble ſubmiſſion, and vindication of the equity of his proceedings, Job 7. 20. I have ſinned, what ſhall I do unto thee, thou preſerver of Men? He thinks it no ſhame freely to diſcover unto God, and deeply to abaſe himſelf before him, for his folly.

I remember a choice note that * Mr. Brightman hath in his Commentary upon the Canticles.

Holy Men (ſaith he) after their Hearts are renewed by Repentance, are not aſhamed to remember and confeſs their ſlips and ſhameful falls, to the Glory of God; for they account that Glory which ſuch confeſſions take from them is not loſt, while it goes to the Glory of God. If his Glory may riſe out of our Shame, how willing ſhould we be to take ſuch Shame to us? Holy David was not aſhamed to acknowledge, Pſal. 38. 5. My Wounds ſtink and are corrupt becauſe of my Fooliſhneſs. He is the wiſeſt Man that thus befools himſelf before God.

It is true, God may afflict from Prerogative, or for Trial; but we may always ſee cauſe enough in our ſelves, and it is ſafeſt to charge it upon our own folly.

Laſtly, The afflicted Chriſtian may in an humble ſubmiſſive manner plead with God, and be earneſt for the removal of the affliction.

When affliction preſſeth us above ſtrength, when it diſables us for duty, or when it gives advantage to Temptation, then we may ſay with David, Remove thy ſtroke from me, I am conſumed by the blow of thine hand. Pſal. 39. 10. Even our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Day of his Troubles poured out his Soul with ſtrong Cries and many Tears, ſaying, Father, if thou be willing, let this Cup paſs from me, Luke 22. 42. Oppreſſed nature deſires eaſe; and even our renewed nature deſires freedom from thoſe clogs and temptations which hinder us in duty, or expoſe us to ſnares.

Thus far we may ſafely go.

But ſorrow then becomes ſinful and exceſſive when,

Firſt, “It cauſeth us to ſlight and deſpiſe all our other mercies and enjoyments, as ſmall things in compariſon of what we have loſt.

* Nec enim pudet ſanct viros poſtquam reno- vata Cord fuerint per reſipiſceniam, lapſus ſui & dede coris ad D Gloriam m miniſſe. N hil nobis, d cedit, quod cedit in ill us honore Brightma in Cant. c 1. v. 4. p

It often falls out that the ſetting of one comfort clouds and benights all the reſt. Our Tears for our loſt enjoyment ſo blind our Eyes that we cannot ſee the many other mercies which yet remain: We take ſo much notice of what is gone, that we take little or no notice of what is left. But this is very ſinful; for it involves in it both Ignorance, Ingratitude, and great Provocation.

It's a Sin ſpringing from Ignorance. Did we know the deſert of our Sin, we would rather wonder to ſee one Mercy left, than that twenty are cut off. They that know they have forfeited every Mercy, ſhould be thankful that they enjoy any, and patient when they loſe any of their comfort.

Did we know God, even that Sovereign Lord at whoſe diſpoſe our Comforts come and go, who can the next moment blaſt all that remain, and turn you into Hell; afterwards you would prize the Mercies he yet indulges to you at an higher value. Did you underſtand the fickle vaniſhing nature of the Creature, what a flower, what a bubble it is; Oh how thankful would you be to find ſo many yet left in your poſſeſſion!

Did you know the caſe of Thouſands as good, yea better than you, whoſe whole Harveſt of Comfort in this World, is but an handful to the gleanings of the Comforts you ſtill enjoy, who in all their lives never were owners of ſuch comfortable enjoyments as you now overlook, ſurely you would not act as you do.

Beſide, what vile ingratitude is in this? What, are all your remaining Mercies worth nothing? You have buried a Child, a Friend: Well, but ſtill, you have a Husband, a Wife, other Children; or if not, you have comfortable accommodations for your ſelves, with health to enjoy them; or if not, yet have you the Ordinances of God, it may be an Intereſt in Chriſt, and in the Covenant, Pardon of Sin, and hopes of Glory. What! and yet ſink at this rate, as if all your mercies, comforts, and hopes, even in both Worlds were buried in one Grave. Muſt Ichabod be written upon your beſt Mercies, becauſe Mortality is written upon one? Fye, fye, What ſhameful Ingratitude is here?

And really, Friend, ſuch a carriage as this under the Rod is no ſmall provocation to the Lord to go on in Judgment, and make a full end of all that remains, ſo that affliction ſhall not riſe up the ſecond time.

What if God taking notice how little thou regardeſt the many undeſerved favours thou yet poſſeſſeſt, ſhould ſay, Well, if thou think'ſt them not worth the owning, neither do I think them worth the continuing? Go, Death, there's a Husband, a Wife, other Children yet left, ſmite them all. Go, ſickneſs, and remove the health of his Body yet left; go, loſſes, and impoveriſh his Eſtate yet left; go, reproach, and blaſt his Reputation which is yet ſweet, What would you think of this? And yet if you be out of Chriſt, you are in danger of a far ſadder ſtroke than any or all yet mentioned. What if God ſhould ſay, prizeſt thou not my Mercy? Haſt thou no value for my goodneſs, and forbearance towards thee? Is it nothing that I have ſpared thee thus long in thy Sins and Rebellions? Well then, I will ſtretch out my hand upon thy life, cut off that thread which hath kept thee ſo many Years from dropping into Hell.

O think then what you have done, by provoking the Lord through your vile ingratitude! It is a dangerous thing to provoke God, when he is already in a way of Judgment. And if you be his own People, and ſo out of the danger of this laſt and worſt ſtroke: yet know, you have beeter Mercies to loſe than any you have yet loſt. Should God cloud your Soul with doubts, let looſe Satan to buffet you, remove joy and peace from your inner Man, how ſoon would you be convinced, that the Funeral of your deareſt Friend is but a trifle to this?

Well then, whatever God takes, be ſtill thankful for what he leaves. It was the great Sin of Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, that though God had delivered them from their cruel ſervitude in Egypt, miraculouſly fed them in the Deſert, and was leading them on to a Land flowing with Milk and Honey; yet as ſoon as any want did but begin to pinch them, preſently all theſe Mercies were forgotten and ſlighted, Numb. 14. 12. Would to God (ſay they) we had died in Egypt. And Numb. 11. 6. There is nothing at all beſide this Manna. Beware of this, O ye Mourning and Afflicted ones. You ſee both the Sin that is in it, and the danger that attends it?

Secondly, And no leſs Sinful are our Sorrows, "When they ſo wholly ingulph our "hearts, that we either mind not at all, or "are little or nothing ſenſible of the pub"lick evils and calamities which lye upon "the Church and People of God.

Some Chriſtians have ſuch publick Spirits, that the Churches Troubles ſwallow up their perſonal Trouble. Melancthon ſeemed to take little notice of the death of his Child, which he dearly loved, being almoſt overwhelmed with the Miſery lying on the Church.

And it was a good evidence of the graciouſneſs and publickneſs of Eli's Spirit, who ſitting in the Gate anxiouſly waiting for tydings from the Army, when the tydings came that Iſrael fled before the Philiſtines, that his two Sons Hophni and Phineas were dead, and that the Ark of God was taken, juſt at the mention of that word, The Ark of God, before he heard out the whole Narration, his mind quickly preſaging the iſſue, he ſunk down and died, 1 Sam. 4. 19, 20. O that was the ſinking, the killing word; had the Meſſenger ſtop'd at the death of his two Sons, like enough he had ſupported that burden, but the loſs of the Ark was more to him than Sons or Daughters.

Cumque ille nominaſſet Arcam Dei, q. d. nondum integram, ſed inchoatam audiens narrationem, mente prævolans & exitum præſagiens ruebat. Mercer. in Loc.

But how few ſuch publick ſpirits appear even among Profeſſors in this ſelfiſh generation? May we not with the Apoſtle complain, Phil. 2. 21. All ſeek their own, and not the things that are of Chriſt? Few Men have any great cares or deſigns lying beyond the bounds of their own private intereſts. And what we ſay of Cares, is as true of Sorrows: If a Child die, we are ready to die too, but publick Calamities pierce us not.

How few ſuffer either their domeſtick comforts to be ſwallowed up in the Churches Troubles, or their domeſtick Troubles to be ſwallowed up by the Churches Mercies! Now when it is thus with us, when we little regard what Mercies or Miſeries lie upon others, but are wholly intent upon our own afflictions, this is a Sinful Sorrow, and ought to be Sorrowed for.

Thirdly, Our Sorrows then become Sinful and exorbitant, “When they divert us from, “or diſtract us in our duties, ſo that our in-“tercourſe with Heaven is ſtopt and inter-“rupted by them.

How long can we ſit alone muſing upon a dead Creature? Here our thoughts eaſily flow, but how hard to fix them upon the living God! when our hearts ſhould be in Heaven with our Chriſt, they are in the Grave with our Dead. May not many afflicted Souls juſtly complain, that their Troubles had taken away their Chriſt from them, (I mean as to ſweet ſenſible Communion) and laid the dead Child in his Room?

Poor Creature, ceaſe to weep any longer for thy dead Relation, and weep rather for thy dead heart. Is this thy compliance with God's deſign in afflicting thee? What, to grow a greater ſtranger to him than before! or is this the way to thy cure and comfort in affliction, to refrain Prayer, and turn thy back upon God?

Or if thou dareſt not wholly neglect thy duty, yet thy affliction ſpoils the ſucceſs and comfort of it; thy heart is wandring, dead, diſtracted in Prayer and Meditation, ſo that thou haſt no relief or comfort from it.

Rouze up thy ſelf, Chriſtian conſider this is not Right. Surely the Rod works not kindly now. What, did thy love to God expire when thy Friend expired? Is thy Heart as cold in Duty, as his Body is in the Grave?

Hath natural death ſeized him, and ſpiritual deadneſs ſeized thee? Sure then thou hadſt more reaſon to lament thy dead Heart, than thy dead Friend. Divert the ſtream of thy Troubles ſpeedily, and labour to recover thy ſelf out of this Temper quickly; leſt ſad experience ſhortly tell thee, that what thou now Mourneſt for, is but a trifle to what thou ſhalt Mourn for hereafter. To loſe the Heavenly warmth and Spiritual livelineſs of thy affections, is undoubtedly a far more conſiderable loſs, than to loſe the Wife of thy Boſom, or the ſweeteſt Child that ever a tender Parent laid in the Grave.

Reader, If this be thy caſe, thou haſt reaſon to challenge the firſt Place among the Mourners. It is better for thee to bury ten Sons, than to remit one degree of Love or Delight in God. The end of God in ſmiting, was to win thy Heart nearer to him, by removing that which eſtranged it; how then doſt thou croſs the very deſign of God in this diſpenſation? Muſt God then loſe his delight in thy Fellowſhip, becauſe thou haſt loſt thine in the Creature? Surely when thy Troubles thus accompany thee to thy Cloſet, they are ſinful and extravagent Troubles.

Fourthly, Then you may alſo conclude your Sorrows to be Exceſſive and Sinful, When they ſo overload and oppreſs your Bodies, as to endanger your Lives, or render them uſeleſs and unfit for ſervice.

Worldly Sorrow works Death, 2 Cor. 7. 10. That is, Sorrow after the manner of Worldly Men, Sorrow in a meer carnal natural way, which is not relieved by any Spiritual Reaſonings and Conſiderations; This falls ſo heavy ſometimes upon the Body, that it ſinks under the Weight, and is caſt into ſuch diſeaſes as are never more wrought off, or healed in this World. Heavineſs in the Heart of a Man makes it ſtoop, ſaith Solomon, Prov. 12. 25. The ſtouteſt Body muſt ſtoop under heart-preſſure.

Triſtitia mundi eſt triſtitia ſe cundum mundum, quæ ex am re mundi naſcitur. Eſti. in loc

It is with the Mind of Man (ſaith one) as with the Stone Tyrhenus: As long as it's whole it ſwimmeth, but once broken it ſinks preſently. Grief is a Moth which getting into the Mind, will in ſhort time, make the Body, be it never ſo ſtrong and well wrought a piece, like an old ſeary Garment.

Philoſophers and Phyſicians generally reckon Sorrow among the chief cauſes of ſhortning Life. Chriſt was a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with Griefs, and this ſome think, was the reaſon that he appeared as a Man of Fifty, when he was little more than Thirty Years old Job. 8. 57. But his Sorrows were of another kind.*

Many a Man's Soul is to his Body, as a ſharp Knife to a thin Sheath, which eaſily cuts it through, and what do we by poring and pondering upon our Troubles, but whet the Knife that it may cut the deeper and quicker? Of all the Creatures that ever God made (Devils only excepted) Man is the moſt able and apt to be his own Tormentor.

How unmercifully do we load them in times of Affliction? How do we not only waſte their Strength by Sorrow, but deny relief and neceſſary Refreſhment? They muſt carry the load, but be allowed no Refreſhment: If they can eat the Bread of Affliction and drink Tears, they may feed at full; but no pleaſant Bread, no quiet ſleep is permitted them. Surely you would not burden a Beaſt as you do your own Bodies; you would pity and relieve a brute Beaſt groaning and ſinking under an heavy Burden, but you will not pity nor relieve your own Bodies.

* Hæc tib ſcribo qui tam imm dice flevi (quod mi me velim inter exe pla ſim rum quo dolor vici hodie ta- men ſact meum d no. Senec. E 63. p. m 637.

Some Men's Souls have given ſuch deep Wounds to their Bodies, that they are never like to enjoy many eaſie or comfortable days more whilſt they dwell in them.

Now this is very ſinful and diſpleaſing to God; for if he have ſuch a tender Care for our Bodies, that he would not have us ſwallowed up of over much Grief, no though it be for Sin, 2 Cor. 2. 7. But even to that Sorrow ſets bounds. How much leſs with outward Sorrow for Temporal loſs? May not your ſtock of natural ſtrength be imployed to better purpoſes think you than theſe? Time may come, that you may earneſtly wiſh you had that Health and Strength again to ſpend for God, which you now ſo laviſhly waſte, and prodigally caſt away upon your Troubles to no purpoſe, or advantage.

It was therefore an high point of Wiſdom in David, and recorded no doubt for our Imitation, who, when the Child was dead, ceaſed to Mourn, but aroſe, waſhed himſelf, and eat Bread, 2 Sam. 12. 20.

Fifthly, When Affliction ſowers the Spirit with diſcontent, and makes it inwardly grudge againſt the Hand of God, then our Trouble is full of Sin, and we ought to be humbled for it before the Lord.

Whatever God doth with us or ours, ſtill we ſhould maintain good thoughts of him. A gracious Heart cleaves nearer and nearer to God in Affliction, and can juſtifie God in his ſevereſt ſtrokes, acknowledging them to be all Juſt and Holy. Pſal. 119. 75. I know alſo that thy Judgments are right, and that thou in Faithfulneſs haſt afflicted me. And hereby the Soul may comfortably evidence to it ſelf its own upon uprightneſs, and ſincere Love to God. Yea, it hath been of ſingular uſe to ſome Souls, to take right meaſures of their love to God in ſuch Trials: To have lovely and well-pleaſed Thoughts of God, even when he ſmites us in our neareſt and deareſt comforts, argues plainly that we love him for himſelf, and not for his gifts only. And that his intereſt in the Heart is deeper than any Creature-Intereſt is. And ſuch is the comfort that hath reſulted to ſome from ſuch diſcoveries of their own Hearts by cloſe ſmarting afflictions; that they would not part with it, to have their comforts, (whoſe removal occaſioned them,) given back in lieu of it.

But to ſwell with ſecret diſcontent, and have hard Thoughts of God, as if he had done us wrong, or dealt more ſeverely with us than any. O this is a vile temper, curſed fruit ſpringing from an evil Root; a very carnal, ignorant, proud Heart; or at leaſt from a very diſtempered, if renewed Heart. So it was with Jonah when God ſmote his Gourd, Yea, (ſaith he) I do well to be angry even unto Death, Jonah 4. 9. Poor Man, he was highly diſtemper'd at this time, and out of frame; this was not his true temper or ordinary frame, but a ſurprize; the effect of a Paroxyſme of Temptation, in which his Paſſions had been over-heated.

Few dare to vent it in ſuch Language. But how many have their Hearts imbittered by diſcontent, and ſecret riſings againſt the Lord? Which if ever the Lord open their Eyes to ſee, will coſt them more trouble than ever that of Affliction did, which gave the occaſion of it.

I deny not, but the beſt heart may be tempted to think and ſpeak frowardly concerning theſe Works of the Lord; that envious adverſary the Devil will blow the Coals, and labour to blow up our Spirits at ſuch time into high diſcontents; The Temptation was ſtrong even upon David himſelf, to take up hard Thoughts of God, and to conclude, Verily I have cleanſed my Heart in vain; q. d. How little priviledge from the worſt of evils hath a Man by his Godlineſs? But he ſoon ſuppreſt ſuch motions. If I ſhould ſay thus, I ſhould offend againſt the Generation of thy Children: Meaning that he ſhould condemn the whole race of Godly Men through the whole World; for who is there among them all, but is, or hath, or may be afflicted as ſeverely as my ſelf?

Surely, it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have born Chaſtiſement, I will not offend any more, Job. 34. 31. Whatever God doth with you, ſpeak well, and think well of him, and his Works.

Sixthly, Our Sorrows exceed due bounds, when we continually excite and provoke them by willing irritations.

Grief, like a Lyon loves to play with us before it deſtroy us. And ſtrange it is that we ſhould find ſome kind of Pleaſure in rouzing our Sorrows. It's * Seneca's obſervation, and experimentally true, that even Sorrow it ſelf hath a certain kind of delight attending it.

The Jews that were with Mary in the Houſe to comfort her, When they ſaw that ſhe went out haſtily, followed her, ſaying, She goeth to the Grave to weep there. Joh. 11. 32. As they do (ſaith † Calvin) that ſeek to provoke their troubles by going to the Grave, or often looking upon the dead Body.

Thus we delight to look upon the Reliques of our deceaſed Friends, and often to mention their actions and ſayings, not ſo much for any matter of holy and weighty inſtruction or imitation; for that would warrant and commend the Action; but rather to rub the Wound, and fetch freſh Blood from it, by piercing our ſelves with ſome little, trivial, yet wounding circumſtances. I have known many that will ſit and talk of the Features, Actions, and Sayings of their Children, for Hours together, and weep at the rehearſal of them, and that for many Months after they are gone; So keeping the Wound continually open, and excruciating their own Hearts without any benefit at all by them. A lock of Hair, or ſome ſuch trifles muſt be kept for this purpoſe to renew their Sorrow daily by looking on it. On this account, Jacob would not have his Son called Benoni, leſt it ſhould renew his Sorrow, but Benjamin.

I am far from commending a brutiſh oblivion of our dear Relations, and condemn it as much I do this Childiſh and unprofitable remembrance. Oh Friends, we have other things to do under the Rod than theſe. Were it not better to be ſearching our Hearts and Houſes, when God's Rod is upon us, and ſtudying how to anſwer the end of it, by mortifying thoſe corruptions which provoke it? Surely the Rod works not kindly till it come to this.

Seventhly. Laſtly, Our Sorrows may then be pronounced ſinful, when they deafen our Ears to all the wholeſome and ſeaſonable Words of Counſel and Comfort offered us for our relief and ſupport.

Jer. 31. 15. A voice was heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter Weeping; Rachel weeping for her Children, would not be comforted for her Children, becauſe they were not. She will admit no comfort, her diſeaſe is curable by no other means but the reſtoration of her Children; give her them again and ſhe will be quiet, elſe you ſpeak into Air, ſhe regards not whatever you ſay.

Thus Iſrael in the cruel Bondage in Egypt, Moſes brings them the glad tydings of deliverance; But they hearkened not to him, becauſe

* Ineſt quiddam dulce triſtitiæ, cum occurrant ſermones eorum jucundi, converſatio hilaris, officioſa pietas: Tunc oculi velut in gaudio relaxantur. Sen. Ep. 806.

† Ex eorum more qui luctus ſui irritamenta quærunt. Calvin.

of the anguiſh of Spirit, and their cruel Bondage, Exod. 6. 9.

Thus obſtinately fixed are many in their trouble, that no Words of advice or comfort find any place with them: Yea, I have known ſome exceeding quick and ingenious, even above the rate of their common parts and abilities in inventing ſhifts, and framing objections to turn off Comfort from themſelves; as if they had been hired to plead againſt their own Intereſt: And if they be driven from thoſe Pleas, yet they are ſetled in their Troubles too faſt to be moved, ſay what you will they mind it not; or at moſt it abides not upon them. Let proper, ſeaſonable advice or comfort be tendered, they refuſe it, your Counſel is good, but they have no heart to it now. Thus Pſal. 77. 10. My Soul (ſaith he) refuſed to be comforted.

To want comfort in time of Affliction is an aggravation of our Affliction; but to refuſe it, when offered us, wants not Sin. Time may come, when we would be glad to receive comfort, or hear a word of ſupport, and ſhall be denied it.

O, 'tis a Mercy to the afflicted to have Barnabas with them, an Interpreter, one among a Thouſand; and it will be the great Sin and Folly of the Afflicted to ſpill thoſe excellent Cordials, prepared and offered to them, like Water upon the Ground, out of a froward, or dead Spirit, under trouble. Say not with them, Lam. 3. 18, 19. My hope it is periſhed from the Lord, remembring mine Affliction and my Miſery, the Wormwood and the Gall. It's a thouſand pities the Wormwood and Gall of Affliction ſhould ſo diſguſt a Chriſtian, as that he ſhould not at any time be able to reliſh the ſweetneſs that is in Chriſt, and in the Promiſes. And thus I have diſpatched the firſt part of my deſign, in ſhewing you wherein the Sin of Mourners doth not lie, and in what it doth.

Secondly, Having cleared this, and ſhewn you wherein the Sin and Danger lies; my way is prepared to the Second thing propoſed, namely, to diſſwade Mourners from theſe Sinful exceſſes of Sorrows, and keep the golden Bridle of moderation upon their Paſſions in times of Affliction. And O that my Words may be as ſucceſsful upon thoſe Penſive Souls that ſhall read them, as Abigal's were to David, 1 Sam. 25. 32. Who, when he perceived how proper and ſeaſonable they were, ſaid, Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, who ſent thee this Day to meet me, and Bleſſed be thy Advice.

I am ſenſible how hard a task it is, I here undertake; to charm down, and allay mutinous, raging, and tumultuous Paſſions; to give a check to the torrent of Paſſion, is ordinarily but to provoke it, and make it rage and ſwell the more.

The Work is the Lord's, wholly depends upon his Power and Bleſſing. He that ſaith to the Sea, when the Waver thereof roar, Be ſtill; can alſo quiet and compoſe the ſtormy and tumultuous Sea that rages in the Breaſts of the Afflicted, and caſts up nothing but the froth of vain and uſeleſs complaints of our Miſery, or the dirt of ſinful and wicked complaints of the dealings of the Lord with us.

The Rod of Affliction goes round, and viſits all ſort of Perſons without difference: It is upon the Tabernacle of the Juſt and of the Unjuſt, the Righteous and the Wicked, both are mourning under the Rod.

The Godly are not ſo to be minded, as that the other be wholly neglected, they have as ſtrong and tender, though not as regular affections to their Relations, and muſt not be wholly ſuffered to ſink under their unrelieved Burthens.

Here therefore I muſt have reſpect to two ſorts of Perſons, whom I find in tears upon the ſame account; I mean the loſs of their dear Relations, the Regenerate and the Unregenerate, I am a Debtor to both, and ſhall endeavour their ſupport and aſſiſtance; for even the Unregenerate call for our help and pity, and muſt not be neglected and wholly ſlighted in their afflictions. We muſt pity them that cannot pity themſelves. The Law of God commands us to help a Beaſt, if fallen under its Burden; How much more a Man ſinking under a load of Sorrows.

Nil miſeri-us miſero non miſerante ſe-ipſum.

I confeſs Uſes of Comfort to the Unregenerate are not (ordinarily) in uſe among us, and it may ſeem ſtrange whence any thing of ſupport ſhould be drawn for them, that have no ſpecial Intereſt in Chriſt, or Promiſes.

I confeſs alſo, I find my ſelf under great diſadvantages for this work, I cannot offer them thoſe reviving Cordials that are contained in Chriſt and the Covenant, for God's afflicted People; but yet ſuch is the Goodneſs of God even to his Enemies, that they are not left wholly without ſupports, or means to allay their Sorrow.

If this therefore be thy caſe, who readeſt theſe lines; afflicted and unſanctified, mourning bitterly for thy dead Friends, and more cauſe to mourn for thy dead Soul, Chriſtleſs and Graceleſs, as well as Childleſs or Friendleſs: No Comfort in Hand, nor yet in hope, full of Trouble, and no vent by Prayer or Faith to eaſe the Heart.

Poor Creature, thy caſe is ſad, but yet do not wholly ſink, and ſuffer thy ſelf to be ſwallowed up of Grief: Thou haſt laid thy dear one in the Grave, yet throw not thy ſelf head-long into the Grave after him; that will not be the way to remedy thy Miſery: But ſit down a while and ponder theſe three things:

Firſt, That of all Perſons in the World, thou haſt moſt reaſon to be tender over thy Life and Health, and careful to preſerve it; for if thy troubles deſtroy thee, thou art eternally loſt, undone for ever. Worldly ſorrow (ſaith the Apoſtle) works Death. And if it works thy Death, it works thy Damnation alſo; for Hell follows that Pale Horſe, Rev. 6. 8. If a Believer dies, there's no danger of Hell to him, the Second Death hath no power over him; but woe to thee if it overtake thee in thy Sin; beware therefore what thou doſt againſt thy Health and Life. Do not put the Candle of Sorrow too near that Thread by which thou hangeſt over the Mouth of Hell.

O it is far better to be Childleſs, or Friendleſs on Earth, than hopeleſs, and remedileſs in Hell.

Secondly, Own and admire the Bounty and goodneſs of God manifeſted to thee in this Affliction; that when Death came into thy Family to ſmite and carry off one, it had not fallen to thy Lot to be the perſon; thy Husband, Wife, or Child is taken, and thou art left; Had thy name been in the Commiſſion, thou hadſt been now paſt hope.

O the ſparing Mercy of God! the wonderful long-ſuffering of God towards thee; Poſſibly that Poor Creature that is gone, never provoked God as thou haſt done; thy Poor Child never abuſed Mercies, neglected Calls, treaſured up the thouſandth part of that guilt thou haſt done: So that thou mighteſt well imagine it ſhould rather have cut thee down, that hadſt ſo provoked God, than thy poor little one,

But oh the admirable Patience of God! Oh the riches of his long-ſuffering! Thou art only warned, not ſmitten by it: Is there nothing in this worth thankful acknowledgment? Is it not better to be in black for another on Earth, than in the blackneſs of Darkneſs for ever? Is it not eaſier to go to the Grave with thy Dead Friend, and weep there; than to go to Hell among the damned, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of Teeth?

Thirdly, This Affliction for which thou mourneſt, may be the greateſt Mercy to thee that ever yet befel thee in this World. God hath now made thy Heart ſoft by trouble, ſhewed thee the Vanity of this World; and what a poor Trifle it is which thou mad'ſt thy Happineſs: There is now a dark Cloud ſpread over all thy Worldly Comforts. Now, O now! if the Lord would but ſtrike in with this affliction, and by it open thine eyes to ſee thy deplorable ſtate, and take off thy heart for ever from the vain World which thou now ſeeſt hath nothing in it; and cauſe thee to chuſe Chriſt the only abiding good, for thy portion. If now thy affliction may but bring thy Sin to remembrance, and thy dead Friend may but bring thee to a ſenſe of thy dead Soul, which is as cold to God and ſpiritual things, as his Body is to thee; and more loathſome in his Eyes than that Corps is, or ſhortly will be to the Eyes of Men: Then this day is certainly a day of the greateſt Mercy that ever yet thou ſaweſt. O happy Death, that ſhall prove Life to thy Soul.

Why this is ſometimes the way of the Lord with Men, Job. 36. 8, 9. If they be bound in Fetters, and holden in cords of Affliction, then he ſheweth them their work, and their tranſgreſſion, that they have exceeded: He openeth alſo their Ear to Diſcipline, and commandeth them that they return from Iniquity.

O conſider, poor penſive Creature, that which ſtole away the Heart from God is now gone: That which eat up thy time and thoughts, that there was no room for God, Soul or Eternity in them, is gone; All the vain Expectations that thou raiſedſt up to thy ſelf, from that poor Creature which now lies in the Duſt, are in one day periſhed. O what an advantage haſt thou now for Heaven, beyond whatever thou yet hadſt! If God will but bleſs this Rod, thou wilt have cauſe to keep many a Thankſgiving-Day for this Day.

I pray let theſe three things be pondered by you; I can beſtow no more Comforts upon you, your Condition bars the beſt Comforts from you; they belong to the People of God, and you have yet nothing to do with them.

I ſhall therefore turn from you to them, and preſent ſome choicer Comforts to them to whom they properly belong, which may be of great uſe to you in reading; if it be but to convince you of the Bleſſed Priviledge and State of the People of God in the greateſt Plunges of Troubles in this World, and what advantages their Intereſt in Chriſt gives them for Peace and Settlement, beyond that State you are in.

And here I do with much more freedom and hope of ſucceſs, apply my ſelf to the Work of counſelling and comforting the afflicted. You are the fearers of the Lord and tremble at his Word: The leaſt Sin is more formidable to you than the greateſt Affliction. Doubleſs you would rather chuſe to bury all your Children than provoke and grieve your Heavenly Father. Your Relations are dear, but Chriſt is dearer to you by far.

Well then, let me perſwade you to retire a while into your Cloſets, redeem a little time from your unprofitable Sorrows, eaſe and empty your Hearts before the Lord, and beg his Bleſſing upon the relieving, quieting, and Heart-compoſing Conſiderations that follow; ſome of which are more general and common, ſome more particular and ſpecial, but all of them ſuch, as through the Bleſſing of God may be very uſeful at this time to your Souls.

1. Conſid. Conſider in this day of Sorrow, who is the framer and Author of this Rod by which you now ſmart; is not the Lord? And if the Lord hath done it, it becomes you meekly to ſubmit. Pſal. 46. 10. Be ſtill and know that I am God.

Man and Man ſtand upon even ground; if your Fellow-Creature do any thing that diſpleaſes you, you may not only enquire, Who did it, but Why he did it? You may demand his grounds and reaſons for what he hath done; but you may not do ſo here: It is expected that this one thing, The Lord hath done it, ſhould, without any farther Diſputes, or Conteſts, ſilence and quiet you, whatever it be that he hath done, Job. 33. 13. Why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? for he giveth not an account of any of his Matters. The Supream Being muſt needs be an unaccountable and uncontroulable Being.

It's a ſhame for a Child to ſtrive with his Father; a ſhame for a Servant to contend with his Maſter: but for a Creature to quarrel and ſtrive with the God that made him, O how ſhameful is it? Surely it is highly reaſonable that you be ſubject to that Will whence you proceeded, and that he who formed you and yours, ſhould diſpoſe of both as ſeemeth him good. It is ſaid, 2 Sam. 3. 36. That whatſoever the King did, pleaſed all the People: And ſhall any thing the Lord doth diſpleaſe you? He can do no wrong. If we pluck a Roſe in the bud as we walk in our Gardens, who ſhall blame us for it, it is our own, and we may crop it off when we pleaſe: Is not this the caſe? Thy ſweet

Bud which was cropt off before it was fully blown, was cropt off by him that owned it, yea, by him him that formed it. If his dominion be abſolute, ſure his diſpoſal ſhould be acceptable.

It was ſo to good Eli, 1 Sam. 3. 18. It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. And it was ſo to David, Pſal. 39. 9. I was dumb, I opened not my Mouth; becauſe thou didſt it. O let it be for ever remembred, That he whoſe name alone is Jehovah, is the moſt high over all the Earth, Pſal. 83. 18.

The glorious Sovereignty of God is illuſtriouſly diſplayed in Two Things, his Decrees and his Providences. With reſpect to the firſt he ſaith Rom. 9. 15. I will have Mercy on whom I will have Mercy. Here is no ground of diſputing with him; for ſo it is ſaid, ver. 20. Who art thou, O Man, that replieſt againſt God? Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, Why haſt thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter Power over the Clay.

And as to his Providences, wherein his Soveraignty is alſo manifeſted. It's ſaid Zech. 2. 14. Be ſilent, O all Fleſh, before the Lord, for he is raiſed up out of his Habitation. It's ſpoken of his Providential working in the changes of Kingdoms, and deſolations that attend them.

Now ſeeing the Caſe ſtands thus, that the Lord hath done it, it is his Pleaſure to have it ſo; and if it had not been his Will, it could never have been as it is: He that gave thee, (rather lent thee) thy Relation, hath taken him. O how quiet ſhould this Conſideration leave thee! If your Landlord who hath many Years ſuffered you to dwell in his Houſe, do at laſt warn you out of it, though he tell you not why; you will not contend with him, or ſay he hath done you wrong: Much leſs if he tell you it will be more for his profit and Accommodation to take it into his own Hand, than let it to you any longer.

Doubtleſs Reaſon will tell you, you ought quietly to pack up and quit it. It's yonr great Landlord from whom you hold (at pleaſure) your own, and your Relations Lives, that hath now warned you out from one of them, it being more for his glory (it may be) to take it in his own Hand by Death; and muſt you diſpute the caſe with him?

Come, Chriſtian, this no way becomes thee, but rather The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord. Look off from a dead Creature, lift up thine Eyes to the Sovereign, Wiſe, and Holy Pleaſure that ordered this Affliction: Conſider who he is, and who thou art; yea, purſue this Conſideration till thou canſt ſay, I am filled with the Will of God.

2. Conſid. Ponder well the quality of the comfort you are deprived of, and remember, that when you had it, it ſtood but in the rank and order of common and inferiour Comforts.

Children and all other Relations are but common Bleſſings, which God indifferently beſtows upon his Friends and Enemies, and by the having or loſing of them, no Man knows either Love or Hatred. It is ſaid of the Wicked, Pſal. 77. 14. That they are full of Children, yea, and of Children that do ſurvive them too; for, They leave their Subſtance to their Babes. Full of Sin, yet full of Children, and theſe Children live to inherit their Parents Sins and Eſtates together.

It is the miſtaking of the quality and nature of our Enjoyments, that ſo plunges us into trouble when we loſe them. We think there is ſo neceſſary a connexion betwixt theſe Creatures and our Happineſs, that we are utterly undone when they fail us.

But this is our Miſtake; there is no ſuch neceſſary connexion or dependance, we may be happy without theſe things. It is not Father, Mother, Wife, or Child, in which our chief Good and Felicity lies, we have higher, better, and more enduring things than theſe, all theſe may periſh, and yet our Soul ſecure and ſafe, yea and our Comfort in the way, as well as end, may be ſafe enough though theſe be gone. God hath better things to comfort his People with than theſe, and worſe Rods to afflict you with than the removal of theſe: Had God let your Children live and flouriſh, and given you eaſe and reſt in your Tabernacle, but in the mean time inflicted Spiritual Judgments upon your Souls, How much more ſad had your Caſe been?

But as long as our beſt Mercies are all ſafe, the things that have Salvation in them remain, and only the things that have Vanity in them are removed: You are not prejudiced, or much hindred as to the attainment of your laſt end by the loſs of theſe things.

Alas, it was not Chriſt's intent to purchaſe for you a ſenſual Content in the enjoyment of theſe Earthly Comforts, but to redeem you from all Iniquity; Purge your Corruptions, Sanctifie your Natures, wean your Hearts from this vain World; and ſo to diſpoſe and order your preſent Condition, that finding no reſt and content here, you might the more ardently pant and ſigh after the Reſt which remains for the People of God. And are you not in as probable a way to attain this end now as you were before? Do you think you are not as likely by theſe Methods of Providence to be weaned from the World, as by more pleaſant and proſperous ones: Every wiſe Man reckons that ſtation and condition to be beſt for him, which moſt promotes and ſecures his laſt End and great Deſign.

Well then, reckon you are as well without theſe things as with them; yea, and better too, if they were but Clogs and Snares upon your Affections, you have really loſt nothing, if the things wherein your eternal Happineſs conſiſteth be yet ſafe. Many of God's deareſt Children have been denied ſuch Comforts as theſe, and many have been deprived of them, and yet never the farther from Chriſt and Heaven for that.

3. Conſider. Always remember that how ſoon and unexpected ſoever your parting with your Relations was, yet your Leaſe was expired before you loſt them, and you enjoyed them every Moment of the time that God intended them for you.

Before this Relation, whoſe loſs you lament, ment, was born, the time of your Enjoyment and Separation was unalterably fixed and limited in Heaven, by the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh: And although it was a Secret to you, whilſt your Friend was with you: Yet now it is a plain and evident thing, that this was the time of Separation before appointed; and that the life of our Friend could by no means be protracted or abbreviated, but muſt keep you company juſt ſo far, and then part with you.

This poſition wants no full and clear Scripture Authority for its foundation, how pregnant and full is that Text, Job. 24. 5, 6. Seeing his days are determined, the number of his Months are with thee: Thou haſt appointed him his bounds which he cannot paſs.

The time of our Life, as well as the place of our Habitation, was prefixed before we were born.

It will greatly conduce to your Settlement and Peace to be well eſtabliſhed in this truth: That the appointed time was fully come, when you and your dear Relation parted; for it will prevent and ſave a great deal of trouble which comes from our after Reflexions.

O, if this had been done or that omitted, had it not been for ſuch Miſcarriages and Over ſights, my dear Husband, Wife, or Child, had been alive at this day! no, no, the Lord's time was fully come, and all things concurred and fell in together to bring about the Pleaſure his Will; let that ſatisfie you; had the ableſt Phyſicians in the World been there, or had they that were there, preſcribed another Courſe, as, it is now, ſo it would have have been when they had done all. Only it muſt be precautioned, that the decree of God no way excuſes any voluntary ſinful neglects or miſcarriages. God over-rules theſe things to ſerve his own Ends, but no way approves them; but it greatly relieves, againſt all our involuntary and unavoidable over-ſights, and miſtakes about the uſe of means or the timing of them; for it could not be otherwiſe than now it is.

Object. But many things are alledged againſt this Poſition, and that with much ſeeming countenance from ſuch Scriptures as theſe Pſal. 54. 25. Blood-thirſty Men ſhall not live out half their Days. Eccleſ. 7. 18. Why ſhouldeſt thou die before thy time. Pſal. 102. 24. O my God, take me not away in the midſt of my days. Iſa. 28. 10. I am deprived of the reſidue of my Years. And Prov. 10. 27. The fear of the Lord prolongeth Days, but the Years of the wicked ſhall be ſhortned. It is demanded, what tolerable Senſe we can give theſe Scriptures, whilſt we inſert an unalterable fixation of the term of Death.

Sol. The ſenſe of all theſe Scriptures will be cleared up to full ſatisfaction by diſtinguiſhing death and the terms of it.

Firſt we muſt diſtinguiſh Death into Natural and Violent.

The wicked and blood-thirſty Man ſhall not live out half his days; (i.e.) half ſo long as he might live according to the courſe of Nature, or the Vigour and Soundneſs of his natural Conſtitution: For his Wickedneſs either drowns Nature in an exceſs of Riot and Luxury, or expoſes him to the hand of Juſtice, which cuts him off for his Wickedneſs before he hath accompliſhed half his days.

Again we muſt diſtinguiſh of the term or limit for death, which is either,

General or Special.

The general limit is now ſeventy or eighty Years, Pſal. 90. 10. The days of our years are threeſcore Years and ten, and if by reaſon of ſtrength they be fourſcore Years, yet is their Strength Labour and Sorrow. To this ſhort limit the Life of Man is generally reduced ſince the Flood; and though there be ſome few exceptions, yet the general rule is not thereby deſtroyed.

The ſpecial limit is that proportion of time, which God by his own Counſel and Will hath allotted to every individual perſon: and it is only known to us by the event: This we affirm to be a fixed and unmovable term, with it all things ſhall fall in, and obſerve the Will of God in our diſſolution at that time. But becauſe the general limit is known, and this ſpecial limit is a Secret hid in God's own Breaſt; Therefore Man reckons by the former account, and may be ſaid when he dies at thirty or forty years old to be cut off in the midſt of his days; for it is ſo, reckoning by the general account: Though he be not cut off till the end of his days; reckoning by the ſpecial limit.

Thus he that is wicked dies before his time; (i. e.) the time he might attain to in an ordinary way: But not before the time God hath appointed. And ſo in all other objected Scripture.

It is not proper at all in a Subject of this nature to digreſs into a Controverſie. Alas, the poor Mourner, overwhelmed with Grief, hath no Pleaſure in that; it is not proper for him at this time; and therefore I ſhall for the preſent, wave the controverſie, and wind up this conſideration with an humble and ſerious motion to the afflicted; that they will wiſely conſider the matter. The Lord's time was come. Your Relations lived with you every moment that God intended them for you, before you had them.

O Parents! mind this I beſeech you; the time of your Child's continuance in the Womb, was fixed to a minute by the Lord; and when the parturient fullneſs of that time was come, Were you not willing it ſhould be delivered thence into the World? The tender Mother would not have it abide one Minute longer in the Womb, how well ſoever ſhe loved it; And is there not the ſame reaſon we ſhould be willing when God's appointed time is come to have it delivered by death out of this ſtate, which in reſpect ſpect of the Life of Heaven, is but as the Life of a Child in the Womb, to its Life in the open World.

And let none ſay the death of Children is a præmature death. God hath ways to ripen them for Heaven, whom he intends to gather thither betimes, which we know not: In reſpect of fitneſs they die in a full age, though they be cut off in the bud of their time.

He that appointed the Seaſons of the Year, appointed the Seaſons of our Comfort in our Relations: And as thoſe ſeaſons cannot be altered, no more can theſe. All the courſe of Providence is guided by an unalterable decree; what falls out caſually to our apprehenſion, yet falls out neceſſarily in reſpect of God's Appointment.

O therefore be quieted in it, this muſt needs be as it is.

4. Conſid. Hath God ſmitten your Darling, and taken away the delight of your Eyes with this ſtroke? Bear this Stroke with Patience and quiet Submiſſion: For how know you but your Trouble might have been greater from the life, than it is from the death of your Children?

Sad Experience made a Holy Man once to ſay, It's better to weep for ten dead Children, than for one living Child: A living Child may prove a continual drooping, yea, a continual dying to the Parents Heart. What a ſad Word was that of David to Abaſhai, 2 Sam. 16. 11. Behold, ſaith he, my Son which came out of my Bowels ſeeketh my Life. I remember Seneca in his Conſolatory Epiſtle to his Friend Marullus, brings in his Friend thus aggravating the death of his Child.

O, ſaith Marullus, Had my Child lived with me, to how great Modeſty, Gravity and Prudence might my diſcipline have formed and moulded him? But, ſaith Seneca, (which is more to be feared) he might have been as others moſtly are; for look (ſaith he) what Children come even out of the Worthieſt Families; ſuch who exerciſe both their own and others luſts; in all whoſe Life there is not a day without the mark of ſome notorious Wickedneſs upon it.

Seneca's Epiſt. p. 84.

I know your tender love to your Children will ſcarce admit ſuch Jealouſies of them, they are for the preſent ſweet, lovely, innocent Companions; and you doubt not but by your care of their Education, and Prayer for them, they might have been the Joy of your Hearts.

Why, doubtleſs Eſau, when he was little and in his tender Age, promiſed as much Comfort to his Parents as Jacob did; and I queſtion not but Iſaac and Rebecca (a gracious Pair) ſpent as many Prayers, and beſtowed as many Holy Counſels upon him as they did upon his Brother: But when the Child grew up to riper Years, then he became a ſharp affliction to his Parents; for it is ſaid Gen. 26. 34. That when Eſau was forty years old, he took to Wife Judith the Daughter of Berith the Hittite, which was a grief of Mind to Iſaac and Rebecca. The word in the Original, comes from a Root that ſignifies to imbitter: This Child imbittered the Minds of his Parents by his Rebellion againſt them, and deſpiſing their Counſels.

And I cannot doubt but Abraham diſciplin'd his Family as ſtrictly as any of you, never Man received a higher Encomium from God upon that account, Gen. 18. 19. I know him, that he will command his Children and his Houſhold after him, and they ſhall keep the way of the Lord. Nor can I think but he beſtowed as many and as frequent Prayers for his Children, and particularly for his Iſhmael, as any of you: We find one, and that a very pathetical one recorded, Gen 17. 18. O! that Iſhmael might live before thee: And yet you know how he proved, a Son that yielded him no more comfort, than Eſau did to Jacob and Rebecca.

O how much more common is it for Parents to ſee the vices and evils of their Children, than their vertues and graces? And where one Parent lives to rejoice in beholding the Grace of God ſhining forth in the Life of his Child, there are twenty, it may be an hundred, that live to behold, to their vexation and grief, the workings of Corruptions in them.

It is a note of Plutarch in his Morals, Nicocles (ſaith he) lived not to ſee the noble Victory obtained by Themiſtocles, his Son. Nor Melitades to ſee the Battle his Son Cimon won in the Field. Nor Zantippus to hear his Son Perciles Preach, and make Orations. Ariſton never heard his Son Plato's Lectures and Diſputatious. But Men (ſaith he) commonly live to ſee their Children fall a Gaming, Revelling, Drinking, and Whoring; multitudes live to ſee ſuch things to their Sorrow. And if thou be a gracious Soul, O what a cut would this be to thy very Heart! to ſee thoſe (as David ſpake of his Abſalom) that came out of thy bowels to be ſinning againſt God, that God whom thou loveſt, and whoſe Honour is dearer to thee than thy very Life!

Plut Mo
p. 222.

But admit they ſhould prove civil and hopeful Children, yet mighteſt thou not live to ſee more miſery come upon them than thou couldeſt endure to ſee? O think what a ſad and doleful ſight was that to Zedekiah, Jer. 50. 10. The King of Babylon brought his Children and ſlew them before his Eyes. Horrid Spectacle! and that leads to the

5. Conſid. How know you but by this ſtroke which you ſo lament, God hath taken them away from the Evil to come?

It is God's uſual way when ſome extraordinary calamities are coming upon the world, to hide ſome of his weak and tender ones out of the way by Death, Iſa. 57. 1, 2. He leaves ſome and removes others, but taketh care for the ſecurity of all. He provided a grave for Methuſalah before the flood. The Grave is an hiding place to ſome, and God ſees it better for them to be under Ground, than above Ground in ſuch evil days.

Juſt as a careful and tender Father, who hath a Son abroad at School, hearing the Plague is broken out in, or near the place, ſends his Horſe preſently to fetch home his Son, before the danger and difficulty be greater. Death is our Father's Pale Horſe, which he ſends to fetch home his tender Children, and carry them out of harms way.

Surely when National Calamities are drawing on, it is far better for our Friends to be in the Grave in Peace, than expoſed to the Miſeries and diſtreſſes that are here, which is the meaning of Jer 22. 10. Weep not for the Dead, neither bemoan him; but weep for him that goeth away, for he ſhall return no more, nor ſee his Native Country.

And is there not a dreadful ſound of Troubles now in our Ears? Do not the Clouds gather blackneſs? Surely all things round about us ſeem to be preparing and diſpoſing themſelves for Affliction. The days may be nigh in which you ſhall ſay, Bleſſed is the Womb that never bare, and the Paps that never gave ſuck.

It was in the day wherein the Faith and Patience of the Saints were exerciſed, that John heard a Voice from Heaven, ſaying to him, Write, Bleſſed are the Dead which die in the Lord from henceforth.

Thy Friend by an act of Favour is diſbanded by Death, whilſt thou thy ſelf art left to endure a great fight of Affliction. And now if troubles come, thy cares and fears will be ſo much the leſs, and thy own death ſo much the eaſier to thee; when ſo much of thee is in Heaven already. In this caſe, the Lord by a Merciful Diſpenſation is providing both for their ſafety, and thy own eaſier paſſage to them.

In removing thy Friends before hand, he ſeems to ſay to thee as he did to Peter, John 14. 7. What I do thou knoweſt not now, but hereafter thou ſhalt know it. The Eye of Providence hath a Proſpect far beyond thine; it would be in probability an harder Task for thee to leave them behind, than to follow them.

A Tree that is deeply rooted in the Earth, requires many ſtroaks to fell it, but when its Roots are looſened before-hand, then an eaſie ſtroke lays it down upon the Earth.

6. Conſider. A parting time muſt needs come. And why is not this as good as another? You knew before-hand your Child or Friend was Mortal, and that the Thread that linked you together, muſt be cut. If any one (ſaith Baſil) had asked you, when your Child was born, what is that which is born? what would you have anſwered? Would you not have ſaid it is a Man? And if a Man; then a Mortal vaniſhing thing. And why then are you ſurprized with wonder to ſee a dying thing dead?

Ep. 99.

He (ſaith Seneca) who complains that one is dead, complains that he was a Man. All Men are under the ſame condition, to whoſe ſhare it falls to be born, to him it remains to die.

cca's
ſt. 8c4.

We are indeed diſtinguiſhed by the Intervals, but equalized in the iſſue: it is appointed to all Men once to die, Heb. 9. 27. There is a Statute-Law of Heaven in the caſe.

Poſſibly you think this is the worſt time for parting that could be; had you enjoyed it longer, you could have parted eaſier, but how are you deceived in that? The longer you had enjoyed it, the loather ſtill you would have been to leave it: The deeper it would have rooted it ſelf in your affection.

Had God given you ſuch a Priviledge as was once granted to the Engliſh Parliament; that the Union betwixt you and your Friend ſhould not be diſſolved, till you your ſelf were willing it ſhould be diſſolved; When, think you, would you have been willing it ſhould be diſſolved?

It's well for us and ours, that our times are in God's Hand, and not in our own. And how immature ſoever it ſeemed to be when it was cut down; yet it came to the Grave in a full Age, as a ſhock of Corn in its Seaſon, Job. 5. 26. They that are in Chriſt, and in the Covenant, never die unſeaſonably whenſoever they die (ſaith one upon the Text) They die in a good old Age, Yea, though they die in the Spring and Flower of Youth, they die in a good old Age; i. e. They are ripe for Death whenever they die. Whenever the Godly die, it's Harveſt-time with him: Though in a natural Capacity he be cut down while he is green, and cropt in the bud or bloſſom; yet in his Spiritual Capacity he never dies before he is ripe; God can ripen his ſpeedily, he can let out ſuch warm rays and beams of his Spirit upon them, as ſhall ſoon maturate the ſeeds of Grace into a preparedneſs for Glory.

Car. in Loc.

It was doubtleſs the moſt fit and ſeaſonable time for them that ever they could die in, and as it is a fit time for them, ſo for you alſo. Had it lived longer, it might either have engaged you more, and ſo your parting would have been harder; or elſe have puzzled and ſtumbled you more by diſcovering its natural Corruption: And then what a ſtinging aggravation of your Sorrow would that have been?

Surely the Lord of time is the beſt Judge of time; and in nothing do we more diſcover our folly, and raſhneſs, than in preſuming to fix the times either of our comforts or troubles: As to our comforts, we never think they can come too ſoon; we would have them preſently, whether the Seaſon be fit or not, as Numb. 12. 13. Heal her now, Lord. O let it be done ſpeedily; we are in poſt-haſt for our Comforts; and for our Afflictions, we never think they come late enough; not at this time, Lord, rather at any other time than now.

But it is good to leave the timing both of the one and the other to him, whoſe works are all beautiful in their Seaſons, and never doth any thing in an improper time.

7. Conſider. Call to mind in this day of trouble, the Covenant you have with God, and what you ſolemnly promiſed him in the Day you took him for your God.

It will be very ſeaſonable and uſeful for thee, Chriſtian, at this time to reflect upon theſe tranſactions, and the frame of thy Heart in thoſe days, when an heavier load of Sorrow preſt thy Heart, than thou now feeleſt.

In thoſe your ſpiritual diſtreſſes, when the Burden of Sin lay heavy, the curſe of the Law, the fear of Hell, the dread of Death and Eternity beſet thee on every ſide; and ſhut thee up to Chriſt, the only door of Hope: Ah what good news wouldeſt thou then have accounted it, to eſcape that danger with the loſs of all earthly Comforts!

Was not this thy cry in thoſe days? 'Lord, 'give me Chriſt, and deny me whatever 'elſe thou pleaſeſt. Pardon my Sin, ſave ‘my Soul, and in order to both, unite me with Chriſt, and I will never repine or open my Mouth. Do what thou wilt with me; let me be Friendleſs, let me be Childleſs, let me be Poor, let me be any thing rather than a Chriſtleſs, Graceleſs, Hopeleſs Soul.

And when the Lord hearkened to thy cry, and ſhewed thee mercy, when he drew thee off from the world into thy cloſet, and there treated with thee in ſecret, when he was working up thy Heart to the terms of his Covenant, and made thee willing to accept Chriſt upon his own terms: O then how heartily didſt thou ſubmit to his yoke as moſt reaſonable and eaſie, as at that time it ſeemed to thee?

Call to mind theſe days, the ſecret places where Chriſt and you made the bargain. Have not theſe words, or words to this ſenſe, been whiſpered by thee into his ear with a dropping Eye, and melting Heart?

‘Lord Jeſus, here am I a Poor Guilty Sinner, deeply laden with Sin, fear and trouble upon one hand, and there is a juſt God, a ſevere Law, and everlaſting burnings on the other hand; but bleſſed be God, O bleſſed be God for Jeſus the Mediator, who interpoſeth betwixt me and it. Thou art the only door of hope at which I can eſcape, thy blood the only means of my Pardon and Salvation. Thou haſt ſaid, Come unto me all ye that Labour, and are heavy Laden. Thou haſt promiſed that he that cometh to thee ſhall in no wiſe be caſt out.

‘Bleſſed Jeſus, thy poor Creature cometh to thee upon theſe encouragements: I come, O but it is with many ſtaggerings, with many doubts and fears of the Iſſue; yet I am willing to come and make a Covenant with thee this day.

‘I take thee this day to be my Lord, and ſubmit heartily to all thy diſpoſals: Do what thou wilt with me or with mine: let me be Rich or Poor, any thing or nothing in this World. I am willing to be as thou wouldſt have me. And I do likewiſe give my ſelf to thee this day to be thine; all I am, all I have ſhall be thine; thine to ſerve thee, and thine to be diſpoſed at thy Pleaſure. Thou ſhalt henceforth be my higheſt Lord, my chiefeſt Good, my laſt End.

Now, Chriſtian, make good to Chriſt what thou ſo ſolemlny promiſedſt him. He, I ſay, he hath diſpoſed of this thy dear Relation as pleaſed him; and is thereby trying thy uprightneſs in the Covenant which thou mad'ſt with him: Now where is the ſatisfaction and content thou promiſedſt to take in all his diſpoſals? Where is that Covenanted ſubmiſſion to his Will? didſt thou accept this affliction that is come upon thee?

Didſt thou tell him, Lord, I will be content thou ſhalt when thou pleaſeſt take any thing I have, ſave only this Husband, this Wife or this dear Child; I reſerve this out of the bargain: I ſhall never indure that thou ſhouldſt kill this comfort? If ſo, thou didſt in all this but prove thy ſelf an hypocrite: If thou waſt ſincere in thy covenant, as Chriſt had no reſerves on his part, ſo thou hadſt none on thine.

It was all without any exception thou then deſignedſt to him, and now wilt thou go back from thy Word, as one that had out-promiſed himſelf, and repents the bargain? Or at leaſt as one that hath forgotten theſe ſolemn tranſactions in the days of thy diſtreſs? Wherein hath Chriſt failed in one tittle that he promiſed thee? Charge him if thou canſt with the leaſt unfaithfulneſs: He hath been faithful to a title on his part; O be thou ſo upon thine; this day it's put to the proof, remember what thou haſt promiſed him.

8. Conſider. But if thy Covenant with God will not quiet thee, yet methinks God's Covenant with thee might be preſumed to do it.

Is thy Family which was lately hopeful and flouriſhing, a peaceful Tabernacle, now broken up and ſcattered? Thy Poſterity, from which thou raiſedſt up to thy ſelf great expectations of comfort in old age, cut off? So that thou art now like neither to have a name or memorial left thee in the Earth.

Doſt thou ſit alone and mourn to think whitherto thy hopes and comforts are now come?

Doſt read over thoſe Words of Job, Chap. 29. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. and comment upon them with many tears, O that I were as in Months paſt, as in the day when God preſerved me! when his candle ſhined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkneſs! As I was in the days of my youth, when the ſecret of God was upon my Tabernacle, when the Almighty was yet with me, when my Children were about me.

Yet let the Covenant God hath made with thee, comfort thee in this thy deſolate condition.

You know what domeſtick troubles holy David met with in a ſad ſucceſſion, not only from the death of Children; but which was much worſe, from the wicked lives of his Children. There was Inceſt, Murder, and Rebellion in his Family; a far ſorer trial than death in their Infancy could have been: And yet ſee how ſweetly he relieves himſelf from the Covenant of Grace, in 2 Sam. 23. 5. Although my houſe be not ſo with God, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting Covenant, ordered in all things and ſure; for this is all my Salvation, and my deſire, although he make it not to grow.

I know this place principally refers to Chriſt, who was to ſpring out of David's Family according to God's Covenant made with him in that behalf: And yet I doubt not but it hath another, though leſs principal aſpect upon his own Family; over all the afflictions and troubles whereof the Covenant of God with him, did abundantly comfort him.

And as it comforted him, although his Houſe did not increaſe, and thoſe that were left were not ſuch as he deſired: So it may abundantly comfort you alſo, whatever troubles or deaths be upon your Families, who have an Intereſt in the Covenant. For,

Firſt, If you be God's Covenant People, though he may afflict, yet he will never forget you, Pſal. 3. 5. He is ever mindful of his Covenant. You are as much upon his Heart in your deepeſt afflictions, as in the greateſt flouriſh of your Proſperity.

You find it hard to forget your Child, though it be now turned to an heap of corruption, and loathſom rottenneſs; O how doth your mind run upon it night and day! your thoughts tire not upon that object: Why, ſurely it's much more eaſie for you to forget your dear Child whilſt living and moſt endearing, (much more when dead and undeſireable) than it is for your God to forget you, Iſa 49. 15. Can a Woman forget her ſucking Child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion upon the Son of her Womb? Yea, they may forget, yet will not I forget thee.

Can a Woman, the more affectionate Sex, forget her Sucking Child; her own Child, and not a nurſing Child: Her own Child, whilſt it hangs on the Breaſt, and together with the Milk from the Breaſt, draws love from its Mothers Heart: Can ſuch a thing as this be in Nature? Poſſibly it may; for Creature-Love is fickle and variable: But I will not forget thee; it's an Everlaſting Covenant.

Secondly. As he will never forget you in your Troubles; ſo he will order all your Troubles for your good; it's a well-ordered Covenant, or a Covenant orderly diſpoſed: So that every thing ſhall work together for your good.

The Covenant ſo orders all your Trials, ranks and diſpoſes your various Troubles ſo, as that they ſhall in their orders and places ſweetly co-operate, and join their united influences to make you happy.

Poſſibly you cannot ſee how the preſent Affliction ſhould be for your good, you are ready to ſay with Jacob, Gen. 42. 36. Joſeph is not, and Simeon is not; and ye will take Benjamin away; all theſe things are againſt me. But could you once ſee how ſweetly and orderly all theſe Afflictions work under the Bleſſing and Influence of the Covenant to your Eternal Good; you would not only be quiet, but thankful for that which now ſo much afflicts and troubles you.

Thirdly, This Covenant is not only well ordered in all things, but ſure, the Mercies contained in it are called the ſure Mercies of David, Iſa. 55. 3. Now how ſweet, how ſeaſonable a ſupport doth this Conſideration give to God's afflicted under the Rod! You lately made your ſelves ſure of that Creature-Comfort which hath forſaken you. It may be you ſaid of your Child which is now gone, as Lamech ſaid of his Son Noah, Gen. 5. 29. This ſame ſhall comfort us concerning our work, and toil of our Hands. Meaning that his Son ſhould not only comfort them by aſſiſting them in the work of their Hands, but for enjoying the fruit of their toil and pains for him.

Probably ſuch Thoughts you have had, and raiſed up to your ſelves great Expectations of Comfort in your old age from it; but now you ſee you built upon the Sand; and where were you now, if you had not a firmer bottom to build upon? But bleſſed be God, the Covenant-Mercies are more ſure and ſolid: God, Chriſt, and Heaven, never ſtart or fade as theſe things do.

The ſweeteſt Creature-Enjoyments you ever had or have in this World, cannot ſay to you as your God doth, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee. You muſt part with your dear Husbands, how well ſoever you love them; you muſt bid adieu to the Wife of your Boſom, how nearly ſoever your affections be linked, and Heart delighted in her. Your Children and you muſt be ſeparated, though they be to you as your own Soul.

But though theſe vaniſh away, bleſſed be God there is ſomething that abides. Though all Fleſh be as Graſs, and the Goodlineſs of it as the Flower of the Graſs, though the Graſs withereth, and the flower thereof fadeth, becauſe the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; yet the Word of our God ſhall ſtand for ever. Iſa. 40. 6, 7, 8. There is ſo much of Support contained in this one Conſideration, that could but your Faith fix here, to realize and apply it, I might lay down my Pen at this Period, and ſay, the Work is done, there needs no more.

9. Conſid. The hope of the Reſurrection ſhould powerfully reſtrain all exceſſes of Sorrow in thoſe that do profeſs it.

Let them only mourn without meaſure, who mourn without Hope. The Husbandman doth not mourn when he caſts bis Seed-corn into the Earth, becauſe he ſows in hope; commits it to the ground with an expectation to receive it again with improvement. Why thus ſtands the caſe here, and juſt ſo the Apoſtle ſtates it, 1 Theſ. 4. 13, 14. But I would not have you to be ignorant, Brethren, concerning them which are aſleep, that ye ſorrow not even as others that have no hope; for if we believe that Jeſus died and roſe again, even ſo them alſo which ſleep in Jeſus will God bring with him.

Q. D. Look not upon the Dead as a loſt Generation: Think not that Death hath anihilated and utterly deſtroyed them. O no, they are not dead, but only aſleep, and if they ſleep, they ſhall awake again. You don't uſe to make out-cries and lamentations for your Children and Friends when you find them aſleep upon their Beds. Why, Death is but a longer ſleep, out of which they ſhall as ſurely awake as ever they did in the Morning in this World.

I have often wondred at that golden Sentence in Seneca, My Thoughts of the Dead (ſaith he) are not as others are; I have fair and pleaſant Apprehenſions of them, for I enjoyed them as one that reckoned I muſt part with them; and I part with them as one that makes account to have them.

Habui enim illos tanquam amiſſurus, amiſi tanquam habe. Seneca Ep. 63.

He ſpeaks, no doubt, of that enjoyment of them, which his pleaſant Contemplations of their Vertuous Actions could give him; for he was wholly unacquainted with the comfortable and Heart ſupporting Doctrine of the Reſurrection. Had he known the Advantages which reſult thence, at what a rate may we think he would have ſpoken of the Dead and of their State? But this you profeſs to believe, and yet ſink at a ſtrange rate. O ſuffer not Gentiliſm to outvie Chriſtianity: Let not Pagans challenge the greateſt Believers, to out-do them in a quiet and cheerful Behaviour under Afflictions.

I beſeech thee, Reader, if thy deceaſed

Friend have left thee any ſolid ground of hope that he died intereſted in Chriſt, and the Covenant; that thou wilt diſtinctly ponder theſe admirable ſupports which the Doctrine of the Reſurrection affords.

Firſt. That the ſame Body which was ſo pleaſant a Spectacle to thee ſhall be reſtored again; yea, the ſame numerically, as well as the ſame ſpecifically: So that it ſhall not only be what it was, but the who it was. Theſe Eyes ſhall behold him, and not another, Job 19. 27, &c. The very ſame Body you laid, or are now about to lay in the Grave, ſhall be reſtored again: Thou ſhalt find thy own Husband, Wife, or Child, or Friend again: I ſay the ſelf-ſame, and not another.

Secondly, And farther, this is ſupporting, that as you ſhall ſee the ſame Perſon that was ſo dear to you: So you ſhall know them to be the ſame that were once endeared to you on Earth in ſo near a tye of Relation.

Indeed you ſhall know them no more in any carnal Relation, Death diſſolved that Bond: But you ſhall know them to be ſuch as once were your dear Relations in this World, and be able to ſingle them out among that great Multitude, and ſay, This was my Father, Mother, Husband, Wife, or Child. This was the Perſon for whom I wept and made Supplication, who was an Inſtrument of good to me, or to whoſe Salvation God then made me inſtrumental.

For we may allow in that State, all that knowledge which is cumulative and perfective, whatſoever may enlarge and heighten our Felicity and Satisfaction, as this muſt needs be allowed to do. Luther's Judgment in this Point being asked by his Friends at Supper the Evening before he died, replied thus, What (ſaid he) befell Adam? He never ſaw Eve, but was in a deep Sleep when God formed her; yet when he awaked and ſaw her, he asked not what ſhe was, nor whence ſhe came? but ſaith ſhe was Fleſh of his Fleſh, and Bone of his Bone. Now how knew he that? He being full of the Holy Ghoſt, and endued with the knowledge of God, ſpake thus. After the ſame manner we alſo ſhall be in the other Life renewed by Chriſt, and ſhall know our Parents, our Wives and Children.

Melchion Adam in vita Luth.

And this among other things was that with which Auguſtine comforted the Lady Italica after the death of her dear Husband, telling her that ſhe ſhould know him in the World to come among the glorified Saints. Yea, and a greater than either of theſe, I mean Paul, comforted himſelf that the Theſſalonians whom he had converted to Chriſt ſhould be His Joy and Crown of rejoicing in the Preſence of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt at his coming, 1 Theſ. 2. 19, 20. which muſt needs imply his diſtinct knowledge of them in that Day, which muſt be many hundred Years after Death hath ſeparated them from each other. Whether this knowledge ſhall be by the glorified Eyes diſcerning any lineaments or property of Individuation remaining upon the glorified Bodies of our Relations? Or whether it ſhall be by immediate Revelation as Adam knew his Wife; or as Peter, James, and John, knew Moſes, and Elias in the Mount, as it is difficult to determine, ſo it is needleſs to puzzle our ſelves about it.

Aug. Ep. 6.

It is the concurrent Judgment of ſound Divines, and it wants not Countenance from Scripture and Reaſon, that ſuch a knowledge of them ſhall be in Heaven: and then the ſadneſs of this parting, will be abundantly recompenced by the joy of that meeting. Eſpecially conſidering,

Thirdly, that at our next meeting, they ſhall be unſpeakably more deſirable, ſweet, and excellent than ever they were in this World. They had a deſireableneſs in them here, but they were not altogether lovely, and in every reſpect deſirable; they had their Infirmities both natural and moral; but all theſe are removed in Heaven, and for ever done away. No natural infirmities hang about glorified Bodies; or ſinful ones upon perfected Spirits of the Juſt. O what lovely Creatures will they appear to you then, when that which is ſown now in diſhonour ſhall be raiſed in honour! 1 Cor. 15. And then to Crown all,

Fourthly, You ſhall have an Everlaſting Enjoyment of them in Heaven, never to part again. The Children of the Reſurrection can die no more. Luke 20. 36. You ſhall kiſs their pale Lips, and cold Cheeks no more; you ſhall never fear another parting pull, but be together with the Lord for Ever. 1 Theſ. 4. 14. And this the Apoſtle thought an effectual Cordial in this caſe, when he exhorted the Theſſalonians to comfort one another with theſe Words.

10. Conſid. The preſent Felicity into which all that die in Chriſt are preſently admitted, ſhould abundantly comfort Chriſtians over the death of ſuch as either carried a lively hope out of the World with them, or have left good grounds of ſuch an hope behind them.

Some there are that carried a liveley hope to Heaven with them, who could evidence to themſelves and Friends their Intereſt in Chriſt and in the Covenant. Yea, though they had died in ſilence, yet their converſations would ſpeak for them, and the tenour of their Lives leave no ground of doubting touching their Death: Others dying in their Infancy and Youth, though they carried not ſuch an actual hope with them, yet they have left good grounds of hope behind them.

Parents, now ponder theſe grounds; you have prayed for them, you have many times wreſtled with the Lord on their behalf; you have taken hold of God's Covenant for them, as well as for your ſelves, and dedicated them to the Lord; and they have not by any actions of theirs deſtroyed thoſe grounds of hope, but that you may with much probability conclude they are with God.

Why, if the caſe be ſo, what abundant reaſon have you to be quiet and well ſatisfied with what God hath done? Can they be better than where they are? Had you better Proviſions and Entertainments for them here, than their Heavenly Father hath above?

There is no Chriſtian Parent in the World but would rejoice to ſee his Child out-ſtrip and get before him in Grace, that he may be more eminent in Parts and Service than ever he was: And what reaſon can be given why we ſhould not as much rejoice to ſee our Children get before us in Glory as in Grace? They are gotten to Heaven a few Years before you, and is that matter of Mourning? Would not your Child (if he were not ignorant of you) ſay as Chriſt did to his Friends a little before his death, when he ſaw them caſt down at the thoughts of parting, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me ye would rejoice, becauſe I go unto the Father. q. d. Do you value your own ſenſible comfort from my Bodily Preſence with you, before my Glory and advancement in Heaven? Is this the Love to me? Or is it not rather ſelf-love?

‘So would your departed Friend ſay to
‘you: You have profeſſed much Love all ‘along to me, my Happineſs ſeemed to be ‘very dear to you? How comes it to paſs
‘then that you mourn ſo exceedingly now?
‘This is rather the effect of a fond and ‘fleſhly, than of Rational and Spiritual Love:
‘If you lov'd me with a pure Spiritual Love,
‘ye would rejoice that I am gone to my Fa‘ther. It's infinitely better for me to be ‘here, than with you on Earth, under Sin
‘and Sorrow. Weep not for me, but for your ‘ſelves.

Alas, though you want your Friend's Company, he wants not yours: Your care was to provide for this Child, but Jeſus Chriſt hath provided infinitely better for it than you could; you intended an Eſtate, but he a Kingdom for it: You thought upon ſuch or ſuch a Match, but Chriſt hath forbid all others, and married your Child to himſelf. Would you imagine a higher Preferment for the Fruit of your Bodies?

A King from Heaven hath ſent for your Friend, and do you grudge at the Journey? O think, and think again, what an honour it is to you, that Chriſt hath taken them out of your Boſom, and laid them in his own: ſtript them out of thoſe Garments you provided, and cloathed them in White Robes waſhed in the Blood of the Lamb. Let not your Hearts be troubled, rather rejoice exceedingly that God made you Inſtruments to repleniſh Heaven, and bring forth an Heir for the Kingdom of God.

Your Child is now glorifying God in an higher way than you can; and what though you have loſt its Bodily Preſence for a time? yet, I hope, you don't reckon that to be your loſs, which turns to God's greater Glory.

When Jacob heard his Joſeph was Lord of Egypt, he rather wiſht himſelf with Joſeph, than his Joſeph with him in wants and ſtreights: So ſhould it be with you. You are yet rolling and toſſing upon a tempeſtuous Sea, but your Friend is gone into the quiet Harbour; deſire rather to be there, than that he were at Sea again with you.

11. Conſid. Conſider how vain a thing all your Troubles and ſelf-vexation is: It no way betters your caſe, nor eaſes your Burthen.

As a Bullock by wreſtling and ſweating in the Furrow, makes his Yoke to be more heavy, and galls his Neck, and ſpends his Strength the ſooner, and no ways helps himſelf by that. Why thus ſtands the caſe with thee, if thou be as a Bullock unaccuſtomed to the Yoke: What Chriſt ſaith of caring, we may ſay of grieving, (Mat. 6. 27. Which of you by taking thought can add one Cubit to his Stature?

Cares may break our ſleep, yea, break our Hearts: But they cannot add to our ſtature either in a natural, or in a civil Notion: So your Sorrowing may ſooner break your Hearts, than the Yoke God hath laid on you.

Alas, what is all this, but as the fluttering of a Bird in the Net, which inſtead of freeing, doth but the more entangle it ſelf? It was therefore a wiſe Reſolve of David in this very caſe, when the Will of God was ſignified in the Death of his Child, 2 Sam. 12. 23. But now he is dead, wherefore ſhould I faſt? Can I bring him back again? I ſhall go to him, but he ſhall not return to me.

Can I bring him back again? No, I can no more alter the purpoſe and work of God, than I can change the Seaſous of the Year, or alter the Courſe of Sun, Moon and Stars, or diſturb the order of the Day and Night; which are all unalterably eſtabliſhed by a firm Conſtitution and Ordinance of Heaven.

As theſe Seaſons cannot be changed by Man, ſo neither can this courſe and way of his Providences be changed, Job. 23. 13. He is of one Mind, and who can turn him? And what his Soul deſireth, even that he doth. Indeed while his Pleaſure and Purpoſe are unknown to us, there is room for Faſting and Prayer to prevent the thing we fear: But when the purpoſe of God is manifeſted in the Iſſue, and the ſtroke is given, then it is the vaineſt thing in the World to fret and vex our ſelves, as David's Servants thought he would do, as ſoon as he ſhould hear the Child was dead, but he was wiſer than ſo, his Tears and Cries to God before, had the nature and uſe of means to prevent the Affliction; but when it was come, and could not be prevented, then they were of no uſe, to no purpoſe in the World; Wherefore ſhould I faſt; q. d. To what end, uſe or purpoſe will it be now?

Well then caſt not away your Strength and Spirits to no advantage, reſerve them for future Exerciſes and Tryals. Time may come that you may need all the ſtrength you have, and much more to ſupport greater Burthens than this.

12. Conſid. The Lord is able to reſtore all your loſt Comforts in Relations, double to you, if you meekly ſubmit to him, and patiently wait upon him under the Rod.

When Eſau had loſt his Bleſſing, he ſaid, Haſt thou but one Bleſſing, my Father? Gen. 27. 38. But your Father hath more Bleſſings for you than one; his Name is The Father of Mercies, 2 Cor. 13. He can beget and create as many Mercies for you as he pleaſeth; Relations, and the Comforts of them are at his Command.

It is but a few Months or Years paſt, and theſe Comforts whoſe Loſs you now lament were not in being; nor did you know whence they ſhould ariſe to you, yet the Lord gave the word, and commanded them for you: and if he pleaſe he can make the death of theſe but like a Scythe to the Meadow that is mown down, or a Razor to the Head that is ſhaved bare; which though it lay you under the preſent trouble and reproach of Barrenneſs, yet doth but make way for a double Increaſe, a ſecond Spring with advantage.

So that as it was with the Captive Church in reſpect of her ſpecial Children in the day of her Captivity and Reproach, the Lord made up all with Advantage to her, even to her own Aſtoniſhment, Iſa. 42. 20. The Children which thou ſhalt have after thou haſt loſt the other, ſhall ſay again in thy Years the place is too ſtreight for me, give place to me that I may dwell.

Thus may he deal with you, as to your natural Children and Relations: So that what the Man of God ſaid to Amaziah, 1 Chron 25. 9. may be applied to the caſe in hand, Amaziah ſaid to the Man of God, but what ſhall we do for the hundred Talents? And the Man of God anſwered, The Lord is able to give thee much more than this.

O ſay not, what I ſhall do for Friends and Relations? Death hath robbed me of all Comfort in them. Why, the Lord is able to give you much more. But then as ever you expect to ſee your future Bleſſings multiplied, look to it, and be careful that you neither diſhonour God, nor grieve him, by your unſubmiſſive and impatient Carriage under the preſent Rod.

God took away all Job's Children, and that at one ſtroke, and the ſtroke immediate and extraordinary: And that when they were grown up, and planted (at leaſt ſome of them) in diſtinct Families; yea, whilſt they were endearing each other by the mutual Expreſſions of Affection. This muſt be yielded to be an extraordinary Tryal; yet he meekly receives, and patiently bears it from the Hand of the Lord.

You have heard of the Patience of Job, (ſaith the Apoſtle, Jam. 5. 11.) and ſeen the End of the Lord. Not only the gracious end or intention of the Lord in all his Afflictions, but the happy End and Iſſue the Lord gave to all his Afflictions, of which you have the account, Job. 42. 10. The Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before. The number of his Children was not double to what he had, as all his other Comforts were: But though the Lord only reſtored the ſame number to him again that he took away, yet it's like the Comfort he had in theſe latter Children was double to what he had in the former. There's nothing loſt by waiting patiently, and ſubmitting willingly to the Lord's diſpoſe.

It is as eaſie with the Lord to revive, as it is to remove your Comforts in Relations. There is a ſweet Expreſſion to this purpoſe in Pſal. 81. 28. For thou Lord wilt light my Candle, the Lord my God will enlighten my Darkneſs.

Every comfortable Enjoyment, whether it be in Relations, Eſtate, Health, or Friends, is a Candle lighted by Providence for our Comfort in this World, and they are but Candles, which will not always laſt, and thoſe that laſt longeſt will be conſumed and waſted at laſt; but oftentimes it falls out with them as with Candles, they are blown out before they are half conſumed; yea, almoſt as ſoon as lighted up, and then we are in darkneſs for the preſent.

It's a dark Hour with us when theſe Comforts are put out: But David's Faith did, and ours may comfort us with this, That he that blew out the candle, can light up another. Thou Lord ſhall light my Candle, the Lord my God ſhall enlighten my Darkneſs, that is, the Lord will renew my Comforts, alter the preſent ſad Eſtate I am in, and chaſe away that trouble and darkneſs which at preſent lies upon me. Only beware of offending him at whoſe beck your Lights and Comforts come and go. Michael diſpleaſed the Lord and therefore had no Child unto the day of her Death. 2 Sam. 6. 23.

Hannah waited humbly upon the Lord for the Bleſſing of Children, and the Lord remembred her, he enlightned her Condition with that Comfort when ſhe was as a Lamp deſpiſed. There is no Comfort you have loſt, but God can reſtore it, yea, double it in kind, if he ſee it convenient for you. And if not then,

13. Conſid. Conſider, Though he ſhould deny you any more Comforts of that kind, yet he hath far better to beſtow upon you, ſuch as theſe deſerve not to be named with.

You have an excellent Scripture to this purpoſe in Iſa. 56. 4, 5. For thus ſaith the Lord unto the Eunuchs that keep my Sabbaths; and chuſe the things that pleaſe me, and take hold of my Covenant; even to them will I give in my Houſes, and within my Walls a place and a name better than of Sons and of Daughters: I will give them an Everlaſting Name that ſhall not be cut off.

Mens Names are ſaid to be continued in their Iſſue, in their Male Iſſue eſpecially, and conſequently to fail in ſuch as wanted Iſſue, Numb. 17. 4. And a numerous Iſſue is deemed no ſmall Honour, Pſal. 127. 4, 5. God therefore promiſed here to ſupply and make good the want of Iſſue, and of whatſoever either Honour here, or Memorial hereafter might from it have accrued to them, but beſtowing upon them matter of far greater honour, and more durable; a Name better or before the Name of Sons or Daughters.

Vide gliſh Annotation i Loc.

It's a greater honour to be the Child of God, than to have the greateſt Honour or Comfort that ever Children afforded their Parents in this World.

Poor Heart, thou art now dejected by this Affliction that lies upon thee, as if all Joy and Comfort were now cut off from thee in this World.

A Cloud dwells upon all other Comforts, this Affliction hath ſo imbittered thy Soul, that thou taſteſt no more in any other earthly Comforts, than in the White of an Egg. O that thou didſt but conſider the Conſolations that are with God for ſuch as anſwer his ends in Affliction, and patiently wait on him for their Comfort! He hath Comforts for you far tranſcending the Joy of Children.

This ſome have found when their Children have been cut off from them, and that in ſo eminent a Degree; that they have little valued their Comfort in Children in compariſon with this Comfort.

I will therefore ſet down a pregnant Inſtance of the point in hand, as I find it recorded by the grave and worthy Author of that Excellent Book Entituled, The fulfilling of the Scripture.

Fulfilling of the Scripture, pag. 91.

'Another notable Inſtance of Grace, with a very remarkable Paſſage in his Condition, I ſhall here mention. One Patrick Mackewrath, who lived in the Weſt Parts of Scotland, whoſe heart, in a remarkable way, the Lord touched, and after his Converſion (as he ſhewed to many Chriſtian Friends) was in ſuch a frame ſo affected with a new World, wherein he was entred, the Diſcoveries of God, and of a life to come; that for ſome Months together he did ſeldom ſleep, but was ſtill taken up in wondring. His life was very remarkable for tenderneſs, and near Converſe with God in his walk; and which was worthy to be noticed, one day after a ſharp Trial, having his only Son ſuddenly taken away by Death, he retired alone for ſeveral hours, and when he came forth did look ſo chearfully, that to thoſe who asked him the reaſon thereof, and wondred at the ſame in ſuch a time; he told them, He had got that in his retirement with the Lord, that to have it afterwards renewed, he would be content to loſe a Son every day.

Oh what a ſweet exchange had he made! Surely he had Gold for Braſs, a Pearl for a Pebble; a Treaſure for a Trifle; for ſo great, yea, and far greater is the diſproportion betwixt the ſweet light of God's Countenance, and the faint dim light of the beſt Creature-enjoyment.

Would it pleaſe the Lord to make this Sun ariſe and ſhine upon you; now when the Stars that ſhined with a dim and borrowed light are gone down, you would ſee ſuch gain by the exchange, as would quickly make you caſt in your Votes with him we now mentioned, and ſay, Lord, let every day be ſuch as this funeral day, let all my hours be as this, ſo that I may ſee and taſte what I now do. How gladly would I part with the deareſt and neareſt Creature-comfort I own in this World.

The gracious and tender Lord hath his divine Cordials reſerved on purpoſe for ſuch ſad Hours: theſe are ſometimes given before ſome ſharp trial, to prepare for it, and ſometimes after, to ſupport under it.

I have often heard it from the Mouth, and found it in the Diary of a ſweet Chriſtian now with God, That a little before the Lord removed her dear Husband by death, there was ſuch an abundant out-let of the love of God unto her Soul, for ſeveral Days and Nights following; that when the Lord took away her Husband by Death, though he were a gracious and ſweet tempered, and by her moſt tenderly beloved Husband; ſhe was ſcarce ſenſible of the Stroke, but carried quite above all Earthly things, their comforts and their troubles; So that ſhe had almoſt loſt the thoughts of her dear Husband in God. And had not the Lord taken this courſe with her, ſhe concluded that blow had not been poſſible to be born by her, ſhe muſt have ſunk without ſuch a preparative.

A Husband, a Wife, a Child, are great, very great things, as they ſtand by other Creatures, but ſurely they will ſeem little things, and next to nothing, when the Lord ſhall ſet himſelf by them before the ſoul.

And how know you, but God hath bid theſe Earthly Comforts ſtand aſide this day, to make way for Heavenly ones; It may be God is coming to communicate himſelf more ſweetly, more ſenſibly than ever to your Souls; and theſe are the Providences which muſt caſt up and prepare the way of the Lord. Poſſibly God's meaning in their Death is but this; Child, ſtand aſide, thou art in my way, and filleſt my place in thy Parents Heart.

14. Conſid. Be careful you exceed not in your grief for the loſs of earthly things, conſidering that Satan takes the advantage of all extreams.

You cannot touch any extream, but you will be touched by that Enemy; whoſe greateſt advantages lye in aſſaulting you here.

Satan is called the Ruler of the darkneſs of this World, Eph. 6. 12. (i.e.) his Kingdom is ſupported by darkneſs. Now there is a twofold darkneſs, which gives Satan great advantage: the darkneſs of the mind, viz. Ignorance, and the darkneſs of the condition, viz. Trouble and Affliction. Of the former the Apoſtle ſpeaks chiefly in that Text: but the latter alſo is by him often improved, to carry on his deſigns upon us. When it's a dark hour of trouble with us, then is his fitteſt ſeaſon to tempt.

That cowardly Spirit falls upon the People of God when they are down and low in Spirit as well as State. Satan would never have deſired that the hand of God ſhould have been ſtretched out upon Job's Perſon, Eſtate, and Children; but that he promiſed himſelf a notable advantage therein to poyſon his Spirit with vile thoughts of God. Do this (ſaith he) and he wil curſe thee to thy Face.

What the Pſalmiſt obſerves of Natural, is as true of Metaphorical Darkneſs, Pſal. 104. 20. Thou makeſt darkneſs, and it is night, wherein all the beaſts of the foreſt do creep forth, the young Lions roar after their prey.

When it is dark night with Men, it's noonday with Satan; (i. e.) our ſuffering time is his buſieſt working time, many a diſmal ſuggeſtion he then plants and grafts upon our affliction, which are much more dangerous to us than the affliction it ſelf.

Sometimes he injects deſponding thoughts into the afflicted Soul, Then ſaid I, I am cut off from before thine eyes, Pſal. 31. 22. and Lam. 3. 18, 19. My hope is periſhed from the Lord, remembring my affliction and my miſery, the wormwood and the gall.

Sometimes he ſuggeſts hard thoughts of God, Ruth, 1. 20. The Lord hath dealt very bitterly with me. Yea, that he hath dealt more ſeverely with us than any other, Lam. 1. 11. See and behold if there be any ſorrow like unto my Sorrow which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce Anger.

And ſometimes murmuring and repining thoughts againſt the Lord; the Soul is diſpleaſed at the hand of God upon it. Jonah was angry at the hand of God, and ſaid, I do well to be angry even unto death, Jonah 4. 9. What diſmal thoughts are theſe? And how much more afflictive to a gracious Soul than the loſs of any outward Enjoyment in this World?

And ſometimes very Irreligious and Atheiſtical thoughts, as if there were no priviledge to be had by Religion, and all our pains, zeal and care about Duty were little better than loſt labour, Pſal. 73. 13, 14. Verily I have cleanſed my heart in vain, and waſhed my hands in Innocency: for all the day long I have been plagued; and chaſtened every morning.

By theſe things Satan gets no ſmall advantage upon the afflicted Chriſtian; for albeit theſe thoughts are his burthen, and God will not impute them to the condemnation of his People; yet they rob the Soul of peace, and hinder it from Duty, and make it act uncomely under affliction, to the ſtumbling and hardening of others in their Sin; beware therefore leſt by your exceſſes of Sorrow ye give place to the Devil: we are not Ignorant of his devices.

16. Conſid. Give no way to exceſſive ſorrows upon the account of affliction, if ye have any regard to the Honour of God and Religion, which will hereby be expoſed to reproach.

If you ſlight your own Honnour, don't ſlight the Honour of God and Religion too. Take heed how you carry it in a day of Trouble, many eyes are upon you. It is a true obſervation that a late worthy Author hath made upon this caſe: What will the Atheiſt, and what will the prophane ſcoffer ſay when they ſhall ſee this? So ſottiſh and malicious they are, that if they do but ſee you in affliction, they are ſtraitway ſcornfully demanding, Where is your God?

M. M. his Appendix to Solomon's preſcription. p. 122.

But what will they ſay, if they ſhould hear you your ſelves unbelievingly cry out; Where is our God? Will they not be ready to cry; This is the Religion they make ſuch boaſt of, which you ſee how little it does for them in a day of extremity: they talk of promiſes, rich and precious promiſes; But where are they now? Or to what purpoſe do they ſerve? They ſaid they had a treaſure in heaven; What ails them to mourn ſo then if their Riches be there?

O beware what you do before the World; they have eyes to ſee what you can do, as well as ears to hear what you can ſay. And as long as your carriage under troubles is ſo much like their own, they will never think your Principles are better than theirs. Carnal Worldlings will be drawn to think that whatever fine talk you might have about God, and Heaven, your Hearts were moſt upon the ſame things that theirs were, ſince your grief for their removal is as great as theirs.

They know by experience what a ſtay it is to the Heart to have an able, faithful Friend to depend upon, or to have hopes of a great Eſtate ſhortly to fall to them; and they'l never be perſwaded you have any ſuch ground of comfort, if they ſee you as much caſt down as they, that pretend to no ſuch matter.

By this means the Precepts of Chriſt to conſtancy and contentment in all Eſtates, will come to be lookt upon (like thoſe of the Stoicks) only as magnifica verba, brave Words, but ſuch as are impoſſible to be practiced; and the whole of the Goſpel will be taken for an airy notion, ſince they that profeſs greateſt regard to it, are no more helpt thereby.

O what a ſhame is it that Religion ſhould in this caſe make no more difference betwixt Man and Man? Wherefore ſhew to the World (whatever their common cenſures are) that it is not ſo much your care to differ from them in ſome opinions, and a little ſtrictneſs, as in humility, meekneſs, contempt of the World, and Heavenly-mindedneſs; and now let theſe Graces diſplay themſelves by your chearful, patient deportment under all your grievances.

Wherefore hath God planted thoſe excellent graces in your Souls, but that he might be glorified, and you benefited by the exerciſes of them in tribulation? Should theſe be ſuppreſt and hid, and nothing but the Pride, Paſſion, and Unmortified earthlineſs of your Hearts ſet on work and diſcovered in time of trouble, what a ſlur, what a wound will you give to the glorious name which is called upon by you? And then if your Hearts be truly gracious, that will pierce you deeper than ever your affliction which occaſioned it, did.

I beſeech you therefore be tender of the Name of God, if you will not be ſo of your own peace and comfort.

6. Conſid. Be quiet and hold your peace; you little know how many mercies lie in the womb of this affliction.

Great are the benefits of a ſharp rouzing affliction to the People of God at ſome times, and all might have them at all times, were they more careful to improve them. Holy David thankfully acknowledgeth, Pſal. 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted.

And ſurely there's as much good in them for you, as for him; if the Lord ſanctifie them to ſuch ends and uſes as his were ſanctified unto.

Such a ſmarting Rod as this came not before there was need enough of it, and poſſibly you ſaw the need of ſome awakening Providence your ſelves; but if not, the Lord did; he took not up the Rod to ſmite you, till his faithfulneſs, and tender love to your Souls called upon him to correct you.

You now ſit penſive under the Rod, ſadly lamenting and deploring the loſs of ſome earthly comfort, your Heart is ſurcharged with ſorrow, your Eyes run down upon every mention and remembrance of your dear Friend, Why, if there were no more, this alone may diſcover the need you had of this Rod; for doth not all this ſorrow at parting, plainly ſpeak how much your Heart was ſet upon, how faſt your heart was glewed to this earthly comfort?

Now you ſee that your affections were ſunk many degrees deeper into the Creature than you are aware of; and what ſhould God do in this caſe by you? Should he ſuffer you to cleave to the Creature more and more? Should he permit it to purloin and exhauſt your love and delight, and ſteal away your Heart from himſelf? This he could not do and love you. The more impatient you are under this affliction, the more need you had of it.

And what if by this ſtroke the Lord will awaken your drowzy Soul, and recover you out of that pleaſant, but dangerous ſpiritual-ſlumber you were fallen into, whileſt you had pillowed your head upon this pleaſant, ſenſible creature enjoyment? Is not this really better for you, than if he ſhould ſay, Sleep on: He is joyned to Idols, let him alone, he is departing from me the fountain, to a broken Ciſtern, let him go.

Yea, What if by this ſtroke upon one of the pleaſanteſt things you had in this World, God will diſcover to you, more ſenſibly and effectually than ever, the vanity both of that and all earthly comforts, ſo as that you ſhall from henceforth never let forth your heart, your hope, your love, and delight to any of them, as you did before? You could talk before of the creatures vanity; but I queſtion whether ever you had ſo clear and convincing a ſight of its vanity as you have this day: And is not this a conſiderable mercy in your Eyes.

Now, if ever, God is weaning you from all fond opinions and vain expectations from this World; by this your Judgment of the creatures is rectified, and your affections to all other enjoyments on Earth moderated: And is this nothing? O doubtleſs it is a greater mercy to you, than to have your Friend alive again.

And what if by this Rod your wandring, gadding heart ſhall be whipped home to God? your Neglected Duties revived, your decayed communion with God reſtored, a ſpiritual Heavenly frame of heart recovered? What will you ſay then?

Surely you will bleſs that merciful hand which removed the obſtructions; and adore the divine Wiſdom and Goodneſs, that by ſuch a device as this recovered you to himſelf. Now you can pray more conſtantly, more ſpiritually, more affectionately than before. Oh bleſſed Rod which buds and bloſſoms with ſuch fruits as theſe! Let this be written among your beſt mercies; for you ſhall have cauſe to adore and bleſs God eternally for this beneficial affliction.

17. Conſid. Suffer not your ſelves to be tranſported by Impatience, and ſwallowed up of Grief, becauſe God hath exerciſed you under a ſmart Rod; for as ſmarting as it is, it's comparatively a gentle ſtroke to what others as good as your ſelves have felt.

Your dear Relation is dead; be it ſo, here is but a ſingle death before you, but others have ſeen many deaths contrived into one upon their Relations, to which yours is nothing.

Zedekiah ſaw his Children murdered before his eyes; and then had thoſe Eyes (alas too late) put out. The worthy Author of that excellent book forementioned, tells us of a choice and godly Gentlewoman in the North of Ireland, who when the Rebellion brake out there, fled with three Children, one of them upon the breaſt; they had not gone far before they were ſtripped naked by the Iriſh, who to their admiration ſpared their lives (it's like, concluding that cold and hunger would kill them) afterwards going on at the foot of a River which runs to Locheach, others met them, and would have caſt them into the River; but this Godly Woman, not diſmayed, asked a little liberty to pray, and as ſhe lay naked on the frozen ground, got reſolution not to go on her own Feet, to ſo unjuſt a death, upon which having called her, and ſhe refuſing, was dragged by the heels along that rugged way to be caſt in with her little ones and company.

But ſhe then turned, and on her knees ſays, you ſhould, I am ſure, be Chriſtians, and Men I ſee you are; in taking away our miſerable lives you do us a pleaſure: But know, that as we never wronged you, nor yours, you muſt remember to die alſo your ſelves, and one day give an acconnt of this cruelty to the Judge of Heaven and Earth: Hereupon they reſolved not to murder them with their own hands, but turned them all naked upon a ſmall Iſland in the River without any Proviſion, there to periſh.

The next day the two Boys having crept aſide, found the hide of a Beaſt which had been killed, at the Root of a Tree; which the Mother caſt over them lying upon the Snow. The next day a little Boat goes by, unto whom ſhe calls for God's ſake to take them out, but they being Iriſh, refuſed; ſhe deſired a little Bread, but they ſaid they had none; then ſhe begs a Coal of Fire, which ſhe obtained; and thus with ſome fallen Chips, made a little Fire, and the Children taking a piece of the Hide, laid it on the Coals, and began to gnaw the Leather; but without an extraordinary divine ſupport, what could this do?

Thus they lived Ten days without any viſible means of help, having no Bread, but Ice and Snow, nor drink except Water. The two Boys being near ſtarved, ſhe preſſed them to go out of her ſight, not able to ſee their death: yet God delivered them as miraculouſly at laſt, as he had ſupported them all that while.

But, judge whether a natural death, in an ordinary way, be comparable to ſuch a trial as this; And yet thus the Lord did by this choice and eminently gracious Woman.

And Mr. Wall in his None-but-Chriſt relates as ſad a Paſſage of a Poor Family in Germany, who were driven to that extremity in the Famine, that at laſt the Parents made a motion one to the other to ſell one of the Children for Bread to ſuſtain themſelves and the reſt; but when they came to conſider which Child it ſhould be, their Hearts ſo relented and yerned upon every one, that they reſolved rather all to die together. Yea, we read in Lam. 4. 10. The hands of the pitiful women have ſodden their own Children.

But what ſpeak I of theſe extremities? How many Parents, yea, ſome Godly ones too, have lived to ſee their Children dying in prophaneſs, and ſome by the hand of Juſtice, lamenting their Rebellions with a Rope about their Necks.

Ah, Reader, little doſt thou know, what ſtings there are in the Afflictions of others! Surely you have no reaſon to think the Lord hath dealt more bitterly with you than any. It's a gentle ſtroke, a merciful Diſpenſation, if you compare it with what others have felt.

18. Conſid. If God be your God, you have really loſt nothing by the removal of any Creature-Comfort.

God is the Fountain of all true Comfort: Creatures, the very beſt and ſweeteſt, are but Ciſterns to receive and convey to us what Comfort God is pleaſed to communicate to them; and if the Ciſtern be broken, or the Pipe cut off, ſo that no more comfort can be conveyed to us that way, he hath other ways and mediums to do it by, which we think not of; and if he pleaſe he can convey his Comforts to his People without any of them; and if he do it more immediately, we ſhall be no loſers by that; for no comforts in the World are ſo delectable and raviſhingly ſweet, as thoſe that flow immediately from the Fountain.

And it is the ſenſuality of our Hearts that cauſes us to affect them ſo inordinately, and grieve for the loſs of them ſo immoderately, as if we had not enough in God without theſe Creature-ſupplements.

Is the fulneſs of the Fountain yours? And yet do you caſt down your ſelves, becauſe the broken Ciſtern is removed. The beſt Creatures are no better, Jer. 2. 13. Ciſterns have nothing but what they receive, and broken ones, cannot hold what is put into them. Why then do you mourn as if your Life were bound up in the Creature? You have as free an acceſs to the Fountain, as you had before. It is the advice of an Heathen, (and let them take the Comfort of it) to repair by a new earthly Comfort, what we have loſt in the former.

Thou haſt carried forth him whom thou lovedſt (ſaith Seneca) ſeek one whom thou maiſt love in his ſtead: It's better to repair, than bemoan thy loſs.

Quem amabas, extuliſti, quare quem ames: ſatius eſt amicum reparare quam flere. Seneca's Epiſt. pag. 637.

But if God never repair your loſs, in things of the ſame kind, you know he can abundantly repair it in himſelf.

Ah Chriſtitn! Is not one Kiſs of his Mouth, one glimpſe of his Countenance, one Seal of his Spirit, a more ſweet and ſubſtantial Comfort than the ſweeteſt Relation in this World can afford you! If the Stream fail, repair to the Fountain, there's enough ſtill, God is where he was, and what he was, tho' the Creature be not.

19. Conſider. Though you may want a little Comfort in your Life, yet ſurely it may be recompenſed to you by a more eaſie Death.

The removal of your Friends before you, may turn to your great Advantage, when your Hour is come that you muſt follow them. Oh how have many good Souls been clogged and enſnared in their dying Hour, by the Loves, Cares, and Fears they have had about thoſe they muſt leave behind them in a Sinful Evil World!

Your Love to them might have proved a Snare to you, and cauſed you to hang back as loth to go hence; for theſe are the things that make Men loth to die. And thus it might have been with you, except God had removed them before hand, or ſhould give you in that day ſuch ſights of Heaven, and taſtes of Divine Love, as ſhould maſter and mortifie all your Earthly Affections to theſe things.

I knew a gracious Perſon, now in Heaven, who for many Weeks in her laſt Sickneſs complained, that ſhe found it hard to part with a dear Relation, and that there was nothing proved a greater clog to her Soul than this; 'Tis much more eaſier to think of going to our Friends, who are in Heaven before us, than of parting with them, and leaving our deſirable and dear ones behind us.

And who knows what cares and diſtracting thoughts you may then be peſtered and diſtracted with upon their account? What ſhall become of theſe when I am gone! I am now to leave them, God knows to what Want, Miſeries, Temptations, and Afflictions, in the midſt of a deceitful, defiling, dangerous World.

I know it's our Duty to leave our Fatherleſs Children, and Friendleſs Relations with God; to truſt them with him that gave them to us: And ſome have been enabled cheerfully to do ſo when they were parting from them. Luther could ſay, Lord, thou haſt given me a Wife and Children, I have little to leave them; nouriſh, teach, and keep them; O thou Father of the Fatherleſs, and Judge of the Widow. But every Chriſtian hath not a Luther's Faith: Some find it an hard thing to diſ-entangle their Affections at ſuch a time: But now, if God have ſent all yours before you, you have ſo much the leſs to do. Death may be eaſier to you than others.

Melchio Adam i vita Lutheri.

20. Conſid. But if nothing that hath been yet ſaid will ſtick with you; then laſtly, remember, that you are near that ſtate and place which admits no Sorrows nor ſad Reflections upon any ſuch accounts as theſe.

Yet a little while, and you ſhall not miſs them, you ſhall not need them, but you ſhall live as the Angels of God. We now live partly by Faith, partly by Senſe, partly upon God, and partly upon the Creature. Our ſtate is mixed, therefore our Comforts are ſo too: But when God ſhall be all in all, and we ſhall be as the Angels of God in the way and manner of our living; How much will the caſe be altered with us then, from what it is now!

Angels neither Marry, nor are given in Marriage; neither ſhall the Children of the Reſurrection; when the days of our Sinning are ended, the days of our Mourning ſhall be ſo too. No Graves were opened till Sin entered, and no more ſhall be opened when Sin is excluded.

Our glorified Relations ſhall live with us for Ever, they ſhall complain no more, die no more; yea, this is the happineſs of that ſtate to which you are paſſing on, that your Souls being in the neareſt conjunction with God, the Fountain of Joy, you ſhall have no concernment out of him. You ſhall not be put upon theſe exerciſes of Patience; nor ſubjected to ſuch Sorrows as now you feel, any more. It is but a little while and the end of all theſe things will come. Oh therefore bear up as Perſons that expect ſuch a day of Jubilee at hand.

And thus I have finiſhed the ſecond general Head of this Diſcourſe, which is a diſſwaſive from the Sin of immoderate Sorrow.

2. I now proceed to the third thing propoſed, namely to remove the Pleas and excuſes for this immoderate Grief. It's natural to Men, yea to good Men to juſtifie their Exceſſes, or at leaſt to extenuate them, by pleading for their Paſſions, as if they wanted not cauſe and reaſon enough to excuſe them. If theſe be fully anſwered, and the Soul once convinced, and left without Apology for its Sin, it is then in a fair way for its Cure, which is the laſt thing deſigned in this Treatiſe.

My preſent buſineſs therefore is to ſatisfie thoſe Objections, and anſwer thoſe Reaſons which are commonly pleaded in this caſe, to juſtifie our exceſſive Grief for loſt Relations. And though I ſhall carry it in that line of Relation to which the Text directs, yet it's equally applicable to all others.

1. Plea.

You preſs me by many great Conſiderations to Meekneſs, and quiet Submiſſion under this heavy ſtroke of God: But you little know what ſtings my Soul feels now in it.

This Child was a Child of many Prayers, it was a Samuel begg'd of the Lord, and I concluded when I had it, that it brought with it the returns and anſwers of many Prayers. But now I ſee it was nothing leſs: God had no regard to my Prayer about it; nor was it given me in that ſpecial way of Mercy, as I imagined it to be. My Child is not only dead, but my Prayers in the ſame day ſhut out and denied.

1. Anſwer.

That you prayed for your Children before you had them was your Duty, and if you prayed not for them ſubmiſſively, referring it to the Pleaſure of God to give or deny them, to continue or remove them, as ſhould ſeem good to him; that was your Sin; you ought not to limit the Holy One of Iſrael, nor preſcribe to him, or capitulate with him, for what term you ſhall enjoy your outward Comforts. If you did ſo, it was your Evil, and God hath juſtly rebuked it by this ſtroke: If you did pray conditionally, and ſubmiſſively, referring both the Mercy asked, and continuance of it to the Will of God as you ought to do; then there is nothing in the death of your Child, that croſſes the true Scope and Intent of your Prayer.

2. Anſwer.

Your Prayers may be anſwered, though the thing prayed for be with-held, yea, or though it ſhould be given for a little while and ſnatcht away from you again. There are four ways of God's anſwering Prayers: By giving the thing prayed for preſently, Dan. 9. 23. or by ſuſpending the Anſwer for a time, and giving it afterwards: Luke 18. 7. or by with-holding that Mercy which you ask, from you, and giving you a much better Mercy in the room of it, Deut. 3. 24. compared with Deut. 34. 4,5. or laſtly, by giving you patience to bear the loſs or want of it, 2 Cor. 12. 9.

Now if the Lord have taken away your Child or Friend, and in lieu thereof given you a meek, quiet, ſubmiſſive Heart to his Will, you need not ſay he hath ſhut out your cry.

2. Plea.

But I have loſt a lovely, obliging and moſt endearing Child, one that was Beautiful and Sweet; it is a ſtony Heart that would not diſſolve into tears for the loſs of one ſo deſireable, ſo engaging as this was. Ah it's no common loſs!

1. Anſwer.

The more lovely and engaging your Relation was, the more excellent will your patience and contentment with the Will of God in its death be; the more lovelineſs, the more ſelf denial; and the more ſelf-denial, the more grace. Had it been a thouſand times more endearingly ſweet than it was, it was not too good to deny for God. If therefore obedience to the Will of God do indeed maſter natural affections; and that you look upon Patience and Contentment as much more beautiful than the ſweeteſt and moſt deſirable Enjoyment on Earth, it may turn to you for a teſtimony of the truth and ſtrength of Grace; that you can like Abraham, part with a Child whom you ſo dearly love, in obedience to the Will of your God whom you love infinitely more.

2. Anſwer.

The lovelineſs and beauty of our Children and Relations, though it muſt be acknowledged a good gift from the hand of God; yet it is but a common gift, and oftentimes becomes a ſnare, and is in its own nature but a tranſitory vaniſhing thing, and therefore no ſuch great aggravation of the loſs as is pretended.

I ſay it's but a common Gift; Eliab, Adonijah, and Abſolom, had as lovely a Preſence as any in their Generation. Yea, it's not only common to the wicked, with the Godly, but to bruit Animals as well as Men, and to moſt that excel in it, it becomes a Temptation; the Souls of ſome had been more beautiful and lovely, if their Bodies had been leſs ſo. Beſides, it's but a flower which flouriſhes in its Month, and then fades. This therefore ſhould not be reflected on as ſo great a circumſtance to aggravate your Trouble.

3 Anſwer.

But if your Relations ſleep in Jeſus, he will appear ten thouſand times more lovely in the Morning of the Reſurrection than ever he was in this World. What is the exacteſt, pureſt Beauty of Mortals, to the incomparable Beauty of the Saints in the Reſurrection: Then ſhall the Righteous ſhine forth as the Sun, in the Kingdom of their Father, Mat. 13. 43. In this hope you part with them, therefore act ſuitably to your Hopes.

3. Plea.

O but my Child was nipt off by death in the very bud, I did but ſee, and love, and part: Had I enjoyed it longer, and had time to ſuck out the ſweetneſs of ſuch an enjoyment, I could have born it eaſier, but its Months or Years with me are ſo few, that they only ſerved to raiſe an expectation which was quickly, and therefore the more ſadly diſappointed.

1. Anſwer.

Vide Mr. Baxter's Epiſtle to the Life of Mr. John Janeway.

Did your Friend die young, or was the bond of any other Relation diſſolved almoſt as ſoon as made? Let not this ſeem ſo intolerable a load to you; for if you have ground to hope they died in Chriſt, then they lived long in this World. It's truly ſaid, he hath ſailed long enough that hath won the Harbour; and he hath fought long enough that hath obtained the Victory; he hath run long enough that hath toucht the Goal, and he hath lived long enough on Earth, that hath won Heaven, be his days here never ſo few.

2. Anſwer.

The ſooner your Relation died, the leſs Sin hath been committed, and the leſs ſorrow felt: What can you ſee in this World but Sin or Sorrow? A quick paſſage through it to Glory, is a ſpecial priviledge. Surely the World is not ſo deſireable a place, that Chriſtians ſhould deſire an hours time longer in it for themſelves or theirs, than ſerves to fit them for a better.

3. Anſwer.

And whereas you imagine the parting would have been eaſier, if the enjoyment had been longer, it is a fond and groundleſs Suſpicion. The longer you had enjoyed them, the ſtronger would the Endearments have been. A young and tender Plant may be eaſily drawn up by a ſingle Hand, but when it hath ſpread and fixed its Roots many Years in the Earth, it will require many a ſtrong blow and hard tug to root it up. Affections, like thoſe under-ground Roots, are fixed and ſtrengthened by nothing more than conſuetude, and long poſſeſſion; it's much eaſier parting now, than it would be hereafter, whatever you think. However, this ſhould ſatisfie you, that God's time is the beſt time.

4. Plea.

O but I have loſt all in one, it is my only one, I have none left in its room to repair the breach, and make up the loſs; If God had given me other Children to take comfort in, the loſs had not been ſo great; but to loſe all at one ſtroke, is inſupportable.

1. Anſwer.

Non amittuntur, ſed præmittuntur.

Religion allows not to Chriſtians a Liberty of expreſſing the death of their dear Relations by ſo hard a Word as the loſs of them is. They are not loſt but ſent before you. And it is a ſhameful thing for a Chriſtian to be reproved for ſuch an uncomely Expreſſion by an Heathen. It is enough to make us bluſh to read what an Heathen ſaid in this caſe. Never ſay thou haſt loſt any thing (ſaith Epictetus) but that it is returned. Is thy Son dead? He is only reſtored. Is thy Inheritance taken from thee? It is alſo returned. And a while after he adds, εἰ τȣ͂το θεοῖς φίλον, τȣ͂το γινέσθω, (i. e.) Let every thing be as the Gods will have it.

Epict. Enchiri. Chap. 15.

2. Anſwer.

It is no fit Expreſſion to ſay you have loſt all in one, except that one be Chriſt; and he being once yours, can never be loſt. Doubtleſs your meaning is, you have loſt all your Comfort of that kind; and what though you have? are there not multitudes of Comforts yet remaining of a higher kind, and more precious and durable nature? If you have no more of that ſort, yet ſo long as you have better, what cauſe have you to rejoice!

3. Anſwer.

You too much imitate the way of the World in this complaint; they know not how to repair the loſs of one Comfort, but by another of the ſame nature, which muſt be put in its room to fill up the vacancy: But have you no other way to ſupply your loſs; have you not a God to fill the place of any Creature that leaves you? Surely this would better become a Man whoſe Portion is in this Life, than one that profeſſes God is his all in all.

5. Plea.

O but my only one is not only taken away, but there remains no expectation or probability of any more: I muſt now look upon my ſelf as a dry Tree, never to take comfort in Children any more, which is a cutting Thought.

1. Anſwer.

Suppoſe what you ſay, that you have no hope nor expectation of another Child remaining to you; yet if you have a hope of better things than Children; you have no reaſon to be caſt down: bleſs God for higher and better hopes than theſe, in Iſa. 59. 4, 5. The Lord comforts them that had no expectations of Sons or Daughters; with this, That he will give unto them in his Houſe, and within his Walls a place, and a name better than of Sons or Daughters; even an everlaſting name that ſhall not be cut off. There are better mercies, and higher hopes than theſe; though your hopes of Children, or from Children ſhould be cut off; yet if your eternal hopes be ſecure, and ſuch as ſhall not make you aſhamed, you ſhould not be ſo caſt down.

2. Anſwer.

If God will not have your Comforts to lye any more in Children, then reſolve to place them in himſelf, and you ſhall never find cauſe to complain of loſs by ſuch an exchange. You will find that in God which is not to be had in the Creature; one hours communion with him ſhall give you that which the happieſt Parent never yet had from his Children, you will exchange Braſs for Gold, periſhing Vanity, for ſolid and abiding Excellency.

6. Plea.

But the ſuddenneſs of the ſtroke is amazing, God gave little or no warning to prepare for this Trial: Death executed its commiſſion as ſoon as it opened it. My dear Husband, Wife, or Child, was ſnatcht unexpectedly out of my Arms by a ſurprizing ſtroke; and this makes my ſtroke heavier than my complaint.

1. Anſwer.

That the death of your Relation was ſo

ſudden and ſurprizing, was much your own fault, who ought to have lived in the daily ſenſe of his vanity, and expectation of your ſeparation from it; you knew it to be a dying comfort in its beſt Eſtate; and it is no ſuch wonderful thing to ſee that dead, which we knew before to be dying: Beſides, you heard the changes ringing round about you in other Families; you frequently ſaw other Parents, Husbands, and Wives carrying forth their dead; And what were all theſe but warnings given you to prepare for the like tryals?

Surely then it was your own ſecurity and regardleſsneſs that made this affliction ſo ſurprizing to you, and who is to be blamed for that, you know.

2. Anſwer.

There is much difference betwixt the ſudden death of Infants, and that of grown perſons: The latter may have much work to do, many ſins actually to repent of, and many evidences of their intereſt in Chriſt to examine and clear, in order to their more comfortable death; and ſo ſudden death may be deprecated by them.

But the caſe of Infants, who exerciſe not their reaſon, is far different, they have no ſuch work to do; but are purely paſſive; all that is done in order to their ſalvation, is done by God immediately upon them, ſo it comes all to one, whether their death be more quick or more ſlow.

3. Anſwer.

You complain of the ſuddenneſs of the ſtroke, but another will be ready to ſay, had my Friend died in that manner, my affliction had been nothing to what now it is; I have ſeen many deaths contrived into one: I ſaw the gradual approaches of it upon my dear Relation, who felt every tread of death as it came on toward him, who often cryed with Job, Chap. 3. 20. Wherefore is light given to him that is in Miſery, and life to the bitter in Soul? Which long for Death, but it cometh not, and dig for it more than for hidden Treaſures: which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the Grave.

That which you reckon the ſting of your Affliction; others would have reckoned a favour and priviledge. How many tender Parents, and other Relations, who loved their Friends as dearly as your ſelves, have been forced to their Knees upon no other errand but this, to beg the Lord to haſten the ſeparation, and put an end to that Sorrow, which to them was much greater than the Sorrow for the dead.

7. Plea.

You preſs me to moderation of Sorrows, and I know I ought to ſhew it; but don't know how the caſe ſtands with me, there's a ſting in this Affliction, that none feels but my ſelf; and how intollerable is it now! I neglected proper means in ſeaſon to preſerve Life, or miſcarried in the uſe of means. I now ſee ſuch a neglect or ſuch a miſtake about the means, as I cannot but judge greatly to contribute to that ſad loſs which I now (too late) lament.

O my negligence, O my raſhneſs and inconſiderateneſs! How doth my Conſcience now ſmite me for my Folly! And by this aggravate my burthen beyond what is uſually felt by others. Had I ſeaſonably applied my ſelf to the uſe of proper means, and kept ſtrictly to ſuch Courſes and Counſels as thoſe that are able and skillful might have preſcribed, I might now have had a living Husband, Wife or Child: Whereas I am now not only bereaved, but am apt to think I have bereaved my ſelf of them. Surely there is no Sorrow like unto my Sorrow.

1. Anſwer.

Though it be an evil to neglect and ſlight the means ordained by God for recovery of health, yet it's no leſs Evil to aſcribe too much to them, or rely too much on them. The beſt means in the World are weak and ineffectual without God's Aſſiſtance and Concurrence, and they never have that his Aſſiſtance or Concurrence, when his time is come; and that it was fully come in your Friend's caſe, is manifeſted now by the Event. So that if your Friend had had the moſt excellent helps the World affords, they would have availed nothing. This conſideration takes place only in your caſe, who ſee what the Will of God is by the Iſſue, and may not be pleaded by any whilſt it remains dubious and uncertain, as it generally doth in time of Sickneſs.

2. Anſwer.

Do you not unjuſtly charge and fault your ſelves for that which is not really your fault or neglect? How far are you chargeable in this caſe will beſt appear by comparing the circumſtances you are now in, with thoſe you were in when your Relation was only arreſted by Sickneſs; and it was dubious to you what was your duty and beſt courſe to take.

Poſſibly you had obſerved ſo many to periſh in Phyſicians Hands, and ſo many to recover without them, that you judged it ſafer for your Friend to be without thoſe means, than to be hazarded by them.

Or if divers Methods and courſes were preſcribed and perſwaded to, and you now ſee your Error in preferring that which was moſt improper, and neglecting what was more ſafe and probable; yet as long as it did not ſo appear to your underſtanding at that time, but you followed the beſt light you had to guide you at that time, it were moſt unjuſt to charge the fault upon your ſelves, for chooſing that courſe that then ſeemed beſt to you, whether it were ſo in it ſelf or not.

To be angry with your ſelves for doing or omitting what was then done, or omitted according to your beſt diſcretion and judgment, becauſe you now ſee it by the light of the Event far otherwiſe than you did before, it is to be troubled that you are but Men, or that you are not as God, who only can foreſee iſſues, and events; and that you acted as all Rational Creatures are bound to do, according the beſt light they have, at the time and Seaſon of action.

3. Anſwer.

To conclude, times of great Affliction are ordinarily times of great temptation, and it's uſual with Satan then to charge us with more Sins than we are really guilty of, and alſo make thoſe things ſeem to be Sins, which upon impartial examination will not be found to be ſo.

Indeed, had your neglect or miſcarriage been knowing or voluntary, or had you really preferred a little Money (being able to give it) before the life of your Relation, and did deliberately chuſe to hazard this, rather than part with that, no doubt then but there had been much evil of Sin mixed with your affliction; And your Conſcience may juſtly ſmite you for it, as your Sin. But in the other caſe which is more common, and I preſume yours; it's a falſe charge, and you ought not to abet the deſign of Satan in it.

Judge by the Sorrow you now feel for your Friend, in what degree he was dear to you, and what you could now willingly give to ranſome his Life, if it could be done with Money. Judge, I ſay, by this how groundleſs the charge is that Satan now draws up againſt you; and you are but too ready to yield to the truth of it.

8. Plea.

But my troubles are upon a higher ſcore and account. My Child or Friend is paſſed into Eternity, and I know not how it is with his Soul. Were I ſure my Relation were with Chriſt, I ſhould be quiet; but my fears of the contrary are overwhelming; O it's terrible to think of the damnation of one ſo dear to me.

1. Anſwer.

Admit what the objection ſuppoſes, that you have real grounds to fear the eternal condition of your dear Relation, yet it's utterly unbeſeeming you, even in ſuch a caſe as this, to diſpute with, or repine againſt the Lord.

I do confeſs it's a ſore and heavy Trial, and that there is no cauſe more ſad and ſinking to the Spirit of a gracious Perſon. Their death is but a trifle to this; but yet, if you be ſuch as fear the Lord, methinks his indiſputable Sovereignty over them, and his diſtinguiſhing Love and Mercy to you, ſhould at leaſt ſilence you in this matter.

Firſt, His indiſputable Sovereignty over them, Rom. 9. 22. Who art thou, O Man, who diſputeſt with God? He ſpeaks in the matters of eternal Election and Reprobation. What if the Lord will not be gracious to thoſe that are ſo dear to us? Is there any wrong done to them or us thereby? Aaron's two Sons were cut off in the act of Sin by the Lord's immediate Hand, and yet he held his Peace, Levit. 10. 3. God told Abraham plainly that the Covenant ſhould not be eſtabliſhed with Iſhmael, for whom he ſo earneſtly prayed, O let Iſhmael live before thee! And he knew that there was no Salvation out of the Covenant, and yet he ſits down ſilent under the Word of the Lord.

Secondly, But if this do not quiet you, yet, methinks, his diſtinguiſhing Love and Mercy to you ſhould do it. O what do you owe to God, that root and branch hath not been caſt together into the Fire! That the Lord hath given you good hope through grace, that it ſhall be well with you for Ever. Let this ſtop your Mouth, and quiet your Spirit: Though you ſhould have grounds for this Fear.

2. Anſwer.

But pray examine the grounds of your Fear, whether it may not proceed from the ſtrength of your Affections to the eternal welfare of your Friend, or from the ſubtilty of Satan deſigning hereby to overwhelm and ſwallow you up in ſuppoſed, as well as from juſt grounds and cauſes? In two caſes it's very probable your fear may proceed only from your own affection or Satan's Temptation.

Firſt, If your Relation died young, before it did any thing to deſtroy your hopes. Or,

Secondly, If grown, and in ſome good degree hopeful; only he did not in Life, or at death manifeſt and give evidence of Grace, with that clearneſs as you deſired.

As to the caſe of Infants in general, it's none of our concern to judge their condition; and as for thoſe that ſprang from Covenanted Parents, it becomes us to exerciſe Charity towards them, The Scripture ſpeaks very favourably of them.

And as for the more adult, who have eſcaped the pollutions of the World, and made Conſcience of Sin and Duty, albeit they never manifeſted what you could deſire they had; yet in them as in young Abijah, may be found ſome good thing towards the Lord, which you never took notice of. Reverence of your Authority, Baſhfulneſs, and Shamefacedneſs, Reſervedneſs of Diſpoſition, and many other things may hide thoſe ſmall and weak beginnings of Grace that are in Children, from the obſervations of the Parents. God might ſee that in them that you never ſaw; he deſpiſeth not the day of ſmall things.

However it be, it's now out of your Watch, your concernment rather is to improve the Affliction to your own good, than judge and determine their condition, which belongs not to you, but God.

9. Plea.

O but I have ſinned in this Relation, and now God hath puniſhed my Sin in diſſolving it. O ſaith one, my Heart was ſet too much upon it, I even Idolized it, that was my Sin; and ſaith another, I wanted due affections, and did not love my Relation, at leaſt not ſo Spiritually as I ought, that was my Sin. Now God is viſiting me for all the neglects and defects that have been in me towards my Relation.

1. Anſwer.

There is no Man ſo throughly Sanctified, as not to fail and come ſhort in many things pertaining to his Relative Duties. And to ſpeak as the thing is, the corruptions of the holieſt Perſons are as much diſcovered in this, as in any other thing whatſoever; and it's a very common thing for Conſcience, not only to charge theſe failures upon us, but to aggravate them to the utmoſt when God hath made the ſeparation. So that this is no more than what is uſual and very common with Perſons in your caſe.

2. Anſwer.

Admit that which the Objection ſuppoſes, that God had afflicted you for your Sin, and removed that Comfort from you, which you Idolized and too much doted on; yet there is no reaſon you ſhould be ſo caſt down under your Affliction; for all this may be, and probably is the Fruit of his love to, and care of your Soul, Rev. 3. 19. He tells the afflicted for their Comfort, Whom I love I rebuke and chaſten. How much better is it to have an Idolized Enjoyment taken from you in Mercy, than if God ſhould ſay concerning you as he did of Ephraim, Hoſ. 4. 17. He is joined to Idols, let him alone?

O it's better for you that your Father now reckons with you for your Follies with the Rod in his Hand, than to ſay as he doth to ſome, Let them go on, I will not hinder them in, or rebuke them for their ſinful Courſes; but will reckon with them for all together in Hell at laſt.

3. Anſwer.

And as to what you now charge upon your ſelf, that the neglect of duty did ſpring from the want of Love to your Relation: Your Sorrow at parting may evidence that your Relation was rooted deep in your Affection: But if your Love was not ſo ſpiritual and pure, to love and enjoy them in God; that was undoubtedly your Sin, and is the Sin of moſt Chriſtians; for which both you, and all others ought to be humbled.

10. Plea.

God hath bleſſed me with an Eſtate, and outward comforts in the World, which I reckoned to have left to my Poſterity: And now I have none to leave it with, nor have I any comfort to think of it; the purpoſes of my Heart are broken off, and the comfort of all my other Enjoyments blaſted by this ſtroke in an Hour. How are the pains and cares of many Years periſhed.

1. Anſwer.

How many are there in the World, yea of our own acquaintance, whom God hath either denied, or deprived both of the comforts of Children and of Eſtates too? If he have left you thoſe outward Comforts, you ought to acknowledge his goodneſs therein, and not to ſlight theſe becauſe he hath deprived you of the other.

2. Anſwer.

Though your Children be gone, yet God hath many Children left in the World, whoſe Bowels you may refreſh with what he hath beſtowed upon you; and your Charity to them will doubtleſs turn to a more comfortable account, than if you had left a large Eſtate to your own Poſterity.

Surely we are not ſent into this World to heap up our great Eſtates for our Children; and if you have been too eager in this deſign, you may now read God's juſt Rebuke of your Folly. Bleſs God you have yet an opportunity to ſerve him eminently by your Charity: And if God deny you other Executors, let your own hands be your Executors to diſtribute to the neceſſity of the Saints; that the Bleſſings of them that are ready to periſh may come upon you.

11. Plea.

O but the Remembrance of its witty Words and pretty actions is wounding.

1. Anſwer.

Let it rather lift up your Heart to God in Praiſe, that gave you ſo deſirable a Child, than fill your Heart with diſcontent at his hand in removing it. How many Parents are there in the World whoſe Children God hath deprived of Reaſon and underſtanding, ſo that they only differ from the Beaſts in external ſhape and figure? And how many ſhew betimes ſo perverſe a temper, that little Comfort can be expected from them?

2. Anſwer.

Theſe are but ſmall Circumſtances and trivial things in themſelves; but by theſe little things, Satan manages a great deſign againſt your Souls to deject or exaſperate it: And ſurely this is not your buſineſs at this time; you have greater things than the words and actions of Children to mind; to ſearch out God's End in the Affliction: To mortifie the Corruption it is ſent to rebuke, to quiet your Heart in the Will of God: This is your Work.

12. Plea.

Laſtly, It is objected, O but God hides his Face from me in my Affliction: It is dark within as well as without, and this makes my caſe more deplorable, greatly afflicted and ſadly deſerted.

1. Anſwer.

Though you want at preſent ſenſible Comfort, yet you have reaſon to be thankful for gracious ſupports. Though the Light of God's Countenance ſhine not upon you; yet you find the everlaſting Arms are underneath you; the Care of God worketh for you, when the Conſolations of God are withdrawn from you.

2. Anſwer.

To have God hide his Face in the time of trouble is no new, or unuſual thing. God's deareſt Saints; yea his own Son hath experienced it; who in the deeps of inward and outward trouble, when wave called unto wave, felt not thoſe ſweet ſenſible Influences of Comfort from God, which had always fill'd his Soul formerly. If Chriſt cry in extremity, My God, My God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Then ſure we need not wonder as if ſome ſtrange thing had happened to us.

3. Anſwer.

May not your unſubmiſſive carriage under the Rod provoke God to hide his Face from you? Pray conſider it well, nothing is more probable than this, to be the cauſe of God's withdrawment from you. Could you in meekneſs and quietneſs receive that Cup your Father hath given you to drink? Accept the puniſhment of your Iniquities; Say good is the Word of the Lord, it is the Lord, let him do what he will. You would ſoon find the caſe altered with you; but the comforting Spirit finds no delight or reſt in a turbulent and tumultuous Breaſt.

And thus I have ſatisfied the moſt conſiderable Pleas urged in juſtification of our Exceſſes.

4. I come now to the laſt thing propoſed, namely, the means of curing and preventing theſe Sinful Exceſſes of Sorrow for the death of our dear Relations.

And although much hath been ſaid already to diſſwade from this Evil, and I have enlarged already much beyond my firſt Intention; tion; yet I ſhall caſt in ſome farther help and Aſſiſtance towards the Healing of this Diſtemper, by preſcribing the following Rules.

1. Rule.

If you would not mourn exceſſively for the loſs of Creature-Comforts, then beware that you ſet not your delight and love exceſſively, or inordinately upon them whilſt you enjoy them.

Strong Affections make ſtrong Afflictions, the higher the Tide, the lower the Ebb. According to the meaſure of our Delight in the enjoyment, is our grief in the loſs of theſe things. The Apoſtle knits theſe two Graces, Temperance and Patience together in the Precept. 2 Pet. 1. 16. And it's very obſervable how Intemperance and Impatience are inſeparably linked in Experience, yea, the experience of the beſt Men. You read Gen. 37. 3. How Iſrael loved Joſeph more than all his Children, becauſe he was the Son of his old Age; and made him a Coat of many Colours.

This was the darling, Jacob's Heart was exceedingly ſet upon him, his very Life was bound up in the Life of the Lad. Now when the ſuppoſed death of his Child was brought to him, how did he carry it? See ver. 34. 35. And Jacob rent his Cloaths, and put Sackcloth upon his Loins; and mourned for his Son many Days: And all his Sons and all his Daughters roſe up to comfort him, but he refuſed to be comforted? And he ſaid, For I will go down into the Grave to my Son mourning. Thus his Father wept for him.

Here, as in a Glaſs, are the effects of exceſſive Love to a Child repreſented. Here you may ſee what work immoderate love will make, even in a Sanctified Heart.

O therefore let your moderation be known to all Men, in your Delights and Sorrows about Earthly things; for ordinarily the proportion of the one is anſwerable to the other.

2. Rule.

If you would not be overwhelmed with Grief for the Loſs of your Relations, be exact and careful in diſcharging your Duties to them while you have them.

The teſtimony of your Conſcience that you have laboured in all things to diſcharge the duties you owed to your Relations, whilſt they were with you, will prove an excellent allay to your Sorrows for them when they are no longer yours. 'Tis not ſo much the ſingle Affliction as the Guilt charged upon us in times of Affliction, that makes our load ſo heavy.

O what a terrible thing is it to look upon our dead Friend, whilſt Conſcience is accuſing and upbraiding us for our duties neglected, and ſuch or ſuch Sins committed? O you little think how dreadful a Spectacle this will make the dead Body of thy Friend to thee.

Conſcience if not quite ſtupid, or dead, will ſpeak at ſuch a time. O therefore, as ever you would provide for a comfortable parting at Death, or meet again at Judgment; be exact, punctual, and circumſpect in all your Relative Duties.

3. Rule.

If you would not be overwhelmed by trouble for the loſs of dear Relations, then turn to God under your trouble, and pour out your Sorrows by Prayer into his Boſom.

This will eaſe and allay your Troubles: Bleſſed be God for the Ordinance of Prayer; How much are all the Saints beholden to it at all times, but eſpecially in Heart-ſinking and diſtreſſful times. It's ſome relief, when in diſtreſs, we can pour out our trouble into the Boſom of a Wife, or faithful Friend; how much more when we leave our complaint before the gracious, wiſe, and faithful God? I told you before of that Holy Man, who having loſt his dear and only Son, got to his Cloſet; there poured out his Soul freely to the Lord, and when he came down to his Friends that were waiting below to comfort him, and fearing how he would bear that ſtroke; he came from his duty with a chearful Countenance, telling him he would be content to bury a Son (if it were poſſible) every day, provided he might enjoy ſuch comfort as his Soul had found in that private Hour.

Go thy way Chriſtian, to thy God, get thee to thy Knees in the cloudy and dark day: Retire from all Creatures, that thou maiſt have thy full Liberty with thy God, and there pour out thy Heart before him, in free, full and broken-hearted Confeſſions of Sin: Judge thy ſelf worthy of Hell as well as of this trouble: Juſtifie God in all his ſmarteſt ſtrokes; beg him in this diſtreſs to put under thee everlaſting arms, intreat one ſmile, one gracious look to enlighten thy darkneſs and chear thy drooping Spirit. Say with the Prophet, Jer. 17. 17, Be not thou a terror to me; thou art my hope in the day of evil. And try what relief ſuch a courſe will afford thee. Surely if thy heart be ſincere in this courſe, thou ſhalt be able to ſay with that Holy Man, Pſal. 94. 29. In the Multitude of my thoughts which I had within me, thy Comforts have delighted my Soul.

4. Rule.

If you would bear the loſs of your dear Relations with moderation, eye God in the whole proceſs of the affliction more, and ſecundary cauſes and circumſtances of the matter leſs.

I was dumb, I opened not my Mouth; becauſe thou didſt it. Pſal. 39. 9. Conſider the hand of the Lord in the whole matter: And that,

Firſt, As a Soveraign Hand, which hath right to diſpoſe of thee and all thy comforts without thy leave or conſent, Job 33. 13.

Secondly, As a Father's Hand correcting thee in Love and Faithfullneſs, Prov. 3. 11. Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth, as a Father the Son in whom he delighteth. O if once you could but ſee Affliction as a Rod in a Father's Hand, proceeding from his Love, and intended for your eternal good; How quiet would you then be!

And ſurely if it draw your Heart nearer to God, and mortifie it more to this vain World, it is a Rod in the hand of ſpecial Love: If it end in your Love to God, doubt not but it comes from God's Love to you.

Thirdly, As a Juſt and Righteous Hand: Haſt not thou procured this to thy ſelf by thy own Folly? Yea, the Lord is juſt in all that is come upon thee: Whatever he hath done, yet he hath done thee no wrong.

Fourthly, Laſtly, As a moderate and merciful Hand that hath puniſhed thee leſs than thine Iniquities deſerve: He hath caſt thee into Affliction, he might juſtly have caſt thee into Hell. It's of the Lord's Mercy that thou art not conſumed. Why doth the living Man complain?

5. Rule.

If you would bear your affliction with moderation, compare it with the Affliction of other Men, and that will greatly quiet your Spirits.

You have no cauſe to ſay God hath dealt bitterly with you, and that there is no Sorrow like your Sorrow: Look round about you, and impartially conſider the condition that others are in: And they nothing inferior to you in any reſpect. You had one dead Child, Aaron had two at a ſtroke, Job all at one ſtroke, and both theſe by an immediate ſtroke from the hand of God. Some Godly Parents have lived to ſee their Children die in their Sin by the Hand of Juſtice: Others have ſeen them live to the diſhonour of God and breaking of their own Spirits: And would have eſteemed it a Mercy if they had died from the Womb, and given up the Ghoſt when they came out of the Belly, as Job ſpeaks.

In what Miſery have ſome Parents ſeen their Children lie? God holding them as ſo many terrible ſpectacles of Miſery before their Eyes; ſo that they have begged the Lord with importunity, to let looſe his Hands and cut them off. Death being in their eſteem, nothing to thoſe continual Agonies in which they have ſeen them lye ſweltering from day to day. Oh you little know what a bitter cup others have had given them to drink! Surely if you compare, you muſt ſay, the Lord hath dealt gently and graciouſly with me.

6. Rule.

Carefully ſhun and avoid whatſoever may renew your Sorrow, or provoke you to impatience.

Increaſe not your Sorrow by the Sight of, or diſcourſes about ſad objects, and labour to avoid them as occaſions preſented by the Enemy of your Souls, to draw forth the corruptions of your Heart.

I told you before, why Jacob would not have the Child of which Rachel died, called after the name his Wife had given, Benoni, the Son of my Sorrow, leſt it ſhould prove a daily occaſion of renewing his trouble for the loſs of his dear Wife; but he called his name Benjamin.

Your Impatience is like Tinder, or Gunpowder, ſo long as you can prevent the ſparks from falling on it, there is no great danger: But you that carry ſuch dangerous prepared matter in your own Hearts, cannot be too careful to prevent them. Do by murmuring, as you do by blaſphemous Thoughts, think quite another way, and give no occaſion.

7. Rule.

In the day of your Mourning for the Death of your Friends, ſeriouſly conſider your own death as approaching, and that you and your dead Friend are diſtinguiſhed by a ſmall interval and point of time.

2 Sam. 11: 13. I ſhall go to him. Surely the Thoughts of your own Death as approaching alſo, will greatly allay your Sorrows for the dead that are gone before you.

We are apt to fancy a long life in the World, and then the loſs of thoſe Comforts which we promiſed our ſelves ſo much of the ſweetneſs and comforts of our Lives from, ſeems an intollerable thing.

But would you reallize your own deaths more, you would not be ſo deeply concerned for their death as you are. Could you but look into your own Graves more ſeriouſly, you would be able to look into your Friend's Grave more compoſedly.

And thus I have finiſhed what I deſigned from this Scripture. The Father of Mercies and God of all Comforts, whoſe ſole Prerogative it is to comfort them that are caſt down, write all his Truths upon your Hearts, that they may abide there, and reduce your diſordered Affection to that frame which beſt ſuits the Will of God, and the profeſſion you make of ſubjection and reſignation thereunto.

Some cenſure them as too prodigal of their Blood, and others commend their Courage and Conſtancy; but where are they that ſincerely reſolve and prepare to be followers of them, who through Faith and Patience inherit the Promiſes?* Heb. 6. 12. or take them for an Example of Suffering, Affliction, and of Patience, Jam. 5. 10.

It is as much our Intereſt, as it is our Duty to be ſeaſonably awakened out of our pleaſant, but moſt pernicious drowzineſs. Troubles will be ſo much the more ſinking and intollerable, by how much they ſteal upon us by way of ſurprizal. For look as expectation deflowreth any temporal comfort, by ſucking out much of the ſweetneſs thereof before-hand, and ſo we find the leſs in it when we come to the actual enjoyment: So the expectation of evils abates much of the dread and terrour, by accuſtoming our Thoughts before-hand to them; and making preparation for them: So that we find them not ſo grievous, amazing and intollerable when they are come indeed.

This was exemplified to us very lively by Holy Mr. Bradford the Martyr, when the Keeper's Wife came running into his Chamber, ſaying, O Mr. Bradford, I bring you heavy Tidings, for to Morrow you muſt be Burned, your Chain is now buying, and preſently you muſt go to Newgate. He put off his Hat, and looking up to Heaven, ſaid, O Lord, I thank thee for it. I have looked for this a long time: It comes not ſuddenly to me, the Lord make me worthy of it: See in this Example the ſingular advantage of a prepared and ready Soul.

Reader, The Cup of Sufferings is a very bitter Cup, and it is but needful that we provide ſomewhat to ſweeten it, that we may be able to receive it with Thankſgiving: And what thoſe ſweetning ingredients are, and how to prepare them, you will have ſome direction and help in the following diſcourſe, which hath once already been preſented to the publick view; And that it may at this time alſo (wherein nothing can be more ſeaſonable) become farther uſeful and aſſiſting to the People of God in their preſent duties, is the hearty deſire of

ACTS XXI. xiii.

Then Paul anſwered, What mean ye to weep, and break my Heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but alſo to die at Jeruſalem for the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

CHAP. I.

Wherein the Text is opened and the Doctrine propounded.

THE Divine Providence is not more ſignally diſcovered in Governing the motions of the Clouds, than it is in diſpoſing and ordering the Spirits and Motions of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, who in a Myſtical Senſe are fruitful Clouds to diſpenſe the ſhowers of Goſpel-Bleſſings to the World. The Motion of the Clouds is not ſpontaneous, but they move as they are moved by the Winds; neither can Goſpel-Miniſters chuſe their own Stations, and govern their own Motions, but muſt go when and where the Spirit and Providence of God directs, and guides them; as will evidently appear in that dangerous Voyage to Jeruſalem in which the Apoſtle was at this time engaged; Acts 20. 22. And now behold I go bound in the Spirit to Jeruſalem: [Bound in the Spirit] alluding to the watery Vapours which are bound up in Clouds, and conveyed according to the motion of the Winds: This Journey was full of Danger; Paul foreſaw his buſineſs was not only to plant the Goſpel at Jeruſalem, with his Doctrine, but to water it alſo with his Blood; but ſo effectually was his Will determined by the Will of God, that he chearfully complies with his Duty therein, whatſoever difficulties and dangers did attend it.

And indeed it was his great advantage, that the Will of God was ſo plainly and convincingly revealed to him touching this matter; for no ſooner did he imploy himſelf to obey this Call of God, but he is preſently aſſaulted by many ſtrong Temptations to decline it.

The firſt Rub he met in his way, was from the Diſciples of Tyre, who pretending to ſpeak by the Spirit, ſaid unto Paul, that he ſhould not go up to Jeruſalem, Acts 11. 4. The Lord by this trying the Spirit of his Apoſtle much, as he did the young Prophet coming from Judea to Bethel, 2 Kings 13. 18. But not with like Succeſs.

His next diſcouragement was at Cæſarea, where Agabus (whom Dorotheus affirms to be of the ſeventy two Diſciples, and had before Propheſied of the Famine in the Reign of Claudius, which accordingly came to paſs) takes Paul's Girdle and binding his own Hands and Feet with it, ſaid, Thus ſaith the Holy Ghoſt, ſo ſhall the Jews at Jeruſalem bind the Man that oweth this Girdle, and ſhall deliver him into the Hands of the Gentiles, ver. 11. And ſurely he was not ignorant what he muſt expect whenever he ſhould fall into their Hands; yet neither could this afright him from his Duty.

But then, laſt of all, he meeteth with the ſoreſt Tryal from his deareſt Friends, who fell upon him with paſſionate Entreaties, and many Tears, beſeeching him to decline that Journey: O they could not give up ſuch a Miniſter as Paul was! This even melted him down, and almoſt brake his Heart; which yet was eaſier to do, than to turn him out of the Path of Obedience: Where by the way we may note two things;

Firſt, That Divine Precept, not Providence, is to Rule out our way of Duty.

Secondly, That no hinderances or encouragements whatſoever will juſtifie our neglect of a known Duty.

All theſe Rubs he paſſes over, all theſe diſcouragements he overcame with this Heroick and truly Chriſtian Reſolution in the Text; What mean you to weep, and to break my Heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but alſo to die at Jeruſalem, for the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

In which words we have:

1. A loving and gentle Rebuke.
2. A quieting and calming Argument.

Firſt, He lovingly and gently rebukes their fond and inordinate Sorrow for his Departure, in theſe words, What mean ye to Weep, and break my Heart? As if he ſhould ſay, What mean theſe Paſſionate Entreaties, and tempting Tears? To what purpoſe is all this a-do? They are but ſo many Snares of Satan to turn my Heart out of the way of Obedience: You do as much as in you lies to break my Heart; Let there be no more of this, I beſeech you.

Secondly, He labours to charm their unruly Paſſions with a very quieting and calming Argument: For I am ready, &c. ἑτοίμως ἔχω, parate habeo. I am prepared and fitted for the greateſt Sufferings which ſhall befall me in the purſuit of my Duty, be it a Priſon or be it Death, I am provided for either; Liberty is dear, and Life much dearer, but Chriſt is dearer than either.

But what was there in all this to ſatisfie them whoſe trouble it was to ſee him ſo forward? Let the words be conſidered, and we ſhall find divers things in them to ſatisfie and quiet their Hearts, and make them willing to give him up.

Firſt, I am ready, that is, God hath fitted and prepared my Heart for the greateſt Sufferings; this is the Work of God; Fleſh and Blood would never be brought to this, were not all its intereſts and inclinations ſubdued and over-ruled by the Spirit of God: What do ye therefore in all this, but work againſt the Deſign of God, who hath fitted and prepared my Heart for this Service?

Secondly, I am ready, that is, my Will and Reſolution ſtands in a full bent, my Heart is fixed, you cannot therefore ſtudy to do me a greater Injury, than to diſcompoſe and diſorder my Heart again, by caſting ſuch Temptations as theſe in my way, to cauſe the Fleſh to rebel, and the Enemy that is within to renew his oppoſition.

Thirdly, I am ready, that is, my Heart is ſo fixed to follow the Call of God whatever ſhall befal me, that all your Tears and Entreaties to the contrary are but caſt away, they cannot alter my fixed purpoſe, you had as good be quiet, and chearfully reſign me to the Will of God.

Thus you ſee the Equipage and preparation of Paul's Spirit to receive both Bonds and Death for Chriſt at Jeruſalem; This made him victorious over the Temptations of Friends, and the Malice and Cruelty of his Enemies; by this readineſs and preparation of his Mind he was carried through all, and enabled to finiſh his courſe with Joy. From hence the Obſervation is;

Doct. That it is a bleſſed and excellent thing for the People of God to be prepared, and ready for the hardeſt Services, and worſt of Sufferings to which the Lord may call them.

This is that which every gracious Heart is reaching after, praying and ſtriving to obtain, but, ah, how few attain it? Certainly there are not many among the Multitude of Profeſſors of this Generation, that can ſay as Paul here did, I am ready to be bound, or to die for Chriſt.

CHAP. II.

Shews that although God takes no delight in afflicting his people; yet he ſometimes expoſeth them to great and grievous Sufferings, with a brief account why, and how he calls them thereunto.

THE Mercies and Compaſſions of God over his people are exceeding great and tender, Pſal. 103. 14. Like as a Father pitieth his Children, ſo the Lord pitieth them that fear him; He delights not in afflicting and grieving them, Lam. 3. 33. He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the Children of men. The Scripture intimates to us a ſeeming Conflict betwixt the Juſtice and Mercy of God, when he is about to deliver up his people into their Enemies hands, Hoſea 1. 8, 9. How ſhall I give thee up Ephraim? How ſhall I deliver thee Iſrael? How ſhall I make thee as Adma? How ſhall I ſet thee as Zeboim? Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together: Which ſhews us with what reluctance and great unwillingneſs the Lord goes about ſuch work as this: The work of Judgment is his ſtrange work; it pleaſes him better to exerciſe the milder Attribute of Mercy towards his Children. Hence we find when he is preparing to execute his Judgments, that he delays the execution as long as the Honour of his Name, and ſafety of his People will permit, Jer. 44. 22. He bears till he can bear no longer; He often turns away his wrath from them, Pſal. 78. 38, 39. He tries them by leſſer Judgments, and gentler Corrections, to prevent greater, Amos 4. 6. When his people are humbled under the Threatnings of his Wrath, his Heart is melted into Compaſſion to them, Jer. 31. 17, 20. And when ever his Mercy prevails againſt Judgment, it is with joy and triumph, James 2. 13. Mercy rejoyceth againſt Judgment.

For he feels his own tender Compaſſions yerning over them; he foreſeeth, and is no way willing to gratifie the inſulting pride of his and their Enemies, Deut. 32. 26, 27. I ſaid I would ſcatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to ceaſe from among men, were it not that I feared the wrath of the Enemy, leſt their Adverſaries ſhould behave themſelves ſtrangely, &c.

Yet all this notwithſtanding, it often falls out by the provocations of his Sons and Daughters, that the Lord gives them up into the hands of their Enemies, for the correction of their evils, and the manifeſtation of his own Glory. Seneca (though a Heathen) could ſay, that God loves his People with a Maſculine Love, not with a Womaniſh Indulgence and Tenderneſs: If need require, they ſhall be in heavineſs through manifold Temptations, 1 Pet. 1. 6. He had rather their Hearts ſhould be heavy under Adverſity, than vain and careleſs under Proſperity; The choiceſt Spirits have been exerciſed with the ſharpeſt ſufferings, and thoſe that now ſhine as Stars in Heaven, have been trod under foot as Dung on the Earth, 1 Cor. 4. 11. Unto this preſent hour we both hunger and thirſt, and are naked and buffeted, and have no certain dwelling places, and labour, working with our hands; being reviled we bleſs, being perſecuted we ſuffer it, being defamed we entreat; we are made as the filth of the World, and the off-ſcouring of all things unto this day. The Eleventh Chapter to the Hebrews is a Compendium of the various, and grievous ſufferings of the Primitive Saints: They were tortured, they were ſawn aſunder, were tempted, were ſlain with the Sword, they wandered about in Sheep-skins and Goat-skins being afflicted, deſtitute, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy; They wandered in Deſarts, and in Mountains, in Dens, and Caves of the Earth. And ſince the Earth had dryed up thoſe Rivers of precious blood, whereof the Sacred Records make mention, what Seas of Chriſtian blood have ſince thoſe days been ſhed by bloody Perſecutors? Hiſtories inform us, that in the Ten Primitive Perſecutions, ſo many of the Saints and Martyrs of Jeſus have been ſlain, as that you may allow five Thouſand a day to every day in the whole Year. Thoſe bloody Emperors ſported themſelves with the Deaths of Gods deareſt Saints; many precious Chriſtians were burnt by night at Rome, to ſerve as Torches to light their Enemies in their paſſage through the Streets; Eight hundred Thouſand Martyrs are mentioned within the ſpace of thirty Years, ſince the Jeſuits aroſe out of the Bottomleſs Pit.

To what grievous Sufferings did the Lord give up thoſe precious Servants of Chriſt, the Waldenſes and Albigenſes, who received the Light of Reformation about the Year, 1260. when the Fogs of Antichriſtian Darkneſs had overſpread the Earth; a People ſound in judgment, as appears by their Letters, Catechiſms, and Confeſſions which are extant; a People of a ſimple, plain and inoffenſive Behaviour; yet with what fury and rage did that impious Pope Pius proſecute them to deſtruction? driving them into the Woods and Mountains, except the Aged and Children that could not flee, who were murdered in the way: Some Famiſhed in the Caves and Clefts of the Rocks, others endured the Rack for eight Hours together; ſome beaten with Iron Rods, others thrown from the tops of high Towers, and broken to pieces.

What bloody Shambles and Slaughter-houſes have France, Ireland, and England been made by Popiſh cruelty? More might be related out of each Story, than a tender Hearted Reader is able to bear the rehearſal of: But what God hath done, he may do again; we are not better than our Fathers, diſmal Clouds of indignation are gathering over our heads, charged with double deſtruction, ſhould the Lord pleaſe to make them break upon us; we cannot imagine the rage of Satan to be abated, now that his Kingdom haſtens to its period, Rev. 12. 12. nor are his Inſtruments grown leſs cruel and skilful to deſtroy. The Land indeed hath enjoyed a long reſt, and this Generation is acquainted with little more of Martyrdom, than what the Hiſtories of former times inform us of: but yet let no man befool himſelf with a groundleſs expectation of a continuing tranquillity. Auguſtin thinks that the Bloody Sweat which over-ran the Body of Chriſt in the Garden, ſignified the ſharp and grievous Sufferings, which in his Myſtical Body he ſhould afterwards endure; and indeed it is a truth, that theſe are alſo called the Remains of Chriſt's Sufferings, Col. 1. 24. His Perſonal Sufferings were indeed compleated at his Reſurrection, that Cup was full to the brim, to which no drop of Suffering can be added; but his Sufferings in his Myſtical Body are not yet full; by his Perſonal Sufferings he fully ſatisfied the Wrath of God, but the Sufferings of his People have not yet ſatisfied the Wrath of Men; though Millions of precious Saints have ſhed their blood for Chriſt, whoſe Souls are now lying under the Altar, How long Lord! how long! Yet there are many more coming on behind in the ſame Path of Perſecution, and much Chriſtian Blood muſt yet be ſhed before the Myſtery of God be finiſhed; and notwithſtanding this Lucid Interval, the Clouds ſeem to be returning again after the Rain. Thus you ſee to what grievous Sufferings the Merciful God hath ſometimes called his deareſt People.

Now God may be ſaid to call forth his People to ſuffer, when he ſo hedgeth them in by Providence, that there is no way to eſcape ſuffering, but by Sinning; whatſoever Providence labours with ſuch a Dilemma as this, is a plain Signification of God's Will to us in that Caſe. We may not now expect Extraordinary Calls to Suffering-Work, as ſome of the Saints had of old, Gen. 22. 2. Acts 9. 16. But when our way is ſo ſhut up by Providence, that we cannot avoid Suffering, but by ſtepping over the Hedge of the Command, God will have us look upon that Exigence as his Call to ſuffer: And if the Reaſons be demanded why the Lord, who is ſo inclined to Mercy, doth ſo often hedge in his own People by his Providence in a ſuffering Path; let us know; that in ſo doing he doth both

1. Illuſtrate his own Glory. And
2. Promote his Peoples Happineſs.

Firſt, Hereby the moſt Wiſe God doth Illuſtrate the Glory of his own Name, clearing up the Righteouſneſs of his ways by the ſufferings of his own People: By this the World ſhall ſee, that how well ſoever he loves them, he will not indulge or patronize their Sins; if they will be ſo diſ-ingenuous to abuſe his Favours, he will be ſo juſt to make them ſuffer for their Sins, and by thoſe very Sufferings will provide for his own Glory, which was by them Clouded in the Eyes of the World. He hates not Sin a jot the leſs becauſe it is found in his own People, Amos 3. 2. And though for the magnifying of his Mercy he will pardon their Sins, yet for the clearing of his Righteouſneſs he will take Vengeance upon their Inventions, Pſal. 99. 8.

Moreover, by expoſing his People to ſuch grievous Sufferings, he gives a fit opportunity to manifeſt the Glory of his Power in their Support, and of his Wiſdom in the Marvellous ways of their eſcape and deliverance. It is one of the greateſt wonders in the World how the Church ſubſiſts under ſuch fierce and frequent Aſſaults as are made upon it by its Enemies: I will turn aſide (ſaid Moſes) and ſee this great ſight, why the Buſh is not conſumed, Exod. 3. 3. That Flaming Buſh was the lively Emblem of the oppreſſed Church in Egypt, the crackling Flames noted the heat of their Perſecution, the remaining of the Buſh unconſumed in the Flames ſignified the wonderful Power of God in their Preſervation; no People are ſo Priviledged, ſo Protected, ſo delivered as the People of God; much leſs oppoſition than hath been made againſt the Church, hath overturned and utterly deſtroyed the mighty Monarchies of the World.

Aſſyrio, Medoque tulit moderamina Perſes,
Subjecit Perſen Macedo, ceſſurus & ipſe
Romanis——

Clandian lib. 3. in laudes Stiliconis.

And no leſs admirable is the Wiſdom of God in fruſtrating and defeating the moſt deep and deſperate Deſigns of Hell againſt his poor People. Now you may ſee the moſt Wiſe God going beyond a malicious and ſubtil Devil, overturning in a Moment the deep-laid Deſigns and Contrivances of many Years, and that at the very birth and point of Execution, Heſt. 6. 1. Snaring the Wicked in the Works of their own Hands, making their own Tongues to fall upon them, working out ſuch marvellous Salvations with his own Hand, as fills them with Aſtoniſhment and Wonder: Pſal. 126. 7. When the Lord turned back the Captivity of Sion, We were like them that dreamed.

Secondly, As God provides for his own glory by the Sufferings and troubles of his People: So he advanceth their Happineſs, and greatly promotes their Intereſt thereby.

For firſt, Theſe Troubles are ordered as ſo many occaſions and means to mortifie the Corruptions that are in their Hearts; there are Rank Weeds ſpringing up in the beſt Soil, which need ſuch Winter Weather to rot them; and certainly if we reckon Humility, Heavenly-mindedneſs, Contempt of the World, and longing deſires after Heaven, to be the real Intereſt and Advantage of the Church; then 'tis evident nothing ſo much promotes their Intereſt as a ſuffering Condition doth; Adverſity kills thoſe Corruptions which Proſperity bred.

Secondly, By theſe tryals their Sincerity is cleared, to the Joy and Satisfaction of their own Hearts; many a doubt and fear which had long entangled and perplexed them is removed and anſwered: When Adverſity had given them proof and tryal of their own Hearts, one ſharp tryal wherein God helps us to be faithful, will do more to ſatisfie our Fears, and reſolve our Doubts, than all the Sermons that ever we heard in our Lives could do.

Thirdly, theſe Sufferings and Tryals of the Church are ordained to free it of abundance of Hypocrites, which were its reproaches as well as burthen. Amos 9. 9, 10. Affliction is a Furnace to ſeparate the Droſs from the more pure and noble Gold. Multitudes of Hypocrites, like Flies in a hot Summer, are generated by the Churches Proſperity ; but this Winter Weather kills them ; many gaudy Profeſſors grow within the Incloſure of the Church , like beautiful Flowers in the Field, where they ſtand, during its Peace and Proſperity , in the pride and bravery of their Gifts and Profeſſions ; but the Wind paſſeth over them, and they are gone, and their places ſhall know them no more ; to allude to that in Pſal. 103. 16. Thunder and Lightning is very terrible Weather , but exceeding uſeful to purifie and cleanſe the Air.

Fourthly, the Churches Sufferings are ordered and ſanctified to endear them each to other. Times of Common-Suffering are times of Reconciliation, and greater endearments among the People of God , never more endeared, than when moſt Perſecuted ; never more united than when moſt ſcattered : Mal. 3. 17. Then they that feared the Lord, ſpake often one to another. Certainly there is ſomething in our Fellowſhip in the ſame Sufferings that is endearing and engaging ; but there is much more in the diſcoveries that Perſecution makes of the ſincerity of our Hearts , which, it may be was before entertained with Jealouſie , and there is yet more than all this in the Reproofs of the Rod, whereby they are humbled for their Pride , Wantonneſs, and bitterneſs of their Spirits each to other, and made to cry in the ſenſe of theſe tranſgreſſions, as Pſal. 70. 8. Remember not againſt us former Iniquities.

Laſtly, By theſe Troubles and Diſtreſſes they are awakened to their Duties , and taught to pray more frequently , Spiritually, and Fervently. Ah what drowſineſs and formality is apt to creep in upon the beſt Hearts in the time of Proſperity ; but when the Storm riſes, and the Sea grows turbulent and raging , now they cry as the Diſciples to Chriſt, Lord ſave us, we periſh. They ſay Muſick is ſweeteſt upon the Waters ; I am ſure the ſweeteſt Melody of Prayer is upon the deep waters of Affliction : For theſe, among many other righteous, wiſe, and holy ends, the Lord permits and orders the Perſecutions and Diſtreſſes of his People.

CHAP. III.

Shews that it is uſual with God to premoniſh his People of approaching Tryals and Sufferings ; with ſome account of the manner how, and the reaſons why he ſo forewarns them.

AS Paul had many clear Premonitions and fore-notices of the Sufferings that ſhould befall him at Jeruſalem , that he might not be ſurprized by them when they came ; ſo it is uſual with God (though not in ſuch an immediate and extraordinary manner.) to admoniſh the World, and eſpecially his own People, of great Tryals and Sufferings before-hand, Amos 3. 7. Surely the Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth his Secrets unto his Servants the Prophets.

Thus when he was about to bring the Flood upon the World, he gave one hundred and twenty Years warning of it before it came, Gen. 6. 3. And when he was to deſtroy Sodom, he ſaith, Gen. 18. 17. Shall I hide from Abraham the thing that I do ? And the like diſcovery he made about the ſame Judgment to Lot, Gen. 9. 12, 13, 14. So when the Captivity of the Jews was nigh at hand, the People had many forewarnings of it ; God forewarned them both Miniſterially, and Providentially ; he warned them by the Prophets , Ezek. 3. 17. Hear the Word of my Mouth, and give them warning from me. And when the time drew nigh to execute the Judgment determined upon Jeruſalem , and the Temple, how plainly did Chriſt foretel them of it ? Luke 19. 43, 44. Thine Enemies ſhall caſt a Trench about thee, and compaſs thee round , and keep thee in on every ſide, and ſhall lay thee even with the Ground, and thy Children within thee.

And when the Storm was juſt ready to fall, their own Hiſtorian tells us a Voice was heard in the Temple , ſaying Migremus hinc , Let us go hence : Which Voice Tacitus alſo mentions in his Annals , affirming it to be more than a humane Voice, telling them God was departing , and that it was accompanied with a ruſhing noiſe , as of Perſons going out ; Theſe were extraordinary Warnings. The like Signs have been given to divers other Nations, by dreadful Eclipſes of the Heavenly Bodies , Portentous Comets, Earthquakes , and other Signs of Judgment.

Joſephus de bello Jud. lib. 7. cap. 2. Audita major humana vox excedere Deos, ſimul ingens motus excedentium. Tacitus lib. 21.

Now though we have no ground to expect ſuch extraordinary Warnings ; yet we have the moſt apparent and certain ſigns of approaching Calamities , after which if they ſurprize us, the fault muſt lie in our own inexcuſable negligence ; for we have a ſtanding Rule to govern our ſelves in this matter , and that is this : When the ſame Sins are found in one Nation , which have brought down the Wrath of God upon another Nation, it is an evident ſign of Judgment at the Door ; for God is unchangeable, Juſt, and Holy, and will not favour that in one People which he hath puniſhed in another, nor bleſs that in one Age which he hath curſed in another. Upon this very ground it was that the Apoſtle warned the Corinthians by the Example of the Iſraelites, whoſe Sins had ruined them in the Wilderneſs, 1 Cor. 10. 6. Now theſe things were our Examples, to the intent we ſhould not luſt after evil things, as they alſo luſted : As if he ſhould ſay, Look upon thoſe dead Bodies which are as it were caſt up upon the Scripture Shore for a warning to you ; follow not the ſame courſe, leſt you meet in the ſame curſe ; if you tread the ſame paths, expect the ſame puniſhment ; God is as righteous now as he was then, he hates, and will puniſh Sin in you, as much as he did in them.

Let us therefore conſider what theſe Provocations were , that haſtened the wrath of God upon his own Iſrael , a People that were nigh and dear unto him , a People upon whom he ſpent as much of the riches of his Patience , as upon any

People in the World; that ſo we may reckon whereabout we are at this day, and what is like to be the Lot of this ſinful and provoking Generation, and we ſhall find by the Conſent of all the Prophets, that theſe Sins were the immediate fore-runners and proper cauſes of their overthrow.

Firſt, The great corruption of God's Worſhip among them, kindled his Wrath, and haſtened their Ruin, Pſal. 106. 39, 40, 41, 42. They were defiled with their own Works, and went a Whoring with their own Inventions; therefore was the Wrath of God kindled againſt his People, inſomuch that he abhorred his own Inheritance, and he gave them into the Hand of the Heathen, and they that hated them ruled over them, their Enemies alſo oppreſſed them, and they were brought into ſubjection under their hand. They that will not bear the Golden Yoke of Chriſt, ſhall be galled with the Iron Yoke of Men: Nothing more provokes the Anger of God, than the adulterating of his Worſhip; a Man will bear with a Thouſand Infirmities in the Wife of his Boſom, but unfaithfullneſs in the Marriage Covenant breaks his Heart: After the manner of Men ſo abuſed and grieved, the Lord expreſſeth himſelf. Ezek. 6. 9. I am broken with their Whoriſh Heart, which hath departed from me, and with their Eyes that go a Whoring after their Idols. Men cannot invent a ſurer and ſpeedier way to their own Ruin, than to bring their own Inventions into God's Worſhip.

Secondly, incorrigible Obſtinacy and Impenitency under gentler ſtrokes and leſſer Judgments, makes way for utter Ruin and Deſolation, Amos 4. from the 6th to the 12th Verſe. Scarcity, Mildews, Peſtilence, and Sword had been tried upon them, but without effect; for the remnant that eſcaped thoſe Judgments; (although pluckt as ſo many Brands out of the Fire, in which their Fellow-Sinners Periſhed) were not Reformed by thoſe gentler and Moderated Judgments.

Thirdly, Stupidity, and ſenſleſsneſs of God's Hand, and the tokens of his Anger was a provoking cauſe, and forerunning of their National Deſolation; they neither ſaw the Hand of God when it was lifted up, nor humbled themſelves under it when it was laid on; the Hand of God is then ſaid to be lifted up, when the Providences of God prepare and poſture themſelves for our Affliction; when the Clouds of Judgment gather over our Heads, and grow blacker and blacker as theirs did upon them, and do upon us at this day, but they took no notice of it, Iſa. 26. 11. Lord, when thy Hand is lifted up, they will not ſee; and (which is the height of Stupidity) they all remain ſenſeleſs and regardleſs when the Hand of God was laid upon them, Iſa. 24. 25. Who gave Jacob for a ſpoil, and Iſrael to the Robbers? Did not the Lord? He againſt whom we have ſinned, for they would not walk in his Ways, neither were they obedient to his Law; therefore he hath poured upon them the fury of his Anger, and the ſtrength of Battel, and it hath ſet him on fire round about, and he knew not, and it burned him, yet he laid it not to Heart. O prodigious Sottiſhneſs! It was not ſome ſmall drops of God's Anger, but the fury of his Anger, not ſome lighter skirmiſh of his Judgments with them, but the ſtrength of Battel; it was not ſome particular ſtrokes upon ſingle Perſons, or Families, but it ſet him on Fire round about, a general Conflagration; yet all this would not awaken them.

Fourthly, the Perſecution of God's Faithful Miniſters and People was another ſin that procured, and a ſign that foretold the deſtruction of their Nation, 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16. And the Lord of their Fathers ſent to them by his Meſſengers, riſing up betimes and ſending, becauſe he had compaſſion on his People, and on his Dwelling-place; but they mocked the Meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his Words, and miſuſed his Prophets, until the Wrath of the Lord aroſe againſt his People, till there was no Remedy. There were alſo a number of upright Souls among them, who deſired to worſhip God according to his own Preſcrption; but a Snare was laid for them in Miſpah, and a Net ſpread for them upon Tabor, Hoſ. 5. 1. And this haſtened Judgment towards them: Miſpah and Tabor, were placed lying in the way betwixt Samaria and Jeruſalem, where the true Worſhip of God was; and in thoſe places Spies were ſet by the Prieſts to obſerve and inform againſt them, ſo that it became very hazardous to attend the pure and incorrupt Worſhip of God, which quickly haſtened on their Ruin.

Fifthly, The Removal of Godly and uſeful Men by Death in more than ordinary haſte, was to them a ſign of Deſolation at Hand, Iſa. 57. 1. The Righteous periſheth, and no Man layeth it to Heart, and merciful Men are taken away, none conſidering that the Righteous is taken away from the Evil to come. In this caſe God acts towards his People, as the Husbandman in a catching Harveſt doth by his Corn, he hurries it with a ſhuffling haſte into the Barn, when he ſees a Storm coming; or as a careful Father with his Sons that are abroad at School, who ſends his Horſes to fetch them home ſpeedily when he hears the Plague is begun in the Place: Upon this Ground the Prophet Amos bewails himſelf, Amos 7. 1. Woe is me, for I am as when they have gathered the Summer Fruit, as the Grape gleanings of the Vintage, there is no Cluſter to eat: My Soul deſireth the firſt ripe Fruit; q. d. Alas, alas, what miſerable days are at hand! What Miſeries muſt I expect to ſee! The pleaſant Cluſters (i. e.) the Societies of the Saints are gathered away by the Hand of Death; there are but few that remain, here and there a ſingle Saint, like Grapes after the Vintage is done, two or three upon the outmoſt Branches.

Sixthly, The general decay of the Life and Power of Godlineſs amongſt them that were left, foreboded Deſtruction at the Door; this is both a provoking Sin, and a fore-running ſign of National Calamity, Hoſea 4. 18. Their Drink is ſower; A Metaphor lively expreſſing the deadneſs and formality of the People in the Worſhip of God, it was like ſower or dead Drink which hath loſt its Spirit and reliſh, and is become flat; ſuch were their Duties, no Spiritual Life, Affection or ſavour in them; they heard as if they heard not, and prayed as if they prayed not; the Ordinances of God were to them as the Ordinances of Men, of which the Apoſtle ſaith, that they Periſh in the uſing.

Seventhly, To conclude, Mutual Animoſities, Jars, and Diviſions, were to them manifeſt Symptoms of National Calamities and Deſolations; for then Ephraim envied Judah, and Judah vexed Ephraim, Iſa. 11. 13. Hoſea 9. 7. The Days of Viſitation are come, the days of recompence are come, Iſrael ſhall know it: The Prophet is a Fool, the ſpiritual Man is mad, for the multitude of thine Iniquities, and the great Hatred.

When ſuch Symptoms of God's Indignation do appear upon any People, the Lord by them, as by ſo many glazing Meteors and blazing Comets, forewarns the World that his Judgments are near, even at the Door. Theſe ſigns all Men ought to obſerve and behold with trembling. If you ask why doth God uſually give ſuch warnings of his Indignation before it comes, the Reaſons are:

1. To prevent the Execution.
2. To make them more Tollerable.
3. To leave the Incorrrigible inexcuſable.

Firſt, Warning is given with deſign to prevent the Execution of Judgments, Amos 4. 12. Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Iſrael; and becauſe I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Iſrael; i. e. Prepare thy ſelf to meet me in the way of my Judgments, by Humiliation and Interceſſion, to prevent the Execution: And what elſe was the Deſign of God in ſending Jonah to that great City Nineveh, but to excite them to Repentance for the prevention of their Ruin. This Jonah knew to be the Lord's meaning, how poſitive ſoever the words of his Commiſſion were; and therefore he declined the Meſſage to ſecure his Credit; knowing that if upon warning given they Repented, the Gratious Nature of God would ſoon melt into Compaſſion over them, and free Grace would make him appear as a Liar; for ſo we muſt expound his Words, Jonah 4. 2. Was not this my ſaying when I was yet in my Country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarſhis, For I knew that thou art a gracious God, and Merciful, ſlow to Anger, and of great Kindneſs, and repenteſt thee of the Evil. q. d. Yea Lord, I knew before-hand it would come to this; thou ſendeſt me poſitively to denounce thy Judgments to Nineveh, mean time deſiring nothing more than that the Execution of them might be prevented by their Repentance: And thus thy Mercy hath expoſed my Reputation in ſaving them from Deſtruction.

Secondly, God forewarns his People of Judgments, to make them more tolerable when they come; expected Evils are nothing ſo heavy, as thoſe that come by ſurprizal; for look as the long expectation of a Mercy makes it leſs ſweet, our Thoughts having anticipated and ſucked out much of the ſweetneſs before-hand; ſo the expectation of Judgments before they befall us, make them leſs bitter and burthenſome than elſe they would be, the Soul having inured and accuſtom'd it ſelf to them by frequent Thoughts, and prepared and made ready it ſelf to entertain them, as Paul did in my Text. To prevent the Diſciples ſurprizal and offence at thoſe days of Perſecution that were coming upon them, Chriſt foretold them, and gave them fair warning before-hand, Joh. 16. 4.

Thirdly, He forewarns his People of approaching Dangers, to leave the Incorrigible wholly inexcuſable, that thoſe who have no ſenſe of Sin, nor care to prevent Ruin, might have no Cloak for their folly when Judgments overtake them; What wilt thou ſay when he ſhall puniſh thee? Jer. 13. 21, 22. As if he ſhould ſay, What Plea or Apology is left thee after ſo many fair Warnings and timely Premonitions? Thou canſt not ſay I have ſurprized thee, or that thou waſt ruined before thou waſt warned; Thy Deſtruction therefore is of thy ſelf.

CHAP. IV.

Demonſtrating the Excellency of a prepared Heart for the worſt of Sufferings; and what a bleſſed thing it is to be ready to be bound, or to die for Chriſt, as Paul here was.

I Am Ready] O bleſſed frame of Spirit! how hard, but how happy is it to get a Heart ſo tempered! Every Chriſtian can ſay, I would be ready, and the Lord make me ready for Sufferings; but few can ſay I am ready, my Heart is prepared and fitted for ſuch a work; yet this example ſhews us it is attainable; and what a bleſſed thing it is to attain it, the following particulars will abundantly convince us.

Firſt, Readineſs for ſufferings will bring the Heart of a Chriſtian to an holy Reſt and Tranquility in a Suffering Hour, and prevent that Anxiety, Perturbation, and diſtraction of Mind, which puts the ſinking weight into Afflictions; the more cares, fears and troubles we have before our Sufferings come, the more calm, quiet and compoſed we are like to be when our Sufferings are come indeed. It is admirable to conſider with what Peace and Patience Job entertained his Troubles, which conſidering the kinds, degrees and manner in which they befel him, one would think they ſhould at leaſt have ſtartled and amazed him, and put his Soul (as gracious and mortified as it was) into great diſorder and confuſion; but you find the contrary; never did the Patience of a Man Triumph at that rate over Adverſity, he worſhips God, owns his Hand, and reſigns himſelf up to his Pleaſure, Job. 1. 20, 21. And whence was this? Surely had his Troubles come by way of Surprize, he could never have carried it at that rate; but in the days of his Peace and Proſperity he had prepared for ſuch a day as this, Job. 3. 25, 26. I was not in ſafety, neither had I reſt, yet Trouble came; The thing that I feared (ſaith he) is come upon me. He laid it to Heart before it came, and therefore it neither diſtracted nor brake the Heart when it came. In like manner the Prophet

Habakkuk ſtood upon his Watch-Tower, i. e. He made his Obſervations by the Word upon the probable events of Providence, whereby he got a clear foreſight of thoſe troubulous days that were at hand; which though it made him tremble in himſelf, yet it gave him reſt in the day of Evil, Hab. 3. 16,17,18. There is a Twofold reſt in the day of evil, viz.

1. A Reſt of Deliverance.
2. A Reſt of Contentation.

It is a ſingular Mercy to find reſt in a Man's own Spirit, to enjoy inward Peace and Tranquillity of Mind, when there is no reſt without; and the way to obtain this, is to foreſee, count upon, and make due preparation for troublous times before-hand: Evils that come by way of Surprizal are not only amazing, but very frequently deſtructive Evils; 'tis a ſad aggravation to feel a Miſery before we fear it; thoſe Calamities that find Men ſecure, do uſually leave them deſperate; the Enemy that comes upon your Backs hath a great advantage to ruin us, yet this is the common caſe of the World. For Man knoweth not his time, but as the Fiſhes are taken in an evil Net, and as the Birds that are caught in the Snare; ſo are the Sons of Men ſnared in an evil time, when it falleth on them ſuddenly, Eccleſ. 8. 12. Thus periſhed the old World; there was but one Noah provided for the Flood, and he only with his Family was preſerved in it; all the reſt were Eating and Drinking, Marrying, and giving in Marriage, until the Flood came and ſwept them all away, Mat. 24. 38. Men will not uſe their foreſeeing Faculties, but becauſe it is all quiet to day, they conclude it ſhall be ſo to Morrow. Thoſe that are at reſt in their habitations, and have got a ſoft Pillow under their heads, are apt to fall aſleep in Security, and dream pleaſantly of continued Reſt and Peace, and loath they are to interrupt their ſenſual Pleaſure with Melancholly Thoughts of changes and ſufferings.

Philoſophers tell us, that immediately before an Earthquake, the Air is very quiet and ſerene, and before the great Rain falls, the Wind uſually lies; Were the aſpect of ſecond cauſes much more favourable and encouraging than it is; yet there were cauſe enough for all that are wiſe in Heart to fear and tremble, under the conſideration of that National guilt which is treaſured up, and will certainly produce diſtreſs and trouble.

O Chriſtians look out for days of Viſitation, prepare for a Storm, and provide you an Ark, an hiding place in Chriſt and the Promiſes, as ever you expect Reſt and Peace in your own Spirits, when the Earth ſhall be full of Tumults, Uproars and Deſolations.

Secondly, Our Preparations for Sufferings is an excellent Argument of the Honeſty and Sincerity of our Hearts in the matters of Religion; He that makes account of Sufferings, and is daily at work with his own Heart, mortifying its Corruptions, weaning its Worldly Affections, exciting and making ready its Suffering-Graces, reſolving in the Strength of God to take his Lot with Chriſt, where-ever and howſoever it ſhall fall, this is the Man that hath deliberately cloſed with Chriſt upon his own terms, and is like to be the durable and victorious Chriſtian.

As for Hypocrites, (Chriſt's Summer Friends) they have either their Exceptions againſt the Severities of Religion, and ſtudy to ſecure to themſelves a Retreat from danger, or elſe they ruſh inconſiderately into the Profeſſion of Chriſt, never debating the terms which he propoſes to all that will follow him, Mark 8. 34. The neceſſity of a rational and well adviſed cloſure with Chriſt upon ſuffering and ſelf-denying terms, is by himſelf fully ſet forth in that excellent Parable, Luke 14. 25, 26, 27, 28. There was a great Multitude that followed him at that time; Chriſt began to grow in requeſt among them, they flocked from all pars to ſee and hear him; but he foreſaw that if once a ſharp Tryal ſhould befall them, it would quickly thin and diminiſh that great Multitude, and reduce them, like Gideons Hoſt, into a little Handful; and therefore he reſolves to deal candidly and plainly with them, he propounds his terms, and ſets down his Conditions, which every one of them muſt ſubſcribe that will follow him, the Sum of which is this; Let him deny himſelf, take up his Croſs, and follow me. And to evince the rationality of theſe terms, he argues from the moſt common and obvious practiſes of Men in their Civil Affairs: No Man that exerciſeth Reaſon will begin to build an Houſe, and lay a large Foundation, when he is not provided with a Stock to carry up the Walls, and compleat the Work; no Man in his Wits would engage with a Handful of Men againſt a great armed Multitude; poſſibly they may intend to face, but no Man would think they intend to Fight the Enemy on ſuch a diſadvantage: Juſt ſo ſtands the caſe in our Profeſſion of Chriſt, if we really intend to go through with the Buſineſs of Religion, we muſt ſit down and compute the coſt and charges of Chriſtianity, think upon the worſt, as well as the beſt, caſt upon Reproaches, Priſons and Death for his ſake, as well as the eaſier and more pleaſant parts of Active Obedience; and having ſo done, if then we can be content to hazard and forego all the reſt upon his account, and accordingly manage our ſelves in a day of Suffering, then we deal ſincerely with Chriſt, and clear our ſelves from the danger of Hypocriſie. It is for want of this that ſo many Profeſſors faint and fall away in times of Temptation, furniſhing the Devil with ſo many Triumphs over Religion, and the more upright Profeſſors of it. It was for want of Depth of Earth, (i. e.) a deep Conſideration, and well-rooted Reſolution at firſt, that the ſtony-ground Hypocrite ſo quickly withered away, when the Sun of Perſecution began to ſhine fervently upon him, Mat. 13. 5, 6. And doubtleſs it is to prevent this fatal Iſſue of our Profeſſion, that God makes ſuch deep wounds by Conviction upon his Peoples Hearts at firſt; it is for our Eſtabliſhment in future Tryals and Sufferings, that he ſo diſtreſſes and humbles them, that he makes Sin ſo bitter and burthenſome to them, as well knowing that all this is no more, than needs to prevent their returning again to Sin in the times of their Temptation.

O Profeſſor, if thou be one that art come to Chriſt in this way, and haſt thus deliberately cloſed with him; if thou haſt as well bethought thy ſelf of bearing his Croſs, as of wearing his Crown, thou haſt then a fair Evidence of the uprightneſs of thy Heart, than which the World affords not a ſweeter Comfort.

Thirdly, the Advantage of Preparations for Sufferings lies in this, that it prevents and cuts off the Scandal of the Croſs, with reſpect both to our ſelves and others.

Firſt, It prevents our own offence at Sufferings; and by Chriſt's own Teſtimony, That Soul is Bleſſed that is not offended in him, Mat. 11. 6. Among the Multitudes of Profeſſors, few are found that are no way offended at the Suffering of Chriſt; they expected much Peace, Honour and Proſperity in the ways of Religion, but finding their Expectations fruſtrated, and their Carnal Intereſt rather expoſed than ſecured by their Profeſſion of Chriſt, they go back like thoſe, Joh. 6. 66. And walk no more with him. And it is very remarkable, that Chriſt dates the offence that Men ſhall take at him, from the firſt appearance of Sufferings, Mat. 24. 8, 9. All theſe are the beginnings of Sorrows, and then ſhall many be offended. Sorrows and Apoſtacies Commence together.

But Reader, if thou be one that makeſt it thy Buſineſs to foreſee and prepare for an evil day, thou wilt have as good thoughts of Chriſt and his ways at the loweſt Ebb, as ever thou hadſt in the greateſt flouriſh and time of Proſperity: Great Peace (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) have they that love thy Law, and nothing ſhall offend them. O happy Soul, whom no Troubles, Reproaches, or Sufferings are able to offend! Thou mayeſt meet with Priſons, Death, Baniſhments; yea, but none of theſe things ſhall offend or ſtumble thee, but thou ſhalt peaceably and ſafely paſs over them, becauſe they are no more than thou expecteſt and provideſt for.

Secondly, And by this means thou wilt alſo prevent the offence and ſcandals of others at the ways of Religion: It is a ſad and dangerous thing to be an occaſion of ſtumbling, either to the weak or to the wicked. Woe to the World becauſe of Offences, for it muſt needs be that offences come; but Woe to that man by whom the Offence cometh, Mat. 18. 7. The Apoſtacies and ſinful compliances of ungrounded Profeſſors, and weak Chriſtians in times of Temptation, are the woful occaſions of prejudicing others againſt Religion, and ſhedding the Blood of Souls. Ah, it were much better never to be in the ways of Profeſſion than to be there only as a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a Rock of offence to others: But all this Miſchief will be prevented, by thy ſerious Expectation of, and Proviſion for the Evil Day.

Fourthly, A fourth Excellency of Preparation for Sufferings lies in this, that it hath a tendency to convince and awaken the drowſie World. O! if the Lord's People would but fall about this Work in earneſt, and live as People that are providing for a Storm, and reſolve in the Strength of God to run all hazards and hardſhips for Chriſt, I am perſwaded it would be of more uſe, to ſtartle and convince the World, than all the Sermons that ever they heard: For here is that which daſhes and cuts the throat of all our Labours, we preach up Self-denial, and contempt of Life and Liberty for Chriſt. Now though they hear us preach the neceſſity and excellency of theſe things, and hear you profeſs them as your Principles; yet when they look upon the Lives of Profeſſors in times of danger, and find no proportion betwixt Profeſſion and Practice, when they ſee us cling to the World, and are as loath to give it up as others; when they obſerve Priſons and Sufferings, afright and terrifie us, as much as thoſe that make no Profeſſion; when they ſee us ſtart like Hares at every ſound, and that we live not looſe from the World, as Men prepared to let it go, and give it up for Chriſt: Why then they conclude that we dare not truſt our own Principles, when it comes to the Puſh; And how can they be perſwaded to believe that which they think we our ſelves do not really believe, although we perſwade them to believe it?

My Friends; the World hath Eyes to ſee what you can do, as well as Ears to hear what you can ſay; and as long as they ſee you do no more than others, you may talk your Hearts out, e're they will believe your way is better than others.

But now when Perſecution ariſeth, did they ſee you providing your ſelves for it, and putting on your Harneſs to enter the Liſts, carry your deareſt Injoyments in your hands, and put on the Shoo of Preparation, to follow the Lord through the rougheſt ways of Sufferings: This would convince to purpoſe, and preach the Excellency of Chriſt, the Vanity of the Creature, the rationality and certainty of Chriſtian Principles, in a more intelligible and rouzing Dialect to them, than all our cheap and Eaſie Commendations of them did. And hence it is, that Noah was ſaid to condemn the World, Heb. 11. 7. By Faith Noah being warned of God, of things not ſeen as yet, (i. e.) of the Deluge that was coming, though no appearance of it yet, the Heavens being as clear as ever; yet believing the Threatning, He was moved with Fear: The Fear of God, an Effect of his Faith in the Word of God, moved, (i. e.) impelled him to his Duty: Set him about his Preparation Work to provide an Ark; and this was it by which he condemned the World, left them excuſeleſs. For they not only heard of an approaching Flood by his Miniſtry, but now ſaw he himſelf believed what he preached, by his daily Preparations againſt it came. O conſider this, how much it would tend to the World's Conviction. Now they will ſee that you are in good earneſt and that there is a reality in Godlineſs. This will induce them to ſearch into the matter more than ever, and remove thoſe Prejudices they have taken up againſt the Good Ways of God, as if they were but Phantaſms and Conceits.

5. In the next place, this foreſight and preparation, muſt needs be an excellent thing, becauſe the Spirit of God every where ſets an honourable Character upon it, and always mentions ſuch Perſons with ſome ſingular commendation and reſpect. Theſe only were wiſe Men in the Judgment of God; and all the reſt (what great Politicians ſoever they are famed to be among Men) are accounted Fools, Prov. 22. 3. Eccleſ. 2. 14. The Wiſe Man's Eyes are in his Head; that is, he is a foreſeeing Man; but the Fool goes on, and is puniſhed: Ruſhes on without Conſideration, ſuſpecting no danger that he at preſent ſees not, and ſo ſmarts for his Folly. Beloved, there are Signs of the Times, as well as of the Weather, Mat. 16. 3. You may ſee the Clouds of Judgment gathering before the Storm falls upon you: And this is the meaning of Zeph. 2. 1, 2. Gather your ſelves together, before the Decree bring forth, and the day paſs as the Chaff. Where there is a Conception of Judgment, there will be a Birth, unleſs the Reformations and Prayers of the Saints give it a miſcarrying Womb. But it requires Wiſdom to diſcern this; they muſt be Men of much Obſervation, that can deſcry it at a great diſtance: Yet this may be done, by conſidering what GOD hath done in like caſes in former Ages, when Nations have been guilty of the ſame Sins as now they are: For God is as Juſt now as then, and hates Sin as much as ever he did; and partly by attending to things preſent, to what fullneſs and maturity the Sins of a Nation are grown, Joel 3. 16. Or what beginnings of Judgment are already upon a People, as Harbingers and Fore-runners of more at hand, Luke 3. 30, 31. 1 Sam. 2. 12. Or what is the univerſal note and cry of God's Miniſters, who are his Watchmen to foreſee danger, Ezek. 3. 17. And his Trumpeters to diſcover it, Numb. 10. 8. And when theſe have one Mouth given them, certainly there is much in it, Luke 1. 70. Or laſtly, by pondering thoſe Scripture-Propheſies that yet remain to be fullfilled: They muſt all go out their times, and accompliſh their full number of Years and Months; but certainly they ſhall be fullfilled in their Seaſons.

By attending to theſe things, a Chriſtian may give a near gueſs at the Judgments that are approaching a Nation, and ſo order himſelf accordingly, Eccleſ. 8. 5. A Wiſe Man's Heart diſcerns both Time and Judgment. And this is even in the Judgment of God) a choice point of Wiſdom. Whereas on the contrary, heedleſs and careleſs ones, that regard not theſe things are branded for Fools, and upbraided with more Brutiſhneſs than the Beaſts of the Field, or Fowls of the Air, Mat. 16. 3. Jer. 8. 7. The Stork in the Heavens, the Swallow, Turtle, and Crane, obſerve their Seaſons of departing, and returning upon the approach of the Winter and Spring, and that by a natural Inſtinct, whereby they prolong their Lives, which elſe muſt periſh. But though God hath made Man wiſer than the Fowls of the Air, and Beaſts of the Earth, which by Inſtinct will quit colder Climates, or run to the Hedge when Winter or Storms approach; yet the Heavens may be aſtoniſhed at this to ſee Nature caſt by ſin ſo far below it ſelf, and that in reaſonable Creatures.

But now, if this be fore-ſeen, then there is a ſingular advantage in a Man's Hand, either to uſe the means of preventing thoſe approaching Calamities, Zeph. 2. 3. Or if it cannot be prevented, yet to take Sanctuary in Chriſt, Mic. 5. 5. To run to the Promiſes and Attributes, Eſa. 26. ult. And ſo have a good Roof over his Head while the Storm falls, and the Weather is tempeſtuous abroad. And therefore certainly this Preparation is an excellent thing. Whatever the Spirit of God ſpeaks in the commendation of foreſeeing Evils, is with reſpect to this Duty of preparing for them; for foreſight of Evils without Preparation, rather increaſes, than diminiſhes the Miſery.

6. A ſixth Excellency of Preparation, lies in the Influence that it hath into a Chriſtians ſtability in the Evil Day. You cannot but know that your ſtability in that critical hour of Temption, is a choice and ſingular Mercy, in as much as all you are worth in the other World depends upon your ſtanding then, Rev. 21. 7, 8. Rom. 2. 6, 7. Luke 22. 28. Neither can you be ignorant how much you are like to be tried and put to it then; whether you reſpect the Enemy that engage you, Eph 6. 12. Or your own weakneſs, who have been ſo often foiled in leſſer Tryals. Jer. 11. 5. All the Grace you have will be little enough to keep the Field, and bear you up from ſinking; and therefore it cannot but be a Bleſſed thing, to be able to ſtand and cope with the greateſt difficulties, in ſuch a nick of Tryal as that will be. Now he that expects to do this, muſt put on the whole Armour of God. See Epheſ. 6. 12, 13, 14. There's no Expectation of ſtanding in the evil day, except your foot be ſhod, that is, your Wills prepared, with the preparation of the Goſpel of Peace.

It is true, that our ability to ſtand, is not from our own inherent Grace; For by his ſtrength ſhall no Man prevail, 1 Sam. 2. 9. And yet it is as true, that without Grace, both inherent in us, and excited and prepared for Action, we cannot expect to ſtand: For theſe two, Grace inherent in us, and Grace exciting and aſſiſting without, are not oppoſed, but co-ordinated. Grace in us, is the Weapon by which our Enemy falls; but then that Weapon muſt be managed by the Hand of the Spirit. —— Well then, look upon this as a choice Mercy which tends ſo much to your ſtability.

7. A ſeventh Excellency of a prepared Heart is, that it is a very high teſtification of our love to Jeſus Chriſt, when we thus ſhew our willingneſs to take our Lot with him, and follow him where-ever he goes. What an high expreſſion of love was that of Ruth to her Mother Naomy? I will not go back, but where thou lodgeſt I will lodge, and where thou goeſt I will go. 'Tis excellent when a Soul can ſay to Chriſt, as Ittai to David, 2 Sam. 15. 21. Surely, in what place my Lord the King ſhall be, whether in Death, or in life, even there alſo will thy ſer- vant be. This is love indeed to cleave to him in a time of ſuch diſtreſſes and dangers. This is love which the waters cannot quench, nor the Flood drown, Cant. 1. 6. Probatio amoris, eſt exhibitio operis: If you love Chriſt indeed, ſhew your love by ſome fruits of it; and ſurely, this is a very choice fruit and proof of it. There be many that profeſs a great deal of love to Chriſt; but when it comes to this Touchſtone, it appears falſe and counterfeit, but a meer flouriſh, when no danger is near: But that Soul which buckles on the Shoo of Preparation, to follow him through Thorns and Briars, and over the Rocks and Mountains of Difficulties and Troubles, loves him indeed, Jer. 2. 2, 3. Beloved, it's one of the choiceſt diſcoveries of your love to your Maſter Chriſt; yea, it is ſuch a teſtification of love to him, as Angels are not capable of. They ſhew their love by their readineſs to do his Will, in the Execution of which they fly as with Wings, Ezek. 1. 24. But you only have the Happineſs of teſtifying your love, by your readineſs to ſuffer for him, and is not this Excellent?

8. When the heart is prepared for the worſt Sufferings; it's an Argument that your Will is ſubdued to the Will of God; for till this be done in a good meaſure, you cannot ſtand ready to ſuffer for him. But now, to have the Will ſubdued by Grace to the Will of God, is a very choice and excellent frame indeed; for in this the main power of Grace lieth: Look in what faculty the chief Reſidence and ſtrength of ſin was, in the ſame chief Reſidence the power of Grace, after converſation, is alſo: Now it is in the Will, that the ſtrength and power of ſin (before Converſation) lay. See Joh. 5. 40. Pſal. 81. 11. Jer. 44. 16, 17. And indeed it was the Devils ſtrong Hold, which in the day of Chriſts Power, he ſtorms and reduces to his obedience, Pſal. 110. 3. Oh what a bleſſed thing is this! The Will rules the Man, it hath the Empire of the whole Man, it commands the Faculties of the Soul, imperio politico; and it commands the Members of the Body, imperio deſpotico. Now to have Chriſt and Grace rule that, which rules and commands your inner and outer Man too, is no ſmall Mercy: And a better Evidence that it is ſo cannot be given than this, you ſtand ready, or do ſeriouſly prepare your ſelves to ſuffer the hardeſt things for Chriſt: If your will can like that Work, its an Argument Grace hath conquered and ſubdued your wills indeed.

9. This Preparation of Heart to Sufferings, is an excellent thing, becauſe God is ſo abundantly pleaſed with it, that he often excuſes them from ſufferings, in whom he finds it, and accepts it, as if the Service had been actually done. So Abraham, Gen. 22. 12. He was ready to offer up his Iſaac's life to God; but God ſeeing his ſervants heart ready prepared, and ready for that difficult ſervice, and high point of Self-denial, provided himſelf another Sacrifice inſtead of Iſaac. Abraham ſhall have his Iſaac back again, and that with advantage; for he hath with him not only a choice Experiment of his love to God, but Gods high approbation of him, and acceptation of his offering. It was all one, in reſpect of Divine Acceptance, as if he had been ſlain; and ſo the Scripture repreſents it, Jam. 2. 21. And in this ſence, that Promiſe is often made good to Gods People, who ſtand ready to give up their Iſaacs, their lives, liberties, and deareſt enjoyments to the Lord; He that will loſe his Life for my Names ſake, ſhall ſave it, Luke 9. 24.

Now what a bleſſed thing is this! you may this way have the Crown of Martyrdom, and yet not ſhed one drop of Blood for Chriſt actually. Ah how kindly doth God accept it at his poor Creatures hands, when he ſees how willing they are to ſerve him with their beſt enjoyments! It is well (ſaith he to David) that it was in thy heart, 1 King. 8. 18.

10. And then laſtly, to add no more it is beyond Controverſie an excellent and bleſſed thing; becauſe ſhould ſuch a Chriſtian, after all his pains and preparations, be overborn, and fall by Temptation; yet this preparation of his heart excuſes his fall, from thoſe aggravations that are upon the falls of others, and will give him both ſupport under ſuch a Condition, and encouragement to hope for a ſpeedy recovery out of it. Ah! It's no ſmall comfort, when a poor Soul that hath been overborn by temptation, can come to God and ſay, Lord, thou knoweſt that this was not a wilful departure from my duty, but contrary to the bent and reſolution of my Heart, thou ſaweſt my diligence before hand to prepare for it; thou ſaweſt my Fears and Tremblings of heart about it; O Lord forgive, O Lord recover thy Servant, waſh away this ſpot, it is one of the ſpots of thy Children, an infirmity, not a Rebellion: This may much ſtay the Soul.

Surelly in this caſe, thou haſt many grounds of comfort that another wants: For thy ſin being but an infirmity, (1.) It's that which is common to all Saints, Pſal. 103. 11, 12, 13, 14. (2.) God hath mercy and pardons for ſuch ſins as theſe, elſe woe to the holieſt Soul, Pſal. 130. 3, 4. Solomon, upon this ground, pleads for mercy for them that prepared their hearts, 2 Chron. 30. 18, 19. And God hath laid in ſweet grounds of encouragement for ſuch Souls, Numb. 15. 27, 28. Heb. 5. 2. How tenderly doth Chriſt deal with the Diſciples under this kind of ſin, Mat. 26. 41. And though they forſook him for a time, yet he received him again; though they fled from him, yet they all returned again, and appeared boldly for Chriſt afterwards, and ſealed their Confeſſion of him with their blood: And that which recovered them again was this, that their fall and departure was contrary to the reſolution and ſtanding frame and bent of their hearts; for they reſolved all to cleave to him to the death, Mat. 26. 35. Whereas thoſe that ingaged in a profeſſion of him inconſiderately, and never reſolved nor prepared for the worſt, fell off from him, and never returned any more, Joh 6. 66. So then, upon the whole, you cannot but grant, that it is a very bleſſed and excellent thing, to prepare thus for the greateſt Sufferings that can befall us for Chriſt. We come next to ſhew wherein it lies.

CHAP. V.

Evincing the neceſſity of a ſound and real work of Grace upon the Heart, to fit a Man for the Sufferings of Chriſt.

HAving ſhewed you that God doth ſometimes put his deareſt People upon very hard Services for him, and what an excellent thing it is to prepare our ſelves to obey the Call of God to them. In the next place I come to ſhew you, wherein this Preparation or Readineſs for Sufferings conſiſts, and how many things concur and contribute their aſſiſtance to this Work.

Now there is a twofold Preparation or Readineſs for Suffering; the one is habitual, the other Actual: That Habitual Readineſs is nothing elſe but the Inclination of a Soul to ſuffer any thing for Chriſt; which Inclination ariſeth from the Principles of Grace infuſed into the Soul: But then as Fire, though it have a natural Inclination to aſcend, yet may be violently depreſt and hindred, that it cannot aſcend actually, ſo may it be in this caſe; and therefore, before a Man can be fitted for Sufferings, as Paul was, there muſt to this habitual be ſuperadded an Actual Readineſs, which is nothing elſe but the rouzing of Grace out of the ſleepy and dull habits, and awakening it to its work in a time of need: as the Lion was ſaid to laſh himſelf with his Tail, to rouze up his Courage before he fight. The former is a remote Power, the latter a Proxim and immediate Power. I muſt handle the former in this Chapter, and you are to know that it conſiſteth in a ſound and real work of Grace or Converſion wrought upon the Soul; without which I ſhall make it evidently appear to you, that no Man can be fit or ready to ſuffer as a Chriſtian.

Whatever ſtock of Natural Courage, Moral Principles, or common Gifts of the Spirit be lodged in any Man's Breaſt, yet all this (without Special Grace) can never fit him to ſuffer for Chriſt. And had not this Work been really and ſoundly wrought upon the Heart of this Bleſſed Man, as indeed it was, Acts 9. 3, 4, 5. He had quickly fainted under his Sufferings; and ſo will every Soul ſooner or later do, that ſuffers not upon the ſame Principles he did.

1. For firſt, No Man can ſuffer for Chriſt until he be able to deny himſelf: See Mat. 16. 4. Self denial goes in order of nature before Sufferings. Beloved, in a Suffering Hour the Intereſts of Chriſt and Self meet like two Men upon a narrow Bridge, one muſt of neceſſity go back, or the other cannot paſs on: If you cannot now deny ſelf you muſt deny Chriſt. The Yoke and Dominion of ſelf muſt be caſt off, or elſe Chriſt's Yoke and Burthen cannot be taken on.

It is confeſt that Self may not only conſiſt with, but be a Motive to ſome kind of Sufferings: Ambition and Applauſe may carry a Man far this way; Pride is a Salamander that it ſeems can live in the Flames of Martyrdom, 1 Cor. 13. 3. But to be a Servant to Self, and a true Sufferer for Chriſt, is incompatible. Self may make you the Devil's Martyrs, but Grace only can make you Chriſt's Martyrs. So that let a Man be ſeemingly carried for a while with never ſo high a Tide of Zeal for Chriſt, yet if Self be the Spring that feeds it, thoſe Self-ends like ſo many little Ditches joined to the Bank of a River, ſhall ſuck and draw away the Water into themſelves, that the lofty ſtream will ſink and come to nothing e're it have ran far: So then of neceſſity Self muſt be dethroned in the Hearts of Chriſt's ſuffering Servants.

But now it is real Grace only that depoſes Self, and ſubjects its Intereſt to Chriſt's; for Sanctification is nothing elſe but the dethroning of exalted ſelf, and the ſetting up of Chriſt's Intereſt above it in the Soul. This is it that alters the Property of all a Man hath, and ſuperſcribes them with a new Title, Holineſs to the Lord, Iſai. 23. 18. Zech. 14. 20, 21. Thenceforth a Man looks at himſelf as none of his own, but paſt into anothers right, 1 Cor. 6. 19. And that he muſt neither live, nor act ultimately for himſelf, but for Chriſt, Rom. 14. 7. Heb. 13. 7, 8. Phil. 1. 20. He is no more as a Proprietor, but a Steward of all he hath; and ſo holds upon theſe terms to lay it out, or lay it down, as may beſt ſerve his Maſter's ends and glory.

All that he is or hath, is by Grace ſubordinated to Chriſt; and once ſubordinated, then no more oppoſed to him, ſubordinata non pugnant. This is it that makes him ſay, I care not what becomes of me or mine, ſo Chriſt may be glorified. Let Chriſt be magnified in my Body, whether it be by Life, or Death, Phil. 1. 20.

By Converſion Chriſt enters the Soul, as an Army doth an Enemies Garriſon by Storm, and when he is poſſeſt of it by Grace, he preſently divides the whole Spoil of Self betwixt himſelf and his Church. This is the firſt that evinces the neceſſity of a Work of Grace to prepare the Heart for Sufferings. 2 Cor. 10. 5.

2. And then in the next place, it is as evident that a Man can never be fit to ſuffer hard things for Chriſt, until his Spirit be inlarged, raiſed, and enobled, ſo that he be able to deſpiſe dangers, and look all difficulties in the face. That low and private Spirit muſt be removed, and a publick Spirit muſt poſſeſs him. If a Man be of a feeble and effeminate Spirit, every petty danger will daunt and ſink him; Delicacy and Tenderneſs is as unſuitable to a Chriſtian as to a Soldier, 2 Tim. 2. 3. They that mean to enter into the Kingdom of God muſt reſolve to make their way through that brake of Troubles betwixt them and it, 2 Tim. 3. 12. They that will be Crowned with Victory, muſt ſtand to it, and play the Men, as that Word imports, 2 Cor. 16. 13. Look over all the Sacred and Humane Hiſtories, and ſee if you can find a Man that ever honoured Chriſt by Suffering, that was not of a raiſed and noble Spirit, and in ſome meaſure able to contemn both the allurements and threats of Men. So thoſe three noble Jews, Dan. 3. 16, 17. So Moſes, Heb. 11. 27.

And ſo our Apoſtle, Acts 20. 24. And the ſame Heroick and brave Spirit was found in the ſucceeding Ages amongſt the Witneſſes of Chriſt. When Valence the Emperor endeavoured to draw Baſil from the Faith by Offers of Preferment, Offer theſe things (ſaid he) to Children ; when he threatned him with torments, Threaten theſe things (ſaid he) to your Purple Gallants that live Delicately. And the ſame Baſil relating the Story of the forty Martyrs, ſaith, That when great Honours and Preferments were offered them to draw them from Chriſt, their Anſwer was, Why offer you theſe ſmall things of the World to us ( O Emperour) when you know the whole World is contemned by us ! So Luther, Mony could not tempt him, nor the fear of Man daunt him. Let me (ſaid he in his Letter to Staupicius) be accounted Proud, Covetous, a Murtherer, Guilty of all vices, rather than of wicked Silence and Cowardize in the Cauſe of Chriſt. Thus you ſee to what an height and holy greatneſs the Spirits of Suffering Saints in all Ages have been raiſed.

But now it is Grace that thus raiſes the Spirits of Men above all the ſmiles and honours, frowns and fears of Men : and no other Principle but Grace can do it. There is indeed a Natural Stoutneſs and Generoſity in ſome, which may carry them far, as it's ſaid of Alexander, that when any great danger approached him, his courage would riſe, and he would ſay, Jam periculum par animo Alexandri ; Here is a danger fit for Alexander to encounter : So Pompey when diſſwaded from a dangerous Voyage anſwered, Neceſſe eſt ut eam, non ut vivam ; It's neceſſary that I go, not that I live. But this being fed only by a natural Spring, can carry a Man no higher than Nature, and will flag at laſt. If applauſe and the obſervation of the world ſupply it not, it quickly ebbs and fails.

But as Grace raiſes Men much higher ; ſo it maintains it even when there is nothing to encourage without ; when forſaken of all Creatures, and viſible ſupports, 2 Tim. 4 10. And this it doth three ways : ( 1. ) By giving him that hath it a view of far greater things, which ſhrinks up all temporary things, and makes them appear but trifles and ſmall matters, Rom. 8. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 18. By Grace a man riſes with Chriſt, Col. 3. 1. It ſets him upon his high places, and thence he looks down upon things below, as very poor and inconſiderable. The great Cities of Campania ſeem but little ſpots to them that ſtand on the top of the Alps. (2.) By teaching him to value and meaſure all things by another Rule than he was wont to do. He did once meaſure life, liberty, riches, honours, by ſenſe and time ; and then they ſeemed great things, and it was hard to deny them or thus to ſlight them ; but now he values and meaſures all by Faith and Eternity ; and eſteems nothing great and excellent, but what hath a reference to the Glory of God, and an influence into Eternity. ( 3. ) Grace raiſes and enobles the Spirit thus, becauſe it is the Divine Nature ; 'tis the Spirit of Chriſt infuſed into a poor Worm, which makes a ſtrange alteration on him, transforms him into another manner of perſon ; as much difference betwixt his Spirit now and what it was, as betwixt the Spirit of a Child that is filled with ſmall matters, and taken up with Toys ; and of a grave Stateſman, that is daily imployed about the grand affairs of a Kingdom.

3. A Man can never ſuffer as Chriſtian, till his will be ſubjected to the Will of God. He that ſuffers involuntary, and out of neceſſity, not out of Choice, ſhall neither have acceptance nor Reward from God. Of neceſſity the will muſt be ſubjected ; A Man can never ſay, Thy will be done, till he can firſt ſay, Not my will.

But it is Grace only that thus conquers and ſubjects the will of Man to God's, Pſal. 110. 3. This is that which exalts Gods Authority in the Soul, and makes the heart to ſtoop and tremble at his Commands. 'Tis this which makes our will to write its fiat at the foot of every Command, and its placet under every Order it receives from God. No ſooner was Grace entred into the Soul of Paul, but preſently he crys out, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Acts 9. 6. The Will is to the Soul what the Wheels are to the Chariot ; and Grace is to Will what Oyl is to thoſe Wheels. When we receive the Spirit of Grace, we are ſaid to receive an Unction from the Holy One, 1 Joh. 2. 20. And then the Soul is made as the Chariots of Aminadab, Cant. 6. 12. Non tardat uncta rota, it runs freely after the Lord, and chearfully addreſſeth it ſelf to every Service.

4. A Man can never ſuffer as a Chriſtian, until his heart be compoſed, fixed, and determinated to follow the Lord through all hazards and difficulties. As long as a man is heſitating and unreſolved what to do, whether to go forward, or turn back again to the proſperous World, when a Man is at ſuch a pauſe, and ſtand in his way, he is very unfit for Sufferings. All ſuch Diviſions do both weaken the Soul, and ſtrengthen the Temptation : The Devils work is more than half done to his hand in ſuch a Soul, and he is now as unfit to endure hardſhip for Chriſt, as a Ship is to ride out a Storm, that hath neither Cable, Anchor, nor Ballaſt to hold and ſettle it, but lies at the Mercy of every Wave, Jam. 1. 8. The double-minded man is unſtable in all his Ways. But it's Grace, and nothing beſides it, that brings the heart to a fixed reſolution and ſettlement to follow the Lord. 'Tis Grace that eſtabliſhes the heart, Heb. 13. 9. And unites it to fear the Name of God, Pſal. 86. 11. This gathers all the Streams into one Channel, and then it runs with much ſtrength and ſweeps away all Obſtacles before it. So that look as it is with a wicked man that hath ſold himſelf to do wickedly, if he be ſet upon any one deſign of ſin, he pours out his whole heart and ſtrength in the proſecution of that deſign, which is the ground of that ſaying, Liberet me Deus ab homine unius tantum negotii, Let God deliver me from a Man of one only deſign. He will do it to purpoſe : So is it alſo in Grace ; if the heart be compoſed, fixed, and fully reſolved for God, nothing ſhall then ſtand before him. And herein lies much of a Chriſtians habitual fitneſs and ability to ſuffer.

5. The neceſſity of ſaving-grace in all Sufferers for Chriſt will farther appear from this Conſideration, that he who will run all hazards for Chriſt, had need of a continual ſupply of Strength and Refreſhment from time to time. He muſt not depend on any thing that is failable: For what ſhall he do then, when that Stock is ſpent, and he hath no Proviſion left to live upon? Now all natural Qualifications, yea, all the common gifts of the Spirit are failable and ſhort-liv'd things; they are like a ſweet Flower in the Boſom, that is an Ornament for a little while, but withers preſently: Or like a Pond or Brook occaſioned by a great fall of Rain, which quickly ſinks and dries up, becauſe it is not fed by Springs in the bottom, as other Fountain-waters are; and hence it is they cannot continue and hold out when Sufferings come, Mat. 13. 21. Becauſe there is no Root to nouriſh and ſupport. The Hypocrite will not always call upon God, Job. 27. 10. Though they may keep company with Chriſt a few Miles in this dirty way, yet they muſt turn back at laſt, and ſhake Hands eternally with him, John 6. 66. Theſe Comets may ſeem to ſhine for a time among the Stars, but when that earthly matter is ſpent, they muſt fall and loſe their glory.

But now Grace is an Everlaſting Principle, it hath Springs in the bottom that never fail. It ſhall be in him (ſaith Chriſt) a Well of Water ſpringing up into Eternal Life, Joh. 4. 14. The Spirit of God ſupplies it from time to time as need requires. It hath daily Incomes from Heaven, 2 Cor. 1. 5. Phil. 4. 13. Col. 1. 11. So that it is our Union with Chriſt the Fountain by Grace, that is the true ground of our conſtancy and long-ſuffering.

6. And then laſtly, it will appear by this alſo, that there is an abſolute neceſſity of a real change by Grace on all that will ſuffer for Chriſt; becauſe although we may engage our ſelves in Sufferings without it, yet we can never manage our Sufferings like Chriſtians without it. They will neither be honourable or acceptable to God, nor yet beneficial and comfortable to our ſelves or others, except they be performed from this Principle of Grace: For upon what Principle ſoever beſide this any Man is acted in Religion, it will either cauſe him to decline Sufferings for Chriſt; or, if he be engaged in them, yet he will little credit Religion by his Sufferings. They will either be ſpoiled by an ill managment, or his own Pride will devour the praiſe aud glory of them. I do not deny, but a Man that's Graceleſs, may ſuffer many hard things upon the account of his Profeſſion, and ſuffer them all in vain, as theſe Scriptures manifeſt. See 1 Cor. 13. 3. Gal. 3. 4. And although you may find many ſweet Promiſes made to thoſe that ſuffer for Chriſt, yet you muſt conſider that thoſe pure and Spiritual ends and Motives, by which Men ought to be acted in their Sufferings, are always ſuppoſed and implied in all theſe Promiſes that are made to the external Action. And ſometimes it is expreſt, 1 Pet. 4. 16. To ſuffer [as a Chriſtian] is to ſuffer from pure Chriſtian Principles, and in a Chriſtian manner, with Meekneſs, Patience, Self-denial, &c. And this Grace only can enable you to do: So that by all this, I ſuppoſe, what I have undertaken in this Character, viz. To evince the neceſſity of a work of Grace to paſs upon you, before Sufferings for Religion come, is by all this performed to ſatisfaction.

CHAP. VI.

Wherein the Nature of this Work of Grace, in which our habitual fitneſs for ſuffering lies, is briefly opened, and an account given of the great advantage the gracious Perſon hath for any, even the hardeſt work thereby.

HAving in the former Chapter plainly evinced the neceſſity of ſaving Grace to fit a Man for Sufferings; it will be expected now that ſome account be given you of the nature of this Work, and how it advantages a Man for the diſcharge of the hardeſt Services in Religion: Both which I ſhall open in this Chapter, by a diſtinct Explication of the parts of this deſcription of it.

What ſaving Grace is.

This work of Grace, of which I am here to ſpeak, conſiſts in the real change of the whole Man, by the Spirit of God, whereby he is prepared for every good Work: In which brief deſcription, I ſhall open theſe four things to you.

1. That it is a Change; this is palpably evident, both from Scripture and Experience. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are paſt away; behold, all things are become new; and it is ſo ſenſible a Change, that it's called a Turning from Darkneſs to Light, Act. 26. 18. And a new Creature formed and brought forth. But to be little more diſtinct and particular, there are ſeveral other Changes that paſs upon Men, which muſt not be miſtaken for this; and therefore, (1.) It is not a meer change of the Judgment from Error to Truth, from Paganiſm to Chriſtianity. Such a change Simon Magus had, yet ſtill remained in the gall of bitterneſs, and faſt bound in the Bonds of Iniquity, Act. 8. 23. (2.) Nor only of a Man's Practice, from Prophaneneſs to Civility: This is common among ſuch as live under the Light of the Goſpel, which breaking into Mens Conſciences, thwarts their Luſts, and over-awes them with the fears of Hell: Which is no more than what the Gentiles had, Rom. 2. 15. (3) Nor is it a change from meer Morality, to meer Formality in Religion. Thus Hypocrites are changed, by the common gifts of the Spirit, illuminating their Minds, and ſlightly touching their Affections, Heb. 6. 4, 5. (4.) Nor is it ſuch a Change as Juſtification makes, which is relative, and only alters the ſtate and condition, Rom. 5. 1, 2. (5) Laſtly, it is not a Change of the Eſſence of a Man; he remains eſſentially the ſame Perſon ſtill. But this Change conſiſts in the infuſion of new habits of Grace into the old Faculties; which immediately depoſe Sin from its dominion over the Soul, and deliver up the Soul into the Hands and Government of Chriſt, ſo that it lives no more to it ſelf, but to Chriſt. This is that Change whereof we ſpeak: And this Change (2.) I aſſert to be Real, no Phanſie, nor deluſion; not a groundleſs conceit, but it is really exiſtent, extra mentem, whether you conceit it or not. Indeed the blind World would perſwade us it is ſuppoſititious, and phantaſtick; and that there is no ſuch real difference betwixt one Man and another, as we aſſirm Grace makes. And hence it is, that whoever profeſſeth it, is preſently branded for a Phanatick; and that Scripture, Eſa. 56. 5. Stand by thy ſelf, I am holier than thou, &c. clapt in their Teeth, in their abſurd and perverſe ſence of it.

But I ſhall briefly offer theſe ſeven things to your conſideration, which will abundantly evince the reality of it, and at once both ſtop the ſlanderous Mouths of Ignorant Men, and ſilence thoſe Atheiſtical Surmiſes, which at any time Satan may inject into the Hearts of God's own People touching this matter. And firſt, let it be conſidered, that the Spirit of God hath repreſented to us this work of Grace, under ſuch Names and Notions in Scripture, as if they had been choſen purpoſely to obviate this Calumny. It's called a Creature, Gal. 6. 15. A Man, Pet. 3. 4. A New Birth, Joh. 3. 3. Chriſt formed in us, Gal. 4. 19. All which expreſs its reality, and that it is not a conceited thing. (2.) It appears to be real by the marvellous effects it hath upon a Man, turning him both in Judgment, Will, Affections and Practice quite counter to what he was before. This is evident in that famous inſtance of Paul, Gal 1. 23. Which is abundantly atteſted and ſealed by the conſtant Experience of all gracious Souls that are witneſſes of the Truth hereof. (3.) A Divine and Almighty Power goes forth to produce and work it; and hence Faith is ſaid to be of the operation of God, Col. 2. 12. Yea, that the ſame Power which raiſed Jeſus Chriſt from the Dead, goes to the production of it, Epheſ. 1. 19, 20. And if ſo, how much leſs than Blaſphemy is it, to call it a Conceit or Phanſie? Doth God ſet on work his Infinite Power to beget a Phanſie, or raiſe an Imagination? (4) Conceits and Whimſies abound moſt in Men of weak Reaſon: Children and ſuch as are crackt in their Underſtandings have moſt of them: Strength of Reaſon Baniſhes them, as the Sun doth Miſts and Vapours: But now the more Rational any gracious Perſon is, by ſo much the more he is fixed, ſettled, and ſatisfied in the Grounds of Religion: Yea, there is the higheſt and pureſt Reaſon in Religion; and when this change is wrought upon Men, it's carried on in a rational way, Eſa. 1. 18. Joh. 16. 9. The Spirit over-powers the Underſtanding with clear demonſtrations, and ſilences all Objections, Pleas and Pretences to the contrary. (5.) It's a real thing, and gracious Souls know it to be ſo; elſe ſo many Thouſands of the Saints would never have ſuffered ſo many cruel Torments and Miſeries, rather than forſake a Phanſie, and ſo ſave all. They have been ſo well ſatisfied of the reality of that which the World calls a Phanſie, that they have choſen rather to embrace the Stake than deny it. The conſtancy of Chriſtians, in cleaving to Religion, was common to a Proverb among the Heathen; who when they would expreſs the greateſt difficulty, would ſay, You may as ſoon turn a Chriſtian from Chriſt, as do it. Surely no Wiſe Man would Sacrifice his Liberty, Eſtate, Life, and all that is dear, for a Conceit. 6. It's reality appears in its uniformity in all thoſe on whom it is wrought: They have all obtained like precious Faith, 2 Pet. 1. 1. They are all changed into the ſame Image, 2 Cor. 3. 18. Three Thouſand Perſons affected in one and the ſame manner at one Sermon; Act. 2. 37. Could one and the ſame Conceit poſſeſs them all together? Take two Chriſtians that live a thouſand Miles diſtant from each other, that never heard of one another, let theſe Perſons be examined, and their reports compared, and ſee if they do not ſubſtantially agree, and whether as Face anſwers Face in Water, ſo their Experiences do not anſwer one to the other? Which could never be if it were a groundleſs Conceit. (7.) And laſtly, it's manifeſt, it is a reality, and puts a real difference betwixt one, and another, becauſe God carries himſelf ſo differently towards them, after their Converſion; now he ſmiles, before he frowned; now they are under the Promiſes, before they were under the Threats and Curſes: And what a vaſt difference will be put betwixt the one and the other in that great day? See Mat. 25. Surely, if theſe Nominal Chriſtians did but differ in Conceit, not really from others, the Righteous Judge of all the Earth would not paſs ſuch a different Judgment and Doom upon them.

By all this you evidently ſee, that Grace is a real Change, and not a conceited one.

3. We ſay that this real Change paſſes upon the whole Man: he is changed in Soul, Body and Practice; all things are become new. (1.) This Change appears in his Soul: For by it, (1) His Underſtanding is ſtrangely altered, and receives things in another way than formerly. It did look at Chriſt and things Eternal, as uncertain and light matters; The things that are ſeen and preſent, did moſtly affect, and appeared great and excellent: It admired Riches and Honours, while Chriſt and Glory were over-looked and deſpiſed. But now all theſe Temporals are eſteemed Dung, Droſs, Vanity, Phil. 3. 8. 11. Rom. 8. 5. And Jeſus Chriſt is now eſteemed the Wiſdom and the Power of God, 1 Cor. 1. 23, 24. It did look on the Saints as deſpicable Perſons, but now as the Excellent of the Earth, Pſal. 16. 3. Strictneſs and Duty was once eſteemed a needleſs thing, but now the only thing deſirable, Pſal. 119. 14. Oh, ſaith the renewed Soul, where were mine eyes, that I could ſee no more Excellency in Chriſt, his ways, and people! (2) It ſtops not there (as it doth in Hypocrites) but paſſes on further and reduces the Will; that ſtrong hold is taken, and delivered up to Chriſt. It did rebel againſt God, and could not be ſubject, but now it ſubmits, Acts 9. 6. Lord what wilt thou have me to do? In the day of Chriſt's Power, he preſents himſelf in all his drawing glory and lovelineſs before the Will, and cryes to that ſtubborn Faculty, Open to me, open to me; with which Word there goes forth an opening and ſubduing Power, which the Will no ſooner feels, but it ſpontaneouſly moves towards him, and ſaith, Stand open ye everlaſting Gates, that the King of Glory may come in. Henceforth it votes for God, ſubſcribes and ſubmits to his Will as its only Rule and Law; and indeed, it becomes the Principal Seat where Grace makes its Reſidence; and where, for the moſt part, it is more viſible than in any other Faculty. For after a Man hath ſearched for it in all other Faculties, and cannot diſcern it, yet here he ordinarily finds it; to will is preſent, Rom. 7. 18. (3) The Will being thus gained to Chriſt, Love comes in of courſe; it, feeling the power of Grace alſo, preſently changeth its Object: It ſeizeth not ſo greedily on Earthly Objects as before, but is ſtrangely cooled and deadned to them, by the appearance of a far greater Glory in Jeſus Chriſt; which hath ſo captivated the Soul, and ſtrongly attracted this Affection, that its now become very remiſs in all its actings towards them; and often (eſpecially at firſt) it is ſo weaned from all things on Earth, that the Temptation ſeems to lie on the other extream, even in too great neglect of our lawful Employments and Comforts. Now Jeſus Chriſt, Cant. 1. 3. His Ordinances, Pſal. 119. 97. and his Saints 1 Joh. 3. 14. are the only Delights, and ſweeteſt Companions; he could ſit from Morning till Night, to hear Diſcourſes of Chriſt his Beloved, and could live and die in the company of his People, whoſe company is now moſt delightful and ſweet, Pſal. 119. 63. (4) The Deſires are altered, they pant no more after the Duſt of the Earth, Pſal. 4. 6. but pant for God, as the Hart for the Brooks of water, Pſal. 42. 1. Yea, ſo big is the Soul with them, that its ſometimes ready to faint, yea to break with the longing it hath after him, Pſal. 119. 20. (5) The Thoughts are changed, Pſal. 119. 113. and the Thoughts of God are now moſt precious, Pſal. 139. 47. Muſing, when alone, of him; and in its Solitudes, the Soul entertains it ſelf with a delightful Feaſt, which its Thoughts of God bring in to refreſh it, Pſal. 63. 5, 6. (6) The Deſigns and Projects of the Soul are changed; all are now ſwallowed up in one grand Deſign, even to approve himſelf to God, and be accepted of him, 2. Cor. 5. 9 And if he fail not there, it will not much trouble him, if all his other Deſigns ſhould be daſhed. It were eaſie to inſtance in the reſt of the Affections, and ſhew how Grace ſpreads and diffuſes it ſelf into them all, as Light in the Air, or Leaven in the Lump; but this may ſuffice, to ſhew how it paſſes upon the whole Soul, and enters the ſeveral Faculties and Affections thereof.

And the Soul being thus poſſeſt for God, the Body with all its Members, is conſequently reſigned up to him alſo: For the Will hath the Empire of the Members of the Body, as well as of the Paſſions and Affections of the Soul. Theſe are not any more delivered up to execute the Luſts of Satan, but are yielded up to God for his ends and uſes, Rom. 6. 19. And thus you have the third thing in the deſcription made out alſo, that it is an univerſal, as well as a real Change But then,

4. Laſtly, you muſt know that by this change God prepares a Man for Choice and Excellent ſervices; and this indeed is the main thing deſign'd in this Chapter, and is the Reſult and Iſſue of all that hath hitherto been ſaid about this work of Grace.

Beloved, can you imagine that God would employ his Infinite and Glorious Power, to produce this new Creature in ſuch an excellent nature, it being the Maſter-piece of all his works of Wonder wrought upon Man, and not aim at ſome ſingular Uſe, and excellent End? Every wiſe Agent deſigns ſome End; and what God aims at he hath told us, Iſa. 43. 21. Epheſ. 2. 20. And accordingly he expects ſingular things from ſuch Perſons, Mat. 5. 47. If God had not aimed at ſome new Service, he need not have made a new Creature: the old Creature was fit enough for the old uſe and ſervice it was employed in. But God hath ſome choice ſervice to be done, wherein he will be glorified, he will have his Name glorified, even in this world, by the active and paſſive obedience of his People. But this being far above all the power of Nature, God therefore brings them forth in a New and Heavenly nature, endowed with rare ſupernatural and Divine Qualities, by which it is fitted and excellently prepared for any Service of God, by doing or by ſuffering which before he had no fitneſs or ability for.

The very Make and Conſtitution of this New Creature ſpeaks its uſe and end: As now, if a Man look upon a Sword or Knife (ſuppoſing he had never ſeen either before) yet, I ſay, by viewing the ſhape and properties of it, he will ſay, this was made to cut. Even ſo here, this new Creature was formed for ſome glorious and ſingular ſervice for God, to which it is exceedingly advantaged, whether God put you upon doing or ſuffering. If you ask wherein this Advantage of the new Creature to Honour God either way lies: I anſwer, It principally conſiſts in its heavenly inclination, or natural tendency to God. This is its great advantage: For by vertue of this:

1. If God call a Man to any Duty, there is a Principle within, cloſing with the Command without, and moving the Soul freely and ſpontaneouſly to duty, Pſal. 27. 8. If God ſay, Seek my Face, Such an heart ecchoes to the call, Thy Face Lord will I ſeek. And this is it which is call'd, The writing of Gods law in the heart, Jer. 31. 33. And muſt needs be a mighty advantage; for now its work is its delight and wages, Pſal. 19. 11. The Command to ſuch a Soul is not grievous, 1 John 5. 3. And by this it's kept from tiring in duty, and being weary of its work; as you ſee what pains Children can take at play, how they will run and ſweat, and endure knocks and falls, and take no notice of it; put them upon any manual labour, and they cannot endure half ſo much. When our Work is our delight, we never faint nor tire at it. This inclination to God is to the Soul as wings to a bird, or ſails to a ſhip. This carries the Soul eaſily through every duty. O there is a vaſt difference betwixt a man that works for wages, and one whoſe work is wages to him. And here you may at once ſee wherein the principal difference betwixt the Hypocrite and the real Chriſtian lies in the performance of duty; and alſo have a true account of the reaſon why one perſeveres in his work to the end, when the other flags. Why, here is the true account of both; the one is moved to duty from a natural inclination to it, the other is forced upon it by ſome external motives: For the Hypocrite takes not delight in the ſpiritual and inward part of duty, but is ſecretly weary of it, Mal. 1. 13. only his ambition and ſelf-ends put him upon it as a task. But now the upright heart goes to God as his joy, Pſal. 43. 4. And ſaith, It is good for me to draw nigh to God, Pſal. 73. ult. When the Sabbath comes, (that Golden ſpot of the the Week) oh how he longs to ſee the beauty of the Lord in his Ordinances! Pſal 27. 4. And when engaged in the Worſhip of God, he cannot ſatisfie himſelf in Bodily Service, or to ſerve God in the oldneſs of the letter. He knoweth that this perſwaſion cometh not of him that called him, Gal. 5. 7, 8. He labours to engage his heart to approach to God, Jer. 30. 21. And hence thoſe mountings of heart, and violent ſallies of the deſires heavenward. And thus you ſee one rare advantage to glorifie God actively, flowing from the inclination of this new Creature.

2. But then ſecondly; Hence in like manner hath the Soul as great an advantage for ſufferings: For this new Creature having ſuch a natural tendency to God, will enable the Soul, in which it is to break its way to God through all the interpoſing obſtacles and diſcouragements. What are perſecutions, what are reproaches, what are the fears and frowns of enemies, but ſo many blocks thrown in the Souls way to keep it from God and duty? And indeed where this Principal of Grace is wanting, they prove inacceſſible Mountains. Graceleſs hearts are ſtalled and quite diſcouraged by them; but now this tendency of the Soul to God enables the Chriſtian to break his way through all. You may ſay of him in ſuch a caſe, as the Hiſtorian doth of Hannibal (who forced away over the Alps with Fire and Vinegar) either he will find a way, or make a way; Shall Sword or Famine; or any other Creature ſeparate me from Chriſt? ſaith an upright Soul. No, no, it will through all to him, and that from this tendency of his new Nature. You ſee in Nature, every thing hath a tendency to its center; Fire will up, do what you can to ſuppreſs it; Water will to the Sea, if it meet with Dams, yea Mountains in its way; if it cannot bear them down it will creep about ſome other way, and wind and turn to find a paſſage to the Sea. God is the center of all gracious Spirits, and Grace will carry the Soul through all to him. This is Grace, and this is your advantage by it in the moſt difficult part of your work. It will carry you through all; make the hardeſt work eaſie and pleaſant, 2 Cor. 12. 10. And if great ſufferings or temptations interpoſe betwixt you and your God, it will break through all, and enable you to withſtand all; as it did Paul in the Text, who forced his way not only through the Fury of Enemies, but alſo through the entreaties and tears of Friends.

CHAP. VII.

In which the neceſſity of getting clear Evidences of this work of Grace in us, in order to our readineſs for ſufferings is held forth; the nature of that Evidence opened, and divers things that Cloud and obſcure it, removed out of the way.

I Have done with habitual readineſs, conſiſting in an inwrought work of Graces. The following particulars are the thing in which our actual readineſs lies. And of them that which comes next to be handled, is the getting of clear Evidences in our own Souls that this work hath been wrought on us, this will exceedingly tend to your ſtrengthning, and comfort in a ſuffering hour. Bleſſed Paul, who here profeſſeth himſelf ready both for Bonds and Death, was clear in this point. 2 Tim. 1. 12. 2 Tim. 4. 6, 7. And indeed had he been cloudy and dark in this, he could not have ſaid, I am Ready. No, no, he had been in an ill caſe to undertake that Journey to Jeruſalem: And thou wilt find it a ſingular advantage in dark and difficult days to have all clear and right within. Now for the opening of this, I will ſhew:

1. What the Evidence or Manifeſtation of the work of Grace is.

2. How it appears to be of ſuch great advantage to a ſuffering Saint.

3. Preſcribe ſome Rules for the obtaining of it.

1. What it is. And in ſhort it's nothing elſe but the Spirits ſhining upon his own work in the hearts of Believers, thereby enabling them ſenſibly to ſee and feel it to their own Satisfaction. And this is expreſt in Scripture under a pleaſant variety of Metaphors. Sometimes it is called the ſhedding abroad of the love of God in the heart, Rom. 5. 5. ſometimes the lifting up of the light of Gods countenance, Pſal. 4. 6. and ſometimes it's expreſt without a Trope by Chriſts manifeſting himſelf to the Soul, John 14. 21.

For the opening of it, I deſire you would conſider theſe ſix things.

1. That it is attainable by Believers in this life, and that in a very high degree and meaſure. Many of the Saints have had it in a full meaſure, 1. Cor. 2. 12. 1 John 3. 24. John 21. 15.

2. Though it be attainable by Believers, yet it is a thing ſeparable from true Grace, and many precious Souls have gone mourning for the want of it, Iſa. 50. 10. This was ſometimes the caſe of Heman, David, Job, and multitudes more.

3. During its continuance, it is the ſweeteſt thing in the world. It ſwallows up all Troubles, and doubles all other comforts: It puts more gladneſs into the heart, than the increaſe of Corn and Wine, Pſal. 4. 6. Suavis hora, ſed brevis mora; ſapit quidem ſuaviſſimè, ſed guſtatur Rariſſimè, Bern.

4. Both in the Continuation and removal of it the Spirits acts arbitrarily. No man can ſay how long he ſhall walk in this pleaſant Light, Pſal. 30. 7. By thy Favour thou haſt made my Mountain ſtand ſtrong, thou biddeſt thy face, and I was troubled. And when in darkneſs, none can ſay how long it will be e're that ſweet light break forth again. God can ſcatter the Cloud unexpectedly in a moment, Cant. 3. 4. It was but a little that I paſſed from them, but I found him whom my Soul loveth. There is ſuch an obſervable difference in David's Spirit in ſome Pſalms, as if one man had written the beginning, and another the end of them.

5. Though God can quickly remove the darkneſs and doubts of a Soul, yet ordinarily the Saints find it a very hard and difficult thing to obtain and preſerve the Evidences of their Graces. Such is the darkneſs, deadneſs, and deceitfulneſs of the heart; ſo much unevenneſs and inconſtancy in their practice, ſo many counterfeits of Grace, and ſo many wiles and devices of Satan to rob them of their peace, that few (in compariſon) live in a conſtant and quiet fruition of it.

6. Notwithſtanding all theſe things which increaſe the difficulty, yet God hath afforded his people a ſure Light, and ſufficient means, in the diligent uſe and improvement whereof they may attain a certainty of the work of Grace in them. And there is a threefold Light by which it may moſt clearly and infallibly be diſcovered.

1. Scripture Light, which is able to diſcover the ſecrets of a mans heart to him; and is therefore compared to the Anatomizers Knife, Heb. 4. 12.

2. The Innate light of Grace it ſelf; or if you will the light of experience, 1 John 5. 10. It hath ſome properties and operations which are as eſſential, neceſſary, and inſeparable, as heat is to the fire, and may be as ſenſibly felt and perceived by the Soul, Pſal. 119. 20.

3. The Light of the Spirit, ſuperadded to both the former, which is ſometimes called its Earneſt, ſometimes its Seal. The Spirit doth both plant the habits, excite and draw forth the acts, and alſo ſhine upon his own work that the Soul may ſee it; and that ſometimes with ſuch a degree of light as only begets peace, and quiets the heart though it do not fully conquer all the doubts of it. And at other times the heart is irradiated with ſo clear a Beam of light that it's able to draw forth the Triumphant Concluſion, and ſay, Now I know the things that are freely given me of God: I believe, and am ſure.

And ſo much briefly for the opening of the nature of this Evidence.

2. I ſhall ſhew you the neceſſity of it to a ſuffering Saint, in order to the right management of a ſuffering condition.

And this will appear by the conſideration of five things.

1 Dem. You will readily grant that the Chriſtians love to God hath a mighty influence into all his ſufferings for God. This Grace of Love enables him victoriouſly to break through all difficulties and diſcouragements. The flouds cannot drown it, nor the Waters quench it, Cant. 8. verſe 6, 7. It facilitates the greateſt hardſhips, 1 John 5. ver. 3. And whatever a Man ſuffer, if it be not from this Principle, it is neither acceptable to God, nor available to himſelf, 1 Cor. 13. 3.

But now nothing more inflames and quickens the Chriſtians love to God, than the knowledge of his intereſt in him, and the ſenſible perception and taſte of his love to the Soul Our love to God is but a reflection of his own love; and the more powerful the ſtroke of the direct Beam is, the more is that of the reflex Beam alſo. Never doth that Flame of Jah burn with a more vehement heat, than when the Soul hath the moſt clear Manifeſtations of its intereſt in Chriſt and his Benefits, Luke 7. 47.

2. Dem. It muſt needs be of ſingular uſe to a ſuffering Saint, becauſe it takes out the ſinking weight of affliction. That which ſinks and breaks the Spirit, is the conjunction and meeting of inward and outward troubles together; then if the Lord do not ſtrangely and extraordinarily ſupport the Soul, it's wrackt and overwhelmed as the Ship in which Paul ſailed was, when it fell into a place where two Seas met, Acts 27. 41. Oh how tempeſtuous a Sea doth that Soul ſail in, that hath fightings without, and fears within! How muſt that poor Chriſtians heart tremble and meditate terrour, that when he retires from troubles without, for ſome comfort and ſupport within, ſhall find a ſad Addition to his troubles from whence he expected relief againſt them! Hence it was that Jeremy ſo earneſtly deprecates ſuch a miſery, Be not thou a terrour to me, thou art my hope in the day of evil, Jer. 17. 17. This is prevented by this means: If a Man have a clear breaſt, and all be quiet within, he is like one that hath a good Roof over his head when the Storm falls. We glory in tribulation, becauſe the love of God is ſhed abroad in our Hearts, Rom. 5. 3, 5.

3 Dem. It is a Fountain of joy and comfort in the darkeſt and ſadeſt hour. Hence the glorious triumphs of Saints in their afflictions, Rom. 5. 5. And in the Chriſtians joy in the Lord, lies much of his ſtrength for ſufferings, Neh. 8. 10. If once the Spirit droop and ſink, the man is in a bad caſe to ſuffer: Holy joy; it is the oyl that makes the Chariot-wheels of the Soul free to follow the Lord, Non tardat uncta rota. To ſuffer with joyfulneſs for Chriſt is a qualification that Gods Eye is much upon in his ſuffering Servants, Col. 1. 11. How did the famous Worthies that went before us magnifie Chriſt, and glorifie religion by their holy triumphs of their Faith and Joy under Tribulation! One kiſs'd the Apparator that brought him news of his Condemnation, and was like a man tranſported with an exceſs of Joy. Another upon the pronouncing of the Sentence kneels down, and with Hands and Eyes lifted up, ſolemnly bleſſes God for ſuch a day as that. Oh how is Chriſt magnified by this; And this cannot be until intereſt be cleared. It's true, the faith of Recumbency gives the Soul a ſecreet ſupport, and enables the Chriſtian to live; but the faith of Evidence keeps him lively, and prevents all thoſe uncomfortable and uncomely ſinkings and deſpondencies of Spirit, 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17. And therefore cannot but be of a ſingular uſe to a Soul at ſuch a time.

4 Dem. Laſtly, it is of ſpecial uſe to a Chriſtian under Sufferings, inaſmuch as it enables him to repel the temptations that attend tend upon ſufferings. Nothing ſets a keener edge upon his indignation againſt unworthy compliances, than this. Indeed a poor Cloudy and dubious Chriſtian will be apt to catch at deliverance, though upon terms diſhonourable to Chriſt: but he that is clear in point of intereſt, abhors compoſitions and capitulations upon unworthy terms and conditions, Heb. 11 35. Heb. 10. 34. He that ſees the gain and reward of ſuffering, will think he is offered to his loſs, when life and deliverance are ſet before him upon ſuch hard terms as ſin is.

And thus you ſee what influence it hath into a ſuffering condition.

3. In the next place I promiſed to preſcribe ſome Rules for the attaining of this Evidence, and the diſpelling of thoſe doubts by which it is uſually clouded in the Souls of Believers. And oh, that by the faithful uſe of them you may attain it, againſt a ſuffering day come upon you.

1 Rule. And the firſt Rule I ſhall give you is this, make it your buſineſs to improve Grace more; for the more vigorous it is, the more evidential it muſt needs be, 2 Pet. 1. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11. Oh how much time have many Chriſtians ſpent in inquiring after the loweſt ſigns of ſincerity, and what may conſiſt with Grace: Which had they ſpent in the diligent improvement of the means of Grace for the increaſing of it, they would have found it a ſhorter cut to peace and comfort by much.

Miſtake not the Rule, by which you are to try your ſelves, leſt you give a falſe judgment upon your ſelves. Some are apt to make thoſe things ſigns of Grace, which are not; and when the falſeneſs of them is detected, how is that poor Soul plunged into doubts and fears, that leaned upon them? As now, If a man ſhould conclude his ſincerity from his diligence in attending on the Word preached; this is but a Paralogiſm (as the Apoſtles calls it) Jam. 1. 22. By which a man deceiveth his own Soul: For that which is a note or mark, muſt be proper to the thing notified, and not common to any thing elſe. There are divers ſorts of marks; ſome are excluſive, the principal uſe of which is to convince bold pretenders, and diſcover Hypocrites: Such is that, 1 Cor. 9. 9. It is a moſt certain ſign where theſe are, there is no Grace; but yet it will not follow on the contrary, that where theſe are not, there is Grace. See Luke 18. 11. Others are incluſive, the uſe of which is not ſo much for trying of the truth, as the ſtrength and degrees of Grace. As now, when Faith is deſcribed by the radiancy of it, or by ſome of its heroick acts, and promiſes made to ſome raiſed degrees and operations of it; as that, Epheſ. 3. 12. &c. Here a miſtake is eaſily made. Beſides theſe, or rather betwixt theſe, are another ſort of marks, which are called poſitive marks; and theſe agreeing to the loweſt degree of Grace, are for the tryal of the truth and ſincerity of it. Such are theſe, 1 John 4. 13. 1 John 2. 3. Matth. 5. 3. Be ſure to try by a proper mark.

3 Rule. Take heed of ſuch ſins as violate and waſte the Conſcience; for theſe will quickly raiſe a Miſt, and involve the Soul in Clouds and darkneſs, Pſal. 51. 8. &c. Such are ſins againſt Light, and the reclamations of Conſcience.

4 Rule. Labour to ſhun thoſe common miſtakes that Chriſtians make in Judging of their ſtate; amongſt which I ſhall ſelect theſe five as principal ones.

1. Call not your condition into queſtion upon every failing, and involuntary lapſe into ſin. Iniquities prevail againſt me, as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away, Pſal. 65. 3. In ſhort, thou needeſt not call thy Condition into queſtion, provided thou find thy Spirit working as Paul's did under the ſurprizals of temptation: viz. If (1) thou do approve of and delight in the Law, though thou fall ſhort of it in thy Practice, Rom. 7. 12, 14. (2) If thy failings be involuntary, and againſt the Reſolution and bent of thy Soul, verſ. 25. 18, 19. (3) If it be the load and burthen of thy Soul, verſ. 24. (4) If the thoughts of deliverance comfort thee, verſe 25.

2. Queſtion not the truth of thy Grace, becauſe it was not wrought in the ſame way and manner in thee, as in others: For there is great variety, as to the circumſtances of time and manner, betwixt the Spirits operations upon one and another. Compare the Hiſtory of Paul's Converſion with that of the Jaylor, Zacheus, or Lydia, and ſee the variety of circumſtances.

3. Conclude not that you have no Grace becauſe you feel not thoſe tranſports and raviſhing joys that other Chriſtians ſpeak of. If thou canſt not ſay as Paul doth, Rom. 8. 38. Yet bleſs God, if thou canſt but breath forth ſuch language as that, Mark 9. 24. Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief.

4. Say not thou haſt no Grace, becauſe of the high attainments of ſame Hypocrites, who in ſome things may excel thee. When ſome perſons read the ſixth Chapter to the Hebrews, they are ſtartled to ſee to what a glorious height the Hypocrite may ſoar; not conſidering that there are theſe three things wherein they excel the moſt glorious Hypocrite in the world. (1.) That Self was never dethroned in Hypocrites, as it is in them. All that an Hypocrite doth is for himſelf. (2) The Hypocrite never hated every ſin, as he doth; but hath ſtill ſome Agag, Rimmon, or Delilab. (3) That the Hypocrite never acted in duty from the bent and inclination of a new nature, taking delight in heavenly imployment, but is moved rather as a Clock by the weights and poiſes of ſome external motives and advantages.

5. Conclude not you have no Grace, becauſe you grow not ſo ſenſibly as ſome other Chriſtians do. You may be divers ways miſtaken about this. (1) You may meaſure your growth by your deſires, and then it appears nothing; for the Chriſtian aims high, and graſps at all. (2.) Or by comparing your ſelves with ſuch as have larger Capacities, Time, and Advantages, than you. (3.) Or by comparing your Graces with other Mens Gifts, which you miſtake for their Graces. (4) Or by thinking that all growth is upward in Joy, Peace, and Comfort; whereas you may grow in Mortification and Humility, which is as true a growth as the former. Oh! take heed of theſe miſtakes; they have been very prejudicial to the peace of many Chriſtians.

5. Rule. Laſtly, Decline not ſufferings when God gives you a fair call to them. Oh! the Chriſtians ſuffering time is commonly his cleareſt and moſt comfortable time. Then the Spirit of God and glory relieth on them, 1 Pet. 4. 14. That which hath been in ſuſpence for ſome years, is decided and cleared in a ſuffering hour. And thus I have ſhewed you how to attain this neceſſary qualification alſo.

CHAP. VIII.

Diſcovering the neceſſity of an improved faith for the right management of ſufferings, and directing to ſome ſpecial means for the improvement thereof.

THE next thing conducing to our actual readineſs for Sufferings, is the improvement of Faith to ſome conſiderable degree of ſtrength. This is the Grace that muſt do the main ſervice in ſuch an hour, as hath the principal hand in ſupporting the Chriſtian under every burden. This the Grace that Crowns our Heads with Victory in the day of battle, Epheſ 6. 16. Above all taking the ſhield of Faith. It's true, every grace is of uſe, and contributes aſſiſtance: Suffering Saints have been beholding to them all. But of this we may ſay, as Soloman of the Vertuous Woman; Though many Graces have done excellently, yet this excels them all. In this Grace ready Paul was eminent. It was the life he daily lived, Gal. 2. 20. Oh! It is a precious Grace, 2 Pet. 1. 1. So precious that Chriſt who ſeldom admired at any thing, yet wondred at this, Mat. 8. 10. A victorious Grace it is that overcomes all difficulties, Mark 9. 23. By this Sword it was that all thoſe famous Heroes, Heb. 11. atchieved all thoſe glorious Conqueſts; and in every diſtreſs it may ſay to the Soul, as Chriſt to the Diſciples, John 15. 5. Without me you can do nothing. This is that Sword that hath obtained ſo many Victories over the World, 1 John 5. 4. And that truſty Shield that hath quenched ſo many deadly Darts of temptation, has been levelled at the very Heart of the Chriſtian in the day of Battle. By it a Chriſtian lives, when all outward ſenſible comforts die, Heb. 2. 4. It's the ground upon which the Chriſtian fixes his foot, and never fails under him, 2 Cor. 1. 24. The neceſſity of it will more clearly appear, by conſidering how many ways it relieves the Soul in trouble, and diſburthens the Heart of all its ſinking loads and preſſures: There are two things that ſink a Man's Spirit when under Sufferings; viz. The greatneſs of the Troubles, and the weakneſs of the Soul to bear them; againſt both which, Faith relieves the Soul, viz. by making a weak Soul ſtrong, and heavy Troubles light.

Firſt, It makes a weak Soul ſtrong and able to bear; and this it doth divers ways.

1. By purging out of the Soul thoſe enfeebling and weakening Diſtempers; not only guilt in general, which is to the Soul, as a Wound upon the bearing Shoulder, Rom. 5 1. The removal whereof enables the Soul to bear any other burden, Iſa. 33. 24. But it alſo removes Fear, that Tyrant Paſſion, that cuts the Nerves of the Soul. For, as Faith comes in, ſo Fear goes out: Look in what degree the Fear of God is aſcendant in the Soul, proportionably the ſinful Fear of the Creature declines and vaniſheth, Iſa. 8. 12, 13. This Fear extinguiſhes that, as the Sun-ſhine puts out fire, The Righteous is bold as a Lyon, Prov. 28. 1. The ככפיר ſignifies a young Lyon in his hot blood, that knows no ſuch thing as fear: And look how much of the Soul is empty of Faith, ſo much it's filled with fear: Why are ye fearful, O ye of little Faith? Mat. 8. 26. Certainly, it's a rare advantage, to be freed from the common diſtraction, in times of common deſtruction: and this advantage the Soul hath by Faith.

2. It ſtrengthens the Soul to bear Afflictions and hardſhips, not only by purging out its weakning Diſtempers, but by turning it ſelf to Chriſt, in whom all its ſtrength lies, and that ſuitably to the ſeveral Exigencies of the Soul, in all its Diſtreſſes. Doth Darkneſs, like the ſhaddow of death, overſpread the Earth, and all the Lights of Earthly Comforts diſappear, then Faith ſupports the Heart, by looking to the Lord, Mic. 7. 7. And this look of Faith exceedingly revives the Heart, Pſal. 34. 5. And enlightens the Soul. Doth God pluck away all Earthly Props from under your feet, and leave you nothing viſible to reſt upon; in that Exigence Faith puts forth a ſuitable Act, viz. Reſting or ſtaying upon God, Eſa 26. 3. and by this the Soul comes to be quieted and eſtabliſhed. Pſal. 125. 1. Do temptations ſtrive to put off the Soul from Chriſt, and diſcourage it from leaning upon the Promiſe? Then it puts forth an act of Reſolution, Job. 13. 15. And ſo breaks its way through that diſcouragement; Or hath the Soul been long ſeeking God for deliverance out of Trouble, and ſtill there is ſilence in Heaven, no Anſwer comes; but inſtead of an Anſwer, comes a Temptation, to throw up the Duty, and ſeek to deliver it ſelf? Then Faith puts forth another Act upon Chriſt, ſuitable to this diſtreſs, viz. An act of waiting, Iſa. 49. 23. Which waiting is oppoſed to that ſinful haſte which the Soul is tempted to, Iſa. 28. 16. Or doth God at any time call the Soul forth to ſome difficult Service, againſt which the Fleſh and Carnal Reaſon diſpute and plead? Now Faith helps the Soul, by putting forth an act of Obedience; and that whilſt Carnal Reaſon ſtands by diſſatisfied, Gal. 1. 16. And hence it is, that Obedience carries the name of Faith upon it, to ſhew its deſcent, Rom. 16. 26 Faith encourages the Soul to obey, not only by urging God's Command, but by giving it God's Warrant for its Indempnity, Heb. 11. 24, 25, 26. Or doth a poor Believer find himſelf over-matched by Troubles and Temptations, and his own inherent ſtrength begin to fail under the burden? Then Faith leads him to an Omnipotent God, and ſo ſecures him from fainting under his Trouble, Pſal. 61. 2. In the Lord is everlaſting ſtrength. El Shaddai, is a Name of encouragement to a feeble Soul, Iſa. 40. 29, 30, 31. And thus you ſee the firſt particular made good, viz. What a ſtrengthning influence it hath unto a weak Soul.

Secondly, In the next place, let us ſee how it lightens the Chriſtians Burthen, as well as ſtrengthens his Back to bear.

And certainly, This Grace of Faith doth ſtrangely alter the very Nature of Sufferings, taking away both the heavineſs and horrour of them; and this it doth divers ways

1. By committing the buſineſs to Chriſt, and leaving the matter with him; and ſo quitting the Soul of all thoſe anxieties and perturbations, which are the very burden and weight of affliction, Pſal. 37. 5. For certainly, that which ſinks us in days of Trouble, is rather from within, from our unruly, ſeditious, and clamorous thoughts, than from the troubles themſelves with which we conflict: But by committing the matter to God, the Soul is quickly brought to reſt.

2. By diſcovering much preſent good in our Troubles; the more good Faith diſcovers in a Trouble, the more ſupportable and eaſie it makes it to the Soul. Now Faith brings in a comfortable Report, that they are not only Evils, as the Troubles of the Wicked are, Ezek. 7. 5. But have an allay and mixture of much good, Heb. 12. 10. Iſa. 27. 9.

3. By fore-ſeeing the end and final removal of them, and that near at hand, 2 Cor. 4. 17. That which daunts and amazes Men in times of Trouble, is, that they can ſee no end of them, Hence the Heart faints, and Hands hang down through diſcouragement: But now Faith brings the joyful tidings of the end of Troubles, and ſaith to the Soul, Why art thou caſt down, O my Soul? and why ſo diſquieted and diſcouraged within me? as if thy ſufferings were like the ſufferings of the Damned, endleſs and everlaſting, whereas they are but for a moment; Yet a little, a very little while, and he that ſhall come, will come, and will not tarry, Heb. 10. 37. Yet a little while, and then the days of thy mourning ſhall be over.

4. By comparing our ſufferings with the ſufferings of others, which exceedingly deminiſheth and ſhrinks them up; ſometimes the Believer compares his ſufferings with Chriſts, and then he is aſhamed that ever he ſhould complain and droop under them. Oh! ſaith he, What is that, to that which the Lord Jeſus ſuffered for me? He ſuffered in all his Members, Head, Hands, Side, Feet, from all Hands, Friends and Enemies, in all his Offices; Yea, in his Soul, as well as in his Body: And indeed the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his ſufferings: Sometimes he compares them with the ſufferings of others of the Saints in former Ages: When he reads in Faith the Hiſtory of their Perſecutions, he is ſhamed out of his Complaints, and ſaith, Am I better than my Fathers? Sometimes he compares them with the ſufferings of the Damned: Oh what is this to the everlaſting burnings! What is a Priſon to Hell? How light and eaſie is it to ſuffer for Chriſt, in compariſon of thoſe ſufferings which are from Chriſt? And thus the Soul is quieted, and the Terrour of ſufferings abated.

5. Faith entitles Chriſt to the Believers ſufferings, and puts them upon his ſcore; and ſo it exceedingly transforms and alters them: Ah! it's no ſmall Relief, when a man can hold up the Bible, as that Martyr did at the Stake, and ſay, This is that which hath brought me hither: Or, as the Pſalmiſt, For thy ſake we are killed all the day long: Or, as the Apoſtle, Col. 1. 14. I fill up that which is behind of the ſufferings of Chriſt in my fleſh.

6. Laſtly, Faith engages the preſence of God, to be and abide with the Soul in all its ſolitudes and ſufferings: It lays hold upon the Promiſes made to that Purpoſe, Pſal. 23. 2. Iſa. 43. 2. Heb. 13. 5. John 14. 18. And whileſt a poor Soul enjoys this, the very ſenſe of Troubles is ſwallowed up.

And thus I have given ſome brief hints, how Faith relieves and ſtrengthens the Soul in a ſuffering hour: The next thing is to direct you how to improve this excellent Grace, that it may do you ſuch ſervice as this in a time of need: And, in order thereunto, I ſhall give you theſe Seven Directions.

1. Attend diligently upon the Miniſtration of the Goſpel, which is not only the procreant, but alſo the conſerving cauſe of Faith, 1 Pet. 2. 2. The Doctrine of Faith, is the Food and Nutriment of the Grace of Faith: There are its Rules, its Encouragements, its Cordials. Thence Faith takes and treaſures up its Michtams, to which it hath recourſe in times of need: Every Attribute, Command or Promiſe, that ſhines forth there, is a diſh for Faith to feed on, but all together are a Royal Feaſt; Pſal. 63. 5. Some ſay the Land of Judea is called the Land of the Living, in Pſal. 27. 13. In reſpect of the Ordinances of God, which that People enjoyed. Certain it is, they are the great Inſtruments of quickning Souls at firſt, and preſerving that life it ſo begat in them: But then be ſure they have Chriſt's Stamp upon them, and that they be miniſtred by his own Officers, and in his own way: And ſo you may reaſonably expect more Fruits and Influences from them, than from all private gifts and helps in the World: For the Lord loveth the Gates of Zion, more than all the Dwellings of Jacob. Pſal. 87. 2. And all private helps may ſay, in compariſon of Chriſt's publick Ordinances, as Gideon ſaid to the Men of Ephraim, Judg. 8. 2. What have we done in compariſon of you?

2. Improve well your Sacrament Seaſons, thoſe Harveſt-days of Faith: This Ordinance hath a direct and peculiar tendency to the improvement and ſtrengthning of Faith. It is a Pledge ſuperadded to the Promiſe for Faiths ſake: Heavenly and ſublime Myſteries do therein ſtoop down to your Senſes, that you may have the clearer apprehenſions of them; and the clearer the apprehenſions are, the ſtronger the aſſent of Faith muſt needs be: By this Seal alſo the Promiſe comes to be more ratified to us; and the firmer the Promiſe appears to the Soul, the more bold and adventurous Faith is in caſting it ſelf upon it: Oh! how many poor doubting trembling Souls have in ſuch a Seaſon gathered the full ripe fruits of Aſſurance, from the Top-boughs of that Ordinance!

3. Frequent actings of Faith, are rare and ſpecial means of improving it: To him that hath (i. e.) that improves and uſes what he hath, ſhall be given, Mat. 25. 29. This was the way by which Paul thrived in Faith, and every other Grace ſo exceedingly, that he out-grew them that were in Chriſt before him, 1 Cor. 15. 10. It's true, that its beginning in the Soul, is not after the manner of other Habits, either Moral or Natural: This is not of Natural Acquiſition, but by Divine Infuſion: But yet its Improvement is in the ſame manner. Oh then! if ever you would have a flouriſhing Faith, rouze it up out of the dull Habit, and live in the daily exerciſe of it.

4. Go to Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Author and Finiſher of Faith, and cry to him as Mark 9. 24. Lord increaſe my Faith: Yea, beg the Aſſiſtance of others Prayers in this behalf, as the Apoſtle did, 1 Theſ. 3. 10. 2 Theſ. 1. 11. Faith animates Prayer, and Prayer increaſes Faith.

5. Improve times of Affliction for the increaſe of Faith: For certainly, Sanctified Afflictions do notably exerciſe and increaſe this Grace, 1 Pet. 1. 7. In times of Proſperity, we know not what ſtock of Faith we have: We live ſo much upon things ſeen, that we cannot many times tell whether we have Faith or no: But when difficult days come, then we muſt get out our whole Subſiſtence and Livelihood by Faith, Hab. 2. 4. Yea, then we have many proofs and experiments of God's Fidelity in the Promiſes, which is a choice help to Faith, 2 Cor. 1. 10.

6. Keep Catalogues of all your remarkable Experiences; treaſure them up as food for your Faith in time to come: Oh! it is a ſigular encouragement and heartning to Faith, when it can turn over the Records of God's dealing with you in Years paſt, and ſay as Joſhua, Not one thing hath failed, Joſ. 23. 14. When it can ſay ſo of Promiſes, that have already had their Accompliſhments, then they will be apt to ſay concerning thoſe yet to be accompliſhed, as Elizabeth ſaid to Mary, Luke 1: 45. Bleſſed is the Soul that believeth, for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which are told it by the Lord.

Theſe Experiments are the Food of Faith: Pſal. 74. 14. Thou breakeſt the Heads of Leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be meat to thy People inhabiting the Wilderneſs, (i. e.) That famous Experience of the Power and Love of God in their Red-Sea deliverance, where he deſtroyed that Sea-Monſter Pharaoh, and his Hoſt, was Meat to the Faith of God's Iſrael in the Wilderneſs afterwards. We often find Chriſt charging the Peoples unbelief on a Memory, Mat. 16. 8, 9. And hence it was, that the Lord commanded the Iſraelites to keep Journals of every days Occurences, Numb. 13. 1, 2. It is a thouſand Pities ſuch choice helps ſhould be loſt. Oh! if you could but remember, how the Lord hath appeared for you in former Exigencies, and how often he hath ſhamed you for your unbelief, it would exceedingly animate your Faith both in preſent and future diſtreſſes, Mic. 6. 5.

7. Laſtly, Beware of Senſe, which is the ſupplanter of Faith. O if you live upon things Earthly, you put Faith out of its Office: Things Earthly have an Enmity to Faith. This is the Victory by which we overcome the World, even our Faith, 1 John 5. 4 Overcoming notes a Conflict, and Conflicts infers Oppoſitions. Oh you that live ſo much by ſight and ſenſe on things viſible, what will you do when in David's or Paul's Caſe, Pſal. 142. 4. 2 Tim. 4. 16. When all outward Encouragements and ſtays ſhall utterly fail. What had Abraham done, if he had not been able to believe againſt Hope, i. e. ſuch an hope as is founded in Senſe and Reaſon.

Reader, I adviſe and charge thee in the Name of the Lord, and as thou hopeſt to live when viſible comforts die, that thou be diligent in the improvement and preparation of this excellent Grace of Faith: if it fail, thou faileſt with it; and as thy Faith is, ſo art thou. Conſult all the Cloud of Witneſſes, and ſee if thou canſt find a Man among them, that did not atchieve the Victory by his Faith. Had they not all been run down by the furious aſſaults of Temptation, and inſtead of a Cloud of Witneſſes, been ſo many Pillars of Salt, and Monuments of reproach and ſhame to Religion, if their Faith had failed in its Tryal.

CHAP. IX.

Wherein the neceſſity and uſefulneſs of Chriſtian Fortitude in order to Sufferings, is evinced with a brief account of its nature and the means of attaining it.

THE next Grace which concurs to the compleating of our actual Readineſs for Sufferings, is Chriſtian Fortitude, or holy Courage; which muſt ſay in thy Heart in a time of danger, as Elijah once did, As the Lord lives I will ſhew my ſelf. This alſo is a choice part of your preparation work. In this grace our Apoſtle was eminent: When he was told, Bonds and Afflictions waited for him; he could ſay, That none of thoſe things moved him, Acts 20. 24. Yea, when he was to appear before the Lyon Nero, and not a Man would own or ſtand by him, yet he ſtands his Ground, reſolving rather to die on the place*, than diſhonourably to recede from his Principles and Profeſſion, 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17. He ſet the World, with all its Threats and Terrours, lower than it ſet him. Oh how conſpicuous was this Grace in all thoſe Heroes that have paſt on before us! And if ever you hope to ſtand in the evil day, and be fetched off the Field with Honour, you muſt rouze up and awaken your Courage for God: And the neceſſity thereof will appear upon theſe four Conſiderations.

1. Becauſe the ſucceſs and prevalence of Satan's Temptations in the hour of Perſecution depends upon the fainting and overthrow of this Grace. Wherefore doth he raiſe Perſecutions in the World, but becauſe ſuch terrible things are fitted to work upon the paſſion of Carnal Fear, which riſes with thoſe dangers, and makes the Soul as a tumultuous Sea. This is it he aims at, Neh.

6, 13. This is a multiplying Paſſion, that repreſents dangers more and greater than they are, and ſo drives the Soul into the very Net and Snare laid by the Devil to take it. Prov. 29.25. The fear of Man brings a Snare; which was ſadly exemplified in Abraham, Gen. 12. 12. And divers others of the Saints. If he can but ſubdue this Grace, he will quickly bring you to capitulate for Life and Liberty upon the baſeſt and moſt diſhonourable terms; therefore the preparation of this Grace is ſo exceedingly neceſſary.

2. Becauſe this is the Grace that honours Jeſus Chriſt abundantly, when you are brought upon the Stage for him.

There is a great Solemnity at the ſuffering and tryal of a Saint: Heaven, Earth, and Hell are Spectators, obſerving the Iſſue, and how the Saints will acquit themſelves in that Hour. We are made a ſpectacle, ſaith the Apoſtle. The word is, Θέατρον ἐγενήθημεν, we are ſet as upon a Theatre in publick view, 1 Cor. 4 9. God, Angels, and Saints, wait to ſee the glorious Triumphs of their Faith and Courage, reflecting Honour upon the Name and Cauſe of Chriſt. Devils and wicked Men gape for an advantage by their Cowardize. Certainly very much lies now upon the Chriſtians hands. Should he faint and give ground, how will it furniſh the triumphs of Hell, and make Chriſt's Enemies vaunt over him, as if his Love ran ſo low in the Hearts of his People, that they durſt not adventure any thing for him: Or if notwithſtanding their brave words and glorious Profeſſion, they durſt not truſt their own Principles when it comes to the Trial! But if now they play the Men, and diſcover an holy Gallantry of Spirit and Reſolution for Chriſt, how will it daunt the Enemies, and make them ſay as Marcus Biſhop of Aretheuſa made one of Julian's Nobles, preſent at his Torments, to ſay concerning him, We are aſhamed, O Emperour; the Chriſtians laugh at your Cruelty! And how will God himſelf rejoice and glory over them, as he once did over Job when he fetched him with Honour off that firſt Field! Job. 2. 3. Still he holdeth faſt his Integrity.

3. Your own Peace is wrapt up in it. as well as God's Glory. Is it nothing think you, to be freed from thoſe Vultures and Harpies, that feed upon the Hearts of Men at ſuch times? Surely God reckons, that he promiſeth a very great Mercy to his People, when he promiſeth it, Prov. 1. ult. Pſal. 112. 7. When Borromæus was told of ſome that lay in wait to take away his Life, it troubled him not; but he ſaid, An Deus in mundo pro Nihilo? What, is God in the World for nought? And like to this was the Anſwer of Silentiarus in the like caſe; Si Deus mei curam non habet. quid vivo? If God take not care for me, how do I live? Oh this is it that brings you to an holy quietude of Spirit in times of Confuſion and Diſtraction, which is a choice Mercy.

4 Your Magnanimity is of ſpecial uſe to other Saints, who are following you in the ſame path of Sufferings If your faint, it's like the fainting of a Standard-bearer in an Army: You bring thereby an evil report upon the Croſs of Chriſt, as the firſt Spies did upon the Land of Canaan. And a like influence with that it is like to have on your Brethren; ſo that there is a neceſſity of improving this Grace alſo before you can ſay with Paul you are ready.

2. But what is this Chriſtian Fortitude, and wherein doth it conſiſt?

I anſwer briefly, It is an holy boldneſs in the performance of difficult duties, flowing from Faith in the Call of God, and his Promiſe to us in the diſcharge of them.

And ſo you have the Nature of it in theſe four Particulars:

1. It is an Holy Boldneſs, not a natural or ſinful boldneſs, ariſing either from the natural Conſtitution, or evil diſpoſition of the Mind

2. It is expreſt about duties for Truth, not Error, Jer. 9 3. for the Intereſt of Chriſt, not of the Fleſh

3. The Seaſon in which it appears is, when duties are ſurrounded and beſet with difficulties and dangers, Dan. 3. 16. Dan. 6. 10

4. The Fountain whence it flows is Faith, and that as it reſpects the command and call of God to duty, Acts 16. 10. And his promiſe to us in the diſcharge thereof, Joſh. 1. 5, 6.

And this Grace ſtands oppoſed both to the fear of Man in the cauſe of God, Heb. 11. 27. And to Apoſtacy from the Truth for fear of ſuffering. Thus briefly of the nature of it

3. In the laſt place I ſhall lay down ſome Rules for the promoting and improvement of it, and ſo finiſh this Chapter.

Now there are ten Rules heedfully to be obſerved for the breeding of holy Courage in the Breaſt of a Saint in evil times.

And the firſt Rule is this, Get a weaned Heart from all Earthly Enjoyments. If the Heart be inordinately fixed upon any one thing that you poſſeſs in the World, that inordinate Eſtimation and Affection of it will ſtrangely effeminate, ſoften and cowardize your Spirit when your trial comes, 2 Tim. 2. 4. You meet not with a Man of Courage for God, but had his Heart dead to Earthly things; ſo it was with Paul, Philemon 3. 8. Since the Apoſtles we ſcarce meet with a greater Example of Holy Magnanimity than Luther; and if you read his Story, you will find few Men ever ſet a lower rate on the World than he. All the Turkiſh Empire in his Eye was but a Crumb caſt to the Dogs. Germana eſt hæc beſtia pecuniam non curat, Money could not tempt him.

2. Suffer not guilt to lie upon your Conſciences: It is a fountain of Fears, and you can never attain boldneſs for God, till it be removed, Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3. The ſpirit of a ſound Mind is oppoſed to the Spirit of Fear, 2 Tim. 1. 7. Now that ſound Mind is a Mind or Spirit that is not wounded, and made ſick and infirm by guilt. Oh what black Fogs and Miſts ariſe out of Guilt, which becloud our Evidences, and fill us with Fears and Diſcouragements! Gen. 42. 21, 22.

7. Rule. Beware you be not cheated with Maximes of Carnal Policy, miſtaken for Chriſtian prudence. Many are ſo : And they prove deſtructive to all true zeal and courage for Chriſt. Never was Religion profeſſed with greater plainneſs and ſimplicity, than by the Primitive Chriſtians : And never was there an higher Spring-tide of Courage and zeal for God, than in thoſe days. We are apt to call it prodigality, and are grown wiſer to husband our Lives and Comforts, better than they did. But indeed our Prudentials have even ſwallowed up our Religion. It's true, there is ſuch a thing as Chriſtian prudence ; but this doth not teach men to ſhun all coſtly and difficult duties, and proſtitute Conſcience to ſave the Skin. But a man of underſtanding walketh uprightly, Prov. 15. 21.

8. Rule. Look upon the inſide of troubles for Chriſt, as well as upon the outſide of them. If you view them by an eye of ſenſe, there appeareth nothing but matter of diſcouragement. To look on the outſide of a Priſon, Baniſhment, or Death, is affrighting and horrible : But then if you look into the inſide of theſe things by faith, and ſee what God hath made them to his people, how joyful and comfortable they have been in theſe conditions ; what honey they have found in the Carkaſs of a Lion, what Songs in the Stocks and Dungeons, what glorying in Tribulation, and an hundred fold reward even in their Sufferings : O then ! that which looked like a Serpent at a diſtance, will appear but as a Rod in hand. How many have found themſelves quite miſtaken in their apprehenſions of ſufferings ; and been more loth to come out of a Priſon, than they were to go in ! If you did but ſee your ſupports, and the comforts that Souls ordinarily meet with in their troubles for Chriſt, you would not look on them as ſuch formidable things.

9. Rule. View the iſſue and reward of ſufferings by an eye of Faith : This alſo will ſtrongly abate the horrour and dread of them, Heb. 10. 34. Upon this Account it is the Saints have ſo ſlighted and contemned them, Rom. 8. 18. 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17. But then ſee that you act your Faith, ( 1 ) Upon the certainty of it : Look at it as a moſt real and ſubſtantial thing, Heb. 11. 1. ( 2 ) View it as a great and glorious Reward. And ( 3 ) as near at hand : And then ſay to thy Soul, come on my Soul, come on ; Seeſt thou the joy ſet before thee ! The Crown of Glory ready to be ſet on thy head by the hand of a righteous God. Oh, what compare is there betwixt thoſe Sufferings, and that Glory !

10. Rule. Propound to your ſelves the beſt patterns and examples. Keep your eye upon the Cloud of Witneſſes ; theſe are of ſpecial uſe to beget holy courage, Heb. 12. 1. Jam. 5. 10. Who would be afraid to enter the Liſts, and grapple with that enemy that he hath ſeen ſo often foiled, and that by poor weak Chriſtians ? See how the enemy with whom you are to grapple, hath been beaten hand to hand, and triumphed over by poor

Women and Children; they had as great infirmities, and you have as gracious aſſiſtances as thoſe that are gone before you.

CHAP. X.

Diſcovering the neceſſity of an heart mortified to all earthly and Temporal enjoyments, in order to the managing of a ſuffering condition: with ſeveral directions for the attaining thereof.

THE next thing wherein your actual readineſs for Bonds, or Death conſiſteth, is in the mortification of your Affections to all earthly Intereſts and Enjoyments, even the beſt and ſweeteſt of them: Till this be done, in ſome meaſure, you are not fit to be uſed in any ſuch ſervice for the Lord, 2 Tim. 1. 21. The living world, is the very Life of temptations: The travelling pains of Death, are ſtronger and ſharper upon none, than thoſe that are full of ſenſe and ſelf. As you ſee in Nature, what Conflicts and Agonies ſtrong and lively perſons ſuffer when they die: When others in whom nature is decay'd and ſpent beforehand, die away without half that pain, even as a Bird in a ſhell. Corruption in the Saints, is like the Sap in green Wood, which reſiſteth the fire, and will not burn well, till it be dried up. Prepared Paul had an Heart mortified in a very high degree, to all the Honour and Riches of the World, accounting them all but trifles, Gal. 6. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

The need of this will be evinced by theſe five Conſiderations.

1. Unleſs the Heart be mortified to all Earthly enjoyments, they will appear great and glorious things in your eye and eſtimation: And if ſo, judge what a Task you will have, to deny and leave them all in a ſuffering hour. It is corruption within, that puts the Luſtre and Glory upon things without: It's the carnal eye only that gazes admiringly after them, 2 Cor. 5. 16. and hence the Luſt is put to expreſs the Affection, 1 Joh. 2 16. becauſe all that inordinate affection we have to them, ariſes from our high eſtimation of them, and that eſtimation from our luſts that repreſent them as great and glorious. Therefore certainly, it will be difficult (if not impoſſible) to deny them, till they have loſt their glory in your eye; and that they will never do, till thoſe Luſts within you, that put that Beauty and Neceſſity upon them, be firſt crucified. As for inſtance, what a glory and neceſſity doth the Pride of Men put upon the Honour and Credit of the World, ſo that they will rather chooſe to die, than ſurvive it! but to a mortified Soul it's a ſmall matter, 1 Cor. 4. 3. So for Riches, how much are they adored, till our Luſts be mortified, and then they are eſteemed but Dung and Droſs, Phil. 3. 8. 'Tis our Corruption that paints and gilds over theſe things: When theſe are crucified, thoſe will be lightly eſteemed.

2. Mortification of Corruptions is that which recovers an healthful ſtate of Soul: Sin is to thy Soul, what a Diſeaſe is to the Body; and Mortification is to ſin, what Phyſick is to a Diſeaſe. Hence thoſe that are but a little mortified, are in a comparative ſenſe called Carnal, 1 Cor. 3. 3. and Babes, verſe 2. in reſpect of weakneſs. Now ſuffering Work being ſome of the Chriſtians hardeſt Labour and Exerciſe, he cannot be fitted for it, until his Soul be in an healthful ſtate: A ſickly man cannot carry heavy Burdens, or endure hard Labours and Exerciſes: The ſick Souldier is left behind in his Quarters, or put into the hoſpital, whilſt his Fellows are dividing the ſpoils, and obtaining glorious Victories in the Field. To this ſenſe ſome expound Rom. 8. 13. If ye live after the Fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, mortifie the Deeds of the Body, ye ſhall live. Whereas Death is put to note a languiſhing ſtate of Soul, whilſt Mortification is neglected: So Life is put to expreſs an healthful and comfortable ſtate; vivere pro valere; ſo that upon this account alſo the neceſſity of it appears.

3. Your Corruptions muſt be Mortified, elſe they will be raging and violent in the time of Temptation, and like a Torrent ſweep away all your Convictions and Reſolutions. It's ſin unmortified within, that makes the Heart like Gun-powder; ſo that when the ſparkles of Temptation fly about it, (and they fall thick in a ſuffering hour) they do but touch and take. Hence the Corruptions of the World are ſaid to be through Luſt, 2 Pet. 1. 4. With theſe internal unmortified Luſts, the Tempter holds correſpondence; and theſe be the Traitors that deliver up our Souls into his hands.

4. Unleſs you be diligent and ſucceſsful in this Work, though you ſhould ſuffer, yet not like Chriſtians, you will but diſgrace Religion, and the Cauſe for which you ſuffer: For it's not ſimple ſuffering, but ſuffering as a Chriſtian, that reflects Credit on Religion, and finds acceptation with God. If you be Envious, Fretful, Diſcontented and Revengeful, under your ſufferings, what Honour will this bring to Chriſt? Is not this altogether unlike the Example of your Lord? Iſa. 53. 7. and the behaviour of ſuffering Saints? 1 Cor. 4 13. Yet thus it will be, if your Pride, Paſſion and Revenge, be not firſt ſubdued: For what are the breakings forth of ſuch diſtempers of Spirit, but as the flaſhes of heat in the Face from an ill-affected Liver? Moſt certain it is, that all thoſe evils are in your Natures: And as certain it is, they will riſe like Mud and Filth from the bottom of a Lake, when ſome Eminent Tryals ſhall rake you to the bottom; Natura vexata prodit ſeipſam.

5. Laſtly, Mortification muſt be ſtudied and plyed with diligence; elſe you will find many Longings and Hankerings after Earthly Enjoyments and Comforts, which will prove a ſnare to you: What is ſin, but the corrupt and vitiated appetite of the Creature, to things that are Earthly and Senſual, reliſhing more ſweetneſs and delight in them, than in the bleſſed God? And what is Sanctification? but the rectifying of theſe inordinate affections, and placing them on their proper Object. A regenerate and mortified Chriſtian taſtes not half that ſweetneſs in forbidden fruits that another doth: Set but Money before Judas, and ſee how eagerly he catches at it —— What will you give me, and I will betray him. Set but Life, Liberty, or any ſuch Bait before an unmortified Heart, and how impotent is he to withſtand them, as offered in a Temptation. Oh thoſe unmortified Luſts! How do they make Men Hanker, Long, and their Lips water (as we uſe to ſay) after theſe things? This makes them break Priſon, decline Sufferings, tho upon the baſeſt terms: Whereas a Mortified Chriſtian can ſee all theſe things ſet before him, yea, offered to him, and refuſe them. Heb. 10. 35. It is with them much as it was with old Barzillai, 2 Sam. 19. 35. When Nature is decayed, they find but little Pleaſure in natural actions, Eccleſ. 12. 1. And look as the body of ſin decays and languiſhes, ſo do theſe Longings alſo: It weans the Soul from them all, and enables it to live very comfortably without them, Pſal. 131. 1. Phil. 4. 12. There needs no more to be ſaid to evince the neceſſity of Mortification, and diſcover what influence it hath into a Chriſtians readineſs for ſufferings.

It remains therefore, that I open to you ſome of the principal corruptions, about which it moſtly concerns you, to beſtow pains e're ſufferings come. Now look as there are four principle enjoyments, in which you are like to be tried, viz. Eſtate, Name, Liberty, Life; ſo the Chriſtian Work in ſuffering times lies in mortifying theſe Four ſpecial Corruptions, viz. Firſt, The Love of the World Secondly, Ambition. Thirdly, Inordinate affectation of freedom and Pleaſure. Fourthly, Exceſſive love of Life.

1. For the love of this World, Away with it, Crucifie it, Crucifie it: Down with this Idol, and let it be dethroned in all that intend to abide with Chriſt in the hour of Temptation: How elſe will you take the ſpoiling of your Goods? How will you be able to part with all for Chriſt, as theſe bleſſed Souls did? It grieves my Heart to ſee how many Profeſſors of Religion are carried captive at the Chariot-Wheels of a bewitching World. Oh! Good had it been for many Profeſſors, if they had never taſted ſo much of the ſweetneſs of it. Sirs, I beg you, for the Lord's ſake down with it in your Eſtimations, down with it in your Affections, elſe Temptations will down with you e're long. I ſhall offer five or ſix Helps for the Crucifying of it.

Firſt, Conſider your Eſpouſals to Chriſt, and how you have choſen and profeſſed him for your Lord and Husband: Therefore your doting upon the World, is no leſs than Adultery againſt Chriſt, James 4. 4. If Chriſt be your Husband he muſt be a Covering to your Eyes; an unchaſte glance upon the World wounds him.

Secondly, The more you prize it, the more you will be tormented by it: Did you prize and love it leſs, it would diſquiet and vex you leſs: It's our doteing on it, that makes it draw blood at parting.

Thirdly, Get true Scripture-notions of the World, and rectifie your Judgments and Affections by them. If you will have the true Picture and Repreſentation of it drawn by the Hand of God himſelf, See 1 John 2. 16. It's nothing elſe but luſt that puts that luſtre upon it: It hath but a Phantaſtick glory, and that alſo paſſeth away. What is become of them that ruffled it out in the World but one hundred years ago? What could the World do for them? Are they not all gone down to the ſides of the Pit? But he that doth the will of God abideth for ever.

Fourthly, Study and Contemplate Chriſt, and the things above more: This would vail all its Glory, and kill it at the Root, Phil. 3. 18, 19. Juſt as a Man that hath been gazing upon the Sun, when he takes off his Eye from that bright and glorious Creature, and looks to the Earth, there is a Vail of Darkneſs overſpreading the Face of it, that he can ſee nothing. I wonder how ſuch as pretend to live above, and enjoy communion with God, can ever reliſh ſuch ſweetneſs in the World; or have their Hearts enticed and captivated by it?

Fifthly, Remember always, that by your love and delight in Worldly things, you furniſh the Devil with the chiefeſt Bait he hath to catch, and deſtroy your Souls. Alas! were your hearts but dead to theſe things, he would want an Handle to catch hold on. What hath he more to offer you, and tempt you off from Chriſt with, but a little Money? or ſome ſuch poor temporal Rewards: And how little would that Soul be moved by ſuch a Temptation, that looks on it all but as Dirt.

Sixthly, Laſtly, take notice of the approaches of Eternity; Remember you are almoſt at the end of Time: And when you come to lanch out into that endleſs Ocean, how will theſe things look then? It ſeems glorious, whilſt you are in the Chace and Purſuit of it; but upon a Death-bed, you will overtake and come up with it, and then you'l ſee what a deceitful and vain thing it is: Stand by the Beds of dying Men, and hear how they ſpeak of it. Oh! the difference betwixt our apprehenſions then, and now! Thus labour to wean off your Affections, and Crucifie them to the World.

2. Mortifie your Ambition, and vain Affectation of the Repute and Credit of the World: Oh ſtand not on ſo vain a thing as this! judge it but a ſmall thing to be judged of Man, to have your Names caſt out as evil: Let not Scoffs and Reproaches be ſuch terrible things to you. It is without doubt, a great trial; elſe the Holy Ghoſt had not added a peculiar Epithete to it, which is not given to any other of the ſufferings of the Saints: not cruel Tortures, nor cruel Stonings, Burnings, Slaying with the Sword; but cruel mockings, Heb. 11. 36. Yet learn to be dead to, and unaffected with theſe things; ſet the reproaching World as light, and as low as it ſets you: Deſpiſe the ſhame, as your Maſter Chriſt did, Heb. 12. 2. and to promote Mortification in this, take theſe helps:

1. Conſider this is no new or ſtrange thing that hath happened to you: The Holieſt of Men have paſt through the like, if not worſe Trials, Heb. 10. 33. Pſal. 44. 14. Reproaches have been the Lot of the beſt Men. They called Athanaſius, Sathanaſius; Cyprianus, Coprianus, a gatherer of Dung; Bleſſed Paul a peſtilent Fellow: Doctor Story threw a Fagot at ſweet Mr. Denlie's Face, as he was ſinging a Pſalm in the midſt of the Flames, ſaying, I have ſpoiled a good old Song.

2. It may be Religion hath been Reproached and Scoffed at for your ſakes; and if ſo, think it not much to be reproached for Religions ſake.

3. It's much better to be reproached by Men for diſcharging Duty, than by your own Conſciences for the neglect of it: If all be quiet within, never be moved at the noiſe and clamour without: If you have a good Roof over your Head, be not troubled though the Winds and Storms bluſter abroad, 1 Pet. 4. 14. Take heed what you do, and be heedleſs what the World ſays.

4. Always remember, that you neither ſtand or fall at the World's Judgment, and therefore have the leſs reaſon to be troubled at it, 1 Cor. 4. 3. If your condition were to be caſt to Eternity by it, it were ſomewhat.

5. There is a Worth and Excellency in the Reproaches of Chriſt, as bad as they ſeem; and ſuch an Excellency, as is not to be matched by any Earthly Enjoyment, Heb. 11. 26. The Reproaches of Chriſt are of more worth than the Treaſures of Egypt, though Egypt then was the Magazine of the World for Treaſures. The Apoſtles counted them their Honours, Acts 5. 41. When Ludovicus Marſocus, a Knight of France, ſaw thoſe that were to ſuffer with him in the Chains, and that they put none upon him, becauſe of the Nobility of his Birth, he ſaid to the Executioner, Cur me non quoq; Torque donas, & illuſtris illius ordinis militem non creas? Why do ye not honour me with a Chain too, and create me a Knight of that Noble Order?

6. Laſtly, ſhould Scoffs and Reproaches ſcare you from Chriſt and Duty; then, though you ſhould eſcape the Reproaches of men, yet ſhall you fall under the everlaſting Contempt of God, Angels and good Men Therefore, Fear ye not Reproaches of men that ſhall die, nor be afraid of their revilings, for the Morth ſhall eat them up like a Garment, and the Worm ſhall eat them like Wool, but my Righteouſneſs ſhall be for ever, and my Salvation from Generation to Generation, Iſa. 51. 7, 8.

3. Mortifie your inordinate affectation of liberty, pleaſure, and delicate living. O let not a Priſon ſeem ſo formidable to you. It's true, as Chriſt told Peter, John 41. 18. When thou waſt young, thou girdeſt thy ſelf, and walkeſt whither thou wouldſt; but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not. You have now your liberty to go whither you will, and it's a precious mercy if well improved: The Birds of the Air (as one ſaith) had rather be in the Woods at liberty, though lean and hungry, than in a Golden Cage with the richeſt Fare. But yet, if God will call you to deny this alſo for Chriſt, ſee that you be ready to be bound as Paul was, and receive the Chain and Bonds of Chriſt with thankſgiving: To which end, conſider,

1. That the affliction, in ſuch caſes of Reſtraint, is more from within, than from without you. There's no place but may be delectable to you, if your heart be heavenly, and the preſence of God be ingaged with you. What a ſweet Night had Jacob at Bethel? Paul and Silas in the Stocks? See that precious Letter of Pomponius Algerius.

Tranſtulit in cœlum Chriſti præſentia clauſtrum,
Quid faciet cœlo? quæ Cœlum jam creat antro.
It's your own Unbelief and Impatiency, that gives you more trouble than the Condition.

2. No Keeper can keep the Comforter from you, if you be the Lord's Priſoners, Act. 16. If they could bar out the Spirit from you, it would be a diſmal place indeed: But ordinarily, there the Saints have their cleareſt Viſions of God, and ſweeteſt Preſence of the Spirit: You are the Lord's Freemen, whilſt Mens Priſoners: All the World cannot deveſt you of the ſtate of Liberty Chriſt hath purchaſed for you, John 8. 36.

3. Though a Priſon look ſad and diſmal, yet it is not Hell: Oh bleſs God for that, that's a ſad Priſon indeed! Beloved, Men have their Priſons, and God hath his: God's Priſon is a terrible Priſon, indeed, Thouſands are now in Chains, 1 Pet. 3. 19. And there you deſerved to have been ſent long ago: If God exchange an Hell for a Priſon, have you any cauſe to complain?

4. How obdurate and cruel ſoever Men are to you, yet the Lord Jeſus is kind and tender-hearted to his Priſoners; he puts the kindneſſes that any ſhew them upon his own account, Mat. 25. 36. He looks down from Heaven to hear the ſighings and groanings of his Priſoners, Pſal. 102. 20. He will tenderly ſympathize with you in all your Priſon-Straights and Troubles.

5. A Priſon hath been hanſelled and perfumed by the beſt and holieſt of Men in all Ages, 1 Kings 22. 27. Jer. 32. 2. Mat. 4. 12. Acts 5. 18. and 26. 10. God hath made it a ſettled School of Diſcipline to them.

6. Should you, to avoid a Priſon commit a a Sin, inſtead of being Man's Priſoner, you ſhall be clapt up by God, for he hath a Priſon for your Souls even in this World, Pſal. 142.

7. And this is ten Thouſand times more dreadful, than any Dungeon in the World. Oh it's a dark Priſon! Not a Cranny to let in one Beam of God's Countenance upon your poor Souls. What a ſad exchange have you made then?

7. Conſider what a ground of Comfort GOD hath laid in that Word, Rev. 2. 10. to obviate the Fears and Terrours incident to us in ſuch a condition: God hath limited Satan and his Inſtruments, both for time, number, and all circumſtances of the Trial.

8. Laſtly, You do not know what a Mercy may be in it: It may be a time of retirement from the World, and the clamours and diſtractions that are abroad. Theſe days of Impriſonment may be your Holy-days; as a Priſoner of Chriſt once called them.

4. Get an Heart mortified to the exceſſive and inordinate love of Life: This, I confeſs, is the higheſt and hardeſt point of Self-denial, becauſe it wraps up all other Self-Intereſts in it. But yet Conſider, Firſt, Though Life be very dear, yet Jeſus Chriſt is ten thouſand times dearer than thy Life: If thou be a Saint, he is the Life of thy Life, and the length of thy days; and in compariſon of him, and his glory, Saints ſhould, and have deſpiſed and ſlighted their Lives, Luke 14. 26. Rev. 12. 11.

Secondly, Die you muſt; and if by ſhrinking from Chriſt, you ſhould protract a miſerable Life for a few days longer, in the mean time loſing that which is better than Life, Pſal. 63. 3. Mat. 10. 39. Oh! when you lie upon your Death-bed, you will wiſh, that you had obeyed God's Call, and ſo have departed in peace.

Thirdly, if you have cordially Covenanted with Chriſt (as all ſincere Believers have done) then you have yielded up your Lives to him, to be diſpoſed of for his Glory, Rom. 14. 7. So that look, as Chriſt both lived and died for you; ſo, ought you to live as Chriſt: And all the Excellency you ſee in Life, conſiſts in that reference and ſubſerviency it hath to his Glory. I ſay then, if you have underſtandingly and cordially tranſacted in a Covenant way with him, your Care will not be ſo much how to ſhun death, as by what death you may moſt glorifie God, John 21. 19. And certainly, you can never lay them down upon a more honourable or comfortable Account than in his Cauſe, and for his Sake. It was a great trouble to Luther, that he carried his Blood to his Grave.

Fourthly, to die for Chriſt, is one of the higheſt Teſtifications of your Love to Chriſt, that you are capable of, John 13. 17. Yea, 'tis ſuch a Teſtification of your Love to the Lord Jeſus, as Angels are not capable of making.

Fifthly, Why ſhould you decline even a violent death for Chriſt, when as the bitterneſs of death is paſt, and there is no Hell following the pale Horſe? It cannot ſeparate you from Chriſt, Rom. 8. 38.

Sixthly, Think what a Death Chriſt ſuffered for you: In which the fullneſs of the Wrath both of God and Man meet together, ſo that he was ſore amazed; yet with deſire, did he deſire it for your ſakes.

7. Laſtly, Think what a Life you ſhall have with Chriſt, as ſoon as this is delivered up to, and for him, 2 Tim. 2. 12. It is but wink, and you ſhall ſee God.

Oh that theſe things might provoke you to follow on, and ply the Work of Mortification.

CHAP. XI.

Wherein is opened the ſingular advantage that ſuffering Saints have by their Skill and Inſight into the Methods and Myſteries of Satan's Temptation; ſome of thoſe Wiles of Satan opened, and Rules for the avoiding of the danger briefly preſcribed.

THE hazards and dangers of Chriſtians in times of Perſecution, ariſe not ſo much from their Sufferings, as from the Temptations that always attend, and are by Satan planted upon their Sufferings: for the moſt part, Sufferings and Temptations go together, Heb. 11. 37. And therefore it behoves ſuch as are, or expect to be called to Sufferings, to dive into the myſteries of Temptations, and be well acquainted with the Enemies Deſigns upon them. So was Paul, and ſo he ſuppoſes all others to be, that ingage in the ſame Cauſe; We are not ign rant of his Devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. There is a manifold advantage redounding to ſuffering Saints thereby.

1. He that is well acquainted with the methods of Temptation, will be the better able to deſcry the firſt approaches and beginning of it; and a Temptation diſcovered, is more than half conquered. It is a ſpecial Artifice of Satan, to ſhuffle in his Temptations as undiſcernable as may be into the Soul; for he knows, that in vain is the Net ſpread in the ſight of any Bird, Prov. 1. 17. And therefore he ordinarily makes a ſuffering Seaſon, to be a tempting Seaſon; becauſe Sufferings, like Fire to Iron, make it impreſſive and operable, they do ordinarily put the Soul into an hurry and diſtraction, and ſo gives him an advantage, to tempt the Soul with leſs ſuſpicion, and greater ſucceſs. But now, a skillful Chriſtian, that is acquainted with his Wiles, will diſcern when he begins to enter into Temptation; as Chriſt's Expreſſion is, Luke 22. 46. And ſo check the Temptation in its firſt Riſe, when it's weakeſt; and moſt eaſily broken. Doubtleſs one Reaſon why ſo many fall by temptation, is, becauſe it's got within them, and hath prevailed far, before it be diſcovered to be a Temptation.

2. He that is well acquainted with Satan's Methods of tempting, will not only diſcern it ſooner than another; but alſo knows his Work and Duty, and how to manage the Conflict with it, which is a great matter. There are many poor Souls that labour under ſtrong Temptations, and know not what to do: They go up and down complaining, from Chriſtian to Chriſtian, whilſt the Judicious Chriſtian plies the Terror of the Throne of Grace with ſtrong Cries. See 2 Cor. 12. 8. keeps up his Watch, Luke 22. 46. Countermines the Temptation, by aſſaulting that Corruption by endeavours of Mortification, which Satan aſſaults by Temptation, 1 Cor. 1. 9. 27.

3. Laſtly, To name no more; he that is beſt acquainted with the myſtery of Temptation, and can maintain his ground againſt it, he ſhall be the perſevering Chriſtian under Perſecutions, and the Victorious Chriſtian over them. Here lies the main deſign of Satan, in raiſing Perſecution againſt the Saints. It is not ſo much their Blood that he thirſteth after, as their fall by Temptation: And all Perſecutions are deſigned by him, to introduce his Temptations. Theſe work upon our Fear, and Fear drives us into his Trains and Snares, Prov. 29. 25. The Devil's work in raiſing Perſecution, is but as the Fowler's Work in beating the Buſh in the Night, when the Net is ſpread to take the Birds, which he can affright out of their Coverts. He that underſtands this, is not eaſily moved by the ſtrongeſt oppoſition from his Place and Duty; and ſo is like to prove the moſt conſtant and invincible Chriſtian in times of Perſecution.

Oh then how neceſſary is it, that ſince all Perſecutions are intended as means to promote Temptation: And that Skill and Inſight into theſe deſigns of Satan, ſo advantages as to fruſtrate his deſigns in both? I ſay, how neceſſary is it that you ſhould be all inſtructed wherein the Strength of temptation lies: As alſo how to reſiſt thoſe ſtrong and dangerous Temptations, which your Sufferings only are intended to uſher in, and make way for?

It will not be unſeaſonable or impertinent then in this Chapter to ſhew you; Firſt, wherein the force and efficacy of Temptations lieth; Secondly, what you are to do, when in a ſuffering Hour ſuch Temptation ſhall aſſault you. And firſt,

1. Qu. Wherein doth the efficacy and Power of Temptation lie?

Sol. I anſwer, It lies principally in three things:

1. In the kind and nature of the Temptation.

2. In the Craft and Policy of Satan in managing them.

3. In that ſecret Correſpondency, that Satan hath with our Corruptions.

1. It lies in the kind and nature of the Temptation it ſelf: For it's moſt certain, that all Temptations are not alike forcible and dangerous. Some are ordinarily more ſucceſsful than others; and ſuch are theſe that follow.

1. Strange and unuſual Temptations, I mean not ſuch as none have been troubled with before us; for there is not a Dart in Satan's Quiver, but hath been let fly at the Breaſts of other Saints, before it was levell'd at ours, 1 Cor. 10. 13. But by ſtrange and unuſual, I mean ſuch as the People of GOD are but rarely troubled with, and poſſibly we were never exerciſed with before. Theſe are the more dangerous, becauſe they daunt and amaze the Soul, and ordinarily beget deſpondency, even as ſome ſtrange Diſeaſe would do that we know not what to make of, nor can learn that others have been ſick of.

2. Mark them for moſt dangerous Temptations, that are adapted and ſuited to your proper Sin, or Evil Conſtitution: For certainly that is the moſt dangerous nick and criſis of Temptation when it tries a Man there. Now if he be not truly Gracious, he falls by the Root irrecoverably, Luke 22. 5, 6. Or if ſincere, yet without ſpecial aſſiſtance, and extraordinary vigilance, he falls ſcandalouſly, 2 Sam. 11. 2. compared with 1 Sam. 16. 12.

3. When it is a Spiritual Temptation, which riſes undiſcernably out of a Chriſtian's Duties. This is the leſs ſuſpected, becauſe Temptations uſually come from the ſtrength and livelineſs of Corruptions; but this, from the Slaughter and Conqueſts we make of them. Duties, and Enlargements in them, which are the Poyſon of other Luſts, proves the Food and Fewel of this, 1 Cor. 4. 7, 8. And how much the more covert and cloſe any Temptation is, by ſo much the more dangerous it is.

2. The ſtrength and efficacy of temptation lies much in the skill and policy of Satan in the management of it: And hence they are called wiles, methods, and devices, 2 Cor. 2. 11. Epheſ. 6. 11. and himſelf an old Serpent, Rev. 12. 9. And amongſt the reſt of his deep and deſperate Stratagems theſe following are Remarkable.

1. In imploying ſuch inſtruments to manage his Temptations as are leaſt ſuſpected, and have the greateſt influence. A Teacher, Gal. 2. 14. A Wife, Gen. 3. 6. Job. 2. 9. Friends, Acts 21. 13. The Devil knows it is a bad buſineſs, and therefore muſt make the beſt of it; Pauls soreſt tryal was by his deareſt Friends.

2. In the orderly diſpoſition and ranging of his Temptatations; beginning with little things firſt, and then by degrees working over to greater. His firſt motions are commonly moſt modeſt, Gen. 3. 1. Should he diſcover the Depth of his deſign at firſt, it would ſtartle the Soul, and make it reply as Haſael, Am I a Dog that I ſhould do thus? It's far eaſier to gain his end by parts, then putting for all at once.

3. In endeavouring to engage the Soul upon his own ground. I mean to tempt him from his Station and Duty where God ſets, and expects to find him. He knows while you are with God, God is with you, 2 Chro. 15. 2. Whilſt a man abides there he abides with God, 1 Cor. 7. 24. Whilſt he is there, the Promiſe is a good breaſtwork to keep off all his darts: And therefore as Fiſhes, when they have ſpread their Net in the River, beat the Fiſhes out of their Coverts and Caverns; ſo doth Satan.

4. In not preſenting the Temptation, till the Soul be prepared to receive it. He loves to ſtrike when the iron is hot. He firſt lets their troubles come to an height, brings them to the Priſon, Gibbit or fire, and then offers them deliverance, Heb. 11. 35, 37.

5. In tiring our Souls with the long continuance of temptations. What he cannot win by a ſuddain ſtorm, he hopes to gain by a tedious ſiege. Forty days together he aſſaulted the Captaim of our Salvation, Mark. 1. 13. And truly it's a wonder the Soul yields not at laſt, that hath been tried long, Pſal. 125. 3. When the rod of the wicked lies long upon the back of the righteous, it is much if he put not forth his hand to iniquity.

6. In falling moſt violently upon them, when they are loweſt and moſt proſtrate in their Spirits and comforts: So he aſſaulted Job with a Temptation to curſe God and die, when he ſat in that deplorable ſtate upon the Dunghil, Job. 2. 8, 9. He loves to fall upon us as Simeon and Levi did upon the Sechemites when we are ſore and wounded: And therefore ordinarily you find times of divine deſertions, to be times of Diabolical temptations. So that look as the wild Beaſts of the Deſart come out of their Dens in the night, and then roar after their prey, Pſal. 104. 20. So doth Satan when the Soul ſeems to be benighted and loſt in the darkneſs of ſpiritual troubles.

And this is the ſecond thing wherein the Efficacy and Strength of Temptation lies.

3. Laſtly, it lies in that ſecret correſpondency Satan holds with our boſome enemies. Were it not for this domeſtick Traitor, he could not ſurprize us ſo eaſily: As you ſee in Chriſt; he could do nothing becauſe he found nothing to faſten a temptation on. He was like a Chryſtal Glaſs filled with pure Fountain water: So that though he ſhould have been agitated and ſhaken never ſo much by temptation, yet no filthy ſediment could appear; but now we have an enemy within that holds intelligence with Satan without; and this would prove a Devil to us, if there were no other Devil to tempt us, Sam. 1. 14, 15. Its a Fountain of temptation in it ſelf. Mat. 15. 19. and the chief inſtrument by which Satan doth all his tempting work, Pet. 1. 4.

Our ſeveral paſſions and affections are the handles of his temptations. Every thing ſaith Epictetus hath δύο λάβας, two handles to take it by. Our affections are the handles of our Souls. The temptation of Self-confidence, and Pride, takes hold of a during and forward diſpoſition; the temptation of Apoſtacy upon a timerous diſpoſition, &c. Theſe imbred luſts go over to the Enemy in the day of Battle and fight againſt the Soul, 1 Pet. 2. 11. This is a more dangerous Enemy than the Devil. 'Tis true, they both work againſt us, but with a double difference. Satan works externally and objectively; but Luſt internally, and Phyſically, i. e. quoad materiale, as it's capable of Phyſical Efficiency. Sin wrought in me all manner of Concupiſcence, Rom. 7. 8. Yea, 'tis a ſubtil Enemy that doth his Buſineſs politickly. Rom. 7. 11. Sin deceived me; it betrays with a Kiſs, ſtrangles with a ſilken Halter, Heb. 3. 13. Eph. 4. 22. Theſe be his Agents ſitting at the Council Table in our own Breaſts, and there carrying on his Deſigns effectually: Yea, it's the reſtleſs and perpetual Enemy, no ridding of your Hands of him. Satan is ſometimes put to flight by reſiſtance, Jam. 4. 7. and ſometimes ceaſes his Temptations, Luke 4. 13. But when he ceaſeth to tempt and inject, this ceaſeth not not to irritate and ſollicite: Where we are, it will be; it's our ſad lot to be tied to it, and perpetually aſſaulted by it, Rom. 7. 24. We may ſay of it as Hanibal ſaid of Marcellus, That it's never quiet, whether a Conquerour, or conquered. Yea, it is a Potent Enemy too, it hauls Men away to the commiſſion of Sin, Jam. 1. 14. It ſeizeth the Magazine of the Soul, and delivers up the Arms, I mean the Members to be ὅπλα ἀδικίας, weapons of Unrighteouſneſs.

Thus you ſee wherein the efficacy and power of Temptation conſiſts. And it mightily concerns you that are, or expect to be Sufferers for Chriſt, to be acquainted with theſe things, and know where the ſtrength of your Enemy lies.

But how ſhall the ſuffering Saint ſo manage himſelf in a ſuffering hour, as not to be captivated by Temptations? This brings me upon the ſecond thing I promiſed; viz. to preſcribe ſome Rules for the eſcaping or conquering of thoſe Temptations that are incidental to a ſuffering State. And firſt:

1 Rule. Labour to cut off the advantages of Temptation before they come. It's our inordinate love to Life, Eſtate, Liberty, and Eaſe, that gives the Temptations ſo much Strength upon us. Do not over-value them, and you will more eaſily part from them, Rev. 12. 11. O mortifie Self-love, and Creature-love; let your Heart be looſened and weaned from them, and then the Temptation hath loſt its Strength.

2. Rule. Secure to your ſelves an Intereſt in the Heavenly Glory. When once you clearly ſee your Propriety in the Kingdom above, you will ſet the lighter and lower by all things on Earth. That is a pregnant Text to this purpoſe, Heb. 10. 34. It's our darkneſs and uncertainties, about thoſe, that make us cling ſo faſt to theſe.

3 Rule. Settle this Principle in your Heart, as that which you will never depart from, That it's better for you to fall into any Suffering, than into the leaſt Sin, Heb. 11. 24, 25. This all will acknowledge, but how few practice it! Oh that you would practically underſtand and receive it! Sufferings is but a reſpective, external, and Temporal Evil; but Sin is an univerſal, internal, and everlaſting Evil.

4 Rule. Believe that God hath curſed and blaſted all the ways of Sin, that they ſhall never be a ſhelter to any Soul that flies for refuge to them, Mark 8. 35. Prov. 13. 15. The way of Tranſgreſſors is an hard and difficult way. There is no ſecurity in the way of Iniquity. He that runs from Suffering to Sin, runs from the ſeeming to the real danger; from the painted, to the living Lion.

5 Rule. Live up to this Principle, that there is no Policy like Sincerity and Godly Simplicity. This will preſerve and ſecure you, when Carnal Wiſdom will expoſe and betray you. Pſal. 25. 2. Job 2. 3. Sinful Policy never thrives with Saints.

6 Rule. Conſider ſadly what the Conſequence of yielding up your ſelves to Temptations will be: The Name of God will be dreadfully reproached, 2 Sam. 12. 14. A fatal Stumbling-Block is laid before the blind World, 1 Sam. 2. 36. The Hearts of many upright ones made ſad, Pſal. 25. 3. The fall of a Profeſſor is as when a Standard-bearer fainteth; and a dreadful Wound it will be to thine one Conſcience, 2 Cor. 2. 7. Math 25. 76. One hours Sleep of Security, may keep you many days and nights waking upon the rack of Horrour.

7. Rule. Never engage a Temptation in your own Strength, but go forth againſt it trembling in your ſelves, and relying on Divine Aids and Aſſiſtances, Epheſ. 6. 10. What are you to grapple with Spirits, to enter the Liſts with Principalities and Powers? Or what is your ſtrength that you ſhould hope?

8 Rule. Let the days of your Temptation, be days of ſtrong cries and ſupplications. Thus did Paul, 2 Cor. 12. 8. Pſal. 109. 4. Your beſt poſture to wreſtle with Temptation, is upon your Knees.

9 Rule. Dwell upon the conſideration of thoſe choice Encouragements God hath laid up in the World for ſuch a time. As (1) though he give Satan leave to tempt you, yet you are ſtill in his Hand to preſerve you, Deut. 33. 3. Joh. 10. 28. (2) That whilſt Satan is ſifting and trying you on Earth, Chriſt is interceeding for you in Heaven, Luke 22. 31, 32. (3) That an eternal reward is laid up for thoſe that overcome,

Luke 22. 28, 29. Rev. 21. 7, 8. And now is this reward to be won or loſt.

Laſtly, Be content till God open a door out of your Temptations, 1 Cor. 10. 13. The time of the Promiſe will come, Acts 7. 17. Wait for it, though it tarry, and ſeem to be deferred; in the end it will ſpeak, and not lie, Hab. 3. There was a ſecret door in the Ark, though it could not be ſeen whilſt the Waters prevailed: And ſo there is in all your Temptations, though at preſent it be not diſcernable by you.

And thus I have brought you one ſtep nearer to Paul's bleſſed Frame. O give diligence to make your ſelves ready for ſufferings.

CHAP. XII.

Sheweth that a choice part of our preparation and readineſs for Sufferings conſiſts in the improvement of our praying abilities, and keeping cloſe with God in that Heavenly and Excellent Duty in days of Suffering; wherein alſo of the nature, and means of its improvement.

Prayer is ſaid to be amongſt Duties, as Faith is amongſt the Graces. Doubtleſs it is of ſpecial uſe and ſervice at all times to a Chriſtian: But yet in ſuffering days it is of more than ordinary uſe and neceſſity, Heb. 4. 16. Jam. 5. 13. And therefore it is reckoned among thoſe choice pieces of Armour which ſuffering Saints are to put on, Eph. 6. 18. I will here briefly diſcover the neceſſity of it, and then ſhew you that a Chriſtian may improve himſelf to an excellent degree in it; and laſtly preſcribe ſome means for an improvement.

The neceſſity of it to a ſuffering Saint will demonſtratively appear, if you conſider;

1. That this duty is the out-let of troubles, and the beſt way the poor Chriſtian hath to eaſe his Heart when ſurcharged with Sorrow. Griefs are eaſed by Groans. Such Evaporations disburthen and cool the heart, as the opening of a Vein in ſome caſes doth. Oh the ſenſible eaſe that comes in this way! When Grief in the Mind, like Vapours in the Air, are condenſed into black Clouds, that over-ſpread the Soul, and darken that beautiful Light that once ſhone there, then Prayer like the Sun diſpels and ſcatters them. 1 Sam. 1. 18. Many a Saint by Prayer have ſucked the breaſt of a Promiſe, and then fell aſleep by Divine Contentment in the Boſom of God. A time may come, when thy Heart is ready to break with Trouble, and not a Friend to whom thou canſt open and eaſe it, and then bleſſed be God for Prayer, Micah 7. 5, 6, 7. That which ſinks others is, That when troubles fill and overwhelm their Hearts, they try what reaſon, merry Company, or outward Comforts can do: But alas! this is to palliate a Cure, it returns again with the more violence: But Prayer gives ſenſible relief, Pſal. 102. title Pſal. 62. 8. For firſt this opens and gives a vent to troubles. Jer. 20. 12. (2) It gives our troubles a diverſion, and ſo a Cure, Pſal. 5. 1. and the laſt Verſe compared. Yea (3) by praying over them, they are not only diverted but Sanctified, and ſo ceaſe to be diſtracting, or deſtroying Troubles.

2. As it gives a vent to our Troubles, ſo an in-let to unſpeakable Comforts and Conſolations. See a pregnant Inſtance of this, Act. 16. 25. For (1.) hereby they obtain gracious Anſwers from the Lord concerning their Troubles, 2 Cor. 12. 9. In this alſo they meet the gracious Smiles of God which ſwallowed up their Troubles, Pſal. 85. 8. And laſtly, hereby they prevail with God to open a ſeaſonable, and effectual door out of all their Troubles, Pſal. 34. 4, 6.

3. Prayer begets and maintains holy courage and magnanimity in evil times; when all things about you tend to diſcouragement: It is your being with Jeſus that makes you bold, Acts 4. 13. He that uſes to be before a great God, will not be afraid to look ſuch little things as Men are in the Face. The Woman cloathed with the Sun, had the Moon under her Feet. And what need you have of Courage in evil times, hath been already ſhewed.

4. This is a duty you may perform at any time, or in any condition: No Adverſary can cut you off from it. It cannot be ſaid ſo of many other Duties. None can hinder the Intercourſe betwixt Heaven and your Souls. You may perform it in a Priſon, Acts 16. 25. in a baniſhed condition, Pſal. 61. 2. And ſo is fitted for a Suffering Condition.

Laſtly, you muſt ſtrive to excel in this, foraſmuch as no Grace within, or Service without can thrive without it. God hath ordained the whole work of Grace to grow up to Perfection this way, Jud. 19. 20. He will have all Mercies fetched out this way, Ezek. 36. 37. Jer. 29. 11, 12, 13. All that comes from God to you, or to you from God, muſt come in this Channel. Be convinced then of the need you have to improve your ſelves herein, as ever you hope to ſtand in the evil day.

But how are theſe praying Abilities capable of Improvement in the People of God?

Praying Abilities are either external and common, or elſe internal and ſpecial: The external and common Ability is nothing elſe but that dexterity and skill Men get to expreſs themſelves to God in Prayer. Thus many can put their meaning into apt and decent Expreſſions, to which the Spirit ſometimes adds his common touches upon the Affections. And this Hypocrites reſt and glory in: Or elſe they are ſpecial and Internal, whereby Men are enabled to pour out their Souls to God in a gracious manner. And this may be conſidered either in the Habit or the Act. The Habit is given by the Spirit, when the Principles of Grace are firſt infuſed into the Soul, Zech. 12. 10. Acts 9. 11. By being ſanctified we are made near, and by acting thoſe principles in Prayer we are ſaid to draw near to our actual drawing near to God, the Spirit hath the chief and principal Hand: And his aſſiſtance therein is three-fold.

1. He excites the Heart to the duty; 'tis that whiſpers to the Soul to draw nigh to God, Pſal. 27. 8.

2. He ſuggeſts the matter of our Prayers and furniſheth us with the materials, Rom. 8. 26. Guiding us as to the matter, not only to what is lawful, but alſo to what is expedient for us.

3. He ſtirreth up ſuitable affections in Prayer, Rom. 8. 26. And hence thoſe Groans and Tears, thoſe gaſpings and vehement anhelations. But notwithſtanding all our Abilities, both Habitual and Actual, be from the Spirit, and not from your ſelves, yet are they capable of improvement by us: For though in reſpect of acquirement, there be a great difference betwixt natural and ſupernatural Habits, yet their improvement is in the ſame way and manner; and this improvement may be made divers ways. For,

Firſt, Though you have the Spirit and can pray, yet you may learn to pray more humbly than before: Though you riſe no higher as to words, yet you may learn to lay your ſelves lower before the Lord, as Abraham and Ezra did, Gen. 18. 27. Ezra 9. 6.

Secondly, You may learn to pray with more ſincerity than formerly: Ah! there is much Hypocriſie and Formality in our Prayers, much of Cuſtom, &c. Now, you may learn to pour out more Cordial Prayers. See Pſal. 17. 1. Pſal. 119. 10.

Thirdly, You may learn to pray with more zeal and earneſtneſs than before: Some Saints have excelled, and been remarkable for this, Dan. 9. 19. Hoſ. 12. 4. Jam. 5. 16.

Fourthly, with more aſſiduity and readineſs at all times for it, Epheſ. 6. 18. Praying always, with all Prayer. Hence Chriſt gives that Commendation to the Church, Cant. 4. 11. Thy Lips, O my Spouſe, drop as the Hony Comb. The Hony Comb often Drops, but always hangs full of drops ready to fall.

Fifthly, You may learn to pray with more Faith: Oh the qualms of Unbelief, that go over our Hearts in a Duty; Faith is the Soul of Prayer, and according to the Faith God finds in them, he accepts and values them. Now in all theſe things you may improve your ſelves abundantly.

1. By being more frequent in the duty, Job. 22. 21. acquaint thy ſelf with the Almighty; in the Hebrew it is, accuſtom thy ſelf: Thoſe that have been excellent, have alſo been abundant in it, Pſal. 15. 17.

2. By taking heed that you grieve not the Spirit, on whoſe influences and aſſiſtances, you ſo intirely depend: Even as much as a Ship doth upon the Gales of Wind for its motion.

3. By honouring the Spirit which enables you to pray, and that eſpecially two ways; (1) By dependance on him; go not forth in your own ſtrength to the duty, truſt not upon your promptneſs, or preparations. (2) By returning and with thankfulneſs aſcribing the Praiſe of all to him; Be humble under all Enlargements: Say, Not I, but Grace.

4. By ſearching your own Hearts, and examining your neceſſities and wants, when you draw nigh to God; this will be a Fountain of Matter, and give you a deep Reſentment of the worth of Mercies prayed for.

5. Laſtly, By looking more at the exerciſe of Graces, and leſs at the diſcovery of Parts; by labouring for impreſſions more, and pumping for expreſſions leſs. And thus I have briefly ſhewed you, how to furniſh your ſelves with this needful Qualification alſo.

CHAP. XIII.

Wherein is ſhewed the neceſſity of going out of our ſelves, even when our habitual and actual Preparations are at the greateſt height; and depending as conſtantly and intirely upon the Spirit, who is Lord of all gracious Influences, as if we had done nothing: Together with the means of Working the Heart to ſuch a Frame.

THus you have ſeen your habitual and actual readineſs for Sufferings, and bleſſed is the Soul that gives diligence to this Work: But now, leſt all that I have ſaid, and you have wrought, ſhould be in vain; I muſt let you know, that all this will not ſecure you, unleſs you can by Humility, Faith, and Self-denial, go out of your ſelves to Chriſt, and live upon him daily for ſupply of Grace, as much as if you had none of all this Furniture and Proviſion for Sufferings. I confeſs, Grace is a very beautiful and lovely Creature, and it's hard for a Man to look upon his own Graces, and not dote upon them. But yet know, that if you had all theſe excellent preparations that have been mentioned, yea, and all Angelical Perfections ſuperadded, yet are you not complete without this dependance upon Chriſt, Col. 2. 10 When ever you go forth to ſuffer for Chriſt, you ſhould ſay in the Head of all your excellent Graces, Duties, and Preparations, as Jehoſaphat did, when in the Head of a Puiſant and Mighty Army, 2 Chron. 20. 12. O Lord, I have no might nor ſtrength, but my eyes are unto thee. This was one thing in which Paul excelled, and was a ſpecial part of his readineſs. See 1 Cor. 15. 10. What a poor Creature is the eminenteſt Saint, left to himſelf in an hour of trial, the Hop, the Ivy and the Woodbind, are taught by nature to cling about ſtronger Props and Supporters: What they do by Nature, we ſhould do by Grace.

The neceſſity and great Advantage of this, will appear upon divers Conſiderations.

1. Conſid. 1. The Chriſtians own imbecillity and inſufficiency even in the ſtrength and height of all his Acquirements and preparations: What are you, to grapple with ſuch an Adverſary? Certainly, you are no Match for him that conquered Adam hand to hand in his ſtate of Integrity. It is not your inherent ſtrength that enables you to ſtand, but what you receive, and daily derive from Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 15. 5. Without me, or never ſo little ſeparated from me, ye can do nothing, all your ſufficiency is of God, 2 Cor. 3. 5. Upon this very conſideration it was, that the Apoſtle exhorts the Epheſians, to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, (i. e.) not to depend upon their own ſtock and furniture, but Divine Aſſiſtances, and daily Communications; for we wreſtle not with fleſh and blood, but Principalities and Powers, Epheſ. 6. 10, 12. In his own ſtrength ſhall no Man prevail.

2. Conſid. It is the great deſign of God in the Goſpel, to exalt his Son, and to have all glory attributed and aſcribed to him, That in all things be might have the preheminence, Col. 1. 13. That Chriſt might be all in all, Col. 3. 11. Hence, no Saint muſt have a ſelf-ſufficiency, or be truſted with a ſtock as Adam was, but Chriſt being filled with all the fulneſs of God, and made the πρῶτον δεκτικὸν, or firſt Receptacle of all Grace: For it pleaſed the Father, that in him all fulneſs ſhould dwell; all the Saints are therefore to go to him for ſupplies, and of his fulneſs to receive, John. 1. 16. This fulneſs being a Miniſterial fulneſs, like that of the Sun, or of a Fountain, intended to ſupply all our wants. And hence is it that Faith, a ſelf-emptying and denying Grace, is appointed to be the inſtrument of fetching our ſupplies from Chriſt. All muſt be derived from him, that all the Praiſe and Glory may be aſcribed to him, Phil. 4. 14. And this is a moſt wiſe and congruous Ordination of God, for hereby not only are his People the better ſecured, but by this alſo, the reproach that lay upon Chriſt is rolled away. He was reproached on Earth, as Barren, Empty, Weak; Can any good come out of Nazareth? He was looked upon as a Root ſpringing out of a dry ground, but by this ſhall his Reproach be wiped away: So that unleſs you will go about to croſs the great deſign of God, in the Exaltation of his Chriſt, you muſt go out of your ſelves, and humbly, and conſtantly rely upon ſupplies from Chriſt, and his grace, to help in the times of need.

3. Conſid. A Chriſtian is conſtantly to depend upon Chriſt, notwithſtanding all his own Preparations, and inherent qualifications, becauſe the activity even of inherent Grace depends upon him. Inherent Grace is beholding to exciting and aſſiſting Grace for all it is enabled to do. You cannot act a Grace without his Spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 10. 2 Cor. 3. 5. John 15. 5. It may be ſaid of Grace in us, as it was of the Land of Canaan, Deut. 11. 10, 11, 12. It is not as the land of Egypt whence ye came out, where thou ſowedſt thy ſeed, and wateredſt it with thy foot, as a Garden of Herbs: But a Land of Hills and Vallies, drinking water of the Rain of Heaven, a Land which the Lord thy God cared for: his Eyes are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even to the end of the year. As the life and fragrancy of Vegetables, depends on the Influences of Heaven, ſo do our Graces upon Chriſt. And hence, he is called, (1) A Root, Iſa. 11. 10. (2) An Head, Col. 1. 18. (3) A Sun, Mal. 4. 2. (4) A Fountain, Zech. 13. 1. all which Compariſons do fully carry this Truth in them.

4. Conſid. Laſtly in this life of dependance lies your ſecurity; And indeed this is the great difference, betwixt the two Covenants: In the firſt, Adam's ſtock was in his own hands, and ſo his Security or Miſery depended upon the unconſtrained choice of his own mutable and ſelf determining Will. But now in the New Covenant, all are to go to Chriſt, to depend upon him for ſupplies, and are ſo ſecured againſt all deſtructive dangers, Jude 1. 1 Pet. 1. 5. Should you go forth in your own ſtrength againſt a Temptation; either your grace would fail, and you fall in the Conflict: Or if you obtain any Victory over it by your own ſtrength, yet 'tis a thouſand to one but your Pride would conquer you, when you had conquered it: Like him that ſlew an Elephant, but was himſelf ſlain by the fall of that Elephant which he ſlew. But now, by this way, as God hath ſecured you againſt the Dangers without; ſo alſo the frame and conſtitution of this New Covenant is ſuch, as prevents the danger ariſing from our own Pride too. Not Ego & Deus meus; I and my God did this: as was once ſaid by a Prophane Mouth; But ſelf is abaſed, and the Lord lifted up in his own ſtrength, 1 Cor. 47. And thus I have briefly evinced the neceſſity of this daily Dependance.

But next it concerns you to know, what this dependance we ſpeak of is: This alſo I ſhall briefly open to you, laying down ſomewhat negatively, and ſomewhat poſitively about it.

1. Neg. It is not to deny the Grace wrought in us by the Spirit; this were both injuſtice and ingratitude: We may know our own graces ſo, as to be thankful for them, tho' not ſo as to be proud of them, 1 Cor. 15. 10.

2 Neg. It is not a lazy excuſe from our duty: You do not depend, but rather diſhonour Chriſt by ſo doing; you muſt not ſay, becauſe Chriſt muſt do all, therefore I muſt do nothing; but rather work out your Salvation, becauſe it's he that worketh both to will and to do, Phil. 2. 12, 13. Theſe are not oppoſed, but ſubbordinated.

But then poſitively, it lies in Three things.

1 Poſit. In ſeeing and acknowledging the infinite ſufficiency and fulneſs that is in Chriſt: To acknowledge him to be all in all; not only by way of Impetration procuring all, Heb. 9. 12. But alſo by way of Application, bringing home to the Soul all the Bleſſings purchaſed by his Blood, and ſettling us in the poſſeſſion of it, John 14. 3. And ſo from firſt to laſt to eye him as the Author and Finiſher of our Faith.

2 Poſit. In ſeeing the neceſſary dependance that all our Graces have upon him. That look as you ſee the Stream depending on the Fountain, the Beam upon the Sun, the Branch upon the Root, the building upon the Foundation, even ſo do our Graces upon Chriſt: On him they live, and cut off from him they die. Our life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. 3. 3. When you ſee this, and alſo ſee that all your activity and ſtriving is but as the hoyſting up of the Sails, in order to the motion of the Ship, which can do nothing till there come a Gale: When you look upon your Grace as a Creature that muſt be upheld, fed, acted and preſerved by Chriſt, Col. 2. 19. Then you are prepared for this act of dependance: As for Inſtance, you can never depend upon Chriſt for the acting of that Grace of Hope, until you ſee Chriſt to be the Prop and Foundation of it, and that it depends upon him as upon its cauſe; 1 Pet. 1. 3. as upon its object, Heb. 6. 19. and as upon its foundation and ground Work, Col. 1. 27.

You can never depend upon Chriſt for your joy and comfort, until you ſee what a neceſſary dependance this alſo hath upon him, Phil. 3. 3. And that both as to its being and acting, John 16. 22.

You can never depend upon him for ſtrength in any Duty, until you ſee how your Duties depend upon Chriſt, not only for the ſtrength by which they are performed, John 15. 4, 5. But alſo for Acceptation when they are performed, 1 Pet. 2. 5. It were eaſie to inſtance in any other Grace.

(3.) It lies in * looking off from your own Grace when ever you are put upon the acting of it, (I mean in regard of any dependance upon it) and looking by an eye of Faith for acceptation to Chriſt, Heb. 12. 2. To the putting forth of which acts of Dependance upon Chriſt, holy Ejaculations in our on-ſets upon duty, or thoſe quick and vigorous lifting up of our Souls to God that way, are of ſpecial uſe, it being a Duty fitted for the purpoſe, when there is no room for ſet and ſolemn Prayer, and thus briefly of its nature.

* Ἀφορῶντες εἰς τὸν τῆς πίστεως ἀρχηγὸν, Looking off to the Author of our Faith.

And to urge you to this Duty, I ſhall offer theſe Seven Conſiderations; which, Oh, that they might prevail upon your Hearts, and make you for ever to claſp and cling about Chriſt more than ever you have done.

1 Conſid. You have little reaſon to rely upon the ſtrength of your own Graces, for you may eaſily be deceived in that matter, and think you have much more Grace than you have. How often are the common Gifts of the Spirit miſtaken for his ſpecial Graces! The Sixth Chapter to the Hebrews is able to make a Man Tremble in this thing.

2 Conſid. Suppoſe you have much Grace, yet have you not ſtrong Corruptions, and may you not meet with ſtrong Temptations alſo? He that hath leſs of other Graces than you, may have more Humility and Self-denial than you, and ſo may ſtand when you fall. Great inlargements are often attended with great Temptations of Pride. &c.

3 Conſid. Whatever meaſures of Grace you have arrived at, yet all is not able to ſecure you from falling, if God with-hold or withdraw his Aids and Influences. Abraham had more Faith than you, and yet he fell into a ſin contrary to that very Grace wherein he ſo excelled others, Gen. 20. 2. Job had more Patience than you; which of you could behave your ſelves as he did, had you been in the like circumſtances as he was, Chap. 1. 2. He is renowned for it in the Scripture, Jam. 5. 11. yet he fell into that ſin which was contrary to this Grace alſo, Chap. 3. Moſes had more meekneſs than you: Now the Man Moſes was the meekeſt Man upon the Earth. If you be but reproved, and that juſtly for your faults, how Waſpiſh are you? Yet ſee how this Grace failed even in him, in an eminent trial of it, Numb. 11. 13, 14, 15. Adam was much more advantaged in this reſpect than you, being made upright, and no corruption inherent in him, yet he fell: The Angels more again, yet they fell. Oh when will you learn the vanity of ſelf-dependance!

4 Conſid. Nothing more provoketh the Lord to withdraw his Spirit, and let you fall, than this ſin of ſelf-confidence doth, Luke 14. 29, 30, 31. God will teach you by ſad experience your own weakneſs, and what frail and vain things you be, if you will learn it by no other means.

5 Conſid. If God permit you to fall (as doubtleſs he will if you be ſelf-conceited) then the more eminent you have been, or are for Grace, the more will the Name of God be Reproached by your fall. This will furniſh the Triumphs of the Uncircumciſed, and the Lamentations of your Brethren, and make them ſay, How are the mighty fallen! What diſmal conſequents will attend your fall!

6 Conſid. Have you not ſad experience of your own weakneſs from day to day in your leſſer trials? Have you not ſaid in ſome ſmaller conflicts, as David once did? My Feet were well nigh ſlipt. O methinks this ſhould teach you to look more to God, and leſs to ſelf. If you have run with Footmen, and they have wearied you in the Land of peace, think ſadly how you ſhould contend with Horſes in the ſwellings of Jordan. Do not you ſee that you are but Feathers in the Wind of Temptation? Conſult your former experiences, and they will tell you what weaklings you are.

7 Conſid. Laſtly, Hath Chriſt given you more Grace than others, then how much more hath he obliged you to honour him thereby? And is this your Requital of his love? What to take the Crown from his Head, and put it upon your own! Certainly a greater injury cannot be done to Chriſt than this.

Well then, by all this be perſwaded to ceaſe from your ſelves, yea from your Religious ſelves; and to all other your preparations, add this as a choice one; If you do theſe things, you ſhall never fall: And thus you ſee the compleat Chriſtian in his Equipage for Sufferings.

CHAP. XIV.

Containing the firſt uſe of the point by way of conviction, diſcovering the unreadineſs of multitudes of Profeſſors for ſuffering-work.

YOU have ſeen by all that hath been ſpoken, what the neceſſary perquiſites unto a ſuffering condition are; and what manner of perſons you muſt be (both for habitual and actual readineſs) if ever you honour Chriſt by Bonds or Death for him. And I doubt not but your Judgments and Conſciences yield to the evident neceſſity of theſe things, wherein I have placed the Chriſtians readineſs. But alas! Where ſhall we find among the throngs and crowds of Profeſſors, any conſiderable numbers thus qualified and prepared? To ſuffer for Chriſt, is a gift that few have received. We are fall'n into the dregs of time. Oh how little of the Primitive zeal and ſimplicity remains among the Profeſſors of this Age! Latter times have produced a ſort of Profeſſors of another ſtamp and Spirit. Theſe have the Light, but they had the love : theſe ſee more, but they did and ſuffered more. How many that are no ornament to religion, do adorn themſelves with the name of it!

Now according to this account given of a ready Chriſtian, divers profeſſing perſons will be convicted of their unreadineſs and inability to manage ſuffering work : As firſt,

1. The politick and hypocritical Profeſſors, whoſe hearts were never ſet right at firſt, and therefore cannot be ſtedfaſt when trials come, Pſal. 78. 8. Their hearts were never ſound in Gods ſtatutes, and therefore no wonder if they be not only a ſhame to, but aſhamed of their profeſſion, Pſal. 119. 80. Never wonder if you ſee that profeſſion which began in hypocriſie, to end in apoſtacy. Theſe want their habitual readineſs for ſufferings, and ſo cannot drink of that Cup : Needs muſt they fall when tried ; and when they fall, they fall dreadfully, and often irrecoverably, for they neither have the ſeed of God in them, nor any promiſe of God made to them.

And are there not many ſuch to be found in every place? For (1) how difficult is it to perſwade many of you to any duty that hath loſs or hazard attending on it. Doth not the ſincere heart ſtand inclinable and diſpoſed to all the known will of God? Pſal. 119. 6. Do Chriſtians uſe to enquire more what is cheap, eaſie, and ſafe for them, or what is their duty? Gal. 1. 16. Speak Conſcience, for to thee do I appeal ; Art thou not conſcious of ſome reſerves, limitations, and exceptions? Doth not the man like Naaman deſire the Lord to excuſe and pardon him in this or that thing? 2 Kings 5. 17. And thinkeſt thou that this is conſiſtent with ſincere obedience which excepts no duty, nor quarrels with any command, becauſe they all flow equally from the Soveraignty of God? Jam. 2. 11. And ſo doth what it doth intuitu voluntatis, upon the ſight of Gods Will. Say Conſcience, are there not great ſtruglings, diſputes and conteſts betwixt thee, and fleſhly intereſts in ſuch caſes? And art thou not frequently over-born? Oh ſearch your hearts in this particular.

Yea, ſecondly, I appeal to you, whether there be not many among you that chooſe ſin rather than affliction? This is always the Hypocrites option and choice : He judges ſufferings the greateſt evils, and ſo orders himſelf in his election. It was meerly to avoid perſecution that thoſe Hypocrites, Gal. 6. 12. conſtrained others to be circumciſed, only to gratifie the Jews ; that ſo by a ſinful compliance with them, the offence of the Croſs might ceaſe. If Paul would have done ſo, he might have avoided it too, but he durſt not whatever he ſuffered, Gal. 5. 11. Oh this is a ſhrewd ſign of a falſe heart, Job. 36. 21. And the contrary diſpoſition is always found in the upright heart, Heb. 11. 25.

Nay, are there not ſome that have, and others that are ready to throw up their Profeſſion, when they ſee into what difficulties it involves them? Whilſt they could live upon the Profeſſion of Truth, they entertained it ; but when Truth comes to live upon them, they thruſt it out, and cry, Away with this Profeſſion, it will beggar and undo us : They then repent of their forwardneſs, and ſecretly wiſh they had never ingaged in it. O examine whether your hearts be not thus turned back, and your ſteps declined. If ſo, it's manifeſt you are hypocritical Profeſſors, and that it was ſome outward ſelf-reſpect that firſt ingaged you in your Profeſſion, but can never enable you to hold out when difficult days come. I ſay it's manifeſt by this departure from your profeſſion, that ſome outward ſelf-reſpect at firſt allured you to it. As now, when I behold the artificial motions of the Wheels in a Watch, and ſee how regularly the Needle marks the journal hours of the Sun upon the flat of the Quadrant, and ſee nothing that moves or guides it ; It would cauſe admiration if I had never ſeen it before, or did not underſtand the cauſe of that motion : but when I look upon the other ſide, and there find Wheels, Reſſorts, and Counterpoiſes, and a Spring that cauſes all thoſe motions, I ceaſe to wonder ; certainly ſome Luſt or other was the Spring of all thy religious motions ; ſtop or take off that, and motion ceaſes : And if it be ſo, this Scab of Hypocriſie will at laſt break out into the Botch of Apoſtacy. Thou canſt never hold out long under Trials, Matth. 13. 21. Oh how many ſuch ſad ſights may we live to ſee as Trials come! Difficult times are coming on, 2 Tim. 3. 1. And wo to ſuch then as want ſincerity at the bottom of their Profeſſion.

2. And as theſe have no habitual readineſs for ſufferings, and conſequently muſt be ruin'd by them, ſo there are others that may be truly godly, and have the root of the matter in them, who are yet far from an actual readineſs, and ſo continuing, are like to be a reproach to Religion when their trial come. For it is not a little Grace in the ſleepy habit that will ſecure you from falling ſcandalouſly by the hand of temptation : And although that Seed of God which is in you, will recover you again, and prevent total and final Apoſtacy, yet, oh, conſider what a ſad thing it is to enter into, and be conquered by temptation, to be led away in triumph by the Tempter, and made a reproach to Chriſt. O it's a ſad conſideration to think how many there be amongſt the People of God, that diſcover little or no actual preparation for ſufferings, As firſt ;

1. Upon how many of the Saints is the Spirit of ſlumber poured out : Even the wiſe as well as fooliſh ſeem now to be a ſleep. There is a twofold ſpiritual ſleep ; the firſt is total, upon wicked men : and it's one of Gods ſoreſt and dreadfulleſt ſtrokes upon their Soul, Iſa. 29. 10. The Hebrew word there is the ſame with that which is uſed of Adam, when God caſt him into a deep ſleep whilſt he took out his rib. And in 2 Tim. 2. 26. It ſignifies ſuch a ſleep as that which is occaſioned by drunkenneſs ; out of ſuch a ſleep doth the Lord awaken all that are ſaved, and they never fall into it any more. The other is partial, Cant. 5. 2. and is incident to the People of God, Matth. 25. 5. This is nothing thing elſe but that torpor or ſluggiſhneſs of ſpirit which ſeizeth upon the Saints, and never did it prevail, I fear among them, more then now. For where is their activity for God? Where is he that ſtirreth up himſelf to take hold of God? Iſa. 64. 7. Where is there ſuch a Generation as that, Pſal. 24. 6. we pray, confer, and hear for the moſt part, but as men ſpeak betwixt ſleeping and waking. Where you can find, except here and there one, that hath a quick and lively ſenſe of Gods indignation upon him, or that trembles at his judgments? Is not that the very caſe of the moſt which God deſcribes? Iſa. 42. ult.

2. How many are ſeized by a private and worldly Spirit, every man turning to his own houſe, and eagerly purſuing the world? Hab. 1. 9. Jer. 45. 4. Oh! how are we intangled in the Wilderneſs? How doth the world eat up our time, and eat out our Zeal, cowardice and ſoften our ſpirits, and render us utterly unfit for the Yoke and Burden of Chriſt? You that ſee ſo much Beauty, and taſte ſo much ſweetneſs in the Creature, will you have an hard Tugg when call'd to deny it: You are not yet prepared to drink of the Cup, or take up the Croſs of Chriſt.

3. How many poor Chriſtians are of a low and timerous ſpirit, ready to tremble at the ſhaking of a leaf: Ah poor hearts! how unfit are you for Bonds or Death? This paſſion of fear that ſo predominates in you, is the very paſſion which Satan aſſaults,and lays ſiege to in the hour of temptation, as was before noted: And commonly it's occaſioned (where it flows not from the Natural Conſtitution,from an exceſſive love to the world, or from ſome guilt upon the ſpirit. Its true, the Lord can ſo aſſiſt weak Faith, and ſo ſubdue ſtrong fears, as that you may be enabled to ſtand the ſhock when it comes: (For, as I noted formerly, our ſtrength lies not in any thing inherent in us, but we are ſtrong or weak, according to the divine preſence and aſſiſtances that we enjoy) but yet if you labour not to mortifie this Evil, and ſtir not up your ſelves in the uſe of all appointed means, to rouze your Zeal and Courage for God, I know no Warrant you have to expect ſuch aſſiſtances.

Laſtly, how many poor Chriſtians among us are to this day dark and cloudy in their Evidences for Heaven? Had they walked cloſely with God, been laborious in the diſquiſition and ſearch of their own hearts, they had long ſince obtained a clearneſs and ſatiſfaction about the ſtate of their own hearts: But as the caſe ſtands with them, how unfit are they for Bonds or Death. Oh! 'tis a ſad caſe, when inward and outward Troubles meet together, as you may ſee, Gen. 42: 21, 22. when there ſhall be fightings without, and fears within: When ſuch a pang as that, Lam. 3. 17, 18. ſhall come over thy heart, what wilt thou do?

By all that hath been ſaid, it appears, that the moſt of Profeſſors are in a very unready poſture for ſufferings; So that as Troubles come to an height, we are like to ſee many ſad Spectacles: Many offences will come; Religion is like to be wounded in the houſe of it's friends. Oh! what a day of Mercy have we enjoyed? What helps and choice advantages, above any precedent Age, and yet unready? How ſad and inexcuſable is this?

CHAP. XV.

Containing another uſe of the Point, by way of Exhortation, perſwading all the People of God, Whilſt the Lord reſpites, and graciouſly delays their trials, to anſwer the end of God therein, and prepare themſelves for greater trials; where ſeveral Motives are propounded, to excite to the Duty.

UP then from your beds of ſloth, awake from your ſecurity, O ye Saints; get upon your Watch-Towers, tremble in your ſelves, that ye may reſt in the Day of Evil, Hab. 2. 1, 3, 16. Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand in the evil day, and when you have done all to ſtand, Eph. 6. O let it never be ſaid of your Dwellings as it is of the Tabernacles of the wicked, Job. 21. 9. Their Houſes are ſafe from fear.

Auguſtus hearing of one that was deeply in debt, who yet ſlept heartily, ſent for his Pillow, ſuppoſing there was ſome ſtrange vertue in that Pillow. I wonder what Pillow you have gotten, O ye drowſie Saints, that you can ſleep ſo quietly upon it, now that all things about you are conſpiring trouble, and threatning danger. Can you ſleep like Jonah, when Seas of wrath are tumbling and roaring round about you, and threaten to entomb you and all your enjoyments? Behold, The Stork in the Heavens knows her appointed time, Jer. 7. 8. and hath not God made you wiſer than the Fowls of the Air, Job. 35. 11. It may be the ſound of ſome preſent Judgment may a little ſtartle you, like a ſudden clap of Thunder in the Air; but how ſoon doth Sloth and Security prevail and overcome you again. They ſay Poyſon by being habituated, may be made innocent: We are ſo uſed to, or rather hardned under calamities, that nothing moves or effectually awakens us. Lord what will the end of theſe things be? Wilt thou ſurprize thy people at unawares? Shall thy judgments find them ſecure, and leave them deſperate? O that God would perſwade you to gather your ſelves together, yea to gather together, (not in an unlawful and ſeditious way) but in the way of duty, before the decree bring forth, and the day paſs as the chaff, Zeph. 2. 1, 2. O prepare to meet your God, Amos. 4 12. Prepare your faith, love, courage, &c. before God call you to the exerciſe of them.

And to excite you to this duty, beſides all the fore-mentioned benefits of a prepared Spirit, conſider theſe following particulars by way of motive.

1 Mot. The many Calls which God hath given you to this work. The Lord hath uttered his voice, and called from Heaven unto you; will you be deaf to his Calls? He hath called upon you (1) By the Word: God would have it cry to you firſt, becauſe he would give the firſt honour to his Word. He hath given all his Prophets one mouth, Luk. 1. 70. and they have warned you faithfully.

(2) By the Rod: This alſo hath a loud voice, Micah 6. 9. Pſal. 2. 5. Men of underſtanding will hear this voice; and thoſe that will not hear it, ſhall be laſhed by it even till they are ſick with ſmiting, verſe 13. (3) By prodigious and portentious ſigns in the Heavens and Earth, ſuch as no Age can parallel, theſe have a loud voice to all that regard the works of the Lord, or the operations of his hands. Euſebius calls them Gods Sermons to the World. Oh that we were wiſe to conſider what Gods ends are in theſe things! One obſerves, That as they are the plaineſt and moſt obvious to ſenſe, ſo they are commonly the laſt Sermons which God intends to preach to Nations, before he inflicts his puniſhment on them, if they repent not. O let not God, ſpeaking in ordinary and extraordinary ways to you, ſtill ſpeak in vain.

τὰ τȣ̃ θεȣ̃ κηρύγματα. Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 3. cap. 8.

Your preparation for ſufferings, is the moſt probable means of preventing your fall and ruine by thoſe ſufferings. 2. Mot. Sufferings prove fatal and deſtructive to ſome; but it is to ſecure and careleſs ones: Such as are diligent and faithful in the uſe of Gods means, are ſecured from the danger. Chriſt lays our conſtancy and perſeverance very much upon our fore-caſting the worſt that may fall out, Luke 14. 28. Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to ſtand, Epheſ. 6. He that hath firſt ſevered Chriſt in his thoughts from all worldly advantages, and put the caſe thus to his own Soul, O my Soul, canſt thou embrace or love a naked Chriſt? Canſt thou be content to be impoveriſhed, impriſoned, and ſuffer the loſs of all for him? He is moſt likely to cleave faithfully to him, when the caſe is really preſented to him indeed. And can it ſeem a light thing in your eyes, to be enabled to ſtand in ſuch an evil day? If you fall away from Chriſt, then all that you have wrought is loſt, Ezek. 33. 13. Gideons one Baſtard deſtroyed all his ſeventy Sons. This act renders all former actions and profeſſions vain. If you fall, you ſhall thereby be brought into a more perfect bondage to the Devil than ever, Matth. 12. 23. Yea, ordinarily Apoſtates are judicially given up to be Perſecutors, Hoſ. 5. 12. 1 Tim. 1. 20. and are ſeldom or never recovered again by Grace, Heb. 6. 4, 6. They that lick up their vomit, ſeldom caſt it up any more. It is a fall, within a little as low as the unpardonable ſin, whence never any riſe again. In ſome caſes the Judge will not allow the Offender his book. And is it not then a choice and deſirable mercy to eſcape and prevent ſuch a fall as this: O good Souls, ply your preparation-work cloſe then; prepare, or you periſh.

3. This will beſt anſwer the Grace of God, in affording you ſuch choice helps and advantages as you have enjoyed. How long have you enjoyed the free liberty of the Goſpel, ſhining in its luſtre among you? This Sun which to ſome other nations hath not riſen, and to divers on whom it hath ſhined, yet it is but as a Winters Sun, remote, and its Beams but feeble: But you have lived as it were under the Line, it hath been over your Heads, and ſhed its richeſt influences upon you. Yea, Gods Miniſters, who are not only appointed to be Watchmen, Ezek. 3. 16. but Trumpeters to diſcover danger, Numb. 10. 8. Theſe have faithfully warned you of a day of trouble, and given you their beſt aſſiſtance to make you ready for it. And is not their joy, yea life bound up in your ſtability in ſuch a day of Trial? Doth not every one of them call upon you in the words of the Apoſtle, Phil. 4. 1. Therefore my Brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and Crown, ſo ſtand faſt in the Lord my dearly Beloved. Will it not cut them to the very heart, if after all their ſpending labours among you, they ſtill leave you unready? Enemies ſtill to the Croſs of Chriſt, impoſſible to be reconciled and perſwaded to ſuffering-work for Chriſt.

I remember I have read of the Athenian Codrus, who being informed by the Oracle, that the People whoſe King ſhould be ſlain in Battle ſhould be Conquerors: He thereupon diſrobed himſelf, and in a diſguiſe went into the Enemies Quarters, that he might ſteal a death to make his People victorious.

Oh! how glad would your Miniſters be, if you might conquer, and overcome in the day of temptation, whatever become of their lives and liberties! Yea, and if they be offered up upon the ſacrifice and ſervice of your Faith, they can rejoyce, and joy with you all. Such is their zeal and longing after your ſecurity and welfare. But if ſtill you remain an unready People, and do become a prey to temptation, Oh how inexcuſable will you be!

4. Remember how ready the Lord Jeſus was to ſuffer the hardeſt and vileſt things for you. He had a bitter Cup put into his hands to drink for you, into which the wrath both of God and man was ſqueezed out. Never had man ſuch ſufferings to undergo as Chriſt, whether you conſider (1) the dignity of his Perſon, who was in the form of God, and might have ſtood upon his Peerage and Equality with him, he is the Sparkling Diamond of Heaven, Acts 7. 56. The Darling of the Fathers Soul, Iſa. 42. 1. Glorious as the Only begotten of the Father, John 1. 14. yea, glory it ſelf, James 2. 1. yea, the very brightneſs of glory, Heb. 1. 3. He is the deliciæ Chriſtiani orbis, fairer than the Sons of men: And for him to be ſo debaſed, below ſo many thouſands of his own Creatures, become a Worm, and no man; this was a wonderful humiliation. It was Jeremiah's lamentation, that ſuch as were brought up in Scarlet, imbraced Dung-hills; that Princes were hanged up by the Hands, and the faces of Elders were not reverenced. But what was that to the Humiliation of the Lord of Glory? Or (2) that he ſuffered in the prime and flower of his years; when full of life and ſenſe, and more capable of exquiſite ſenſe of pain than others: For he was optime complexionatus, of a ſingular Conſtitution; and all the while he hanged on the Tree, his ſenſe of pain not at all blunted or decayed, Mark 15. 37, 39. Or (3) the manner of his death. It was the death of the Croſs, which was a Rack to Chriſt: for in reference to the diſtention of his members upon the Croſs is that ſpoken, Pſal. 22. 17. I may tell all my Bones Or (4)

Dolor Chriſti it ma omnib dolori Aquin.

Aquin.

That all this while God hid his face from him. When Stephen ſuffered, he ſaw the Heavens opened. The Martyrs were many of them raviſhed and tranſported with extaſies of joy in their ſufferings; but Chriſt in the dark. He ſuffered in his Soul as well as in his Body; and the ſufferings of his Soul, were the very Soul of his ſufferings. It was the Fathers wrath that lay ſo heavy on him, as to put him into ſuch an Agony that an inſtance was never given of the like nature: For he ſweat θρόμβοι great drops, or clodders of Blood, which fell from his Body to the grouud, Luke 22. 24. It amazed him, and made him very heavy. See Mark 14. 33. yea, ſorrowful even to death, Matth. 26. 38.

And yet as bitter as the Cup was, he freely and willingly drank it up, John 18. 11. Prepared himſelf to be offered up a ſacriſice, Pſal. 40. 6, 7. Gave his back to the ſmiters, Iſa. 50. 6. yea longed exceedingly for the time till it came, Luke 12. 50.

Now, if Chriſt ſo chearfully prepared and addreſt himſelf to ſuch ſufferings as theſe for you, ſhould you not prepare your ſelves to encounter any difficulty or hardſhip for him? O my Brethren, Doth not this ſeem a juſt and fair inference to you, from the ſufferings of Chriſt for you? 1 Pet. 4. 1. Foraſmuch then as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh, arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame mind.

Oh trifle no longer, feed not your ſelves with fancies and groundleſs preſumptions of immunity and peace, but fore-ſee difficulties, and fit your ſelves to bear them.

CHAP. XVI.

Containing the laſt uſe of the point, by way of ſupport and comfort to poor trembling Souls, who do take pains to make themſelves ready for Sufferings; but yet finding ſuch ſtrength in Satan's Temptations, and their own Corruptions, fear that all their labour is in vain, and that they ſhall faint, and utterly Apoſtatize, when their Troubles and Tryals come to an height.

IN the laſt place, if it be ſuch a bleſſed thing to be ready for Bonds, or Death for Chriſt, this may miniſter much Comfort to ſuch Souls, who though they cannot ſay as Paul here did, that they are ready; yet are at work daily upon their own hearts to make them ready, and ſtrive in the uſe of all means to conquer thoſe Corruptions that hinder it, and improve thoſe Graces in which it mainly conſiſteth. O poor Soul, what ever preſent unreadineſs or indiſpoſition thou findeſt, and complaineſt of in thine heart, yet thy condition is ſafe.

Ob. Oh! but I cannot be ſatisfied in that: I fear I ſhall be over-born by Temptations, when they come to an height. I have ſuch experience of the Deceits and Treacherouſneſs of my own heart, that it ſeems impoſſible to me to do as theſe bleſſed Souls did, when I come to the like Tryals.

Sol. It's well thou ſuſpecteſt thine own heart, and trembleſt in thy ſelf; this fear will keep thee waking, when others are ſecurely ſleeping. It was a good ſaying of a reverend Miniſter, now with God, He that fears to flinch, ſhall never flinch for fear. It's true, ſeeming Grace may be totally loſt, Luke 8. 18. Heb. 6. 4, 5. 2 Pet. 2. 20. It's granted alſo, that the ſins of Believers deſerve that God ſhould forſake them, and that he may ſuffer Grace in them to be ſadly re-bated, and they may fall before a Temptation, as Peter, and all the Diſciples did: But that thou ſhalt never be ſeparated from Chriſt, or fall Totus, a toto, in totum, utterly away from God, thou mayeſt be abundantly ſatisfied upon theſe five or ſix grounds. M. A. H.

1. From God's Eternal Electing Love, wherewithal gracious Souls are beloved and imbraced, be their Graces never ſo weak, or their Corruptions never ſo ſtrong. This is immutable, Heb. 6. 18. and hence it's ſaid, Mark 13. 22. They ſhall deceive (if it were poſſible) the very Elect. Now this immutable purpoſe of God, is not founded upon any mutable ground or reaſon in thee, Rom 9. 11. Yea, when he, Rom. 8. 29. Elected thee, he ſaw what thou wouldſt be, and yet that hindred him not.

2. From the Covenant of Grace, in the Boſom of which thou art wrapped up: This is all thy ſalvation, and all thy hope; it will afford thee abundant ſatisfaction, if thou do but weigh particularly theſe three things about it. 1. That the Author of this Covenant is not a fickle Creature, but a faithful God, with whom there is not yea and nay: With whom there is no variableneſs, nor ſhadow of turning; whoſe Gifts and Callings are without Repentance; ſo that once within the claſp of this bleſſed Covenant, and in it for ever. 2. That God hath eſtabliſhed the Covenant with you in the Blood of Chriſt; therefore the Sacramental Cup, is called the Cup of the new Teſtament in his Blood, Luke 22. 20. The everlaſting Merit and efficacy whereof, gives the Soul of a Believer the higheſt ſatisfaction imaginable. Laſtly, add to this, that in this Covenant God hath undertaken for us, as well as for himſelf: So that what is a Condition in one Scripture, is the matter of a Promiſe in another Scripture, Jer. 32. 40.

3. From that ſtrict and intimate union that is betwixt Chriſt and thee. And hence it's impoſſible thou ſhouldſt be loſt: For 1. Thy union with his Perſon, draws intereſt in his Properties with it. What ever he is, or hath, it is for thee; his Eye of Knowledge, Arm of Power, Bowels of Pity, it's all for thee.

2. This union with his Perſon, ſecures thy feeble Graces from periſhing, John 4. 14 Thy Graces have an everlaſting Spring. Whilſt there is Sap in this Root, it will aſcend into the Branches.

3. It implies the Perſeverance, becauſe by this union thou becomeſt an integral part of Chriſt's Body, which would be mutilate and defective, ſhouldſt thou be cut off and loſt.

4. From the prevalent interceſſion of Jeſus Chriſt in the Heavens, for all his Saints, in all their Tryals here on Earth. From hence the Apoſtle infers the certainty of our Perſeverance, Rom. 8. 34. and a pregnant inſtance of it you have in Peters caſe, Luke 22. 32. So Heb. 7. 25. ſpeaks fully to the caſe. To ſtrengthen this, Conſider 1. Who it is that intercedes: It's Chriſt whoſe Perſon is moſt dear and ingratiated with the Father, John 11. 42. 2. What he intercedes for: Surely for nothing but what is moſt ſuitable to his Father's Will. The Will of Chriſt, and his Fathers, do not claſh, John 16. 26, 27. yea, what he prays for, he prays not for gratis, or asks upon any diſhonourable terms to the juſtice of his Father; but they are all mercies purchaſed and paid for; and therefore fear the failing of your Graces.

5. From the Spirit of Chriſt which dwelleth and abideth in thee, and hath begun his ſaving work upon thee. I ſay ſaving, for elſe it would afford no argument: His common works on Hypocrites come to nothing, but in thee they cannot fail. For 1. His Honour is pawned and engaged to perfect it. That reproach of the fooliſh Builder ſhall never lie upon him, that he began to build, but could not finiſh. Beſides, this would irritate, and void all that the Father and the Son have done for thee; both their works are compleat and perfect in their kinds, and the Spirit is the laſt efficient in order of working. 2. Beſides the Grace he hath already wrought in thee, may give thee yet further and fuller aſſurance of its preſervation, inasmuch as it hath the nature of a Seal, Pledge, and Earneſt of the whole, Rom. 8. 23. 2 Cor. 1. 22. So that it cannot fail.

6. From thoſe multitudes of Aſſertory, Promiſſory, and Comparative Scriptures, the Rich veins whereof run through the Book of God, as ſo many ſtreams to refreſt thy Soul. Of Aſſertory Scriptures, ſee John 6. 39. John 10. 28. 1 John 2. 19. Of Promiſſory Scriptures, ſee Iſa. 54. 10. Jer. 34. 40. 1 Cor. 1. 8. &c. Of Comparative Scriptures, ſee Pſal. 1. 3. Pſal. 125. 1. John 4. 14. &c. The principal ſcope of all which, is to ſhew the indefectible Nature of true Grace in the Saints.

And now, how ſhould this refreſh thy drooping Soul, make thee gird up the loyns of thy mind! ſince thou doſt not run as one uncertain, neither fighteſt as one that beats the Air, 1 Cor. 9. 26. But art ſo ſecured from total Apoſtacy, as thou ſeeſt thou art by all theſe things. O bleſs ye the Lord.

Ob. 2. But the Lord ſeems to be departed from my Soul; God is afar off from me, and troubles are near. I ſeem to be in ſuch a caſe as Saul was when the Philiſtines made war upon him, and God was departed from him; and therefore I ſhall fall.

Sol. Not ſo; for there are two ſorts of Divine deſertions; The one is abſolute, when the Lord utterly forſakes his Creatures, ſo that they ſhall never behold his Face more: The other is limited and reſpective, and ſo he forſook his own Son, and often does his own Elect: and of this kind, ſome are only Cautional, to prevent ſin; ſome are meerly Probational, to try Grace; and others Caſtigatory, to chaſtiſe our negligence and careleſneſs. Now though I have not a word of comfort to ſpeak in the caſe of total and abſolute Deſertions; yet of the latter (which doubtleſs is thy caſe) much may be ſaid by way of ſupport, be it of which of the three ſorts it will, or in what degree it will. For 1. This hath been the caſe of many precious Souls, Pſal. 22. 1, 2. Pſal. 77. 2. Pſal. 88. 9. Job 13. 24, 25, 26. This was poor Mr. Glovers caſe, as you will find in his Story, and it continued till he came within ſight of the Stake; therefore no new or ſtrange thing hath happened to you.

2. The Lord by this will advantage thee for perſeverance, not only as they are cautional againſt ſin, but as they make thee hold Chriſt the faſter, and prize his* Preſence at an higher rate, when he ſhall pleaſe graciouſly to manifeſt himſelf to thee again.

* Cant. 3. 4.

3. This ſhall not abide for ever; it's but a little Cloud, and will blow over. It is but for a moment, and that moments darkneſs uſhers in everlaſting light, Iſa. 54. 7.

Yea, laſtly, the light of God's countenance ſhall not only be reſtored Certainly, but it ſhall be reſtored Seaſonably; when the Darkneſs is greateſt, thy troubles at the higheſt, and thy hopes loweſt. He is a God of Judgment, and knows how to time his own Mercies, Pſal. 138. 3.

Ob. 3. But I am a weak Woman, or a young Perſon, how ſhall I be able to confeſs Chriſt before Rulers, and look great ones in the Face?

Sol. Chriſt delights to make his Power known in ſuch, 2 Cor. 12. 9. For he affects not Social Glory.

2. Thou ſhalt be holden up, for God is able to make thee ſtand, Rom. 14. 4. Thou that art ſenſible of thine own infirmity, mayeſt run to that Promiſe.

3. Such poor weak Creatures ſhall endure when ſtronger (if Self-confident) fall, Iſa. 40. 30, 31. Even the youths ſhall faint, and be weary, and the young men utterly fall; but they that wait upon the Lord, ſhall renew their ſtrength, they ſhall mount up with wings as Eagles, run and not be weary, walk and not faint.

Youths and young men are bold, daring, and confident perſons, that truſt to their own ſtrength! to whom ſuch as wait upon the Lord ſtand here oppoſed; they ſhall faint, but theſe ſhall renew their ſtrength.

Art thou one that waiteſt and dependeſt upon an All-ſufficient God, in the ſenſe of thine own weakneſs? This Promiſe then is for thee.

4. You may furniſh your ſelves at pleaſure, with Examples of the mighty Power of God reſting upon ſuch as you are, out of our own Martyrology.

Thomas Drowry the poor Blind Boy, Fox Vol. 3. p. 703. What a preſence of Spirit was with him, when examined by the Chancellor!

Eulalia a Virgin, of about 12 years of age, ſee how ſhe was acted above thoſe years, yea, above the power of Nature. Fox. Vol. 1. p. 120. Tender Women, yea Children act above themſelves, when aſſiſted by a ſtrong God.

And thus you have ſome help offered you by a weak hand, in your preſent and moſt important work.

The Lord carry home all with power upon your hearts, (that if God call you to ſuffer for him) you may ſay as Paul did, I am now ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finiſhed my courſe, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteouſneſs, which God the Righteous Judge ſhall give me at that day; and not to me only, but to them alſo which love his appearing, 2 Tim. 4. 6. And as you expect ſo to finiſh your courſe with joy; be diligent in the uſe of all means, to prepare and make your ſelves ready to follow the Call of God, whether it be to Bonds, or to Death, for the Name of the Lord Jeſus.

To the Vertuous and much Honoured Madam Urſula Upton of Lupton in DEVON.

Madam,

IF I find it an hard Task to write on ſuch a doleful Subject, it cannot be imagined but your part muſt be abundantly harder, who feel over and over what is here written. Could I tell how to adminiſter Counſels and Comforts to you, without exaſperating your Sorrows, I would certainly take that way; but ſeeing the one (in this caſe) cannot be done without the other, 'tis our duty to ſubmit to the Method Providence hath preſcribed to us.

The deſign of the enſuing Diſcourſe, is to evince the Truth of what ſeems a very great Paradox to moſt Men, namely, that the Afflictions of the Saints can do them no hurt, and that the wiſdom of Men and Angels cannot lay one Circumſtance of their Condition (how uneaſie ſoever it ſeems to be) better, or more to their advantage than God hath laid it. I attempt not by a flouriſh of Rhetorick to perſwade you againſt the Demonſtrations you can fetch from ſenſe and feeling to the contrary, but to overthrow the falſe Reaſonings of Fleſh and Senſe, by the allowed Rules of Scripture, and ſure Principles of Religion.

And methinks you, and every Chriſtian ſhould gladly entertain that comfortable concluſion, when you ſhall find the Foundation of it as ſtrong, as the influences thereof are ſweet and comfortable.

Certainly, Madam, the intent of the Redeemer's undertaking was not to purchaſe for his People Riches, Eaſe, and Pleaſures on Earth; but to mortifie their Luſts, heal their Natures, and ſpiritualize their Affections, and thereby to fit them for the Eternal Fruition of God. Upon this ſuppoſition the truth of this Concluſion (how ſtrange ſoever it ſeems) is firmly built.

It was not without Divine direction, that the Subject of the enſuing Diſcourſe was as pertinently, as ſeaſonably, recommended to me by your dear Husband, in the day of your Sorrows for your only Son. He took, I hope, his portion of Comfort out of it before he died, and it is now left as a Spring of Comfort to you, who then mourned with him, and now for him.

Heavy Preſſures call for ſtrong ſupport, and fainting ſeaſons for rich Cordials. Your Burthen is indeed heavy, yet I muſt ſay it is much our own Fault they are ſo heavy as we feel them to be: For according to the meaſure of our delight in, and expectation from the Creature, is our ſorrow and diſappointment when we part from it. The higheſt Tides are always followed with the loweſt Ebbs. We find Temperance and Patience knit together in the ſame Precept, and Intemperance and Impatience as inſeparably connected in our own Experience. It may be we did not ſuſpect our ſelves of any ſinful exceſs in the time of their Enjoyment, but it now appears the Creature was gotten deeper into our Hearts than we imagined by the pain we feel at parting: Did we not lean too hard upon it, there would not be ſuch ſhakings as we feel when it is ſlipt from us.

But Madam, 'tis high time to recal your Thoughts, and bound your Sorrows, which the following Conſiderations would greatly aſſiſt you in.

1. What is the very ground and reaſon of our exceſſive ſorrows for the loſs of Earthly Comforts? Is it not this, that they are periſhing and tranſitory? That is, that you find them to be as God made them. And can you expect that God ſhould alter the Laws of Nature to pleaſe and humour us? It is as natural to our Relations to die, as it is for Flowers to wither, or the Moon to wane.

2. That there is no ſuch neceſſary Connexion betwixt theſe things and our Comfort, that whenever God removes the one, he muſt needs remove the other with it. Chriſt and Comfort are indeed ſo united, but nothing beſide him is or can be ſo. I hope you will ſhortly experience the truth of this concluſion, by the comforts God will give you in the abſence of thoſe comforts you have loſt. Can you not now have as free acceſs to God as before? Yea, do not theſe very Afflictions ſend you oftener into his Preſence? And if God meet you in thoſe duties (as in days of diſtreſs he uſes to meet his People) then it will be evident to you that your joy and comfort lives, though your Husband and Children be laid in their Graves.

3. That the removing of your Earthly Comforts, hinders not but that you may ſtill purſue the great end and buſineſs of your life, and carry on all your deſigns for Heaven as ſucceſsfully as ever. Indeed, Madam, had we been ſent into this World to raiſe Eſtates, contract Relations, and then ſit down in the midſt of them, as our Portion, then our deſign had been utterly daſhed and diſappointed; but you know this is not your main end, or great buſineſs upon Earth, but to Honour God by an holy fruitful life here, and make ready for the full enjoyment of him hereafter. And what hinders, but you may as proſperouſly manage and carry on this your Deſign as ever? You do not think the Traveller is diſabled for his Journey, becauſe he hath fewer clogs and hindrances than before. I think few Chriſtians find much furtherance Heavenward by their multiplicity of Engagements or Enjoyments in this World. Your cares and fears about theſe things, will now lie in a narrower compaſs, than they did before, and thereby you may have your thoughts more about you, to attend the great concerns of God's Glory, and you own Salvation.

4. But above all, you will certainly find your relief and conſolation to lie in the everlaſting Covenant of God. Thence it was that David fetched his ſupport under a much heavier Burthen and ſmarter Rod than yours: For your Relations were ſuch as gave you comfort in their lives, and left you many grounds of hope in their Deaths; but his were taken away in their ſins. But though the grounds of his ſorrow (bleſſed be God) are not yours, yet I hope the grounds of his Comfort in the Text are fully yours.

I confeſs I have prepared theſe things in too much haſte and diſtraction of thoughts, which in this juncture was unavoidable; nor have I beſtowed much of Art or Language upon them: And if I had, they would have been never the more effectual to your relief for that. But ſuch as they are, I humbly preſent them to you, with my hearty Prayers, That God would make them a Soveraign Balm, by the Bleſſing of his Spirit on them to your wounded ſpirit, and to all other Godly Families groaning under the like ſtrokes of God with you, and remain,

MADAM,

Your moſt Faithful, ſympathizing Friend and Servant,

Jo. Flavell.

TEXT. 2 Sam. XXIII. v. 5.

Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant; ordered in all things, and ſure: For this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, although he make it not grow.

THeſe are part of David's laſt Words. The laſt words of dying Saints, but eſpecially of dying Prophets, are ponderous, memorable, and extraordinarily remarkable; and ſuch are theſe acknowledged to be, by all Expoſitors: 'Tis a golden Sentence, a divine Oracle, fit to be the laſt words of every dying Saint, as well as of David.

They are called his laſt words, not ſimply, and abſolutely, as though he breathed them forth with his laſt Breath; (for he ſpake many things afterwards) but either they are the laſt he ſpake as a Prophet, by divine inſpiration, or becauſe he had them often in his Mouth, to his laſt and dying day. They were his Epicedium, his ſweet Swan-like Song, in which his Soul found ſingular Refreſhment, and ſtrong Support, amidſt the manifold Afflictions of his Life, and againſt the Fears of his approaching Death.

The whole Chapter is deſigned for a Coronis or honourable cloſe of the Life of David, and gives us an account both of the worthy Expreſſions that dropt from him, and of the renowned Worthies that were employed by him: But all the Heroick Atchievements recorded to the honour of their Memories, in the following part of the Chapter, are trivial and inglorious things, compared with this one divine Sentence recorded in my Text; in which we have two things to conſider, viz.

1. The Preface, which is exceeding ſolemn.
2. The Speech it ſelf, which is exceeding weighty.

1. In the Preface, we have both the inſtrumental and principal efficient Cauſe of this divine Sentence, diſtinctly ſet down, ver. 1. and the Efficient, or Author of it. ver. 2.

The Inſtrument or Organ of its conveyance to us, was David; deſcribed by his deſcent or lineage, the Son of Jeſſe; by his eminent Station, the Man that was raiſed up on high, even to the top and culminating point of Civil and Spiritual Dignity and Honour, both as King, and as a Prophet; by this Divine Unction. The anointed of the God of Jacob; and laſtly, by the flowing ſweetneſs of his Spirit, and ſtile in the Divine Pſalms that were penned by him, whence he here gets the Title of The ſweet Pſalmiſt of Iſrael, the pleaſant one, in the Pſalms of Iſrael, as ſome read it.

The principal efficient Cauſe of this excellent paſſage, is here likewiſe noted, and all to commend it the more to our ſpecial obſervation and acceptance: The Spirit of God ſpake by me, and his Word was in my Tongue. This ſtamps my Text expreſly with divine Authority. The Spirit of God ſpake by David, he was not the Author, but only the Scribe of it. Thus the enſuing Diſcourſe is prefaced. Let us next ſee,

2. The matter or Speech it ſelf, wherein we ſhall find the Maxims, and general Rules of Government preſcribed, and the Felicity of ſuch a Government elegantly deſcribed. He that ruleth over Men muſt be juſt, ruling in the Fear of God. Princes being in God's Place, muſt exalt the Righteouſneſs of God, in the government of Men; and when they do ſo, they ſhall be as the Light of the Morning when the Sun riſeth, even a Morning without Clouds, &c. What Halcyon days ſhall that happy People ſee, whoſe Lot is caſt into ſuch times and places! All this is typically ſpoken of David, and thoſe pious Princes who ſucceeded him; but myſtically and eminently points at Chriſt, who was to riſe out of David's Seed, Rom. 1. 3. And to ſit upon his Throne, Acts 2. 30. So that in this he was raiſed on high, to an Eminency of Glory and Dignity indeed; He was ſo in his ordinary natural Seed; a Royal Race, deriving it ſelf from him, and ſitting upon his Throne in a Lineal Succeſſion, till the Babyloniſh Captivity, which was about four hundred and thirty Years. And after that, the Jews had Governours of his Line, at leaſt rightful Heirs to that Crown, till the promiſed Meſſiah came. But that which was the top of David's Honour, the moſt ſparkling Jewel in his Crown, was this, that the Lord Jeſus was to deſcend from him, according to the Fleſh, in whom all the glorious Characters before given, ſhould not only be exactly anſwered, but abundantly exceeded. And thus you find the natural Line of the Meſſiah is drawn down by Matthew, from David to the Virgin Mary, Matth. 1. And his Legal Line by Luke, from David to Joſeph, his ſuppoſed Father, Luke 2. 23.

Now though the Illuſtrious Marks and Characters of ſuch a righteous, ſerene, and happy Government, did not fully agree to his day, nor would do ſo in the Reigns of his ordinary natural Succeſſors, his day was not without many Clouds both of Sin and Trouble; yet ſuch a bleſſed day he foreſaw and rejoiced in, when Chriſt, the extraordinary Seed of David, ſhould ariſe, and ſet up his Kingdom in the World, and with the expectation hereof, he greatly chears and encourages himſelf: Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant, &c. In which words four things are eminently remarkable.

1. Here is a ſad Conceſſion of Domeſtick Evils.
2. A ſingular Relief from God's Covenant with him.
3. The glorious Properties of this Covenant diſplayed.
4. The high eſteem and dear regard his houſe had unto it.

1. Here is David's ſad and mournful Conceſſion of the Evils of his Houſe, both moral and penal. Although my Houſe be not ſo with God, i.e. Neither ſo holy, nor ſo happy, as this deſcription of a righteous and flouriſhing Government imports; alas, it anſwers not to it: For though he was eminent for Godlineſs himſelf, and had ſolemnly dedicated his Houſe to God, as ſoon as it was built, yea, though he piouſly reſolved to walk in the midſt of it with a perfect Heart, and not to ſuffer an immoral Perſon within his Walls; yet great miſcarriages were found even in David's Houſe, and Perſon, which God chaſtiſed him for, by a thick ſucceſſion of ſharp and ſore Affiictions. Tamar was defiled by her Brother Amnon, 2 Sam 13. 13. Amnon was barbarouſly murthered thereupon, by the advice of Abſalom, 2 Sam. 13. 28. Abſalom unnaturally rebels againſt his Father David, and drives him out out of the Royal City, and periſhes in that Rebellion, 2 Sam. 15. 1. Then Adonijah, another darling-Son, graſps at the Crown ſettled by David upon Solomon, and periſhes for that his Uſurpation. 1 King 2. 25. O what a heap of Miſchiefs and Calamities did this good Man live to ſee within his own walls! Beſides the many foreign Troubles that came from other hands. How many flouriſhing Branches did God lop off from him, and that in their Sins too? So that his day was a day of Clouds, even from the Morning unto the Evening of it; Pſal. 132. 1. Lord, remember David, and all his Afflictions. Well might he ſay, His Houſe was not ſo with God. But what then, doth he faint and deſpond under theſe manifold Calamities? Doth he refuſe to be comforted, becauſe his Children are gone, and all things involved in trouble? No, but you find,

Pſal. 30.

Pſal. 101. 2,3,4,5,6, 7.

2. He relieves himſelf by the Covenant God had made with him: Yet hath he made with me a Covenant. He looks to Chriſt, there is more in the Covenant than this my Houſe before God, as the Chaldee turns it. This little word yet, wraps up a great and Soveraign Cordial in it. Though Ammon, Abſalom, and Adonijah be gone, and gone with many ſmarting aggravations too; yet hath he made with me a Covenant, yet I have this Sheet-Anchor left to ſecure me. God's Covenant with me, in relation to Chriſt, this under-props and ſhores up my Heart.

Plus eſt quam hæc domus mea ante Deum. Jon.

This Covenant was, without Controverſie, a Goſpel-Covenant. It was David's Goſpel: For all his Salvation and all his deſire were in it; which could never be, except Chriſt had been in it, who is the Salvation of all the ends of the Earth, and the deſire of all Nations.

'Tis true, it was a more obſcure and imperfect Edition of the Covenant of Faith, yet clearer than thoſe that were made before it, it came not up to the fullneſs and clearneſs of the diſcoveries made by Jeremy and Ezekial: But yet in this Covenant with David, God revealed more of Chriſt, than had been ever revealed before; for the Light of Chriſt, like that of the Morning, encreaſed ſtill more and more, till it came to a perfect day. It is worthy our Obſervation, how God made a gradual diſcovery of Chriſt from Adam, down along to New-Teſtament times. It was revealed to Adam, that he ſhould be the Seed of the Woman, but not of what Nation, till Abraham's time; nor of what Tribe, till Jacob; nor of what Sex and Family, till David; nor that he ſhould be born of a Virgin, till Iſaiah; nor in what Town, till Micah. The firſt Revelation of this Covenant with David, was by Nathan the Prophet; afterwards enlarged and confirmed, Pſal. 89. By it he knew much of Chriſt, and wrote much of him. He ſpake of his Perſon, Pſal. 45. 6, 11. Pſal. 8. 4, 5, 6. of his Offices, both Prophetical, Pſal. 40. 8, 9, 10. Prieſtly, Pſal. 110. 4. and Kingly, Pſal. 2. 6. of his Incarnation, Pſal. 8. 5. of his Death on the Croſs, Pſal. 22. 16, 17. of his Burial, Pſal. 16. 8, 9, 10. Reſurrection, Pſal. 2. 7. and triumphant Aſcenſion, Pſal. 68. 18. there was the ſum of the Goſpel diſcovered, though in dark and typical terms and forms of Expreſſion; but if out of this Covenant, as obſcure as its Revelation was, ~~David~~ fetcht ſuch ſtrong Support and Conſolation, amidſt ſuch an heap of Troubles, then the Argument is good, à fortiori: What Support and Comfort may not we draw thence, who live under the moſt full and perfect diſplay of it, in all its Riches and Glory? Enough hath been ſaid to prove it a Goſpel-Covenant; but if any doubt ſhould remain of that, it will be fully removed, by conſidering,

2 Sam. 7. 12, 13, 14.

3. The eximious Properties and Characters of the Covenant, as we find them placed in the Text; and they are three, viz.

(1.) Everlaſting.
(2.) Ordered in all things, and
(3.) Sure.

(1.) It is an Everlaſting Covenant, or a perpetual Covenant, a Covenant of Eternity; not in the moſt ſtrict, proper, and abſolute ſence: For that is the incommunicable property of God himſelf, who neither hath beginning, nor end; but the meaning is, that the Benefits and Mercies of the Covenant are durable and endleſs to the People of God: For Chriſt being the principal Matter and Subſtance of the Covenant, there muſt be in it an everlaſting Righteouſneſs, as it is called, Dan. 9. 24. everlaſting Kindneſs, Iſai. 54. 8. everlaſting Forgiveneſs, Jer. 31. 34. and in conſequence to all theſe, everlaſting Conſolation, Iſai 51. 11. In all which, the riches and bounty of Free Grace ſhine forth in their greateſt glory and ſplendor.

(2.) It is a Covenant order'd in all things, or orderly prepared, diſpoſed, and ſet, as the word imports. Every thing being here diſpoſed and placed in the moſt comely order, both perſons and things here keep their proper place: God the Father keeps the place of the moſt wiſe Contriver and bountiful Donor of the invaluable Mercies of the Covenant; and Chriſt keeps the proper place both of the Purchaſer and Surety of the Covenant, and all the Mercies in it; and Believers keep their place, as the unworthy Receivers of all the gratuitous Mercies and rich Benefits thereof, and the moſt obliged Creatures in all the World to Free Grace, ſaying, Although my houſe, yea, although my heart and my life be not ſo with God, yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant. And as Perſons, ſo Things, all things in this Covenant ſtand in the moſt exquiſite order, and exact correſpondence to each other. O 'tis a raviſhing ſight to behold the habitude and reſpect of the Mercies in the Covenant, to the ſins and wants of all that are in it! Here are found full and ſuitable ſupplies to the wants of all Gods People. Here you may ſee Pardon in the Covenant, for guilt in the Soul; Joy in the Covenant, for ſorrow in the Heart; Strength in the Covenant, for all defects and weakneſſes in the Creature; Stability in the Covenant, for the mutability in the Creature. Never did the Wiſdom of God ſhine forth more in any contrivance in the World, (except that of Chriſt, the Surety and principal Matter of the Covenant) than it doth in the orderly diſpoſe of all things in their beautiful order, and comely proportions in this Covenant of Grace.

(3.) It is a ſure Covenant, or a Covenant ſafely laid up and kept, as the word imports; and upon this account the Mercies of it are called, The ſure mercies of David, Iſai. 55. 3. And ſo Pſal. 89. 28. ſpeaking of this very Covenant, God ſaith, My Covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him, there ſhall be no vacillancy, no ſhaking in this Covenant: and ver. 34. My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips Every thing is as its foundation is. Now, Gods Covenant being founded in his unchangeable counſel and purpoſe, wherein there can be no lubricity, and Chriſt being the Surety of it, it muſt needs be, as the Text calls it, a ſure Covenant, wherein the faithfulneſs of God is as illuſtriouſly diſplay'd, as his Bounty and Wiſdom are in the two former properties of it. And ſuch a Covenant as this ſo everlaſting, aptly diſpoſed, and ſure, muſt needs deſerve that precious Reſpect and high Eſteem from every believing Soul, which David here doth pay it, in à שמר cuſtodivit ſervavit.

4. The ſingular and high valuation he had of it, when he ſaith, This is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, or as ſome tranſlate, all my delight, or pleaſure; (i. e.) here I find all repaired with an infinite overplus, that I have loſt in the Creature: Here is life in death, fulneſs in wants, ſecurity in dangers, peace in troubles. It is all my ſalvation, for it leaves nothing in hazard that is eſſential to my happineſs; and all my deſire, for it repairs whatever I have loſt, or can loſe: It is ſo full and compleat a Covenant, that it leaves nothing to be deſired out of it. O it is a full Fountain! Here I repoſe my weary Soul with full ſatisfaction, and feed my hungry deſires with ſweeteſt delights; ſo that my very Soul is at reſt and eaſe, in the boſom of this bleſſed Covenant. Thus you have the parts and ſence of the Text. The Notes from it are three.

וכל חפצ

Obſerv. I. That Gods Covenant People may be exerciſed with many ſharp Afflictions in their Perſons and Families. Eccl. 9. 9.

Even David's Houſe was the Houſe of Mourning. Although my houſe be not ſo with God, though he make it not to grow. All ſorts of outward Afflictions are incident to all ſorts of men. All things (ſaith Solomon) come alike to all: There is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the clean, and unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not.

The Providences ſeem one and the ſame, though the ſubject on whom they fall be vaſtly different. Eſtates and Children, Health and Liberty, will ſtill be like themſelves, vaniſhing Comforts, whoever be the Owners of them. No mans ſpiritual Eſtate can be known by the view of his temporal Eſtate. A godly Family cannot be a miſerable, but it may be a mournful Family. Religion ſecures us from the Wrath, but it does not ſecure us from the Rod of God The Lord hath choſen another way of expreſſing his love to his people, than by temporal and external things: Therefore all things come alike to all. The Covenant excludes the Curſe, but includes the Croſs. If his children forſake my Law, &c. then will I viſit their iniquity with the rod, and their ſin with ſtripes: nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs will I not utterly take away.

Nor ineeed would it be the priviledge of Gods Covenanted People, to be exempt from the Rod; a mark of Baſtardy can be no mans felicity: Heb. 12. 8. to go without the chaſtiſing diſcipline of the Rod, were to go without the needful inſtructions and bleſſed fruits that accompany and reſult from the Rod, Pſal. 94. 12.

Let us not therefore ſay, as thoſe irreligigious perſons did in Mal. 3. 14. It is in vain to ſerve God, and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinances, and walked mournfully before him? Surely none ſerve him in vain, but thoſe that ſerve him vainly. Godlineſs cannot ſecure you from Affliction, but it can and will ſecure you from Hell, and ſanctifie your Afflictions to help you to Heaven. But I ſtay not here.

Obſerv. II. A declining Family is a ſore ſtroke from the hand of God, and ſo to be acknowledged, wherever it falls.

It was a growing ſorrow to David, that his Houſe did not grow; and he eyed the hand of God in it, He made it not to grow, as he ſpeaks in the Text. He felt as many Deaths as he had dead Children. It is God that build and deſtroys Families; he enlargeth and ſtraitneth them again. A Family may decline two ways, viz. either,

1. By the Death: or,
2. By the Degeneracy of its Off-ſpring.

1. By their Death, when God lops off the hopeful ſpringing Branches thereof; eſpecially the laſt and only Prop of it, in whom not only all the care and love, but all the hope and expectation of the Parents is contracted and bound up. For,

Virgil. Omnis in Aſcanio ſtat chari cura parentis.

The Hearts of tender Parents are uſually bound up in the life of an only Son As a Man's Wife is but himſelf divided, ſo his Children are but himſelf multiplied; and when all love and delight, hope and expectation, is reduced to one, the affection is ſtrong, and that makes the affliction ſo to. If it were not an unparalell'd Grief among all Earthly Griefs and Sorrows, the Spirit of God would never have choſen and ſingled it out from among all other Sorrows, to illuſtrate Sorrow for Sin by it, yea, Sorrows for that ſpecial Sin of piercing Chriſt, as he doth. They ſhall look upon him whom they have pierced, and ſhall mourn for him, as one that mourneth for an only Son. Zach. 12. 10. How naked are thoſe Walls, and how unfurniſhed is that Houſe, where the Children (its beſt Ornaments) are taken down and removed by Death! It is natural to all Men, to deſire the continuance of their Names and Families in the Earth; and therefore when God cuts off their Expectations in that kind, they look upon themſelves as dry Trees, or as the withering Stalks in the Fields, when the Flowers are fallen off, and blown away from them.

2. Or which is yet much worſe, a Family may decline by the degeneracy of its off-ſpring When the Piety, Probity, and vertues of Anceſtors deſcend not with their Lands to their Poſterity, here the true Line of Honour is cut off, and the glory of a Family dies, though its Children live; the Family is ruined, though there be a numerous Off-ſping. Surely it were better mourn for ten dead Children, than for one ſuch living Child.

How many ſuch wretched Families can England ſhew this day! How hath Atheiſm and Debauchery ruined and ſubverted many great and once famous Families! O it were better the Arms of thoſe Families had been reverſed, and their Lands alienated, yea, better had it been a ſucceſſion had failed, and that their Names had been blotted out, than that Satan ſhould rule by Prophaneneſs in the Places where God was once ſo ſeriouſly and ſweetly worſhipped.

Whenſoever therefore God ſhall either of theſe ways ſubvert a Family, it becomes them that are concerned in the Stroke, not only to own and acknowledge the Hand of God in it, but to ſearch their Hearts and Houſes to find out the Sins which have ſo provoked him; yet not ſo as to fall into an unbecoming deſpondency of Spirit, but withal to relieve themſelves, as David here doth from the Covenant of God; Yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant. Which brings us to the third and principal point I inſiſt on.

Obſer. III. That the Everlaſting, well-ordered, and ſure Covenant of Grace, affords everlaſting, well-ordered, and ſure Relief to all that are within the bond of it, how many or how great ſoever their perſonal or domeſtick Tryals and Afflictions are.

This point will be cleared to your Underſtandings, and prepared for your uſe, by clearing and opening three Propoſitions, which orderly take up the ſum and ſubſtance of it, viz.

Prop. I. That the Minds of Men, yea, the beſt Men, are weak and feeble things under the heavy preſſures of Affliction, and will reel and ſink under them, except they be ſtrongly relieved and underprop'd.

A bowing Wall doth not more need a ſtrong Shore or Butteresſ, than the Mind of Man needs a ſtrong ſupport and ſtay from Heaven, when the weight of Affliction makes it incline and lean all one way. Unleſs thy Law had been my delights: I ſhould then have periſhed in my Affliction. q. d. Pſal. 119. 92. What ſhift other ther Men make to ſtand the ſhock of their Afflictions, I know not; but this I know, that if God had not ſeaſonably ſent me the relief of a Promiſe, I had certainly gone away in a faint fit of deſpondency. O how ſeaſonably did God adminiſter the Cordials of his Word to my drooping ſinking Soul!

This weakneſs in the Mind, to ſupport the burthens of Affliction, proceeds from a double cauſe, viz.

1. From the ſinking weight of the Affliction.
2. From the irregular and inordinate workings of the Thoughts of it.

1. From the ſinking weight that is in Affliction, eſpecially in ſome ſorts of Afflictions: They are heavy preſſures, ponderous Burthens in themſelves. So Job ſpeaks, O that my Grief were throughly weighed, and my Calamity laid in the ballances together: For now it would be heavier than the Sand of the Sea, therefore my words are ſwallowed up. q. d. If all the Sand that lies upon all the Shores in the World, were ſhovelled up into one heap, and caſt into one Scale, and my Sorrows into the other, my Grief would weigh it all up. How heavy are the Hearts of the Afflicted! What inſupportable Sorrows do they feel, and groan under, eſpecially when God ſmites them in the deareſt and neareſt concerns they have in the World! b. 6. 2,

2. But eſpecially the reelings and ſtaggerings of the Mind, are occaſioned by the inordinate and irregular workings of its own Thoughts. Were it but poſſible to keep the Mind in a ſerene, ſedate, and ordinate frame, our Burthens would be comparatively light to what we now feel them to be; but the falling of the Thoughts into Confuſions, and great Diſtractions, ſpoils all. Upon this account it is, that Afflictions are compared to a ſtupifying Doſe, which caſts the Soul into amazement. Thou haſt ſhewed thy People hard things; thou haſt made us to drink the Wine of Aſtoniſhment. Afflictions are called the Wine of Aſtoniſhment, from their effects upon the Mind: For under a great and ſudden ſtroke of God, it is like a Watch wound up above its due height, ſo that for a time it ſtands ſtill, neither Grace nor Reaſon move at all: And when it begins to move again, O how confuſed and irregular are its Motions! It is full of Murmurs, diſputes, and Quarrels: Theſe aggravate both our Sin and Miſery. 'Tis our own Thoughts which take the Arrow God ſhot at us, (which did but ſtick before in our Cloaths, and was never intended to hurt us, but only to warn us) and thruſt it into our very Hearts. 60. 3.

For Thoughts, as well as Poniards, can pierce and wound the Hearts of Men. Luke 2. 35. A Sword ſhall pierce through thine own Soul; (i. e.) Thy Thoughts ſhall pierce thee. They can ſhake the whole Fabrick of the Body, and looſe the beſt compacted and ſtrongly jointed parts of the Body. Dan. 5. 6. His Thoughts troubled him, and the joints of his Loins were looſed. And thus a Man's own Mind becomes a Rack of Torment to him; a miſery which no Creatures, except Men and Devils, are ſubjected to. O how many Bodies have been deſtroyed by the Paſſions of the Soul! They cut through it, as a keen Knife through a narrow Sheath. Worldly Sorrow works Death, 2 Cor 7. 10.

Prop. II. The Merciful God, in condeſcenſion to the weakneſs of his People, hath provided the beſt ſupports and reliefs for their feeble and afflicted Spirits.

In the multitude of the thoughts I had within me, thy comforts delights my Soul. Carnal Men ſeek their relief under trouble, from carnal things; when one Creature forſakes them, they retreat to another which is yet left them, till they are beaten out of all, and then their Hearts fail, having no acquaintance with God, or ſpecial Intereſt in him: For the Creatures will quickly ſpend all that allowance of Comfort they have to ſpend upon us. Some try what relief the Rules of Philoſophy can yield them, ſuppoſing a neat Sentence of Seneca may be as good a remedy as a Text of David or Paul; but alas, it will not do: Submiſſion from fatal neceſſity, will never eaſe the afflicted Mind, as Chriſtian Reſignation will do. It is not the eradicating, but regulating of the Affections, that compoſes a burthened and diſtracted Soul. One Word of God will ſignifie more to our Peace, than all the famed and admired Precepts of Men. Pſal. 94. 19.

To neglect God, and ſeek relief from the Creature, is to forſake the Fountain of living Waters, and go to the broken Ciſterns, which can hold no Water. The beſt Creature is but a Ciſtern, not a Fountain; and our dependance on it makes it a broken Ciſtern, ſtrikes a hole through the bottom of it, ſo that it can hold no Water. I, even I (ſaith God) am he that comforted thee. The ſame Hand that wounds you, muſt heal you, or you can never be healed. Our compaſſionate Saviour, to aſſwage our Sorrows, hath promiſed he will not leave us comfortleſs. Our God will not contend for ever, leſt the Spirit fail before him, Iſai. 57. 16. He knew how ineffectual all other Comforts and Comforters would be, even Phyſicians of no value, and therefore hath graciouſly prepared comforts for his diſtreſſed ones, that will reach their end. Jer. 2. 13. Iſa. 57. 12. Joh. 14. 18.

Prop. III. God hath gathered all the materials and principals of our relief into the Covenant of Grace, and expects that we betake our ſelves unto it, in times of diſtreſs, as to our ſure, ſufficient, and only Remedy.

As all the Rivers run unto Sea, and there is the Congregation of all the Waters; ſo all the Promiſes and Comforts of the Goſpel, are gathered into the Covenant of Grace, and there is the Congregation of all the ſweet ſtreams of Refreſhment that are diſperſed throughout the Scriptures. The Covenant is the Store-houſe of Promiſes, the Shop of Cordials and rare Elixers, to revive us in all our faintings; though, alas, moſt Men know no more what are their Virtues, or where to find them, than an illiterate Ruſtick, put into an Apothecary's ſhop.

What was the Cordial God prepared to to revive the Hearts of his poor Captives groaning under hard and grievous Bondage both in Egypt and in Babylon? Was it not his Covenant with Abraham? And why did he give it the ſolemn confirmation by Heb. 6.17, 18. an Oath, but that it might yield to him, and all his believing Seed, ſtrong conſolation, the very Spirit Joy amidſt all their Sorrows?

And what was the Relief God gave to the believing Eunuchs that kept his Sabbaths, took hold of his Covenant, and choſe the Iſai. 56 4. things in which he delighted. To them (ſaith he) will I give in my Houſe, and within my Walls, a place, and a name better than that of Sons or of Daughters. Though they were deprived of thoſe comforts other Men have in their Poſterity, yet he would not have them look upon themſelves as dry Trees; a Covenant-Intereſt would anſwer all, and recompence abundantly the want of Children, or any other Earthly Comfort.

Certainly therefore, David was at the right door of relief and comfort, when he repairs to the Covenant, as here in the Text, Yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant. There, or no where, the Relief of God's Afflicted is to be found.

Now, to make any thing become a compleat and perfect relief to an afflicted Spirit, theſe three Properties muſt concur and meet in it, elſe it can never effectually relieve any Man.

I. It muſt be able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of Troubles.

II. It muſt be able to do ſo at all times.

III. It muſt be capable of a good perſonal ſecurity to us.

For if it only divert our Troubles, (as Creature-Comforts uſe to do) and do not remove the ground and cauſe of our Trouble, 'tis but an Anodine, not a Cure or Remedy. And if it can remove the very ground and cauſe of our Trouble for a time, but not for ever, then 'tis but a temporary relief; our Troubles may return again, and we left in as bad caſe as we were before. And if it be in it ſelf able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of our Trouble, and that at all times, but not capable of a perſonal Security to us, or our well-eſtabliſhed Intereſt in it, all ſignifies nothing to our relief.

But open your Eyes and behold, O ye afflicted Saints, all theſe Properties of a compleat relief meeting together in the Covenant, as it is diſplayed in the Text. Here is a Covenant able to remove all the grounds and cauſes of your Trouble; for it is ORDERED in all things, or aptly diſpoſed by the wiſdom and contrivance of God, to anſwer every cauſe and ground of trouble and ſorrow in our Hearts. It is able to do this at all times; as well in our day, as in David's or Abraham's day: For it is an Everlaſting Covenant; its Vertue and Efficacy is not decayed by time. And laſtly, it is capable of a good perſonal Security or Aſſurance to all God's afflicted People; for it is a ſure covenant. The concurrence of theſe three Properties in the covenant makes it a compleat relief, perfect Remedy, to which nothing is wanting in the kind and nature of a Remedy. Theſe three glorious Properties of the Covenant are my proper Province to open and confirm, for your ſupport and comfort in this day of Trouble.

I. That the Covenant of Grace is able to remove all the cauſes and grounds of a Believer's Trouble, be they never ſo great or many. This I doubt not will be convincingly evidenced and demonſtrated by the following Arguments, or undeniable Reaſons.

Arg I. Whatſoever diſarms Afflictions of the only ſting whereby they wound us, muſt needs be a compleat Relief and Remedy to the Afflicted Soul.

But ſo doth the Covenant of Grace, it diſarms Afflictions of the only Sting by which they wound us.

Therefore the Covenant of Grace muſt needs be a compleat Relief and Remedy to the afflicted Soul.

The ſting of all Afflictions, is the guilt of Sin; when God ſmites, Conſcience uſually ſmites too: and this is it that cauſes all that pain and anguiſh in the Afflicted. 'Tis plainly ſo in the Example of the Widow of Zerephath, when her Son, her only Son, and probably her only Child died, how did that Stroke of God revive guilt in her Conſcience, and made the Affliction piercing and intollerable! as appears by her paſſionate Expoſtulation with Elijah, who then ſojourned in her Houſe: What have I to do with thee, O Man of God? art thou come unto me to call my ſin to Remembrance, and to ſlay my ſon? q. d. What Injury have I done thee? Didſt thou come hither to obſerve my Sins, and pray down this Judgment upon my Child for them? The Death of her Son revived her guilt, and ſo it generally doth, even in the moſt Holy Men. 1 King. 17. 18.

When Job looked upon his waſted Body under Afflictions, every Wrinkle he ſaw upon it, ſeemed to him like like a Witneſs riſing up to teſtifie againſt him. Thou haſt filled me with Wrinkles, which is a Witneſs againſt me, and my leanneſs riſing up in me, beareth Witneſs to my Face. Job. 16.

Affliction is like a Hue and Cry after Sin in the Ears of Conſcience, and this is the envenomed poyſonous ſting of Affliction: Pluck out this, and the afflicted Man is preſently eaſed, though the matter of the Affliction ſtill abide with him, and lie upon him. He is afflicted ſtill, but not caſt down by Affliction; the anguiſh and burthen is gone, though the matter of Trouble remain.

This is plain both in Scripture, and in Experience. Suitable hereunto is that ſtrange, but ſweet Expreſſion, The Inhabitant ſhall not ſay I am ſick, the People that dwell therein ſhall be forgiven their Iniquities. It's not to be imagined theſe People had found ſuch a fortunate Iſland, or happy Climate, where no Diſeaſe could touch or invade their Bodies; no, ſickneſs will find out the Bodies of the beſt Men, wherever they live; wherever Sin hath been, Sickneſs and Death will follow it. Heaven is the only priviledged Place from theſe Miſeries: But the meaning is, though they be Sick, they ſhall not feel the Pains and Burthens of Sickneſs; they ſhall not ſay they are ſick: And why ſo? becauſe their Iniquities are forgiven. Plainly confirming what was before aſſerted, that the anguiſh of an Affliction is gone, as ſoon as ever the ſting of Guilt is plucked out. And hence pardoning Iſai. 33.

ing of the Soul, and healing of the Body, are put together as conjugate Mercies : Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, and healeth all thy Diſeaſes. When the Soul is at eaſe, the pains of the Body are next to nothing: Sickneſs can cloud all natural Joys, but not the joy of a Pardon.

ál. 103. 3.

Nay, which is yet more ; pluck out but the ſting of Sin, and there is no horrour in Death, the King of Terrours, and worſt of all outward Evils. See how the pardoned Believer triumphs over it : O Death where is thy ſting? O Grave where is thy victory? The ſting of Death is Sin. They are words of defiance, as Men uſe to deride and ſcorn a boaſting inſulting Enemy, when they ſee him caſt upon his back, and his Sword broken over his Head.

Cor. 15. 55.

vid. Heus! ubi nunc faſtus, altaq; verba jacent?

Where are your boaſts and menaces now? O Death thou haſt loſt thy ſting and terrour together, Thus the pardoned Believer, with an Holy gallantry of Spirit, derides and contemns his diſarm'd Enemy Death : So then it is manifeſt, that whatever plucks out the poyſonous ſting of Affliction, muſt needs be an effectual Remedy and Cure to the afflicted Perſon.

But this the Covenant of Grace doth, it reveals and applies Goſpel-remiſſion to them that are within the bleſſed bond of it. This ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael; I will forgive their Iniquity, and I will remember their Sin no more. Behold here a gracious, full, and irrevocable Pardon! I will forgive, or be propitiouſly Merciful, as that word imports; pointing plainly to Chriſt our Propitiation, our Sins are forgiven us for his Names ſake. And a Pardon as full as it is free; iniquity and ſin, ſmaller and greater, are here forgiven : For God, in the remiſſion of his Peoples Sins, having reſpect to the propitiating Blood of Chriſt, he pardons all, as well as ſome, that Blood deſerving and purchaſing the moſt full and compleat Pardons for his People, 1 Joh. 1. 7. The Blood of Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin.

31. 33,

And this Covenant-pardon is as firm, as it is free and full. So run the expreſſions in the Grant, I will remember their Sin no more: Or in the Apoſtles words, Heb. 8. 13. οὐ μὴ μνησθῶ ἔτι. I will not remember them again. That is, not ſo remember, as to impute them, or condemn my pardoned ones for them : For the pardoned Perſons come no more into Condemnation, Job 5. 24. Their Sins are caſt into the depths of the Sea, Mica. 7. 19. Sooner ſhall the Eaſt and the Weſt, the two oppoſite points of Heaven, meet, than the pardoned Soul and its ſins meet again in Condemnation, Pſal. 103. 12.

Now, the caſe ſtanding thus with all God's Covenant-People, all their Sins being graciouſly, fully, and irrevocably forgiven them, how convincingly and ſweetly doth this concluſion follow, that the Covenant is a compleat Remedy to all afflicted Believers? As nothing can befal us before Chriſt and Pardon be ours, which is ſufficient to raiſe us, ſo nothing can befal us afterwards, which ſhould deject and ſink us. This is the firſt benefit afflicted Believers receive from the Covenant, and this alone is enough to heal all our Sorrows.

Arg. II. As the Covenant of Grace diſarms all the Afflictions of Believers of the only ſting by which they wound them! ſo it alters the very nature and property of their Afflictions, and turns them from a Curſe into a Bleſſing to them : And in ſo doing it becomes more than a Remedy, even a choice Benefit and Advantage to them.

All Afflictions in their own nature, are a part of the Curſe; they are the Conſequence and Puniſhments of Sin; they work naturally againſt our Good : But when once they are taken into the Covenant, their nature and property is altered. As Waters in their ſubterranean Paſſages meeting ſome vertuous Mineral in their courſe, are thereby impregnated and endowed with a rare healing property to the Body; ſo Afflictions paſſing through the Covenant, receive from it an healing Vertue to our Souls. They are in themſelves ſour and harſh, as wild Hedge-Fruits; but being ingrafted into this ſtock, they yield the pleaſant Fruits of Righteouſneſs. If his Children break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments, then will I viſit their Iniquity with the Rod, and their Sins with ſtripes: Nevertheleſs my Loving Kindneſs will I not utterly take away, nor ſuffer my Faithfulneſs to fail. Here you may ſee all the Rods of Affliction put into the Covenant, as Aaron's Rod was into the Ark. And hence two things neceſſarily follow.

Pſal. 89. 30, 31.

(1.) That ſuch Afflictions can do the Children of God no hurt. They may affright, but cannot hurt them : We may meet them with Fear, but ſhall part from them with Joy : An unſanctified Rod never did any Man good, and a ſanctified Rod never did any Man hurt : He may afflict our Bodies with Sickneſs, deny, or cut off our Comfort in Children, impoveriſh our Eſtates, let looſe Perſecutors upon us; but in all this he really doth us no hurt, as he ſpeaks in Jer. 25. 6. No more hurt than a skillful Chirurgeon doth in ſaving his Patient's Life, by cutting off a mortified gangreen'd Member : No more hurt than Froſts and Snow do the Earth in killing the rank Weeds that exhauſted the ſap and ſtrength of it, and preparing and mellowing it to produce a fruitful crop of Corn. By theſe he recals our Minds from Vanity, weans our fond and enſnaring affections from the World, diſcovers and mortifies thoſe Luſts, which gentler methods and eſſays could not do : And is this for our hurt?

I confeſs Gods Thoughts and ours often differ upon this caſe. We meaſure the good and evil of Providences by their reſpect to the eaſe and pleaſure of our Fleſh, but God ſees this is the way to caſt our Spirits into a dead formality, and in removing them, he doth but deprive us of the occaſions and inſtruments of Spiritual Miſchiefs and Miſeries, in which certainly he doth us no hurt.

(2.) But that is not all. Afflictions once put into the Covenant, muſt promote the good of the Saints; they are beneficial, as well as harmleſs things. We know (ſaith the Apoſtle) that all things work together for good to them that love God. This Promiſe is the Compaſs which ſets the courſe, and directs the motion of all the Afflictions of the People of God; and no Ship at Sea obeys the Rudder ſo exactly, as the troubles of the Righteous do the direction of this Promiſe. Poſſibly he cannot diſcern this at preſent, but rather prejudge the Works of God, and ſay all theſe things are againſt us; but hereafter we ſhall ſee, and with Joy aaknowledge them to be the happy Inſtruments of our Salvation.

How often hath Affliction ſent the People of God to their Knees, with ſuch Language as this! ‘O my God, how vain and ſenſual ‘hath this Heart of mine been under proſperity! How did the love of the Creature, like ‘a ſluce cut in the Bank of a River, draw away the ſtream of my Affections from thee! ‘I had gotten a ſoft Pillow of Creature-comforts under my Head, and I eaſily fell aſleep, ‘and dreamed of nothing but reſt and pleaſure, in a ſtate of abſence from thee; but ‘now thy Rod hath awakened me, and reduced me to a right Senſe of my Condition. ‘I was negligent or dead-hearted in the ‘courſe of my Duty, but now I can pray more ‘fervently, feelingly, and frequently than ‘before. O it was good for me, that I have ‘been afflicted. O, ſaith God, how well was ‘this Rod beſtowed, which hath done my ‘poor Child ſo much good! Now I have ‘more of his Heart, and more of his time ‘and Company than ever. Now I hear the ‘voice, and ſee the gracious workings of the ‘Spirit of my Child after me again, as in ‘the days of his firſt love. The ſum of all this you may ſee in the ingenuous meltings of Ephraim under a ſanctified Rod, Jer. 31. 19, 20. and the ſounding of the Bowels of Mercy over him. ‘Epraim mourns at God's Feet, ‘and God falls upon Ephraim's Neck. I have ‘been as a Beaſt, ſaith Ephraim: Thou art a ‘dear Son, a pleaſant Child, ſaith God. My ‘Bowels are troubled and pained for Sin, ſaith ‘Ephraim: And my Bowels are troubled for ‘thee, and my Compaſſions rolled together; ‘ſaith God. O bleſſed Fruits of Sanctified Rods! Such precious effects as theſe richly repay you for all the pain and anguiſh you feel. And thus as the wound of a Scorpion is healed by applying its own Oil, ſo the Evil of Affliction is cured by the Sanctified Fruits that it produceth when it is once put into the Covenant.

Arg. III. The Covenant doth not only alter the nature and property of the Saints Afflictions, but it alſo orderly diſpoſes, and aptly places them in the frame of Providence, among the other means and inſtruments of our Salvation; ſo that a Council of Angels could never place them, or the leaſt circumſtance belonging to them, more aptly and advantageouſly than it hath done. The knowledge of this muſt needs quiet and fully relieve the afflicted Soul: And who can doubt it, that believes it to be a Covenant ordered in all things, as the Text ſpeaks? Here all things, yea, the moſt minute Circumſtances that befal you, are reduced to their proper Claſs, and place of Service; ſo exactly ordered, that all the Wiſdom of Men and Angels knows not how to mend or alter any thing to your advantage.

If a ſmall Pin be taken out of the Frame of a Watch, and placed any where elſe, the motion is either preſently ſtopped, or made irregular. And as Galen obſerves of the curious Fabrick of an humane Body, that if the greateſt Naturaliſt ſhould ſtudy an hundred years to find out a more commodious Scituation, or configuration of any part thereof, it could never be done. 'Tis ſo here: No Man can come after God, and ſay, this or that had been better placed or timed, than it is, if this Affliction had been ſpared, and ſuch an Enjoyment ſtood in the room of it, it had been better. All God's Providences are the reſult and iſſues of his Infinite Wiſdom: For he works all things according to the Counſel of his own will, Eph. 1. 11. The Wheels, i. e. The motions and revolutions of Providence, are full of Eyes; they are well Ezek. 1. 18. adviſed, and judicious motions, Non cæco impetu volvuntur rotæ; they run not at random. The moſt regular and excellent working, muſt deeds follow the moſt deep and perfect Counſel. Iſa. 28. 29. He is deep in Counſel, and excellent in working.

Now every Affliction that befals God's Covenanted People, being placed by the moſt wiſe and infinite Counſel of God, in that very order, time, and manner in which they befal them, this very Affliction, and not that, at this very time, and not at another, (it being always a time of need, 1 Pet. 1. 6.) and uſhered in by ſuch forerunning occaſions and circumſtances; it muſt follow, that they all take the proper places, and nick exactly the fitteſt Seaſons; and if one of them were wanting, ſomething would be defective in the frame of your Happineſs. As they now ſtand, they work together for your good, which diſplaced, they would not do.

It's ſaid, Jer. 18. 11. Behold I frame Evil, and I deviſe a device. It's ſpoken of the contrivance and frame of Afflictions, as the proper works of God. The Project of it is laid for his Glory, and the eternal good of his People. It turns to their ſalvation, 1 Phil. 19. But O how fain would we have this or that Affliction ſcrued out of the frame of Providence, conceiving it would be far better out than in. O if God had ſpared my Child, or my Health, it had been better for me than now it is. But this is no other than a preſumptuous correcting, and controlling of the Wiſdom of God; and ſo he interprets it, Job. 40. 2. He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it. God hath put every Affliction upon your Perſons Eſtates, Relations, juſt where you find and feel it; and that whole Frame he hath put into the Covenant, in the Vertue whereof it works for your Salvation: And therefore let all diſputings and reaſonings, all murmurs and diſcontents ceaſe, nothing can be better for you, than as God hath laid it; and this one would think ſhould heal and quiet all. You your ſelves would marr all, by preſuming to mend Iſa. any thing. Who hath directed the Spirit of the 14. Lord,

Lord, or being his counſellour, hath taught him? With whom took he counſel, and who inſtructed him, amd taught him the path of Judgment? and taught him knowledge, and ſhewed him the way of underſtanding? Well then, be ſatisfied 'tis beſt as it is; and nothing can be ſo advantageous to you, as God's project and contrivance, which you are ſo uneaſie under, and diſſatisfied about.

Arg. IV. As the Covenant ſorts and ranks all your troubles into their proper Claſſes and places of ſervice, ſo it ſecures the ſpecial gracious preſence of God with you, in the deepeſt plunges of diſtreſs that can befal you; which preſence is a full relief to all your troubles, or elſe nothing in the World is, or can be ſo.

The very Heathens thought themſelves well ſecured againſt all evils and dangers, if they had their petty houſhold Gods with them in their Journeys: but the great God of Heaven and Earth hath engaged to be with his People, in all their afflictions and diſtreſſes. As a tender Father ſits up himſelf with his ſick Child, and will not leave him to the care of a Servant only; ſo God thinks it not enough to leave his Children to the tutelage and charge of Angels, but will be with them himſelf, and that in a ſpecial and peculiar way: ſo run the expreſs words of the Covenant, I will not turn away from them to do them good, but I will put my fear into their hearts; and they ſhall not depart from me. e. 32. 40. Here he undertakes for both parts, himſelf and them. I will not, and they ſhall not.

Here is the Saints ſecurity for the gracious preſence of God with them, a preſence which diſpels all the Clouds of affliction and ſorrow, as the Sun ſcatters the morning Miſts. The God of all conſolation is with you, O poor dejected Believers, and will not ſuch a preſence turn the darkneſs into light round about you? There is a threefold preſence of God with his Creatures.

1. Eſſential, which is common and neceſſary to all.
2. Gracious, which is peculiar to ſome on Earth.
3. Glorious, which is the felicity of Heaven.

The firſt is not the priviledge here ſecured; for it is neceſſary to all, good and bad: In him we all live, and move, and have our being. The vileſt Men on Earth, yea the Beaſts of the Field, and the very Devils in Hell are always in this preſence of God, but it is their torment, rather than their priviledge. The laſt is proper to the glorified Saints and Angels. Such a preſence imbodied, Saints cannot now bear; but it is his ſpecial gracious preſence which is made over and ſecured to them in the Covenant of Grace: and this preſence of God is manifeſted to them two ways.

1. Internally, by the Spirit.
2. Externally, by Providence.

1. Internally, by the Spirit of Grace dwelling and acting in them, this is a choice priviledge to them in the day of affliction: for hereby they are inſtructed and taught the meaning of the Rod. Pſal. 94. 12. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, and teacheſt him out of thy law. O 'tis a bleſſed thing to be taught ſo many Leſſons by the Rod, as the Spirit teacheth them! Surely they reckon it an abundant recompence of all that they ſuffer. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy ſtatutes. Pſal. 119. 71. Yea, he refreſhes as well as teaches, and no Cordials revive like his. In the multitude of the thoughts I had within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul. Pſal. 94. 19.

Yea, by the preſence and bleſſing of his Spirit, our Afflictions are ſanctified to ſubdue and purge out our corruptions. By this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away ſin. Iſa. 27. 9. Now if a man be inſtructed in the ends and deſigns of the Rod, refreſhed and comforted under every ſtripe of the Rod, and have his ſins mortified and purged by the ſanctification of the Spirit upon his Afflictions; then both the burthenſomneſs and bitterneſs of his Afflictions are removed and healed by the internal preſence of the Spirit of God with his afflicted ones. But,

2. Beſides this, God is providentially preſent with his People, in all their troubles, in a more external way; ordering all the circumſtances of their troubles to their advantage. He orders the degree and extent of our Afflictions, ſtill leaving us ſome mercies and comforts to ſupport and refreſh us, when others are cut off. In meaſure doth he debate with his Covenant People, ſtaying the rough wind in the day of the Eaſt wind. Iſa. 27. 8. He might juſtly ſmite all our outward Comforts at once, ſo that Affliction ſhould not riſe up the ſecond time: for what comfort ſoever hath been abuſed by ſin, is thereby forfeited into the hand of Judgment. But the Lord knows our inability to ſuſtain ſuch ſtrokes, and therefore proportions them to our ſtrength. We have ſome living Relations to miniſter comfort to us when mourning over our dead: He makes not a full end of all at once. Yea, and his Providence ſupports our frail Bodies, enabling them to endure the ſhocks and ſtorms of ſo many Afflictions, without ruine. Surely there is as much of the care of Providence manifeſted in this, as there is in preſerving poor crazy leaking Barks, and weather-beaten Veſſels at Sea, when the Waves not only cover them, but break into them, and they are ready to founder in the midſt of them.

O what a ſingular mercy is the gracious preſence of God with men! even the ſpecial preſence of that God, who is above all, and through all, and in you all, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks. Eph. 4. 6. Above all, in Majeſty and Dominion; through all, in his moſt efficacious Providence; and in you all, by his Grace and Spirit. As he is above all, ſo he is able to command any Mercy you want, with a word of his Mouth; as he is through all, ſo he muſt be intimately acquainted with all your wants, ſtraights, and fears; and as he is in you all, ſo he is engaged for your ſupport and ſupply, as you are the dear Members of Chriſt's myſtical Body.

Object. But methinks I here Gideon's Objection rolled into the way of this ſovereign Conſolation. If God be with us, why is all this Evil befallen us?

Sol. All what? If it had been all this rebellion and rage againſt God, all this apoſtacy and revolting more and more, all this contumacy and hardneſs of heart under the Rod; then it had been a weighty and ſtumbling Objection indeed: but to ſay, If God be with us, why are all theſe chaſtening corrections and temporal croſſes befallen us? why doth he ſmite our Bodies, Children, or Eſtates? is an Objection no way fit to be urged by any that are acquainted with the Scriptures, or the nature and tenour of the Covenant of Grace. Is afflicting and forſaking, all one with you? muſt God needs hate, becauſe he ſcourgeth you? I queſtion whether Satan himſelf hath Impudence enough to ſet ſuch a Note or Comment upon Heb. 12. 6. For whom the Lord loveth, he chaſteneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.

No, no, Chriſtian, 'tis not a chaſtening Rod, but the denying of ſuch a favour, and ſuffering men to ſin with Impunity, and go on proſperouſly in the way of their own hearts, that ſpeaks a rejected man, as the next words, ver. 7. informs you. As he never loved you the better for your proſperity, ſo you may be confident he loves you never the leſs for your adverſity: and will not this cloſe and heal the wounds made by Affliction? What, not ſuch a Promiſe as this, I will be with him in trouble, Pſal. 91. 15. Will not ſuch a preſence revive thee? What then can do it? Moſes reckoned that a Wilderneſs with God, was better than a Canaan without him. If thy Exod. 33. 15. preſence go not with me (ſaith he) then carry us not hence. And if there be the Spirit of a Chriſtian in thee, and God ſhould give thee thine own choice, thou wouldſt rather chuſe to be in the midſt of all theſe Afflictions with thy God, than back again in all thy proſperity, and among thy Children and former Comforts, without him.

Arg. V. As this Covenant aſſures you of Gods gracious and ſpecial preſence, ſo it fully ſecures all the Eſſentials and Subſtantials of your Happineſs, againſt all hazards and contingencies; in which ſecurity lies your full Relief and compleat Remedy againſt all your troubles for the loſs of other things.

There be two ſorts of things belonging to all God's People, viz.

1. Eſſentials.
2. Accidentals.

1. They have ſome things which are eſſential to their Happineſs; ſuch are the loving kindneſs of God, the pardon of ſin, union with Chriſt, and eternal ſalvation. And they have other things which are Accidentals, that come and go, live and die, without affecting or altering their Happineſs; ſuch are Health, Eſtates, Children, and all ſorts of Relations and Earthly Comforts. Theſe are to our Happineſs, as Leaves are to the Tree which fade and fall away without endangering the Tree; but the other as the vital Sap, without which it withers and dies at the very root. Now if it can be made out that the Covenant fully ſecures the former; then it will ſtrongly follow, that it therein abundantly relieves us under all our ſorrows for the latter: and that it doth ſo, will evidently appear, by reviewing the Covenant, wherein you ſhall find all theſe ſubſtantial and eſſential Mercies of Believers, fully ſecured againſt all hazards and contingencies whatſoever.

There the loving kindneſs of God is ſecured to their Souls, whatever Afflictions he lays upon their Bodies. Nevertheleſs my loving Pſal. 89. 33. kindneſs will I not take away. And their pardon is as ſafe as the favour of God is; 'tis ſafely lock'd up in that Promiſe, I will re- Jer. 31. 34. member their ſins no more. Yea, Heaven, together with our perſeverance in the way to it, are both put out of hazard by that invaluable Promiſe, They ſhall never periſh, neither Joh. 10. 28. ſhall any man pluck them out of my hand.

Thus are all the Eſſentials of a Believers Happineſs ſecured in the Covenant; and theſe being ſafe, the loſs of other enjoyments ſhould not much affect or wound them, becauſe if he enjoy them, they add nothing to his Happineſs; and if he loſe them, he is ſtill happy in God without them. And this unriddles that Ænigmatical Expreſſion of the Apoſtle, As having nothing, and yet poſſeſſing all things; 2 Cor. 6. 10. (i. e.) the ſubſtraction of all external things cannot make us miſerable, who have Chriſt for our portion, and all our Happineſs intire in him.

If a man travelling on the Rode, fall into the hands of Thieves, who rob him of a few Shillings, why this doth not much affect him: for though he have loſt his ſpending Money, yet his ſtock is ſafe at home, and his Eſtate ſecure, which will yield him more. Or if a man have been at Court, and there obtain'd a Pardon for his Life, or a Grant of a Thouſand pound per annum, and returning home ſhould chance to loſe his Gloves or his Handkerchief, ſure if the man be in his wits, he will not take on or mourn for the loſs of theſe Trifles, whilſt the Pardon or Grant is ſafe. Surely theſe things are not worth the mentioning.

'Tis true, the loſs of outward earthly things, are to a Believer real Tryals, yet they are but ſeeming Loſſes: and therefore they are expreſſed in the Apoſtles phraſe, with a Tanquam, ſicut: As chaſtened, and not killed; as ſorrowful, yet always rejoycing. 2 Cor. 6. And if your loſſes be but as it were loſſes, your ſorrows ſhould be but as it were ſorrows: Much like a Phyſick-ſickneſs, which we do not call a proper ſickneſs, but as it were a ſickneſs, becauſe it conduceth to the health, and not to the hurt of the Perſon; as all God's medicinal Afflictions on his People alſo do.

Indeed, if the ſtroke of God were at our Souls, to cut them off from Chriſt and Heaven, to raze our Names out of the Covenant, or revoke the pardon of ſin; then we had cauſe enough to juſtifie the extremity of ſorrow; cauſe enough to weep out our Eyes, and break our Hearts for ſuch a diſmal blow as that would be. But bleſſed be God you ſtand out of the way of ſuch ſtrokes as theſe; let God ſtrike round about you, or lay his hand upon any other comforts you poſſeſs, he will never ſmite you in theſe eſſential things, which is certainly enough to allay and relieve all your other ſorrows.

My Name is blotted out of the Earth, but ſtill it is written in Heaven. God hath taken my only Son from me, but he hath given his only Son for me, and to me. He hath broken off my hopes and expectations as to this World, but my hopes of Heaven are fixed, Theſſ. 4. 14, 15, 17, 18.

ed, ſure, and immovable for ever. My houſe and heart are both in confuſion and great diſorder, but I have ſtill an everlaſting Covenant ordered in all things, and ſure. I cannot ſay my ſon liveth, but I can ſtill ſay, I know that my Redeemer liveth. The graſs withereth, and the flower fadeth; but the word of the Lord abideth for ever, Iſa. 40. 8.

Argu. 6. As God ſtrikes none of the ſubſtantial Mercies of his Covenant-People, ſo when he doth ſmite their external and accidental Comforts, the Covenant of Grace aſſures them, that even thoſe ſtrokes are the ſtrokes of Love, and not Wrath; the Wounds of a Friend and not of an Enemy: which is another ſingular relief to the afflicted Soul.

The moſt frightful thing in any Affliction, is the mark or character of God's Wrath which it ſeems to bear: take away that, and the Affliction is nothing. O Lord, rebuke me
Pſal. 6. 1. not in thine anger, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure. He doth not deprecate the rebukes, but the anger of God; not his chaſtening, but his hot diſpleaſure. God's Anger is much more terrible than his rebuking, and his hot diſpleaſure than his chaſtening. Therefore he intreats, that whatever God did to him in the way of affliction, he would do nothing in the way of wrath; and then he could bear any thing from him. A mark of divine anger ingraven upon any Affliction, makes that Affliction dreadful to a gracious Soul.

But if a man be well ſatisfied that whatever anguiſh there be, yet there is no anger, but that the Rod is in the Hand of Love: O how it eaſes the ſoul, and lightens the burden! Now this deſirable point is abundantly cleared in the Covenant; where we find a clear Conſiſtence, yea, a neceſſary Connection betwixt the Love and the Rod of God, Pſal. 89. 31. and Heb. 12. 6. nay ſo far are the Afflictions of the Saints from being marks of his Wrath, that they are the Fruits and Evidences of his Fatherly Love.

Two men walking through the Streets, ſee a company of Boys fighting, one of them ſteps forth and ſingles out one of thoſe Boys, and carries him home to correct him; which of the two think you is that Childs Father? The caſe ſtanding thus with all God's People, ſurely there is no reaſon for their deſpondencies whatever their Afflictions be.

Arg. 7. Laſtly, the Covenant doth not only diſcover the conſiſtence and connection betwixt the Love and the Rod of God, but it alſo gives full ſatisfaction to the Saints, that whatſoever temporary Mercy they are deprived of, which was within the Bond of the Covenant when they enjoyed it, is not loſt, but ſhall certainly be reſtored to them again with a rich improvement, and that they ſhall enjoy it again to all eternity.

What a rare Model or Platform of Conſolatory Arguments hath the Apoſtle laid down to antidote our immoderate ſorrows, for the death of our dear Relatives which died inter-
1 Theſſ. 4. 14, 15, 17, 18. eſted in Chriſt and the Covenant! I would not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are aſleep, v. 13. They are not dead, but aſleep. Sleep is but a Perentheſis to the Labours and Travels of this Life; and it is but a partial privation, not of the habit, but acts of Reaſon, to which upon awaking the Soul returns again. Juſt ſuch a thing is that which in Believers is commonly called Death. And we do not uſe to bewail our Friends, becauſe they are fallen aſleep: And therefore it no way becomes us to ſorrow as thoſe that have no hope, nor to look upon them as loſt; for (as he ſtrongly argueth and concludeth, v. 14.) their reſtoration to their Bodies, yea, and to our enjoyment again, is fully ſecured both to them and us by the Reſurrection of Jeſus from the dead. The influence of his Reſurrection is by the Prophet Iſaiah compared to the Morning-dew, Iſa. 26. 19.
to ſhew that what vertue there is in the Morning-dew to cauſe the languiſhing Plants of the Earth to revive and flouriſh, that, and much more there is in the Reſurrection of Chriſt, to revive and quicken the dead bodies of theſe Saints, their Bodies ſhall be reſtored by vertue of the warm animating dew or influence of his Reſurrection.

Obj. But the marvellous change which the Reſurrection makes upon glorified Bodies, and the long ſeparation of many Ages betwixt us and them, ſeems to make it impoſſible for us to know them, as thoſe that were once related to us upon Earth; and if ſo, then that comfort which reſulted from them, as in relation to us, is periſhed with them at death.

Sol. Whatever change the Reſurrection ſhall make on their Bodies, and the length of time betwixt our parting with them on Earth, and meeting them again in Heaven, ſhall be; neither the one or other ſeem ſufficient to inform the grounds of our hope, that we ſhall know them to be the very perſons that were once ſo dear to us upon Earth. There may remain ſome lineament or property of individuation whereby the acute glorified eye may poſſibly diſcover who they were; or if not, yet none can doubt but it may be diſcovered to us by Revelation from God: and that one way or other it will be diſcovered, is highly probable, becauſe nothing will be denied to that perfect State which may contribute to, or compleat the joy and happineſs thereof, as we cannot but think this knowledge will do. If Adam knew Eve to be fleſh of his fleſh, and bone of his bone, in the ſtate of Innocence; and if the Apoſtles knew Moſes and Elias upon the Mount; yea, if Dives in Hell knew Abraham and Lazarus in Heaven: ſure we may well allow that knowledge to the glorified Saints in Heaven, which we find in the ſtate of Innocence, or in the ſinful ſtate on Earth, or in the ſtate of the Damned in Hell.

And if ſo, then the Covenanted Parents ſhall be able to ſay in that day, This was our Child for whom we prayed and travelled again, till Chriſt was formed in him; this is he whom we educated for God, and trained up in the Nurture and Admonition of the Lord; and now we ſee the fruit of our Prayers, Counſels, Catechiſings; a Child of ſo many Prayers periſhed not. And the Covenanted Child ſhall ſay, This was my pious Father, who took ſuch care for my Soul; and this my tender Mother, who, like another Monica, was zealouſly concerned for my Eternal Happineſs Theſe are they that ſowed ſo many Prayers, which God gave them not time to reap the Fruits of on Earth, but now they ſhall reap the fruit and comfort of them for ever. O joyful meeting in the Kingdom of God! The joy of ſuch a meeting abundantly recompences for all the Tears and Groans of a dolorous parting.

Now, put all this together, and value the Arguments produced to make good the firſt thing propounded, namely, the ſufficiency of the Covenant to relieve and remedy all the ſorrows and loſſes of Believers, be they never ſo many, or ſo great; this cannot be doubted, ſince it hath been proved, that it Diſarms all their Afflictions of the only ſting by which they wound; Alters the very nature and property of their Afflictions, turning them from Curſes into Bleſſings; Ranks and diſpoſes them into their proper Claſs and place of ſervice, ſo as the counſel of Men and Angels could never lay them better to our advantage; Engages the gracious and ſpecial Preſence of God with you in all your Troubles; ſecures all your eſſential and ſubſtantial Mercies from all hazards and contingencies; Diſcovers a conſiſtency, yea, a connection betwixt the Rod and the Love of God; and Aſſures you, that whatever Temporal Mercy you ever enjoyed, in and by vertue of the Covenant, ſhall be reſtored to you again with an admirable improvement, and ſingular advantage. It is by all this, I ſay, abundantly proved, that the Covenant is a ſoveraign and effectual Remedy to all the ſorrows of God's People; and that it was no Hyperbole in David's Encomium, when he called it his Salvation, and all his Deſire. But then: as I hinted before,

II. It muſt be able to do theſe things at all times, and in all Ages, or elſe it will be be but a temporary relief to ſome only, and not to all. Now that the Covenant hath this ability in all Ages, and is as able to relieve us now, as it was to relieve David in his day, fully appears by the Epithet given it in the Text, it is an EVERLASTING COVENANT. Yet hath he made with me an Everlaſting Covenant.

Time is the meaſure of other things; but Everlaſtingneſs is the meaſure of the Covenant. When the Lord eſpouſeth a People to himſelf in Covenant, he betroths them to himſelf for ever, Hoſ. 2. 19. And from that day forward they may ſay on good grounds, This God is our God for ever and ever: He will be our guide even unto Death, as it is in Pſal. 48. 14. Nothing in Nature is ſo firmly eſtabliſhed as the Covenant is. Hills and Mountains ſhall ſooner ſtart from their Baſis and Centre, and fly like wandring Atomes up and down in the Air, than this Covenant ſhall ſtart from its ſure and ſtedfaſt Foundation, Iſa. 54. 10.

The Cauſes and Reaſons of the immutability of the new Covenant, are

1. The unchangeable purpoſe of God, which is a ſure and ſtedfaſt Foundation. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs, the Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth who are his. The firſt act of God's Love to the Creature, is that by which he chuſeth ſuch a one to be his, and is therefore called the Foundation of God, as being that on which he lays the ſuperſtructure of all other Mercies. And this ſtands ſure, there can be no vacillancy or ſlipperineſs in ſuch a Foundation: For he knows who are his; he knows them as his Creatures, and as his new Creatures in Covenant with him; as his by Election, and his by Covenant, Tranſaction and Compact. The purpoſe of his Grace before time, gave being to the Covenant of Grace in time, and is the Foundation of it.

2. The Free Grace of God in Chriſt, is that which gives Immutability to this Covenant. It is not built upon Works, but Grace: Therefore it is of Faith, that it might be by Grace; to the end the Promiſe might be ſure to all the Seed. This Covenant is not founded as the firſt was, upon the variable and inconſtant obedience of Man, but upon Grace which is a ſteddy and firm Foundation.

Rom. 4. 16.

3. The ſuretiſhip of Chriſt gives everlaſting ſtability to this Covenant. Heb. 7 22. He was made the ſurety of a better Teſtament, or Covenant: For διαθήκη, ſignifies both, he ſtruck Hands, or engaged himſelf for the whole Covenant, and every Condition in it, and that both on God's Part and ours; to undergo all our Puniſhments, to pay all our Debts, and to work in us all that God required of us in the Covenant of Grace: And all this under the penalty that lay upon us to have undergone. And this not as other Sureties, who enter into one and the ſame Bond with the Principal, ſo that the Creditor may come upon which he will; but he lays all upon Chriſt, and relies wholly upon him for ſatisfaction, knowing he was able to perform it; and ſo under the Type of God's Covenant with David, Chriſt is brought in, Pſal. 89. 19. Thou ſpakeſt in viſion to thy holy one, and ſaidſt, I have laid help on one who is mighty. q. d. I know thy ability, my Son, thou art able to pay me, and therefore I lay all upon thee.

Ἔγγυος ab ἐγγυάω promittere quaſi ἐν γυίοις, in manibus.

It follows ſtrongly from what hath been ſaid, that the vertue of the Covenant decays not by time, as other things do, but it is at this day, and will be to the end of the World, as potent and efficacious a Relief to all God's People, as ever it was to David, or any of the Believers of the firſt Ages.

And if ſo, certainly nothing can be more ſtrongly ſupporting, or ſweetly relieving in ſuch a changeable World, than this, he hath made with me an everlaſting Covenant. What David ſpeaks of the natural Heavens, will be found true, of things over ſpread and covered by them. They ſhall periſh, but thou ſhalt endure, and all of them ſhall wax old like a Garment: And as a Veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be changed. But thou art the ſame, and thy Years ſhall have no end. The Creature was, and is not; but my Covenant God is the ſame; his Name is I am, and his Covenant is the ſame that ever it was; which is the ſecond Property or Ingredient of this compleat Remedy to the Saints Afflictions. The Covenant hath not only all Power, Vertue, and Efficacy in it ſelf to relieve a diſtreſſed Chriſtian, but it hath it in all Ages, as well well for one as for another. The third and laſt follows, namely,

III. That it is a ſure Covenant. So David ſtiles it in my Text. The certainty of the Covenant, is the glory of the Covenant, and the comfort of all that are in it, The certainty of it in it ſelf is paſt all doubt by what hath been ſaid before. It is certain God did make ſuch an Everlaſting Covenant with his People in Chriſt, and it muſt remain an Eternal Truth, that ſuch a Covenant there is betwixt God and them. It is as impoſſible that this everlaſting Covenant ſhould not be made with them, as it is impoſſible for God to lye, Heb. 6. 18. If he might make himſelf not to have covenanted Everlaſtingly with them, when once he had ſo Covenanted, ſuch a ſuppoſition would turn up the foundation of all Faith and Certainty, and overthrow the Apoſtles conſequence on which the Faith and Comfort of Believers is built. Nor is it any infringement of the Almighty Power, to ſay, God himſelf cannot do that which implies a plain Contradiction, as factum infectum reddere, to make that which was done, not to be done.

But of this there is no doubt; it is a ſure Covenant in it ſelf: That which makes to my purpoſe here, is to prove it capable of Perſonal Security and certainty to us. David had, and all the Federates, as well as he, may have a ſubjective or perſonal certainty alſo. He ſpeaks Categorically and poſitively in the Text, Yet hath he made [with me] an Everlaſting Covenant.

Object. If it be ſaid, he might have a perſonal certainty of it, becauſe it was revealed to him in an extraordinary way by the Prophet Nathan, 2 Sam. 7. 12, 13, 14. And extraordinaria non currunt in exemplum, this was a peculiar favour, which we may not expect

Sol. I reply, And why may not we know it with as full a certainty to whom God is pleaſed to make it known in his ordinary way? Think you his Word and Spirit cannot ratifie it as fully and firmly to our Souls, as Nathan's diſcovery of it did to David's Soul? God give me but ſuch a Seal of it in his ordinary method and way of Confirmation, and I will deſire no more of him in this World for my relief and comfort, whatever Afflictions it ſhall pleaſe him to lay upon me.

And thus you ſee all the properties of a compleat Remedy in the Covenant, and of it every Believer may ſay, This is all my Salvation, and all my Deſire, though he make not my Houſe to grow. And now what hinders, but that all God's Afflicted ſhould ſay from henceforth, Return unto thy Reſt, O my Soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. I have all the deſires of my Heart in the Covenant of God, though he take away the deſire of mine Eyes upon Earth with his ſtroke. In this Covenant my Soul is at reſt, and my very Heart is centred. No Affliction can be great enough to make the Conſolations of the Almighty ſeem ſmall in mine Eyes. Worldly Sorrows may ſwallow up worldly Comforts, but no Sorrows upon Earth can ſwallow up the conſolations of the Covenant.

I know many Chriſtians droop and are dejected under the Rod, notwithſtanding ſuch Soveraign Cordials are prepared for them in the Covenant; but this is not for want of Efficacy in the Covenant, but for want of Faith to clear their Intereſt, and draw forth the Vertue of it to their relief. Some are ignorant of their priviledges, and others diffident about their Intereſt. It is with many of God's Children, as it is with our Children in their Infancy, they know not their Father, nor the Inheritance they are born unto.

That which remains, is the improvement of this Truth to our actual comfort and relief in the day of Trouble. And this I ſhall aſſiſt you in as God ſhall aſſiſt me, by way of,

1. Information.
2. Exhortation.
3. Examination, and
4. Conſolation.

USE I For information, in three Corolaries.

Corolary I. By what hath been diſcourſed from this Text, it appears, That God governs the ſpiritual part of the World by Faith, and not by Senſe. He will have them live upon his Covenant and Promiſes, and fetch their relief and comforts thence, under all their Sorrows and diſtreſſes in this Life.

God never intended temporal things for his Peoples Portion, therefore from them they muſt not expect their relief in times of trouble. He will have us read his love to us by things within us, not by things without us. He hath other ways of expreſſing his love to his People, than by the ſmiles of his Providence upon them. How would Earthly things be over-valued and idolized, if beſides their conveniency to our Bodies, they ſhould be the marks and evidences of God's Love to our Souls! A Chriſtian is to value himſelf as the Merchant, or the Husbandman doth. The Merchant values himſelf by his Bills and Goods abroad, not by the ready Caſh that lies by him. And the Husbandman by his Deeds and Leaſes, and ſo many Acres of Corn he hath in the Ground, and knows he hath a good Eſtate, though ſometimes he be not able to command twenty Shillings. Chriſtian, thy Eſtate alſo lies in good Promiſes, and new Covenant-Securities, whether thou haſt more or leſs of Earthly comforts in thy hands.

Every Creature feeds according to its nature; the ſame Plant affords Food to ſeveral ſorts of Creatures: The Bee feeds upon the Flower, the Sheep upon the Branch, the Bird upon the Seed, and the Swine upon the Root. One cannot live upon what the other doth. So it is here: A Chriſtian can feed upon the Promiſes, and make a ſweet meal upon the Covenant, which the carnal Mind cannot reliſh. The Life that I now live, I live by the Faith of the Son of God, ſaith the Apoſtle. Gal. 2. 21.

This is that myſterious and excellent life of Faith, and the Teſt of true Chriſtianity, to relieve our ſelves by our hopes of things to come, againſt preſent Evils; to ballance the Sorrows and Loſſes of this Life, with the promiſes and expectations of the next. Thus did the renowned Believers of the firſt Age; whenever they felt a faint pang or qualm upon their Hearts, under their Tryals or Sorrows from the World, they would preſently run to their Cordial, the Promiſes, and a ſip of Faith from that Bottle would refreſh and invigorate their Souls with new Life and Powers. We faint not whilſt we look not at the things which are ſeen, for they are temporal; but at the things which are not ſeen, for they are Eternal. And truly ſo muſt we alſo, when our Hearts are faint within us in days of Affliction, or our Spirits will fail, and we ſhall go away in a faint fit of deſpondency.

2 Cor. 4. 16, 17, 18.

Corol. II. Learn hence the ſoveraign efficacy of the Word, and what a choice priviledge it is to have theſe lively Oracles of God in our hands, in a day of diſtreſs and trouble.

'Tis no ordinary Mercy to be born in a Land of Bibles and Miniſters; to have theſe choice ſupports and reliefs at hand, in all our fainting Hours. This is my comfort in my Affliction, for thy Word hath quickned me. It was no ſmall Mercy gained by the Reformation, that it put the Oracles of God into our Hands. It opened a Shop of Cordials for the ſupport of our Souls. For this, among other great and excellent uſes, the Scriptures were written, That we, through Patience, and Comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope. In other parts of the World it is a Sealed Book; bleſs God it is not ſo to you. All Creature-Comforts have a double defect, they are neither ſuitable nor durable; but the Word is ſo. Compare the Arguments that have been urged from the Covenant, with ſuch as theſe. It's in vain to trouble our ſelves about what we cannot help: We are not alone in Trouble, others have their Loſſes and Afflictions as well as we. Alas, what dry and ineffectual Comforts are theſe! They penetrate not the Heart, as pardon of Sin, peace with God, and ſanctification of Troubles to our Salvation do.

Pſal. 119. 50.

Rom. 15. 4.

And no leſs is the Mercy of an able New-Teſtament Miniſtry, to open, apply, and inculcate the conſolations of the Scriptures to be eſteemed. It is no common favour to the afflicted Soul, to have with or near him, an INTERPRETER, one among a thouſand, to ſhew unto him his uprightneſs. O England, prize and improve theſe Mercies, and provoke not thy God to bereave thee of them.

Job. 33. 23.

I can find no ſuch ſettlement made of the Goſpel and Miniſtry upon any Place or People, but that God may remove both, upon their abuſe of them; and if he do, ſad will the caſe of ſuch a People be, eſpecially when a day of diſtreſs and trouble ſhall be upon them. 'Tis ſad to be in a ſtorm at Sea, without a Compaſs or Pilot to direct and adviſe the diſtreſſed Paſſengers. Much ſo is the caſe of the Afflicted, when deprived of the Word and Miniſtry.

Let it therefore be your Care to hide the Word in your Hearts, and get the Teachings of the Spirit; that whatever changes of Providence be upon the World, you may have the light and Comfort of the Scriptures to direct and chear your Souls. Sanctification is the writing of God's Law in your hearts; and what is written there, is ſecure and ſafe. The Word within you is more ſecure, ſweet and effectual, than the Word without you. Jerom ſaith of Nepotianus, that by long and aſſiduous meditation of the Scriptures, his Breaſt was at laſt become the Library of Chriſt. O that the Breaſt of every Chriſtian were ſo too.

Corol. III. How ſad and deplorably miſerable is their condition, who have no title to, nor comfort from the Covenant of God, when a day of affliction and great diſtreſs is upon them!

Unrelieved Miſeries are the moſt intolerable Miſeries. To be over-weighed with troubles on Earth, and want ſupport and comfort from Heaven, is a diſmal ſtate indeed; yet this is the caſe of Multitudes in the World. If a Believer be in trouble, his God bears his burthen for him, yea, he bears up him and his burthen to; but he that hath no Covenant-intereſt in God, muſt ſay as it is, Jer. 10. 19. This is my Affliction, and I alone muſt bear it.

There are but two ways they can take for Relief, either to divert their troubles by that which will inflame them, or reſt their burthened Spirits upon that which will fail them. To run to the Tavern or Ale-houſe, inſtead of the Cloſet, is to quench the Fire, by pouring on Oil; and to run from one Creature which is ſmitten and withered, to another which ſtill continues with us, is to lean upon a broken Reed, which not only deceives us, but wounds and pierceth us. What a miſerable plight was Saul in, and how doleful was his cry and complaint to Samuel, 1 Sam. 28. 15. I am ſore diſtreſſed, for the Philiſtines make War againſt me, and God is departed from me, and anſwereth me no more. Heaven and Earth forſook him at once.

Reader, If this be thy caſe, I adviſe thee to reſt no longer in ſo miſerable a condition. Thy very diſtreſs ſeems by an happy neceſſity to put thee upon God, and drive thee to him for Refuge: And it ſeems to be the very aim and deſign of God in blaſting all thy Earthly Comforts, to neceſſitate thee to come to him, which thou wouldeſt never be perſwaded to do, whilſt thou hadſt any Creature-prop to ſtay and reſt upon. And think not that thou ſhalt be rejected, becauſe thou art brought by a plain neceſſity to him; come ſincerely, and thou ſhalt not be upbraided, becauſe a neceſſity threw thee upon him.

USE II. Seeing then that the Covenant of God is the great relief and ſupport of all the afflicted People, let the afflicted Soul go to this Bleſſed Covenant; ſtudy and apply it in all diſtreſſes. It is in it ſelf a Soverain Cordial, able to revive a gracious Spirit at the loweſt Ebb; but then it muſt be ſtudied and applied, or it will never give forth its Conſolations to our refreſhment. Extream Sorrows are apt to deafen our Ears to all voices of Comfort. The loud cries of Affliction too often drown the ſweet ſtill voice of Spiritual Conſolation; but either here or no where our Redreſs is to be found. Why ſeek we the living among the dead? Comfort from things that cannot yield it? The Covenant can diſcover two things which are able to pacifie the moſt diſcompoſed heart, viz.

1. The good } of Affliction.
2. The end }

1. It will diſcover to us the good of Affliction, and ſo rectifie our miſtaken judgments about it. God is not undoing, but conſulting our intereſt and happineſs in all theſe diſpenſations. It will ſatisfie us, that in all theſe things he doth no more than what we our ſelves allow and approve in other caſes. It is not meerly from his pleaſure, but for our profit, that theſe breaches are made upon our Families, and Comforts, Heb. 12. 10. Who blames the Mariner for caſting the Goods over-board to ſave Ship and life in a ſtorm? or the Chirurgeon for lancing, yea, or cutting off a Leg or Arm to preſerve the life of his Patient? or Souldiers for burning or beating down the Suburbs, to ſave the City in a Siege? And why muſt God only be cenſured, for cutting off thoſe things from us which he knows will hazard us in the day of Temptation? He ſees the leſs we have of entanglement, the more promptneſs and fitneſs we ſhall have to go through the tryals that are coming upon us; and that all the Comforts he cuts off from our Bodies, goes to the profit and advantage of our Souls.

2. Here you gain a ſight not only of the good of Affliction, but alſo of the comfortable end and iſſue of Affliction. This cloudy and ſtormy Morning will wind up in a ſerene and pleaſant Evening. There's a vaſt difference betwixt our meeting with Afflictions, and our parting from them. You have heard of the patience of Job, and have ſeen the end of the Lord. O get but Job's Spirit under Affliction, and you may ſee as happy an end of them as he did.

Had Naomy ſeen the end of the Lord in taking away her Husband, and ſtarving her out of Moab, ſhe would not have changed her name, or ſaid the Lord had dealt bitterly with her, in grafting her Daughter by that Providence into the Noble Line, out of which the Saviour of the World was to riſe; and could you but ſee that good in order to which all this train of Troubles is laid, you would not murmur or deſpond as you do.

Object. 1. O but this is a grievous Stroke; God hath ſmitten me in the apple of mine Eye, and written bitter things againſt me. No ſorrow is like my ſorrow; 'tis a mourning for an only Son; I have loſt all in one.

Sol. 1. You can never loſe all in one, except that one be Chriſt; and he being yours in Covenant, can never be loſt. But your meaning is, you have loſt all of that kind in one, no more Sons to build up you Houſe, and continue your Name.

2. But yet Religion will not allow you to ſay that your dead Children are a loſt Generation. Præmittuntur, non amittuntur: They are ſent before, but not loſt. For they are a Covenant-ſeed, by you dedicated to the Lord: They were Children of many Prayers; a great ſtock of Prayers was laid up for them; in them alſo you, and all that knew them, diſcerned a teachable Spirit, pious inclinations, and Conſcience of ſecret duties, ſome good things towards the Lord God of Iſrael, as was ſaid of young Abijah, 1 Kings 14. 13. So that you parted from them upon far eaſier terms than good David parted from his Amnon, Abſolom, or Adonijah, who died in their ſins and open rebellions. There was a ſting in his troubles which you feel not; and if he comforted himſelf notwithſtanding in the Covenant of his God, in this reſpect may you much more.

Object. 2. O but my Son was cut off in the very Bud, juſt when the Fruits of Education were ready to diſcloſe and open.

Sol. Let not that conſideration ſo incenſe your ſorrows: God knows the fitteſt time both to give and to take our comforts; and ſeeing you have good grounds to hope your Child died intereſted in the Covenant of God, you have the leſs reaſon to inſiſt upon that afflicting circumſtance of an immature death. He that dies in Chriſt, hath lived long enough both for himſelf and us. That Marriner hath ſailed long enough, that hath gained his Port; and that Souldier fought long enough, that hath won the Victory: And that Child lived long enough, that hath won Heaven, how early ſoever he died.

Beſide, the ſooner he died, the leſs ſin he hath committed, and the leſs miſery he ſaw and felt in this wretched World, which we are left to behold and feel. And it is but a vanity to imagine that the parting pull with him would have been eaſier, if the enjoyment of him had been longer: For the long enjoyment of deſirable Comforts, doth not uſe to weaken, but abundantly to ſtrengthen and faſten the tyes of affection.

Submit your Reaſon therefore, as is meet, to the Wiſdom of God, who certainly choſe the fitteſt ſeaſon for this Affliction.

O but, ——— No more Buts and Objections, I beſeech you. Enough hath been offer'd from the Covenant of your God, to ſilence all your Objections, and to give you the eaſe and pleaſure of a reſigned Will. And what are all our Buts and Objections, but a ſpurning at Divine Soveraignity, and the thruſting in the Affliction deeper into your own hearts, which are wounded but too deep already?

I perſwade you not to put off, but to regulate natural Affections: To be without them, would deſervedly rank us among the worſt of Heathens; but rightly to bound and manage them, would ſet you among the beſt of Chriſtians.

I cannot imagine what eaſe or advantage holy Baſil gained by ſuch a particular and heart-piercing account, as he gave of a like Affliction with this; nor to what purpoſe it can be to you, to recal and recount thoſe things which only incenſe and aggravate your troubles: Doubtleſs your better way were to turn your thoughts from ſuch ſubjects as theſe, to your God in Covenant, as David in the Text did, and to recount the many great and ineſtimable mercies that are ſecured to you therein; which death ſhall never ſmite, or cut off from you, as it doth your other enjoyments.

Filius mihi erat Adoleſcens, ſolus vitæ ſucceſſor, ſolatium ſenectæ, gloria generis, flos æqualium, fulcrum domus, ætatem gratioſiſſimam agebat, &c.

Queſt. But yet unleſs we can in ſome meaſure clear our Covenant-intereſt, all theſe excellent Cordials prepared, will ſignifie no more to our relief, than water ſpilt upon the ground: help us therefore to do that, or elſe all that hath been ſaid is in vain? How may a perſon diſcern his Covenant-right and intereſt?

Anſ. This indeed is worthy of all conſideration, and deſerves a ſerious anſwer, foraſmuch as it is fundamental to your comfort, and all actual refreſhment in times of trouble; and will bring us to the next Uſe, which is for tryal of our Covenant-intereſt.

Uſe III. The great Queſtion to be decided, is, Whether God be our Covenant-God, and we his People? A Queſtion of the moſt ſolemn nature, and ſuch as requires awful attention.

We cannot expect ſatisfaction in this matter by ſuch an extraordinary way as David had it, but we may know it by,

Firſt, Our Covenant-Engagements.
Secondly, Our Covenant Impreſſions.
Thirdly, Our Covenant-Converſations.

Firſt, By our Covenant-Engagements, or Dedications of our ſelves to God; ſometimes called our joyning our ſelves to the Lord, Zech. 2. 11. our yielding our ſelves to him, Rom. 6. 19. our giving our ſelves to him, 2 Cor. 8. 5. The Soul that freely and deliberately conſents to take or chuſe the Lord to be his God, may warrantably conclude the Lord hath taken or choſen him: for our choice of God is but the reſult of his choice of us. John 15. 16. You have not choſen me, but I have choſen you; (i. e. you could never have choſen me, but in conſequence to, and by vertue of my firſt choice of you.

Well then, let it be ſeriouſly conſidered, whether you have duly conſented to take the Lord for your God, and Chriſt for your Redeemer. This includes two things in it.

1. Your relinquiſhing of all things inconſiſtent with him.
2. Your acceptation of all that promotes the glory and enjoyment of him.

1. Your relinquiſhing of all things that are inconſiſtent with an Intereſt in him. Except we let theſe go, God cannot be our God, nor Chriſt our Redeemer. The things to be relinquiſhed for Chriſt are in ſhort, both our ſinful, and our righteous ſelf. Sinful-ſelf muſt be diſclaimed and renounced: For we cannot be the Servants of Sin, and the Servants of Chriſt too, Rom. 6. 14. 18. And righteous ſelf muſt be renounced alſo, or we can have no part or intereſt in his Righteouſneſs, Rom. 10. 3. Theſe are two difficult points of ſelf-denial to part with every beloved Luſt, and to give up our own righteouſneſs. Thouſands chuſe rather to be damned for ever, than to do either of theſe.

2. Your acceptance and embracing of all things that promote his Glory, and further the enjoyment of him. As all the painful ways of Duty, hearing, praying, meditating, and all this with the intention of the Inner Man, and offering up of the Soul to God in theſe duties; and the more painful ways of ſuffering for God, and enduring all loſſes, reproaches, torments, and death for him, if his glory require it, and you may be thereunto called. All this is included in your chuſing God to be your God. And upon our underſtanding, and free conſent, and ſealing to theſe Articles, we have right to call him our God. Mat. 16. 24. If any Man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his Croſs and follow me. Now have you conſidered the terms of the Covenant, weighed and ballanced all the conveniences and inconveniences of Godlineſs, and then determined for Chriſt and Holineſs, let the coſt be what it will; then you have choſen him aright for your God. Many think they have choſen God for their God, that never underſtood or deliberated theſe terms. But Non conſentit, qui non ſentit: He that neither knows nor ponders them, is not capable of giving a due conſent.

Secondly, We may diſcern our Covenant-Intereſt, in the Covenant-Impreſſions that are made upon our Souls. All God's Covenant People have a double mark or impreſſion made upon them, viz

1. Upon their Minds.
2. Upon their Hearts

1. Upon their Minds in a more ſpiritual and efficacious knowledge of God. Jer. 31. 33. They ſhall all know me, from the greateſt of them, even to the leaſt of them. This knowledge is ſaid to be given, not acquired by meer ſtrength of natural abilities and human aids; and given us in the Face of Chriſt, not by the footſteps of the Creatures only, as he ſpeaks, 2 Cor. 4. 6. 'Tis the choice teaching of the anointing, 1 Joh. 2. 27. A knowledge ſpringing from inward Experience, and ſpiritual Senſe; as we know the ſweetneſs of Honey by taſting, better than by all the deſcriptions and reports that can be made of it.

2. Upon their Hearts, in that gracious tenderneſs and meltings of it for Sin, or the diſcoveries of Free Grace in the pardon of it. So you read in Ezek. 36. 26. A new Heart alſo will I give you, and a new Spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the ſtony Heart out of your Fleſh, and I will give you an Heart of Fleſh.

It is as eaſie to melt the obdurate Rocks into ſweet Syrup, as it is to melt the natural Heart in a penitential and tender melting for Sin; but now there is a principle or habit of tenderneſs implanted in the Soul, whereby it is diſpoſed and inclined to relent and thaw ingeniouſly upon any juſt occaſion.

Thirdly, Our Covenant-Intereſt may be evidenced in and by our Covenant-Converſations. All the Knowledge which is communicated to our Minds, and all the tenderneſs given to our Hearts, do reſpect and tend to this: Ezek. 36. 27. I will put my ſpirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. Habits and Principles are for action and practice: Grace in the heart is for Obedience and Holineſs of Life.

It is true, that as our Graces are imperfect, ſo is our obedience alſo. Perfect working is not to be expected from imperfect Creatures. God's own Covenanted People do often grieve him, and provoke him to bring them under the Rod of Affliction; but thoſe their Infirmities break not the Bond of the Covenant, Pſal. 89 30, 31, 32. Care and Watchfulneſs ordinarily goes before them, conflicts and reſiſtance accompanies them, and ſhame, grief, and renewed care uſually follows them, 2 Cor. 7. 11. By theſe things (which deſerve a more copious diſcourſe than my preſent deſign can allow) we may be helped to clear our Intereſt in the Covenant of Grace: And that being done, it ſhould be out of the Power of all the Afflictions in the World to ſink your Spirits. Let me therefore in the laſt place add,

Uſe IV. A word of conſolation to your dejected and drooping hearts, upon this ſad and mournful occaſion. Why are you ſo troubled? And why do thoughts ariſe in your Hearts? Methinks there hath been ſo much of ſupport and comfort already diſcovered to you in this Bleſſed Covenant, that could your Faith but once fix upon it, and realize and apply it, I might lay down my Pen at this Period, and ſay the Work is done, there needs no more; but knowing how obſtinate deep Sorrows are, and how difficult a Task the comforting of an afflicted Mind is, I will for a cloſe, ſuperadd a few conſiderations more, to all that hath been urged and argued before.

Conſid. I. Conſider how ſmall and trivial the Comforts, whoſe loſs you bewail, are in compariſon with Jeſus Chriſt, who is ſtill your own under the Bond of a ſure Covenant. A Son, an only and a promiſing Son, is a great thing, when he ſtands in in compariſon with other Creature-comforts; but ſurely he will ſeem a ſmall thing, and next to nothing, when ſet by, or compared with Jeſus Chriſt. Behold the Father, Son, and Spirit! Pardon and eternal Salvation are this day preſented in the Covenant of Grace before your Souls, as your own. God, even our own God ſhall bleſs us, Pſal. 67. 6. When you feel your Hearts wounded with ſuch a thought as this, I cannot embrace my Children in my Arms, they are now out of my reach; then bleſs and admire God, that the arms of your Faith can embrace ſo great, ſo glorious a Saviour, and that you can ſay, My beloved is mine, and I am his.

Conſid. II. Conſider what evil days are coming on, and what a Mercy it is to your Dead, that God hath taken them away from the evil to come, Iſa. 57. 1. 2. There are two ſorts of Evils to come, viz. Evils of Sin, and Evils of ſuffering; and 'tis no ſmall favour to be ſet out of the way of both. The Grave is the hiding-place where God ſecures ſome from the dangers of both.

We are apt to promiſe our ſelves times of Tranquility, and then it cuts us to think that our dear ones ſhall not partake with us in that Felicity: But if we wiſely conſider the ſins or the ſigns of the times, we have more cauſe to rejoice that God hath ſet them out of harms way.

All things ſeem to conſpire and work towards a day of great Temptation and Tribulation Now as Chriſt told his Diſciples, who were ſo dejected, becauſe he was to leave them, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I ſaid, I go to the Father: So truly you would much better expreſs and manifeſt your love to your Children, in your ſatisfaction in the Will and Appointment of God, in taking them into reſt and ſafety, than in your dejections and ſorrows for their removal. Surely they are better where they are than where they were, whom God hath houſed in Heaven out of the ſtorm and tempeſt. And could your dead Friends that are with Chriſt, have any more intercourſe with this World, and ſee your Tears, and hear your Sighs for them, they would ſay to you, as Chriſt did to thoſe that followed him wailing and mourning, Weep not for us, but for your ſelves, and ſuch as remain in the World with you, to ſee and feel the Calamities that are coming on it.

Conſid. III. Conſider how near you are to that bleſſed ſtate your ſelves, where God ſhall be all in all, and you ſhall feel no want of any Creature-comfort, 1 Cor. 15. 28.

Creature-comforts are only accommodated comforts to this animal life we now live, but ſhortly there will be no need of them; for God will be all in all: That is, all the Saints ſhall be abundantly ſatisfied in and with God alone. As there is water enough in one Sea to fill all the Rivers, Lakes, and Springs in the World: And light enough in one Sun to enlighten all the Inhabitants of the World: So there is enough in one God eternally to fill and ſatisfie all the Bleſſed Souls in Heaven, without the addition of any Creature-Comfort. God is compleat ſatisfaction to all the Saints, in the abſence (I cannot ſay want) of Wives and Children, Meats and Drinks, Eſtates and ſenſitive Pleaſures: There will be no more need of theſe things, than of Candles at Noon-day. You ſhall be as the Angels of God, who have no concernment for Relations.

Your fulneſs of Years, Infirmities of Body, and, I hope, I may add your improvements in Grace, ſpeak you not far ſhort of this bleſſed ſtate: And though you may ſeem to need theſe Comforts in the way, your God ſhall ſupply all your wants.

Conſid IV. To conclude, whatſoever your troubles, wants, fears, or dangers are, or may be in your paſſage to this bleſſed State, the Covenant of Grace is your ſecurity, and by vertue thereof your Troubles ſhall open and divide, as Jordan did, to give you a ſafe paſſage into your eternal Reſt.

Look as when the Iſraelites came near the Land of Promiſe, there was a ſwelling Jordan betwixt it and them, which ſeemed to forbid their farther paſſage and progreſs; but it's ſaid, Joſh. 3. 17. The Prieſts that bore the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, ſtood firm on the ground in the midſt of Jordan, and all the Iſraelites paſſed over on dry ground, until all the People were paſſed clean over Jordan. Juſt ſo it is here: The Covenant of grace ſtands on firm ground in the midſt of all the deep waters of tribulation you are to paſs through, to ſecure unto you a ſafe paſſage through them all. Rejoice therefore, and triumph in the fulneſs and firmneſs of this bleſſed Covenant, and whatſoever affliction your God ſhall pleaſe to lay upon you, or whatſoever comfort he ſhall pleaſe to remove from you, ſtill comfort and encourage your ſelves, as David here doth, Yet hath he made with me an everlaſting Covenant, ordered in all things, and ſure: For this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, although he make it not to grow.

TEXT.

2 Chron. XXXV. xxiv, xv.

His ſervants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the ſecond chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jeruſalem, and he died, and was buried in one of the ſepulchres of his fathers: and all Judah and Jeruſalem mourned for Joſiah. Ver. 25. And Jeremiah lamented for Joſiah, and all the ſinging-men, and the ſinging-women ſpake of Joſiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Iſrael: and behold they are written in the Lamentations.

IN this Context we have the Hiſtory of the Pious Life, and Tragical Death of good King Joſiah. The Hiſtory of his Life gives us an account of both what he was, and what he did. As to his Perſonal Endowments and Qualifications, they were ſingular and eximious, as appears by the fourfold Character by which he is deſcribed in the Context: for,

Firſt, He eſpouſed the intereſt of Religon betimes, even in his Youth; cap. 34. ver. 3. For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to ſeek after the God of David his father: And that under the great diſadvantage of an ill Education, ſuch a Morning promiſed a glorious Day.

Secondly, He hated all corruptive mixtures in the Worſhip of God, and was anſwerably zealous for Reformation; ibid. And in the twelfth year he began to purge Juda and Jeruſalem from the high places, and the groves, &c. as knowing well he and his People might expect no more of God's bleſſing on the Ordinances, than there was of his preſence in them; and no more of his preſence can rationally be expected, than there is of his own Order and Inſtitution.

Thirdly, He was of a very tender impreſſive heart, mourning for publick ſins and dangers; ver. 26, 27. Becauſe thy heart was tender, and thou didſt humble thy ſelf before God, when thou heardeſt his words againſt this place, and againſt the inhabitants thereof; and humbledſt thy ſelf before me, and didſt rend thy cloaths, and weep before me, &c. He was not ſo intent upon his own pleaſures (tho' in the ſprightly vigour of Youth) nor on the weighty concerns of the Kingdom, as to forget the intereſt of God, and the greater concerns of his Glory.

Fourthly, He was exceeding careful to propagate the intereſt of Religion, and ſpread it far and wide among his People. Though he could not infuſe the inward Principle, (that was the work of God) yet he did enjoyn the external practice of it upon all his Subjects, which was his part and duty; ver. 33. He made all that were preſent in Iſrael to ſerve, even to ſerve the Lord their God. And all his days they departed not from following the God of their Fathers.

But yet good Joſiah had his miſtakes and failings. The beſt of men are but men at beſt: He was too raſh and haſty in reſolving, and too ſtiff and obſtinate when reſolved; and this was the occaſion of his ruin. The caſe was thus:

Pharoah Necho King of Egypt, was at that time making War upon Charchemiſh, a place that belonged to him, but was taken from him by the King of Aſſyria, ſo the War of Necho was a juſt War; and Judah lying between him and Charchemiſh, and being at peace with Judah, he requeſts leave of Joſiah to march his Army peaceably through his Country to the ſeat of the War: Joſiah takes an Alarm from this Meſſage, and Arms againſt him. Hereupon Necho ſent Embaſſadours to Joſiah, chap. 35. ver 21. ſaying, What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not againſt thee this day, but againſt the houſe wherewith I have war: for God commanded me to make haſte; forbear thee from medling with God, who is with me, that he deſtroy thee not.

Jerom à lapide. Juſtin Martyr.

Expoſitors conceive Necho had this diſcovery of the mind of God, from the Prophet Jeremiah, Per oraculum non ſcriptum, ſed viva voce editum: even by word of mouth. If ſo, no doubt Jeremiah alſo diſſwaded Joſiah from going out againſt him: However, this is clear, Joſiah did not conſult the mind of God about that expedition, as he ought, and was too haſty and reſolute therein; ver. 22. Nevertheleſs Joſiah would not turn his face from him, &c. By this means this excellent man came to a tragical end, and that in the very flower of his days. He dies in that unhappy Expedition, from which he would not be diverted; is brought home to Jeruſalem in the ſecond Chariot; dies, and is buried in the Sepulchre of his Fathers, to the univerſal ſorrow of all good men in Iſrael, as you read in the Text; wherein we have theſe two parts to conſider.

I. The Nature and Quality of the Lamentation.

II. The Cauſe and Ground of it.

I. For the Lamentation here made, it was extraordinary; never ſuch cries heard before in Iſrael at any Funeral, whether we conſider it either.

1. Extenſively,
2. Intenſively, or
3. Protenſively.

1. Extenſively, all Judah and Jeruſalem, that is, City and Country mourned that day; not every Individual, but all that had any ſenſe of the worth of the man, the good that he did, or the evils that followed upon his removal. No doubt the Prieſts of Baal, their Abettors, and Aſſociates, ſecretly rejoyced at his fall; but all good men mourned. But among all the Mourners, one only is ſpecified by name, and that is Jeremiah the Prophet, in whom all the faithful Miniſters of God were included. To them he was a true and faithful Friend; and in him they loſt a Father, and a famous Inſtrument of Reformation.

2. Conſider it Intenſively, as to the degree of the ſorrow, it was a bitter Lamentation: ſo pungent, intenſe, and deep, that the Mourning of the Jews for Chriſt, at the time of their converſion to him, is compared to this Mourning for Joſiah. Zach. 12. ver. 11. In that day there ſhall be a great mourning in Jeruſalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon. This Hadadrimmon was a little Town in the Valley of Megiddon near the place of this fatal Battle, whoſe Inhabitants receiving the firſt tydings of the fall of Joſiah, made the Town ring with doleful Outcries and Lamentations.

3. Laſtly, Conſider, it Protenſively, in its continuance and duration, it was made an Ordinance in Iſrael; and accordingly the ſinging-men and ſinging-women ſpake of Joſiah in their lamentations to this day: i. e. Whenever any ſolemn Funeral or publick Calamity was ſolemnized in Iſrael, thoſe perſons that were skilful in Lamentations, brought in the ſtory of Joſiah's death, as the burthen of that doleful Song or Funeral-Elegy.

II. Let us conſider the Cauſe and Ground of this Lamentation, which certainly was great and weighty enough to juſtifie that ſorrow, as great and bitter as it was: for in him they loſt a faithful, publick, uſeful, zealous, and tender-hearted Inſtrument, whoſe Life had been eminently uſeful to the Church of God, and whoſe Death opened the gap to all the following Calamities upon Judah.

Now conſidering Joſiah, here eſpecially in his Religious capacity, as ſo faithful, induſtrious, and uſeful an Inſtrument for the Church of God, rather than in his political capacity as a King, the Note from it will be this.

Doct. That faithful, active, and publick ſpirited men in the Church of God, ſhould not be laid in their Graves, without great Lamentations. Doct.

When Jacob was buried, a man famous for Religion, a great and ſore lamentation was made for him, Gen. 50. ver. 10. And when Aaron died, all the Houſe of Iſrael mourned for him thirty Days, Numb. 20. ver. 29. When Stephen the Proto-Martyr died, devout men carryed him to his Grave, with great lamentations, Act. 8. 2. and indeed for any good man to be laid in his Grave, without lamentation, is lamentable. The living Saints have ever paid this reſpect and honour to dead Saints, as men ſenſible of their worth, and how great a loſs the World ſuſtains by their removal.

I know the departed ſouls of Saints have no concernment in theſe things, yet reſpect is due to their very Bodies, as the Temples wherein God hath been ſerved and honoured, as they are related to Chriſt, who will one day put great glory and honour upon them.

In the Explication and Confirmation of this point, I will ſhew you,

1. Negatively, on what account the death of good men is not to be lamented.
2. Poſitively, on what account Tears and Lamentations are due to them, with the grounds and reaſons thereof.

1. Negatively, there is not a Tear or Sigh due to the death of any good man, upon the account of any real loſs or detriment that he ſuſtains thereby. No, no, in this caſe all Tears are reſtrained, all Sorrows prohibited, by the Principles and Rules of Chriſtianity, 1 Theſſ. 4. 13, 14. Religion differences the ſorrows, as well as the joys, of its Profeſſors, from the common joys and ſorrows of the World. Dead Saints are better where they are, than where they were; to be with Chriſt is far better: Death to them is gain and infinite advantage, Phil. 1. 21, 23. This World is the worſt place that ever God deſigned his People to live in: for if a ſtate of perfect Holineſs and Purity, be better than a ſtate of Temptation and Corruption; if a ſtate of Reſt and Peace, be better than a ſtate of Labour and Sorrow; if it be better to be triumphing above, than ſighing and groaning beneath: then it's better for departed Chriſtians to be where they are, than where they were. And could they now communicate their minds to us by words, as they lately did, they would ſay to us as Chriſt ſaid. Luke 23. 28. Daughter of Jeruſalem, weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves, and for your children. Or as he ſpake to his Diſciples under their ſad reſentments of his departure, Joh. 14. 28. If ye loved me, ye would rejoyce, becauſe I go to the Father. So then no tears or ſorrows are due to them, or becoming us, upon the account of any real loſs or detriment they receive by death.

2. Poſitively, But the true grounds and cauſes of our Lamentations, are upon divers other weighty accounts: as,

1 Reaſon. Firſt, Becauſe ſo much of the Spirit of God as dwelt in them when amongſt us, is now re-called and gathered up from this lower World. Thoſe precious Graces which they exerciſed among us, in Prayer, Conference, and other beneficial Duties, are now gone with them to Heaven.

The Church had the benefit of them during their abode with men, but now no more, except only what the remembrance of their holy Words and inſtructive Examples (whereby they ſtill ſpeak to us, though dead) may afford unto us.

There are choice effuſions of the Spirit at the time of our Sanctification, of which the Church reapeth the benefit whilſt we live; but all theſe are recalled at our diſſolution, and thenceforth we can be no farther uſeful in this lower World: for as the Soul is the ſubject in which theſe precious Graces inhere, ſo they accompany and go along with the Soul into glory.

Now as it is a real loſs to a Company when any Merchant withdraws a great Stock, he had running in Trade, out of the Bank; ſo certainly it is a great loſs to the Church of God, when the precious gifts and graces of the Spirit, dwelling in the Saints, are drawn out by Death; ſo as the Church can have no farther benefit by them, their Prayers for us, and with us, are now ended; Abraham knoweth us not, and Iſrael is ignorant of us.

2 Reaſon. Secondly, The death of the Saints deſerves a bitter lamentation, becauſe thereby a breach is made, a gap opened, to let in the Judgments of God upon the Remnant that is left. It is ſaid of Moſes, Pſal. 106. 23. Therefore he ſaid, that he would deſtroy them, had not Moſes his choſen ſtood before him in the breach, leſt he ſhould deſtroy them. A Metaphor from a beſieged City, when a breach is made in the Walls, and an Enemy ready to Enter; but ſome Champion ſtands in the breach to defend the City. Such a Champion was Moſes, who by his conſtant and fervent Prayers, put a ſtop to the inundation of God's Judgments againſt Iſrael. And ſuch another was Lot, Gen. 19. 22. whoſe Prayers for that wicked place he lived in, bound up the hand of Judgment inſomuch as the Lord told him, I can do nothing till thou art gone. But when the Lord by death removes ſuch men, he thereby makes a way to his anger, as the expreſſion is, Pſal. 78. 50. Hence the death of eminent Saints, eſpecially when many are taken away at or near the ſame time, hath been ever look'd upon as a direful Omen, and dreadful Preſage of enſuing Judgments, and that not without good Scripture-authority, Iſa. 57. 1. The righteous periſh, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none conſidering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.

Thus Methuſalah, whoſe very Name ſignified a Flood cometh, died the year before the Flood. Auguſtin, a little before the ſacking of Hyppo. Paræus, a little before the taking of Hydelberg. And Luther, before the Wars brake out in Germany. Death as a Pioneer, clears the way to a Troop of Miſeries following after. This therefore is a juſt and weighty ground of our lamentations for the death of uſeful and godly men.

3 Reaſon. Thirdly, The beauty and ornaments of the places they lived in, is defaced and removed by their death; they look not like themſelves, when the godly are removed out of them: for as wicked men are the ſpots and blemiſhes, ſo good men are the beauty and ornaments of their Country. A good man was wont to ſay of Mr. Barrington of Barrinton-Hall in Eſſex, Methinks the Town is not at home, when Mr. Barrington is out of Town. How deſolate and diſmal doth a Family look (whatever other Ornaments be about it) when the Religious Governour of it is gone! Take away good men from their Families, and Country, and what are they but like a Vineyard when the Vintage is paſt? as the Prophet ſpeaks, Micha. 7. 1.

4 Reaſon. Fourthly, The death of good men deſerves a bitter Lamentation, becauſe thereby the paſſage of the Goſpel, and propagation of Religion, is obſtructed in the places from whence they are removed. Of how great uſe in a Country may one zealous publick-ſpirited man be? Hundreds may have cauſe to bleſs God for ſuch a man. It was the Apoſtles deſire to the Theſſalonians, To pray that the word of the Lord may have its free courſe, that it might run and be glorified, 2 Theſſ. 3. 1. The removal of ſuch a perſon as naturally took care for the Souls of thoſe that were about him, to provide food for them, is no ſmall loſs, nor lightly to be paſſed over.

5 Reaſon. Fifthly, The conſideration of the time in which good men die, aggravates the loſs, and juſtly incenſes the ſorrow of them that remain, and that upon a three-fold account. (1.) That it falls out in the declining ſtate of Religion, when the Spirit and power of Godlineſs is ſo much weakned and impoveriſhed. This is like the loſs of good Blood in a conſumptive Body, which muſt bring it very low. (2.) That it falls out alſo in a time when the numbers of the Godly are ſo much thinn'd and leſſen'd, not when the Churches Children ſay in her Ears, The place is too ſtraight, give place that we may dwell; but when they are every where lamenting, the paucity and ſcarcity of good men, as the Pſalmiſt did, Pſal. 12. 1. Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaſeth, for the righteous fail from among the children of men. At a time when they are bewailing themſelves in the language of the Prophet, Micha 7. 1. Wo is me, for I am as when they have gathered the ſummer-fruits, as the grape-gleanings of the vintage: there is no cluſter to eat; my ſoul deſired the firſt ripe fruit.

fruit. Alluding to a hungry man that goes into a Vineyard to refreſh his ſpirits with the fruit thereof; but alas, there is not one pleaſant bunch to be found, none but ſowre Grapes, to increaſe his Hunger, and ſet his Teeth on edge. (3.) And that which much more aggravates the loſs, is this: when it falls in a time wherein the ſpring and ſucceſſion of good men is obſtructed. In this caſe Death, like a ſtorm of Wind, overturns the faireſt, pleaſanteſt, and moſt fruitful Trees in the Orchard, when there is no Nurſery from whence others may be taken to plant in their rooms.

Reaſon. Laſtly, There is juſt cauſe to lament the removal of publick and pious men, when we conſider what influence our ſins and provocations have had upon thoſe Judgments and Calamities; our unworthineſs of them, unthankfulneſs for them, and non-improvements of ſuch mercies, have bereaved us of them. I look upon every good man, as a good Book, lent by its Owner to another to read and tranſcribe the excellent Notions and golden Paſſages that are in it, for his own benefit, that they may remain with him, when the Owner ſhall call for the Book again: but in caſe this excellent Book be thrown into a corner, and no uſe made of it, it juſtly provokes the Owner to take it away in diſpleaſure.

Thus you ſee upon what account our ſorrows for the death of good men are reſtrained, and upon what accounts and reaſons they are a due debt to the death of eminent and uſeful Inſtruments for God. What remains, is the Application of this point. And,

1 Uſe. Firſt, The Point before us juſtly reproves three ſorts of men.

1. The worſt of men, ſuch as ſecretly rejoyce, and are inwardly glad at the removal of ſuch men; they took no delight in them while they lived, and are glad they are rid of them when they are dead. Thoſe that perſecuted and hated them when alive, may be preſumed to be pleaſed and gratified with their death. But alas, poor Creatures, they know not what they do! The Innocent preſerve the Iſland. Except the Lord of hoſts (ſaith the Prophet) had left us a ſmall remnant, we had been as Sodom, we had been like unto Gomorrah, Iſa. 1. 9. It's a Proverb among the very Jews, Sinè ſupplicationibus non ſtaret Mundus: The World ſtands by the Prayers of the godly. Let the World think what they will of them. I tell you theſe men are a Screen, a Partition-wall, betwixt them and deſtruction.

2. It reproves the inſenſibleneſs of good men, who are apt too ſlightly to paſs over ſuch tremendous ſtrokes of God; for this it was that God reproved his own People, Iſa. 57. 1. No Man layeth it to heart. Where the want of affection is charged upon the want of conſideration, none conſidering their worth, their uſe, or the conſequences of their fall. Such rebukes of God do certainly call for a deeper ſenſe and ſorrow, than is found in moſt men.

3. It reproves the very beſt of men, who though they do bewail and lament the loſs of ſuch men, yet they do not lament it in the due manner. They lament it one to another, ſaying, Alas, alas, ſuch a Worthy is fallen, ſuch an eminent Inſtrument in the Church or State is dead; but they do not lament it in Prayer to the Lord, they mourn not over the matter to him, as David did, Pſal. 12. 1. Crying, Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaſeth. Help, Lord, the remnant that is left; help, Lord, to repair the breach made by their death; let the God of the Spirits of all fleſh raiſe up a Man to fill the room and ſupply the want. Alas, how inſignificant are the Lamentations of moſt men upon this account!

2 Uſe. Secondly, This point invites us all this day to bewail the ſtroke of God that is upon us. I could wiſh that he that looks upon this Text, and then upon the countenance of this Aſſembly might be able to diſcern the agreeableneſs of the one to the other, in ſuch a ſad and ſolemn occaſion.

O let all that love Sion, lament this day the fall of one of her true Friends and Lovers. I know Funeral Panegyricks are apt to be ſuſpected of flattery; but as I want a Rhetorical Tongue for ſuch a work, ſo if I had it, it ſhould never be ſaleable for ſo baſe a uſe and purpoſe. I am ſure by ſending the generality that die to Heaven, many are confirmed in the way to Hell. Nor can I but think of that ſerious Line in Chryſoſtom, What a poor comfort is it, to be praiſed where a man is not, and to be tormented where he is. But yet the righteous ſhall be had in everlaſting remembrance, Pſal. 112. 6. Expect nothing from me on this occaſion, but what may be ſpoken with greateſt aſſurance of truth, and that intended for the benefit and imitation of all that hear it. Some may think it a ſtrain too high, to compare a private Perſon with ſuch a glorious King as Joſiah was; but if Chriſt compared and preferred the very Graſs of the Field, to Solomon in all his glory, I know no reaſon why we may not compare and parallel the precious Graces of a private perſon with a royal Saint, eſpecially ſince the compariſon is only made in the religious, not in the civil capacity.

I am ſure the Graces, and gracious Performances of David, Hezekiah, and Joſiah, with all the other dignified Saints, were intended and propounded as Patterns for our imitation; and no doubt but private Chriſtians may meaſure by their Pattern. Beſide, it is abundantly more ſafe to relate the Vertues of the Saints when they are dead, than whilſt they were alive: for now there is no danger of provoking pride and vain-glory in them that are praiſed, but much hope of provoking an holy emulation and imitation in them that hear them.

Well then, Abſit invidia verbis: Suffer me this day to erect a Pillar to perpetuate the Memory of this deceaſed Worthy, to pay the tribute of my Tears due to that mournful Hearſe, and to engage you to imitate thoſe Excellencies of his, which I ſhall with equal truth and modeſty diſplay this day, that we alſo may be duly affected with the Rebuke of God upon us, and mourn over it before him.

If when an eminent Commander in any Army falls, the whole Army is affected and concerned with his death;

The mourning Drum, the Lance and Enſignes
trail'd;
The Robes of Honour all in Sables vail'd.

Let it not be thought much, Chriſtians ſhould expreſs their ſenſe and ſorrow in ſighs and tears, for ſo uſeful and worthy a man as God hath this day removed from among us, whoſe Character I ſhall give you in the following immitable particulars.

1. That worthy man whoſe fall we lament this day, was ſeaſoned with Religion in his Youth, by God's bleſſing upon his pious Education; in this he had the advantage of Joſiah. His Progenitors were men of Piety, and himſelf a Child of many Prayers: and, as Monica ſaid of her Son Auſtin, it was not likely that a Child of ſo many Prayers ſhould periſh. How importunately did they requeſt the fervent Prayers of their pious Friends for him, in the time of his Education? nor was it in vain, for they were manifeſtly anſwered in him. He ſoon diſcovered that Probity and Piety in his Youth, which juſtly raiſed great expectations from him in his riper years.

2. Nor did he fruſtrate thoſe hopes; for as ſoon as ever God had fixed him in a proper Sphere of Activity, (I mean, a Family of his own) thoſe Graces that were in him ſhone forth, to the comfort and benefit of all that were about him. Joſhua's pious reſolution was his; As for me, I and my houſe will ſerve the Lord.

He kept up the Worſhip of God in his Cloſet, as well as in his Family. And truly if Religion languiſh in the Cloſet, it will quckly die in the Family. His Houſe was a Temple conſecrated to God; there the Morning and Evening-Sacrifices of Prayers and Praiſes were offered up. He called his Children and Servants to thoſe Duties, not rekoning that time loſt to him, which was ſpent for God. The Lord had endowed him with an excellent Spirit of Prayer himſelf: I have ſometimes accidentally heard him praying in his Family, with ſuch ſolidity of Judgment, pertinency of Expreſſion, and holy warmth of Affection, that hath at once edified, refreſhed, and reproved me in hearing him.

He conſtantly read the Scriptures in courſe before Prayer, and oft-times with a Commentary upon them, for his own and his Families Edification.

The Lords day he ſanctified not only in more publick attendance on the Ordinances, but in the Duties of Reading, Repeating, Singing, and Catechiſing all his Children and Servants about him. And all this before he allowed himſelf or them any bodily Refreſhments, leſt the edge of their Affections ſhould be blunted in Duty, by the clogging of Nature with Creature-repaſts. And thus did he, as Job, continually: to this courſe he was ſevere and conſtant, no incident occaſions, how great or many ſoever, could divert him from it.

3. Neither was his holy Zeal and Chriſtian care limited and circumſcribed within his own Family, but was extended to the Souls of all in his Neigbourhood, who deſired helps and means in the way of ſalvation.

His Houſe was ſeldom without a godly Miniſter in it, and loath he was to eat his pleaſant Morſels alone. It was the joy of his heart to ſee his houſe fill'd on this account: How many Witneſſes to the truth of this are here this day! Like another Joſeph, he provided food for your Souls; he loved, honoured, received, and incouraged the Miniſters of the Goſpel in their deepeſt ſufferings; gave them oppertunities of ſervice, when ſome durſt not own them, and others violently perſecuted them.

4. When God called him to publick Employments in the Common-wealth, he neither purchaſed nor abuſed that Truſt; but with a true Engliſh, rather a Chriſtian zeal and courage, he dedicated himſelf to the ſervice of God and his Country. Chearfully quitting all domeſtick concerns, ſpent his Eſtate, time, and pains, to heal the breaches of England. I know not a man whoſe zeal for the common good, would have carried him nearer to the Example of that noble Roman, who when a Chaſm was made by an Earthquake, and the Oracle had declared, that it could never be cloſed, except ſomething of value was thrown into it, caſt in himſelf to cloſe it.

I could truly have ſaid, had there been conveniency and oppertunity for it, when he was laid in his Grave, Here lies a man thatn ever betrayed ner deſerted the Publick, for any private intereſt of his own.

5. He was a man that came as near Joſiah in tenderneſs of Heart, as ever I had the happineſs to be acquainted with. The Churches troubles were his troubles, they all met in him as lines in a centre; he even liv'd and died with the intereſt of Religion: and of him I will ſay, as the Apoſtle ſaid of Timothy, 2 Phil. 20, 21. I have no man like minded who will naturally care for your ſtate, for all ſeek their own, not the things which are Jeſus Chriſt's. Naturally, in this place, is not oppoſed to Spiritually, but to Artificially. Many can artificially act the part of a Zealot, when their own Intereſt lies in it; but he naturally, and therefore freely, chearfully, and conſtantly.

6. But though theſe Excellencies were in him, he had his Nævi, blemiſhes, and imperfections. Elias was a man of like paſſions and weakneſſes of Spirit. All theſe I doubt not but God hath covered, and he is now perfectly freed from them all.

There is now no paſſion left within him to be ſtirred by temptation, no deſpondencies and ſinkings of Spirit under diſmal aſpects of Providence. His Graces are perfected, and his Corrurtions finally eradicated.

7. To conclude, he was a man of great Afflictions, as well as tender Affections. And as the Lord greatly honoured him in the courſe of active obedience, ſo he greatly proved and tryed him in a courſe of paſſive obedience. He not only gave the Croſs in his Coat, but bare it upon his Shoulders: for beſides thoſe troubles which were properly ſympathetical, he had his Idiopathetical ſufferings alſo, and that, both from the hands of men, and from the hand of God. His Piety made and marked him for an Object of Perſecution; the Archers ſhot at him, and ſorely grieved him; he and his Family were hunted with a Net; The Lord lay it not to their charge: Et hinc illæ lachrymæ. The ſad effects thereof, I choſe rather at this time to paſs over with a ſigh, than in this place to commemorate

And as the hand of man was upon him, ſo the hand of his God alſo. Firſt, lopping off all the pleaſant Branches that ſprang from him, and that one after another; when come to the endearing age, opening and diſcloſing the Bud: And as the Complement and Iſſue of all, breaking his conſtitutional ſtrength with a long languiſhing Diſeaſe, which at laſt extinguiſhed this bright Lamp, and hath left his Family and Neighbourhood in darkneſs and ſorrow. His poor Heart was the Anvil on which many Hammers of Affliction had been a long time beating; and no wonder it appeared relaxed and tumified, when it was inſpected, having endured ſo many ſucceſſive ſtrokes of ſorrow.

And now what the Lord ſpake of Iſrael in Jer. 11. 16. is fulfilled upon this worthy perſon, The Lord called thy name a green Olive-tree, fair and of goodly fruit, with the noiſe of a great tumult he hath kindled a fire upon it, and the branches of it are broken.

Uſe. Thirdly, I ſhall wind up the whole in ſeveral ſeaſonable and neceſſary Counſels: Some more general, others more particular, and ſome moſt particularly and eſpecially.

Firſt, Counſel to all in general, to awaken themſelves, and recover a due ſenſe of ſuch ſore Rebukes of God as this is. When Saul fell, David lamented it, ſaying, The beauty of Iſrael was ſlain on thy high places.

God hath this day ſtript off an Ornament from this Country. Such diſpenſations of Providence ſpeak indignation coming on. It requires almoſt an Age to breed and furniſh a Man with due qualifications for the Service of the Church and Common Wealth. England doth not ſo abound with pious, zealous, and faithful Gentlemen at this time, but that it may ſenſibly feel the loſs of ſuch a Man.

Secondly, More particularly, let the Miniſters of Chriſt lament his fall, as Jeremiah did the fall of Joſiah in the Text. He was a true friend to Chriſt's faithful Miniſters, and had them in honour for their work ſake. 'Tis true, he hath no more need of us, he is now wiſer than his Teachers; but we greatly need him, and men of his Spirit, in ſuch a dull degenerate Age as we live in.

Thirdly, And moſt particularly, I ſhall apply and cloſe all with a few words of Counſel to the dear and now deſolate Relict of this Worthy Perſon, whoſe ſad lot it is this day to over-live the mercies and comforts ſhe once enjoyed in him.

Madam, God hath this day covered you with Sables, written bitter things againſt you, broken you with breach upon breach. Your ſorrows need not be excited, but regulated. 'Tis my trouble, that I cannot diſcharge my duty to the memory of your dear Husband, without exaſperating your Griefs, which alas were too accute before; but Rods have their voices: Bleſſed is the man whom God correcteth and teacheth him out of his Law. Hear you the Rod, and who hath appointed it; and oh that your Soul may this day take in theſe neceſſary Counſels and Cautions, without which your Afflictions cannot be ſanctified to the advantage of your Soul. And,

1. Learn from hence the vanity of the Creature, the emptineſs and nothingneſs of the beſt things here below. How hath God made your beſt comforts on Earth to ſhrink up and vaniſh into nothing? How do our fancies varniſh and guild over theſe empty Bubbles? What great expectations are we apt to raiſe from them? How apt to fall aſleep in the boſoms or laps of earthly Enjoyments? and ſay with Job, I ſhall die in my neſt, and multiply my days as the ſand. When loe, in a moment the projects and expectations of many years are over-turned. Oh what a difference will you find betwixt hope founded in Chriſt, Comforts drawn out of the Promiſes, and the flattering Comforts and vain hopes founded in the Creature whoſe breath is in its Noſtrils?

'Tis time for you and for us all to wean off from this vain World; mortifie our Fancies and Affections to it, and place them where they ſhall not be capable of diſappointment.

2. Guard carefully, I beſeech you, againſt thoſe Temptations which probably may accompany this Affliction. It may be Satan will ſuggeſt to your heart, what he once put into their lips, Mal. 3. 14. What profit is it that we have kept his ordinances, and walked mourfully before him? Where is the fruit of Prayer? What good have I ſeen of Faſting? What hath Religion availed? Do not prayerleſs and ungodly Families thrive and proſper? Beware of this Madam, I doubt not but you will acknowledge there have been ſins and provocations within your walls, yea within your heart, for which God may as juſtly and ſeverely judge your houſe as he did Ely's. Remember the rewards of Religion are not in this World; and ſhould we ſpeak thus, we ſhall offend againſt the generation of his Children. All we muſt expect from Religion, is to ſave our Souls by it.

3. Call not the love of God into queſtion to your ſelf, or yours, becauſe of theſe ſevere ſtrokes of God upon you and them: You know Joſiah was dear to God, yet he died in the prime of his days, by a violent hand, remote from his own home, and was brought home in the ſecond Chariot to Jeruſalem, a Spectacle of far greater ſorrow, than your dear Husband was; and yet notwithſtanding all theſe ſad circumſtances of his death, the Promiſe of his God was punctually performed to him, that he ſhould die in peace, and not behold the Evil that was to come. There is a vanity, ſaith Solomon, which is done upon the earth, that there be juſt men unto whom it happeneth according to the work of the wicked: again, there be wicked men to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous, Eccleſ. 8 14. But then remember, that it is but in the Earth; here, or no where, God muſt chaſtiſe his Children.

4. See that you maintain that holy courſe of Religious Exerciſes in your Family, and in your Cloſet, wherein he walked ſo exemplary before you. Let Religion live, tho' he be dead; and convince the World, I pray you, that it was God's influence, and not your Husband's only, which was the Spring and Principle of this holy Courſe.

5. Strive not with your Maker, nor fret againſt the Lord, under this irkſome and painful Diſpenſation. Remember there is a Woe hanging over this Sin: Iſai. 45. 9 10. Woe to him that ſtriveth with his Maker. There is a twofold ſtriving of Men with God, one lawful and commendable, when we ſtrive with him upon the knee of Importunity in Prayer, thus Jacob wreſtled with God, and prevailed, Hoſ. 12. 4. The other is highly ſinful and dangerous, when we preſume to cenſure or accuſe any of his Works as defective in Wiſdom or Goodneſs. He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it, (i. e.) At his peril be it. This ſinful ſtriving with God is twofold, either Vocal or Mental.

1. Vocal, When Men in bold blaſphemous Language, arraign the Wiſdom, Power, Goodneſs or Faithfulneſs of the Lord at the bar of their own Reaſon, and there condemn them, ſetting their Mouths againſt the Heavens, Pſal. 73. 8, 9. This is the ſin of the Wicked, yea of the firſt-born Sons of Wickedneſs.

2. Mental, In inward frets, murmurs, repinings againſt God; Prov. 19. 3. The fooliſhneſs of Man perverts his way, and his Heart fretteth againſt the Lord. The Heart may cry out impatiently againſt God, when the Tongue is ſilent: And if the frets and murmurs of the Heart be (as indeed they are) interpretatively no better than a ſtriving with our Maker, then this Sin will be found more common among good Men in the Paroxiſms of Affliction, than we imagine. It will be neceſſary therefore, for your ſake, and for the ſakes of many more in a like ſtate of affliction with you. to ſtay a while upon this Head, and conſider theſe following Queries.

Query 1. How far we may enquire, expoſtulate, and complain in times of affliction, without Sin?

Query. 2 Wherein lies the ſinfulneſs and danger of exceeding theſe bounds?

Query 3. What Conſiderations are moſt proper and powerful to reſtrain the afflicted Soul from this ſinful exceſs?

Query 1. How far we may enquire of God, expoſtulate with him, and complain to him in time of Affliction, without Sin?

1. We may humbly enquire into the cauſes and reaſons of God's diſpleaſure againſt us, not to ſeek matter for our Juſtification, but Direction in the work of our Humiliation. So David enquired about the three Years Famine, and the Lord informed him for whoſe ſake and for what Sin it was, 2 Sam. 21. 1. And thus Job addreſſed to him in the day of his affliction, Job. 10.2. Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me; (i. e.) convince me what ſpecial ſin it is for which I am thus afflicted. This is ſo far from being our ſin, that it is both our duty, and the excellency of our Spirits; 'tis a Child-like temper, willing to know, that we may be particularly humbled for that Sin, and for ever the more careful to ſhun it. That which I ſee not, teach thou me; if I have done Iniquity, I will do ſo no more, Job 34 32. Thus far we are ſafe.

2. We may plead by Prayer, and put him in mind of his Mercies, Relations, and Promiſes, in order to the change of his Providential Diſpenſations towards us: We may ſay to him under the ſmarteſt Rod, as the Church did, Doubtleſs thou art our Father, Pſal. 74. 20. Have reſpect to the Covenant, or as Jacob, Gen. 32. 9, 12. Thou ſaidſt, I will ſurely do thee good.

We may complain to God under our Sufferings, and ſpread them before him in all their Circumſtances and Aggravations, as Job, Heman, Aſaph, Hezekiah, and David did. He allows his Children to complain to him, but not of him. I poured out my Complaint before him, I ſhewed before him my Trouble, Pſal. 142. 2. To whom ſhould a Child made his complaint, but to his Father? So far we are ſafe.

4. We may ſubmiſſively pray for the removal of his Hand from us, and entreat that his Anger may ceaſe; that he will turn again and heal us and our Families, and not draw forth his Anger for ever. So did David, Pſal. 39. 10. Remove thy ſtroke away from me, I am conſumed by the blow of thine Hand. q. d. Ah Lord, I am not able to endure another ſtroke. All this while we are ſafe, within the bounds of our duty. But then,

Query 2. Wherein lies our Sin and Danger, in exceeding theſe bounds? I anſwer,

Sol. When forgetting God's Soveraignty, and the deſert of our Iniquities, we arrogantly cenſure his effecting, or permitting Providences, as if they had no conducency to his own Glory, or our good. This is both ſinful and dangerous: For,

1. This is a proud exalting of our own Reaſon and Underſtanding, above the Infinite Wiſdom of God. God hath made our Reaſon a Judge and Arbitor in matters within its own Sphere and Province; but when it comes to ſummon God to its Bar, and Article againſt Heaven, it is an inſufferable arrogancy, and we do it at our own peril. God will have all Men know that he is an unaccountable Being, Job. 33. 13. Yea, he will have us to know that the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than Men, 1 Cor. 1. 25. That is, that thoſe very Works of God, which Man's proud Reaſon adventures to cenſure, as not ſo wiſe a Method as their own would be, hath more Wiſdom in it than all the deep-laid deſigns of the greateſt Politicians in the World. And 'tis ſtrange that Men ſhould dare to attempt ſuch a wickedneſs as this, after God hath ſo ſeverely puniſhed it in the fallen Angels.

2. It is no leſs than a ſpurning at the Soveraignty of God, from whoſe Pleaſure we derive our Beings, and all our Mercies Rev. 4. 11. In theſe quarrellings of Providence, and frets at divine appointments, we invade his Throne, and controul his Soveraign Pleaſure. How monſtrous were it to hear a Child quarrelling with his Father, that he is not ſo and ſo figured, or the Clay to chide the Potter for moulding it as it is?

3. 'Tis deſtructive to our own inward Peace and Tranquility of Mind, which is part of the puniſhment of this Sin; and a ſmart ſtripe, a ſore rebuke it is from the Hand of God upon us.

Contention is uncomfortable, though but with a Neighbour, worſe with a near Relation; but a quarrel with God is deſtructive to all comfort in the World. Afflictions may diſturb a good Man's Peace, but a mutinous Spirit againſt God, deſtroys and ſtabs it at the very Heart. What is the Sin and Torment of the Devils, but their rage againſt the Lord, and ſwelling againſt the methods of his Grace? He ſeeketh reſt, but findeth none, Mat 12. 33. The Peace of our Spirits is a choice Mercy, and might be maintained amidſt all our Afflictions, were but our Intereſt in his Promiſes, and the true level of his Providences cleared to us.

4. 'Tis irrational, and highly unjuſt, to give the cauſe, and quarrel at the effect. God hath righteouſly and inſeperably linked penal with moral Evils; Sin and Sorrow by the Laws of Heaven are tackt and united together; he that doth Evil, ſhall feel Evil, Gen. 4. 7. We adventure upon Sin, and then fret at Affliction: Prov. 19. 3. The fooliſhneſs of a Man perverts his way, and his Heart fretteth againſt the Lord. Is this becoming a reaſonable Creature? Doth not every Man reap as he ſoweth? Can the Seed of Sin bring forth a Crop of Peace and Comfort? Why doth the living Man complain, a Man for the puniſhment of his Sins, Lam. 3. 39. Search your Hearts, and ſearch your Houſes, and you will quickly find that all your Afflictions in this World, were they ten thouſand times more and heavier than they are, do not come near to the deſert of one ſin. All Sorrows, Loſſes, Afflictions on this ſide Hell are quite below the value of Sin, the meritorious and provoking cauſe of them all.

5. 'Tis fooliſh and vain, to ſtrive againſt God, and conteſt perverſely with him. Can our diſcontents relieve us? Or our murmurs eaſe us? Will they turn God out of his way? No, no, He is in one Mind, and who can turn him aſide? Job. 23. 13. The Wheels of Providence go ſtraight forward and turn not when they go, Ezek. 1. 17. We may bring them over us to cruſh us, by ſtanding thus in their way, but cannot turn them out of their way.

Impatiens ægrotus, crudelem facit medicum.

If ye ſtill walk contrary to me, then will I walk contrary to you, and puniſh you yet ſeven times for your Sins, Lev. 26. 13, 14. Or I will walk in the raſhneſs of mine Anger, ſmiting you without moderation, as Men do in the height of their rage and Fury. This is all we ſhall get by fretting againſt God Never expect relief under, or releaſe from the yoke God hath laid on your Necks, till you be brought to accept the puniſhment of your Iniquities. Lev. 26. 41.

6. 'Tis a ſin full of odious Ingratitude towards your God: Which appears (1.) in murmuring becauſe it is ſo bad, when we ſhould be admiring that it is no worſe. Are there not Millions in Hell that never ſinned at higher rates than yon have done? Is this Affliction as bad as Hell? Hath God pardoned you and ſaved you, and yet doth he deſerve to be thus requited by you! (2.) In murmuring that our condition is ſo bad, when we may every day ſee others in a far worſe caſe, who are equal with us by nature, and were equal with them in guilt and provocation. If we ſpeak of outward Afflictions, certainly others would be glad to exchange conditions with us, and account themſelves happy in our Circumſtances. Conſider the deſcription given of thoſe Perſons Job 30. 3, 4, 5. And how little they differ in the manner of Life from bruit Beaſts: And if we ſpeak of inward Troubles, compare your own with thoſe of Heman, and Aſaph, in Pſal. 77. and Pſal. 88. and if of both together, and that in an intenſe degree, conſider Job. 6. 4. and you will ſoon find your condition full of ſparing Mercy: Theſe excellent Perſons that were ſo much above you in Grace, were yet plunged ſo much deeper than you into Affliction. And is it not then vile ingratitude in you, thus to mutiny and charge your God fooliſhly? (3.) But eſpecially here lies our Ingratitude, in quarrelling and cenſuring thoſe Providences, whoſe very end and errand is our eternal good; Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his Holineſs.

7. 'Tis a Sin that deprives us of the fruits and benefits of our Afflictions: A tumultuous raging Spirit reaps no good by the Rod. The fruits of Affliction are called the peaceable Fruits, Heb. 12. 11. becauſe they are always gathered and reaped down by the afflicted Soul in a quiet and peaceful temper. Anima ſedenda, & quieſcendo fit ſapiens. Bloſſoms and Flowers open not in the boiſterous ſtorms of Winter, but in the mild and gentle Spring.

Well then, be convinced of the Sin and danger of a diſcontented Spirit under the Hand of God, and inſtead of mourning over loſt Relations, now mourn for the loſs of Patience, the want of Submiſſion, and for the Pride and Arrogancy of your own Reaſon, that preſumes to correct the works of the Almighty, and ſay to God, as Joſeph did to his Father, when he wittingly croſſed his hands in bleſſing Ephraim and Manaſſah, Not ſo, my Father? This is not fit.

Query 3. But how may theſe Evils be prevented or cured, and the tempeſtuous Soul calmed under the Rod? How ſhall all ſtrifes betwixt God and his People be ended, and the Soul made quiet at his Feet?

Reply, This bleſſed frame of Spirit may in a great degree and meaſure be attained in the uſe of the following Directions. I ſay, in their uſe and application, not by the preſcription or ſimple knowledge of them. And,

Rule 1. The firſt Rule or Direction, is this: Study well the glorious Soveraignty of God over you, and awe your Hearts with the conſideration of it. From his meer Pleaſure you and all that is your proceeded, on his Pleaſure you depend, and into that good Pleaſure of his Will your wills therefore ought to be reſolved: Whatever the Lord pleaſed, that he did, in Heaven and in Earth, in the Sea and in all deep places, Pſal. 135. 6. Man and Man ſtand on equal ground, and if our Reaſon be not ſatisfied about the equity of Mens dealings with us, we may aſk who did it, and demand the reaſons why he did it; but when we have to do with God, we muſt not diſpute his Pleaſure. Let the Potſherd ſtrive with the Potſherds of the of the Earth, but let not the Clay diſpute with the Potter. Now the Soveraignty of God is glorioully diſplayed in his Decrees, Laws, and Providences. (1.) In his Decrees, appointing the Creatures to their ends, whether to be Veſſels of Mercy, or of Wrath, Rom. 9 18, 19, 20. In this caſe there muſt be no diſputing with God. (2.) In his Laws, appointing the work and duty of the Creature, as alſo the Rewards and Puniſhments; Jam. 4 12. There is one Law-giver, that is able to ſave and to deſtroy. In this caſe his Soveraignty immediately and indiſpenſably binds the Conſcience of Man, and no humane Authority can diſſolve that Obligation: Nor muſt we ſnuff at the ſevereſt Command (3.) The glorious Soveraignty of God is diſplayed in his providential adminiſtrations, appointing every Man to that ſtation and condition he is in in this World; whether it be high or low, proſperous or afflicted. Pſal. 75. 6. I ſaid to the fools, deal not fooliſhly, &c. for promotion cometh not from the Eaſt, or the Weſt; but God is Judge: He putteth down one, and ſetteth up another. Let not them that are at the top of the World be lifted up; nor thoſe that are at the bottom be dejected: For God caſt every Man's Lot, and changeth their condition at his Pleaſure; a word of his Mouth plucks down the lofty, and exalts the lowly; he woundeth, and his Hands make whole. Hence it becomes the afflicted to be ſtill, and know that he is God, Pſal. 46. 10. To put his Mouth in the Duſt, and quietly to wait for his Salvation. All our fretting and ſtruggling cannot ſhake off the Yoke which he hath put upon us, but a weak and quiet ſubmiſſion to his Will, and compliance with his deſigns, is the beſt expedient to procure our Freedom. There is not one circumſtance of trouble befals you, without his Order; nor can you expect deliverance, but by order from him.

Rule 2. Study the tranſcendent evil of ſin, and what the demerit of the leaſt ſin that ever you committed is. This will becalm your tempeſtuous Spirits, and at once work them into Contentation with your preſent ſtate, and Admiration that it is no worſe, Lam. 3. 22. 39, 40.

Conſider, thou querulous and diſcontented Soul, that the wages of Sin is Death, Rom. 6. ult. That tribulation, anguiſh, and wrath, are due by Law, to every Soul of Man that doth Evil; that ſo often as we have ſinned, ſo often have we deſerved Hell: And ſhall we then charge God with Severity, for ſcourging us with the Rods of gentle fatherly Chaſtiſements? Is this Hell? Dare you ſay the ſevereſt affliction that ever was upon you, is above the demerit of your Sin?

'Tis true indeed, the Lord tells Jeruſalem, that ſhe had received of his Hands double for all her ſins. Iſai. 40. 2. But that is not the Language of ſtrict Juſtice, but of Compaſſions rolled together. There is not a gracious Soul in all the World, but will readily ſubſcribe Ezra's Confeſſion, that God hath afflicted it leſs than its Iniquities deſerve, Ezra 9. 13. Oh if once we meaſure our afflictions by our Sins, we ſhall admire they are ſo few, ſo mild and gentle as they are.

Rule. 3. Conſider what a difference there is betwixt the Saints meeting with Afflictions, and their parting with them. You meet them with trembling and aſtoniſhment, but you ſhall part with them with praiſe and thankſgiving, bleſſing God for the manifold Bleſſings they have inſtrumentally conveyed to your Souls. It is good for me, ſaith David, that I have been afflicted. By theſe things ſin is prevented, diſcovered, and mortified, the inſnaring World imbittered, and the Reſt to come ſweetned.

Many other excellent Rules may be added; try theſe, and the bleſſing of the Spirit accompany them.

To conclude, be not ſwallowed up of Sorrows for what you have loſt, but ballance all the troubles of this Life with the hopes of the next. Your dear Children are gone, your ſweet Husband is gone; but conſider who took them, and whither. It is ſaid of Enoch, Gen. 5. 24. He walked with God, and was not; for God took him. Mr. Upton is not, and yet he is: He is not with Men, he is with God: He ceaſes not to be, though he ceaſes to breath: He is taken away, but God took him: He is better where he is, than where he was: Though he be not in your Boſom, he is in Chriſt's.

Imitate his Zeal, Plain-heartedneſs, diligence in duties, and you ſhall ſhortly meet him again, and never part any more. For this we ſay by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive, and remain to the coming of the Lord, ſhall not prevent them which are aſleep. For the 1 Theſſ.
Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from Heaven with a 15, 16,
ſhout, and with the Voice of the Archangel, and 18.
the Trump of God: And the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt. Then we which are alive, and remain, ſhall be caught up together with them in the Clouds, to meet the Lord in the Air: And ſo ſhall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with theſe words. Did you but know the deep Emphaſis of theſe words, ever with the Lord, I doubt not but you would find comfort enough in them for your ſelf, and a great overplus for the comforting of others.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE Aſſemblies Catechiſm, WITH PRACTICAL INFERENCES From each QUESTION:

As it was carried on in the Lords Days Exerciſes in
DARTMOUTH,
In the First Year of Liberty, 1688.

THE PREFACE.

THAT Catechizing is an Ordinance of God, few will doubt, when they conſider the Apoſtles did firſt lay the Fundamentals of Religion; Heb. 6. 1. And fed Babes with Milk, teaching them the firſt Principles of the Oracles of God, Heb. 5. 12. and queſtionleſs taught them in that manner, which was moſt ſuitable to the Capacity of the Learners, which may well be ſuppoſed to be by plain and ſhort queſtions, and ſuitable Anſwers thereunto; and therefore this has been a conſtant Practice in the Church of God: and the Primitive Church had a Particular Perſon appropriated thereunto, whom they called Catechiſt.

And ſo all well-governed and wiſely managed Churches, have ſtill maintained and uſed it, as knowing the neceſſity and uſefulneſs thereof; for the younger Sort to inform them in the Principles of that Religion whereinto they were Baptized; and for the eſtabliſhment of the Adult and more aged therein.

Hence have iſſued all thoſe little Compoſures of all the fundamental Doctrines of Faith and Practice ſo handled (which we call Catechiſms) in the Churches; and particularly in ours, whereof there are many and divers, whoſe Authors have well deſerved for their Endeavours to inform and edify the People thereby.

But among them all, none excel This little Catechiſm of the Aſſembly, for Orthodoxy, Fulneſs, and Method.

And becauſe the Anſwers therein are ſome of them pretty large, and Treat of the moſt profound Myſteries of our Religion; therefore ſeveral Perſons have beſtowed their good and laudable Pains, ſome in deſcanting more largely, and proving by Scriptural Reaſons the Particulars: and one has ſhewn the harmony thereof with the Articles and Homilies of the Church of England (deſigned, I ſuppoſe, to remove the prejudice which ſome have taken againſt it). Others have parted the Queſtions and Anſwers into ſeveral little ones, under each, to make them more intelligible to younger ones, and more eaſy to be remembred.

Among whom, Worthy, Orthodox, and Excellent Mr. John Flavell may be ranked, who among other of his many and moſt profitable Labours, applied himſelf to the chewing of this Bread of Life, or crumbling it into ſmaller pieces, for the Conveniency of Children and (indeed) of all; wherein (as in all his other Works) he hath ſhewn himſelf a Workman that needs not to be aſhamed.

There needs no other recommendations to this Poſthumus Piece, but the worthy Author's Name; he was removed before he had compleatly finiſhed it; he had prepared his Queſtions and Anſwers upon the ſecond Petition of the Lord's Prayer; but lived not to propoſe them in the Publick Congregation. God then tranſlated him into his Kingdom of Glory above, while he was ſo induſtriouſly endeavouring to promote the Kingdom of Grace below.

The other five remaining Queſtions and Anſwers (to compleat the Work) were done by a ruder hand; as may eaſily be diſcerned by any obſervant Reader, who will find himſelf transfer'd from a plain, clear, and delightful Stile, method, and manner, into more rough, diſorderly, and unpleaſant ones; for who, indeed, could equal this Divine Labourer? Not the Compleater: who would account himſelf to have made very great Attainments in Divinity and Uſefulneſs, if he were left but a few furlongs behind him.

Let the Reader uſe and peruſe this Piece, and he will ſee cauſe to bleſs God for the Author.

VALE.

TO THE READER.

THE Divine Providence having unexpectedly caſt my Lot for a few Days in Dartmouth, where that bleſſed man of God Mr. John Flavell did for many years honour Chriſt, and was honoured by him; I have been favoured with a ſight of that moſt judicious Explication of the Aſſemblies Catechiſm, which is emitted herewith.

Being deſired to teſtify my Reſpect to the worthy Author, by Prefacing this Excellent Labour of his with a few Lines; I can truly ſay (as ſometimes Beza of Calvin*)* Now Mr. Flavell is dead, Life will be leſs ſweet, and Death leſs bitter to me.

My heart bleeds to look on this deſolate Place, and not to ſee him, that whilſt living, was the glory of it.

But neither the Author, nor his Writings ſtand in need of the commendation of others, much leſs of mine.

His Works already publiſhed have made his Name precious in both Englands, and it will be ſo as long as the Earth ſhall endure.

There are ſome conſiderations which may cauſe the Reader to expect (and he will not find himſelf diſappointed therein) that which is extraordinary in this little Manuel: for the Author's Heart was very much engaged in doing this Service for Chriſt, in thus feeding his Lambs. And he did himſelf deſign the Publication of what is here committed to the Preſs; and was very deſirous (with an holy Submiſſion to the Will of God) to have perfected this Work before his Deceaſe; but had ſtrange intimations that he ſhould finiſh his Courſe, before that could be done.

When he did viva voce deliver his Meditations, there were many Enlargements, and lively Paſſages which are not here inſerted: nevertheleſs here is as much as he thought needful for publick view, not being willing that his Book ſhould be Voluminous.

In his laſt Catechetical Exerciſe concerning Hallowing the Name of God, he was exceedingly enlarged; but he muſt himſelf go into the Kingdom of Glory, when he intended to have diſcourſed on that Petition, Thy Kingdom come.

He alſo began ſome Meditations on the Joys of Heaven: But before he had an opportunity to expreſs what had been in his Heart, the Lord Jeſus ſaid unto him, Enter thou into the Joy of thy Lord. And thus doth it happen many times to the eminent and holy Servants of God.

Another Conſideration, recommending what comes herewith, is, that it was amongſt Mr. Flavell's laſt Works. The (ἔσχατα ῥήματα) Laſt Sayings of wiſe and great Men have been eſteemed Oraculous; and the Scripture puts an Emphaſis on the laſt Words of David, the ſweet ſinger of Iſrael, 2 Sam. 23. 1. Not that thoſe were the laſt words that ever David ſpake, only they were written not long before his Death, when he was come near Heaven.

So was what is now put into the Reader's Hand, written by Mr. Flavell not long before his Tranſlation to the World of Souls, where the Spirits of Juſt men are made perfect.

There was a more than ordinary preſence of God with him to his laſt; and in his laſt Days, not the laſt Sermon that he preached (which was June 21. 1691.) He did more than once ſurprize his Hearers with an Intimation that, that might be the laſt time he ſhould ſpeak to them in the Name of the Lord. And was not then the Secret of the Lord with him?

Dartmouth will know, and Devonſhire will know, that there has been a Prophet among them.

And now my Soul bleeds to look on the dear Flock of God, which are as Sheep without a Shepherd. The Lord Jeſus, the great Shepherd of the Sheep, have compaſſion on them, and give them a Shepherd like to his bleſſed Servant Flavell, who did for many years feed them with Knowledge, and with Underſtanding.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE Aſſemblies Shorter Catechiſm.

1. Queſtion.

Of Man's Chief End.

What is the Chief End of Man?

A. Man's Chief End is to glorify God, and to enjoy him for ever.

Q. 1. Seeing a Chief ſuppoſeth an inferior End; What is that inferior End for which man was made?

A. It was prudently, ſoberly, and mercifully, to govern, uſe, and diſpoſe of other Creatures in the Earth, Sea, and Air, over which God gave Man the Dominion; Gen. 1. 26. And God ſaid, Let us make Man in our Image, after our likeneſs: and let them have dominion over the Fiſh of the Sea, and over the Fowl of the Air, and over the Cattel, and over all the Earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth. So Pſal. 8. 6. Thou madeſt him to have dominion over the works of thy hands, thou haſt put all things under his feet.

Q. 2. What then is to be thought of thoſe men, who being wholly intent upon inferior things, forget and neglect their principal End?

A. They are dead whilſt they live, 1 Tim. 5. 6. But ſhe that liveth in pleaſure, is dead whilſt ſhe liveth. They have their Portion in this Life, Pſal. 17. 14. From men of the world which have their Portion in this Life, and their end is deſtruction; Phil. 3. 19. Whoſe end is deſtruction.

Q. 3. How can man glorifie God, ſeeing he is perfectly glorious in himſelf?

A Man cannot glorifie God by adding any new degree of glory to him. Job 35. 7. If thou be righteous, what giveſt thou him? but by manifeſting his glory with the Lips; Pſal. 50. 23. Whoſo offereth praiſe, glorifieth me; or with the Life, Mat. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in Heaven.

Q. 4. Wherein conſiſts the enjoyment of God?

A. It conſiſts, firſt, In the facial viſion of him in Heaven. Secondly, In full conformity to him, 1 Joh. 3. 2. But we know that when he ſhall appear, we ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is. Thirdly, In that full ſatisfaction which reſults from both the former, Pſal. 17. 15. I ſhall be ſatisfied when I awake with thy likeneſs.

Q. 5. Can none enjoy him in Heaven, who do not glorifie him on Earth?

A. No adult Perſon can Scripturally expect happineſs in Heaven, without holineſs on Earth. Heb. 12. 14. And holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord. Rom. 8. 30. Whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.

Q. 6. How comes the glory and enjoyment of God our Chief End?

A. He is our Maſter, and rightful Owner, and Benefactor; we receive our Being and Preſervation from him; Of him, and through him, and therefore to him be all Things; Rom. 11. 36.

Q. 7. Do all men make God their chief End?

A. No, they do not; ſome make their ſenſual Pleaſure their chief End. Phil 3. 19. Whoſe God is their Belly; and ſome the World, Col. 3. 5. Mortifie therefore your members which are upon the Earth, and Covetouſneſs, which is Idolatry.

Q. 8. What are the Signs of a man's making himſelf his chief End?

A. Thoſe make themſelves their chief End, who aſcribe the glory of what they have, or do, to themſelves, and not to God, Dan. 4. 30. The King ſpake and ſaid, Is not this great Babylon which I have built? Iſa. 10. 18. For he ſaith, By the ſtrength of my hand have I done it; and by my wiſdom, For I am prudent; therefore they ſacrifice to their own net, and burn Incenſe unto their Drag. Hab. 1. 16.

Q. 9. Why are the glorifying and enjoying of God put together, as making up our chief End?

A. Becauſe no man can glorifie God, that takes him not for his God; and none takes him for his God, that takes him not for his Supream Good; and both theſe being eſſentially included in this Notion of the chief End, are therefore juſtly put together.

Q. 10. What is the firſt Truth inferr'd hence ?

A. That God hath dignified Man above all other Creatuers on Earth, in giving him a capacity of glorifying God here, and of enjoying him hereafter.

Q. 11. What is the ſecond truth inferr'd hence ?

A. That the Soul of man is not annihilated by Death, but advanced by it, Phil. 1. 21. To die is gain. V. 23. Having a deſire to depart, to be with Chriſt, which is far better.

Q. 12. What is the third truth inferr'd hence;

A. That it is the duty and wiſdom of every Chriſtian to renounce, deny, and forſake all inferior Intereſts and Enjoyments, when they come in competition with the glory of God, and our enjoyment of him. Luke 14. 33. So likewiſe whoſoever he be of you, that forſaketh not all that he hath, cannot be my Diſciple.

Q. 13. What is the fourth Inferrence hence ?

A. That we are to abhor and renounce all thoſe Doctrines and Practices that debaſe the glory of God, and exalt and magnifie the Creature.

Of the Scriptures as our Rule.

Queſt. 2. What Rule hath God given to direct us, how we may glorifie and enjoy him?

A. The Word of God, which is contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament, is the only rule to direct us, how we may glorify and enjoy him.

Q. 1. How can the Scriptures be called the Word of God, ſeeing the things contained therein, were ſpoken and written by men ?

A. They are truly and properly called the Word of God, becauſe they came not by the Will of Man, but holy Men of God ſpoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt, 2 Pet. 1. 21.

Q. 2. What are the principal Arguments to perſwade us that the Sciptures are of Divine Authority, and Inſpiration ?

A. Three things eſpecially convince us. Firſt. The Holineſs of the Doctrine therein contained. Secondly, The awful efficacy thereof on the Soul. Thirdly, The uncontroulable Miracles by which they are ſealed, put it beyond all rational doubt, that they are the very Word of God.

Q. 3. What is the Holineſs of the Scriptures? and how doth that prove them to be God's Word ?

A. The Holineſs of the Scriptures doth appear in two things. Firſt, In commanding and encouraging whatſoever is pure, and holy; Phil. 4. 8. Whatſoever things are pure. Secondly, In forbidding all unholineſs, under pain of Damnation, 1 Cor. 6. 9. Know ye not, that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God, &c. This ſhews that they came not from Satan, being croſs to his deſign; nor from man, it being againſt his corrupt Nature; and therefore from God only.

Q. 4. What is their Authority and Efficacy on the Soul? and how doth that prove them Divine?

A. Their Authority and Efficacy on the Soul, conſiſts in three Things: Firſt, In the power they have to ſearch and diſcover the ſecrets of Men, Heb. 4. 12. The Word of God is quick and powerful, and ſharper than any two-edged Sword, piercing even to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, of the Joynts and Marrow; and is a diſcerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Secondly, In their converting Efficacy, changing and renewing the Soul, Pſal. 19. 7. The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the Soul. Thirdly, In their chearing and reſtoring Efficacy, when the Soul is caſt down under any inward or outward trouble. Pſal. 19. 8. The Statutes of the Lord are right, rejoycing the Heart. No humane Power can do ſuch things as theſe. John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth.

Q. 5. How do Miracles confirm it ?

A. Becauſe all proper Miracles are wrought only by the hand of God, John 3. 2. And no man can do theſe Miracles that thou doeſt, except God be with him; and ſo are his ſeal to whatſoever he affixes them, and it conſiſts not with his truth and holineſs to ſet it to a forgery.

Q. 6. What was the end of writing the word?

A. That the Church to the end of the world might have a ſure, known, ſtanding Rule to try and judge all things by, and not to be left to the uncertainty of Traditions. John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have Eternal Life, and they are they which teſtify of me.

Q. 7. Doth not the Authority of the Scriptures depend on the Church, Fathers and Councils ?

A. No, the Scriptures are not built on the Authority of the Church, but the Church on them. Epheſ. 2. 19, 20. And are built on the Foundations of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the chief Corner Stone. And for Councils and Fathers, the Scriptures are not to be tried by them; but they by the Scriptures. Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony; if they ſpeak not according to this word, 'tis becauſe there is no light in them.

Q. 8. What may be fairly inferr'd from this Propoſition, That the Scriptures are the word of God?

A. Three things may be thence inferr'd, Firſt, The perfection of the Scriptures, which being the only rule given by God, muſt therefore be perfect. Secondly, That it is the right of common People to read them. John 5. 39. Search the Scriptures. Acts 17. 11. Theſe were more noble than thoſe of Theſſalonica, in that they received the word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearch the Scriptures daily, whether thoſe things were ſo. Thirdly, That we owe no Obedience to the Injunctions of men, farther than they are ſufficiently warranted by the written Word. Mat. 15. 9. But in vain do they worſhip me, teaching for Doctrines the Commandments of Men.

Of Faith and Obedience.

Queſt. 3. What do the Scriptures pri cipally teach?

A. The Scriptures principally tea what Man is to believe concerning Go and what duty God requires of Man.

Q. 1. Why is Faith conjoyned with Obedience, a put before it?

A. Becauſe Faith is the principle from whe all Obedience flows, and no man can perform a duty aright in the eſtate of unbelief. Heb. 11. But without Faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him; he that cometh to God, muſt believe that he is.

Q. 2. Can there be no ſaving Faith where the Scriptures are not known and preached?

A. No; for the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 10. 14. How then ſhall they call on him, in whom they have not believed? and how ſhall they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? and how ſhall they hear without a Preacher? and how ſhall they preach except they be ſent? And v. 17. So then, Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.

Q. 3. Are not we bound to believe what Learned men teach us, as Points of Faith, though the things they teach be not contained in the Word of God?

A. No; if the things they teach be not contained expreſly, or by neceſſary conſequence in the Word of God, we are not obliged to believe them as points of Faith. Iſa. 8. 20. To the Law, and to the Teſtimony, if they ſpeak not according to this Word, it is becauſe there is no light in them. Gal. 1. 8. Though we, or an Angel from Heaven preach any other Goſpel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accurſed. And Chriſt hath charged us, Mat. 23. 10. To call no man Maſter, for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt.

Q. 4. Are there ſome things in Scripture more excellent than others; Becauſe it's ſaid, the Scriptures principally teach matters of Faith and Duty?

A. Every part of Scripture is alike pure; Prov. 30. 5. Every word of God is pure, and of equal authority, but not of equal weight; as ſeveral pieces of Gold are alike pure, and of the ſame ſtamp, but not of equal value.

Q. 5. What may be inferred hence for Uſe?

A. Firſt, Hence 'tis our duty to examine what we hear, by the Word; and not receive any Doctrine, becauſe men confidently affirm it, but becauſe the Scriptures require it. Acts 17. 11. Theſe were more noble than thoſe of Theſſalonica, in that they received the Word with all readineſs of mind, and ſearched the Scriptures daily, whether theſe things were ſo. Secondly, That Chriſtian Religion is not notional, but practical; and that impractical Faith ſaves no man, Jam. 2. 20. Faith without Works is dead.

God is a Spirit.

Queſt. 4. What is God?

A. God is a Spirit, Infinite, Eternal and Unchangeable in his Being, Wiſdom, Power, Juſtice, Goodneſs and Truth.

Q. 1. Can the Nature of God be defined, ſo as en may expreſs properly and ſtrictly what God is?

A. No: Job 11. 7. Canſt thou by ſearching find ut God? canſt thou find out the Almighty unto perſion?

We do then conceive moſt rightly of God, hen we acknowledge him to be unconceivable; d therefore one being ask'd the queſtion, what od is? anſwered rightly; If I fully knew that, hould be a God my ſelf; for God only knows own Eſſence.

Q. 2. How many ways are there by which men know and deſcribe the Nature of God, tho ſtill imperfect Knowledge?

A. There are two ways of knowing God in Life. Firſt, By way of affirmation; affirmthat of God by way of eminence, which is exent in the Creature; as when we affirm him e Wiſe, Good, Merciful, &c. Secondly, By of Negation, when we remove from God in our Conceptions all that is imperfect in the Creature: ſo we ſay God is Immenſe, Infinite, Immutable; and in this ſenſe we alſo call him a Spirit, (i. e.) he is not a groſs corporeal Subſtance.

Q. 3. How many ſorts of Spirits are there? And of which ſort is God?

A. There be two ſorts of Spirits, created, and finite; as Angels, and the Souls of Men are. Secondly, Uncreated, and Infinite; and ſuch a Spirit God only is, infinitely above all other Spirits.

Q. 4. If God be a Spirit, in what ſenſe are we to underſtand all thoſe Scriptures, which ſpeak of the Eyes of the Lord, the Ears and Hand of God?

A. We are to underſtand them as Expreſſions of God, in condeſcention to the weakneſs of our underſtandings; even as the Glory of Heaven is expreſt to us in Scripture by a City, and the Royal Feaſt. Theſe ſhadows are uſeful to us whilſt we are in the Body; but we ſhall know him in Heaven after a more perfect manner.

Q. 5. What may be inferr'd from the Spiritual Nature of God?

A. Hence learn, that it is both ſinful and dangerous to frame an Image or Picture of God. Who can make an Image of his Soul? which yet is not ſo perfect a Spirit as God is? And as it is ſinful to attempt it, ſo it is impoſſible to do it; Deut. 4. 15, 16. Take ye therefore good heed unto your ſelves; for ye ſaw no manner of Similitude, on the day that the Lord ſpoke to you in Horeb out of the midſt of the Fire; leſt ye corrupt your ſelves, and make you a graven Image, the ſimilitude of any figure, &c.

Q. 6. What elſe may be inferr'd from thence?

A. That our Souls are the moſt noble and excellent part of us, which moſt reſembles God; and therefore our chief regard and care ſhould be for them, whatever becomes of the vile Body, Mat. 16. 26. For what is a man profited if he gain the whole world, and loſe his own Soul? Or what ſhall a man give in Exchange for his Soul?

Q. 7. What further Truth may be inferr'd hence?

A. That men ſhould beware of ſpiritual Sins, as well as of groſs and outward Sins; for there is a filthineſs of the Spirit, as well as of the Fleſh, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit; and as God ſees them, ſo he greatly abhors them, as Sins that defile the nobleſt part of man, on which he ſtamp'd his own Image.

Q. 8. What alſo may be inferr'd from hence?

A. Hence we learn, that ſpiritual Worſhip is moſt agreeable to his Nature and Will; and the more ſpiritual it is, the more acceptable it will be to him. John 4. 24. God is a Spirit, and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in Spirit and in Truth. Externals in worſhip are of little regard with God; as places, habits, geſtures, &c.

Apply this,

Firſt, To Superſtitious men, Iſa. 66. 1, 2, 3.
Secondly, To Children that ſay a Prayer, but mind not to whom, nor what they ſay.

Of God's Infinity.

Queſt. 1. What is the ſenſe and meaning of this Word [ Infinity? ]

A. It ſignifies that which hath no bounds or limits, within which it is contained, as all created things are.

Q. 2. In how many reſpects is God infinite?

A. God is infinite or boundleſs in three reſpects.

Firſt, In reſpect of the perfection of his Nature; his Wiſdom, Power, and Holineſs, exceed all meaſures and limits; as 1 Sam. 2. 2. There is none holy as the Lord, &c. Secondly, In reſpect of time and place; no time can meaſure him, Iſa. 57. 15. Thus ſaith the high, and lofty one, that inhabiteth Eternity, 1 Kings 8. 27. Behold the Heaven of heavens cannot contain thee, how much leſs this Houſe which I have built? The Heaven of heavens contains all created Beings; but not the Creator. Thirdly, In reſpect of his Incomprehenſibleneſs, by the underſtanding of all Creatures. Job 11. 7. Canſt thou by ſearching find out God? canſt thou find out the Almighty to perfection?

Q. 3. If God be thus Infinite, and no underſtanding can comprehend him, How then is it ſaid in 1 John 3. 2. We ſhall ſee him as he is?

A. The meaning is not, that glorified Saints ſhall comprehend God in their underſtandings; but that they ſhall have a true apprehenſive Knowledge of God: and that we ſhall ſee him immediately, and not as we do now thorow a glaſs darkly.

Q. 4. What is the firſt Leſſon to be learnt from God's Infinity?

A. That therefore men ſhould tremble to ſin even in ſecret. Pſal. 139. 11. If I ſay, ſurely the darkneſs ſhall cover me, even the Night ſhall be light about me.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. The ſecond Inſtruction is, That there is an infinite evil in ſin, objectively conſider'd, as it is committed againſt an Infinite God; and therefore it deſerves Eternal Puniſhment; and no ſatisfaction can poſſibly be made for it, but by the Blood of Chriſt. 1 Pet. 1. 18. Foraſmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as Silver and Gold —— but with the precious Blood of Chriſt.

Q. 6. What is the third Inſtruction from God's Infinity?

A. The third Inſtruction is, That thoſe who are reconciled to God in Chriſt, need not fear his ability to perform any mercy for them; for he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think, Epheſ. 3. 20. And thoſe that are not reconciled, are in a very miſerable condition, having infinite Power ſet on work to puniſh them. 2 Theſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.

Q. 7. What is the fourth Inſtruction from God's Infinity?

A. That no place can bar the acceſs of gracious Souls to God. They are as near him in a Dungeon, as when at Liberty; and that he knows their thoughts, when their tongues cannot utter them.

[ Eternal. ]

Queſt. 1. W*Hat is it to be Eternal, as God is?*

A. The Eternity of God is, to be without beginning, and without end. Pſal. 90. 2. From everlaſting to everlaſting thou art God.

Q. 2. How doth God's Eternity differ from the Eternity of Angels, and Humane Souls?

A. It differs in two reſpects; Firſt, In this, That tho Angels, and the Souls of men ſhall have no end; yet they had a beginning, which God had not. Secondly, Our Eternity is by gift from God, or by his appointment; but his Eternity is neceſſary, and from his own Nature.

Q. 3. In what ſenſe is the Covenant called an everlaſting Covenant?

A. The Covenant is called an Everlaſting Covenant, 2 Sam. 23. 5. becauſe the mercies of it, conveyed to believers, as Pardon, Peace, and Salvation, are mercies that ſhall have no end.

Q. 4. In what ſenſe is the Goſpel Everlaſting?

A. The Goſpel is called the Everlaſting Goſpel, Rev. 14. 6. becauſe the effects thereof upon the Souls it ſanctifies, will abide in them for ever.

Q. 5. In what ſenſe is the Redemption of Chriſt called the Eternal Redemption?

A. The Redemption of Chriſt is called Eternal Redemption in Heb. 9. 12. becauſe thoſe whom he redeems by his Blood, ſhall never more come into Condemnation.. John 5. 24. He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life.

Q. 6. Why is the laſt Judgment of the world by Chriſt, called Eternal Judgment?

A. The laſt Judgment is called Eternal Judgment, not becauſe God judged men from Eternity, or becauſe the Day of Judgment ſhall laſt to Eternity; but becauſe the conſequences of it will be Everlaſting Joy or Miſery to the Souls of Men; therefore it's called Eternal Judgment, Heb. 6. 2.

Q. 7. What may wicked men learn from the Eternity of God?

A. Hence wicked men may ſee their own miſery in the Perfection of it; that they will have an eternal Enemy to avenge himſelf upon them for ever, in the World to come, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9. Who ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord.

Q. 8. What may good men learn from it?

A. That their joy and happineſs will be perfect and endleſs, who have the Eternal God for their Portion. Pſalm 16. 11. In thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore.

Q. 9. What may all men good and bad learn from it?

A. All men may learn three things from the Eternity of God. Firſt, That their life is a thing of nought, compared with God. Pſal 39. 5. Mine age is nothing before thee. Secondly, That ſins, o duties, long ſince committed, or performed, a all preſent before God. Thirdly, That God ca never want opportunity to do his work, an carry on his deſigns in the world. All time in the hand of the Eternal God. Rev. 12. 1 The devil is come down unto you, having great wrat becauſe he knoweth that he hath but a ſhort time.

Of God's Unchangeableneſs.

Queſt. 1. W*Hat Scriptures plainly aſſert t Attribute?*

A. Exod. 3. 14. And God ſaid unto Moſes AM, that I AM. Dan. 6. 26. For he is the livi God, and ſtedfaſt for ever, Jam. 1. 17. VV whom is no variableneſs, neither ſhadow of turning.

Q. 2. Whence doth God's Immutability flow?

A. The Immutability of God flows from Perfection of his Nature, to which nothing be added, and from which nothing can be taken away. If any thing could be added to make him better than he is; or if any thing could be taken away, to make him leſs good than he is, then he were not the chiefeſt Good, and conſequently not God.

Q. 3. By what other Argument prove you his Immutability?

A. I prove it from the Eternity of God. If God be Eternal, he muſt be Immutable; for if he change by addition of ſomething to him he had not before, then there is ſomething in God which he had not from Eternity. And if he change by diminution, then there was ſomething in God from Eternity, which now is not; but from Everlaſting to Everlaſting, he is the ſame God, and therefore changeth not.

Q. 4. But it is ſaid, God repents, and Repentance is a change; How then is he unchangeable, and yet repents?

A. In thoſe Phraſes God ſpeaks to us, as we muſt ſpeak of, and to him; not properly, but after the manner of men; and it only notes a change in his outward Providence, not in his Nature.

Q. 5. But how could God become man, and yet no change made on him?

A. There is a twofold change, one active, made by God, that we allow. He made a change upon our Nature by uniting it to Chriſt; but a paſſive change made upon God, we deny. The Nature of man was made more excellent, but the Divine Nature was ſtill the ſame.

Q. 6. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction from God's Immutability?

A. That thoſe that are moſt unchangeable in holineſs, are moſt like God. Let him that is holy, be holy ſtill?

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the happineſs of God's people is firm, and ſure, being ſtill upon the word of an unchangeable God. Mal. 3. 6. For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. Heb. 6. 18.

Q. 8. What is the third Inſtruction from this Attribute?

A. That the hopes of all Wicked men are vain, being built upon a preſumption, that God will not deal with them as he hath threatned he will do.

Q. 9. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Immutability?

A. That Chriſtians may take as much encouragement now from the nature, word, and providence of God, as the Saints in any former Generation did, or might do; for he is the ſame now, as he was then.

Of God's Wiſdom.

Queſt. 1. How manifold is the wiſdom of God?

A. There is a perſonal and eſſential wiſdom of God; the perſonal wiſdom is the Son of God. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the power of God, and the wiſdom of God. Col. 2. 3. In whom are laid the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. The eſſential wiſdom of God, is the eſſence of God; of which this Queſtion ſpeaks.

Q. 2. What is the Eſſential wiſdom of God?

A. The Eſſential wiſdom of God, is his moſt exact and perfect knowledge of Himſelf, and all Creatures, and his ordering, and diſpoſing them in the moſt convenient manner, to the Glory of his own Name. Epheſ. 1. 11. According to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the councel of his own will.

Q. 3. What is the firſt property of God's wiſdom?

A. The firſt property is, he is only wiſe, Rom. 16, 27. To God only wiſe be glory. And whatſoever wiſdom is in Angels, or Men, is all derived, and borrowed from God; but his from none. Iſa. 40. 14. With whom took he counſel? and who inſtructed him, and taught him in the path of judgment, and taught him knowledge, and ſhewed to him the way of underſtanding?

Q. 4. VVhat is the ſecond property of God's wiſdom?

A. The ſecond property is, That he is incomprehenſible in his wiſdom. Rom. 11. 33, 34. Oh the depth of the riches, both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God, &c.

Q. 5. VVhat is the third property of the wiſdom of God?

A. The third property is, That God is perfectly wiſe, which no Creatures, no not the very Angels in Heaven are. Job 4. 18. And his Angels he chargeth with folly.

Q. 6. VVhat is the moſt glorious and eminent diſcovery of the wiſdom of God?

A. The moſt glorious diſplay of the wiſdom of God was in the work of our Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt. Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the wiſdom of God.

Q. 7. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. The firſt Inſtruction is, That God is a fit object of our truſt, dependance, and reſignation, Iſa. 30. 18. And therefore will the Lord wait, that he may be gracious unto you; and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you; for the Lord is a God of judgment; bleſſed are all they that wait for him.

Q. 8. VVhat is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. The ſecond Inſtruction is, That it is a dangerous arrogancy in the Creature, either to preſcribe unto God, and direct his Maker. Job 21. 22. Shall any teach God knowledge, ſeeing he judgeth thoſe that are high? Or to quarrel with his providences, as not ſo fit and convenient as they ſhould be. Job 40. 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty inſtruct him? He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it.

Q. 9. VVhat is the third Inſtruction from it?

A. That the people of God have much reaſon to quiet, and encourage themſelves, when crafty and ſubtil Enemies ſurround them. For the fooliſhneſs of God is wiſer than man, 1 Cor. 1. 25.

Q. 10. VVhat is the fourth Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. The fourth Inſtruction is, That the true way to Wiſdom, is to be ſenſible of our own folly. 1 Cor. 3. 18. If any man among you ſeemeth to be wiſe in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe. And to apply our ſelves by Prayer to God the fountain of it. Jam. 1. 5. If any man lack wiſdom, let him ask it of God.

Q. 11. VVhat is the laſt Inſtruction from God's wiſdom?

A. That the ſtudy of Chriſt, and of the Scriptures, is to be preferred to all other ſtudies in the world. Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom, and knowledge. And the Scriptures contain all that Wiſdom which is for our Salvation. 1 Cor. 2. 7. But we ſpeak the wiſdom of God in a myſtery, even the hidden wiſdom which God ordained before the world, unto our glory.

Of God's Power.

Queſt. 1. W*Hat is the Power of God?*

A. An Eſſential property of his Nature, whereby he can do all things that he pleaſes to have done. Jer. 32. 17. Ah Lord God, behold thou haſt made the Heavens, and the Earth by thy great power, and ſtretched-out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee.

Q. 2. What evidences have we before our eyes of the Almighty Power of God?

A. It appears in the Creation of the World. Rom. 1. 20. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead. And its Suſtentation. Heb.. 1. 3. Who upholdeth all things by the word of his power.

Q. 3. Did God's power ever act its utmoſt?

A. No, he can do more than ever he did, or ever will do. Mat. 3. 9. God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham. Mat. 26. 53.

Q. 4. Are there not ſome things which God cannot do?

A. Yes, there are, but they are ſuch things as are inconſtent with his truth and holineſs. Tit. 1. 2.—— which God that cannot lye. 2 Tim. 2. 13. He cannot deny himſelf.

Q. 5. What is the firſt thing inferred from God's power?

A. That all the Creatures neceſſarily depend on him for what ability they have, and without the permiſſion of the ſupreme Power they can do us no hurt. Joh. 19. 11. Thou couldeſt have no power againſt me except it were given thee from above.

Q. 6. VVhat is the ſecond Inference from hence?

A. That the difficulties which lie in the way of the Promiſes, need be no ſtumbling-blocks to our Faith. Rom. 4. 20, 21. He ſtaggered not at the promiſes through unbelief, being fully perſwaded, that what he had promiſed he was able alſo to perform?

Q. 7. VVhat is the third Inference from this Attribute?

A. The Saints need not be ſcared at the greatneſs of their ſufferings: their God can carry them through. Dan. 3. 17 Our God whom we ſerve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace.

Q. 8. VVhat is the Fourth Inference?

A. That the Salvation of God's People is certain, whatever their dangers be; Being kept by this mighty Power. 1 Pet. 1. 5. VVho are kept by the Power of God through faith to Salvation.

Q. 9. VVhat is the laſt Inference hence?

A. That the ſtate of the damned is unconceiveably miſerable. Their Puniſhment proceeding from the glory of the Almighty. 2 Theſ. 1. 9. VVho ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord, and the glory of his power.

Of God's Holineſs.

Queſt. 1. H*Ow manifold is the Holineſs of God?*

A. The Holineſs of God is twofold; Communicable, or Incommunicable; of his communicable holineſs the Apoſtle ſpeaks, Heb. 12. 10. But he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holineſs. Of his incommunicable holineſs that Scripture ſpeaks, 1 Sam. 2. 2. There is none holy as the Lord.

Q. 2. VVhat is the eſſential and incommunicable Holineſs of God?

A. It is the Infinite purity of his Nature, whereby he delights in his own holineſs, and the reſemblance of it in his Creatures, and hates all impurity. Hab. 1. 13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canſt not look on iniquity.

Q. 3. VVhat is the firſt property of God's Holineſs?

A. He is eſſentially holy. Holineſs is not a ſeparable quality in God, as it is in Angels and Men: but his Being and his Holineſs are one thing.

Q. 4. VVhat is the ſecond property of God's Holineſs?

A. God is eſſentially Holy, the author and fountain of all communicated Holineſs. Lev. 20. 8. I am the Lord which ſanctifieth you.

Q. 5. VVhat is the third property?

A. That the Holineſs of God is the perfect rule and pattern of holineſs to all Creatures. 1 Pet. 1. 16. Be ye holy, for I am holy.

Q. 6. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction?

A. That the holieſt of men have cauſe to be aſhamed and humbled when they come before God. Iſa. 6. 3, 5. And one cried unto another, ſaying, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of Hoſts, the whole earth is full of his glory. Then ſaid I, VVoe is me, for I am undone, becauſe I am a man of unclean lips, &c.

Q. 7. VVhat is the ſecond Inſtruction from God's Holineſs?

A. That there is no coming near to God without a Mediator; for our God is a conſuming fire.

Q. 8. VVhat is the third Inſtruction from God's Holineſs?

A. That Holineſs is indiſpenſibly neceſſary, to all thoſe which ſhall dwell with him in Heaven. Heb. 12. 14. And holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord.

Q. 9. VVhat is the fourth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the Goſpel is of ineſtimable value, as it is the inſtrument of conveighing the Holineſs of God to us. 2 Cor. 3. 18. But we all with open face beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, even as by the ſpirit of the Lord. Joh. 17. 17. Sanctiſy them through thy truth, thy word is truth.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Holineſs?

A. That all the deſpiſers and ſcoffers of Holineſs, are deſpiſers of God: for Holineſs is the very Nature of God; and in the Creature it is his repreſented Image.

Of God's Juſtice.

Queſt. 1. W*Hat is the Juſtice of God?*

A. The Juſtice of God is perfect rectitude and equity of his Nature, whereby he is juſt in himſelf, and in all his ways tow the Creatures. Deut. 32. 4. He is the rock work is perfect; for all his ways are judgment; a of truth, and without iniquity, juſt and right

Q. 2. What is the firſt Property of God's Ju

A. That it infinitely excels all humane Ju in the Perfection of it. No Creature can pare in Juſtice with God. Job 9. 2. How ſhall man be juſt with God.

Q. 3. What is the ſecond property of God's Juſtice?

A. That he is Univerſally Righteous in all his adminiſtrations in the world. Pſal. 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works.

Q. 4. What was the greateſt demonſtration of the Juſtice of God, that ever was given to the world?

A. The greateſt evidence that ever was given of the Juſtice of God, was in his exacting full ſatisfaction for our ſins upon Chriſt. Rom 3. 25, 26. Whom God hath ſet forth, to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I ſay, at this time, his righteouſneſs, that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus. Rom. 8. 32. He ſpared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all.

Q. 5. What is the Second Diſcovery of God's Juſtice?

A. The Second Diſcovery of the Juſtice of God, is in the Eternal Puniſhment of Sin in Hell, upon all that do not repent, and come to Chriſt by Faith in this World; Rom. 2. 5. But after thy hardneſs, and impenitent heart, treaſureth up unto thy ſelf wrath againſt the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God.

Q. 6. What is the Third Evidence of God's Juſtice?

A. The Third Evidence of the Juſtice of God is, in making good all the mercies he hath promiſed to believers, exactly to a tittle. 1 John 1. 19. If we confeſs our ſins, he is faithfull and juſt to forgive us our ſins, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſs. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of righteouſneſs, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me at that day.

Q. 7. What is the Firſt inference from God's Juſtice?

A. That ſinners have no cauſe to complain of God's Judgments, though they be never ſo terrible, or durable; Rom. 2. 5. But after thy hardneſs, and impenitent heart, treaſureſt up unto thy ſelf wrath againſt the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God.

Q. 8. What is the Second Inference from God's Juſtice?

A. That without doubt there is a Judgment to come in the next Life, otherwiſe God would not have the glory of his Juſtice, Eccleſ. 3. 16, 17. I ſaw under the ſun the place of judgment, that wickedneſs was there; and the place of righteouſneſs, that iniquity was there: I ſaid in mine heart, God ſhall judge the righteous, and the wicked.

Q. 9. What is the Third Inference from God's Juſtice?

A. That Penitent and Believing Sinners need not doubt of the forgiveneſs of their ſins, 1 John 1. 9. If we confeſs our ſins, he is faithful and juſt to forgive us our ſins, and to cleanſe us from all unrighteouſneſs.

Q. 10. VVhat is the Laſt Inference from it?

A. The Laſt Inference is, That Meekneſs and Patience under afflictions, is our unqueſtionable Duty; and murmuring againſt God, is a great ſin and evil. Lam. 3. 39. VVherefore doth a living man complain, a man for the puniſhment of his ſins?

Of God's Goodneſs.

Queſt. 1. W*Hat is the Goodneſs of God?*

A. It is an Eſſential Property of his Nature, whereby he is abſolutely and perfectly good in himſelf, and the Fountain of all communicated Goodneſs to the Creature. Pſalm 119. 68. Thou art good, and doſt good, teach me thy Statutes.

Q. 2. How doth the Goodneſs of God differ from the Mercy of God?

A. It differs in its Objects; for Miſery is the Object of Mercy; but Goodneſs extends to the Creatures that are happy, as well as miſerable; as the Angels, Pſal. 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works.

Q. 3. What is the Firſt Property of God's Goodneſs?

A. That all his other Attributes flow out of it as their Fountain: The other Acts of God are but the Effluxes of his Goodneſs. Exod. 33. 19. And he ſaid, I will make all my goodneſs paſs before thee, and I well proclaim the name of the Lord before thee, and I will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will ſhew mercy unto whom I will ſhew mercy. Exod. 34. 6. And the Lord paſſed by before him, and proclaimed The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long-ſuffering, and abundant in goodneſs and truth.

Q. 4 What is the Second Property of the Divine Goodneſs?

A. That it is ſupream, and perfect in it ſelf, ſo as the goodneſs of no Creature is, or can be. Luke 18. 19. None is good ſave one, and that is God: And conſequently above all additions from the Creature. Pſalm 16. 2: O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord——my goodneſs extendeth not unto thee.

Q. 5. What is the Third Property of God's Goodneſs?

A. That it is communicative with Pleaſure and delight to the Creature: No Mother draws out her Breaſt to an hungry Child with more pleaſure than God doth his Goodneſs to the Saints. Pſalm 145. 9. The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works.

Q. 6. In what Acts hath God firſt manifeſted his Goodneſs?

A. He hath manifeſted it in the Creation and Government of the World. Pſalm 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works? in wiſdom haſt thou made them all.

Q. 7. What was the principal Work in which God hath manifeſted his Goodneſs to men?

A. The Principal manifeſtation of God's Goodneſs, was in the Work of Redemption by Chriſt. Rom. 5. 8. God commended his love towards us, in that while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for us. 1 John 4. 8, 9. In this was manifeſted the love of God towards us, becauſe that God ſent his only begotten ſon into the world, that we might live through him.

Q. 8. But are not the Judgments of God on the Wicked, and his Afflictions on the Saints, impeachments of his goodneſs?

A. No, It is the property of Goodneſs to hate and puniſh Evil in the impenitent. Exod. 34. 7. Keeping mercy for thouſands, forgiving iniquity, and tranſgreſſion, and ſin, and that will by no means clear the guilty, &c. And the Afflictions of the Saints flow from his Goodneſs, and end in their true and eternal good. Heb. 12. 6. For whom the Lord loveth, he chaſtneth, and ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth. Pſalm 119. 71. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy Statutes.

Q. 9. What may we infer from the Goodneſs of God?

A. The firſt thing is, that Sin hath made our Natures baſe, and diſingenuous, in that we take no notice of his Goodneſs. Iſa. 1.3 The Oxe knoweth his owner, and the Aſs his maſters crib; but Iſrael doth not know, my people doth not conſider; And anſwer not the deſign of it. Rom. 2.4. Not knowing that the goodneſs of God leadeth thee to repentance.

Q. 10. What is the Second Inference from the Goodneſs of God?

A. That therefore God is the fitteſt Object of our delight, and love, and of our truſt and confidence. (1.) Of our Delight and Love. Pſalm. 116. 1. I love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard my voice, and my ſupplication. (2.) Of our Truſt and Confidence. Pſalm 34. 8. O taſte and ſee that the Lord is good; bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him.

Q. 11. What is the Third Inference from God's Goodneſs?

A. That Chriſtians ſhould imitate God in his Goodneſs, in charity to our Enemies. Mat. 5.44, 45. But I ſay unto you, Love your enemies, bleſs them that curſe you, do good to them that hate you, pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you, and perſecute you, that ye may be the Children of your father which is in heaven.

Q. 12. What is the Laſt Inference from God's Goodneſs?

A. That Chriſtians have great encouragement to go to God for pardon in caſe of ſin. Pſal. 130. 4. But there is forgiveneſs with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared; and for refuge of dangers. Nahum 1. 7. The Lord is good, a ſtrong hold in the day of trouble; he knoweth them that truſt in him.

Of God's Truth.

Queſt. 1. WHat is the Truth of God?

A. It is an Eſſential Property of his Nature, whereby he is perfectly faithful in himſelf, and in all that he hath ſpoken. Deut. 32. 4. He is the Rock, his work is perfect, for all his ways are judgment; a God of truth, and without iniquity, juſt and right is he. Pſalm 119. 142. Thy righteouſneſs is an everlaſting righteouſneſs, and thy Law is the truth.

Q. 2. What is the firſt Property of Divine Truth?

A. The firſt Property of it is, That it is eſſential and neceſſary to God; He cannot lye, Tit. 1. 2.

Q. 3 What is the Second Property of it?

A. The Second Property is, That it is everlaſting, and abiding to all Generations. Pſalm 100. 5. For the Lord is good, his mercy is everlaſting, and his truth endureth to all generations. Iſa. 25. 1. O Lord, thou art my God, I will exalt thee—thy counſels of old are faithfulneſs and truth.

Q. 4. What is the Third Property of Divine Truth?

A. The Third Property is, that he is univerſally true in all his Words and Works. (1.) In all his Words. John 17. 17. Thy word is truth (2.) In all his Works. Pſalm 25. 10. All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto ſuch as keep his covenant.

Q. 5. What is the Firſt Leſſon from God's Truth to be learnt?

A. That truth and ſincerity of heart is that which is moſt ſuitable, and pleaſing to God. Pſal. 51. 6. Behold, thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts.

Q. 6. What is the Second Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That whatever God hath foretold, ſhall aſſuredly come to paſs, and be fulfilled in his time. Joſh. 23. 14. Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord our God ſpoke concerning you; all are come to paſs unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

Q. 7. What is the Third Leſſon from the Truth of God?

A. That a Promiſe from God is full ſecurity to the Faith of his People, and they may look upon it as good as a mercy in hand. Heb. 10. 23. For he is faithful that promiſed.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That whatever God hath threatned in his Word againſt ſinners, ſhall ſurely come upon them, except they repent, Zech. 1. 6. But my word, and my ſtatutes, which I commanded my ſervants, the prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? and they returned, and ſaid, Like as the Lord of hoſts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, ſo hath he dealt with us. Ezek. 12. 27, 28. The word which I have ſpoken, ſhall be done, ſaith the Lord God.

Q. 9. What is the Fifth Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. That falſhood in Words and Actions is contrary to God's Nature, and abhorred by him. John 8. 44. Ye are of your father the Devil, and the luſt of your father ye will do; he was a murtherer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him; when he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it.

Q. 10. VVhat is the Laſt Leſſon from God's Truth?

A. The day of judgment will rightly and juſtly ſtate every man's condition. Rom. 2. 2. But we are ſure that the judgment of God is according to truth, againſt them which commit ſuch things.

Of One God.

Queſt. 5. ARE there more Gods than one?

A. There is but one only, the living and true God.

Q. 1. How doth it appear that there is but one God?

A. It is evident from Scripture there is but one God. Deut. 6. 4. Here, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord. Jer. 10. 10. But the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlaſting King; and as Scripture reveals no more, ſo Reaſon will allow no more.

Q. 2. Why will Reaſon allow no more but one God?

A. Becauſe God is the Firſt Being, Revel. 1. 11. Saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the firſt and the laſt; and there can be but one Firſt Being, and God is the moſt perfect, and excellent Being. Pſalm 71. 19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high, who hath done great things: O God, who is like unto thee? And there can be but one moſt Perfect and Excellent Being.

Q. 3. But doth not the Scripture ſay in 1 Cor. 8. 5. That there are Gods many, and Lords many?

A. Yes, there are many in Title, and many in Opinion; but one only in Truth. Jer. 10. 10. But the the Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlaſting King.

Q. 4. Why is he called the true God?

A. To diſtinguiſh him from the Idols and falſe Gods of the Heathens. 1 Theſ. 1. 9. How ye turned to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God. Acts 14. 15. We preach unto you, that ye ſhould turn from theſe vanities unto the living God, which made heaven and earth, and the ſea, and all things that are therein.

Q. 5. Why is he called the living God?

A. Becauſe all Life, Natural, Spiritual, and Eternal, is in him, and from him only. Firſt, Natural Life. Acts 17. 28. For in him we live, and move, and have our being. Secondly, Spiritual Life. Eph. 2. 1. You hath he quickned, who were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Thirdly, Eternal life in glory. Col. 3. 4. When Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. If but one God, then all his Children ſhould be of one heart, having one and the ſame Father. Eph. 4. 5, 6. One Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference from hence?

A. That it is Idolatry to perform worſhip to any other but God only. Pſalm 86. 9, 10. All nations whom thou haſt made, ſhall come and worſhip before thee, O Lord, and ſhall glorify thy name, for thou art great, and doeſt wondrous things, thou art God alone.

Q. 8. What is the Third Inference from it?

A. That our ſupream love is due to God only, and 'tis very ſinful to place it on any other. Deut. 6. 4, 6. Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul and with all thy might.

Q. 9. What is the Fourth Inference from God's Unity?

A. That God only muſt have the reliance and dependance of our Souls. Jer. 17. 5, 7. Thus ſaith the Lord, Curſed be the man that truſteth in man, that maketh fleſh his arm, and whoſe heart departeth from the Lord. Bleſſed is the man that truſteth in the Lord, and whoſe hope the Lord is.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inference from it?

A. That we have great cauſe to be thankful for the Goſpel, which diſcovers the only true God to us, and that we are not as the Heathens, worſhipping many and falſe Gods. 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. For though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven, or in earth, as there be Gods many, and Lords many; but to us there is but one God, the father of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him.

Of three Perſons in the Godhead.

Queſt. 6. HOW many Perſons are there in the Godhead?

A. There are three Perſons in the Godhead, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one God, the ſame n ſubſtance, equal in Power and Glory.

Q. 1. What mean you by the word Godhead?

A. It is the Nature, Eſſence, or Being of God, s the Apoſtle ſpeaks; Acts 17. 29. Foraſmuch en as we are the offſpring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or ſilver, or ſtone, graven by art, and mans device.

Q. 2. What is a Perſon in the Godhead?

A. It is the Godhead diſtinguiſhed by perſonal Properties; each Perſon having his diſtinct Perſonal Properties. Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightneſs of his glory and the expreſs image of his perſon, upholding all things by the word of his power.

Q. 3. How doth it appear there are three perſons, and no more?

A. Firſt, From Chriſt's Baptiſm. Mat. 3. 16, 17. And Jeſus when he was baptized, went up ſtraitway out of the water, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he ſaw the ſpirit of God deſcending like a dove, and lighting upon him, and lo a voice from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed.

Q. 4. How elſe, in the ſecond place, doth it appear?

A. From the Inſtitution of our Baptiſm. Mat. 28. 19. Go ye therefore, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the father, of the ſon, and of the holy ghoſt.

Q. 5. What is the third Proof from Scripture?

A. From the Apoſtolical Benediction. 2 Cor. 13. 14. The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghoſt, be with you all, Amen. Where three diſtinct bleſſings are wiſht, from the three divine Perſons in the Godhead; Grace from Chriſt, Love from the Father, and Communion with the Spirit.

Q. 6. What farther evidence is there of it in the Scripture?

A. From plain, poſitive aſſertions of the Scripture, aſſerting, Firſt, A Trinity of Perſons. Secondly, A Unity of Eſſence. 1 Joh. 5. 7. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the father, the word, and the holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That the Doctrine of the Goſpel concerning Chriſt, is fully confirmed and ratified by three witneſſes from Heaven, who are above all exceptions. 1 Joh. 5. 7. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the father, the word, and the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. Hence we learn the true order and manner of worſhipping God in the Son. Joh. 16. 23. Whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the father in my name, he will give it you. And by the Spirit. Eph. 6. 18. Praying always, with all prayer and ſupplication in the ſpirit.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That the Covenant of Grace conveys a rich portion to Believers, in making over all three Perſons to them. Jer. 31. 33. But this ſhall be the covenant that I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts, and I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction from the Trinity?

A. That as it is the duty of all the Saints to give diſtinct glory to the three Perſons in the Godhead; ſo it will be a ſpecial part of their bleſſedneſs in Heaven, to contemplate the diſtinct benefits received from them all. Rev. 1. 5. And from Jeſus Chriſt, who is the faithful witneſs, and the firſt begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the Earth; unto him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood.

Of God's Decrees.

Queſt. 7. What are the Decrees of God? A. The Decrees of God are his eternal purpoſe, according to the counſel of his will, whereby for his own glory he hath fore-ordained whatſoever comes to paſs.

Q. 1. What things are Decreed of God?

A. All things whatſoever come to paſs, even the ſmalleſt. Eph. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will.

Q. 2. What is the End of God's Decrees?

A. The Glory of his own Name, Eph. 1. 11, 12. Who worketh all things according to the counſel of his own will, that we ſhould be to the praiſe of his glory who firſt truſted in Chriſt.

Q. 3. But there are ſome evil things done in the World, do they fall under God's Decree?

A. Though God doth neither approve them, nor neceſſitate men to commit them, yet he doth permit and ſuffer them to be done, and will turn them to his own Glory. Acts 4. 27, 28. For of a truth, againſt thy holy child Jeſus, whom thou haſt anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael are gathered together, for to do whatſoever thy hand, and thy counſel determined before to be done.

Q. 4. VVho are the Objects of God's Special Decrees?

A. Angels and Men are the Objects of God's Special Decrees. 1 Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the elect angels, that thou obſerve theſe things, &c. Rom. 8. 33. VVho ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect?

Q. 5. VVhat is the Firſt Property of God's Decrees?

A. That they are moſt wiſe Acts of God laid in the depth of Wiſdom and Counſel. Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his ways paſt finding out!

Q. 6. What is the Second Property of God's Decrees?

A. The Decrees of God are moſt free, all flowing from the meer pleaſure of his Will. Rom. 9. 18. Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.

Q. 7. VVhat is the Third Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are moſt firm and ſtable. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs, the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, the Lord knoweth them that are his, Zech. 6. 1.

Q. 8. VVhat is the fourth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are Eternal, and before all time, Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works, from the beginning of the world.

Q. 9. VVhat is the Fifth Property of God's Decrees?

A. They are moſt pure, and altogether unſpotted of ſin, 1 John 1. 5. This is the meſſage which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, That God is Light, and in him is no darkneſs at all.

Q. 10. VVhat is the Firſt Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to aſcribe nothing to Chance, but to the appointment or providence of God, Prov. 16. 33. The lot is caſt into the lap, but the whole diſpoſing thereof is of the Lord.

Q. 11. VVhat is the Second Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That God's hand is to be acknowledged in the greateſt Afflictions that befalls us. 2 Sam. 16. 11. And David ſaid to Abiſhai, and to all his ſervants, Behold, my ſon which came forth of my bowels ſeeketh my life, how much more now may this Benjamite do it? let him alone, and let him curſe, for the Lord hath bidden him.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction from God's Decrees?

A. That we ought to be thankful to God for all the good, and patient under all the evils that befall us. Job 2. 10. Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil?

Of the Creation.

Queſt. 9. What are the Works of Creation? A. The Work of Creation is, Gods making all things of nothing, by the Word of his Power, in the ſpace of Six Days, and all very good.

Q. 1. What is it to create?

A. To create, is to give a Being to that which had no Being; or to bring ſomething out of nothing. Heb. 11. 3. Through Faith we underſtand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, ſo that things which are ſeen, were not made of things that do appear.

Q. 2. How did God create the world?

A. By his infinite Power, executed in his Word of Command. Pſalm 33. 6. 9. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hoſt of them by the breath of his mouth; for he ſpake, and it was done; he commanded, and it ſtood faſt.

Q. 3. VVhat Attributes of God ſhine forth in the Creation?

A. The Wiſdom of God ſhines forth gloriouſly, not only in their formation, but dependance one upon another. Pſalm 104. 24. O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all; the earth is full of thy riches.

Q. 4. What may we learn from the Creation?

A. That God perfectly knows all that is in the Creature, be it never ſo ſecret. Pſalm 94. 8, 9. Underſtand, O ye brutiſh among the people; and ye fools, when will ye be wiſe? He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear? he that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee?

Q. 5. What's the Second Inſtruction from the Creation?

A. That God is the rightful owner of us all, and may do what he will with us. Rom. 9. 20. Nay, but O man, who art thou that repliest againſt God! Shall the thing formed ſay to him that formed it, why haſt thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the ſame lump to make one veſſel to honour, and another to diſhonour?

Q. 6. What is the Third Inſtruction from the Creation?

A. That God only is the proper Object of Worſhip. Jer. 10. 11. Thus ſhall he ſay unto them, The Gods that have not made the heavens, and th earth, even they ſhall periſh from the earth, and from under theſe heavens.

Q. 7. What is the Fourth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That Chriſtians ſhould not fear the power of Creatures, ſince they derive their Being and Power from God. Iſa. 54. 16, 17. Behold I have created the Smith that bloweth the coals in the fire, that bringeth forth an inſtrument for his work; and I have created the waſter to deſtroy, no weapon that is formed againſt thee ſhall proſper.

Q. 8. What is the Fifth Inſtruction hence?

A. That Atheiſm is a ſin againſt Natural Light and Reaſon. Rom. 1. 20. For the inviſible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and godhead; ſo that they are without excuſe.

Q. 9. What is the Sixth Inſtruction hence?

A. That God's Glory is the end of all Being. Col. 1. 16. For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, viſible and inviſible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him and for him.

Q. 10. What is the Seventh Inſtruction hence?

A. That there is an unnatural rebellion in ſin, ſmiting at him that made and preſerves our Being. Iſa. 1. 2. I have nouriſhed and brought up children, and they have rebelled againſt me.

Q. 11. What is the Eighth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That God can in a moment revive and ſave the Church, when at the loweſt ebb. Iſa. 65. 18. Behold, I create Jeruſalem a rejoycing, and her people a joy.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. That it is eaſy with God to revive a dejected Soul. Iſa. 57. 19. I create the fruit of the lips; Peace peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near, ſaith the Lord, and I will heal him.

Of Man's Creation.

Queſt. 10. HOW did God create Man?

A. God created Man Male and Female, after his own Image, in Knowledge, Righteouſneſs, and Holineſs, with dominion over the Creatures.

Q. 1. How did God create Man?

A. God created man in his own Image. Gen. 1. 27. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them.

Q. 2. What is meant by the Image of God?

A. Not a reſemblance of God in any bodily Shape or Figure, but in holineſs. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſs and true holineſs.

Q. 3. In what Graces did Man reſemble God?

A. In ſuch a knowledge of God himſelf, and the Creatures, which made him happy. Col. 3. 10. And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him.

Q. 4. In what other Graces did this Image conſiſt?

A. In Righteouſneſs as well as Holineſs. Eph. 4. 24. And that ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteouſneſs and true holineſs.

Q. 5. What is the Firſt Inference from hence?

A. The deplorable miſery of the Fall. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned.

Q. 6. What is the Second Inſtruction hence?

A. The beauty of Holineſs, which is the Image of God, and the Excellency of Man. Pſal. 16. 3. But to the ſaints that are in the earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight.

Q. 7. What is the Third Inſtruction from hence?

A. We have infinite cauſe to bleſs God for Chriſt, who repairs this loſt Image in his people. Eph. 4. 23. And be renewed in the ſpirit of your mind.

Q. 8. What is the Fourth Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the deſpiſers of Holineſs are the deſpiſers of God; for Holineſs is God's Image.

Q. 9. What's the Fifth Inſtruction from hence?

A. The excellency of Sanctification, which defaces the Image of Satan, and draws the Image of God upon the Soul of Man.

Of Divine Providence.

Queſt. 1. What are God's Works of Providence?

A. God's Works of Providence, are his juſt, holy, wiſe, and powerful preſerving and governing all his Creatures, and all their Actions.

Q. 1. How doth it appear there is a Divine Providence?

A. It appears by plain Scripture Teſtimonies. Heb. 1. 3. Upholding all things by the word of his power. Col. 1. 17. By him all things conſiſt. Luke 12. 6, 7. Are not five ſparrows ſold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God; but even the very hairs of your head are all numbred.

Q. 2. How elſe is Providence evidenced?

A. By Scripture Emblems, as Jacob's Ladder. Gen. 28. 12, 13. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder ſet upon the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven; behold the Angels of God aſcended and deſcended on it: And Ezekiel's wheels, Ezek. 1. 20. Whitherſoever the ſpirit was to go, they went, thither was their ſpirit to go, and the wheels were lifted up over againſt them, for the ſpirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

Q. 3. What further Scripture evidence is there?

A. The ſure accompliſhment of Scripture Predictions, as Iſrael's Captivity, and Deliverance from Egypt and Babylon, Chriſt's Incarnation, the Riſe and Ruin of the Four Monarchies. Dan. 2. 31. Thou, O King ſaweſt, and behold a great Image, whoſe brightneſs was excellent, ſtood before thee, and the form thereof was terrible. Dan. 7. 3. And four great beaſts came up from the Sea, diverſe one from the other.

Q. 4. What is it's firſt Act about the Creatures?

A. It ſuſtains, preſerves, provides for them. Pſalm 145. 15, 16. The eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou giveſt them their meat in due ſeaſon; thou openeſt thine hand, and ſatisfieſt the deſire of every living thing, and defendeſt them from danger. Pſalm 36. 6. Thy righteouſneſs is like the great mountains, thy judgments are a great deep, O Lord, thou preſerveſt man and beaſt.

Q. 5. What is the Second Act of Providence about the Creatures?

A. It rules and governs the Creatures and their Actions. Pſalm. 66. 7. He ruleth by his power for ever, his eyes behold the nations; let not the rebellious exalt themſelves.

Q. 6. How manifold is Divine Providence?

A. It is common and general over all, or ſpecial and peculiar to ſome men. 1 Tim. 4. 10. VVho is the ſaviour of all men, eſpecially of thoſe that believe.

Q. 7. How is Providence exerciſed about ſinful Actions?

A. In permitting them. Acts 4. 16. In reſtraining them. Pſalm 76. 10. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, and the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain. And over-ruling them to good. Gen. 50. 20. But as for you, ye thought evil againſt me, but God meant it unto good, to bring to paſs, as it is this day, to ſave much people alive.

Q. 8. VVhat are the Properties of Providence?

A. It is (1) holy. Pſalm 145. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works. (2.) Wiſe. Pſalm 104. 24. O Lord how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all. (3.) Powerful. Dan. 4. 35. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, and he doth according to his will, in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can ſtay his hand, or ſay unto him, what doſt thou?

Q. 9. What is the Firſt Inſtruction from it?

A. That God's People are ſafe amidſt all their enemies and dangers. 2 Chron. 16. 9. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of them whoſe hearts are perfect towards him.

Q. 10. What is the Second Inſtruction?

A. That Prayer is the beſt expedient to Proſperity, and ſucceſs of our lawful affairs. Pſalm 145. 18. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth.

Q. 11. What is the Third Inſtruction from it?

A. That God's People ſhould reſt quietly in the care of his Providence for them in all their ſtraits. Mat. 6. 26. Behold the fowls of the air, for they ſow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet our heavenly father feedeth them; are ye not much better than they?

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction from it?

A. That it is no ſmall Priviledge to be adopted Children of God, and the Members of Chriſt, for all is ordered for their eternal Good. Eph. 1. 22, 23. And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church, which is his Body, the fulneſs of him, that filleth all in all.

Of the Covenant of Works.

Queſt. 12. What ſpecial Act of Providence did God exerciſe towards Man, in the eſtate wherein he was created?

A. When God had created Man, he entred into a Covenant of Life with him, upon condition of perfect obedience, forbidding him to eat of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil npou pain of Death.

Q. 1. What was God's Covenant with Adam before the Fall?

A. It was to give Life and Happineſs upon condition of perfect Perſonal Obedience. Gal. 3. 12. The law is not of Faith; but the man that doth them, ſhall live in them.

Q. 2. Was this Covenant made only with Adam, or with him and his Poſterity?

A. It was made with him, and all his natural Poſterity, deſcending in the ordinary way of Generation from him. Rom. 4. 12. Wherefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned. v. 14. and 18. Nevertheleſs, death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adams tranſgreſſion, who is the figure of him that was to come: Therefore as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life.

Q. 3. Was Adam able to preform the obedience required of him in that Covenant?

A. Yes; for he was made upright. Eccleſ. 7. 29. God made man upright, but they have ſought out themſelves many inventions.

Q. 4. Had this Covenant any Mediator?

A. No, he neither had, nor needed any Mediator for ſatisfaction; becauſe no ſin was in him; nor interceſſion, for he wanted nothing.

Q. 5. Did this Covenant admit of no repentance, nor accept any ſhort Endeavours?

A. No, it did not; but ſentenceth and curſeth the Tranſgreſſors of it, for the leaſt breach. Gal. 3. 10. Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

Q. 6. How was the threatning fulfilled, of dying in the day he eat, ſeeing he lived 930 years?

A. He died ſpiritually, that day; and though the ſentence on his body was reſpited in order to Poſterity, yet then his body received the death wound, of which afterward he died

Q. 7. VVhat is the firſt Inference from Adam's Covenant?

A. Miſerable are all they that grow on the natural root of the firſt Adam. Gal. 4. 21. 22. Tell me, ye that deſire to be under the law. Do ye not hear the law? for it is written, That Abraham had two ſons, the one by a Bond-maid, the other by a Free-woman.

Q. 8. VVhat is the ſecond Inference?

A. That God is juſt in all the Puniſhments and Miſeries that came upon Man, yea, Infants, that never ſinned after his ſimilitude. Rom. 5. 14. Nevertheleſs death reigned from Adam, to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam's tranſgreſſion.

Q. 9. VVhat is the third Inference?

A. The glorious Priviledge of Believers, who are under a better Covenant, eſtabliſht upon better Promiſes. Heb. 8. 6. But now hath he obtained a more excellent miniſtry, by how much alſo he is the Mediator of a better Covenant, which is eſtabliſht upon better promiſes.

Q. 10. VVhat is the laſt Inference?

A. That we ſhould pity the unregenerate, eſpecially our own among them; and labour to plant them in the ſecond Adam.

Of the Fall of Man.

Queſt. 13. DID our firſt Parents continue in the eſtate wherein they were created?

A. Our firſt Parents being left to the freedom of their own will, fell from the eſtate wherein they were created, by ſinning againſt God.

Q. 1. How doth it appear that man is fallen?

A. By the Scripture Hiſtory, an account of in Gen. 3. 6, 7. And when the woman ſaw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleaſant to the eyes, and a tree to be deſired to make one wiſe, ſhe took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave alſo unto her husband with her, and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they ſewed fig leaves together, and made themſelves Aprons, and they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden, in the cool of the day, and Adam and his wife hid themſelves from the preſence of the Lord God, amongſt the trees of the garden. And the ſad experience we all have of it in our own ſelves. Rom. 5. 12. Therefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned.

Q. 2. How could man fall, ſince he was made upright?

A. Though he was upright, yet his will was mutable; and by abuſing that liberty, he fell. Eccleſ. 7. 29. Lo this only have I found. that God hath made man upright, but they have ſought out many inventions.

Q. 3. How did God leave him to abuſe the freedom of will?

A. Not by inclining him to abuſe it; but by with-holding that further grace which he was no way obliged to continue to him.

Q. 4. Did the will of man loſe its liberty to good, by the Fall?

A. Yes, it did, and is ſo wounded, that it cannot without preventing and regenerating grace put forth one ſpiritual and ſaving act. Eph. 2. 8, 9, 10. For by grace are ye ſaved, through faith, and that not of our ſelves, is is the gift of God. Not of works, leſt any man ſhould boaſt; for we are all his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, &c.

Q. 5. VVhat was the aggravation of Adam's Sin?

A. It was aggravated in his being a Publick Innocent Perſon, ſo newly placed in a State of Happineſs and Liberty.

Q. 6. What is the firſt inference from the Fall?

A. That the beſt Creature left to himſelf, cannot be long ſafe; as the Angels, and Adam. Pſal. 49. 12. Nevertheleſs man being in honour abideth not, he is like the beaſt that periſh.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That ſince man could not be his own keep-r, he can be much leſs his own Saviour. 2 Cor. . 5. Not that we are ſufficient of our ſelves to think y thing as of our ſelves; but our ſufficiency is of od.

Q. 8. VVhat is the third Inference?

A. That it is impoſſible for the Covenant of orks to juſtify any one. Rom. 3. 20. Therefore the deeds of the law there ſhall no fleſh be juſtified his ſight. Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not in that it was weak through the fleſh; God ſending his own ſon, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

Q. 9. What is the laſt Inference?

A. What cauſe have we to bleſs God for riſt, who recovered us when the Fall left us leſs? Rom. 5. 6. For when we were yet without ſtrength, in due time Chriſt died for the un-y.

Of Sin.

Queſt. 14. What is Sin?

A. Sin is any want of conformity unto, or tranſgreſſion of the law of God.

Queſt. 1. What is meant by the Law?

A. The Commands and Rules flowing from God's Soveraignty, whereby his will is manifeſted, and the Creature bound to obedience.

Q. 2. Where is this Law written?

A. It is written either in the heart, Rom. 2 15. VVhich ſhews the work of the law written in their hearts, which we call the law of nature. Or in the Bible, which we call the written Moral Law.

Q. 3. VVhat conformity is due to this Law of God?

A. A twofold conformity is due to it. Firſt, Internal, in our hearts. Secondly, External, in our lives; and the want of either is ſin, 1 Joh. 3. 4. VVhoſoever committeth ſin, tranſgreſſeth alſo the law; for ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the law.

Q. 4. How doth it appear that the want of internal conformity in ſin?

A. Becauſe the Law requires it. Mark 12. 30. And thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy ſtrength; for this is the firſt commandment. And condemns the want of it, Rom. 7. 7. VVhat ſhall we ſay then? is the law ſin? God forbid; nay, I had not known ſin but by the law; for I had not known luſt, except the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet.

Q. 5. Is nothing a ſin but what is againſt God's Law?

A. No, nothing can be a ſin but what God hath either expreſly, or by conſequence forbidden in his word.

Q. 6. VVherein lies the evil of tranſgreſſing God's Laws?

A. The evil of ſin principally lies in offence and wrong done to God, whoſe ſoveraignty it labours to ſhake off, and deſpiſes his will. Pſal. 31. 4. Againſt thee, thee only, have I ſinned, and done this evil in thy ſight.

Q. 7. VVhat further evil is in ſin?

A. It highly wrongs the Sinner's Soul, by defacing, defiling, and damning it. Prov. 8. 36. But he that ſinneth againſt me, wrongeth his own ſoul: all they that hate me, love death.

Q. 8. VVherein is the evil of ſin manifeſted?

A. It's manifeſted in the Death of Chriſt, the Terrors of Conſcience, and Torments of Hell.

Q. 9. VVhat courſe muſt the Sinner take to recover himſelf out of his miſery?

A. Repentance towards God, faith towards Chriſt; and both evidenced by new obedience. Acts 20. 21. Teſtifying both to the Jew, and alſo to the Greeks, repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 10. What may we infer from hence?

A. That we have infinite cauſe to bleſs God for Chriſt's ſatisfaction of the Law for our Sins.

Of the Tree of Knowledge.

Queſt. 15. What is the ſin whereby our firſt Parents fell from the Eſtate wherein they were created?

A. The ſin whereby our firſt Parents fell from the Eſtate wherein they were created, created, was their eating the forbidden fruit.

Q. 1. Why was this Tree called the Tree of Knowledge?

A. Not from any natural efficacy it had to give knowledge; but the Knowledge he ſhould have by eating, or not eating, was experimental Knowledge, (i. e.) Knowledge to his Sorrow.

Q. 2. Why did God forbid him this Tree?

A. Firſt, For the diſcovery of his dominion over man. Secondly, For the trial of his ſubjection and obedience. Thirdly, For the aggravation of his ſin, if he ſhould eat.

Q. 3. What evil was there in eating of it?

A. There was a twofold Evil, the evil of Sin, and the evil of Puniſhment, both very great.

Q. 4. VVhat was the Evil of Sin?

A. A threefold Evil of Sin. Firſt, Againſt God, called diſobedience. Rom. 5. 19. For as by one man's diſobedience many were made ſinners. Secondly, Againſt himſelf, Soul, Body, and Eſtate. Thirdly, Againſt his Poſterity. Rom. 5. 12. VVherefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin; and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned.

Q. 5. VVhat was the Evil of Puniſhment?

A. Firſt, Loſs of God's Image. Secondly, Horror of Conſcience. Thirdly, Sorrow on the Female Sex. Fourthly, Curſe on the Creature. Fifthly, Expulſion from Paradiſe. Sixthly, Death both of Body and Soul.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inſtruction from it?

A. To take heed of ſmall beginnings of Temptations, and reſiſt it in the firſt motions. Jam. 3. 5. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. Not to hold a parly with the tempter. See 2 Cor. 11. 3. But I fear leſt by any means, as the ſerpent beguiled Eve, through his ſubtilty; ſo your minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt.

Q. 8. What is the third Inference?

A. That Satan's Policy lies much in the choice of his tempting Inſtruments; as Eve and Peter, &c.

Q. 9. What is the fourth Inference?

A. A neceſſity of keeping ſtrong-guards on our Senſes. Iſa. 33. 15. That ſtoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and ſhutteth his eyes from ſeeing evil, he ſhall dwell on high, his place of defence ſhall be the munition of rocks.

Q. 10. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That Covenant-breaking is a heinous ſin, which God will puniſh. Hoſ. 8. 1. He ſhall come as an Eagle againſt the houſe of the Lord, becauſe they have tranſgreſſed my Covenant, and treſpaſſed againſt my laws.

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That the corruption of our nature is much ſeen in deſiring forbidden things. Rom. 7. 7. What ſhall we ſay then? Is the law ſin? God forbid: Nay, I had not known ſin, but by the law; for I had not known luſt, except the law had ſaid, Thou ſhalt not covet.

Of the Fall of Adam, and ours in him.

Queſt. 16. DId all Mankind fall in Adam's firſt tranſgreſſion?

A. The Covenant being made with Adam, not only for himſelf, but for his Poſterity; all mankind deſcending from him by ordinary Generation, ſinned in him, and fell with him in his firſt tranſgreſſion?

Q. 1. Did no man ever eſcape the Sin of Adam?

A. Yes, The man Chriſt Jeſus did, and he only. Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners.

Q. 2. Why was not Chriſt tainted with it?

A. Becauſe he came into the world in an extraordinary way. Mat. 1. 18. Now the birth of Chriſt was on this wiſe, when as his mother Mary was eſpouſed to Joſeph, before they came together, ſhe was found with child of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 3. How doth it appear all others are tainted with it?

A. It appears by Scripture-Teſtimony. Rom. 5. 12. VVherefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned. And experience of the beſt men. Rom. 7. 21. I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is preſent with me.

Q. 4. How came all men to fall with Adam?

A. Becauſe all were included in Adam's Covenant, as a Man's Covenant includes his Children before they be born; or the treaſon of the father affects his Poſterity.

Q. 5. VVhat infer you from hence?

A. The ſtupendious wiſdom of God in ſending Chriſt in our nature, and yet without the ſin and taint of it. 1 Cor. 1. 24. Chriſt the wiſdom of God?

Q. 6. VVhat is the ſecond Inference?

A. Hence we learn the admirable love of Chriſt in taking our nature, with all the ſinleſs Infirmities thereof. Rom. 8. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the fleſh, God ſending his own ſon in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

Q. 7. VVhat is the third Inference?

A. The neceſſity of our Union with Chriſt, in order to our participation of his Righteouſneſs and Redemption. 1 Cor. 15. 22. For as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive.

Q. 8. VVhat is the fourth Inference?

A. Hence we learn the malignant and mort nature of ſin, in as much as one ſin defiled and deſtroyed a whole world.

Q. 9. VVhat is the fifth Inference?

A. That though all be not equally ſenſible of their need, yet one ſinner needs Chriſt as much as another.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That no man hath any cauſe or reaſon to boaſt of the goodneſs of his nature, ſince the beſt were by nature under the ſame ſin and miſery as the worſt, Eph. 2. 3. Among whom alſo we all h our converſation in times paſt, in the luſt of our fleſ fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh, and of the mind, a were by nature the children of wrath even as others.

Of Original Sin.

Queſt. 17. INto what Eſtate did the F bring Mankind?

A. The Fall brought Mankind into Eſtate of Sin and Miſery.

Q. 18. Wherein conſiſts the ſinfuln of that Eſtate whereinto Man fell.

A. The ſinfulneſs of that Eſtate whereto Man fell, conſiſts in the guilt of Adam firſt Sin, the want of Original Righ ouſne ouſneſs, and Corruption of his whole Nature, which is commonly called Original Sin; together with all actual Tranſgreſſions which proceed from ſin.

Q. 1. How many ſorts of Sin are all men under?

A. All men are guilty before God of two ſorts of Sin; of Original, and Actual. Pſal 51. 5. Behold, I was ſhapen in iniquity, and in ſin did my mother conceive me. Eccleſ. 7. 20. For there is not a juſt man upon earth, that doth good and ſinneth not.

Q. 2. How can we be guilty of Adam's firſt Sin?

A. We are guilty of it, becauſe Adam ſinned not only as a ſingle, but alſo as a publick Perſon, and repreſentative of all Mankind. Rom. 5. 15, 16, 17. But not as the offence; ſo alſo is the free gift; for if through the offence of one, many be dead: much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many, and not as it was by one that ſinned, ſo is the gift; for the judgment was by one to condemnation.

Q. 3. How elſe came we under his guilt?

A. We are guilty of his Sin by Generation, for we were in his loyns; as Treaſon ſtains the Blood of the Poſterity, or the Parents Leproſie the Children. Pſal. 51. 5. Behold I was ſhapen in iniquity, and in ſin did my mother conceive me.

Q. 4. Wherein doth it conſiſt?

A. It conſiſts in two things. Firſt, In our averſation and enmity to that which is good. Rom. 7. 18. In me, that is, in my fleſh, there dwelleth no good thing. Secondly, In proneneſs to that which is evil. Rom. 7. 14. But I am carnal, ſold under ſin.

Q. 5. Is this corruption of Nature in all Men?

A. Yes, In all meer Men, and Women, none exempted. Rom. 3. 10. and 23. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one, for all have ſinned, and come ſhort of the glory of God.

Q. 6. In what part of our Nature doth this Sin abide?

A. It abides in the whole man, in every part of man, both Soul and Body. Gen. 6. 5. God ſaw that the wickedneſs of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. 1 Theſ. 5. 23. Now the God of peace ſanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole ſpirit, and ſoul, and body, be preſerved blameleſs unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 7. How is the Body infected by it?

A. In the readineſs of the Bodily Members to farther Sin, and its Temptations in the Soul. Rom. 3. 13, 14, 15. Their throat is an open ſepulcher, with their tongues they have uſed deceit, the poyſon of Aſps is under their lips, whoſe mouth is full of curſing and bitterneſs, their feet are ſwift to ſhed blood.

Q. 8. What learn we from Original Sin?

A. To bear patiently the Miſeries we ſee on our Children, and their death alſo without murmuring. Rom. 5. 14. Nevertheleſs death reigned from Adam to Moſes, even over them that had not ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam's Tranſgreſſion.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us Humility, and ſhould be matter of Confeſſion and Humiliation, when we ſin actually. Pſal. 51. 5. Behold I was ſhapen in iniquity, and in ſin did my Mother conceive me.

Q. 10. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. It ſhould provoke Parents to uſe their utmoſt diligence for the Converſion of their Children, who draw ſin from them.

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us the neceſſity of Regeneration, and ſhould provoke us greatly to deſire it.

Of Man's Miſery.

Queſt. 19. What is the Miſery of that Eſtate whereinto Man fell?

A. All Mankind by their Fall loſt communion with God, are under his wrath and curſe; and ſo made liable to all miſeries in this life, to death it ſelf, and to the pains of Hell for ever.

Q. 1. What communion had God with Man before the Fall?

A. Man then enjoyed the gracious preſence and favour of God with him, which was better than life.

Q. 2. How doth it appear this was loſt by the Fall?

A. It appears by Scripture-Teſtimony, That Adam loſt it as to himſelf. Gen. 3. 8. And Adam and his wife hid themſelves from the preſence of the Lord God, among the trees of the garden. And we in him. Eph. 2. 12. At that time ye were without Chriſt, being aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, having no hope, and without God in the world.

Q. 3. Was this the only miſery that came by the Fall?

A. No; Man did not only loſe communion with God, but fell under his wrath and curſe. Eph. 2. 3. And were by nature children of wrath, even as others.

Q. 4. Doth the wrath and curſe of God then lie on all Men?

A. It lies on all the unregenerate in the world. Gal. 3. 10. Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which is written in the book of the law, to do them. But believers are delivered from it by Chriſt. 1 Theſ. 1. 10. Even Jeſus, which delivered us from the wrath to come.

Q. 5. How are the miſeries of Man by the Fall divided?

A. They are divided into the Miſeries of this world, and of the world to come.

Q. 6. What are the miſeries that come on them in this world?

A. The Miſeries of Life; as Sickneſs, Pain, Poverty on the Body; Fear, Trouble, Sorrow on the Mind, and at laſt Death it ſelf. Rom. 6. ult. The wages of ſin is death.

Q. 7. What are the Miſeries after this Life?

A. The Pains and Torments of Hell for ever. Pſal. 9. 17. The wicked ſhall be turned into hell.

Q. 8. What are the Torments of Hell?

A. Pain of Loſs, and Pain of Senſe. Mat. 25. 41. Depart from me ye curſed into everlaſting fire.

Q. 9. What learn you from hence?

A. The woful State of the unconverted. Miſerable here, and miſerable to Eternity.

Q. 10. What elſe learn we hence?

A. The great Salvation Believers have by Chriſt from all this miſery. Heb. 2. 3. How ſhall we eſcape if we neglect ſo great ſalvation, which at the firſt began to be ſpoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him.

Of the Salvation of God's Elect, and of the Covenant of Grace.

Queſt. 20. DID God leave all Mankind to periſh in the State of Sin and Miſery?

A. God having out of his meer good pleaſure from all eternity, elected ſome to everlaſting life, did enter into a Covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the eſtate of Sin and Miſery; and to bring them into an Eſtate of Salvation by a Redeemer?

Q. 1. Are ſome Perſons choſen to Salvation, and others left?

A. Yes: God hath choſen ſome to Salvation, and paſſed by others; as the Scriptures ſpeak. See Rom. 8. 30. Moreover whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called. And Jude v. 4. For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, &c.

Q. 2. Did God chuſe ſome becauſe he foreſaw they would be better than others?

A. No: God's choice was not on foreſeen works; but meerly of his grace, and good pleaſure of his will. Eph. 1. 5. 6. Having predeſtinated us into the adoption of children by Jeſus Chriſt unto himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace.

Q. 3. Is this Election of God made in time, and that according as men uſe their free will, or from Eternity?

A. Election is an Eternal act of God before the world was, and depends not on Man's uſing his free-will; as appears from Eph. 1. 4 According as he hath choſen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy, and without blame before him in love.

Q. 4. Shall all that be Elected, be called, and ſaved?

A. Yes, the Scripture is full and plain for it. Acts 13. 48. And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were ordained to eternal life, believed. Rom. 8. 30. Moreover, whom he did predeſtinate, them he alſo called, &c.

Q. 5. By whom are the Elect ſaved?

A. By Chriſt the only Redeemer. Tit. 3. 4, 5, 6. But after that the kindneſs, and love of God our Saviour towards man, appeared not by works of righteouſneſs which we have done, but according to his mercy, he ſaved us, by waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt, which he ſhed on us abundantly, through Jeſus Chriſt our Saviour.

Q. 6. Is there no other way of Salvation but by Chriſt?

A. No, no other way is revealed in Scripture. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we muſt be ſaved.

Q. 7. What learn you from God's Election?

A. What cauſe we have to admire Free-grace in our choice, who were no better than others. Eph. 2. 3. And were by nature children of wrath, even as others.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us humility, we made not our ſelves to differ; but the free grace of God made the difference. 1 Cor. 4. 7. For who maketh thee to differ from another?

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. It teaches us diligence to make our Election ſure to our ſelves, by our calling. 2 Pet. 1. 10. Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election ſure.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. It is matter of Confort to God's Elect, amidſt all dangers in the world. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Neverthele ſs the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his.

Of the Covenant of Grace.

Queſt. 1. W*Hat is the Covenant of Grace?*

A. It is a new compact or agreement made with Sinners, out of meer grace, wherein God promiſeth to be our God, and that we ſhall be his People, and to give everlaſting life to all that believe in Chriſt. Jer. 31. 33. Bu this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with th houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I wi put my law in their inward parts, and write it in the hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be m people.

Q. 2. Ho

Q. 2. How doth this Covenant differ from the Covenant of Works?

A. They differ many ways; but principally in three things. Firſt, The Covenant of Works had no Mediator; the Covenant of Grace hath a Mediator. Heb. 12. 24. And to Jeſus the Mediator of the new Covenant. Secondly, In the former, no place was found for repentance. In the Second, God admits it. *Heb.*8.10 For this is the covenant that I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my laws in their minds, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they ſhall be to me a people. Ver. 12. For I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, and their ſins will I remember no more. Thirdly, In their Condition, the former requires exact Obedience, the latter Faith, and ſincere Obedience. Mark 16. 16. He that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved.

Q. 3. May a Sinner that hath no worthineſs at all of his own, be taken into the Covenant of Grace?

A. Yes, he may. Iſa. 43. 25. I, even I, am he, that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy ſins. This Covenant is not of Works, but of Grace. Rom. 11. 5, 6. And if by grace, then it is no more of works, otherwiſe grace is no more grace; but if it be of works then it is no more grace, otherwiſe work is no more work.

Q. 4. Is this Covenant changeable, or an unchangeable Covenant?

A. No, it is not changeable, but everlaſting and unchangeable for ever. Iſa. 54. 10. For the mountains ſhall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindneſs ſhall not depart from thee, neither ſhall the Covenant of my peace be removed, ſaith the Lord, that hath mercy on thee.

Q. 5. VVhat are the principal things beſtowed in this Covenant?

A. God himſelf, and in and with him Pardon and Salvation. Jer. 31. 33. I will be their God, and they ſhall be my people.

Q. 6. Can no Sin be forgiven out of this Covenant?

A. No, God pardons none out of this Covenant. Joh 3. 18. But he that believeth not, is condemned already.

Q. 7. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. Humbled and believing Sinners have ſingular ſupport from this New Covenant. 1 John 2. 12. I write unto you little children, becauſe your ſins are forgiven you for his name ſake.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That 'tis the great concern of all men to examine whether they be in this Covenant, or no. 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves, whether ye be in the faith, prove your own ſelves; know ye not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be Reprobates.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. See here the miſerable State of the wicked, which have no intereſt in it. Pſal. 50. 16. But unto the wicked God ſaith, What haſt thou to do to declare my Statutes, or that thou ſhouldſt take my Covenant in thy mouth?

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. That Chriſtians are obliged to walk as people in Covenant with God. 1 Pet. 2. 9. But ye are a choſen generation, a royal prieſthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye ſhould ſhew forth the praiſes of him, who hath called you out of darkneſs into his marvellous light.

Of the only Redeemer.

Queſt. 21. Who is the Redeemer of God's Elect?

A. The only Redeemer of God's Elect, is the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who being the Eternal Son of God, became man, and ſo was, and continueth to be God and Man, in two diſtinct natures, and one perſon for ever.

Q. 1. What doth the name Redeemer ſignify?

A. It ſignifies one that frees another out of Captivity and Bondage, as Chriſt did. Mat. 20. 28. And to give his life a ranſome for many.

Q. 2. What was the miſery from which Chriſt delivered us?

A. A twofold miſery, viz. Sin and Hell. Firſt, Sin. Mat. 1. 21. Thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins. Secondly, Hell. 1 Theſ. 1. 10. Even Jeſus, who delivered us from the wrath to come.

Q. 3. How did Chriſt deliver us from this Miſery?

A. Firſt, By Price. Secondly, By Power. By Price. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Ye are not redeemed with ſilver and gold from your vain converſation, received by tradition from your fathers: but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a lamb without blemiſh, and without ſpot. By Power. Col. 1. 13. Who hath delivered us from the power of darkneſs, and hath tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear ſon.

Q. 4. When was the Redemption wrought by Chriſt?

A. It was decreed from Eternity; it was actually wrought on the Croſs. Col. 1. 20. And having made peace through the blood of his Croſs, by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf, by him, I ſay, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

Q. 5. How then could they be redeemed that died before?

A. Though Chriſt's Blood was actually ſhed after the Old Teſtament believers died; yet the virtue of Chriſt's Death extends to them, as well as us. Heb. 11. 39, 40. And theſe all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promiſe, God having provided ſome better thing for us, that they without us ſhould not be made perfect.

Q. 6. Why would not God deliver us without ſuch a Redeemer?

A. Becauſe it was not ſo much for the honour of his Juſtice. Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I ſay, at this time his righteouſneſs, that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. That all that are out of Chriſt are in a miſerable Bondage, and Captivity. John 8. 36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. Hence ſee the heinous nature of Sin, which required ſuch a price to ſatisfy for it. 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. We were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſilver and gold, but with the precious blood of Chriſt, as of a lamb without blemiſh, and without ſpot.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction hence?

A. The wonderful love of Chriſt in redeeming us at ſuch a rate. Rev. 1. 5. Who loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood.

Q. 10. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. This ſtrongly obligeth us to an univerſal holineſs. 1 Cor. 6. 20. For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your ſpirit, which are Gods.

Of Chriſt's Incarnation.

Queſt. 22. HOW did Chriſt being the Son of God become man?

A. Chriſt the Son of God became man, by taking to himſelf a true Body, and a reaſonable Soul, being conceived by the power of the Holy Ghoſt, in the womb of the Virgin Mary, and born of her, yet without Sin.

Q. 1. Who is the only Redeemer of God's Elect?

A. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt is their only Redeemer, and there is no other Redeemer beſides him. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we muſt be ſaved.

Q. 2. How is he the Son of God, or can be, as no other is ſo?

A. He is the Son of God by Nature, from all Eternity, and ſo no Angel or Saint is. Heb. 1. 5. For unto which of the Angels ſaid he, at any time, Thou art my ſon, this day have I begotten thee?

Q. 3. Why was it neceſſary he ſhould become man?

A. That he might be capable to ſuffer Death in our room. Heb. 2. 15, 16, 17. For verily he took not on him the nature of Angels, but he took on him the ſeed of Abraham; wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high prieſt, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the ſins of the people.

Q. 4. Why muſt the Redeemer be God as well as Man?

A. Becauſe the blood of a meer man could not ſatisfy and redeem us. Acts 20. 28. Feed the church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own blood.

Q. 5. Do theſe two Natures make two Perſons?

A. No, The Humane Nature is united to the ſecond Perſon, and ſubſiſts in union with it. John 1. 14. And the Word was made fleſh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.

Q. 6. Was the Union only for a time?

A. No, It continues and abides for ever. Heb. 7. 24. But this man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable Prieſthood.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. Hence we learn the tranſcendent love of God to poor Sinners. John 3. 16. God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten ſon, that whoſoever believeth on him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn the matchleſs love of Chriſt, that he ſhould ſtoop to ſuch a condition for us. 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. That the greateſt Sins are capable of remiſſion to Believers. John 1. 29. Behold, the lamb of God which taketh away the ſins of the world.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. That thoſe that be in Chriſt need not fear the denial or want of any other mercy. Rom. 8. 32. He that ſpared not his own ſon, but delivered him up for us all, how ſhall he not with him alſo freely give us all things?

Q. 11. What is the fifth Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn how impious it is to aſcribe any part of the glory of Redemption to any other beſides Chriſt.

Q. 12. What is the ſixth Inſtruction?

A. This teaches us the miſerable condition of all that are out of Chriſt, and the neceſſity of their damnation, he being the only Redeemer.

Of the Manner of Chriſt's Incarnation.

Queſt. 1. W*AS Chriſt's Incarnation a voluntary act in him?*

A. Yes, it was; for though he had a command to die for us, John 10. 18. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of my ſelf, I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again; Yet he came willingly. Pſal. 40. 6, 7. Sacrifice and offerings thou didſt not deſire, mine ears haſt thou opened; burnt offerings, and ſin offerings haſt thou not required; lo, I come, in the volume of thy book, it is written of me, V. 8. I delight to do thy will, O my God, yea, thy law is within my heart.

Q. 2. Was the Body of Chriſt a real and true Humane Body?

A. Yes, it was a true and real Body, not the appearance and ſhape of a Body only. Luke 24. 38. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your hearts? Ver. 29. Behold my hands, and my feet, that it is I my ſelf; handle me, and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones as ye ſee me have.

Q. 3. Had he a true Humane Soul as well as a Body?

A. Yes, he had, a real Humane Soul alſo, and all the natural faculties and powers thereof. Mat. 26. 38. Then ſaith he unto them, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death.

Q. 4. Was he then in all reſpects like to other men?

A. No; his conception was not like others, Iſa. 7. 14. Behold, a virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a ſon, and ſhall call his name Emanuel. And he had no ſin in him as others have. Heb. 7. 26. For ſuch an high prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners.

Q. 5. Did Chriſt put off the Humane Nature at his Aſcention?

A. No, he did not, but carried it up to glory, and now is in our Nature in Heaven. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Received up into glory.

Q. 6. Why did he aſſume our Nature?

A. That he might die in it for our Salvation. Heb. 2. 15. And delivered them who through fear of death were all their life time ſubject to bondage.

Q. 7. Why did he riſe in it after Death?

A. He raiſed it from the dead, for our Juſtification. Rom. 4. 25. Who was delivered for our offences offences, and was raiſed again for our Juſtification.

Q. 8. VVhy did he aſcend in our Nature into Heaven?

A. To be a Mediator of interceſſion in our Nature. Heb. 7. 25. VVherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.

Q. 9. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the Body of Chriſt is not every where, but is contained in Heaven. Acts 3. 21. VVhom the heaven muſt receive till the times of reſtitution of all things.

Q. 10. VVhat is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That Chriſt is full of tender compaſſions to his peoples infirmities. Heb. 4. 15. For we have not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin.

Q. 11. VVhat is the third Inſtruction?

A. That great and admirable is the glory deſigned for the bodies of Believers. Phil. 3. 21. Who ſhall change our vile bodies, that it may be faſhioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working, whereby he is able even to ſubdue all things unto himſelf.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. That the bodily Eyes of Believers after the Reſurrection, ſhall ſee Chriſt in glory. Job 19. 26, 27. And though after my skin, worms deſtroy this body, yet in my fleſh ſhall I ſee God, Whom I ſhall ſee for my ſelf, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and not another.

Of Chriſt's Offices.

Queſt. 23. What offices doth Chriſt execute as our Redeemer?

A. Chriſt as our Redeemer doth execute the Office of a Prophet, of a Prieſt, and of a King, both in his Eſtate of Humiliation and Exaltation.

Q. 1. What are the States and Conditions of our Redeemer?

A. Chriſt's States are twofold, namely, his State of Humiliation, and his State of Exaltation. Phil. 2. 8, 9. And being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Croſs. Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name.

Q. 2. How many Offices belongs to Chriſt in theſe States?

A. Chriſt hath a threefold Office; namely, of a Prophet, of a Prieſt, and of a King.

Q. 3. Why doth Chriſt take all theſe three Offices?

A. Becauſe they are all neceſſary for our Salvation, and we have the benefit of them all. 1 Cor. 1. 30. Who of God is made unto us wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, and ſanctification, and redemption.

Q. 4. Can no man take Chriſt in one Office, and not in another?

A. No; whoever will have the benefit of any one, muſt receive him in all. Acts 5. 31. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a prince, and a ſaviour, for to give repentance unto Iſrael, and forgiveneſs of Sins.

Q. 5. What reſpect have the Offices of Chriſt to the Promiſes?

A. The Promiſes flow out of them as out of their Fountain. 2 Cor. 1. 20. For all the promiſes of God in him, are Yea, and in him, Amen.

Q. 6. What Promiſes flow out of the Prophetical Office?

A. All the Promiſes of Illumination, Guidance and Direction flow out of Chriſt's Prophetical Office?

Q. 7. What Promiſes flow out of the Prieſtly Office?

A. All the Promiſes of Pardon and Peace flow out of it.

Q. 8. What Promiſes flow out of the Kingly Office?

A, All the Promiſes of Defence, Protection and Deliverances.

Q. 9. What is the firſt Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn the compleatneſs of Chriſt for all the wants of his people. Col. 2. 10. And ye are compleat in him.

Q. 10. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn the folly and miſery of all Hypocrites that cloſe partially with Chriſt.

Q. 11. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. Hence we learn the ſingular dignity, of the Lord Jeſus. None ever have all thoſe Offices but Chriſt.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. That Faith is a conſiderate act; and requires much deliberation.

Of Chriſt's Prophetical Office.

Queſt. 24. HOW doth Chriſt execute the Office of a Prophet?

A. Chriſt executeth the Office of a Prophet, in revealing to us by his word and ſpirit, the will of God for our ſalvation.

Q. 1. What doth Chriſt's Prophetical Office imply?

A. It implies man's natural blindneſs and Ignorance. 1 Cor. 2. 14. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned.

Q. 2. What elſe doth it imply?

A. That Chriſt is the original and fountain of all that light, which guides us to ſalvation. 2 Cor. 4. 6, 7. For God who commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 3. How doth Chriſt teach men the will of God?

A. He doth it by external Revelation of it. Acts 3. 22. For Moſes truly ſaid unto the fathers, A prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him ſhall ye hear in all things, whatſoever he ſhall ſay unto you. And by internal Illumination. Luke 24. 45. Then opened he their underſtanding, that they might underſtand the Scripture.

Q. 4. What need then of Man's Miniſtry?

A. Very much; for Chriſt hath inſtituted Miniſters as inſtruments, by whom he will teach us. Eph. 4. 11, 12. And he gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Miniſtry, for the edifying of the body of Chriſt. Acts 26. 18. To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveneſs of ſins.

Q. 5. Can no man ſavingly know the will of God without the teachings of Chriſt?

A. No; though common knowledge may be obtained in a natural way, yet not ſaving. Mat. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O father, Lord of Heaven and earth; becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes.

Q. 6. How appears it that Chriſt is appointed to this Office?

A. We have the written word for it. Acts 3. 22. A prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him ſhall ye hear in all things, whatſoever he ſhall ſay unto you.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. None need be diſcouraged at their natural weakneſs, if Chriſt be their Teacher. Mat. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O father, Lord of heaven and earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt reveal'd them unto babes. Pſal. 19. 7. The teſtimonies of the Lord are ſure, making wiſe the ſimple.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That it's a dreadful judgment to be ſpiritually blinded under the Goſpel. 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. But if our Goſpel be hid, it is hid to them are loſt, in whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, leſt the light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the image of God, ſhould ſhine into them.

Q. 9. VVhat is the third Inſtruction?

A. That Prayer is the beſt Expedient to obtain ſaving Knowledge Jam. 1. 5. If any of you lack wiſdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it ſhall be given him.

Q. 10. VVhat is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Learn hence the tranſcendent excellency of the Knowledge of Chriſt above all other knowledge. Phil. 3. 8, 9. Yea doubtleſs, I count all things but loſs, for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord.

Of Chriſt's Prieſthood.

Queſt. 25. HOW doth Chriſt execute the Office of a Prieſt?

A. Chriſt executeth the Office of a Prieſt, in his once offering up of himſelf a ſacrifice to ſatiſfy Divine Juſtice, and reconciling us to God, and in making continual interceſſion for us.

Q. 1. VVhat is the Prieſthood of Chriſt in general?

A. It is his expiation of our Sins by the ſacrifice of himſelf, and obtaining God's favour for us. Col. 1. 20. And having made peace through the blood of his croſs, by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf; by him, I ſay, whether they be things in heaven, or things in earth.

Q. 2. VVhat are the parts of Chriſt's Prieſtly Office?

A. It hath two parts. Firſt, Oblation, or offering of himſelf. Heb. 9. 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal ſpirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſciences from dead works, to ſerve the living God. Secondly, Interceſſion for us. Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt, that come unto God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make interceſſion for them.

Q. 3. VVhat is the end of Chriſt's Oblation?

A. The end of it as to God, it was to ſatisfy his Incenſed Juſtice. Rom. 3. 25. VVhom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. And as to men, to put away their ſins. Heb. 9. 26. For then muſt he often have ſuffered ſince the foundation of the world, but now once in the end of the world, he hath appeared to put away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

Q. 4. VVhat is the firſt difference between Chriſt and other Prieſts?

A. Other Prieſts offered the Blood of Beaſts; Chriſt his own Blood. Heb. 9. 12. Neither by the blood of Goats and Calves, but by his own blood, he entred in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond difference?

A. They offered many Sacrifices; Chriſt perfected all by one offering. Heb. 10. 14. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified.

Q. 6. What was the ſacrifice Chriſt offered to God?

A. His Body. Heb. 10. 10. By the which will we are ſanctified through the offering of the body of Jeſus Chriſt once for all. And his Soul. Iſa. 53. 10. When thou ſhalt make his ſoul an offering for ſin.

Q. 7. Whence is the efficacy of this Sacrifice?

A. From the Divine Perſon to whom that Soul and Body was united. Acts 20. 28. Feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own blood.

Q. 8. What is the firſt Inference from it?

A. That Believers are diſcharged by Chriſt from all their ſins and debts. Acts 13. 36. And by him all that believe are juſtified from all things.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an abſolute God. Luke 23. 31. For if they do theſe things in a green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry?

Q. 10. What is the third Inference?

A. That it's impoſſible for man to ſatisfy God for his own Sins. Pſal. 130. 3. If thou, Lord, ſhouldeſt mark iniquities, O Lord, who ſhall ſtand?

Q. 11. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That the Chriſtian Religion only ſettles the conſcience in peace. Heb. 9. 14. How much ſhall the blood of Chriſt, who through the eternal ſpirit offered himſelf without ſpot to God, purge your conſciences from dead works to ſerve the living God?

Of Chriſt's Kingly Office.

Queſt. 26. HOW doth Chriſt execute the Office of a King?

A. Chriſt executeth the Office of a King in ſubduing us to himſelf, in ruling and defending us, and reſtraining and conquering all his and our Enemies.

Q. 1. How manifold is Chriſt's Kingdom?

A. Twofold. Firſt, Internal in men's Souls. Luke 17. 20. Behold the Kindom of God is within you. Secondly, External over the world. Eph. 1. 22. And hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the Church.

Q. 2. What is the End of Chriſt's providential Kingdom?

A. The good and ſalvation of the Church. Joh 17. 2. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſ given him.

Q. 3. Wherein doth he exerciſe his Kingly Power

A. In reſtraining his, and his peoples enemies. Pſal. 76. 10. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee, the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain.

Q. 4. How elſe is it Exerciſed?

A. In protecting his Church amidſt all Enemies. Exod. 3. 3. And Moſes ſaid, I will now turn aſide, and ſee this great ſight, why the buſh is not burnt.

Q. 5. What Inſtruments doth Chriſt uſe?

A. Angels are miniſtring Spirits to him. He

1. 14

1. 14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to miniſter for them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation? And men, yea the worſt of men. Rev. 12. 16. And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth and ſwallowed up the flood which the dragon caſt out of his mouth.

Q. 6. In what manner doth Chriſt rule the world?

A. By Supream power. Rev. 9. 16. He hath on his veſture and on his thigh a name written, King of kings, Lord of lords. And perfect Wiſdom. Eph. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the purpoſe of him, who worketh all things after the counſel of his own will.

Q. 7. What learn we from hence?

A. That the Church is ſaved amidſt all dangers. Jer. 30. 11. For I am with thee, ſaith the Lord, to ſave thee; though I make a full end of all nations, whither I have ſcattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That the godly may ſafely truſt to Chriſt's care. 2 Chron. 16. 9. For the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of them whoſe heart is perfect towards him.

Q. 9. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. That all plots againſt the Church ſhall ſurely be defeated. Iſa. 54. 17. No weapon that is formed againg thee ſhall proſper.

Q. 10. VVhat is the fourth Inſtruction?

A. It gives the Saints full ſatisfaction in all conditions. Rom. 8. 28. And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are called according to his purpoſe.

Q. 11. VVhat is the laſt Inference?

A. We ſhould not ſtand in a ſlaviſh fear of men. Iſa. 51. 12. I, even I am he that comforteth you; who art thou that thou ſhouldſt be afraid of a man that ſhall die, and of the ſon of man which ſhall be made as graſs?

Of Chriſt's Humiliation.

Queſt. 27. Wherein did Chriſt's Humiliation conſiſt?

A. Chriſt's Humiliation conſiſts in his being born, and that in a low condition, made under the Law, undergoing the miſeries of this life, the wrath of God, and the curſed death of the croſs; in being buried, and continning under the power of death for a time.

Q. 1 What doth Chriſt's humbling of himſelf import?

A. His voluntarineſs in the deepeſt point of Self-denial. Pſal. 40. 7. Then ſaid I, lo I come, in the volume of the book it is written of me.

Q. 2. What was the firſt act of Chriſt's Humiliation?

A. His taking man's Nature on him, with all its ſinleſs Infirmities. Rom. 8. 3. God ſending his own ſon, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

Q. 3. What is the ſecond part of his Humiliation?

A. That mean life he lived in this world, which obſcured his Divine Glory. Mark 6. 3. Is not this the carpenter, the ſon of Mary?

Q. 4. What was the firſt thing in Chriſts Life that humbled him?

A. The poverty of it. Mat. 8. 20. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts; but the ſon of man hath not where to lay his head.

Q. 5. What was the ſecond thing in his life that humbled him?

A. The Temptations of Satan, to which he was ſubject. Mat. 4. 1. Then was Jeſus led up of the ſpirit into the wilderneſs, to be tempted of the devil, and that for our ſakes. Heb. 2. 17. VVherefore in all things it behoveth him to be made like unto his brethen. v. 18. For in that he himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted.

Q. 6. What is the third thing in Chriſt that humbled him?

A. His ſubjection to the Law. Gal. 4. 4. But when the fulneſs of the time was come, God ſent forth his ſon, made of a woman, made under the law.

Q. 7. VVhat was the fourth thing in Chriſt's life that humbled him?

A. The Revilings and Contradictions of Sinners. Heb. 12. 3. For conſider him that endured ſuch contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf.

Q. 8. VVherein was Chriſt humbled in his death?

A. His death was painful and ignominious. Gal. 3. 13. Chriſt hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law, being made a curſe for us. For it is written, Curſed is every one that hangeth on a tree. Made a curſe for us, and deſerted in it. Mat. 27. 46. And about the ninth hour, Jeſus cried with a loud voice, ſaying; Eli, Eli, Lamaſabachthani, that is to ſay, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?

Q. 9. VVhat is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That lowlineſs and humility becomes Chriſt's Followers. Mat. 11. 29. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek, and lowly in heart.

Q. 10. VVat is the ſecond Inference?

A. That Chriſt's love to Sinners is aſtoniſhingly great. 2 Cor. 8. 9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that though he was rich, yet for your ſakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be made rich.

Q. 11. VVhat is the third Inference?

A. Chriſtians ſhould be ready to ſuffer for Chirſt. 1 Pet. 4. 1. Foraſmuch as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the fleſh; arm your ſelves likewiſe with the ſame: for he that hath ſuffered in the fleſh, hath ceaſed from ſin.

Q. 12. VVhat is the laſt Inference?

A. That Humiliation is the true way to Exaltation. Mat. 23. 12. And whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and he that ſhall humble himſelf, ſhall be exalted.

Of Chriſt's Exaltation.

Queſt. 27. Wherein conſiſts Chriſt's Exaltation?

A Chriſt's Exaltation conſiſts in his riſing from the dead on the third day; in aſcending np into heaven, in ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the World at the laſt day.

Q. 1. VVhat is the firſt ſtep of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. His Reſurrection from the dead.

Q. 2. How doth his Reſurrection appear?

A. By the Scripture Propheſies accompliſht in him. 1 Cor. 15. 4. And that he was buried, and that he roſe again the third day, according to the ſcriptures.

Q. 3. Why did Chriſt riſe again?

A. To eſtabliſh our Faith, and aboliſh our Sins. 1 Cor. 15. 17. And if Chriſt be not riſen, your faith is vain, you are yet in your ſins.

Q. 4. What other end was there of Chriſt's Reſurrection?

A. To declare his Divine Power. Rom. 1. 4. And declared to be the ſon of God with power, according to the ſpirit of holineſs, by the reſurrection from the dead. And to evidence the fulneſs of his ſatisfaction. John 16. 10. Of righteouſneſs, becauſe I go to my father, and ye ſee me no more.

Q. 5. Did Chriſt riſe in the ſame Body he laid down?

A. It was ſubſtantially the ſame. John 20. 27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into thy ſide, and be not faithleſs, but believing.

Q. 6. What doth Chriſt's Reſurrection teach us?

A. The certainty of Reſurrection after death 1 Cor. 15. 20. But now is Chriſt riſen from the dead, and become the firſt fruits of them that ſlept.

Q. 7. What was the ſecond ſtep of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. His Aſcention after forty days into Heaven. Acts 1. 2, 3. Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghoſt had given commandments unto the Apoſtles, whom he had choſen, to whom alſo he ſhewed himſelf alive after his paſſion, by many infallible proofs, being ſeen of them forty days, and ſpeaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

Q. 8. Why did Chriſt ſtay ſo long on Earth?

A. To aſſure the truth of his Reſurrection, and to ſettle the due Government of his Church. Acts 1. 2, 3.

Q. 9. For what end did he aſcend?

A. To take Poſſeſſion of his glory. John 17. 5. And now, O father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. And that as our fore-runner. Heb. 6. 20. Whether the fore-runner is for us entred, even Jeſus, &c.

Q. 10. In what manner did Chriſt aſcend?

A. Triumphantly, and magnificently. Pſal. 47. 5. God is gone up with a ſhout, the Lord with a ſound of a trumpet.

Q. 11. What doth his aſcenſion teach us?

A. Heavenly-mindedneſs. Col. 3. 1, 2. If ye then be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth at the right hand of God; ſet your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. And an encouragement in our Chriſtian race. Heb. 12. 1, 2. Wherefore ſeeing we alſo are compaſſed about with ſo great a cloud of witneſſes, let us lay aſide every weight, and the ſin which doth ſo eaſily beſet us, and let us run with patience the race that is ſet before us, looking unto Jeſus the author and finiſher of our faith. Who for the joy that was ſet before him, endured the croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, and is ſate down at the right hand of the Throne of God.

The Second Part of the 28th Queſtion of Chriſt's Exaltation.

Queſt. 1. WHat was the Third degree of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. His ſitting at God's right hand in Heaven. Heb. 1. 3. VVhen he had by himſelf purged our ſins, ſate down on the right hand of the majeſty on high.

Q. 2. What doth God's right hand ſignify?

A. A State of Honour. Heb. 1. 13. But to which of the angels ſaid he at any time, Sit on my right hand until I make thine enemies thy footſtool? And Power. Mat. 26. 94. Hereafter ſhall ye ſee the ſon of man ſitting on the right hand of power

Q. 3. What is implied in Chriſt's ſitting there?

A. That his work on earth is finiſhed. Heb. 10. 11, 12. But this man after he had offered one ſacrifice for ſin, for ever ſate down on the right hand of God.

Q 4 What elſe doth it ſignify?

A. Chriſt's power over all enemies. Pſal. 110. 2. The Lord ſhall ſend the rod of thy ſtrength out of Sion; rule thou in the midſt of thine enemies.

Q. 5. What learn we from Chriſt's ſitting there?

A. The high honour Believers are advanced to by Chriſt. Eph. 2. 6. And hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 6. What is the laſt ſtep of Chriſts Exaltation?

A. His coming to Judgment. Acts 10. 42. And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to teſtify that it is he which was ordained of God to be judge of quick and dead.

Q. 7. Is it certain there ſhall be a Judgment day?

A. Yes, the Scripture aſſures it. 2 Cor. 5. 10. For we muſt all appear before the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt. And every man's conſcience witneſſes to it. Rom. 2. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpel.

Q. 8. What is the firſt property of Chriſt's Judgment?

A. It will be awful and ſolemn. 1 Theſ. 4. 16. For the Lord himſelf ſhall deſcend from heaven with a ſhout, with the voice of the Arch-angel, and with the Trump of God, and the dead in Chriſt ſhall riſe firſt.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Property of it?

A. It will be exact and critical. Rom. 2. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men by Jeſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpel. Mat. 12. 36. But I ſay unto you, That every idle word that men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give account thereof in the day of Judgment.

Q. 10. What is the third Property of it?

A. It will be an univerſal Judgment. Rev. 20. 12. And I ſaw the dead, ſmall and great, ſtand before God, and the books were opened.

Q. 11. How is this a part of Chriſt's Exaltation?

A. He now acts in the fulneſs of his Kingly Power. Mat. 25. 34. Then ſhall the King ſay unt them on his right hand, Come ye bleſſed of my father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. And this will rowl away th reproach of his enemies. Rev. 1. 7. Behold h cometh with clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him, an they alſo which pierced him.

Q. 12. What learn we from Chriſt's being Judge

A. That Believers ſhall not be caſt in Judgment. Rom. 8. 1. There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 13. What learn we hence?

A. The deplorable State of Chriſtleſs Perſon Luke 19. 27. But thoſe mine enemies that wou not that I ſhould reign over them, bring hither, a ſlay them before me.

Q. 14. What elſe learn we from Chriſt's Judgment?

A. To give all diligence to be found of him peace. 2 Pet. 3. 14. Wherefore beloved, ſeeing th ye look for ſuch things, be diligent, that ye may found of him in peace.

Of the Application of Chriſt.

Queſt. 29. HOW are we made partakers of the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. We are made partakers of the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt, by the effectual Application of it to us by his holy Spirit.

Q. 1. What did our Redemption coſt Chriſt?

A. It coſt him his own Blood to obtain it. Heb. 9. 12. Neither by the Blood of Goats and Calves, but by his own blood, he entred once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us.

Q. 2. Can none have the benefit of it, except it be applied to them?

A. No; if Chriſt be not applied, we cannot be ſaved. John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.

Q. 3. Whoſe work or office is it to apply Chriſt to us?

A. It's the office and work of God's Spirit. Tit. 3. 45. But after that the kindneſs and love of God our, Saviour towards man appeared, not by works of righteouſneſs which we have done; but according to his mercy he ſaved us, by the waſhing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 4. What Means doth the Spirit uſe in applying Chriſt?

A. The external means he makes uſe of, is the Miniſtry of the Goſpel. 1 Cor. 3. 5. Who then is Paul, and who is Apollo, but Miniſters by whom ye believed?

Q. 5. Is this ſufficient of it ſelf?

A. No; the Bleſſing and Power of the Spirit muſt accompany it, or Chriſt cannot be applied. 1 Theſ. 1. 5, 6. For our Goſpel came not unto you in word only, but alſo in power, and in the Holy Ghoſt, and in much aſſurance, as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your ſake. And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghoſt.

Q. 6. To whom doth the Spirit apply Chriſt?

A. To thoſe that were given him of the Father before the world was. Acts 13. 48. And as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. John 14. 17. Even the ſpirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you.

Q. 7. Is the Application of Chriſt to a Soul finiſht at once?

A. Tho the firſt act of Faith unites the Soul to Chriſt; yet it is a continued act. 1 Pet. 2. 4. To whom coming as unto a living ſtone.

Q. 8. What learn you from hence?

A. What a deſtitute thing the Soul is that's out of Chriſt. Rev. 3. 17, 18. Becauſe thou ſayeſt I am rich, and increaſed with goods, and have need of nothing, and knoweſt not that thou art wretched, and miſerable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

Q. 9. What elſe doth it teach us?

A. The riches and dignity of Believers. Chriſt, and all his purchaſes are theirs. 1 Cor. 3. 22, 23. Whether Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things preſent, or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Q. 10. What elſe doth it teach us?

A. The Righteouſneſs of God in the deſtruction of all unbelievers. John 5. 40. Mark 16. 16. He that believeth, and is baptized, ſhall be ſaved; but he that believeth not, ſhall be damned.

Of our Union with Chriſt.

Queſt. 30. HOW doth the Spirit apply to us the Redemption purchaſed by Chriſt?

A. By working faith in us, thereby uniting us to Chriſt in our effectual Calling.

Q. 1. Can none have ſaving benefit by Chriſt, but ſuch as are united to him?

A. No; for as Adam's Sin could not hurt us, except we had been in him; ſo Chriſt's Redemption cannot profit us, except we are in him. 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification and redemption.

Q. 2. What are the Bonds of this Union?

A. The Spirit on God's part. 1 John 3. 24. And he that keepeth his Commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him; and hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the ſpirit which he hath given us. And Faith on our part. Eph. 3. 17. That Chriſt may dwell in your hearts by faith.

Q. 3. What is the firſt Property of this Union?

A. It is an intimate Union. Eph. 5. 30. For we are members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones.

Q. 4. What is the ſecond Property?

A. It is an Union never to be diſſolved. Rom. 8. 35, 38. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall tribulation, diſtreſs, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword? for I am perſwaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.

Q. 5. What is the third Property of this Union?

A. It makes Chriſt, and all that he hath purchaſed, become ours. 1 Cor. 3. 23. All are yours, and ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Q. 6. What is the fourth property of this Union?

A. It is the foundation and root of all our ſpiritual and acceptable Obedience. John 15. 4. Abide in me, and I in you; as the branch cannot bear fruit of it ſelf, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me.

Q. 7. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That ſaving Grace in the Saints is immortal, being ſecured to them in and by Chriſt. Col. 3. 3. Your life is hid with Chriſt in God.

Q. 8. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That the relation between Chriſt and Believers is very dear and intimate. Eph. 5. 30. For we are members of his body, of his fleſh, and of his bones.

Q. 9. What is the third Inference?

A. That Believers need not be afraid to go down to the Grave. Rom. 8. 38. For I am perſwaded, that neither death nor life,—— nor any other creature ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. And this Union holds after death. Mat. 22. 31, 32. But as touching the reſurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was ſpoken unto you by God, ſaying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not a God of the dead, but of the living.

Q. 10. What is the fourth Inference?

A. That in wronging and perſecuting the Saints, men wrong and perſecute Chriſt himſelf. Acts 9. 4. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice ſaying unto him, Saul, Saul, Why perſecuteſt thou me?

Q. 11. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That in relieving and refreſhing the Saints, we relieve and refreſh Chriſt himſelf. Mat. 25. 34, 35. For I was an hungry, and ye gave me meat, and I was thirſty, and ye gave me drink; I was a ſtranger, and ye took me in, naked and ye cloathed me. I was ſick, and ye viſited me, I was in priſon, and ye came unto me. Ver. 40. In as much as ye have done it unto one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That there is a ſympathy in Chriſt under all the preſſures and grievances of his people. Heb. 4. 15. We have not an high prieſt which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin.

Of Effectual Calling.

Queſt. 31. What is effectual Calling? A. Effectual Calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby convincing us of our ſin and miſery, enlightening our minds in the knowledge of Chriſt, and renewing our wills, he doth perſwade and enable us to embrace Jeſus Chriſt, freely offered to us in the Goſpel.

Q. 1. What makes the difference between effectual and ineffectual Calling?

A. Ineffectual calling is when men have nothing but the external ſound of the Goſpel. Mat. 20.16. For many be called, and few choſen. Effectual is, when the Spirit works in conjunction with the Word. John 6. 45. It is written in the prophets, And they ſhall be all taught of God; every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the father, cometh unto me.

Q. 2. What is the Firſt act of the Spirit in Effectual Calling?

A. Conviction of Sin. John 16. 8. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of ſin.

Q. 3. Do the Called of God hear any voice from Heaven?

A. Ordinarily it is a call without ſound, yet as efficacious as an audible Voice from Heaven.

Q. 4. What is the Second act of the Spirit in our Effectual calling.

A. The Illumination of the mind in the knowledge of Chriſt. Acts 26. 18. To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God.

Q. 5. In what things doth it enlighten them?

A. In this, That Chriſt is their only remedy. Acts 4. 12. Neither is there ſalvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we muſt be ſaved. And their all-ſufficient remedy. Heb. 7. 25. Wherefore he is able alſo to ſave them to the uttermoſt that come unto God by him.

Q. 6. What is the Third Act?

A. His renewing of the Sinner's will, and making it flexible. Pſal. 110. 3. Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power. Ezek. 36. 26. A new heart alſo will I give you, and a new ſpirit will I put within you, and I will take away the ſtony heart out of your fleſh, and I will give you an heart of fleſh.

Q. 7. Can no man come to Chriſt till thus enabled?

A. No, it's not in the power of man's Nature or Will, till thus renewed and enabled. Eph. 1. 19, 20. And what is the exceeding greatneſs of his power to uſward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed him from the dead, and ſet him on his own right hand in the heavenly places. John 6. 44. No man can come to me except the father which hath ſent me draw him.

Q. 8. What ſort of men are moſt ordinarily called?

A. The poor and mean ones in the world. 1 Cor. 1. 26. For ye ſee your calling brethren, how that not many wiſe men after the fleſh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath choſen the fooliſh things of the world to confound the wiſe; and God hath choſen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty.

Q. 9. What is the firſt Inſtruction from it?

A. Souls effectually called are never loſt. Rom. 11. 29. For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

Q. 10. What is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. All things co-operare to their good. Rom. 8. 28. For we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpoſe.

Q. 11. What is the third Inſtruction?

A. It is dangerous to refuſe God's call. Prov. 1. 24. Becauſe I have called, and ye refuſed, I have ſtretched out my hand and no man regarded.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. That Chriſtians are obliged to walk ſuitably to their heavenly calling. 1 Theſ. 2. 12. That ye would walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

Of the Concomitants of Vocation.

Queſt. 32. What benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this Life?

A. They that are effectually called do in this life partake of Juſtification, Adoption, Sanctification, and the ſeveral benefits which in this life do either accompany, or flow from them.

Q. 1. Are all that be effectually called, juſtified

A. Yes, God juſtifies all, and every Soul tha obeys and anſwers his call. Rom. 8. 30. Whom he called, them he alſo juſtified.

Q. 2. What other benefits have the called in this Life

A. They are all the adopted Children of God. Eph. 1. 5. Having predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jeſus Chriſt unto himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will.

Q. 3. Are thoſe all the benefits the Called receive

A. No, they are not only juſtified and adopted, but alſo ſanctified. 1 Cor. 1. 30. But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſdom, righteouſneſs, and ſanctification, and redemption

Q. 4. Do theſe three bleſſings come ſingly to the called

A. No, they are all accompanied with multitudes of other bleſſings flowing from them. Eph 1. 3. Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſu Chriſt, who hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt.

Q. 5. What are the mercies flowing from Juſtification

A. They are great and manifold. Rom. 5. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we hav

eſteemed amongſt men, is abomination in the ſight of God. Nor other mens juſtifying of us. Rev. 3. 1. I know thy works, that thou haſt a name to live, and art dead.

Q. 3. Is there any thing in man to merit his Juſtification ?

A. No, it is an act of Free-grace in God. Rom. 3. 24. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 4. If it be not for any inherent righteouſneſs, how then ?

A. It is for the righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us. Rom. 4. 6. Even as David alſo deſcribeth the bleſſedneſs of the man unto whom God imputeth righteouſneſs without works.

Q. 5. How is Chriſt's righteouſneſs made ours ?

A. By Application of it to us by Faith. Gal. 2. 16. Knowing that a man is not juſtified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, even we have believed in Jeſus Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by the faith of Chriſt, and not by the works of the law; for by the works of the law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified.

Q. 6. Is it not partly by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, and partly our own ?

A. No: by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, without any mixture of ours. Rom. 3. 28. Therefore we conclude, that a man is juſtified by faith without the deeds of the law.

Q. 7. But doth not James ſays otherwiſe. Jam. 2. 14. What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man ſay he hath faith, and have not works, Can faith ſave him ?

A. The two Apoſtles contradict not one another. Paul ſpeaks of Juſtification before God; and James of juſtifying our Faith before men.

Q. 8. Is no regard then to be had to good works ?

A. Yes, very great; they that believe, muſt be careful to maintain good works. Tit. 3. 8. That they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good works. Theſe things are good and profitable unto men.

Q. 9. Why can none be juſtified by works ?

A. Becauſe all are guilty before God. Rom. 3. 29. Is he the God of the Jews only ? Is he not alſo of the Gentiles ? Yes, of the Gentiles alſo. And the Law curſes all that are under guilt. Gal. 3. 10. Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

Q. 10. What is the firſt Inference from hence ?

A. The happy State of Believers who are now at Peace with God. Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And whom he juſtifieth he glorifieth. Rom. 8. 30. Whom he juſtified, them he alſo glorified.

Q. 11. What is the ſecond Inference hence ?

A. The excellency and neceſſity of Faith. Rom. 3. 30. The circumciſion is juſtified by faith, and the uncircumciſion through faith.

Q. 12. What is the third Inference ?

A. That the greatneſs of ſin is no bar to faith, ſince it is the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt that Juſtifieth. 2 Cor. 5. 21. For he hath made him to be ſin for us, who knew no ſin, that we may be made the righteouſneſs of God in him.

Q. 13. What is the laſt Inference ?

A. That

A. That Believers ought to be exceeding humble, and far from boaſting. The Law of Faith excludes boaſting. Rom. 3. 27. Where is boaſting then? It is excluded; by what law? Of works? nay, but by the law of faith.

Of Adoption.

Queſt. 34. What is Adoption?

A. Adoption is an act of God's Free-grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a Right to all the Priviledges of the Sons of God.

Q. 1. How many ſorts of Sons be there?

A. There is one by Generation, and another by Adoption. John 1. 12, 13. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe in his name; which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

Q. 2. What moves God to adopt any man?

A. Nothing but his Free-love. John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the Father hath beſtowed on us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God.

Q. 3. Is this priviledge common to all men?

A. No; it's peculiar to them that receive him. John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the Sons of God.

Q. 4. What is the firſt property of Adoption?

A. It is a coſtly Relation. Gal. 4. 45. When the fulneſs of time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of ſons.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond property of Adoption?

A. It is an high and honourable Relation. 1 John 3. 1. Behold what manner of love the father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God.

Q. 6. VVhat is the third property of Adoption?

A. It is a free relation on God's part. Eph. 1. 45. According as he hath choſen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we ſhould be holy and without blame before him in love. Having predeſtinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jeſus Chriſt to himſelf, according to the good pleaſure of his will. And it makes us free. John 8. 36. If the ſon therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed.

Q. 7. What is the fourth property of Adoption?

A. It is a permanent relation. John 8. 35. The ſon abideth in the houſe for ever.

Q. 8. What is the firſt priviledge of the adopted?

A. They have an intereſt in God as Children in a Father. 2 Cor. 6. 18. And will be a father unto you, and ye ſhall be my ſons and daughters, ſaith the Lord Almighty.

Q. 9. What is the ſecond Priviledge?

A. Being God's Sons, they are Heirs of God, and joynt Heirs with Chriſt. Rom. 8. 17. And if children, then heirs, Heirs of God, and joynt heirs with Chriſt.

Q. 10. What is the third Priviledge?

A. Seaſonable and ſanctified Afflictions. Heb. 12. 6. He ſcourgeth every ſon whom he receiveth.

Q. 11. What is their fourth Priviledge?

A. The Attendance and Miniſtry of Angels. Heb. 1. 14. Are they not all miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth to mininſter for them who ſhall be heirs of ſalvation?

Q. 12. VVhat is their fifth Priviledge?

A. The aſſiſtance of the Spirit in Prayer. Rom. 8. 15. For we have not received the ſpirit of bondage again to fear, but ye have received the ſpirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba father. And God's audience of their Prayers. 1 John 5. 14. And this is the confidence that we have in him, That if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us.

Q. 13. VVhat uſe ſhould we make of this?

A. It teacheth us to carry our ſelves as Children to our heavenly Father. Firſt, In our Imitation of him. Eph. 5. 1. Be ye therefore followers of God as dear children. Secondly, In our ſubmiſſion to him. Heb. 12. 9. Furthermore, we have had fathers of our fleſh, which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: ſhall we not much rather be in ſubjection to the father of ſpirits, and live? Thirdly, In our dependance on him. Mat. 6. 32. For your heavenly father knoweth that you have need of all theſe things.

Of Sanctification.

Queſt. 35. WHAT is Sanctification?

A. Sanctification is the work of God's Free-grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man, after the Image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto ſin, and live unto righteouſneſs.

Q. 1. What are the parts of Sanctification?

A. Dying unto Sin, and living unto God. Rom. 6. 11. Likewiſe reckon ye alſo your ſelves to be dead indeed unto ſin, but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Q. 2. Who is the Author of Sanctification?

A. God only. Jude ver. 1. To them that are ſanctified by God the Father.

Q. 3. What is the inſtrument of it?

A. The word of God. John 17. 17. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth.

Q. 4. What part of man is ſanctified?

A. Every part, both of the Soul and Body. 1 Theſ. 5. 23. And the very God of peace ſanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole ſpirit, ſoul and body, be preſerved blameleſs, unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 5. Is Sanctification perfected at once?

A. No; but by degrees. 2 Pet. 3. 18. But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 6. When will it be made perfect?

A. When we come to Heaven, and not before. 1 Cor. 13. 10, 11. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.

Q. 7. What are the ſigns of true Sanctification?

A. When it runs into all parts of our Converſation. 1 Pet. 1. 15. But as he which hath called you is holy, ſo be ye holy in all manner of converſation. Secondly, And continues to the end. Rev. 22. 11. Let him that is holy, be holy ſtill.

Q. 8. What is the inſeparable companion of Sanctification?

A. Righteouſneſs towards men. Luke 1. 74, 75. That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might ſerve hi without fear, in holineſs, and righteouſneſs before hi all the days of our life.

Q. 9. What is oppoſite to Sanctification?

A. All filthineſs of Fleſh and Spirit. 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, l us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpiri

Q. 10. What is the priviledge of the ſanctified?

A. They are all elected, and ſhall be glorified. 1 Pet. 1. 2, 4. Elect according to the fore-knowledge of God the father, through ſanctification of the ſpirit——to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in heaven for you.

Q. 11. VVhat is the caſe of them who live and die unſanctified?

A. They ſhall never ſee God. Heb. 12. 14. Follow peace with all men, and holineſs, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord.

Q. 12. VVhat differenceth true, from pretended Sanctification?

A. True Sanctification purgeth the heart from the love of ſin. Rom. 7. 15. For that which I do, I allow not. And the life from the dominion of ſin. Rom. 6. 19. As ye have yeilded your members ſervants to uncleanneſs, and to iniquity, unto iniquity; even ſo now yield your members ſervants to righteouſneſs, unto holineſs.

Q. 13. May great ſinners be ſanctified?

A. Yes, the Spirit of God can ſanctify the vileſt heart. 1 Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified.

Of Aſſurance, the frnit of Juſtification.

Queſt. 36. WHAT are the benefits which in this life do either accompany, or flow from Juſtification, Adoption, and Sanctification?

A. The benefits which in this life do either accompany, or flow from Juſtification, Adoption, and Sanctification, are aſſurance of God's love, peace of Conſcience, joy in the Holy Ghoſt, increaſe of Grace, and perſeverance therein to the end.

Q. 1. Is Aſſurance poſſible to be attained in this Life?

A. Yes; for fome have had it. Cant. 6. 3. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine. And all Chriſtians are commanded to ſtrive for it. 2 Pet. 1. 10. VVherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence, to make your calling and election ſure.

Q. 2. How many ſorts of aſſurance are there?

A. There is an objective Aſſurance. 2 Tim. 2. 19. Nevertheleſs the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his. And a ſubjective or perſonal Aſſurance. Gal. 2. 20. VVho loved me, and gave himſelf for me.

Q. 3. Is perſonal Aſſurance perfect in this Life?

A. No, it admits of doubts and fears, which interrupts it, and it is not always at one height. 1 Cor. 13. 10. VVhen that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part ſhall be done away.

Q. 4. On what Teſtimony is perſonal Aſſurance built?

A. Upon the Teſtimony of God's Spirit, witneſſing with ours. Rom. 8. 16. The ſpirit it ſelf beareth witneſs with our ſpirit, that we are the children of God.

Q. 5. Doth the Spirit make uſe of ſigns in us to aſſure us?

A. Yes, Ordinarily he doth. 1 John 3. 14. We know that we are paſſed from death to life, becauſe we love the brethren. And ver. 24. Hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the ſpirit which he hath given us.

Q. 6. How is true aſſurance diſcerned from preſumption?

A. True aſſurance humbles the Soul. Gal. 2. 20. I am crucified with Chriſt; nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. And makes the Soul afraid of Sin. 2 Cor. 7. 1. Having therefore theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God.

Q. 7. What is the uſual ſeaſon of Aſſurance?

A. The time of greateſt ſufferings for Chriſt. 1 Pet. 4. 14. If ye be reproached for the name of Chriſt, happy are ye; for the ſpirit of glory and of God reſteth upon you.

Q. 8. Is perſonal Aſſurance abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation?

A. No; a man may be ſaved, and in Chriſt, without it. Iſa. 50. 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light? Let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay upon his God.

Q. 9. What is the fruit of Aſſurance?

A. Joy unſpeakable amidſt outward Troubles. Rom. 5. 11. And not only ſo, but we alſo joy in God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we have now received the atonement.

Q. 10. What ſins uſually eclipſe our Aſſurance?

A Negligence in duty ſtarves it. 2 Pet. 1. 10. Give diligence to make your calling and election ſure. For if ye do theſe things, ye ſhall never fall. And ſinning againſt light ſtabs it. Pſal. 51. 8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs, that the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce.

Q. 11. What is the firſt Inference from this Doctrine?

A. That no unregenerate Perſon can have any Aſſurance; for it is the fruit of Juſtification, Adoption and Sanctification.

Q. 12. What is the ſecond inference?

A. That all the Joys of Heaven are not to come; but ſome communicated in this life. 1 Pet. 1. 8. Whom having not ſeen ye love; in whom though now ye ſee him not, yet believing, ye rejoyce with joy unſpeakeable and full of glory.

Q. 13. What is the third inference?

A. That aſſured Believers need to be circumſpect perſons, that they grieve not the Spirit. Eph. 4. 30. And grieve not the ſpirit of God, whereby ye are ſealed unto the day of redemption.

Of Peace of Conſcience.

Queſt. 1. WWhat doth the word Peace ſignify in Scripture?

A. In the Language of the Old Teſtament it ſignifies all temporal good. 1 Sam. 25. 9. Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine houſe, and peace be unto all that thou haſt. And in the New Teſtament all ſpecial good; as 2 Theſ. 3. 16. Now the Lord of peace give you peace always.

Q. 2. VVhat are the kinds of ſpecial Peace?

A. There is a twofold ſpecial peace; One without us, by reconciliation. Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God: And peace within us by way of conſolation. Col. 3. 15. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts.

Q. 3. VVhat did our peace coſt Chriſt?

A. It coſt him bloody Stripes and Sufferings. Iſa. 53. 5. The chaſtiſement of our peace was upon him, and by his ſtripes we are healed.

Q. 4. Can none have true peace but ſuch as are in him?

A. No; others may have falſe Peace. Luke 11. 21. VVhen a ſtrong man armed keepeth his palace, palace, his goods are in peace. But Believers only have true peace. Rom. 5. 1. Therefore being juſtified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 5. Have all Believers peace in their conſcience at all times?

A. No, they are always in a ſtate of peace, but have not always the ſenſe of peace. Iſa. 50. 10 VVho is among you that feareth the Lord, and obeyeth the voice of his ſervant, that walketh in darkneſs, and hath no light? let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay upon his God.

Q. 6. VVhat is that which hinders the ſenſe of peace in Believers?

A. Their Sins againſt the Lord, and grieving of his Spirit. Iſa. 59. 2. But your iniquities have ſeparated between you and your God; and your ſins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.

Q. 7. VVhat maintains the ſtate of peace when the ſenſe of peace is loſt?

A Chriſt's continual and potent Interceſſion with the Father for us. 1 John 2. 12. My little children, theſe things write I unto you, that ye ſin not? and if any man ſin, we have an advocate with the father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous.

Q. 8. VVhat is the beſt way to maintain our peace with God?

A. Strict walking by Goſpel Rules. Gal. 6. 16. And as many as walk according to this rule, peace be on them.

Q. 9. Doth this Peace come and go with outward Peace?

A. No, we may enjoy this when no peace is to be had in the World. John 16. 33. Theſe things I have ſpoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace? in the world ye ſhall have tribulation, but be of good chear, I have overcome the world.

Q. 10. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the wicked are in a ſad caſe at all times, but eſpecially in evil times. Iſa. 57. 20, 21. But the wicked are like the troubled Sea when it cannot reſt, whoſe waters caſt up mire and dirt; There is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked.

Q. 11. VVhat is the ſecond Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the chief Care of a Chriſtian ſhould be to keep his peace with God. Jer. 17. 17. Be not a terror to me, Thou art my hope in the day of evil.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Let the Saints long to be in Heaven; the State of full and perfect Peace. Iſa. 57. 2. He ſhall enter into peace; they ſhall reſt in their beds, each one walking in his uprightneſs.

Of Joy in the Holy Ghoſt.

Queſt. 1. HOW many ſorts of Joy are there among men?

A. There is a Senſitive Joy. Acts 14. 17. Nevertheleſs he left not himſelf without witneſs, in that he did good, and gave us rain from Heaven, and fruitful Seaſons, filling our hearts with food and gladneſs. A ſinful Joy. Prov. 15. 21. Folly is joy to him that is deſtitute of wiſdom. And a ſpiritual Joy. Rom. 5. 11. And not only ſo, but we alſo joy in God though our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 2. Why is ſpiritual Joy called joy in the Holy Ghoſt?

A. Becauſe the Holy Ghoſt is the Author of it. Gal. 5 22. But the fruit of the ſpirit is love, joy, peace, &c.

Q. 3. What is the Firſt thing begets joy in the Saints?

A. The Firſt thing they joy in is, their Juſtification before God. Iſa. 61. 10. I will greatly rejoyce in the Lord, my ſoul ſhall be joyful in my God; for he hath cloathed me with the garments of ſalvation, he hath covered me with the robes of righteouſneſs.

Q. 4. What is the Second thing that breeds this Joy?

A. Hopes of Glory breeds Joy in the Saints. Rom. 5. 2. And rejoyce in hopes of the glory of God.

Q. 5. VVhat is the inſtrument by which the ſpirit conveys this Joy?

A. Faith is the inſtrument of it. Phil. 1. 25. And having this confidence, I know that I ſhall abide and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith.

Q. 6 VVhat is the firſt Property of this Joy?

A. 'Tis Joy unſpeakable, and full of Glory. 1 Pet. 1. 8. Believing, ye rejoyce with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory.

Q. 7. VVhat is the ſecond Property of it?

A. That it is not in the power of men to deprive the Saints of it. John 16. 22. And your joy no man taketh from you.

Q. 8. VVhat is the third Property of it?

A. It makes the Soul free and chearful in the ways of Obedience. Pſal. 119. 32. I will run the ways of thy commandments, when thou ſhalt enlarge my heart.

Q. 9. VVhat is moſt deſtructive to a Chriſtian's Joy?

A. Sin, eſpecially ſin againſt light. Pſal. 51. 8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs, that the bones which thou haſt broken may rejoyce.

Q. 10. VVhat ſhould be the main Care of a Chriſtian in this VVorld?

A. To maintain his joy in God to the laſt. Acts 20. 24. But none of theſe things move me, neither count I my life dear unto my ſelf, ſo that I might finiſh my courſe with joy.

Q. 11. Have not Hypocrites their joys as well as real Chriſtians?

A. Yes, but the Joy of the Hypocrite is no grounded upon Scripture-warrant, and will vaniſ away, and will come to nothing at laſt. John 5. 35. He was a burning and a ſhining light, and y were willing for a ſeaſon to rejoyce in his light.

Q. 12. What is the firſt Inference from hence

A. Let all that expect joy in the Holy Ghoſt, ſee that they preſerve purity of Conſcience an Converſation. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Grace be to you, an peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jeſu Chriſt.

Q. 13. VVhat is the laſt Inference?

A. That Religion is no melancholy thing, bu the fountain of all Joy and Pleaſure. Prov. 3. 17 Her ways are ways of pleaſantneſs, and all her pat are peace.

Of the Increaſe of Grace.

Queſt. 1. DOTH all true Grace increaſe an grow?

A. Yes, it doth, like the Morning light. Pro 4. 18. The path of the juſt is as the ſhining ligh that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day. An for that end God hath appointed Miniſters a Ordinances. Eph. 4. 11, 12. And he gave fo Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and Teachers; for t perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Miniſt for the edifying of the body of Chriſt.

Q. 2. Cannot falſe or ſeeming Grace grow?

A.

A. It grows in reſpect of its greater fitneſs and readineſs for acts of Obedience. Col. 1. 11. Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience, and longſuffering, with joyfulneſs.

Q. 5. What is the third reſpect or manner of its growth?

A. It grows in reſpect of its abilities to fix the mind more ſteadily on ſpiritual things. Hence grown Chriſtians are called ſpiritual men. Gal. 6. 1. Ye which are ſpiritual reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſs.

Q. 6. Why muſt all true Grace grow?

A. Becauſe there is a Stature to which Chriſtians are appointed. Eph. 4. 12, 13. Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

Q. 7. What are the cauſes of a Chriſtians growth?

A. Union with Chriſt John 15. 4. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itſelf, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. And his Bleſſings on the Ordinances. Iſa. 55. 10, 11. For as the rain cometh down, and the ſnow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give ſeed to the ſower, and bread to the eater; So ſhall my word be that goeth out of my mouth, it ſhall not return unto me void, but it ſhall accompliſh that which I pleaſe, and it ſhall proſper in the thing whereto I ſent it. And Providence. Phil. 1. 19. For I know that this ſhall turn to my ſalvation through your prayers, and the ſupply of the ſpirit of Jeſus Chriſt.

Q. 8. May not true Grace ſometimes decay?

A. Yes, it may. Rev. 2. 4. Neverthele ſs I have ſomewhat againſt thee, Becauſe thou haſt left thy love. But not utterly. 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed remaineth in him.

Q. 9. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. To bleſs God for Goſpel Ordinances. Pſal. 92. 13, 14 Thoſe that be planted in the Houſe of the Lord, ſhall flouriſh in the courts of our God, they ſhall ſtill bring forth fruite in old age; they ſhall be fat and flouriſhing.

Q. 10. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. Hence we ſee the miſerable ſtate of them that grow worſe and worſe. Jude, Verſe 12 Theſe are ſpots in your feaſts of charity, when they feaſt with you, feeding themſelves without fear. Clouds they are without water, carried about of winds. Trees whoſe fruit withereth; without fruit, twice dead, pluckt up by the root.

Q. 11. What is the third Inference?

A. Chriſtians ſhould not be diſcouraged at their weakneſs in Grace, for they have a merciful Chriſt. Iſa. 42. 3. A bruiſed reed ſhall he not break, and the ſmoaking flax ſhall be not quench, he ſhall bring forth judgment unto truth. And a ſure Promiſe. 17. 9. The righteous alſo ſhall hold on his way; and that hath clean hands ſhall be ſtronger and ſtronger.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That all true Criſtians draw daily nearer nearer to the heavenly and perfect State 2 4. 16. For which cauſe we faint not; but though outward man periſh, yet the inward man is renewed by day. Rom. 13. 11. Now is our ſalvation nearer when we believed.

Of Perſeverance.

Q. 1. WHAT is Perſeverance to the End?

A. It is the ſteady and conſtant continuance of Chriſtians in the ways of Duty and Obedience, amidſt all Temptations and Diſcouragements to the contrary. Col. 1. 23. If ye continue in faith, grounded and ſetled, and be not moved away from the hope of the Goſpel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a miniſter.

Q. 2. Do all that profeſs Chriſt, continue in him?

A. No; many that at firſt zealouſly profeſs him, afterwards fall away. John 6. 66. From that time many of his Diſciples went back, and walked no more with him.

Q. 3. Why do not all Perſevere?

A. Becauſe all Profeſſors have not a good root and foundation. Matt. 13. 20, 21. But he that received the ſeed in ſtony places, the ſame is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it, yet hath he not root in himſelf, but endureth for a while; for when tribulation, or perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the word, by and by he is offended.

Q. 4. What is the Firſt ground of the Saints Perſeverance?

A. God's electing love, in which they are given to Chriſt. John 10. 29. My father which gave them me, is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my father's hand.

Q. 5. What is the ſecond ground of Perſeverance?

A. The immortal nature of Sanctifying grace. John 4. 14. But whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water, ſpringing up into everlaſting life. 1 John 3. 9. For his ſeed rmaineth in him.

Q. 6. VVhat is the third ground of it?

A. The Covenant of Grace. Jer. 32. 40. I will make an everlaſting covenant with them, That I will not trun away from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they ſhall not depart from me.

Q. 7. What is the fourth ground of it?

A. Chriſt's effectual Interceſſion. Luke 22. 32. But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not.

Q. 8. Are there no declinings of grace in the ſaints?

A. Yes, there are. Rev. 2. 4. Nevertheleſs I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy firſt love. Yet Grace cannot be totally or finally loſt. For the ſeed of God remaineth in the ſanctified. 1 John 3. 9. VVhoſoever is born of God doth not commit ſin, for his ſeed remaineth in him; and he cannot ſin, becauſe he is born of God.

Q. 9. Is there no hope of Salvation for final Apoſtates?

A. No; the Goſpel gives none. Heb. 10. 38. But if any man draw back, my ſoul ſhall have no pleaſure in him.

Q. 10. VVhat is the firſt Inſtruction hence?

A. It warns all men to lay a good foundation, leſt the buildings of hope be overturned when the ſtorm comes, Mat. 7. 24, 25. Therefore whoſoever, heareth theſe ſayings of mine, and doth them, I will liken him to a wiſe man which built his houſe upon a rock, and the rain deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe, and it fell not; for it was founded upon a rock.

Q. 11. VVhat is the ſecond Inſtruction?

A. That all men ſhould look to themſelves leſt they loſe the things which they have wrought. 2 Epiſt. of John, Ver. 8. Look to your ſelves, that ye loſe not thoſe things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

Q. 12. VVhat is the laſt Inſtruction?

A. Let no true Chriſtians be diſcouraged, how weak ſoever, for God is able to make him ſtand. Rom. 14. 4. VVho art thou that judgeſt another man's ſervant? to his own maſter he ſtandeth or falleth, yea, he ſhall be holden up; for God is able to make him ſtand.

Of perfection at Death.

Queſt. 37. What benefits do Believers receive from Chriſt at their Death?

A. The Souls of Believers are at their death made perfect in holineſs, and do immediately paſs into glory; their bodies being ſtill united to Chriſt, do reſt in their Graves till the Reſurrection.

Q. 1. VVhat is the ſtate of perfect holineſs?

A. In conſiſts in a perfect freedom from ſin, or any of the leaſt inclination to ſin. Eph. 5. 27. That he may preſent it to himſelf a glorious Church, not having ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy and without blemiſh.

Q. 2. VVherein elſe doth perfection conſiſt?

A. It conſiſts in the attainment of the higeſt meaſures and degrees of holineſs the creature is capable of. Eph. 4. 12, 13. For the perfecting of the Saints,—— till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to a perfect man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

Q. 3. Cannot this be attained whilſt in the body?

A. No; for here all our graces are imperfect. 1 Cor. 13. 12. For now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face. And we live at a diſtance from God. 2 Cor. 5, 6. VVhilſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord.

Q. 4. How is this attained at Death.

A. At Death the roots of Sin are pulled up out of the Believer's Nature. Heb. 12. 23. And to the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect.

Q. 5. VVhy muſt the Soul be made perfect at death?

A. Becauſe the purity of the heavenly State admits no ſin or imperfection. Rev. 21. 27. And there ſhall in no wiſe enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatſoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lye; but they which are written in the lambs book of life.

Q. 6. What is the firſt Inference from hence?

A. That Death ſhould be lovely and deſirable in the eyes of Believers. Phil. 1. 23. Having a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt, which is far better.

Q. 7. What is the ſecond Inference?

A. That God hath provided ſingular relief for his people that now groan under their Sins, and many imperfections. 1 Cor. 13. 12, 13. And now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, but then face to face. Now I know in part; but then ſhall I know, even as alſo I am known.

Q. 8. What is the third Inference?

A. That the heavenly State is infinitely above and beyond whatever we enjoy here. 1 Cor. 2.9. But as it is written, Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard neither have entred into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

Q. 9 What is the fourth Inference?

A. That Believers are but at a ſmall diſtance from the Satisfaction of all their deſires. Rom. 13. 11. Now is our ſalvation nearer than when we believed.

Q. 10. What is the fifth Inference?

A. That the Saints ſhould earneſtly purſue that perfection, even in this imperfect ſtate. Phil. 3. 13, 14 Brethren, I count not my ſelf to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting thoſe things which are behind, and reaching forth to thoſe things which are before, I preſs towards the mark, for the price of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

Q. 11. What is the ſixth Inference?

A. That death to the Saints is better than life. Phil. 1. 21. For to me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference?

A. That Faith is abſolutely neceſſary to entitle us to this perfect ſtate.

Of immediate Glorification.

Queſt. 1. Do all that die in Chriſt immediately paſs into glory?

A. Yes, they do. Luke 23. 43. To day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. Phil. 1. 23. Having a deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt.

Q. 2. What is the Firſt reaſon for their immediate Glorification?

A. Becauſe Heaven is prepared and ready for them. Mat. 25. 34. Come ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

Q. 3. What is the Second reaſon for it?

A. Becauſe at Death they are as ready for Heaven as ever they ſhall be. John 9. 4. I muſt work the work of him that ſent me while it is day, the night cometh, when no man can work.

Q. 4. What is the Third reaſon for it?

A. Becauſe Death elſe could not be gain, as it is, Phil. 1. 21. For to me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain.

Q. 5. What is the Fourth reaſon for it?

A. Becauſe there is the ſame reaſon for all, as for any one: but ſome are immediately glorified. Luke 23. 43. To day ſhall thou be with me in Paradiſe.

Q. 6. What is the Fifth reaſon for it?

A. Becauſe Chriſt longs for their coming to him, and they for his Enjoyment; and theſe longings are in vain, if not ſatisfied. Rev. 22. 17, 20. And the ſpirit and the bride ſay, Come, and let him that heareth ſay, Come; and let him that is a thirſt ſay, Come? and whoſoever will, let him take of the water of life freely; he which teſtifieth theſe things, ſaith, I come Surely, I come quickly, Amen, even ſo, come Lord Jeſus.

Q. 7. What is the Firſt Inſtruction from hence?

A. That the Apparitions of departed Saints ordinarily are but Fables. They wander not. Rev. 3. 12. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the Temple of my God, and he ſhall go no more out.

Q. 8. What is the Second Inference?

A. That Purgatory is a groundleſs Fable, and invention of men; and the Scriptures alledged to countenance it, groſly abuſed. 1 Pet. 3. 19. By the which alſo he went and preacht unto the ſpirits in priſon.

Q. 9. What is the Third inference from it?

A. That Heaven muſt needs be a marvell ſurprize to Belivers, how long ſoever they h converſed with it here.

Q. 10. What is the Fourth inference.

A. The conſideration of this ſhould prov Saints to work hard to finiſh all they have to on Earth. Eccleſ. 9. 10. Whatſoever thy findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wiſdom in the grave whether thou goeſt.

fin

Q. 11. What is the Fifth Inference?

A. That there is no reaſon to grieve exceſſively for departed Saints. 1 Theſ. 4. 13. Even ſo them alſo which ſleep in Jeſus will God bring with him.

Q. 12. What is the laſt Inference.

A. That Chriſtleſs ones are immediately in Hell. Luke 16. 22, 23. The rich man alſo died, and was buried, and in Hell he liſt up his eyes, being in torment.

Of reſt in the Grave.

Queſt. 1. WHY muſt Believers come to the Grave?

A. Becauſe where Sin has been, Death by the Law muſt follow. Rom. 5. 12. Wherefore as by one man ſin entred into the world, and death by ſin, and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned.

Q. 2. What is the Firſt priviledge of their Bodies there?

A. 'Tis the Priviledge of their Bodies to be there in union with Chriſt. 1 Theſ. 4. 14. Them alſo which ſleep in Jeſus will God bring with him.

Q. 3. What is their Second priviledge?
